

191
A TREATISE

ON HINDU LAW AND USAGE.

A TREATISE
ON HINDU LAW AND USAGE.

BY
JOHN D. MAYNE,
OF THE INNER TEMPLE, ESQ., BARRISTER-AT-LAW,
FORMERLY OFFICIATING ADVOCATE-GENERAL OF MADRAS, AUTHOR OF "A TREATISE ON DAMAGES," "THE CRIMINAL LAW OF INDIA," ETC.

SEVENTH EDITION.
REVISED AND ENLARGED.

MADRAS: HIGGINBOTHAM & CO.

By Appointment to H. E. The Governor of Madras.

1906.

[All rights reserved.]

T 97 16
J-4235

z pozostawiamy sobie
J. D. Mayne

PRINTED BY HIGGINBOTHAM & CO., MOUNT ROAD, MADRAS.

PREFACE TO THE SEVENTH EDITION.

Two important decisions of the Judicial Committee, which have already furnished material for much discussion in India, will be found in §§ 563A and 674. In other respects the large number of new cases, which are included in this edition, have been of more interest to the individual suitors than to the students of law.

GOODREST,
READING,
May 1906.

JOHN D. MAYNE.

PREFACE TO THE SIXTH EDITION.

THE increased bulk of this volume is chiefly owing to the considerable amount of new material which I have found at my disposal. Both the Privy Council and the Indian Courts have been rich in decisions of unusual importance, particularly in regard to the law of adoption and wills. My friend Rajah Dharma Pravina Thumboo Chetty, of the Mysore Council of Regency, has been good enough to furnish me with a complete series of the reports of the Chief Court of Mysore. The recent works of M. Leon Sorg, Chief Justice of the Court of First Instance in Pondicherry, have for the first time supplied us with a connected view of the mode in which questions of Hindu Law are dealt with by French jurists. These are of especial value, as they are based, not merely upon the writings of the Hindu lawyers, but upon formal enquiry as to the usage at present prevailing upon each disputed point among the natives subject to the Pondicherry Courts.

The investigations of the Malabar Marriage Commission have thrown a flood of light upon the existence of polyandry on the West Coast of India, and upon the character of the unions contracted under its influence. These are further supplemented by the Census Reports for 1891 of the States of Cochin and Travancore, and by Mr. Logan's most valuable Manual of the Malabar District. I have utilised these sources for the purpose of giving a brief, and I hope fairly accurate view of a rather obscure subject. I have also taken advantage of this opportunity to glean from the invaluable reports of the Census of India for 1891, and from the singularly learned work by Dr. Maclean on the administration of Madras, many curious and interesting instances of local usage on matters of domestic law. The District Manuals of South Canara and North Arcot abound in similar information to which I am indebted.

Dr. Jolly has again placed Indian enquirers heavily in his debt by his new work, Recht und Sitte, itself only a segment of an Encyclopædia of Indo-Aryan research, which is being edited by Dr. Bühler. The first chapter, in which the combined results of German and British research in reference to Sanskrit law books are focused into one view, is of immense value.

After I had completed this edition I received, through the courtesy of Mr. S. Sitarama Sastri, a learned scholar of Madras, a proof sheet of a translation of a portion of the commentary of Visvarupa on Yajnavalkya, of which even Dr. Jolly only knew from citations that it existed, and was earlier than the Mitakshara. It is very curious, especially as showing the gradual development of heirship among women. As to daughters, he expressly states, what I have long suggested was probable, that only "appointed daughters" took by inheritance after a widow; while he seems to limit the term widow, as meaning a pregnant widow, who would apparently take only as guardian for her possible son. The discovery at so late a period of a copy of this work is very remarkable.

The delay in the appearance of this edition which has been so long promised, arises from my having, in consequence of the large amount of new matter, requested my publishers to allow all the sheets to pass through my own hands. The cross-references in the body of the work, and in the contents, are still to the paragraphs, but those in the index and table of cases are, for the first time, to the pages—a change which, I hope, will be found a convenience to the reader.

INNER TEMPLE,
August 1900.

JOHN D. MAYNE.

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION.

SINCE the publication of the last edition of this work, many new materials for the study of Hindu Law have been placed within the reach of those, who, like myself, are unable to examine the authorities in their original Sanskrit. Professor Max Müller's Series of the Sacred Books of the East has given us translations of the entire texts of Apastamba, Gautama, and Vishnu, by Dr. Bühler and Dr. Jolly. Mr. Narayan Mandlik has supplied us with a translation of the whole of Yajnavalkya, and a new rendering of the Mayukha; while the Sarasvati Vilasa and the Viramitrodaya have been rendered accessible by the labours of Mr. Foulkes and of Golapchandra Sarkar.

Judging from an examination of these works, I doubt whether we need expect to receive much more light upon the existing Hindu Law from the works of the purely legal writers. They seem to me merely to reproduce with slavish fidelity the same texts of the ancient writers, and then to criticise them, as if they were algebraic formulas, without any attempt to show what relation, if any, they have to the actual facts of life. When, for instance, so modern a work as the Viramitrodaya gravely discusses marriages between persons of different castes, or the twelve species of sons, it is impossible to imagine that the author is talking of anything which really existed in his time. Yet he dilates upon all these distinctions with as much apparent faith in their value, as would be exhibited by an English lawyer in expounding the peculiarities of a bill of exchange. From the extracts given by Mr. Narayan Mandlik, I imagine that the modern writers of Western India are more willing to recognise realities than those of Bengal and Benares. Probably, much that is useful and interesting might be found (amid an infinity of rubbish) in the works on ceremonial law. But what we really want is that well-informed natives of India should take a law book in their hands, and tell us frankly, under each head, how much of the written text is actually recognised and practised as the rule of every-day life. The great value of Mr. Narayan Mandlik's work consists in the extent to which he has adopted this course. His forthcoming work will be looked for with the greatest interest by every student of Hindu Law.

I feel a natural timidity in entering upon the region of volcanic controversy which has sprung up around the works of Mr. J. H. Nelson. It seems a pity that amid so much with which everyone must agree, there should be so much more with which no one can agree. When he denies that Manu, Yajnavalkya, and the Mitakshara form the recognized guides of Dravidian, or even of Sudra life, one is willing to accept the statement. But when he goes on to assert that Manu, Yajnavalkya, and the Mitakshara are themselves without authority among Sanskrit lawyers, or have authority only among obscure and limited sects, one is tempted to ask what possible amount of evidence he would consider sufficient to establish the contrary? Can Mr. Nelson put his finger upon any single law book subsequent to the probable dates of Manu and Yajnavalkya in which those sages are not referred to, not only with respect and reverence, but with absolute submission? If the Mitakshara is a work of no authority, how does it happen that every pundit in every part of India, except Bengal, invariably cites Vijnanesvara in support of his opinion? Mr. Nelson's grotesque suggestion that the Mitakshara dates from the seventeenth or eighteenth century is dismissed by M. Barth,* one of the greatest of living Sanskrit scholars, with the summary remark:—"Every orientalist who has read Colebrooke will answer that, if that admirable inquirer had found nothing better to write about the Mitakshara, he would not have written a line upon the subject." His proposal that every law suit should commence with an exhaustive enquiry as to the legal usages, if any, by which the respective parties considered they were bound, is a sly stroke of humour which cannot be too much admired. Coming from an opponent it might have been considered malicious. I fancy that Mr. Nelson, as a Judge, would be the first to resist the application of his own proposal.

* Revue Critique, 1882, p. 165; the article contains a thorough examination of Mr. Nelson's views, and seems to me to be a model of acute, candid, and courteous criticism.

An unusual number of important decisions have been recorded since the publication of the last edition, and it will be seen that several portions of this work have been re-written in consequence. The law, as to the liability of a son for his father's debts, and as to the father's power of dealing with family property to liquidate such debts, seems at last to be settling down into an intelligible, if not a very satisfactory, shape. The controversies arising out of the text of the Mitakshara defining stridhanum appear also to be quieted by direct decision, and the conflicting view of woman's rights taken by the Bombay High Court has at last been restricted and defined, and made to rest upon inveterate usage, rather than upon written law. A single decision of the Privy Council has established the heritable right of female Sapindas in Bombay, and recognized the all-important principle, that succession under the Mitakshara law is based upon proximity, and not upon degrees of religious merit.

INNER TEMPLE,
January 1883.

JOHN D. MAYNE.

PREFACE.

I HAVE endeavoured in this work to show, not only what the Hindu Law is, but how it came to be what it is. Probably many of my professional readers may think that the latter part of the enquiry is only a waste of time and trouble, and that, in pursuing it, I have added to the bulk of the volume without increasing its utility. It might be sufficient to say that I have aimed at writing a book, which should be something different from a mere practitioner's manual.

Hindu Law has the oldest pedigree of any known system of jurisprudence, and even now it shows no signs of decrepitude. At this day it governs races of men, extending from Cashmere to Cape Comorin, who agree in nothing else except their submission to it. No time or trouble can be wasted, which is spent in investigating the origin and development of such a system, and the causes of its influence. I cannot but indulge a hope that the very parts of this work, which seem of least value to a practising lawyer, may be read with interest by some who never intend to enter a Court. I also hope that the same discussions, which appear to have only an antiquarian and theoretical interest, may be found of real service, if not to the counsel who has to win a case, at all events to the judge who has to decide it.

The great difficulty which meets a judge is to choose between the conflicting texts which can be presented to him on almost every question. This difficulty is constantly increased by the labours of those scholars who are yearly opening up fresh sources of information. The works which they have made accessible are, naturally, the works of the very early writers, who had passed into oblivion, because the substance of their teaching was embodied in more modern treatises. Many of these early texts are in conflict with each other, and still more are in conflict with the general body of law as it has been administered in our Courts.

An opinion seems to be growing up that we have been going all wrong; that we have been mistaken in taking the law from its more recent interpreters, and that our only safe course is to revert to antiquity, and, wherever it may be necessary, to correct the Mitakshara or the Daya Bhaga by Manu, Gautama, or Vasishttha. Such a view omits to notice that some of these authors are perhaps two thousand years old, and that even the East does change, though slowly. The real task of the lawyer is not to reconcile these contradictions, which is impossible, but to account for them. He will best help a judge who is pressed, for instance, by a text which forbids a partition, or which makes a father the absolute despot of his family, by showing him that these texts were once literally true, but that the state of society, in which they were true, has long since passed away. This has been done to a considerable extent by Dr. Mayr in his most valuable work, Das Indische Erbrecht. He seems, however, not to have been acquainted with the writers of the Bengal school, and of course had no knowledge of the developments which the law has received through nearly a century of judicial decisions. I have tried to follow in the course marked out by him, and by Sir H. S. Maine in his well-known writings. It would be presumption to hope that I have done so with complete, or even with any considerable, success. But I hope the attempt may lead the way to criticism, which will end in the discovery of truth.

Another, and completely different current of opinion, is that of those who think that Hindu Law, as represented in the Sanskrit writings, has little application to any but Brahmans, or those who accept the ministrations of Brahmans, and that it has no bearing upon the life of the inferior castes, and of the non-Aryan races. This view has been put forward by Mr. Nelson in his "View of the Hindu Law as administered by the Madras High Court." In much that he says I thoroughly agree with him. I quite agree with him in thinking that rules, founded on the religious doctrines of Brahmanism, cannot be properly applied to tribes who have never received those doctrines, merely upon evidence that they are contained in a Sanskrit law book. But it seems to me that the influence of Brahmanism upon even the Sanskrit writers has been greatly exaggerated, and that those parts of the Sanskrit law, which are of any practical importance, are mainly based upon usage which, in substance, though not in detail, is common, both to Aryan and non-Aryan tribes. Much of the present work is devoted to the elucidation of this view. I also think that he has underestimated the influence which the Sanskrit law has exercised, in moulding to its own model the somewhat similar usages even of non-Aryan races. This influence has been exercised throughout the whole of Southern India during the present century by means of our Courts and Pundits, by Vakils, and officials, both judicial and revenue, almost all of whom, till very lately, were Brahmans.

That the Dravidian races have any conscious belief that they are following the Mitakshara, I do not at all suppose. Nor has an Englishman any conscious belief that his life is guided by Lord Coke and Lord Mansfield. But it is quite possible that these races may be trying unconsciously to follow the course of life which is adopted by the most respectable, the most intellectual, and the best educated among their neighbours. The result would be exactly the same as if they studied the Mitakshara for themselves. That this really is the case is an opinion which I arrived at, after fifteen years' acquaintance with the litigation of every part of the Madras Presidency. Even in Malabar I have witnessed continued efforts on the part of the natives to cast off their own customs and to deal with their property by partition, alienation, and devise, as if it were governed by the ordinary Hindu Law. These efforts were constantly successful in the provincial Courts, but were invariably foiled on appeal to the Sudder Court at Madras, the objection being frequently taken for the first time by an English barrister. It so happened that, during the whole time of this silent revolt, the Sudder Court possessed one or more judges, who were thoroughly acquainted with Malabar customs, and by whom cases from that district were invariably heard. Had the Court been without such special experience, the process would probably have gone on with such rapidity that, by this time, every Malabar tarwād would have been broken up. The revolt would have been a revolution.

A third class of opinion is that of the common-sense Englishman, whose views are very ably represented by Mr. Cunningham — now a Judge of the Bengal High Court — in the preface to his recent "Digest of Hindu Law." He appears to look upon the entire law with a mixture of wonder and pity. He is amused at the absurdity of the rule which forbids an orphan to be adopted. He is shocked at finding that a man's great-grandson is his immediate heir, while the son of that great-grandson is a very remote heir, and his own sister is hardly an heir at all. He thinks everything would be set right by a short and simple code, which would please everybody, and upon the meaning of which the judges are not expected to differ. These of course are questions for the legislator, not for the lawyer. I have attempted to offer materials for the discussion by showing how the rules in question originated, and how much would have to be removed if they were altered. The age of miracles has passed, and I hardly expect to see a code of Hindu Law which shall satisfy the trader and the agriculturist, the Punjabi and the Bengali, the pundits of Benares and Ramaiswaram, of Umritsur and of Poona. But I can easily imagine a very beautiful and specious code, which should product much more dissatisfaction and expense than the law as at present administered.

I cannot conclude without expressing my painful consciousness of the disadvantage under which I have laboured from my ignorance of Sanskrit. This has made me completely dependent on translated works. A really satisfactory treatise on Hindu Law would require its author to be equally learned as a lawyer and an Orientalist. Such a work could have been produced by Mr. Colebrooke, or by the editors of the Bombay Digest, if the Government had not restricted the scope of their labours. Hitherto, unfortunately, those who have possessed the necessary qualifications have wanted either the inclination or the time. The lawyers have not been Orientalists, and the Orientalists have not been lawyers. For the correction of the many mistakes into which my ignorance has let me, I can only most cordially say: Exoriare aliquis nostris ex ossibus ultor.

JOHN D. MAYNE.

INNER TEMPLE,
July 1878.

ABBREVIATIONS AND REFERENCES.

- Agra. North-West Province High Court, 3 vols. [1866-1868].
 All. Indian Law Reports, Allahabad Series [from 1876].
 Amb. Ambler's Reports, Chancery.
 Apast. Apastamba, Max Müller's Sacred Books of the East, Vol. II., by Bühler.
 Ap. Ca. English Law Reports, Appeal Cases.
 Atk. Atkyn's Reports, Chancery, tempore Lord Hardwicke [1736-1754].
 Atsi. Quoted in Sutherland's Dattaka Mimamsa.
 Baden-Powell. The Indian Village Community, by B. H. Baden-Powell, 1896. Not to be confounded with a smaller work by the same author on the same subject, 1899.
 B. and Ald. Barnewall and Alderson [King's Bench, 1817-1822].
 B. L. R. Bengal Law Reports, High Court [1868-1875].
 B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.) Bengal Law Reports, Supplemental Volume, Full Bench Rulings, in 2 parts [1862-1868].
 ——— a. c. j. " " Appellate Civil Jurisdiction.
 ——— app. " " Appendix.
 ——— f. b. " " Full Bench.
 ——— o. c. j. " " Original Civil Jurisdiction.
 ——— p. c. " " Privy Council.
 Baudh. Baudhayana, Max Müller's Sacred Books of the East, Vol. XIV., by Bühler.
 Beav. Beavan's Reports, Rolls Court, tempore Lord Langdale and Sir John Romilly [1838-1863].
 Bellasis. Bombay Sudder Dewany Adawlut Reports.
 Bom. Bombay Series of the Indian Law Reports [from 1876].
 Bom. H. C. Bombay High Court Reports [1863-1875].
 ——— a. c. j. " " " Appellate Civil Jurisdiction.
 ——— o. c. j. " " " Original " "
 Bom. Sel. Rep. Bombay Select Reports, Sudder Dewany Adawlut.
 Bor. Borrodaile's Reports (Bombay Sudder Adawlut), Folio, 1825. [The references in brackets are to the paging of the edition of 1862].

- Boul. Boulnois, Calcutta Supreme Court [1856-1859].
 Bourke. Calcutta High Court, Original side, 1 vol. [1865].
 Breeks. Primitive Tribes of the Nilaghiris, by J. W. Breeks, Esq.
 Cal. Indian Law Reports, Calcutta Series [from 1876].
 Census Reports. Reports forming part of the Census of the Indian Empire for 1891. Under this head are cited similar reports of the Native States of Cochin, Mysore, and Travancore.
 Ch. D. English Law Reports, Chancery Division.
 Cole. Pref. Colebrooke's Prefaces to the Daya Bhaga and the Digest.
 — Essays. Colebrooke's Essays.
 Coop. Geo. Cooper's (George) Reports, Chancery, tempore Lord Eldon [1815].
 Coryton. Calcutta Reports, High Court, Original side, 1 vol. [1864].
 D. Bh. Daya Bhaga, by Jimuta Vahana. (Colebrooke.)
 D. Ch. Dattaka Chandrika. (Sutherland.)
 Dig. Jagannatha's Digest. (Colebrooke.) 3 vols. [1801].
 D. K. S. Daya Krama Sangraha. (Wynch.)
 D. M. Dattaka Mimamsa. (Sutherland.)
 Domat. Domat's Civil Law.
 Dubois. Enlarged edition (1897) of Hindu Manners, Customs, and Ceremonies, by the Abbé Dubois.
 Elb. Elberling on Inheritance, etc. [1844].
 F. MacN. Sir F. MacNaghten's Considerations on Hindu Law [1829].
 Fult. Fulton's Reports, Supreme Court, Calcutta [1842-1844].
 Gaut. Gautama, Max Müller's Sacred Books of the East, Vol. II., by Bühler.
 Gib. Gibelin. Etudes sur le Droit civil des Hindous [1846].
 Goldst. Goldstücker's Present Administration of Hindu Law [1871].
 Hay. Calcutta High Court, Appellate side, 2 vols. [1862-1863].
 Hyde. Calcutta Reports, High Court, Original side, 2 vols. [1864-1865].

- I. A. English Law Reports. Indian Appeals [from 1873].
 I. A., Sup. Vol. English Law Reports. Indian Appeals. Supplemental Volume [1872-1873].
Ib. or Ibid. The same reference as the one immediately preceding.
 Ind. Wisd. Monier Williams' Indian Wisdom [1875].
 Jac. and W. Jacob and Walker's Reports, Chancery, tempore Lord Eldon [1819-1823].
 John. Johnson's Reports, Chancery, before Sir Page Wood [1858-1860].
 Jolly, Lect. Dr. Jolly's Tagore Lectures, 1883.
 Jolly, Recht This work, which has been published separately, forms part of the Encyclopædia of Indo-Aryan Research, edited by Dr. Bühler.
 u. Sitte.
 Kn. Knapp's Privy Council Cases [1831-1836].
 Lewin. Lewin on Trusts, 6th ed., 1875.
 L. R. (P. and D.) English Law Reports, Probate and Divorce.
 Mad. Madras Series of the Indian Law Reports [from 1876].
 Mad. Census. Madras Census Report, by Dr. Cornish, 1871.
 Mad. Dec. Decisions of the Madras Sudder Court. The selected decisions from 1805-1847 are cited by volumes: the subsequent reports, by years.
 Mad. H. C. Madras High Court Reports [1862-1876].
 Madhav. Madhava's Daya Vibhaga. (Burnell) [1868].
 Mad. Jur. Madras Jurist, 11 vols. [1866-1876].
 Mad. Law Rep. The Madras Law Reporter, one Volume; High Court [1877].
 Mad. Man. Manual of the Madura District, J. H. Nelson, 1868.
 ——Rev. Reg. Madras Revenue Register [1867-1874].
 Maine. The various Works of Sir Henry Sumner Maine are cited from the 1st edition of each.
 Mal. Man. Malabar Manual, by W. Logan, 3 vols. [1887-1891].
 Mal. Mar. Rep. Report of the Malabar Marriage Commission, 1894.
 Man. Mad. Adm. Manual of the Administration of Madras, Vol. I., 1885, by Dr. Maclean.
 Mandlik The Vyavahara Mayukha and Yajnavalkya, with Introduction and Appendices, Bombay (1880), by Rao Saheb V. N. Mandlik.
 Manu. Cited from translation, by Sir William Jones, also by Bühler, Max Müller's Sacred Books of the East, Vol. XXV,

- Marsh. Marshall's Cases on Appeal to the High Court of Bengal [1864].
- Max Müller, }
A. S. L. } Ancient Sanskrit Literature.
- Mayr. Das Indische Erbrecht [1873].
- McLennan. Studies in Ancient History [1876]. The Patriarchal Theory. A posthumous work by J. F. McLennan, edited by Donald McLennan (1885).
- Mit. Mitakshara. (Colebrooke.)
- M. Dig. Morley's Digest, 2 vols., Calcutta [1850].
- M. I. A. Moore's Indian Appeals [1836-1872].
- Morton. Decisions of late Supreme Court, Calcutta, 1 vol. [1774-1848].
- Montr. Montriou's Hindu Law Cases, Calcutta Supreme Court [1780-1801].
- Morris. Bombay Sudder Adawlut Reports.
- Mysore. Mysore Law Reports [1878-1895].
- Mys. Ch. Ct. Mysore Chief Court Reports [from 1896].
- Nar. Narada, cited from translation, by Bühler, or by Jolly [London 1876].
- N. C. Sir Thomas Strange's Notes of Cases, Madras [1816].
- Nelson's View. View of the Hindu Law as administered by High Court of Madras, Nelson, Madras [1877].
- „ Scientific A Prospectus of the Scientific Study of the Hindu Law, Study. Nelson, Madras [1881].
- N.-W. P. Decisions of the High Court of the N.-W. Provinces, Allahabad [1869-1875].
- N. Arcot Man. Manual of North Arcot, by A. F. Cox, new edition by H. A. Stuart [1895].
- P. C. Privy Council.
- Perry O. C. Sir Erskine Perry's Oriental Cases, Bombay Supreme Court [1853].
- Punjab }
Customs. } Notes on Customary Law as administered in the Courts of the Punjab Bounois and Rattigan, 1876.
- Punjab Cus- } tomary Law. } Three Volumes, edited by C. L. Tupper, C.S., Calcutta [1881].
- P. Williams. Peere Williams' Reports, Chancery [1695-1735].
- Raghunandana. The Daya Tattwa of Raghunandana, translated by Golab Chandra Sarkar Sastry, Calcutta, 1874.

- Raj. Sarvad- }
hikari. } Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari's Tagore Lectures, 1880.
- Ratnakara. Commentary on Hindu Law, by Chandesvara Thakkura.
- S. C. Same Case.
- S. Can. Man. Manual of South Canara District, by J. Sturrock, 1894.
- S. D. Decisions of the Bengal Sudder Court. The selected decisions from 1791-1848 are cited by volumes, with a double paging, which refers to the original edition, and to that recently published in Calcutta. The subsequent reports are referred to by years.
- Sev. Cases on Appeal to High Court of Bengal in continuation of Marshall, by Sevestre [1869].
- Sm. Ch. Smriti Chandrika. (Kristnasawmy Iyer), Madras [1867].
- Sorg H. L. Treatise on Hindu Law applicable to the French establishments in India, by Leon Sorg, Chief Justice of the Court of First Instance in Pondicherry, 1897.
- Sorg Mt. Introduction to the Study of Hindu Law.
- Co. Con. Opinions of the Consultative Committee of Indian Jurisprudence at Pondicherry.
- Spencer. Principles of Sociology.
- Stokes, H. L. B. Stokes' Hindu Law Books, Vyavahara Mayukha, by Borrodaile; Daya Bhaga and Mitakshara, by Colebrooke; Dattaka Mimamsa, and Dattaka Chandrika, by Sutherland [Madras, 1865].
- Story. Equity Jurisprudence.
- Stra. H. L. Sir Thomas Strange's Hindu Law [1830].
- Stra. Man. Mr. T. L. Strange's Manual of Hindu Law, 1863.
- Suth. Weekly Reporter [Calcutta, 1864-1877].
- Suth. Mis. „ „ Miscellaneous Appeals.
- Suth. (P. C.) „ „ Privy Council Rulings.
- Suth. Sp. No. „ „ Special Number. Full Bench Rulings, July 1862 to July 1864.
- Suth. Syn. Mr. Sutherland's Synopsis of the Law of Adoption. The paging refers to this work as printed in Mr. Stokes' Hindu Law Books, Madras, 1865.
- T. & B. Taylor and Bell. (Supreme Court of Calcutta.)
- Teulon. La Mére. Par A. Girard Teulon. 1867.
- Thesawal. The Thesawaleme; or, Laws and Customs of Jaffna. (H. F. Mutukisna.) 1862.

- Varad. Varadrajah's Vyavahara Nirnaya (Burnell), 1872.
 Vas. Vasishtha, by Bühler. Max Müller's Sacred Books of the East, Vol. XIV.
 V. Darp. Vyavastha Darpana, by Shamachurn Sircar, 1867.
 Ves. Vesey's (Junior) Reports, Chancery [1789-1817].
 Ves. Sen. Vesey's (Senior) Reports, Chancery, tempore Lord Hardwicke [1746-1755].
 Vill. Com. Maine's Village Communities [1871].
 Viramit. The Law of Inheritance as in the Viramitrodaya of Mitra, by Gopalchandra Misra Sarkar Sastri, Calcutta, 1879.
 Visvarupa. Commentary on Yajnavalkya by; translated by S. Sitarama Sastri, Madras, 1900.
 Vish. Vishnu, cited from translation by Bühler, or by Jolly, Max Müller's Sacred Books of the East, Vol. VII.
 Viv. Chint. Vivada Chintamani, by Vachapati Misra. (Prosonno Coomar Tagore.) 1865.
 V. May. Vyavahara Mayukha. (Borrodaile.)
 V. N. Mandlik. The Vyavahara Mayukha and Yajnavalkya, with Introduction and Appendix, by Rao Saheb Vishvanath Narayan Mandlik, Bombay, 1880.
 W. & B. West and Bühler's Digest, Bombay, 3rd ed., 1884.
 W. R. Sutherland's Weekly Reporter. [A few cases have been accidentally cited from these reports under this designation instead of "Suth."]
 W. MacN. W. MacNaghten's Hindu Law, 1829.
 Wigram. A Commentary on Malabar Law and Custom, by Herbert Wigram, M.C.S., 1882.
 Wym. Wyman's Civil and Criminal Reports, Calcutta.
 Yaj. Yajnavalkya, cited from translation, by Dr. Roer, or Professor Stenzler.

CONTENTS.

* * The references throughout are to paragraphs.

CHAPTER I.

ON THE NATURE AND ORIGIN OF HINDU LAW.

Conflicting views as to the authority of the Sanskrit writers, 1--3. Law is based on immemorial usage, 5. Later growth of Brahmanical influence, 7. Unconnected with system of joint family, 8. Subsequently introduced into law of inheritance, 9, and law of adoption, 10. Mode in which it has exercised an indirect influence, 12. Practical conclusions, 13.

SOURCES OF HINDU LAW.

CHAPTER II.

TEXTS AND DECISIONS.

The Smritis, 15. Sutras, 17. Works in verse more recent, 19. Manu, 20. Yajnavalkya, 22. Narada, 23. Secondary works, 24. The commentators, 25. Visvarupa, Mitakshara, Apararka, 26. Smriti Chandrika and works of authority in Southern India, 27. Mayukha and Viramitrodaya, 28. Mithila and its authorities, 29. Treatises on adoption, 30. Daya Bhaga, 31. Halhed's Code and Jagannatha's Digest, 32. Mimamsa of Jaimini, 33. His rule of interpretation, 34. Different schools of law, 35. Characteristic doctrines of Jimuta Vahana, 37. Differences as to female rights, 38, and law of adoption, 39. Judicial decisions, 40. Force of usage, 41.

CHAPTER III.

CUSTOMARY LAW.

Validity of customs, 42, 43. Recorded instances, 44. Races which do not accept religious principles, 46. Law follows the person, 48; till abandoned, 49. Origin and evidence of binding custom, 50. Onus of proof, 51. Must be ancient, 52, and continuous, 53. Family custom valid, 54. Must not be opposed to morality or public policy, 55. Change of family usage, 56. Result of conversion to Muhammadanism, 57, or Christianity, 59. Illegitimate offspring of European, 60.

FAMILY RELATIONS.

CHAPTER IV.

MARRIAGE AND SONSHIP.

Anomalies in early family law; 61. Polyandry among non-Aryan races, 62; among Aryans, 63—65. Explanation of anomalies, 66. Different sorts of sons, 67. Necessity for sons, 68. Hindu notion of paternity, 69. Theory and practice of niyoga, 70; not a survival of polyandry, 72. Marriage with brother's widow, 73. Application of principle to other sons, 74—76. Adopted sons, 77. All but two now obsolete, 78. Eight forms of marriage, 79. Their relative antiquity, 80. Modifications of marriage by purchase, 81. The approved forms, 82. Only two survive, 83. Who may dispose of bride, 84. Exogamy and endogamy, 86. Mixed marriages, 88. Now obsolete, 89. Capacity for marriage, 90. Infant marriage, 91. Polygamy, 92. Second marriages of women and divorce, 93, 94. Betrothal and marriage ceremonies, 95. Results of marriage, 96. Malabar marriages, 97—102.

CHAPTER V.

ADOPTION.

Its importance, of recent growth, 103. Diminution in number of adopted sons, 105. Not founded exclusively on religious motives, nor limited to Aryan tribes, 106. Early texts, 107. Who may adopt. Persons without issue, 108. Bachelors and widowers, 109. Disqualified heirs, 110. Minors, 111. Wife or widow, 112. Nature of authority to widow, 113; must be strictly followed, 114. Power incapable of being exercised, 115—116. Adoption by minor or unchaste widow, 117; several widows, 118. Widow's discretion, 119. Assent of sapindas in Southern India, 120—126. Religious motive for adoption, 127. Power of widow in Western India, 130; among Jains, and in Punjab, 131. Only parents can give away son, 132. Power to impose conditions, 133. Consent of government, 134. Restrictions on selection of son, 135; of Brahmanical origin, 136. Caste, 138. Age, 139. Previous performance of ceremonies, 142. Only or eldest son, 144. Privy Council decision, 147; two persons cannot adopt same boy, 149. Necessary ceremonies, 150; intentional omission, 154. Doctrine of factum calet, 155. Evidence of adoption, 157. Res judicata, 158. Effect of lapse of time as evidence, 159. Estoppel, 160. Statutory bar, 161. Results of adoption, 164. Lineal and collateral succession, 165. Succession ex parte maternâ, 166. To stridhanam of adoptive mother, ib. Right of succession between wives of adopter and adopted son, 167; dwyamushyayana and his natural mother, 167A; where legitimate son afterwards born, 168. Where adopted son competes with collaterals, 169. Survivorship between adopted and legitimate son, 171. Removal from natural family, 172; case of dwyamushyayana, 173; in Punjab and Pondicherry, 175. Where adoption is invalid, 176; validity of gift to person falsely supposed to be adopted, 180. Cases in which an estate is divested by widow's adoption, 184. Effect of assent in rendering effectual an invalid adoption, 192. Postponement of son's rights, 196; how far bound by acts of widow, 197, or previous male holder, 198. Woman cannot adopt to herself, unless in case of dancing girls, or in Kritrima form, 199. Kritrima adoption, 200; peculiarities, 202; results, 204; woman may adopt to herself, 205; no ceremonies, 206; practised by Buddhists in Burma; resembles usage of Jaffna, ib. Illatom adoption, 207. Malabar adoptions, 208.

CHAPTER VI.

MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP.

Period of minority, 210. Who may be guardian, 211. Effect of conversion on right to custody of minor, 212. Paternal rights over minors, 214. Case of illegitimate child, 217. Minor when bound by contracts, and acts of guardian, 218; effect of false statement as to age by minor, 220; when bound by decrees, 221. Suits against guardian, ib.

FAMILY PROPERTY.

CHAPTER VII.

EARLY LAW OF PROPERTY.

Peculiarities of Hindu Law, 222. Three forms of corporate property, ib. Village Communities in the Punjab, 224; in Southern India, 225. Fiction of common descent, 226. Nairs, Kandhs, 227. The Patriarchal Family, 230. The Joint Family, 231. Mr. McLennan on the Family, 232. Evolution of private property, 234. Traces of village rights in Sanskrit law, 236; right of pre-emption, 237. Self-acquisition: its origin, 239; restrictions, 240, and rights, 241. Partition, 242; its rise, 243; growth of son's right, 244; decay of parents' rights, 245—247; Bengal law, 248. Alienation, 251. Right of sons by birth, 253. Power of father over moveable, 255, and self-acquired land, 257. Contrary doctrines of the Daya Bhaga, 259. Brahmanical influence, 261. Unequal partition, 264. Interest of coparceners in their shares, 265. Rights of women, 266.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE JOINT FAMILY.

Presumption of union, 268. Survivorship, 270. The coparcenary, 271. Obstructed and unobstructed property, 274. Ancestral property, 275; effect of partition, gift of devise, 276. Jointly acquired property, 277. Property thrown into common stock, 278. Impartible property, 279; separate property held by coparceners, 280. Self-acquisition, 281. Gains of science, 282; effect of possession of joint funds, 285. Government grants, 286. Savings of impartible property, ib. Recovery of ancestral property, 287. Acquisitions aided by family funds, 288. Burthen of proof as to character of property, 289. Mode of enjoyment of joint property, 292. Position of manager, 293. Right to an account, 294; to an allotment of a portion of the income, 297. Members must unite in transactions affecting the property, 298. Rights of coparceners inter se, 299. Family trading partnerships, 300.

CHAPTER IX.

DEBTS.

Three sources of liability, 301. Sons bound to pay father's debts without assets, 302. Exceptions to liability, 303. Obligation now limited to extent of assets, 304. Evidence of assets, 305. What property is included in term, 306, 308. When obligation arises, 307. No benefit necessary, 303. Family property may be alienated or taken in execution to satisfy ancestral debts, 309—321. How far decree binds sons, 322—325. Apportionment of liability, 326. Heir liable to extent of assets, 327. Debts not a charge upon estate, 329; nor upon share which has passed by survivorship, 330. Cases of agency, 333.

CHAPTER X.

ALIENATION.

MITAKSHARA LAW.—Father's power over ancestral moveables, 335; as head of the family, 336. When only tenant for life, 337. Impartible Zemindary, 338—341. Who have a right by birth, 342. Case of adopted son, 343. Father's power over self-acquired land, 344. Consent of coparceners, 345. Necessity, 346. Father's right to sell to pay his own debt, 348. Burthen of proof of necessity, 349; in case of decrees, 350. Powers of manager, 352. Right of coparcener to sell his share, 353—358; of creditor to seize it, 355. Power of gift or devise, 358, 359. Sale enforced by partition, 358. Practice in Bombay, 360; extent of share how ascertained, 362. Bengal ruling, 363. Remedies against illegal alienation, 365. Equities on setting it aside, 364, 366—370. BENGAL LAW, 371. Power of father, 372; of coparcener, 373; agreement against alienation, 374. Law of gifts, 375. Necessity for possession, 376. What constitutes possession, 378. Gift to a class of whom some cannot take, 379—384. Completed gift, 385. Possession in case of sale, 386, or mortgage, 390. Priorities arising from registration, 391. Writing or technical words unnecessary, estates of inheritance and leases, 394. Maintenance grants, 395; grants to females, 396. Beneficial tenures, 398. Service tenures, 399. Provisions of Transfer of Property Act, 402.

CHAPTER XI.

WILLS.

Origin of testamentary power, 404. History of its growth in Bengal, 406; in Southern India, 408; in Bombay, 416. Wills of minors and married women, 407. First Privy Council ruling, 412. Power of devise where property separate or joint, 417, or impartible, 418. Shifting estate, 419; operation of Hindu Wills Act, 421. Tagore case, 422. Devise in trust, 423. Only for an estate recognized by law, 424, and to a devisee actually in existence, 425. Accumulations and restrictions, 426. Power of appointment by will, 428. Form and construction of will, 429. Idiot, infant, and disqualified heir may take as devisee, 430. Extension to Hindu Wills of Indian Succession Act, 431. Probate and Administration Act, 432. Position of Executors and Administrators, 433.

CHAPTER XII.

RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE ENDOWMENTS.

Favoured by early law, 434. Sanctioned by Courts, 436. Different sorts of trust, 437. Powers of trustee, 438. Devolution of trust, 439. Founder's rights, 440.

CHAPTER XIII.

BENAMI TRANSACTIONS.

Origin, 441, and principles of Benami, 442. Effect given to real title, 443; unless third parties defrauded, 444. Frauds on creditors, 445. Effect of decrees, 448. Right of benamidar to sue on his own title, 449.

CHAPTER XIV.

MAINTENANCE.

Who are entitled, 450. Extent of the right in case of parents and widow, 451; children, 454; wife, 455. Who are liable, 458. Amount, 459. Not a lien on the estate against purchaser without notice, 460; until notice of charge actually created, 461. Priority of debts, 464. Rights of widow to reside in family house, 465. Liability of volunteer, 466.

CHAPTER XV.

PARTITION.

What property is divisible, 467, and indivisible, 468. Impartible Raj, 469. Mode of taking account, 470. Right of issue to sue ancestor, 471. Passes to their issue, 473. Right of son born after division, 472. Bengal law differs, 474. Rights of illegitimate sons, 475; of minors or absent co-parceners, 476; of women, 477; under Mitakshara, 478; of widow in Bengal, 479; of mother and grandmother, 480; daughter, 482; strangers, 483; disqualified heirs and their issue, 484; how far barred by fraud, 485, or agreement, 486. Special and unequal shares obsolete, 488. Unequal distribution of self-acquisition, 489, or by father in Bengal, 490. Partition by some members only, 492, or of only part, 493. When stranger is in possession, 494. Evidence of partition actually effected or agreed upon, 495. Reunion, 496.

LAW OF INHERITANCE.

CHAPTER XVI.

PRINCIPLES OF SUCCESSION IN CASE OF MALES.

Succession applies to separate property only, 498; never in abeyance, 499. Bengal system based on religious offerings, 500. How applied to sapindas, 501; to female ancestors, 503; to bandhus, 502; ex parte paternâ, 505; ex parte maternâ, 506. Rules for precedence among heirs, 508. Mitakshara based on affinity only, 509.

Meaning of term sapinda, 510. Postpones cognates, 512. Religious principle inapplicable to bandhus, 513. Examination of earlier law, 514; based on survivorship, 515; how far connected with system of offerings, 516.

CHAPTER XVII.

PRINCIPLES OF SUCCESSION IN CSAE OF FEMALES.

Position of women depends on family system, 517. Their rights at first only to maintenance, 518. Heritable rights of daughter, 519, mother, 521; widow, 522; only extend to separate property, 526; except in Bengal, 527; only inherits to her own husband, except in Bombay, 529; and Pondicherry, 530. Sister not an heir, 531, except in Bombay, 532, and by recent decisions in Madras, 536-539.

CHAPTER XVIII.

ORDER OF SUCCESSION.

Issue, 540. Primogeniture, 541. Illegitimate sons, 547; their share, 550. Widow, 553; obligation to chastity, 555; effect of her marrying again, 556. Daughters, 557; precedence between, 558. Exclusion of females in Northern India, 561. Daughter's son, 562; several take per capita, 563. Nature of estate taken by descendants ex parte materna, 563A; take as full owners, 564. Parents: their precedence, 565; step-mother not an heir, 566. Brothers, 567. Nephews, 569. Grandnephews, 571. Ascendants, 572. Sakulyas and Samanodakas, 574. Bandhus: sister's son, 575; granduncle's daughter's son, 578. Precedence among bandhus by Mitakshara, 579; Bengal law, 580; their priority as regards sapindas, 581, or sakulyas, 583. Bandhu, ex parte materna, 584. Laxity as to female succession in Bombay, 585, Reunion, 586. Succession of strangers, 588. Escheat, 589. Hermit's property, 590.

CHAPTER XIX.

EXCLUSION FROM INHERITANCE.

Principle of exclusion, 591; mitigated by expiation, 592. Outcasts, 593. Mental and bodily defects, 594. Vicious conduct, 597. Disability is personal, and does not divest estate, 598; lets in next heirs at once, 599. Effect of removal of disability, or birth of qualified son, 600. Entrance into religious order, 603. Whether rules applicable to non-Aryan races, ib.

WOMAN'S ESTATE.

CHAPTER XX.

PROPERTY INHERITED FROM MALES.

Meaning of stridhanum, 604. Peculiarities of property inherited from a male, 605. Their reason and origin, 606. Text of the Mitakshara as to stridhanum discussed, and held to be erroneous, 610. Restrictions on estate of widow, 610; except in Pondicherry, 612; and mother and grandmother, 610, 614; and daughter, 613. Contrary rule in Bombay as to daughter, 614, and sister, 616. Special rule for descent of property when inherited by a female in Bombay, 618. Property obtained by partition, 621. Nature and extent of a woman's estate, 624; her power of enjoyment, 625; right to accumulations, 626; to property purchased with savings, 628; power of disposition, 632; enlarged by consent of reversioners, 637; evidence of consent, 639; of acts authorizing transfer, 640; executions against her estate, 641; effect of judgments obtained against, or of lapse of time following on dispossession, 643; her power over the self-acquired, 644, or moveable property of last holder, 645. Remedies: persons who may sue, 646; to restrain waste, 647; for declaration of title, 648. Specific Relief Act, 649; suits to set aside adoptions, 650, or alienations, 651. Effect of declaratory decree, 652. Equities on setting aside acts of heiress, 653.

CHAPTER XXI.

PROPERTY NOT INHERITED FROM MALES.

Origin and growth of woman's special property, 655. Texts which define it, 658. The Sulka, 659. Meaning of Yautaka and Saudayika, 660. Property absolutely under woman's control, case of property inherited from female, 662; subject to husband's control, 663; in which her right is limited, 664. Succession to property of a Maiden, 665, 675; of a married woman, 666. Devolution of Sulka, 667; Yautaka, 668; by Benares law, 669; in Bengal, 670; of Ayautaka by Benares law, 671; in Bengal, 672; property given by a father, 673, or inherited from a female, 674. Chastity not essential, 676.

TABLE OF CASES.

N. B.—In the citation of cases, prefixes, such as Stri, Rajah, Rani, Maharajah, Alahawani, and Baboo are omitted, and where the name is long, the latter part is left out. The spelling of the Report from which the case is quoted has always been followed, so that the same name is often spelt in different ways. The references are to pages.

	PAGE		PAGE
A & B, in re ..	277	Aga Hajee v. Juggut ..	391
Abadi v. Asa ..	622	Agar Ellis, in re ..	276
Abaji v. Mukta ..	499	Agarchand v. Lukhma ..	516
Abalady v. Mt. Lukhymonce ..	619	Aghorenath v. Grishchunder ..	432
Abasi v. Dunne ..	274	Agin v. Mohan ..	523
Abbu v. Kuppammal ..	237	Ahmedbhoy v. Cassumbhoy ..	68, 357
Abdul Aziz v. Appayasami ..	409, 414, 417, 448	Aiyyagari v. Aiyyagari ..	480
— Cadur v. Turner ..	68	— v. Ramayya ..	654
— Kareem v. Badrudeen ..	668	Ajey v. Girdharee ..	466
Abhachari v. Ramachendrayya ..	237, 509	Ajit Singh v. Bijai ..	485
Abbai Churn v. Mangal ..	797	Ajoodhia v. Kashee Gir ..	345, 453
Abhassi Begam v. Rajroop Koonwar ..	274	Ajuddhia Baksh v. Mt. Rukmin Kuar ..	496, 577
Abhaychandra v. Pyari, 373, 375, 376, 378		Akama v. Puttaiya ..	274
Abhoy Churn v. Kally Prasad ..	874	Akhoy Chunder v. Kalapar Haji ..	137
Abilakh v. Bhakhi ..	234, 812	Akkanna v. Venkayya ..	846
Abilak Roy v. Rubbi Roy ..	464	Akkineri v. Mallapudi ..	860
Abinash v. Harinath ..	861, 872	Akoba Dada v. Sakharam ..	865
Abool Hossien v. Raghunath ..	519	Akora v. Boreani ..	756, 771
Abraham v. Abraham, 59, 60, 66, 69, 72		Alabi Koya v. Mussa Koya ..	536
Achal Ram v. Udai Pertab, 733, 741		Alagappa v. Ramasamy ..	296
Achut v. Manjunath ..	865	— v. Vellian ..	379
Achutan Nair v. Cheriotti ..	553	Alamalu v. Rungasami ..	654
Adaikalam v. Marimuttu ..	381	Alamela v. Rengasami ..	480
Adhiranee v. Shona Malee, 621, 622, 623, 625		Alami v. Komu ..	553
Adibai v. Cursandas ..	617	Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni, 503, 577
Adi Deo v. Dukharan ..	672	Alank Manjari v. Fakir Chand., 169, 198
Administrator-General of Madras v. Ananda Chari ..	118	Alhadmoni v. Gokulmoni ..	770
Administrator-General of Bengal v. Apcar ..	576	Alimelammal v. Arunachellam ..	273, 274, 643
Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa ..	634	Ali Hasan v. Dhirja ..	494, 496
Adurmoni v. Chowdhry ..	346, 399	Alim Buksh v. Jhalo Bibi ..	291
Advocate-General v. Fatima ..	587	Alladinee v. Sreenath ..	383
Advocate-General v. Karnali ..	508	Aloksoondry v. Horo ..	594
Advyapa v. Rudrava, 759, 771, 809, 904		Alukmonee v. Banee Madhub ..	865
		Alum v. Ashad ..	380
		Alwar v. Ramasamy ..	197
		Alymalummaul v. Vencatoovien ..	633
		Amanchi v. Munchiraz ..	425
		Aman Singh v. Narain ..	290

	PAGE		PAGE
Amava v. Mahad Gauda	134, 251	Anundmoyee v. Sheebchunder	140
Ambabai v. Govind..	52, 55, 750	Anwar v. Secretary of State	573
Ambawow v. Rutton	.. 715	Anwari v. Nizam-ud-din	.. 500
Ambika v. Sukhmani	.. 672	Anyaba v. Daji	.. 875
Ameena v. Radhabinode	.. 801	Apaji v. Gaugabai	602, 609
Amir Singh a. Mouzzim	.. 380	— Bapuji v. Keshav Shumrav	441, 533
Amirthayyan v. Ketharamayyan	.. 144	— Narhav v. Ramachandra	.. 641
Amiruddaula v. Nateri	.. 495	Appapillay v. Rungapillay	.. 673
Amjad Ali v. Moniram	.. 854	Appasami v. Nagappa	.. 585
Ammakannu v. Appu	605, 609	Appovier v. Rama Subbaiyan	.. 335, 370, 382, 669, 672
Ammur v. Mardun..	.. 871	Appu Row v. Venkanna	.. 456
Amolak v. Chandan	.. 472	Ardasir v. Hirabai	.. 578
Amrita v. Lakhinarayan	678, 688	Ariyaputri v. Alamelu	.. 753
	690, 694, 782	Armugam v. Sabapathy	.. 464
Amrita Lal v. Manick	616, 625	Arnachellum v. Iyasamy	170, 543
Amrita Lal v. Surnomoyee	145, 152, 570	Arunuga v. Viraraghava	.. 119
Amrut v. Trimbuick..	.. 394	— v. Ramasami	.. 453
Amulya v. Kalidas	575, 578	Arunugam v. Ammi Ammal	566, 575
Anand v. Court of Wards	871, 875	Arunachella v. Muniswami	.. 400
— v. Prankisto	654, 657	— v. Vythialinga	379, 381
— Rao v. Adm.-Genl., Bombay	574	Arunaghiri v. Ranganayaki	.. 751
Anandabai v. Rajaram	.. 841	Arundadi v. Kuppammal	.. 158
Anandibai v. Kashibai	152, 255	Arruth v. Juggernath	.. 585
Ananda Bibi v. Nownit Lal	697, 715	Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb	68, 589, 672, 894, 899
Anandayyan v. Devarajayyan	.. 296	Ashgar v. Delroos	.. 583
Anandrav v. Ganesh	.. 206	Ashimullah v. Kali Kinkur	.. 632
Anant Balacharya v. Damodhar	672	Ashutosh v. Doorga Churn	.. 567
— Ram v. Channu	.. 385	— v. Lukhimoni	.. 619
— Ramrav v. Kopal	.. 380	Assar Purushotam v. Ratanbai	.. 153
Anauta v. Ramabai..	806, 808	Aswatia v. Subbaroya	.. 457
Auantaiya v. Savitramma	.. 615	Attorney-General v. Brodie	.. 587
Anantha v. Nagamuthu	495, 582	Audh Kumari v. Chandra	.. 761
Ananthaiya v. Vishnu	.. 603	Aunjona Dasi v. Prahlad Chandra	103
Anath v. Mackintosh	.. 657	Aulim v. Bejai	.. 677
Andrews v. Joakim..	.. 581	Aulock v. Aulock	.. 513
Angammal v. Venkata Reddy	.. 904	Aumirtolall v. Rajoneekant	762, 765, 877
Angamuthu v. Kolanda	.. 379	Ayabuttee v. Rajkissen	.. 715
Annaji v. Chandrabai	.. 523	Ayma Ram v. Madharao	.. 199
Annamah v. Mabbu Bali Reddy	246	Ayyadorai v. Solai..	.. 212
Annapagauda v. Keru	.. 285	Ayyappa v. Venkata	.. 381
Annapurni v. Forbes	221, 771	Ayyavu v. Niladatchi	223, 232
Annasami v. Ramakrishna	.. 586	Azimut v. Hurdwaree	590, 594
Annoda v. Kally Coomar	.. 380	Aziz-un-Nissa v. Tasadduk	.. 522
Annundo Mohun v. Lamb	.. 366
Anooragee v. Bhugobutty	.. 453	BABAJI v. Bhagirthibai	.. 172
Anpuncnabai v. Durgapa	.. 284	— v. Kashibai	.. 672
Antaji v. Dattaji	257, 260	— v. Krishna	.. 595
Antamma v. Kaveri	.. 311	— v. Krishnaji	.. 457
Anundo Bai v. Kalipersad	.. 441	— v. Vasudev	.. 473
Anund Chandra v. Nilmoni	.. 845	Babu v. Nankuram..	.. 697
Anundchund v. Kishen	.. 493	— v. Timma	439, 476
Anund Chunder v. Teetoram	.. 721	Bachha Jha v. Jugmon	.. 895
— v. Court of Wards	871, 875	Bachebi v. Makhan..	52, 577
— v. Dheraj..	61, 444, 524	Bachoo v. Mankorebai	.. 439
— Moyee v. Mohendro	.. 853
Anundee v. Khedoo..	672, 712
Anundmoyee v. Boykantsnath	.. 585

	PAGE		PAGE
Bada v. Hussa Bhai..	.. 633	Balasu v. Lakshamma	164, 168, 170, 188, 202
Badri Prasad v. Madan Lal	395, 401	Balbadar v. Bisheshar	.. 428
Badul v. Chutterdharee	.. 369	Balbhaddar v. Sheo Narain	.. 573
Baee Gunga v. Baee Sheekoovur	174, 175	Baldeo v. Jumna	.. 99
— Rutton v. Lalla Munnohar	114	— v. Mobarak..	.. 432
— Rulyat v. Jeychund	101, 103, 118	Balgobind v. Narain	.. 481
— v. Lukmeedass	.. 608	— v. Ramkumar	.. 871
— Sheo v. Ruttonjee	114, 273, 274	Balgovind v. Pertab	.. 806
— Umrut v. Baee Koosul	.. 716	— v. Lal Bahadoor	.. 812
Bagade v. Chowdhia	840, 848	Balkishen v. Ram Narain	643, 672
Bahadur Singh v. Mohar	343, 858	Balkrishna v. Morokrishna	379, 390
Bahur Ali v. Sookeea	.. 287	— v. Savitribai	673, 678, 751
Bai Amrit v. Bai Manik	.. 715	Ballabh v. Sunder..	.. 471
— Baiji v. Santok..	.. 68	Ballojee v. Venkapa	.. 477
— Bapi v. Jannadas	.. 574	Balmakund v. Bhagvan	.. 500
— Chadunbai v. Dadi	.. 574	Balmakundas v. Moti	.. 519
— Dayav. Natha Govindhal	.. 605	Balusami v. Narayana	785, 786
— Devkore v. Amritram	554, 679, 778	Balvantrav v. Bayabai	.. 171
— v. Sanmukhram	.. 626	Balwant Singh v. Ranikishori	41, 450
— Divali v. Moti..	.. 103	Bamasoondree v. Rajkrishto	683, 721
— Janna v. Bai Shauger	.. 869	Bamasoondree v. Anund	.. 677
— v. Bai Jadav	.. 609	— v. Bama-
— Kesar v. Bai Ganga	.. 287	— soondree	.. 871
— Kushal v. Lakshma Mana	.. 501	Bamasoondree v. Krishna	Chandra.. 519
— Mamubai v. Dossa Moraji	.. 508	— v. Puddomonee..	615
— Mangal v. Rukhmoni	.. 604	Bamundoss v. Mt. Tarinee	153, 259, 541
— Manigavri v. Narondas	.. 509	Banarsi Das v. Maharani Kuar	.. 379
— Manchha v. Narotamdas	.. 354	Bandhu v. Dhiraji..	.. 274
— Motivahoo v. Mamubai	508, 566, 571	Baree Pershad v. Moonsho Syud	140, 200
— v. Purshotam	.. 590	Bank of Hindustan v. Premchand	500
— Nani v. Chunilal	.. 177	Banka Behari v. Rajkumar	.. 596
— Narnada v. Bhagwantrai	.. 835, 899, 903	Bannoo v. Kashee Ram	.. 369
— Parvati v. Tarwadi	.. 609	Banyamdhob v. Juggodumba	.. 775
— Rambai v. Bai Mani	.. 536	Bappan v. Makki..	.. 602
— Suraj v. Dulpatram	.. 516	Bapu Anaji v. Ratnoji	240, 252, 343
— Ugri v. Purshotam	.. 118	— Lal v. Nankuram	.. 697
Bujnath v. Lachman Das	.. 520	Bapuji v. Pandurang	.. 814
— v. Mahabir	.. 765	— v. Satyabhamabai	.. 517
Baijun v. Brij Bhokun	853, 863	Barahi v. Debkamini	.. 649
Bailur Krishna v. Lakshmana	.. 431	Bargaru v. Vijyamachi	.. 618
Baisni v. Rup Singh	.. 617	Baroda Kanta v. Chunder	.. 598
Bajee v. Pandurang	.. 477	— v. Jatindra	.. 866
Bakubai v. Manchhabai	.. 759	Baroda Sunderi v. Dinobundhu	600
Bala v. Balaji	.. 440	Basalingappah v. Gurusanthappa	456
Balabux v. Rukhmabai	.. 666	Basamal v. Maharaj Singh	.. 401
Balaji v. Datta Ramchandra	.. 172	Basappa v. Rayava..	.. 756
— v. Gopal	.. 380	Basava v. Lingangauda	192, 230, 256
— v. Nana	.. 235	Basdeo v. Gopal	.. 212
— v. Ramachandra	.. 518	Bashetiappa v. Shivlingappa	131, 171
Balamma v. Pullayya	.. 714	Basoo v. Basoo	.. 137
Balaram v. Appa	.. 521	— v. Kishen	.. 584
— v. Ramchandra	368, 668	— Kooer v. Hurry Dass	.. 400
Balarami v. Pera	.. 228, 269	Basvantrav v. Mantappa	.. 61
		Bata Krishna v. Chintamani	.. 369

	PAGE		PAGE
Bawani v. Ambabay ..	232, 233	Bhana v. Chindu ..	416
Bayabai v. Bala Venkatesh,	153, 167	Bhanrao v. Lakshmi Bai ..	579
Bebee Nuttra, re ..	538	Bhaoni v. Maharaj Singh,	59, 100
Becha v. Moothini ..	627		743
Bechu Lal v. Oliullah ..	380	Bhamnangavda v. Rudrapgavda,	826,
Bechur v. Bace Lukmee ..	869		830
Beebee Nyamut v. Fuzl Hossein	591	Bhartpur v. Gopal Dei ..	624
— Sowlutoonissa v. Robt.		Bhasker Bhachajee v. Narro
— Savi ..	284	Ragonath ..	154, 172
Beer Pertab v. Maharajah		— Purushottam v. Saras-
Rajender, 62, 358, 438,		vatibai ..	500, 521
553, 573		— v. Vijalal ..	285, 456
Behari Lal v. Indramani ..	197	— Trimbak v. Mahadev Ramji,
— v. Shib Lal, 185, 222, 229			825, 831, 834, 869
— v. Madho Lal ..	856, 860	Bhau Babaji v. Gopala ..	851
— Lalji v. Rajbai ..	624	— Nanaji v. Sundarabai, 61,	709,
Behary v. Madho ..	876		758
Bemola v. Mohun ..	453	Bhavamma v. Ramasami ..	524
Benares v. Ramkumar ..	389	Bhawani v. Mahtab ..	754
Bengal Govt. v. Jafir Hossein ..	523	— Baksh v. Ramdai ..	421
Beni Mahdo v. Basdeo ..	421	— Pershad v. Kallu ..	402
— Pershad v. Dudnath ..	524	Bhikham v. Pura ..	627
— v. Parbati ..	430	Bhimaji v. Giriappa ..	530
— v. Puran Chand ..	346,	Bhimana v. Tayappa ..	237
348, 416		Bhimaapaya v. Ramchandra,	532, 533
— Prasad v. Hardai Bibi	31, 37	Bhimappa v. Basawa ..	858
	187, 192	Bhaimawa v. Sangava ..	165
Bepin Behari v. Brojonath ..	256	Bhimul Doss v. Choonee Lall ..	333
— v. Lal Mohun ..	654	Bhivrav v. Sitaram ..	636
Beresford v. Rama Subba ..	447	Bhoba Tarini v. Peary Lall,	505, 526
Berhampore case ..	159, 241	Bhobosondree v. Issurhunder ..	511
Berjessory v. Ramconny ..	752	Bholai v. Kali ..	874
Berogah v. Nubokissen ..	677	Bholanath v. Ajoodhia ..	364, 367
Bhaba Pershad v. Secretary of		— v. Mt. Sabitra ..	803, 811
State ..	291	— v. Rakhul Dass ..	782
Bhadri v. Bhugwat ..	652	Bhola Pershad v. Ram Lall ..	599
Bhagabati v. Kanailal ..	621, 627	Bhowabul v. Rajendro ..	598
Bhagavatamma v. Pampanna ..	352	Bhowanceel v. Mt. Taramunee ..	493
Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer ..	389,	Bhowanny Churn v. Ramkaunt ..	493,
390, 405, 409, 420, 463			663
Bhagbutti v. Chowdhry Bholanath ..	574, 845, 848	— v. Purn ..	594
Bhagirathi v. Ananthacharia ..	622	Bhowna v. Roopkishore ..	463
— v. Sheobhlik ..	481	Bhobum Moyee v. Ram Kishore,	144,
Bhagirathi Bhai v. Kahnurjirav,	29, 831	148, 149, 182, 244, 255, 261, 548,
— v. Radhabai ..	174	558, 564, 573, 813
— v. Baya ..	720	Bhoobunessuree v. Gouree Doss,	803
Bhagvandas v. Rajmal ..	52	Bhoobunmoyee v. Ramkissore ..	629
Bhagwan v. Jogendra ..	52, 577	Bhubaneswari v. Nilcomul ..	250
— Singh v. Bhagwan,	31, 173,	Bhuggobutty v. Gooroo Prosonno	582
174, 180		Bhugwan v. Upooch ..	593
Bhagwant Singh v. Kallu ..	806	— v. Bindoo ..	617
Bhairabnath v. Makishchandra ..	196	Bhugwandeem v. Myna Bae,	752, 753,
Bhaiya Ardawan v. Udey Pertab	524	825, 837, 868, 870
— Rudibat v. Indar ..	258	Bhujanga v. Ramayamma ..	528, 890
Bhairo v. Parmeshri ..	496	Bhujangrav v. Molojirav ..	57, 733
Bhala Nahana v. Parbhu ..	134	Bhujjun v. Gya ..	804
Bhalu Roy v. Jhaku Roy ..	519	Bhup Singh v. Lachman ..	614
		Bhupal Ram v. Lachma Kuar ..	860

	PAGE		PAGE
Bhupendro Narayan v. Nemye	284	Boiddonath v. Ramkishore ..	283
Chand ..	284	Bolakee v. Court of Wards ..	360
Bhuwani v. Solukhna ..	857	Bolye Chund v. Khetterpaul ..	838
Bhyah Ram v. Bhyah Ugur,	692, 698,	Boodhun v. Mt. Lateefan ..	514
	731	Boolchand v. Janokee ..	118
Bhyrobee v. Nubbkissen, 715, 770,	825	Boologun v. Swornum ..	353
Bhyrochund v. Russomunee ..	659	Booloka v. Comarasawmy ..	634
Bhyrup Chunder v. Katee		Boyse v. Russborough ..	542
Kishwur ..	210	Brackenbury v. Brackenbury ..	596
Bhyrup Chunder v. Gogaram ..	380	Brahmappa v. Pappanna ..	895
Bibee Solomon v. Abdul Azeez ..	290	Brahmavarapu v. Venkamma ..	605
Bibi Sahodra v. Rai Jang ..	852	Braja Bhukan v. Bichan ..	807
— Walian v. Banke Behari ..	291	Brajakishor v. Radha Gobind ..	686
Bidhoomookhi v. Echamooee ..	775	Braju Kishoro v. Kundana ..	525
Bijaya v. Shama ..	153	— Lal v. Jiban ..	407, 686, 689,
Bijia Debia v. Mt. Uннаपोorna ..	763,		789, 863
	825	Bramamayi v. Jages, 502, 566, 568,
Bijoy Gopal v. Nilratan, 853, 868,	876		575
Bikan v. Parbutty ..	513	Brijhookunjee v. Gokooloot-
Bilasoni v. Sheo Pershad ..	523	saojee ..	154, 183
Bilaso v. Dina Nath ..	648, 649	Brij Ldar v. Janki Koer ..	358, 889
Bimola v. Dangoo ..	761	— Mohun v. Ram Nursingh ..	595
Binda v. Kaunsilia ..	119	Brimho v. Ram Dolub ..	594
Bindoo v. Bolie ..	873	Brinda v. Pearee ..	876
— v. Pearee ..	590	Brindabun v. Chandra Kurmocar,	103,
Binode v. Purdhan ..	760		118
Birajun Kooer v. Lachmi Narain ..	869	Brindavana v. Radhamani, 100,	746
Bireswar v. Ardachunder ..	236	Brohmo v. Anund ..	875, 877
Birch v. Balgrave ..	596	Brojo v. Gouree ..	775
Birjochun v. Ram Narsingh ..	595	— v. Sreenath Bose, 775, 787, 875,
— Lal v. Rudra Perkash, 273			877
Biru v. Khandu ..	720	Brojokishoree v. Sreenath Bose ..	871
Bishambhur v. Sudasheeb, 454,	457	Brojomohun v. Hurrololl ..	587
Bishen Chand v. Syed Nadir ..	584	Brojonath v. Koylash ..	593
— Perkash v. Bawa ..	452	Brojsoondery v. Luchmee Koon-
Bishenpirea v. Soogunda ..	11, 770	waree ..	582, 583
Bisehswar v. Shitul ..	360	Broughton v. Pogose ..	574
Bishonath v. Chunder ..	514	Buchi Ramaya v. Jagapathi ..	869
Bisnath Singh v. Ramchurn ..	59	Budankayala v. Vinayaka ..	519
Bistobehari v. Lala Biajnath ..	876	Budree Lall v. Kantee ..	389, 463
Bistoo v. Radha Soonder ..	897	Buhuns v. Lalla Bhuoree ..	592
Biswanath v. Collector of Mymen-		Bukhtawar, Will of ..	579
sing ..	379	Bukshun v. Doolhin ..	287, 457
— v. Khantomani ..	842	Bulakhidas v. Keshavlal, 752, 762,	830
Bissessur v. Seetul ..	360	Buldeo v. Sham Lal ..	439
— v. Luchmessur ..	368, 415,	Bullabakant v. Kishenprea, ..	182, 198
	465, 589, 866	Bullnore v. Wynter ..	239
— v. Joy Kishore ..	513	Bulwant Singh v. Roshan ..	603
— v. Ram Joy ..	845	Bungsee v. Soodist ..	381
Bissonath v. Bamasoondery, 553, 569		Bunsee Lal v. Shaikh Aoladh ..	481
Bissonauth v. Doorgapersad ..	273	Bunwaree v. Mudden ..	585
Blair v. Duncan ..	574	Buraik v. Greedharee ..	454
Boddington, in re ..	239	Burham v. Punchoo ..	774
Bodh Singh v. Gunesh, 364, 369, 592		Burtoo v. Ram Purmessur ..	463
Bodhnarain v. Omrao, 655, 807, 812		Bussunt v. Kummul ..	612
Bodhrao v. Nursing Rao ..	634	Buzrung v. Mt. Mautora ..	290
Bogaraz v. Tanjore Venkatarav ..	551	Byari v. Puttanna ..	475
Boicunt v. Kishen Soonder ..	245	Byjnath v. Kopilmon ..	56

	PAGE		PAGE
Bykunt v. Goolah ..	595	Chennapah v. Chellamanah ..	394
— v. Grish Chunder ..	876	Chenvirapa v. Danava ..	643
		— v. Puttappa ..	596, 598
CALLYCHURN v. Bhuggobutty ..	272	Chetty Colum Prusunna v. ..
— v. Jonava ..	651	Chetty Colum Moodoo ..	182
Callynauth v. Chundernath, 568, 570		Cheyt Narain v. Bunwaree ..	379
Canacumma v. Narasimmah ..	657	Chhabila v. Jadavbai ..	672
Canaka v. Cotaavappah ..	287	Chicka Byamma v. Nanjannah ..	626, 715
Carter v. Silter ..	285
Caspersz v. Kadernath ..	523	Chidambara v. Kootha ..	399
Cassumbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy ..	638	Chidambaram v. Gouri ..	673
Cauminany v. Perumma ..	284	Chiddu v. Durga Singh ..	878
Cavaly Vencata v. Collector of Masulipatam ..	467, 800, 862	— v. Naubat ..	838
Cecil v. Butcher ..	596	Chinnaji v. Dinkar ..	851
Chain Sukh v. Parbati ..	176	Chinna Gaundan v. Kumara ..	186
Chalakonda v. Ratnachalam, 62, 353		— Kimedya case ..	11, 134, 159, 203, 241, 256, 263, 815
Chalamayya v. Varadayya ..	455	— Nagayya v. Pedda Nagayya, 175
Chalayil Kandotha v. Chathu ..	314	— Obaya v. Sura Reddi ..	268
Chamaili v. Ram Prasad ..	481	— Ramakristna v. Minatchi, 218
Chamanlal v. Doshi ..	786, 794	— Sunnyasi v. Surya ..	484, 670
Chamar v. Kashi ..	756	— Ummayi v. Tegarai ..	63
Chandania v. Salig Ram ..	213	Chinnammal v. Varadarajulu, 57, 750
Chander Kishore v. Dampat ..	481	— v. Venkatachella ..	686, 719, 730, 786
Chandra v. Gojarabai ..	246, 251
Chandrabhagabai v. Kashinath ..	608, 618	Chinnapiel v. Chocken ..	474
Chandramala v. Muktamala ..	197	Chinnappa v. Manickavasagam ..	519
Chandrika v. Muna ..	774	Chinnasamien v. Koottoor ..	723
Chandrasekhara v. Siddalingappa, 400		Chinnaya v. Gurnathan, 285, 456, 851
Chandrasekharudu v. Bramhanna, 138		— v. Perumal ..	440
Chandu v. Raman ..	602	Chintamanrav v. Kashinath ..	389
Chaplin v. Chaplin ..	596	— v. Moro Lakshman ..	573
Chara Chunder v. Nobo Sunderi, 761, 806		— v. Shivram ..	518
Chatradari v. Kunj Behari ..	351	Chitko Raghunath v. Janaki, 169, 257
Chatterbhooj v. Daramsi ..	346, 349, 439	Chockalingam v. Mayandi ..	585
		Choondoor v. Narasimmah ..	810
		Choonee v. Prosunno ..	372
		— Lall v. Jussoo ..	541, 850
Chaudhri Ujagar v. Chaudhri Pitam ..	449	Chotalal v. Manohar ..	587
Chekkutti v. Pakki ..	602	Chotay Lall v. Chunno Lall, 46, 729, 828
Chelikani v. Appa Rau ..	766	— v. Chunnoo Lal ..	887
— v. Suraneni, 678, 722, 724, 782		Chotiram v. Narayandas ..	455
— v. Venkataramanayamma, 766, 828		Chowdhri v. Tariney ..	590
Chellamma v. Subamma ..	501	Chowdhry v. Brojo Soondur ..	462
Chella Papi v. Chella Koti ..	269	— Bholanath v. Mt. Bhagabutti ..	845
Chellaperoomall v. Veeraperoomall ..	355	— Chintamun v. Mt. Nowlukho, 61, 351, 712, 758
Chellayamal v. Muttilalam ..	350	— Chuttersal v. Government ..	285
Chemmanthatti v. Meyene ..	583	— Ganesh v. Mt. Jewach, 643, 647, 672
Chemnautha v. Palakuzhu, 91, 93, 311		— Pudum v. Koer Oodey, 142, 143, 144, 263
Chinapa v. Basangavda ..	230	— Salar v. Vobamma ..	627
Chenchamma v. Subbaya ..	269
Chendrabhan v. Chingooram ..	745
Chengal Reddi v. Venkata Reddi, 289
Chengamma v. Munisami ..	639

	PAGE		PAGE
Chowdree v. Hanooman ..	265	Cursandas v. Ladvakahoo ..	290
Chowdry v. Russomoyee ..	850
Chuckun v. Poran ..	371, 375, 382	DABO MISSEER v. Srinivas ..	587
Chundee v. MacNaghten ..	37	Dabychurn v. Radachurn ..	108
Chunder v. Dwarkanath ..	875	Dadaji v. Rukmabai ..	119, 610
— v. Hurbuns Sahai, 481, 598		Dadjee v. Wittal ..	380, 668, 809
Chundernath v. Bhojyub Chunder, 519, 521		Dagdu v. Balwant ..	600
— v. Kristo ..	590	— v. Pancham ..	511
Chundi Churn v. Sidheswari, 566, 567		Dagumbaree v. Taramonee, 176, 220
Chundrabulee v. Brody, 843, 845		Daji v. Dhirajram ..	291
Chundrabulle's case ..	144, 149, 182, 244, 255, 260, 547, 558, 564, 574, 813	Dalibai v. Gopebai ..	284
Chundrakaminee v. Ramrutton, 592		Dalip v. Ganpat ..	747
Chundro v. Nobin Soondur ..	56	Dalpat Narotam v. Bhugvan, 831, 835
Chunilal v. Ramchandra ..	519	Dalsukharm v. Lallubhai ..	627
— v. Bai Mala ..	526	D'Alton v. D'Alton ..	281
Chuoatrya v. Sahub Purlulad, 603, 616, 641		Daltu v. Meghu ..	613
Churaman v. Balli ..	519, 522	Damoderdas v. Tapidas ..	574
Chutter v. Bikaoo ..	485	— v. Uttamram, 372, 376, 632, 636, 643, 647
— Sein's case ..	585	Damodar v. Purmanandas, 869, 886
Clarke, in re ..	276	— v. Senabutty ..	644, 647
Cochrane v. Moore ..	498	Damoodhur v. Birjo ..	466
Coggan v. Pogose ..	521	Damoodhur v. Mohee Kant ..	876
Coleman, re ..	506	Danno v. Darbo ..	761
Collector of Dacca v. Jagat Chunder, 801		Dantuluri v. Mallapudi ..	889
— Madura v. Mootoo ..		Darsu v. Bikarmajit ..	399
— Ramalinga, 27, 29, 30, 38, 43, 58, 143, 154		Dasapa v. Chikama ..	279
— Masulipatam v. Cavaly Venkata, 800, 819, 820, 825, 841		— v. Nanjundia ..	400
— Surat v. Dhirsingji ..	170	Dasari v. Dasari ..	668
— Thana v. Hari ..	584	Das Mercedes v. Cones ..	581
— Tirhoot v. Huropersad, 267		Dasharathi v. Bipin Behari ..	898
— Trichinopoly v. Lekka-mani ..	93	Datel v. Ambika ..	262
Collychund v. Moore ..	856	Dattaji v. Kalba ..	853
Collydoss v. Sibchunder ..	517	Dattaram v. Gungaram ..	284
Comulmoney v. Rammanath ..	628	Dattatraya v. Mahadaji ..	633
Comarasawmy v. Sellummaul ..	605	Datti Parisi v. Datti Bangaru, 746, 747
Commula, re ..	538	Dawlet Ram v. Mehr Chand, 409, 434
Cooppa v. Soshappien ..	869	Davies v. Otty ..	596
Cooppummal v. Kookmany ..	604	Dawson, re ..	502
Cooverji v. Dewsey ..	409, 416, 420	Debee Dial v. Hur Hor Singh, 170, 186
Cossarat v. Sudaburt ..	481	Debendra v. Brojendra Coomar, 493, 629
Cossinaut Bysack v. Harroo-soondry, 492, 541, 838, 842, 850, 868		— v. Hemchandra ..	432
Cottington v. Fletcher ..	596	Debi Dayal v. Bhan Pertab, 851, 854
Court of Wards v. Mohessur ..	385	— Dutt v. Subodra ..	284
Crowdee v. Bhekdarce ..	383	— Parshad v. Thakur Dial ..	342
Culloor Narainsawmy, in re ..	277	— Sahai v. Sheo Shankar ..	901
Gunjhunnee v. Gopee ..	615	Debnath v. Gudadhur ..	589
Cunniah Chetty v. Lutchmenarasoo ..	568	Deendyal v. Jugdeep ..	405, 407, 416, 427, 464, 471, 473, 485, 653
		— v. Hemchandra ..	856
		Deepo Debia v. Gobindo Deb ..	10
		Deepoo v. Gowreeshunker ..	266
		Degambery v. Taramony ..	220
		Delroos v. Nawab Syud ..	583
		Denonath v. Hurryarrain ..	367
		Deo Bacc v. Wan Bacc ..	553

	PAGE
Deo Bunsee v. Dwarkanath ..	643
— Pershad v. Lujoo ..	828
Deekce v. Sookhdeo ..	759, 771
Deekishen v. Budh Prakash, 807, 812	812
Deokuar v. Mankuar ..	509
Deotaree v. Damoodhur ..	455
Deowanti v. Dwarkanath ..	643
Deva v. Ram Manohar ..	465
Devaraja v. Devaraja ..	669
— v. Venayaga ..	568
Devi Persad v. Gumvanti ..	607, 617
Devji v. Sambhu ..	415
Devu v. Daji ..	702
Dewakur v. Naroo ..	379
Dewcoverbaes's case ..	825, 869
Deyanath v. Muthoor ..	686, 792
Dhadpale v. Gurav ..	587
Dhaji Himat v. Dhirajram ..	291
Dhanmull v. Ramchunder ..	288
Dharam Chand v. Bhawani ..	854
— v. Janki ..	625
— Singh v. Angan Lal ..	402
Dharani Knai v. Kristo Kumari, 590	590
Dharma Dagu v. Ramakrishna, 184, 203	184, 203
Dharmadas v. Nistarini ..	536
Dharmapuram v. Virapandiyam, 801, 817	801, 817
Dharnidhur v. Chinto ..	246, 253
Dharup Nath v. Gobind Saran ..	768
Dhiraj v. Mangaram ..	855
Dhondo v. Balkrishna ..	841
— v. Ravji ..	515
Dhondo v. Gangabai ..	720, 826
— Gurav v. Gangabai ..	29
Dhoolubh v. Jeevee ..	541
Dhunoekdaree v. Gunput ..	355
Dhunput v. Gooman ..	524
Dhurbunga v. Coomar ..	415
Dhurum Das Pandey v. Mt. Shama ..	415
— Soondri ..	240, 365, 648
Dhuronidhur Ghose, in re ..	119
Dialchund v. Kissory ..	540
Diggavally v. Coontamoo ..	533
Digumber v. Moti Lall, 683, 688, 776, 792	683, 688, 776, 792
Dina v. Nathu ..	515
Dinanath v. Aulockmonee ..	513
Dinesh Chunder v. Golam Mostappa ..	291
Dinkar v. Appaji ..	456
— v. Ganesh ..	167, 248
Dinomonee v. Gyrucoolah ..	513
Dinobundhoo v. Dinonath ..	381
Divi Virasalingam v. Alatturi ..	117
Diwan Rau v. Inderpal ..	590
— Singh v. Jadho ..	519
Doe v. Ganpat ..	768

	PAGE
Doe v. Roberts ..	596
Dondee v. Suntram ..	517
Donzelle v. Kedarnath ..	589
Doobomoyee v. Shama Churn ..	246
Doolar Chand v. Lalla Chabeel ..	464
Doorasawmy v. Ramamaul ..	761
Doorga v. Jampa ..	331
— v. Mt. Tejoo ..	885
— v. Poorun ..	869
— Bibee v. Janaki ..	683
— Persad v. Kesho Persad, 284, 422	284, 422
— Pershad v. Mt. Kundun, 52, 672	52, 672
— Soonduree v. Gouree-persad ..	260
— Sundari v. Surendra Keshav ..	137, 237
Doorgopershad v. Kesho Pershad, 291	291
Doorputtee v. Haradhun ..	362
Dorasami v. Alirutra ..	464
Dorasinga v. Katama ..	484
Dosibai v. Ishwardas ..	529
Douglas v. Collector of Benares, 553	553
Dowlut Kooer v. Burma Deo ..	762
Debo Misser v. Srinivas ..	532, 586
Duke of Bedford v. Coke ..	596
Dukharam v. Luchmun ..	801
Dukhina v. Rash Beharee ..	154
Dulab v. Dwarkanath ..	388
Duli Singh v. Sundar ..	359
Dundaya v. Chen basappa ..	520
Duneshwar v. Doeshunker ..	787
Durbhunga v. Coomar ..	415, 866
Dugdale, re ..	496
Durga v. Chanchal ..	586
— Nath v. Chintamoni ..	868
— Prasad v. Nawazish ..	489
Durgapal v. Roopun ..	264, 267
Durma v. Coomara ..	450, 550
Duttnaraen v. Ajeet ..	698
Dwarkanath v. Gopeenath ..	383
— v. Denobundoo, 807, 812	807, 812
— v. Mahendranath, 807, 812	807, 812
— v. Tara Prosunno ..	380
Dyamonee v. Brindabun ..	391
Dyamoyee v. Rasbeharee ..	153, 197
Dyaram v. Bacc Umba ..	114
ESHANCHUND v. Eshorchund ..	540
Eshan Chunder v. Nundanoni ..	289
— v. Nund Coomar, 382, 472	382, 472
Eshan Kishor v. Haris Chandra, 131, 235	131, 235
FAIZ BUKSH v. Fukeeroodeen ..	590

	PAGE
Faiz Muhammad v. Muham-mad Saeed ..	522
— Ud-din v. Tincowrie ..	250
Fakir Chand v. Moti Chand, 399, 430	399, 430
— Gauda v. Ganji ..	107
— Muhammad v. Tirumala Chariar ..	296
Fakirapa v. Chanapa ..	478
— v. Yellappa ..	732
Fanendra Deb v. Rajeswar, 59, 135, 237	59, 135, 237
Fanindro v. Jugudishwari ..	433
Fannayamma v. Manjaya ..	212
Fardunji v. Mithibai ..	522
Fatesangji v. Hurisangji ..	68
Fatima Bibi v. Debnath ..	284
Fatma Bibi v. Advocate-General of Bombay ..	582
Fazludeen v. Fakir Mahomed ..	520
Fegredo v. Mahomed ..	584
Forbes v. Meer Mahomed ..	530
Futtu v. Bhurrit ..	584
Fuzeelun v. Omdah ..	599
GADADUR v. Chandra ..	541, 554, 870
Gadgeppa v. Apaji ..	287, 855
Gajapathy v. Gajapathy, 641, 672, 713	641, 672, 713
— v. Pusapati ..	753
Gajendar v. Sirdar ..	672
Ganapati v. Savitri ..	256
Gandi Maganlal v. Bai Jadub, 826, 888, 904	826, 888, 904
Ganesh v. Bapu ..	289
— v. Nilkomul ..	784
— v. Waghu ..	716
Ganga v. Ghasita ..	759, 771, 904
— v. Saroda ..	381
— v. Hira ..	802
Gangabai v. Anant ..	263
— v. Tarabai ..	213
— v. Vamanaji, 452, 454, 486	452, 454, 486
Ganga Baksh v. Jagat ..	509
— Bisheshar v. Pirthi ..	440
Gangadaraiya v. Parmeswar-anma ..	885, 890
Ganga Sahai v. Hira ..	208
— v. Lekhraj, 14, 39, 180, 181, 201, 202	14, 39, 180, 181, 201, 202
Gangaya v. Mahalakshmi ..	874
Gangbai v. Thavur ..	68
Gangopadhya v. Maheschandra ..	875
— v. Sarbomangala ..	887
— v. Sarbmangala ..	899
Gangubai v. Ramanna ..	479, 554
Gangulu v. Ancha ..	399, 464
Ganpat v. Annaji ..	374, 380, 385
— Rao v. Ramchander, 525, 848	525, 848
— Venkatesh v. Gopal ..	639

	PAGE
Ganraj v. Sheozore ..	471, 481
Gan Savant v. Narayen Dhond ..	291
Gantapalli v. Yellamma ..	611
Garikapati v. Sudam ..	672
Garurudhwaja v. Saparandhwaja, 61	61
— Gatra Ram v. Mochita Kochin ..	118, 119
Gauri v. Chandramani ..	626
— v. Gur Sahai ..	871
— v. Rukko ..	703, 715
Gavdappa v. Girimallappah ..	149
Gaya v. Raj Bansi ..	465
Genda v. Chater ..	585
Ghansham v. Badiya ..	854
— v. Govind ..	345
Gharib Ullah v. Khalak, 274, 284, 432, 455	274, 284, 432, 455
Ghasiti v. Umrao Jan ..	64
Ghazi v. Sukru ..	103
Ghirdharee v. Koolahul ..	61
Girdhar Lal v. Bai Shiv ..	391
Girdharee Lal v. Kantoo Lall ..	390, 395, 399, 415, 449, 458, 467
Girdwurdharee v. Kulahul ..	341
Girianna v. Honamma ..	615
Giriappa v. Ningapa ..	223
Girijanand v. Sailajanand ..	584
Giriowa v. Bhimaji ..	154, 167
Girish Chunder v. Abdul Selam ..	273
Girraj Baksh v. Kasi Hamed ..	284
Gnanabhai v. Srinivasa ..	509, 598
Gnana Sambandha v. Velu, 533, 564, 585, 586	533, 564, 585, 586
Goberdhun v. Shamchand ..	564
Gobind v. Baldeo Singh ..	878
— v. Dulmeer ..	845
— v. Mohesh, 678, 683, 688, 689, 722, 777, 790	678, 683, 688, 689, 722, 777, 790
— Chunder v. Doorgapersad, 367	367
— v. Ram Coomar, 380, 383	380, 383
— Lal v. Hemendra ..	522
— Krishna v. Abdul Qayyam, 762, 805	762, 805
Gobindmani v. Shamlal, 852, 874, 876	852, 874, 876
Gobind v. Woomesch ..	688, 789
Gobindonath v. Ramkanay ..	260
Goburdhun v. Singessur ..	395, 428
Gocoolanund v. Wooma Dace, 172, 185, 761	172, 185, 761
Godavari v. Sagunabai ..	615
Gogunchunder v. Joy Durga ..	871
Gojabai v. Shrimant ..	895
Gokebai v. Lakhmidas ..	614, 618
Gokool v. Etwaree ..	380
— Nath v. Issur Lochun ..	494, 495, 567, 574

	PAGE		PAGE
Golab Koonwur v. Collector of Benares ..	616, 623	Gopinath v. Bhagyat ..	598
Golak Nath v. Mathura ..	494	Gordandas v. Harivalubh ..	273
Golla v. Kali ..	517	Gordhandas v. Bai Mancoover ..	496, 499, 500, 506, 571, 677
Goluck v. Ohilla ..	623, 626	Gosaien v. Mt. Kishenmunnee ..	683, 722, 828, 885
— v. Mahomed Rohim ..	850	Gosavi Shivgar v. Rivett-Caranc ..	496, 568
Golukmonee v. Kishenpersad ..	873	Gossain v. Bissessur ..	586
Gonda Kooer v. Kooer Oodey ..	844	Gossamee v. Ruman Lolljee ..	587
Goolab v. Phool ..	553, 712	Gourahkoeri v. Gujadhur ..	273
Gooroo v. Kylash ..	775	Gourbullub v. Juggenoth ..	214
Gooroo Das v. Saratchunder ..	528	Gouree Kanth v. Bhugobutty ..	873
Goorobuksh v. Lutchmana, 837, 842, 869		Goureenath v. Collector of Gooroochurn v. Goluckinoney, 357, 362		— Monghyr ..	455
Gooroodoss v. Bejoy ..	383	— v. Modhoomonee ..	62
Gooroopersad v. Muddun ..	284	Goureepershad v. Mt. Jymala ..	137
Gooroopershad v. Rasbehary ..	216	Gourhurree v. Mt. Rutnasuree ..	216
— v. Seechunder ..	650, 838	Gourmonee v. Bamasondere ..	274
Goor Pershad v. Sheodeen, 428, 431, 471		Gournath v. Arnapoorna ..	144
Goorooa v. Narrainsawmy ..	554	Gouri Shunker v. Maharajah of Gopal v. Dhungazee ..	756	— Bulrampore ..	358
— v. Kenaram ..	674, 797	Gour Pershad v. Sheodin ..	471
— v. Krishnappa ..	518	Government of Bombay v. Ganga, 114
— v. Mac Naghten ..	380	Govind Krishna v. Sakharam ..	395
— v. Anant v. Narayan ..	138	Govinda v. Krishnan ..	388
— Balkrishna v. Vishnu, 167, 184, 253		— v. Lalakishun ..	592, 596
— Chand v. Babu Kunwar ..	580	— v. Thayammal ..	861
— Chandra v. Ram Chandra ..	894	Govinddas v. Mahalukshumee ..	712
— Chunder v. Haridas ..	683	Govindarasulu v. Devalobotla ..	610
— Dass v. Nurotum ..	59	Govindayyar v. Dorasami ..	198
— Dutt v. Gopal Lall ..	345	Govindji v. Lakmidas ..	886
— Hari v. Ramakant ..	634	Govindnath v. Gulachund, 168, 183
— Narhar v. Hanmant, 174, 202		Great Berlin Steam Boat Co. ..	596
— Prasad v. Raghunath ..	447	Greedharee v. Nundkishore, 585, 586
— Rao v. Narasinga ..	289, 290	Greeman v. Wahari ..	874
— Sing v. Bheekunlal ..	345	Greender v. Mackintosh ..	426
Gopalsami v. Arunachelam, 603, 618		Gregson v. Aditya Deb ..	284
Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan, 10, 58, 174, 175, 204, 208		Gridhari v. Bengal Government, 686, 688, 724, 781, 800
Gopalrav v. Trimbakrav ..	634	Grish Chunder v. Broughton ..	846
Gopalsami v. Chinmasami ..	350	Grose v. Amirtamayi, 843, 873, 876
Gopaula v. Narraina ..	822, 850, 869	Gudadhur v. Ajoodhearam ..	362
Gopee v. Rajkristna ..	540	Gudimella v. Venkamma ..	610
— v. Ryland ..	381	Gujara v. Kandasami ..	801
— Kishen v. Hemchunder ..	382	Gulabdas v. Collector of Surat ..	358, 529
— Lal v. Mt. Chundraolee ..	144	Guman v. Srikrant Neogi ..	723, 780
Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud, 368, 436, 452, 564, 589		Gunesh v. Moheshur ..	61
Gopeenath v. Jadoo ..	595	— v. Nil Komul ..	683, 784
— v. Kalydoss ..	858	Gunga v. Jeevee ..	616
— v. Ramjeevun, 284, 289		Gungadhharudu v. Narasammah ..	354
Gopi v. Markande ..	591	Gungadhur v. Ayimuddin ..	523
— Chand v. Sujan Kuar ..	876	Gungahurry v. Raghubram ..	513
Gopikabai v. Dattatraya ..	618	Gungama v. Chendrappa ..	273
		Gunga Mya v. Kishen Kishore, 218, 828
		Gunganarain v. Bulram ..	494, 852

	PAGE		PAGE
Gungapersad v. Brijessuree ..	218	Hari Gopal v. Gokaldas ..	379
Gungo Prosad v. Ajudhia, 344, 345, 401		Harihara v. Uman Pershad ..	522
— v. Shumbhooonath ..	707	Harilal v. Bai Rewa ..	528
Gungaram v. Kallipodo ..	519	— v. Pranvalabdas ..	825, 869
— v. Tappee ..	553	— v. Bai Mani ..	663
Gungoo Mull v. Bunseedhur ..	344	Hari Narayan v. Ganpatrav ..	668
Guni v. Moran ..	381	Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhubaneswari, 261, 291, 415, 465, 865
Gun Joshee v. Sugoona ..	712	Hari Vithil v. Jairam ..	432, 465
Gunnappa v. Sankappa ..	138	Hari Vydiauathayan v. Minakshi ..	863
Gunput Narain Singh, re ..	117	Harjivan v. Naran ..	500
Gunraj v. Ablakh ..	273	Harjivandas v. Pranvalabdas, 825, 869
Guntur Case ..	144, 149, 245, 724	Harman v. Koomar Gunsheam ..	143, 203
Gur Dial v. Kaunsila ..	626	Harnabh v. Mandil, 58, 143, 168, 868
Gurivi Reddy v. Chinnamma ..	554	Har Saran Das v. Nandi ..	755
Gurlingapa v. Nandapa ..	654	Haroom Mahomed, re ..	68, 453
Guru v. Anand ..	678, 681, 683, 688, 698, 703, 722, 788, 789	Harrinath v. Mohunt Mothoor ..	867
— Dass v. Bijaya ..	383, 440	Harvey, re ..	503
— Gobind v. Anand Lal ..	216	Hasan Jafar v. Muhammed ..	350
— v. Nafar ..	848	Hasha c. Ragho ..	515
Gurulingappa v. Nandappa ..	480	Hassan Ali v. Nagamal ..	175
Gurulingaswami v. Lakshmappa, 170		Hathi Singh v. Kuverji ..	520
Gurunarain v. Unund ..	61	Hanuman v. Baboo Kishen ..	481, 485
Gurunath v. Krishnaji ..	841	Hayes v. Harendra ..	853, 856
Gurusami v. Chinna Mannar ..	394	Heera Lall v. Mt. Konsilah ..	622
— v. Ganapathya ..	440, 462	Hegadi v. Tonga ..	127
Guruvappa v. Thimma ..	434, 464	Hema Kooeree v. Ajoodhya ..	606
Gyan v. Dookhurn ..	828	Heamanginee v. Jogendra ..	591
		Hemangini Dasi v. Kedernath ..	616, 650, 839
HADJEE MUSTAPHA, re ..	538	— v. Nobin Chand ..	587
Haidar Aii v. Tassaduk ..	573	Hemchund v. Taramunnee ..	857
Haji Abdul v. Munshi Amir ..	577	Hemchunder v. Sarnomoyi, 856, 871
— Ismail's Will ..	68	— v. Thakommoni ..	472
Haigh v. Kaye ..	597	Hemluta v. Goluck Chunder, 769, 825
Haiman v. Koomar Gunsheam ..	143, 203	Hencower v. Hanscower ..	263
Hait Singh v. Dabee Singh ..	366	Hendry v. Mutty Lall ..	865
Hakeem v. Beejoy ..	593	Herianna v. Oojani ..	496
Hakim Khan v. Gool Khan ..	67	Himalaya v. Simla Bank ..	520
Hanmant Lakshman v. Jayarao, 287		Himmatsing v. Ganpatsing, 610, 516
— Ramachandra v. Bhimacharya ..	138, 554	Himnauth Bose, in re ..	277
Hanuman v. Chiral ..	187	Himulta v. Mt. Pudomonee ..	715
— Kamat v. Dowlut ..	400	Hirabai v. Lukshmbibai ..	528
— Munder ..	400	Hiralal v. Parmeswar ..	402
Hanumantamma v. Rami Reddy, 224		Hiranath v. Baboo Ram ..	58, 712, 758
Haradhun v. Ram Newaz ..	381	Hira Singh v. Gunga Sahai ..	806
Harbhaj v. Gumami ..	49	Hirabai v. Jan Mahomed ..	500
Hardeo Bux v. Jawahir ..	358	Holloway v. Mahomed ..	383
Harendranarayan's goods ..	843	— v. Sheikh Wahed ..	383
Harendra Narain v. Moran ..	284	Honamma v. Timannabhat, 604, 612, 804
Hargobind v. Dharam ..	603, 746	Honapa v. Narsapa ..	596
Hari v. Mahadaji ..	518	Honniah v. Bhada Setty ..	803
— v. Narayan ..	290	Hoonoman v. Bhagbut ..	481
Haribhat v. Damodarbhat ..	830	Hoogly v. Kishanund ..	586
Haridas v. Prannath ..	668	Hori Dasi v. Secretary of State ..	587
Hari Gobind v. Akhoy Kumar ..	600	Hormusji v. Dhanbaiji ..	579

	PAGE		PAGE
Howard v. Pestonji ..	57, 588	Inderun v. Ramasawmy	2, 746
Huebut Rao v. Govindray,	176, 187, 199	Iudromonee v. Suroop	380
Hujmu Chul v. Ranees Bhadoorun,	100	Indromoni v. Behari Lall	197
Hulodhur v. Georoo ..	380	Indur Chunder v. Radha Kishore,	287
Hulodhur v. Ramnauth ..	632	Intiaz Oonnissa, in re ..	283
Hunoomanpersaud v. Mt. Ba-booece	285, 390, 417, 455, 460, 852, 853, 862	Ishan v. Buksh Ali ..	865
Hunsapore, case of the Zemin-dary of 62, 358, 438, 446, 553,	573	Ishen Chandra v. Ganesh ..	520
Hunsbutti v. Ishri ..	846	Ishri Singh v. Buldeo Singh ..	733
Huradhun v. Muthoranath ..	203	Ishwar Narain v. Janki ..	898
Hurbojee v. Hurgovind ..	391	Ismail v. Fidayat ..	61
Hur Dyal Nag v. Roy Kristo ..	203	Ismal v. Ramji ..	536
— Kishore v. Joogul ..	380	Isree Pershad v. Nasib ..	652
Hurdey Narain v. Rooder Per-kash ..	401, 407, 413, 416, 485	Isri Dut v. Hunsbutti, 843, 845, 846,	875
Huree Bhaee v. Nuthoo	114, 617	— Singh v. Ganga ..	49
Hureewulubh v. Keshowram ..	553	Issar Chunder v. Gopal ..	600
Huri Das Bandopadhyaya v. Rama Churn ..	633, 789	Isserchunder v. Rasbeharee ..	200
Huri Doyal v. Grishchunder ..	887	Issur Chunder v. Ragab ..	292
Hurish Chunder v. Mokhoda ..	671	— v. Ranees Dossee ..	808
Hurkoonwur v. Rutton Baee, 114, 755		Iyagaree v. Sashamma ..	610
Hurlall v. Jorawan ..	633	Iyavoo v. Sengen ..	822
Hurodoot v. Beer Narain ..	449	JAAFAR v. Aji ..	585
Huromohun v. Auluckmonee ..	849	Jado v. Mt. Rancee ..	449
Huro Soondree v. Chundermoney	170	Jadoo v. Kadumbinee ..	380
Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal	58, 350, 358, 521, 573	Jadomonee v. Gungadhur, 357, 363
Hurronath Roy v. Randhir Singh,	457	Jadu v. Sutherland ..	380
Hurrosoondery v. Rajessuree ..	714	Jadumani v. Kheytra Mohan ..	619
Hurry Churn v. Nimai Chand, 115,	118	Jagabai v. Vijbhokundas ..	420
Hurrydoss v. Rungunmoney, 822,		Jagadamba v. Dakhina Mohun ..	211
— v. Uppoornah	841, 842, 872, 842, 873	— v. Camachemma ..	322
Hurrymohun v. Gonesh Chunder,	854	Jagannada v. Papamma ..	258
— v. Shonatan, 885, 900		Jagannath v. Bidyanand ..	801
Hurry Sunker v. Kali ..	594	— v. Munnu Lal ..	455
Hurst v. Mussoorie Bank ..	885	— Prasad v. Ranjit Singh, 27,	100, 213, 587, 895
Husenbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy ..	568	Jaganath Prasad v. Sitaram ..	428
Hussain Beebee v. Hussain Sherif	585	Jagat Narain v. Sheodas	703, 723
Hyde v. Hyde ..	69	Jagdish v. Shoo Prasad ..	733
ICHHARAM v. Prumanund ..	553	Jagernath v. Jainath ..	380
Itata v. Narayanan ..	611	Jagamoni v. Nilmoni ..	584
Ilias v. Agund ..	768	Jaggernath v. Pershad Surmah ..	586
Ilhika Pakramar v. Kutti Kumha-mod ..	311	Jagindra v. Hemanta	582, 584
Imambandi v. Kumleswari ..	593	Jagjivandas v. Imdad ..	441
Imbichi v. Pennu ..	751	Jagunnadba v. Konda ..	633
Inderdawan v. Gobind ..	515	Jai Bansi v. Chattar ..	587
Inder Kuar v. Lalta Prasad ..	854	— Ram v. Musan Dhani ..	142
Inderdeonarain v. Toolseenarain	383, 440	Jaibhai v. Louis Manoel ..	70
		Jaipal v. Bhaiya ..	877
		Jairam Luxmon, in re ..	274
		— v. Atmaram ..	668
		— v. Kuverbai ..	502
		— Babaja Shet v. Joma Kondia ..	415
		Jalaluddaula v. Samsamuddaula,	381
		Jallidar v. Ramlal ..	471, 472
		James v. Lord Wynford ..	503

	PAGE		PAGE
Jamiyatram v. Bai Jamna, 765, 825,	869	Jogmurut v. Seetulpersad ..	722
— v. Parbhudas, 426, 427		Jogul Kishore v. Shib Sahai, 638, 641
Jamna Das v. Kamantar ..	528	Johar Mal v. Eknath ..	399
— v. Machul ..	629	Johurra Bibee v. Strigopal, 433, 625
— v. Nain Sukh ..	401	Jones, in re ..	285
Jamnabai v. Khimji ..	761	Joogul v. Kalee ..	392
— v. Raichand, 149, 185, 240		Joshy Assam, in re ..	278
Jamoona v. Mudden ..	391	Jotendro v. Jogul ..	866
Jamsetji v. Kashinath ..	389	Jothi v. Timma Gowda ..	381
Jamuna v. Ganga ..	482	Jotindra v. Bejoy ..	673
Janardhan v. Gopal ..	808	Jowahir v. Mt. Kailassoo ..	780
Jankee v. Bukhooree	333, 440	Jowala v. Dharam ..	66, 67
Janki v. Bhairon ..	890	Joy Chundro v. Bh yu b Chundro, 145,	216
— v. Mahadev ..	415	— Deb Surmah v. Huroputty ..	585
— Bai v. Sundra ..	29, 831	— Kishen v. Collector of East Burdwan ..	532
— Dibeh v. Suda Sheo ..	143	— Narain v. Grish Chunder ..	673
— v. Nandram	345, 607	Joymonee v. Sibsoondry ..	185, 190
Janokee v. Gopaul ..	185, 585	Joymooruth v. Buldeo ..	873
— v. Kisto ..	368	Joytara v. Ramhari ..	628
Janokinath v. Muthuranath, 648, 654,	753	Judah v. Judah ..	581
Janman's Estate ..	574	Judoonath v. Bishonath	647, 649
Jasoda v. Sheopershad ..	766	— v. Bussunt-Coomar, 100,	884, 887, 893, 900
— Koer v. Sheo Pershad, 344, 766		Judub v. Benodbehari	665, 774
Jatha Naik v. Venkatappa ..	865	Jugdeep v. Deendial ..	405, 471
Javerai v. Kablibai ..	507, 522, 566, 571	Juggernath v. Kishen Pershad ..	532
Jawahir v. Guyan ..	344	— v. Pershad ..	586
Jeebun v. Romanath ..	657	— v. Odhiranee ..	623
Jeewun v. Mt. Sona	574, 885, 890	Juggessur v. Roodro ..	585
Jeo Lal Singh v. Ganga Pershad,	465	Juggodumba v. Haran ..	380
Jethabai v. Girdar ..	517, 520	Juggomohun v. Neemo ..	493
Jethee v. Mt. Sheo ..	716	— v. Saumcoomar ..	52
Jewun v. Shah Kuberood-deen ..	582	Juggurnath v. Doobo ..	454
Jhabbu v. Ganga Bishen ..	274	Juggutmohini v. Mt. Sokhee-money	582, 587
Jhamman v. Tiloki ..	867	Jugjeevun v. Deosunker ..	850
Jhubboo v. Khoob Lall ..	654	Jugmohundas v. Mungaldas, 348, 360
Jhula v. Kanta Prasad ..	871	— v. Pallonjee ..	578
Jijoyiamba v. Kanakshi ..	752	Jugol Kishore v. Jotindro, 415, 863,	866
Jivan v. Ram Govind ..	481	Jugomohun v. Saradamoyee ..	651
Jivandas v. Framji ..	518, 521	Jugul Kishori v. Ananda ..	284
Jivani v. Jivu ..	174	Jumona v. Bamasoondesai, 140, 141
Jivan v. Misri Lal ..	861	— 144, 205, 871, 875, 877
Jodoonath v. Brojonath ..	650	Junaruddeen v. Nobin Chunder, 86
Jogdamba Koer v. Secretary of State ..	715	Jungee Lall v. Sham Lall ..	289
Jogendra v. Fulkamari ..	625	Jussoda v. Lallah Nettya ..	278
Jogendro Deb v. Funindro, 100, 205		Juswant v. Doolee ..	266
— Nath v. Jugobundhu ..	668	Juvav v. Jaki ..	451
— v. Nityanand, 351, 750,	751	Jwala Dei v. Pirabhu ..	273
— v. Nityanand ..	738	Jye Koonwur v. Bhikari ..	810
— v. Nobinchunder, 380		Jymunee v. Ramjoy ..	774
Jogendronundini v. Hurry Doss, 119		KACHAR v. Bai Ruthore ..	871
Jogesh Chandra v. Nriitya ..	170
Jogeswar v. Ramchand	343, 528
Jogi Singh v. Behari Singh ..	291

	PAGE		PAGE
Kachi Kaliyana v. Kachi Yuva, ..	618,	Kamneymoney, goods of ..	904
Kachu v. Kachoba ..	514	Kamini Dossee v. Chandra Pote, ..	605, 607
Kachwain v. Sarup Chand ..	524	Kanahi v. Biddya ..	108, 274
Kadarsa v. Raviah ..	517	Kanakasabhaiya v. Seshachala ..	474
Kagal Ganpaya v. Manjappa ..	409	Kandasami v. Akkammal ..	871
Kahandas, in re ..	591	— v. Doraisami ..	667, 669
Kaihav v. Roop Singh ..	458	— v. Murugammal ..	613
Kailash v. Kashi ..	762	Kanhaia Lal v. Raj Bahadur ..	402
Kaipreta v. Makkaiyil ..	861	Kanhaiya v. Mumpi ..	579
Kaithi v. Kulladasi ..	100	Kanhia v. Mahin Lal ..	890
Kalavati v. Chedi Lal ..	289	Kanhya v. Radha Churn ..	205
Kaleechund v. Moore ..	856	Kannammal v. Virasami ..	208
Kalee v. Choitun ..	472	Kaunan v. Nilakanden ..	586
— Chunder v. Sheeb Chunder, ..	131	Kanni v. Ammakannu ..	756
— Churn v. Bungshee ..	584	Kanno Pisharodi v. Kombi Achen ..	494
— Pershad v. Bhoirabee ..	721	Kanth Narain v. Prem Lal ..	484
— Sunkur v. Denendro ..	643	Kanthu v. Vittamma ..	343
Kaleenath v. Doyal Kristo ..	594	Kanti v. Bisseshwar ..	285
Kalian Rai v. Ramchunder ..	776	Kaoukurty v. Venkataramdass ..	484
Kalian v. Sanval ..	573	Karamsi v. Karsondas ..	238
— Singh v. Sanval Singh ..	876	Karibassaka v. Karibassana ..	117
Kali v. Dhununjoy ..	658	Karim v. Heinrichs ..	524
— Krishna v. Raghunath, ..	351, 739	Kariyaden v. Kayat Beeran, ..	283, 605
Kalichandra v. Raj Kishore ..	380	Karmali v. Rahimbhoy ..	289
Kalidas v. Kanhya Lal, ..	500, 512, 516	Karnathaka Hanamantha v. Hanumayya ..	430
— v. Krishan, ..	639, 655, 656, 677, 812, 814	Karsandas v. Ladkavahu ..	152, 237
— v. Nathu Bhagvan ..	380	Karuna v. Jai Chandra ..	721, 787
Kalilcharam v. Bungshi ..	532	Karunabdhii v. Ratnamaiyar, ..	161, 165
Kalka v. Budree ..	657, 810	Karuppa v. Kumarasami ..	750
Kaliparshad v. Ramcharan ..	638	Karuppai v. Sankara, ..	344, 767, 895
Kallapa v. Venkatesh ..	472, 473	Karruppan v. Veriyal ..	391, 394
Kallati v. Palat ..	311	Karupannan v. Bulokam ..	747
Kalliyani v. Narayana, ..	467, 500, 862	Kasale v. Palaniayi ..	551
Kallu v. Kaussilia ..	603	Kasee Dhoollubh v. Rutton Bae, ..	114
Kally Churn v. Dukhee ..	111, 118	Kaseram v. Umbaram ..	114
— Doss v. Gobind ..	593	Kashee v. Gour Kishore ..	885
— Prosonno v. Gocool Chunder, ..	241, 250, 260	— Mohun v. Raj Gobind ..	687, 722, 788, 790
Kalova v. Padapa ..	875	Kasheepershad v. Bunseedhur ..	228
Kalpagathachi v. Ganapathi ..	624	Kashibai v. Tatia ..	185, 188
Kalu v. Barsu ..	479	Kasi v. Buchireddi ..	391
— v. Hammapa ..	533	Kasim v. Sudindhra ..	584
— v. Kashibai ..	609	Kassee v. Goluckchunder ..	636
Kamakhya v. Harichurn ..	841	Kastur v. Appa ..	399
Kamakshi v. Chidambara ..	643	Kasturbai v. Shivajiram ..	614
— v. Nagarathnam ..	62	Katama Nachiar v. Rajah of Shivaguna ..	115, 205, 351, 358, 631, 635, 678, 712, 714, 866, 877
Kamala v. Pitchacootty ..	511	Katchekaleyana v. Kachivijaya, ..	616
Kamaklakshmi v. Ramasani ..	64	Kateeran v. Mt. Gendhenee ..	119
Kamalam v. Sadagopa ..	62, 63	Kathaperumal v. Venkabai ..	753
Kamaraju v. Secretary of State ..	289	Kattama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tevar ..	762, 765, 828, 880
Kamarazu v. Venkatarathnam ..	522	Kattusheri v. Vallotil ..	380
Kamavadhani v. Joyasa, ..	842, 852, 874	Kaveramma v. Soobroyappa ..	618
Kameswar v. Run Bahadoor, ..	455, 852, 862
Kamikhaprasad v. Jagadamba ..	338, 878

	PAGE		PAGE
Kedar v. Protab ..	465	Kisto Moyee v. Prosumno ..	864
Kedarnath v. Hemangini ..	605	Koduthi v. Madu ..	755
Kelly v. Kelly ..	119	Koer Hasmat v. Soonder Dass, ..	399, 487, 671
Kennell v. Abbot ..	239	Koernarain v. Dhormidhur ..	633
Kerutnaraen v. Mt. Bhoinesree, ..	182	Koilash v. Saroda ..	601
Kery Kolitany v. Moncerani ..	34, 604, 754	Koijyadu v. Lakshmi ..	771
Kesabram v. Nand Kishore, ..	665, 774	Kolodaya v. Vedamuthu ..	861
Kesava v. Unikkanda ..	602	Kollany v. Luchmee, ..	525, 574, 848
Keshadevan v. Vasudevan ..	271	Kollury Nagabhushanam v. Ammanna ..	520
Keshav Lal v. Parvati ..	119	Komala v. Gangadhera ..	451
— Pandurang v. Vinayek ..	521	Kombi v. Lakshmi ..	465, 467
— Ramakristna v. Govind Ganesh ..	148, 246	Kondappa v. Subba ..	851
Keshoor v. Mt. Rankoonwar ..	581	Kondayya v. Guruvappa ..	519
Keshow Rao v. Naro ..	100, 390	Kondiba v. Nana ..	520
Keshub v. Vyasmonnee ..	594	Kondi Menon v. Sringtoreagatta, ..	861
Kesserbai v. Valab ..	719, 729, 770, 794	Konerav v. Gurrav ..	636
Kesub v. Bishnopersaud ..	677, 721	Konwur v. Ram Chunder, ..	455, 489, 584
Keval Bhagvan v. Ganpati ..	391	Kooer Goolab v. Rao Kurun, ..	724, 729, 783, 807, 860, 871
Khadrappa v. Rungappa ..	368	— Odey v. Phool Chund, ..	845, 846
Khalilall v. Gobind ..	395, 401	Kooldeep v. Bunjeet ..	463
Khatu v. Madhuram ..	535	— v. Government ..	525, 531
Khemkor v. Umias Shankar, ..	64, 603	— v. Rajbunsee ..	274
Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, ..	501, 575	Koomarasavmy v. Ragava ..	296
Khetramani v. Kashinath, ..	604, 607	Koonbehari v. Premchand, ..	523, 890
Khettr v. Poorno ..	639, 732	Koonjee v. Jankee ..	594
— Chunder v. Hari Das ..	586	Koonwaree v. Damoodhur ..	721
Khimji v. Murarji ..	506	Koonwur v. Shama Soonduree, ..	472
Khodabai v. Bahdar ..	769	Koopookonan v. Chinnayan ..	429
Khojah's case ..	57, 394	Koraga v. Reg ..	65, 127
Khoodeeram v. Rookhinee ..	801	Kora Shunko v. Bebee Munnee ..	174
Khoosal v. Bhugwan Motee ..	118	Koroanamoyee v. Gobindnath, ..	873
Khudiram v. Bonwari ..	274	Koshul v. Radhanath ..	362
Khuggender v. Sharupgir ..	801	Kosuri v. Invaluri ..	465
Khursadji v. Pestonji ..	501	Kotarbasapa v. Chanverova ..	890
Khushal Chand v. Bai Mani, ..	101, 103	Kotomarti v. Vardhanamma ..	875
— v. Mahadevgiri, ..	581, 584	Kotta Ramasami v. Bangari ..	359
Khushali v. Rani ..	758	Kottala v. Shangara ..	392
Khwahish v. Surju ..	272	Kounla v. Ram Huree ..	493
Kirpal Narain v. Sukurmoni ..	744	— Kant v. Ram Huree ..	582
Kisensingh v. Moreshvar ..	464	Koyiloth v. Puthenpurayil ..	861
Kishen v. Tarini ..	787	Kripa Sindhu v. Kanhya ..	362
Kishenath v. Hurreegobind ..	216	Krishna Aiyan v. Vythianatha, ..	522, 567
Kishen Lal v. Gururuddhivaja, ..	389	Krishnabai v. Khaugowda ..	643
Kishenmune v. Oodwunt ..	260	Krishna Panda v. Balaram ..	673
Kishnee v. Khealee ..	373	— v. Paramshri ..	185
Kishoree v. Chummum ..	365	— Ramaya v. Vasudev ..	460
Kishori v. Moni Mohun ..	647	— Rao v. Benabai ..	506
Kishto Soondery v. Kishto Motee, ..	599	— v. Rayappa ..	521
Kishundass v. Keshoo Wulud ..	426	— v. Sami, ..	638, 656, 677, 815
Kissen v. Javallah ..	683, 687, 783	— v. Thambu ..	464
Kisnomonee v. Collector of Moorshedabad ..	204	— v. Subbanna ..	636
		— Kinkur v. Panchuram, ..	579
		— — v. Rai Mohun, ..	579

	PAGE
Krishnaji v. Govind ..	518
— v. Pandurang, 27, 29, 772	772
— Lakshman v. Vithal Ravji ..	420
— Mahadev v. Moro Mahadev ..	356
Krishnamma v. Papa ..	746
— v. Perumal 401, 722	722
— v. Suramma ..	519
Krishanath v. Atmaram ..	503
Krishnaram v. Mt. Bheekee ..	830
Krishnaramani v. Ananda, 501, 538, 563, 566, 582	582
Krishnarav v. Shankarrav ..	150, 253
— v. Govind ..	380
Krishnasami v. Rajahgopala, 346, 348	348
— v. Ramasami ..	423
— v. Sundarappaiyar, 234	234
Krishnaya v. Chinnaya ..	392
— v. Pichamma ..	768
Krishnayen v. Muttusami, 746, 750	750
Kristayya v. Narasimhau ..	668
Kristnappa v. Ramasawmy, 345, 369, 672	369
Kristniengar v. Vanamamalay ..	175
Kristo Bhabinay v. Ashutosh ..	651
Kristo Gobind v. Hem Chunder, 864	864
Kristoromoney v. Norendro, 568, 565, 567	567
Kudomee v. Joteeram ..	116
Kullammal v. Kuppu ..	780, 886
Kullar v. Modho Dhyal ..	457
Kullean v. Kirpa ..	267
Kullyanessuree v. Dwarkanath, 610	610
Kuloda v. Jageshar ..	622
Kumara v. Srinivasa ..	591
— Asima v. Kumara Krishna, 563, 564, 570, 574, 582	582
Kumaran v. Narayan ..	91, 93
Kumar Tarakeswar v. Shoshi, 562, 558, 565, 567	567
Kumarasami v. Ramalinga ..	585
Kumaravelu v. Virana ..	730, 770
Kumla Baboo v. Muneeshunkur, 102	102
— v. Gooroo ..	492
Kumulmoney v. Bodhnarain ..	606
Kumurooddeen v. Shaikh Bhadho, 284, 518	518
Kundoojee v. Ballajee ..	517
Kunhacha v. Kutti Mammi, 311, 348	348
Kunhammata v. Kunhi Kutti ..	602
Kunhya v. Bukhtawar ..	391
Kunigaratu v. Arrangaden, 313, 382	382
Kunjan v. Sidda ..	453
Kuppa v. Dorasami ..	586
— v. Singaravelu ..	608, 747
Kupurchund v. Dadabho ..	424

	PAGE
Kupoor v. Sevukram ..	580, 850
Kureem v. Oodung ..	776
Kurreemonissa v. Mohabut ..	598
Kusum v. Satya ..	71, 177
Kuta Bully v. Kuta Chudappa ..	674
Kutti v. Radakristna, 724, 728, 729, 825	729
Kuvarji v. Mote Haridas ..	287
Kuverbai v. Kablibai ..	502
Kuverji v. Babai ..	208
Kylash v. Gooroo ..	775
LACHAN v. Anant Singh ..	868
Lachanna v. Bapanamma ..	621
Lachman v. Akbar ..	58
— v. Debi Prasad ..	356
— v. Khunnu ..	391
— v. Sanwall ..	669
— v. Patniram ..	598
Lachmin v. Koteshar ..	494
Lachho v. Gopi ..	542
Lachmi v. Makund ..	529
Lakhangavda v. Keshav ..	530
Lakhi v. Bhairab, 677, 770, 787, 807	807
Lakmi v. Tori ..	494
Lakmi Chand v. Gatto Bai, 188, 175, 200	175
Lakshimoni v. Nittyananda ..	500
Lakshma v. Boggaramana ..	567
Lakshmana v. Rangamma ..	586
— v. Siva ..	756
— Rau v. Lakshmi ..	258, 260
Lakshmanammal v. Tiruvengada, 729, 782	782
Lakshman v. Dipchand ..	519
— v. Gopal ..	670
— v. Jannabai ..	356
— v. Narayan ..	673
— v. Ramchandra, 347, 439, 479, 554, 612, 636, 659	659
— v. Sarasvatibai, 621, 626	626
— v. Satyabhambai ..	399, 621, 622, 624, 625
— Bhau v. Radhabai, 260, 854	854
— Venkatesh v. Kashi-nath ..	432
Lakshmandas v. Dasrat ..	516, 518
Lakshmapa v. Ramappa, 167, 170, 184, 188, 201, 233	233
Lakshmi v. Dada ..	720
— v. Subramanya ..	256
— v. Tulsi ..	807
Lakshimbai v. Bapuji ..	619
— v. Ganpat Moroba, 346, 574, 643, 666, 674, 765, 825, 869	869
— v. Hirabai ..	574, 848
— v. Jayram ..	715, 794

	PAGE
Lakshimbai v. Ragaji ..	146
— v. Ramchandra, 139, 194	194
— v. Shridar ..	274
Lakshminarayana v. Dasu ..	849
Lakshmi v. Kandasami ..	61
Lakshmy v. Narasimha ..	511, 664
Lala v. Hira ..	58
— Biswambhar v. Rajaram ..	333
— Hurro v. Basaruth ..	284
— Joti v. Mt. Durani ..	770
— Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, 143, 209, 212, 415, 855	855
— Amarnath v. Achan Kuar, 456, 852, 853, 862	862
— Muddun Gopal v. Khikhinda Koer ..	350, 803
— Narain v. Ramanuj ..	287
— Ramjeevan v. Dalkoer ..	522, 527, 560, 567
— Suraj v. Golab Chand ..	402
Lal Bahadur v. Sispal ..	643
— Das v. Nekunjo ..	283
— Singh v. Deo Narain ..	400, 462
Lali v. Murlidar ..	213
Lalit Agar v. Suraj ..	119
— Mohun v. Chukkan Lal, 522, 558	558
Laljee v. Fakeer ..	400
Laljeet v. Rajcoomar, 637, 647, 668	668
Lalla Sheo v. Ramnandan ..	290
Lallah Rawuth v. Chadee ..	285
Lallu Bhagvan v. Tribhuvan Motiram ..	391
— Bunseedhur v. Koonwur Bindeseree ..	284, 462
— Byjnath v. Bissen ..	853
— Chuttur v. Mt. Wooma ..	876
— Futteh v. Mt. Pranputtee ..	376
— Gobind v. Dowlut ..	611
— Gunput v. Mt. Toorun ..	851
— Mohabeer v. Mt. Kundun, 52	52
Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai, 574, 575, 576, 578, 682, 690, 691, 697, 703, 708, 715, 717, 720, 721, 729, 794, 829	829
Lall Jha v. Shaikh Juma ..	472, 654
Lallu v. Jugmohun ..	523
Lalti Kuar v. Ganga ..	439, 485, 606
Lalubhai v. Bai Amrit ..	515
Lamb v. Mt. Govindmoney ..	845
Leake v. Robinson ..	502
Lekhray v. Kunhya ..	522, 523
Lekraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh ..	49
— v. Mahtab ..	289, 290
Lelanund v. Government of Bengal ..	532, 633
Limji v. Bapaji ..	582
Linga v. Goojia ..	119
Lingappa v. Esudasan ..	603

	PAGE
Lloyd v. Webb ..	568
Lobo v. Brito ..	596
Lochun v. Nemdharee ..	344
Lodhoomona v. Gunneschunder, 873	873
Lokenath v. Shamasoonduree ..	216
Lokhee v. Kalypuddo ..	592
Loki v. Aghoree ..	464
Lootfulhuck v. Gopee ..	381
Luchmi v. Asman ..	389, 463
Luchman v. Kalli Churn, 593, 885, 886	886
— v. Kanhya Lall ..	228
— v. Giridhur ..	401, 421
— v. Mohun ..	198
Luckhee v. Taramonee ..	595
Luggah v. Trimbuck ..	426
Lukhee v. Gokool, 574, 849, 857, 862, 871	871
Lukmee v. Umurchund ..	273
Lukmeeram v. Khooshalee ..	849
Lulleet v. Sreedhur ..	878
Lulloobhoy v. Cassibai, 697, 703, 717, 794, 829	829
Lutchman Row v. Terimul Row, 359, 668	668
Lutchmanen v. Siva Prokasa ..	385
Lutchmee v. Rookmanee ..	587
Luximon Row v. Mullar Row ..	364, 368
MACCUNDAS v. Ganpatrao ..	669
Macdonald v. Lalla Shib ..	494
McDowell v. Rageva ..	389
McGrath, in re ..	276
Madan Mohun v. Puran Mull ..	859
Madari v. Malki ..	871
Madar Sahib v. Subbarayulu ..	521
Madavarayya v. Tritha Sami ..	869
Madhavram v. Dave Trimbak ..	826
Madhavray v. Atmaram ..	350, 633
— v. Balkrishna ..	61
— v. Dave Trimbaklall ..	829
— v. Gangabai ..	617
Madho v. Kamta ..	586
— Pershad v. Mehrban ..	481
— v. Mehrban Singh ..	483
Madhowrao v. Yuswuda ..	647
Madhub Chunder v. Bama-soondree ..	495
— v. Gobind ..	855
Mahabalaya v. Timaya ..	473
Mahabeer Persad v. Ramyad, 482, 647	647
Mahabir Pershad v. Adhikary ..	868
— v. Moheswar Nath, 405, 420	420
— Prasad v. Basdeo Sing, 389, 422	422

	PAGE
Mahableshvar v. Durgabai ..	165
Mahadaji v. Vittil Ballal ..	597
Mahadev v. Lakshman ..	644
— v. Rayaji ..	259
Mahadevi v. Vikrama ..	532
Mahalakshamma v. Venkataratnamma ..	624
Mahalinga v. Mariammah ..	702
Mahamed Arif v. Saraswati Debya ..	287
Maharajulungaru v. Rajah Row Pantalu ..	359
Maharani v. Nanda Lal ..	873
Mahashoya Shosinath v. Srimati Krishna 194, 198, 200
Mahatab v. Mirdad ..	584
Maheshar Baksh v. Ratan Singh, 455, 461
Mahesh Partab v. Dirgpal ..	617
Maheshwar v. Koonj Beharee ..	462
Mahoda v. Kuleani ..	778
Mahomed v. Ganapathi 534, 585
— v. Hosseini Bibi, 500, 512
— v. Krishnan ..	871
— Sidick v. Haji Ahmed, 68
— v. Sakatwat ..	284
— Abba, Will of ..	573
Mahunt Govind v. Sitaram ..	358
Mailathi v. Subbaraya ..	55
Majidan v. Rau Narain ..	285
Makbul v. Srimati Masnad ..	284
Makundi v. Surabsukh 462, 485
Malapa v. Narasamma ..	209
Malikarjuna v. Durga Prasad ..	61, 668
Malkarjun v. Narhari ..	211
Mallesam v. Jugala ..	395
Malli Reddy v. Padmamma ..	269
Mallikarjuna v. Durga, 616, 619, 635, 668
Ma Me Gali v. Ma Sa Yi ..	267
Mammali v. Pakki ..	314
Manasing v. Ahmed ..	569
Man Bacc v. Krishnee ..	553
— Bhari v. Nauniah ..	500
Mancharam v. Pranshanker ..	585, 586
Mancharji v. Kongseoo ..	593
Mangala v. Dinanath 326, 626
Mangaldas v. Krishnabai ..	566
— v. Tribhoovandas ..	506
Manik Chand v. Jagat Settani, 56, 150, 168
Manickchunder v. Bhuggobutty, 186, 189
Manika v. Ellappa ..	623
Manikamulla v. Parbuttee ..	260
Manilal v. Baitara ..	627

	PAGE
Manilal v. Bai Rewa ..	836, 899, 903
Manishankar v. Bai Muli ..	284
Manjamma v. Padmanabhaya ..	506
— v. Sheshgiri ..	64
Manjanatha v. Narayana ..	640
Manji Ram v. Tara Singh ..	284
Manjunadhaya v. Tangamma ..	500
Mankoonwur v. Bhugoo ..	712
Manmatha v. Ropilli ..	871
Manning v. Gill ..	596
Manohar Das v. Manzar Ali ..	380
Manohur Ganesh v. Lakhmiram, 582, 587
Manorama v. Kalicharan 571, 574
Marappa v. Rangasami ..	485
Mari v. Chinnammal ..	770
— v. Jivamma 52, 171
Marudamuthu v. Srinivasa ..	860
Maruti v. Rama ..	670
— Narayan v. Lilachand ..	432, 464, 472
— v. Bhabaji ..	416
Mata v. Bhageeruthee ..	855
Matangini v. Jaykali ..	804
— v. Jogendro ..	611
— Gupta v. Ram Rutton Roy ..	756
Mathura v. Esu 57, 63, 263, 653
— v. Ramchandra ..	401
Mayna Bai v. Uttaram ..	751
Mayor of Lyons v. Advocate-General of Bengal 574, 587
Meenatchee v. Chetumbra, 357, 451, 646, 661
Meenakshi Naidoo v. Immudikana ..	405, 409, 420
Mehdee v. Aujud ..	383
Meheroonissa v. Hur Churn ..	599
Melaram v. Thanooram ..	107
Melgirappa v. Shivapa 850, 852
Merangi Zamindar v. Satrucharla, 62
Meyajee v. Metha ..	501
Mhalsabai v. Vithoba ..	187
Mihirwanjee v. Poonjea ..	809
Miller v. Runganath ..	453
Minakshi v. Chinnappa ..	622
— v. Ramanada 173, 174
— v. Virappa ..	450
Mirali Rahimbhoy v. Rehmoobhoy, 291
Mir Azmat v. Mahmood ..	119
— Mahomed v. Kishori ..	593
Mirza Jehan v. Badshoo Bahoo, 358
— v. Navab Afsur Bahu ..	353
— Pana v. Saiad Sadik, 287
Mitta Kunth v. Neerunjun ..	585
Mittibhayi v. Kottekorati ..	283

	PAGE
Modhoo Dyal v. Kolbur 454, 485
— Kooery v. Tekait Ram ..	533
Modhoooodhun v. Jadub Chunder ..	103
— v. Prithee Bullub ..	289
— v. Rooke ..	853
Modun Mohun v. Futturnnissa 514
Mohabeer Kooer v. Joobha, 347, 456
Mohadeay v. Haruknarain, 649, 841
Mohanand v. Nafur ..	235
Mohanchand v. Isakbhai ..	383
Mohandas v. Krishnabai, 686, 784
Mohendra Nath v. Kali Prosad ..	600
Mohendro Lal v. Rookinny ..	145
Mohesh Chunder v. Satrugnan ..	733, 742
— v. Chunder Mohun ..	806
— v. Koylash ..	587
— v. Ugra ..	861
— Narain v. Taruck Nath, 137
Mohima v. Ram Kishore, 853, 863
Mohori v. Dharmodas, 207, 208, 283, 288, 289
Mohun v. Lutchnun ..	587
— v. Siroomunee ..	857
— Geer v. Mt. Tota ..	615
— Pershad v. Kishen Kishore ..	396
— Singh v. Chaman Rai ..	93
Mohunt v. Busgeet ..	856
— Bhagabun v. Roghonundun 139, 808
— Burm v. Khasha 534, 585
— Gopal v. Kerparam ..	586
Mokhoda v. Nundo Lal ..	604
Mokoond Lal v. Nobodip, 275, 278
Mokoondo v. Gonesh 568, 657
Mokrund Deb v. Ranees Bissessuree, 273
Mokundo v. Bykunt ..	214
Mondakini v. Adinath ..	151, 240
Monee Mohun v. Dhun Monee ..	715
Mouiram v. Kerry Kolutany ..	612
Monmohini v. Banga ..	579
Mon Mohinee v. Baluck ..	609
Moodookrishna v. Tandavaroy ..	273
Mookta Keshee v. Oomabutty ..	671
Moolchund v. Krishna ..	389
Moolji Lilla v. Gokuldas ..	368
Moonea v. Dhurma ..	780
Moore, re ..	496
Moothia v. Uppen ..	174
Mootoopermal v. Tondaven ..	296
Mootoovizia Ragoonadha Satootputty v. Sevagamy Nachiar, 182
Moottia Moodelly v. Uppen ..	229
Moottoo Coomarappa v. Hinnoo ..	432
— Meenatchy v. Viloo ..	585
Moottoosamy v. Lutchmeedavummah ..	170, 174
Mootoovencata v. Munarsawmy, 633
Mootoovengada v. Toombaya-samy 545, 633, 640
Moreshwar v. Dattu ..	519, 520
Mbrace v. Bp. of Durham ..	574
Moro Narayan v. Balaji ..	260
— Vishvanath v. Ganesh, 332, 337, 638 670
Morrison, re ..	239
Morun Moe v. Bejoy ..	175, 218
Motee Lal v. Bhoop Singh ..	875
— v. Mitterjeet 440, 493
Mothoormohun v. Surendro ..	272
Motilal v. Kashi ..	619
Moulvi Muhammed v. Mt. Fatima Bibi ..	485
— Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewukram, 526, 573, 574, 848, 876, 879
— Sayyud v. Mt. Bebee ..	589
Mrinamoyi v. Jogodishuri ..	289
Mrimoyee v. Bhoobunmoyee ..	875
Mt. Battas v. Lachman Singh ..	176
— Bhugobutty v. Chowdhry Bholanath ..	259
— Dullabh v. Manu ..	182
— Tara Mune v. Dev Narayan, 143, 170, 259
— Pearee v. Mt. Hurbunsee ..	153
— Roopna v. Ray Reotee ..	481
— Ruliyat v. Madkowjee ..	102
— Solukna v. Ramdolal, 137, 144, 677, 765
— Subudra v. Goluknath ..	153
— Sunder v. Mt. Parbati, 753, 841
— Thakoor v. Rai Baluk Ram, 100, 825, 868
— Thakro v. Ganga Pershad ..	590
— Thukrain Sookraj v. the Government ..	350
Muckleston v. Brown ..	596
Muddun Gopal v. Mt. Gowrunbutty, 399, 654
— v. Ram Buksh ..	347, 352, 452, 486, 490
— Thakoor v. Kantoo Lal, 403, 408, 416, 417, 418, 463
Mudhoobun v. Huri ..	801
Mudit v. Ranglal 433, 673
Muhalakmee v. Kripashookul ..	580
Muhammad Abdul v. Kutul Husain ..	417
— Afzul v. Ghulam ..	62

	PAGE		PAGE
Muhammad Husain v. Dipchand	416	Muttu Vizia v. Dorasinga Tevar	10
— Imam v. Sardar		Muttukanuru v. Paramasami	62, 263
— Husain	49	Muttumaram v. Lakshmi	440, 451
— Muntaz v. Sheoratanjir	290	Muttusami v. Muttu Kumarasami	786
Muhasunkur v. Mt. Oottum	110, 114	Muttusamy v. Venkatasubba	603, 746
Muhtaboo v. Gunesh	273	Muttusawmy v. Vencateswara	616
Mujavar v. Hussain	585	Muttusvami v. Subbiramaniya	381, 636
Mukunda Lal v. Leharanx	630	Muttuvelayudu v. Parasakti	808
Mukkanni v. Manan Bhatta	496	Myna Boyee v. Ootaram	59, 72, 751
Mulbai, in the Goods of	68	NABAKUMAR v. Bhabasundari	854
Mulchand v. Bhudea	103	Nagabhushanam v. Seshamma	138
Mulhana v. Alibeg	519	Nagalinga v. Vellusamy	637
Mulji Baishanker v. Bai Ujam	615	— v. Subbiramaniya	637
— v. Cursandas	720	Nagalingam v. Ramchendra	347, 348
— Thakersey v. Gomti	117	Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo	450, 453, 541, 548
Mulka Jahan v. Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow	358	Nagalutchmy v. Nadaraja	546
Mulkah Do v. Mirza Jahan	53	Nagamma v. Virabhadra	613
Mulrauze Venkata v. Mulrauze Lutchmiah	543, 548	Nagappa v. Subba Sastry	138
— v. Chellakany	544, 548	Nagesh v. Gururao	765
Mulraj v. Chalekany	453, 548	Nagiubhai v. Abdulla	589
Munda Chetty v. Timmaju	312, 702	Nahalchand v. Bai Shiva	886
Mungniram v. Mohunt Gursahai	272, 290, 291	— v. Hemchand	716, 794
Munia v. Puran	886	Naigalinga v. Vaidilinga	780
Muniappa v. Kasturi	296, 237	Naikram v. Soorjubuns	871
Munnoo v. Gopee	540	Najban v. Chand Bibi	524
Muppidi Papaya v. Ramaya	441	Najji Khan v. Imtiaz	383
Murari v. Mukund Shivaji	369, 671	Nallanna v. Ponnal	730
— v. Tayana	284	Nallappa v. Balammal	643
Murarji v. Parvatibai	806, 808	Nallatambi v. Mukunda	436
Murar Rao v. Sitaram	473	Nallayappa v. Ambalavana	584
Murugayi v. Viramakati	115, 755	Nalliappa v. Ibrahim	519
Musadee v. Meerza	591	Namasevayam v. Annamal	102
Muteecollah v. Radhabinode	852, 853, 857, 861	Nam Narain v. Ramoon	587
Muthaya v. Minakshi	228	Nanabhai v. Achratbai	344, 348
Muthoor v. Bootun	400, 454, 457	— v. Janardhan	101
Muthu Meenakshi v. Chendra Sekhara	528	— v. Nathabai	668
Muthura v. Brikanmal	528	— v. Shriman Goswami	585
Muthusami v. Nallakulantha	669	Nanack v. Teluckdye	517
— v. Sunambechu	686	Nanamah v. Ramiah	151
Muttammal v. Kamakshy	604, 612	Nana Narain v. Huree Punth	452
— v. Vengalakshmi	770	Nana Tooljaram v. Wulubdas	471
Muttayan Chetti v. Sangili	344, 353, 393, 396, 414	Nandi Singh v. Sitaram	503
Mutteeram v. Gopsul	489, 849, 878	Nandkishore v. Ahmed	600
Muttia v. Virammal	622	Nanee v. Allarakia	62
Muttu v. Annavaiyangar	551	Nani Dibee v. Hafizullah	520
— Ramalinga v. Perranayagum	585	Nanjammami v. Deva	241
— Vadaganadha v. Periasami	739, 768	Nanji v. Kaliani	891
— Vaduganadha v. Dorasinga Tevar	62, 360, 765, 828	Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun	347, 409, 416, 420
		Naraganti v. Vencatachulapati	360, 736, 739
		Naragunty v. Vengama	364, 616
		Narain v. Brindaban	586
		— v. Lokenath	445, 493

	PAGE		PAGE
Narain Mullick v. Badi Roy	533	Narsappa v. Sakharan	826
— Chunder v. Dataran	520, 534	Narsinbhat v. Chenapa	428
— Dhara v. Rakkhal	107, 744	Narsingdos v. Rahimanbai	207
— Mal v. Kooer Narain	259	Narsingh v. Lalji	395
Narainee v. Hurkishor	770	— v. Ram Narain	523
Narainah v. Savoobhady	258	Nasir v. Mata	509
Naraini Kuar v. Chandi Din	692	Natasayyan v. Ponnusami	389, 393, 421
Naranamaya v. Vasteva	863	Natchiarammal v. Gopalakrishna	625
Naranappa v. Lakshmi	825	Natesvayyan v. Narasimmayyar	291
Naranbhai v. Ranchod	380	Natha v. Jami	864
Narasammal v. Balaramacharlu	57, 174	Nathaji v. Hari	183, 184
Narasanna v. Gangu	751	Nathibai, in the Goods of	99
— v. Gurappa	411	Nathu v. Chadi	488
Narasayya v. Venkayya	828, 904	Nathuni v. Manraj	379
— v. Venkataghiri	530	Nathuram v. Shoma Chhagan	284
Narasimha v. Gopala	585	Natthu v. Gulab	212
— v. Ramchandra	667	Naugammah v. Korebasappah	805
— v. Venkatadri	869	Navalram v. Nandkishor	830, 834
Narasimharav v. Antaji	391	Nawab v. Bhugwan	638
Narasimma v. Anantha	586	— Syud Ashrufooddeen v. Mt. Shama Soonderee	284
— v. Mangammal	730	— v. Ummatul Zohra	500
— v. Veerabadhra	268, 343, 628	Nayamani v. Deva	241
Narasimmiah v. Narasaya	457	Neelkaunt v. Anundmoyee	140
Narasimulu v. Somanna	519	— v. Mune	659
Narayan v. Babu	516	Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder	61, 359, 364, 672, 678, 739, 772
— v. Chintaman	533, 584	Nehalo v. Kishen	754
— v. Govinda	314	Nellaikumar v. Maragathammal	848
— v. Krishna	590	Nemychurn Mullick's will	540
— v. Lakshmi	669, 713	Newton, in re	277
— v. Laving	64	Nhanee v. Hureeram	389
— v. Nanu Manohur	167, 202, 668, 669	Nidhee v. Bisso	593
— v. Pandurang	668	Nidhoomani v. Saroda Pershad	236
— v. Rajaram	472	Nilakunden v. Madhaven	388
— v. Vasudeo	633	Nilamani v. Radhamani	752
— v. Venkatachariya	389	Nilmadhub v. Bishumber	185
Narayana v. Chengalamma	358	— v. Narattam	496
— v. Narso	399	Nilmoney v. Baneshur	609
— v. Ranga	586	Nilmoni v. Bakranath	532, 533, 633
— v. Rayappa	432	— v. Umanath	579
— v. Vedachala	138	— Singh v. Bakranath	441
Narayanasami v. Esa	579	Nilmony v. Kally Churn	876
— v. Kuppusami	170, 186	— Singh v. Hingoo	616
— v. Ramasami	256	Nimbalkar v. Jayavantrav	154, 184
— v. Samidas	390	Ningareddi v. Lakshmawa	604
Narayanan v. Kannan	496	Nirmul v. Mahomed	590
Narayani v. Govinda	314	Nirvanaya v. Nirvanaya	284
Narayanrao v. Ramabai	619	Nissar v. Kowar	750
Narbadabai v. Mahadev	619, 629	Nistarini v. Makhanlal	622
Narhar Govind v. Narayan	172	Nilai Charan v. Ganga	567
Narinder v. Achal	742	Nilatan v. Ismail	523
Narotam v. Nanka	886	Nitradayee v. Bholanath	182
Narottam v. Narsandas	453, 553, 554	Nittianand v. Krishna Dyal	197, 204
Narraina v. Veeraghava	672	Nittokissoree v. Jogendro	615, 617
		Nittyanund v. Shama Churn	513

TABLE OF CASES.

TABLE OF CASES.

	PAGE		PAGE
Nitye v. Soondaree ..	614	Padapa v. Swamirao ..	533
Nizamuddin v. Ananda ..	487	Padmaker Vinayek v. Mahadev Krishna ..	291
Nobin Chunder v. Dokhobala ..	590	Padmamani v. Jagadamba ..	668
Nobinchunder v. Guru Persad ..	867, 877	Padmavati, ex parte ..	64
Nobin Chunder v. Mohesh Chunder ..	383	Pahaladh v. Mt. Luchmunbutty ..	667
Nobinkishory v. Gobind ..	875	Pahlwan v. Ram Bharose ..	597
Nobkissen's will ..	540	Paigi v. Sheonarrain ..	119
Nobokishore v. Harinath ..	859	Pakhandu v. Manki ..	119
Nogendro v. Benoy ..	582, 904	Palani Gounden v. Rangayya ..	402
Norendra v. Bhupendra ..	465	— Konan v. Marakonon ..	472
Norendranath v. Kamilbasini ..	559	Palanivelappa v. Mannaru ..	475
Nowbut v. Mt. Lad Kooer ..	117	Palaniyappa v. Arumugam ..	591
Nowrutton v. Baboo Gouree ..	456	Panchanadayen v. Nilakandayen ..	684
Nubkissen v. Hurrishchunder ..	568, 585, 657	Panchappa v. Sanganbasawa ..	167
Nubkoomar v. Jye Deo ..	381	Panchcowrie v. Chumsoolall ..	587
Nubokishen v. Kaleepersad ..	284	Pandaiya Talaver v. Puli Talaver, ..	107, 745, 751
Nuddea, case of Zemindar of, ..	491, 540	Pandit Ram Narrain v. Moulvi Muhammad ..	589
Nufur v. Ram Koomar ..	825	Pandurang v. Bhasker ..	471, 472
Nugender Chunder v. Kaminee Dossee ..	407, 853, 863	Papamma v. Appa Row ..	170, 183
Nund Coomar Lall v. Ruzziooddeen ..	342, 344	Param v. Lalji ..	595
Nundkumar v. Rughoonundun ..	857	Paramasiva v. Krishna ..	379
Nundlal v. Bolakee ..	873	Parameswarum v. Shungaran ..	380
— v. Tapeedas ..	101	Paran Chundra v. Karunamayi ..	287
Nundram v. Kashee Pande, ..	186, 480	Parasara v. Rangaraja, ..	145, 158, 165, 776
Nundun v. Tayler ..	593	Paras Ram v. Sherjit ..	383
— v. Lloyd ..	379, 382	Parbati v. Jagadis Chunder, ..	55, 359
Nunjoondappa v. Jobbaiya ..	886	— v. Ram Barun ..	574
Nunnu Meah v. Krishnasami, ..	524, 848	— v. Sundar ..	174
Nursing v. Mohunt ..	500	Parbhu Lal v. Mylne ..	212
— Das v. Narain Das ..	366	Parman v. Bhattu Mahton ..	389
— Deb v. Roy Koylasnath ..	525	Pareshmani v. Dinanath ..	806, 814
Nuthoo v. Chadi ..	481, 488	Pareyasami v. Saluckai Tevar ..	464
Nuzeerum v. Moulvie Ameerooddeen ..	866	Parichat v. Zalim ..	450
Nuzvid, case of the Zemindary of, ..	62	Parmaya v. Sonde ..	517
		Parmeshar Das v. Bela ..	291
		Parooma v. Valayooda ..	379
		Parot v. Mehta ..	697, 785
		Parsotam v. Datgir ..	584
		Parvati v. Bhiku ..	754
		— v. Ganpatrao ..	457, 603
		— v. Kumaran ..	125, 602
		— v. Ramakrishna ..	209
		— v. Saminada ..	212
		— v. Sundara ..	525
		— v. Tirumalai ..	668, 750
		Patel Vandrayan v. Manilal, ..	141, 165, 167, 237, 248
		Pathan Alikhan v. Panibai ..	273
		Patil Hari v. Hakam Chand, ..	467, 473
		Patni Mal v. Ray Manohar, ..	669, 713
		Pattaravy v. Audimula ..	668
		Pauliem Valloo v. Pauliem Sooryah ..	356, 438
		Payappa v. Appanna ..	149, 252

	PAGE		PAGE
Payath v. Thiruthipalli ..	269	Ponnusami v. Dorasami ..	69
Pearks v. Mosley ..	502	— v. Thatha ..	476
Peddammattu v. Appu Rau ..	715	Poonjea v. Prankoonwur ..	830
Peddammutulaty v. N. Timma Reddy ..	207, 475, 563	Poovathay v. Peroomal ..	640
Pedda Ramappa v. Bangari ..	733	Prag Das v. Hari Kishn ..	852
Peddaya v. Ramalinga ..	313, 475	Pranjeevandas v. Dewcooverbae, ..	825, 869
Pedru v. Domingo ..	368	Pranjivan v. Bai Reva ..	758
Peet Koonwar v. Chuttur ..	587	Prankissen v. Bhugwatee ..	887
Pem Singh v. Partab Singh ..	421	— v. Noyammoney ..	887
Perliad Sein v. Baboo Budhoo ..	511	Prankishen v. Mothooramohun ..	674
Peria Ammani v. Krishnasami ..	169	Prankrishna v. Biswambhar ..	513
Periasami v. Periasami, ..	351, 525, 631, 673, 713, 737	Prankristo v. Bhagerutee ..	357
— v. Seetharama ..	421	Prannath v. Calishunkur ..	493
Periya Gaundan v. Tirumala ..	852	— v. Surrut ..	683, 689
Perkash v. Rameshwar ..	522	Pran Nath v. Rajah Govind ..	677
— Chunder v. Dhun Monnee ..	197, 204	Pranputtee v. Mt. Poorn ..	876
Permaul Naicken v. Pottee Ammal ..	185	Pranputty v. Lallah Futteh ..	874
Permeswar v. Padmaund ..	523	Pranvullubh v. Deocrin, ..	228, 391
Perhad v. Muhesree ..	743	Pratabnarayan v. Court of Wards, ..	440
Pertab v. Chitpal Singh ..	456	Prawnkissen v. Muttoosondery, ..	650
— v. Subhao ..	573	Prayag Doss v. Tirumala ..	587
— Narain v. Trilokinath, ..	866, 877	Premchand v. Hulashchand ..	609
Peru Nayar v. Ayyappan ..	314	Prithee Singh v. Court of Wards, ..	56, 774
Petambur v. Hurish Chunder ..	665	Pritkoer v. Mahadev ..	332, 364
Petam Dass v. Ramdhone ..	386	Promada v. Srigobind ..	523
Pettachi Chetty v. Sangili Vira ..	401, 414, 417	Promotho v. Radhika, ..	567, 575, 582
Phate v. Damodar ..	582, 587	Prosonno v. Barbosa ..	622
Phoolbas Kooer v. Lall Juggessur, ..	380, 481, 485, 865	Prosunnomoyee v. Ramsoonder ..	256
Phoolchund v. Rughoobuns, ..	489, 854, 878	Prosunno v. Golab ..	584
Phukar v. Ranjit ..	825	— v. Gooroo Churn ..	599
Phulchand v. Man Singh ..	400	— v. Saroda ..	534, 585
Phundo v. Jangi Nath ..	176	— v. Tarrucknath, ..	574, 575, 890
Pichuvayyan v. Subbayan ..	182	— v. Tripoora ..	876
Pirthee Singh v. Mt. Sheo ..	56	Protap Narain v. Court of Wards, ..	440
— v. Rani Rajkooer, ..	615, 619	Pubitra v. Damoodur ..	525, 848
Pirthi Pal v. Jewahir Singh ..	358	Puddo Kumaree v. Juggutkishore, ..	82, 147, 216
Pitam v. Ujagar ..	344	— Monee v. Dwarkanath, ..	844, 846
Pittapur case, ..	58, 214, 236, 256, 447, 555	Pudma Coomari v. Court of Wards, ..	147, 217
Platamone v. Staple ..	596	Pudmanabiah v. Moonemmah ..	611
Pokermull's goods ..	348	Pudmanand v. Hayes ..	523
Pokhnarain v. Mt. Seesphool ..	764	Pudmavatai v. Baboo Doolar ..	712
Poli v. Narotum ..	761	Pullen v. Ramalinga ..	598
Ponambilath Kunhamod v. Ponambilath Kuttiath ..	314	Punchanun Mullick v. Sib Chunder ..	668
Ponnambala v. Sunderappaya ..	449	Punchanund v. Lalshan ..	825
Ponnappa v. Pappuvayyengar ..	391, 393, 394, 396, 399, 401, 436, 454	Punchoomaney v. Troyluckoo ..	574
Ponnaya v. Muttu Gounden ..	511	Punna v. Radhakissen ..	644

	PAGE		PAGE
Purshotam v. Purshotam	117	Raghunandana v. Gopeenath	895
Pursid v. Honooman	647	Raghupati v. Tirumalai	871
Pursut v. Pasut	867, 876	Raghunada v. Chinnappa	586
Purtab Bahaudur v. Tilukdharee,	363	Rahi v. Govind, 114, 603, 745, 747,	748
Purushottam v. Amaram	668	Rahimatbai v. Hirbai	68
Putanvitil Teyan v. Putanvitil		Rahimhai, in the Goods of	68
Ragavan	604	Rai Balkishen v. Sitaram	431
Pydigintam v. Ramadoss	533	Balkrishna v. Mt. Masuma	284
R. v. Bezonji	275	Bishen Chand v. Asmaida
v. Fletcher	283	Koer	426, 504, 509
v. Barnardo	277	Raicharan v. Pyari Mani	871
v. Gyngal	277	Rai Jadav v. Mathura	188
v. Jali	64	Kishori v. Debendranath	503
v. Karsan	64, 114	Narain v. Nownit	471
v. Manhatha	611	Nursingh v. Rai Narain	358
v. Manohar	64	Sham Bullubh v. Prankishen,	715
v. Marimuttu	604	Raja v. Subbaraya	224
v. Nesbitt	276	Rajagopal v. Muttupalem	289
v. Ramanna	64	Raja Row Booche v. Venkata
v. Sambhu	114	Neeladry	611
Rabutty v. Sibchunder, 525, 574, 843,	848	Vurmah v. Ravi Vurmah,	65, 532, 586
Rachava v. Kalingapa	717	Rajajee v. Parthasarthi	525
Rachawa v. Shivayogapa	622	Rajan v. Basuva Chetti	207
Rackhaldoss v. Bindoo	593	Rajani Kanth v. Ram Nath	654
Radha v. Biseshur	885, 887	Rajaram v. Ganesh	509, 586
Churn v. Kripa	369, 669	v. Narasinga	523
Kishen v. Bachhaman	465	Tewary v. Luchmun	380, 440, 449, 452, 484, 488
Mohun v. Ram Dass	873	Raj Bahadur v. Achumbit Lal.	211
Pearee v. Doorga Monee.	722	v. Bishen Dyal	12
Pershad v. Budhu Dashad,	532	Ballubh v. Oomesh	855
v. Ramkhetawan,	415	Rajbulubh v. Mt. Buneta	493
Proshad v. Esuf	381	Rajchunder v. Goculchund,	56, 780, 787
Shyan v. Joy Ram	860	v. Mt. Dhunmune,	760
Radhabai v. Anantrav	441, 533	v. Sheeshoo	850
v. Anantrao Bhagvant,	533	v. Bulloram	851
v. Chinnaji	587	Raj Coomar v. Bissessur	175
v. Ganesh	573	Rajcoomaree v. Gopal	632
v. Namarav	348	Rajender v. Sham Chund,	567, 568, 657
Radhabullubh v. Juggutchunder,	585	Rajendro Narain v. Saroda, 141, 188,	203
Tagore v. Gopee-		Nath v. Jogendro Nath, 204,	206, 209
mohun Tagore	581	v. Shama Churn	383
Radhamohun v. Girdhareelal	853	Rajkishen v. Ramjoy	60
v. Hardai Bibi, 37, 187,	188	Rajkishore v. Gobind	797
Radhamonee v. Jadubnarain	256	v. Gobind Chunder	774
Radhi, re	865	Raj Kishore v. Hurrosoondery	715
Ragavendra v. Jayaram	104	Rajkoonwaree v. Golabee	754
Raghober v. Mt. Tulashee	825	Rajkristo v. Kishoree,	204, 260, 858
Raghubanand v. Sadha Churn	224	Raj Lukhee v. Gokulchunder,	574, 849, 857, 862
Raghubans v. Bhagwant	619	Rajnarain v. Ashutosh	528
Raghuber Dyal v. Bhikya Lal	290	v. Heeralal	335
Raghubadha v. Brozo Kishore	11, 134, 159, 203, 241, 256, 263, 815
Raghunath v. Gobind	580
v. Munan	782
v. Thakuri	871

	PAGE		PAGE
Rajnarain v. Jugunnath	594	Ramaseshaiya v. Bhagavat	348
v. Katyayani	528	Ramaswami Iyen v. Bhagaty
Rajo Nimbalkar v. Jayavantrav,	184, 187	Ammal	159, 183
Rakhal v. Adwya	290	Rama Varma v. Ramen Nair	586
v. Mahtab	381	Ramayya v. Venkataratnam	381
Rakhmabai v. Radhabai, 152, 166, 241,	247	Rambhat v. Lakshman	259, 450
Rama v. Runga	849	v. Timmayya	117
Ram Autar v. Danauri	519	Rambromo v. Kaminee	56
v. Raja Muhammad,	290	Ram Bunsee v. Soobh Koonwaree,
Ramabai v. Rangrav	875	101, 273, 274
v. Trimbak, 606, 610, 617	668	Bhurosee v. Bissessur	599
Ramacharya v. Ananta	423	Ram Chandra v. Narayan	213
Ramachendrah v. Kondayya	415	v. Ranjit Singh	212
Ramachendriah v. Seetaramiah,	415	Ramchandra v. Bhimrav	853
Ramadhin v. Mathura Singh	857	v. Brojonath	274
Ramakal v. Ramasami	753	v. Damodar	382, 671
Ramakrishna v. Subbakka	269	v. Kashinath	534, 585
Ramakutti v. Kallaturaiyan	474	v. Krishna	519
Ramalakshmi v. Sivananthai,	57, 733	v. Mahadev,	439 631, 637
Ramalinga v. Pavadai	751	v. Mulji	165
v. Sadasiva	140, 174	v. Nanaji	172
Ramalingam v. Vythilingam, 584,	586	v. Sagunabai	615
Ramamani v. Kulanthai	107	v. Sakharan	610
Ramamirthi v. Gopala	499	v. Savitribai	622
Ramamirthen v. Ranganathan	522	v. Venkatrao,	529, 633
Ramanaden v. Rangammal	627	v. Vithoba	188
Ramanand v. Gobind Singh	481	Ramchunder v. Haridas	858
v. Surgiani	770	Ramchurn v. Nunhoo	850
Ramananda v. Raikishori	758	Ram Churn v. Mungul	289
Ramanarsu v. Buchamma	604	Ramchurn v. Mt. Jasoda	626
Ramanayya v. Rangappayya	429	Ramcoomar v. Ichamoyi,	607, 850, 855
Ramangavda v. Shivaji	105	v. McQueen	593
Ramanna v. Venkata	345, 476	Ram Coomar v. Jogender	584
Ramanuja v. Sadagopa	599	Ramdan v. Beharee	765
Ramanooja v. Peetayen	296	Ram Das v. Chandra	55
Ramanugra v. Mahasundur	591	Ramdebul v. Mitterjeet	382, 494
Ramanuja v. Virappa	380	Ramdhone v. Anund	657
Ramanund v. Raghunath	358	Ramdhun v. Kishenkanth	765
v. Ramkissen,	581, 852, 855	Ramdolal v. Joymoney	887, 989
Ramappa v. Aruganath	683, 730	Raman Menon v. Chatunni	312
Ramappa v. Sithammal	751	Rameshar v. Arjun	524
Ramaraja v. Arunachella	516	Rameshwar v. Lachmi	574, 576
Rama Rau v. Raja Rau	207	Rameswar v. Jibender	524
Ramasamayyan v. Virasami,	402, 421	Ram Ghulam v. Ram Behari	364
Ramasami v. Marimuttu	511	Ramguttee v. Kristo	566
v. Papaya	524	Ram Huree v. Trikee Ram	674
v. Sellattammal	855	Ramiah v. Nayannammah	615
v. Sunderalingasami,	224, 733	Ramien v. Condommal	610
v. Ulaganatha	395	Ramindur v. Roonparain	594
v. Venkatesam	799	Ramji v. Ghaman, 148, 166, 167, 248,	251
v. Virasami	885	Ramjoy v. Tarachund	768
Ramasamy v. Sashachella	474	Ramkishen v. Mt. Sri Mutee, 154, 241,	260, 450
Ramasashiem v. Akylandummal,	869	Ramkishore v. Bhoobun	182, 493
Ramasawmi v. Venkataramaiyan,	257	Ramkishore v. Kallykan too	866

	PAGE		PAGE
Ramkoomar v. Kishenkunker ..	491	Ran Bijai v. Jagatpal ..	806
Ramkrishna v. Shamrao ..	150, 253	Ranga Aiyar v. Srinivasa ..	590
Ramkunhae v. Bung Chund ..	493	Rangachariar v. Yegna Dikshatur,
Ramkunwar v. Ram Dai ..	624		585
Ram Kannye v. Meernomoyee ..	752	Rangaiyan v. Kaliani ..	610
— Kawal v. Ramkishore ..	850	Rangammal v. Echammal ..	605, 609
— Khelawan v. Mt. Oudh ..	514	— v. Venkatachary ..	596
— Kissen v. Sheonundun ..	672	Ranganayakamma v. Alwar Setti,
— Kumari, re ..	108		151, 153, 194, 198
— Koonwar v. Ummur ..	715	Ranganmani v. Kasinath ..	375
— Lal v. Secretary of State ..	522, 558, 877	Rangarao v. Rajagopala ..	239
— — v. Lakhmichand ..	386	Rangasami v. Krishnayan ..	480
— — Sett v. Kanai Lall, 505, 575		Rangayana v. Ganapa ..	478
— — v. Kishen ..	594	Rangayya v. Thanikachalla, 433, 808
— Lochun v. Rungchoobur ..	668	Rangilbai v. Vinayak ..	851
Ramlinga v. Virupakshi ..	658	Rango Balaji v. Mudieppa ..	239
Ramnad Case, 27, 28, 29, 30, 38, 58,		— Vinayak v. Yamunabai, 614,
	62, 143, 152, 247		619
Ramnath v. Durga ..	758, 759	Rangubai v. Bhagirthibai, 170, 171,
Ram Narain v. Bhawani ..	465		187, 202
— v. Pearay Bhugal ..	523	Ranjit v. Radha Rani ..	756
— Singh v. Pertum Singh ..	332, 335, 345	Ranmal v. Vadilal ..	284, 285, 286
— Narayan v. Mt. Sut Bunsee, 495		Ranojee v. Kandojee ..	750
— Nirunjun v. Prayag ..	659	Rao Balwant v. Kishori, 41, 450, 453
— Ootum v. Oomesh ..	426	— Kurun v. Nawab Mahomed, 362,
Ramnundun v. Janki ..	62, 752		873
Rampershad v. Chaineram ..	838	Raol Gorain v. Teza Gorain ..	335
— v. Jhokoo Roy ..	876	Rarichan v. Perachi ..	122, 712, 717
— v. Mt. Nagbungshee, 862		Rashid v. Sherbanoo ..	423
— v. Sheochurn, 348, 350,		Rashishuri v. Greesh Chunder ..	220
	365, 712	Rashmohini v. Umesh ..	542
Ram Pershad v. Lakhpati ..	673	Rasul Jehun v. Ram Sarun ..	757
Rampertab v. Foolibai ..	284	Rathnam v. Sivasubramaniya ..	439
— v. Gopeekishen ..	425	Ratna Subbu v. Ponnappa, 686, 688
Ramphul Rai v. Tula Kuari ..	859	Ratnam v. Govindarajulu ..	456
— Singh v. Deg Narain, 999,		Ratnamasari v. Akiandammal, 212,
	401, 421		213
Rampiari v. Mulchand ..	753	Raujkisno v. Taraneychurn ..	492
Ramprasad v. Radhprasad ..	346	Ravji v. Gangadharbhat ..	484
Ramrao v. Yeshvantrao ..	634	— v. Lakshmbibai, 139, 149, 199,
Ramsahoy v. Mohabeer ..	463		208, 257
Ram Sahye v. Lalla Laljee, 482, 654,		— v. Mahadev ..	600
	807	Rawut Urjun v. Rawut Ghunsiam, 61
— Saran v. Tek Chand ..	751	Rayacharl v. Venkataramaniah,
— Sarun v. Mt. Pran Peary ..	595		437, 439, 475
— Sarup v. Mt. Bela ..	496	Rayadar Nallatambi v. Mukunda, 344
— v. Shah Latifat ..	29	Rayakkal v. Subbanna ..	440
— Sevak v. Raghubar ..	465	Rayan v. Kuppanayyengar ..	228
Ramsoonder v. Anundnath ..	594	Rayappa v. Ali Sahib ..	391
— v. Ram Sahye ..	482	Rayee v. Puddum ..	652
Ram Soondur v. Taruck ..	585	Razabai v. Sadu ..	627
Ram Soondur v. Surbanee Dossee,		Reade v. Krishna ..	272, 277
	148, 248	Reasut v. Abbot ..	577
Ramtonoo v. Ramgopal ..	581, 582	— v. Chorwar ..	380
Ramtoonoo v. Ramgopaul ..	541, 547	Reg. v. Bhungee ..	277
		— v. Sooku ..	277
		Reneau v. Tourangeau ..	496

	PAGE		PAGE
Rengasami v. Krishnaiyan ..	480	Rutchepetty v. Rajunder, 30, 56 686,
Rennie v. Gunganarain ..	593		692, 731, 778
Reotee v. Ramjeet ..	464	Rutton Monee v. Brojo Mohun ..	668
Retoo v. Lalljee, 484, 871		Ruve Bhudr v. Roopshunker, 175, 259,
Rewa Prasad v. Deo Dutt ..	710		752
Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby ..	564, 609, 671, 713, 714	Ryrappen Numbiar v. Kelu Kurup, 311
Rhamdhone v. Anund ..	657	SABAPATI v. Somasundaram, 450, 488
Rindabai v. Anacharya ..	834	Sabapaty v. Panyandy ..	509
Rindamma v. Venkataramappa ..	753	Sabitreea v. Sutur Ghun, 196, 203
Rithcurn v. Soojun ..	183	Sabo Bewa v. Nuboghun ..	204
Rivett Carnac v. Jivibai ..	847	Sacaram v. Luxumabai ..	457
Rohee v. Dindyal ..	591	Sachitananda v. Ealoram ..	599
Rojo Moyee v. Troylukho, 501, 506,		Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbash
	582, 871		335, 428, 468, 481, 864
Roma Nath v. Rajonimoni, 604, 613		Sadagopah v. Ruthna ..	517
Roman Kassim v. Hurroba ..	290	Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 484, 488, 489,
Rooder v. Sumbho ..	774		851, 863, 879
Rookho v. Madho ..	521	— v. Hari Monoshwar, 184,
Roopchurn v. Anund ..	686		208
Rooploll v. Mohima ..	575	— Dinkar v. Dinkar Na-
Rosa Learmouth, Will of ..	578		rayen, 399, 401
Roshan v. Bulwant ..	603	Sadu v. Baiza, 642, 745, 748, 749, 751
— Singh v. Har Kishan ..	284	— v. Ram ..	667
— v. Bulwant, 641, 743		Saguna v. Sadashiv, 720, 769, 778,
	399, 476		786
Rottala v. Pulicat Ramasami, 594		Saithri, in re ..	278
Rouchun v. Coll. of Mymensingh, 594		Sakharam v. Devji ..	432
Rudr v. Rup Kuar ..	890	— v. Govind ..	391
Rudra Prokash v. Bholanath ..	273	— v. Hari Krishna, 669, 673
Rudrapa v. Irava, 719, 720		— v. Sitabai ..	29, 720, 826
Rughonath v. Hurrehur ..	733	— Shet v. Sitaram Shet, 411
Rughoonath v. Luckun ..	654	Sakhawat v. Trilok ..	493
Rukabai v. Gandabai ..	618	Sakrabi v. Maganlal ..	384
Rukhmabai v. Tukharam ..	794	Sakwarbai Bhavanjee ..	619
Rukmini v. Kadarnath ..	721	Sakyahani v. Bhavini ..	878
Ruklal v. Chunilal ..	223	Salehooonissa v. Mohesh ..	391
Rumea v. Bhagee ..	752	Salemma v. Lukemana ..	889
Runochordas v. Paryatibai, 574, 867,		Salish Chunder v. Mohendro ..	273
	876	Salitagar v. Bai Suraj ..	119
Rungama v. Atchama, 30, 142, 452		Salur Zemindar v. Pedda Paker, 525
Runganaigum v. Namasevoya ..	175	Samalbhai v. Someshvar ..	453
Runganayakamma v. Bulli Ra-		Samat v. Amra ..	778
	351, 635, 737	Sambasiven v. Kristnien ..	284
Runjeet v. Kooer ..	624, 672	Sami Ayyengar v. Ponnammal ..	401
— v. Mahomed Waris ..	850	Saminada v. Thangathanai ..	766
— Singh v. Obhya ..	174, 265	Saminadien v. Durmarajien ..	495
Rupan v. Hukmi ..	756	Saminatha v. Puroshottama ..	584
Rupa Jagshet v. Krishnaji ..	581	— v. Rangathammal ..	622
Rupchund v. Daolatrav ..	519	Saminathaiyan v. Saminathaiyan, 296
— v. Latu Chowdhry ..	67	Samy Josyen v. Ramien ..	550
— v. Rakhmabai ..	167, 248	Sandial v. Maitland ..	574
Rup Singh v. Baisni ..	712	Sanjivi v. Jalajakshi ..	64
— v. Pirthu Narain ..	447	Sankaralingam v. Subban, 64, 115
Russic v. Purnah ..	758	Sankarappa v. Kamayya ..	598
Russick v. Choitun ..	540	Sannyasi v. Salur ..	532
Russobai v. Zuleekabai ..	770	Santappayya v. Rangappayya ..	208
Rustam Ali v. Abbasi ..	49
— Singh v. Moti ..	852

	PAGE
Sant Kumar v. Deo Saran ..	765
— v. Sukh Nidhan ..	876
Sarada v. Mahananda ..	348, 365
Sardar Muhammad v. Nawab Ghulam ..	733
Saral Chund v. Mohun ..	288
Sarasuti v. Mannu ..	746
Sarat Chandra v. Bhupendra ..	578
— Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 208
Saravana v. Muttayi, 457, 462, 464
Sarju Parshad v. Bir Bhaddar ..	593
Sarkies v. Prosonomoyee ..	69
Sarkun v. Rahaman ..	586
Saroda v. Tincowry ..	144
Sartajkuari v. Deoraj ..	738
Sartaj Kuari v. Rani Deoraj, 256, 445
	555
Sarupi v. Mukh Ram ..	59
Sastri v. Vengu Ammal ..	765
Sathianama v. Saravana, 534, 584
Satrapa v. Hulas ..	577
Satrucherla v. Virabhadra, 636, 675
Savitri v. Raman ..	380
Savitribai v. Luximibai, 604, 605, 609, 618
Sayed Shahu v. Hapija ..	273
Sayamalal v. Saudamini, 139, 151, 196
Secretary of State v. Haibatrao, 585, 586
Seebkisto v. East India Co. ..	521
Seedee Nazeer v. Ojoodhya ..	563
Seenevullala v. Tungama ..	752
Seeta Ram v. Fukeer ..	787
— v. Juggoobundhu ..	204
Sellam v. Chinnammal ..	753, 754
Sengamalathammal v. Valayuda, 762, 828, 887
Seshamma v. Subbarayudu ..	619
Seshayya v. Narasamma ..	528
Seth Jaidial v. Seth Siteeram ..	358
— Mulchand v. Bai Mancha ..	890
Sethurama v. Ponnammal ..	695
Sevacawmy v. Vaneyummal ..	545
Sevachetumbara v. Parasucty ..	139, 655, 807
Sha Chamanlal v. Doshi, 541, 870
Shadi v. Anup ..	383
Shaik Moosa v. Shaik Essa ..	578
Shama Soonduree v. Jumoonaa, 871, 873
Shamachurn v. Khetromoni ..	542
Shamanna v. Appamma ..	754
Shamavahoo v. Dvarkadas, 153, 237
Shamchunder v. Narayni ..	144, 216
Shamlal v. Banna ..	623
Sham Chand Pal v. Protab ..	239
— Narain v. Court of Wards, 350, 797

	PAGE
Sham Narain v. Raghoobur ..	346
— Kuar v. Gaya ..	218
— v. Mohanunda ..	274
Lal v. Bindo ..	275
— v. Ghasita ..	291
Lal Mitra v. Amareudro, 596, 856
— Singh v. Mt. Umraotce ..	440, 499
— Singh v. Santabai ..	140, 171
— Sunder v. Achan, 433, 857, 861, 862
Shangara v. Krishnen ..	598
Shankar Baksh v. Hardeo Baksh, 350, 636
— Bharati v. Venkappa Naik, 584
Shankaran v. Kesavan ..	197
Shunmaun v. Madras Building Co. ..	515
Sharifa v. Munekhan ..	275
Sharfudin v. Govind ..	515, 520
Sheik Ibrahim v. Sheik Suleman, 501
Sheikh Azeemooddeen v. Moon-shee Athur ..	292
— Mabomed v. Amarchand, 584
— Muhumed v. Zuabida Jar ..	500
Shekh Sultan v. Shekh Ajmodin, 529
Shenkapa v. Revana ..	101
Sheobarot v. Bhagwati ..	768
Sheo Buksh v. Futteh ..	659
— Churn v. Chukraree ..	379
— v. Jummun ..	481
— Das v. Kunvul ..	493, 501
— Dyal v. Judoonath ..	363
— Gobind v. Sham Narain ..	352
— Golam v. Burra ..	366
— Lochun Singh v. Babu Saheb Singh ..	846
— Narain v. Mata Prasad ..	597
— Nath v. Mt. Dayamyee ..	803
— Persad v. Leelah ..	383, 440
— Pershad v. Kally Dass ..	523
— v. Kulunder ..	358
— v. Rajkumar ..	415
— v. Saheb Lal ..	433
— v. Soorjbnsee ..	463
— Pertab v. Allahabad Bank, 825, 826, 887, 902
— Proshad v. Jung Bahadur ..	393
— Shanker v. Debi Sahai, 825, 826, 887, 901
Sheoraj v. Nuckhedee, 456, 458, 463
Sheoratan v. Ram Pergash ..	587
Sheoshanker v. Ram Shevak ..	455
Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 46, 52, 134, 168, 175, 648, 712, 868

	PAGE
Sheo Soondary v. Pirthee ..	774
— Suhaye v. Sreekishen ..	481
— Surrun v. Sheo Sohail ..	481
— Sehail v. Omed ..	768
Sheogiri v. Girewa ..	750
Shewak v. Syad Mohammed ..	876
Shibnarain v. Ram Nidhee ..	773
Shibo Koeree v. Joogun ..	265, 266
Shib Pershad v. Gungamonee, 357, 648
— Dayee v. Doorga Pershad, 437, 618
— Pershad v. Gunga Monee ..	648
Shida v. Sunshidapa ..	62
Shidhojirav v. Naikojirav ..	57, 634
Shimbhu Nath v. Gayan Chand, 57, 868
Shiu Golam v. Baran ..	366
Shivaganga, The case of, 205, 351, 358, 631, 635, 678, 712, 713, 866, 877
Shivaganga Case ..	738
Shivji v. Datu ..	272
Shivram v. Genu ..	516, 519
— v. Saya ..	519
Shome Shankar v. Rajendra ..	750
Shookmoy v. Monohari, 565, 567, 570
Shoshi v. Tarokessur ..	565
Shridhar v. Hiralal ..	102
Shri Ganesh v. Keshavrav ..	584
Shudannud v. Bonomalee, 345, 374, 439, 848
Shumsher v. Dilraj ..	143, 185
Shumsool v. Shewukram, 526, 573, 574, 848, 876, 879
Shurut v. Bholanath ..	489
Shushee Mohun v. Aukhil ..	367
Sibbosondery v. Bussomutty, 650, 652
Sibchunder v. Russick ..	517
— v. Sreemutty Tree-poorah ..	765
Sibta v. Badri ..	768
Sidapa v. Pooneakooty ..	366
Siddah v. Doddannah ..	119
Siddappah v. Mooneappah ..	606
Siddessury v. Janardan ..	614
Siddhessur v. Sham Chand ..	875
Sid Dasi v. Gur Sahai ..	857
Sidlingapa v. Sidava ..	602, 610
Sikher Chund v. Dulputty, 456, 462
Sikki v. Venccatasamy ..	604
Simbhu Nath v. Golab Singh ..	401, 411, 416, 417
Simmani v. Muttammal ..	761, 197
Singamma v. Venkatacharlu ..	194, 197
Sinammal v. Administrator-General ..	714
Sivaya v. Munisami ..	287
Sinhayee v. Thanakapudayen ..	604, 612
Sital v. Madho ..	452
Sitararam v. Chintamani ..	794
— v. Zalim Singh ..	339
Sitaramayya v. Venkatramanna, 359
Sitarambhat v. Sitararam ..	586
Sittiramayer v. Alagri ..	296
Sivabaghiam v. Palani ..	864
Sivagiri, The case of, 344, 353, 390, 393, 396, 414
— v. Alwar ..	430
— v. Tiruvengada ..	393
Sivagunga v. Lakshmana ..	344
Sivananaja v. Muttu Ramalinga ..	57
Sivarama v. Bagavan ..	98
Sivasami v. Sevugan ..	454
Sivasankara v. Parvati ..	463
Sivasubramania v. Krishnammal, 447
Sivasungu v. Minal ..	62, 751
Skinner v. Orde ..	69, 274, 276
Sobhagechand v. Bhaichand ..	517
Sobhanadri v. Sriramulu ..	285
— v. Venkata ..	530
Sobharam v. Gunga ..	380
Soiru v. Narayan ..	460
Sokkanadha v. Sokkanadha ..	384
Somasekhara v. Subadra Maji ..	170
Sonaluxmi v. Vishnu ..	111
Sonatan v. Ruttun ..	56
— Bysack v. Juggutsoondree, 556, 565, 568, 569, 582, 584, 629, 672
Sonet v. Mirza ..	800
Sonu v. Dhondu ..	284
Soobha Moodally v. Anchalay ..	760
Soobappa v. Venkamma ..	755
Soobaputten v. Jungameeah ..	449
Soobheddur v. Boloran ..	365
Soobramaneya v. Aroomooga ..	586
Soonder Narain v. Bennud Ram, 284
Soondur Koomaree v. Gudadhur, 203
Sooranamy v. Venccataroyen ..	760
Sooranany v. Sooranany ..	544
Soorendro v. Nundun ..	455, 456
Soorendronath v. Mt. Heeramonee, 56, 678, 715
Soorja Koer v. Natha Baksh ..	623
Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 336, 362, 370, 371, 373, 374, 495, 557, 565, 573, 653, 843, 844
Soorjomonee v. Suddanund ..	345
Sootrogun v. Sabitra ..	194, 196
Sorolah Dossee v. Bhoobun Mohun Neoghy ..	839
Soshi Bhusan v. Gogan Chunder, 877
Soudaminye v. Broughton ..	846

	PAGE		PAGE
Soudaminy v. Jogesh, 501, 502, 575, 648	648	Subbanna v. Venkata Krishnan	869
Sourindra v. Siromoni .. 140		Subbaraya v. Kylasa .. 782
Sowdaminee v. Adm.-Gen., Bengal, 843, 845		— v. Manika .. 673
Sree Chand v. Nim Chand .. 380		— v. Sadasiva .. 673
Sreemanchunder v. Gopaulchunder .. 590		— v. Subbammal, 171, 197
Sree Misser v. Crowdy .. 381		Subbarayana v. Subbakk .. 605
— Motee Jeemoney v. Attaram, 651		Subbarayudu v. Gopavajjulu .. 471
Sreemutty Debia v. Bimola .. 595		Subbarazu v. Venkataratnam .. 671
— Rajcoomarree v. Nobocoomer .. 153, 234		Subbareddi v. Chengalamma, 842, 873
Sreenarain v. Bhya Jha, 266, 267, 541, 869, 896		Subbaya v. Suraya .. 357
— v. Goro Pershad .. 363		Subbramaniem v. Subbramaniem 464
— Mitter v. Sreemutty Kishen 196, 200		Subbu Hegadi v. Tongu .. 313
— v. Sreemutty .. 875		Subbrahminayam v. Venkamma 161
Sreenath Gangooly v. Mohesh Chunder .. 210		Subramana v. Arumuga 284, 285
— Roy v. Ruttunmulla .. 260, 853		Subramaniam v. Arunachelam, 846, 903
Sreenevassien v. Sashyummal .. 182		Subramaniya v. Ponnasami .. 489
Sreeram v. Puddomooke .. 618		— v. Pudmanaba .. 670
Sreeramalu v. Kristnamma .. 261		— v. Sadasiva 389, 440, 462
Srikant Surma v. Radha Kant, 264, 266		— v. Sivasubramaniya, 336, 739
Srimohun v. McGregor .. 658		Sudanund v. Bonomallee .. 436
Srimutty Dibeah v. Rany Koond, 686, 692, 857		— v. Soorjoo Monee, 345, 357, 450, 452, 848
Srinarain Mitter v. Bremutty Kishen .. 291		Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu, 335, 349
Srinath Gangopadhyaya v. Mahes Chandra .. 210		Suddurtonnessa v. Majada .. 68
Srinath Kuar v. Prosonno Kumar, 876		Sudisht v. Mt. Sheoharat .. 863
— Serma v. Radhakaunt, 264, 266		Sugeeram v. Jughoobuns .. 878
Srinivasa v. Annasami .. 64		Sukh Dei v. Kedarnath .. 542
— v. Dandayudapani .. 768		Sukhbasti v. Guman .. 208
— v. Kuppenayyengar .. 228		Sukhimani v. Mahendranath .. 594
— v. Rengasami .. 782		Suleman Kadr v. Mehdi .. 590
— v. Yelaya .. 401		Sumbhoochutt v. Jhotee .. 776
Srinivasammal v. Vijayammal .. 521		Sumbhoochunder v. Gunga 677, 787
Sri Pal Rai v. Surajbali .. 838		Sunrun v. Chunder Mun .. 647
Sriram v. Bhagirath .. 519		— v. Khedun .. 640
Sriramulu v. Ramayya 174, 177		Sundar v. Khuman Singh .. 48
Stalkart v. Gopal .. 382, 440		— Lal v. Fakir Chand .. 593
Standen v. Standen .. 235		Sundari v. Pitambari .. 804
Standing v. Bowring 499, 589		Sundara v. Tegaraja .. 474
Stark v. Dakyns .. 509		Sundraraja v. Jagannada .. 401
Strinivas v. Hanmant .. 213		Sundarayan v. Sitaramayan .. 456
Suba Singh v. Sarafraz .. 778		Sundaralingasami v. Ramasami, 734
Subba Aiyar v. Ganesa .. 637		Sunderammal v. Rangasami .. 730
Subbaiyan v. Akhiladammal .. 850		Sunderaraja v. Pattanatha .. 284
Subbaluvammal v. Annmakutti .. 171		Sunker Lal v. Juddoobuns .. 862
Subba Rau v. Ruma Rau .. 668		Suntosh Ram v. Gera Pattuck .. 119
Subbarayar v. Subammal .. 236		Suppammal v. Collector of Tanjore .. 584
		Surub v. Shew Gobind .. 489
		Suraj Bansi Kunwar v. Mahipat, 874
		— Bansi Koer v. Sheo Proshad, 389, 390, 396, 399, 401, 407, 420, 430, 439, 471, 638
		Surajmani v. Rabinath .. 890
		Suraneni v. Suraneni 672, 713
		Surat Chandra v. Bhupendra .. 578

	PAGE		PAGE
Surat v. Ashootosh .. 489		Teeluck v. Shama Churn .. 817
Suraya Bhukta v. Lakshmi Narasamma .. 776		Teeluk v. Ramjus .. 379
Surbonarain v. Maharaj .. 513		Teencowree v. Dinonath 218, 541
Surendra Keshav v. Doorgasundari .. 137, 144, 238		Teertaruppa v. Soonderajien .. 587
— Nandan v. Sailaka Kant, 145, 242		Tej Chund v. Srikanth Ghose .. 522
Suresh Chunder v. Jugal Chunder, 291		— Protab v. Champakalie .. 672
Sriyamani v. Kalikanta .. 119		Tejpal v. Ganga 284, 485, 489
— Narayana v. Venkatarajana .. 144		Tekact v. Tekactnee .. 635
Surja Kumari v. Gandhrap .. 765		Tekalt v. Anand Roy 532, 533
— Prasad v. Golab .. 401		— v. Basanta .. 119
Surjo Kant Nandi v. Mohesh Chunder .. 219		— v. Tekaitni .. 713
Sursutty v. Poorno .. 574		Tellis v. Saldanha .. 333
Surya Row v. Chellayamma, 525, 567		Teluck v. Muddun .. 853
— v. Gungadhara, 565, 567		Temmakal v. Subbammal .. 284
Sutao v. Hurreeram .. 62		Tennent v. Tennent .. 596
Sutputtee v. Indranund .. 264		Teramath v. Lakshmi .. 586
Svamiyar v. Chokkalingam .. 643		Thakoor v. Rai Baluk Ram .. 825
Swami Rao v. Padapa .. 533		— Jeebnath v. Court of Wards .. 93, 692, 764
Symes v. Hughes .. 596		— Kapilnauth v. The Government 443, 495
Syud Tasooar v. Koonj Beharee, 462		— Oomrao v. Thakooranee Mahtab Koonwar, 181, 198
— Tuffuzzool v. Rughoonath, 472		Thakoorain v. Mohun, 719, 728, 780
TABHOONISSA v. Koomar .. 585		Thakur Durriao v. Thakur Davi, 658
Tagore v. Tagore, 495, 501, 522, 538, 541, 560, 566, 567, 568, 574, 582, 585, 628, 677, 678, 814, 816		— Hurdeo v. Jowahir .. 350
Talemand v. Rukmina .. 626		— Nitral v. Jai Singh, 49, 61
Taliwar v. Puhlwan .. 659		— Shere v. Thakurain .. 358
Tallapragadah v. Crovedy .. 545		— Singh v. Nokhe .. 528
Tammirazu v. Pantina .. 134		Thandvaraya v. Subbayer .. 587
Tandavaraya v. Valli 455, 462		Thangam Pillai v. Suppa Pillai, 642, 644
Tarachan v. Pudum .. 797		Thangathanni v. Ramu Mudali .. 197
Tara Chand v. Nobin Chunder .. 573		Thaya v. Shungunni .. 314
— v. Reeb Ram, 57, 61, 372, 422, 451, 752		Thayammal v. Annamalai .. 715
— Munnee v. Motee 62, 751		— v. Venkatarama .. 875
— Mohun v. Kripa Moyee, 216, 223		— v. Venkatramien, 148, 255
— Soondaree v. Collector of Mymensingh .. 514		Thillai v. Ramanaatha .. 333
— Sooduree v. Oojul .. 591		Thukoo v. Ruma .. 151
— Churn v. Suresh Chunder, 148		Thukrain Ramanand v. Raghunath .. 350
Taramonee v. Shibanath .. 591		— Sookraj v. Government, 350, 358
Tara Naikin v. Nana Lakshman, 62, 63		Thurstan v. Nottingham .. 288
Tarance Churn v. Mt. Dasee .. 493		Tikaram v. Barabanki 526, 861
Tarinee Churn v. Watson .. 289		Tillakchand v. Jitmal .. 598
— Prasad v. Bholanath .. 849		Tilock v. Ram Luckhee .. 773
Tarini Charan v. Saroda Sundari, 263		Timba v. Siddamma .. 193
Taruck Chunder v. Huro Sunkur, 207		Timmappa v. Mahalinga 312, 702
— v. Jodeshur .. 366		— v. Parmeshriamma .. 608
Tarucknath v. Prosono .. 574		Timmi Reddy v. Achamma .. 713
Tayumana v. Perumal .. 453		Timmon v. Nibarun .. 763
		Tincowri v. Krishna .. 615
		Tipperah case, 61, 359, 364, 672, 678, 738, 772
		Tirumamagal v. Ramasvami .. 806
		Tirumala v. Lakshamma .. 624
		Tirumalayappa v. Swami Naik .. 592

	PAGE		PAGE
Tod v. Kunhamod ..	370	Upondra v. Ismail ..	523
Tolasa v. Krishnachar ..	554	— Lal v. Hemchandra, 501, 566,
Tooljaram v. Meean ..	517	— v. Rani Prasanna Mayi, 189
— v. Nurbheram ..	553	— Narain v. Gopeenath, 369,
Toolshi v. Ramnarain ..	523	666, 875
Torit v. Taraprosunno ..	651	Upoma Kuchain v. Bholaram ..	107
Totawa v. Basawa ..	761	Upooroop v. Lalla Bandhjee, 400, 412
Tottakara v. Poovally ..	271	Uppala v. Ramanuja ..	670
Tottempudi v. Seshamma ..	357	Ushruf v. Brojessuree ..	849
Travancore case ..	158, 182
Treekumjee v. Mt. Laroo ..	114, 755	VADALI v. Manda ..	462
Tribhuvandas v. Gangadus, 506, 509		— v. Kolipalli ..	753
— v. Yorke Smith ..	350	Vadilal v. Shah Kushal ..	379, 384
Trikam v. Hirji ..	519	Vadreja v. Wuppuluri ..	715
Trimbak v. Narayan ..	380	Vagliano v. Bank of England ..	560
— Balkrishna v. Narayan, 399,		Vaikantam v. Kanapirall ..	117, 602
402, 421		Vaithianadham v. Gungarazu ..	65
— Jivaji v. Sakharan ..	494	Valayooda v. Chedumbara ..	471
Trimbakpuri v. Gangabai ..	586	Valia Tamburatti v. Vira Rayyan, 714
Tukaram v. Gangaram ..	389	Valu v. Gunga ..	613
— v. Gunaji ..	887	Valubai v. Govind ..	199
— v. Ramchandra ..	479	Vallabhram v. Bai Hariganga ..	806
Tuljaram v. Mathuradas, 826, 829,		Vallinayagam v. Pachche, 543, 551,
830, 833, 869		552
Tulshi Rani v. Behari Lal ..	143	Vallubdas v. Sakerbai ..	716
Tundun v. Pokh Narain ..	592	Vaman v. Vasudev ..	654
Tyrell v. Painton ..	542	Vangala v. Vangala ..	822
		Varanakot v. Varanakot ..	313
UDAI CHUNDER v. Ashutosh ..	851	Varden v. Luckpathy ..	517
Udaram v. Ranu, 391, 395, 471, 472,		Varjivan v. Ghelji ..	857, 860
479, 482, 554		Vasudeva Bhatlu v. Narasamma ..	511
Udaram v. Sonkaboi ..	608	Vasudev v. Narayan ..	499, 536
Uddoy v. Jadublal, 443, 444, 493, 524		— v. Venkatesh ..	471, 478
Ugarchund v. Madapa Somana ..	516	— Hari v. Tatia Narayan ..	516
Ujagar v. Pitam ..	449	Vasudevan v. Secretary of State, 51,
Uji v. Hathi ..	64	55, 91, 93, 127, 388
Umabai v. Bhavu ..	806	Vasudevanant v. Ramkrishna ..	140
Uma Deyi v. Gokoolanund, 172, 185,		Vayidinada v. Appu ..	176
200, 202, 761		Vedanayaga v. Vedammal ..	811
Umamaheswara v. Singaraperu-		Vedapurath v. Vallabha ..	585
mal ..	422	Vedavalli v. Narayana ..	367
— Sundari v. Dwarkanath, 362,		Veerapermall v. Narain Pillay, 145,
630		152, 170, 186, 194, 542
— Sunduri v. Sourobinee ..	153	Veerasokkaraju v. Papiath ..	426
— Sunker v. Kali Komul ..	219	Vejayah v. Anjolummaul ..	611
Umaid v. Udoi ..	697	Velayuda v. Sivarama ..	511
Uman Hathi v. Gooman ..	409	Vellanki v. Venkata Rama, 144, 149,
— Parshad v. Gandharp ..	590	215, 724, 825
Singh ..	580	Velliyammal v. Katha Chetty ..	399
Umbasunker v. Tooljaram ..	580	Velu v. Chamu ..	312
Umed v. Nagindas ..	117	Vencata v. Venkummal ..	715
Umrihanath v. Goureenath, 59, 345,		Vencatachella v. Parvatham ..	747
365		Vencatapatthy v. Lutchmee ..	476
Umroot v. Kulyandas ..	541, 779	Venilal v. Parjaram ..	720, 795
Unide Rajah v. Pemmasamy ..	530	Venkaji v. Vishnu ..	854
Unnoda v. Erskine ..	379	Venkamma v. Savitramma ..	283
Unnopoorna v. Gunga ..	391, 426	Venkanna v. Aitamma ..	619
Upendra v. Thanda ..	715

	PAGE		PAGE
Venkappa v. Jivaji ..	149	Vinayek Narayan v. Govindrav
Venkappaiya v. Visvesvaraiya ..	391	Chintaman ..	256
Venkata r. Narayya ..	62, 636	— v. Luxumeebaee, 720, 826,
— v. Rajagopala ..	636	829, 831
— v. Subadra ..	171, 175, 197	Virabadrachari v. Kuppammal ..	605
— v. Suriya, 541, 554, 885, 886		Virabadhra v. Guruvenkata ..	488
Venkatachalam v. Venkatasami, 62		— v. Hari Rama ..	511
Venkatacharyulu v. Ranga-		Virakumara v. Gopalu ..	551
charyulu ..	102	Viraragava v. Ramalinga ..	183
Venkatachella v. Chinnaiya, 476, 484		Viraragavamma v. Samudrala ..	464
— v. Thathammal ..	500	Vira Rayen v. Valia Rani ..	311
Venkatachellamiah v. P. Narain-		Viraramuthi v. Singaravelu ..	603
apah ..	583, 585	Virasami v. Varada ..	453
Venkatachallapati v. Subbarayadu,		Virasangappa v. Rudrapa, ..	560,
756		828, 887
Venkatachellum v. Venkataswamy,		Virasvami v. Appasvami, 112, 611, 614
263		— v. Ayyasvami ..	471, 475
Venkataghiri v. Chandra ..	697	Viravara v. Surya ..	524, 672
Venkatakrishna v. Chinnmakutti, 125		Virayya v. Hanumanta ..	174
Venkata Krishnamma v. Anna-		Virupakshappa v. Nilgangava ..	274
purnamma ..	158, 165	— v. Shidappa ..	289
Venkatalakshnamma v. Nara-		Visalakshi v. Sivaramien ..	259
saiya ..	161	Visalatchmi v. Subbu ..	495
Venkatammal v. Andiappa, 627, 646		Visalatchy v. Annasamy, 348, 360,
Venkatapetty v. Ramachendra ..	633	605, 614
Venkataram v. Venkata Lutchmee,		Vishnu v. Krishnen ..	58, 176, 388
751		— Keshav v. Ramchandra ..	291
Venkatarama v. Bhujanga, 828, 904		— Shambhog v. Manjamma, 613
— v. Meera Labai ..	472	Visvanathan v. Saminathan ..	99
— v. Senthivelu ..	393	Vishvanath v. Kristnaji ..	674
Venkataramanappa v. Munisami, 797		Vishvanadha v. Bungaroo ..	634
Venkataramayyan v. Venkata-		— v. Mootoo Moodely, 296
subramania ..	464, 471, 864	Vithal v. Ram Rao ..	778
Venkatasami v. Kuppaiyan, 434, 464		Vithaldas v. Jeshubai ..	715, 794
Venkatarayudu v. Venkataramsya, 358		Vithoba v. Bapu, 156, 165, 242, 251
Venkatasubramaniam v. Thayar-		Vithu v. Govinda ..	758
ammal ..	730, 896	Vitla Butten v. Yemenamma, 477, 554
Venkat Subba v. Puroshottam ..	809	Vittal r. Ananta ..	453
Venkatasurya v. Court of Wards, 58,		Vrandivandas v. Yamunabai, 240, 479,
214, 236, 256, 448, 555		603
Venkatasvami v. Subba Rau ..	296	Vudda v. Venkummah ..	605
Venkatesaiya v. Venkata Charlu, 183		Vullubhdas v. Thucker Gordhan-
Venkatramanna v. Brammanna, 495,		das ..	574
657		Vutsavoy v. Vutsavoy ..	752
Venkayya v. Lakshmayya ..	670	Vyanatroya r. Shivrambhat ..	496
— v. Venkata ..	273	Vyas Chimanlal v. Vyas ..	190, 204
Venkayyamma v. Venkatarama-		Vyadinada v. Nagammal ..	343
nayamma ..	573, 895	— v. Yeggia ..	767
Venkopadhyaya v. Kavari ..	619	Vythilinga v. Vijithammal, 105, 182
Venku v. Mahalinga ..	63
Verabai v. Bai Hiraba ..	149	WAGHELLA RAJ SANJI v. Shekh
Vidyapurna v. Vidyaniidhi ..	584	Masludin ..	286
Violet Nevin, re ..	276	Wajed Hossein v. Nankoo ..	389, 463
Vijaya v. Sripati ..	618	Wajiban v. Kadir ..	285
Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman, 171, 690,		Wajid v. Ibad Ali ..	542
830, 834, 903		Waman Raghupati v. Krishnaji, 31,
Vinayek v. Gopal Hari ..	634	188
— v. Govind ..	853, 860	Wannathan v. Keyakadath ..	500

	PAGE		PAGE
Watson v. Ram Chand Dutt	.. 382	Yarlagadda Mallikarjuna v. Y.
— v. Sham Lal Mitter	.. 284	Durga	.. 61
Wenlock v. River Dee Co.	.. 485	v. Y. Durga, 616,619,635
Wilkinson v. Joughin	.. 239	Yashvantrav v. Kashibai	.. 613
Woodoyaditte v. Mukoond	.. 524	Yejuamoorty v. Chavaly	.. 544
Wooma Pershad v. Girish Chunder	.. 807	Yekeyamian v. Agniswarian, 450, 639
Wopendro v. Thanda	.. 715	Yeknath v. Warabai	.. 272
Wulubhram v. Bijlee	.. 886	Yellawa v. Bhimangavda	.. 627
YAD RAM v. Umrao..	.. 600	Yenumula v. Ramandora, 341,351,736
Yamunabai v. Manubai	.. 609	Yethirajulu v. Mukuntu	567, 768
Yanumula v. Boochia	351, 358	Yetiraj v. Tayammal	.. 715
Yarakalamma v. Anakala	.. 204	Yetteyapooram Zemindary, 603, 746
Yaramati v. Chundra	.. 596	Young v. Peachey	.. 596
		ZAMOONA BOYEE v. Narayan	.. 119

ADDENDA.

Cases upon the following subjects have appeared while this edition was passing through the Press. The references in brackets show the page in the text where the matter is discussed.

ADOPTION, evidence of (p. 203)—

Achal Ram v. Kasim Husain, 32 I.A., p. 121; S. C., 32 All., p. 290.

authority to adopt operates like power of appointment (p. 259)—

Yethirajulu v. Mukunthi, 28 Mad., 363.

estate of widow with authority before she adopts (p. 153)—

Amulya v. Kalidas, 32 Cal., 861.

relationship of adopting mother to natural father immaterial (p. 177)—

Jaisingh Pal v. Bijai Pal, 27 All., 417.

reason for consent to act of widow (p. 156)—

Narayanasami v. Mangammal, 28 Mad., 315.

evidence of consent (p. 161)—

Bhimappa v. Basawa, 29 Bom., 40.

consent by father-in-law ineffectual, after his death (p. 156.—

Lakshmi Bai v. Vishnu, 29 Bom., 410.

authority incapable of execution (p. 146)—

Amulya v. Kalidas, 32 Cal., 861.

divesting estate of coparcener (p. 241)—

Bachoo v. Mankorebai, 29 Bom., 51.

of junior widow (p. 240)—

Narayanasami v. Mangammal, 28 Mad., 315.

BENAMIDAR, his right to sue (p. 599)—

Mutturayan v. Surna Samavaiyan, 28 Mad., 526.

CLASS, grant to, where some members incapable of taking (p. 506)—

Bhagabati v. Kalicharan, 32 Cal., 992.

CONJUGAL RIGHTS, restitution of (p. 119)—

Sahadur v. Rajwanta, 27 All., 96.

GIFT, what amounts to change of possession (p. 500)—

Bibi Khaver v. Rukhia Sultan, 29 Bom., 468.

to a mother involves no presumption that it is only for life (p. 525)—

Atul Krishna v. Sanyasi Churn, 32 Cal., 1051.

ADDENDA.

- INHERITANCE, words creating estate of in grant to female (p. 522)— Basunta v. Kamakshya, 32 I. A., 181; Atul Krishna v. Sanyasi Charn, 32 Cal., 1051.
- MAINTENANCE, presumption as to its duration (p. 524) — Tituram v. Cohen, 32 I. A., 185; S. C., 28 Mad., 508.
- ODDH TALUQDARS (p. 358 note)—
Sheo Singh v. Raghubans, 32 I. A., 203.
- PRIMOGENITURE AND IMPARTIBILITY, custom and proof of (p. 61) —
Kachi Kaliyana v. Kachi Yuva, 32 I. A., 269; S. C., 28 Mad., 508; Shyamanand v. Ram Kanta, 32 Cal., 6; Sarabjit v. Inderjit, 27 All., 96.
- SURETY, son's liability for father's debt as (p. 389)— Chettikulam v. Chettikulam, 28 Mad., 377.
- WILL, what document cannot be proved as (p. 579)— Chaitanya v. Dayal, 32 Cal., 1082.

ERRATA.

- PAGE 91, 9th line from bottom, for "father-in-law" read "mother's father."
- 6th line from bottom, for "the father-in-law" read "her father."

HINDU LAW AND USAGE.

CHAPTER I.

ON THE NATURE AND ORIGIN OF HINDU LAW.

§ 1. UNTIL very lately, writers upon Hindu Law have assumed, not only that it was recorded exclusively in the Sanskrit texts of the early sages, and the commentaries upon them, but that those sages were the actual originators and founders of that law. The earliest work which attracted European attention was that which is known as the Institutes of Manu. People talk of this as the legislation of Manu; as if it was something which came into force on a particular day, like the Indian Penal Code, and which derived all its authority from being promulgated by him. Even those who are aware that it never had any legislative authority, and that it only described what its author believed to be, or wished to be, the law, seem to imagine that those rules which govern civil rights among Hindus, and which we roughly speak of as Hindu law, are solely of Brahmanical origin. They admit that conflicting customs exist, and must be respected. But these are looked on as local violations of a law which is of general obligation, and which ought to be universally observed; as something to be checked and put down, if possible, and to be apologised for, if the existence of the usage is proved beyond dispute.

Authority of Sanskritlawyers

§ 2. On the other hand, those who derived their knowledge of law not from books, but from acquaintance with Hindus in their own homes, did not admit that the Brahmanical law had any such universal sway. Mr. Ellis, speaking of Southern India, says: "The law of the not universal.

Smritis, unless under various modifications, has never been the law of the Tamil and cognate nations" (a). The same opinion is stated in equally strong terms by Dr. Burnell and by Mr. Nelson in recent works (b). And Sir H. S. Maine, writing with special reference to the North-West of India, says: "The conclusion arrived at by the persons who seem to me of highest authority is, first, that the codified law—Manu and his glossators—embraced originally a much smaller body of usage than had been imagined, and, next, that the customary rules, reduced to writing, have been very greatly altered by Brahmanical expositors, constantly in spirit, sometimes in tenor. Indian law may be in fact affirmed to consist of a very great number of local bodies of usage, and of one set of customs reduced to writing, pretending to a diviner authority than the rest, exercising consequently a great influence over them, and tending, if not checked, to absorb them. You must not understand that these bodies of custom are fundamentally distinct. They are all marked by the same general features; but there are considerable differences of detail" (c).

§ 3. I believe that even those who hold to their full extent the opinions stated by Mr. Ellis and Mr. Nelson would admit that the earliest Sanskrit writings evidence a state of law which, allowing for the lapse of time, is the natural antecedent of that which now exists. Also, that the later commentators describe a state of things which, in its general features, though not in all its details, corresponds fairly enough with the broad facts of Hindu life. For instance, in reference to the condition of the undivided family, the order of inheritance, the practice of adoption, and the like. The proof of the latter assertion seems to me to be ample. As regards Western India, we have a body of customs, which cover the whole surface of domestic law, laboriously ascer-

(a) 2 Stra. H. L., 163. See the futwals of the pundits, Inderun v. Ramasawmy, 13 M. I. A., 149; S. C., 3 B. L. R., 1; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 41.

(b) Introduction to the Daya-Vibhaga, 13; Varadarajah, 7; Nelson's View of Hindu Law, Preface and Chap. i.; Nelson's Scientific Study of Hindu Law (1881).

(c) Village Communities, 52.

Written and unwritten law substantially similar.

tained by local inquiry, and recorded by Mr. Steel; whilst many of the most important decisions in Borrodaile's Reports were also passed upon the testimony of living witnesses. As regards the North-West Provinces and the Punjab, we have similar evidence of the existing usages of Hindus proper, Jains, Jats, and Sikhs, in the decisions of the Courts of those provinces. As regards other parts of India, the evidence is much more scanty. But it is a matter of every-day experience that, where there exists a local usage opposed to the recognised law-books, it is unhesitatingly set up and readily accepted. As for instance, the exclusion of women from inheritance in Sholapur, and the practice of divorce and second marriages of females among the Maravers in Southern India. No attempt has ever been made to administer the law of the Mitakshara to the castes which follow the Marumakatayem law in Malabar, and the Alya Santana law in Canara, because it was perfectly well known that their usages were distinct. Elsewhere that law is administered by native Judges, with the assistance of native pleaders, to native suitors, who seek for and accept it. If this law was not substantially in accordance with popular feeling, it seems inconceivable that those who are most interested in disclosing the fact should unite in a conspiracy to conceal it. That there is such an accordance appears to me to be borne out by the remarkable similarity of this law to the usages of the Tamil inhabitants of the north of Ceylon, as stated in the Thesawaleme (d). But the question remains, whether these usages are of Brahmanical, or of local, origin? Whether the flavour of Brahmanism, which pervades them, is a matter of substance, or of accident? Where usage and Brahmanism differ, which is the more ancient of the two?

§ 4. It is evident that this question is one of the greatest practical importance, and is one which a judge must frequently, though perhaps unconsciously, answer before he can decide a case. For instance, it is quite certain that

Priority of usage or Brahmanism important.

(d) See as to this work, post § 44.

religious efficacy is the test of succession according to Brahmanical principles. If, then, one of two rival claimants appears to be preferable in every respect, except that of religious efficacy, the judge will have to determine whether the system which he is administering is based on Brahmanical principles at all. So as regards adoption, a Brahman tests its necessity and its validity solely by religious motives. If an adoption is made with an utter absence of religious necessity or motive, a judge would have to decide whether religion was an essential element in the transaction or not.

Sanskrit law
based on usage :

§ 5. My view is that Hindu law is based upon immemorial customs, which existed prior to, and independent of, Brahmanism. That, when the Aryans penetrated into India, they found there a number of usages either the same as, or not wholly unlike, their own. That they accepted these, with or without modifications, rejecting only those which were incapable of being assimilated, such as polyandry, incestuous marriages, and the like. That the latter lived on a merely local life, while the former became incorporated among the customs of the ruling race. That when Brahmanism arose, and the Brahman writers turned their attention to law, they at first simply stated the facts as they found them, without attaching to them any religious significance. That the religious element subsequently grew up, and entwined itself with legal conceptions, and then distorted them in three ways. First, by attributing a pious purpose to acts of purely secular nature. Secondly, by clogging those acts with rules and restrictions suitable to the assumed pious purpose. And, thirdly, by gradually altering the customs themselves, so as to further the special objects of religion, or policy, favoured by Brahmanism.

not on direct authority.

§ 6. I think it is impossible to imagine that any body of usage could have obtained general acceptance throughout India, merely because it was inculcated by Brahman writers, or even because it was held by the Aryan tribes. In Southern India, at all events, it seems clear that neither Aryans nor Brahmans ever settled in sufficient numbers to produce any such result (e). We know the tenacity with which Eastern races cling to their customs, unaffected by the example of those who live near them. We have no reason to suppose that the Aryans in India ever attempted to force their usages upon the conquered races, or that they could have succeeded in doing so, if they had tried. The Brahman treatises themselves negative any such idea. There is not an atom of dogmatism, or controversy, among the old Sutra writers. They appear to be simply recording the usages they observed, and occasionally stop to remark that the practices of some districts, or the opinions of other persons are different (f). The greater part of Manu is exclusively addressed to Brahmans; but he takes pains to point out that the laws and customs of districts, classes, and even of families ought to be observed (g). Example and influence, coupled with the general progress of society, have largely modified ancient usages; but a wholesale substitution of one set of usages for another appears to me to be equally opposed to philosophy and to facts.

§ 7. The most distinctive features of the Hindu law are the undivided family system, the order of succession, and the practice of adoption. The two latter are at present thoroughly saturated with Brahmanism. Its influence upon the family has only been exerted for the purpose of breaking it up. But in all cases, I think it will be satisfactorily shown that Brahmanism has had nothing whatever to do with the early history of those branches of the law; that these existed independently of Brahmanism, or even of Aryanism, and that where the religious element has entered into, and remodelled them, the change in this direction has Distinctive features not Brahmanical.

(e) See Hunter's Orissa, i., 241, 265; Nelson's View, chaps. i. & ii.; Madura Manual, Pt. II., p. 11, Pt. III., ii.

(f) See Apast., ii., vi., 14, § 6—9; Gaut., xxviii., § 26, 40. Dr. Jolly, referring to the differences of doctrine among the Sutra writers, says: "It is hardly possible to trace this diversity of doctrine to another cause than the difference of popular usage subsisting between the divers times and countries in which the existing Dharmasutras had originated." (Jolly, Lect. 40.)

(g) See post § 42; see M. Müller, A. S. L., 50.

been absolutely modern. This view will be developed at length in the course of the present work. It will be sufficient here briefly to indicate the nature of the argument.

Joint Family system.

§ 8. The Joint Family is only one phase of that tendency to hold property in community which, it is now proved, was once the ordinary mode of tenure. The attention of scholars was first drawn to this point by the Slavonian Village Communities. But it is now placed beyond doubt that joint ownership of a similar character is not limited to Slavonian, or even to Aryan, races; but is to be found in every part of the world, where men have once settled down to an agricultural life (h). In India, such a corporate system is universally found, either in the shape of Village Communities, or of the simple Joint Family. So far from the system owing its origin to Brahmanism, or even to Aryanism, its most striking instances are found precisely in those provinces where the Brahman and Aryan influence was weakest. As regards the Village Communities, the Punjab and the adjoining districts are the region in which alone they flourish in their primitive vigour. This is the tract which the Aryans must have first traversed on entering India. Yet it seems to have been there that Brahmanism most completely failed to take root. Dr. Muir cites various passages from the Mahabharata, which establish this. The inhabitants, "who dwell between the five rivers which are associated with the Sindhu (Indus) as the sixth," are described as "those impure Bahikas, who are outcasts from righteousness." "Let no Arya dwell there even for two days. There dwell degraded Brahmans, contemporary with Prajapati. They have no Veda, no Vedic ceremony, nor any sacrifice." "There a Bahika, born a Brahman, becomes afterwards a Kshatriya, a Vaiciya, or a Sudra, and eventually a barber. And again the barber becomes a Brahman. And once again the Brahman there is born a slave. One Brahman alone is born in a family. The other brothers act as they will without restraint" (i). And they retain this character to the present day, as we shall see that with them the religious element has never entered into their secular law. Next to the Punjab the strongest traces of the Village Community are found among the Dravidian races of the South. Similarly as regards the Joint Family. It still flourishes in its purest form, not only undivided but indivisible, among the polyandrous castes of Malabar and Canara, over whom Brahmanism has never attempted to cast even the hem of its garment. Next to them, probably, the strictest survival of the undivided family is to be found in northern Ceylon, among the Tamil emigrants from the South of India. It is only when the family system begins to break up that we can trace the influence of Brahmanism, and then the break up proceeds in the direct ratio of that influence (k).

(h) See Laveleye Propriété and Sir H. S. Maine's Works, passim.

§ 9. The case of inheritance is even more strongly in favour of the same view. The principle that "the right of inheritance, according to Hindu law, is wholly regulated with reference to the spiritual benefits to be conferred on the deceased proprietor," has been laid down on the highest judicial authority as an article of the legal creed which is universally true, and which it would be heresy to doubt. It is strictly and absolutely true in Bengal. It is not so elsewhere (l). Among the Hindus of the Punjab, the order of succession is determined by custom, and not by spiritual considerations (m). Throughout the Presidency of Bombay, numerous relations, and especially females, inherit, to whom no ingenuity can ascribe the slightest religious merit. According to the Mitakshara, consanguinity in the male line is the test of heirship, not religious merit. All those who follow its authority accept agnates to the fourteenth degree, whose religious efficacy is infinitesimal, in prefer-

Law of inheritance.

(i) Muir, S. T., ii., 482. See, too, Baden-Powell—the Indian Village Community, 1896, 181—186.

(k) See post chap. vii., § 261.

(l) This was long since pointed out by Professor Wilson. See his Works, v., 14. Sir H. S. Maine has also had the hardihood to hint a disbelief of the doctrine. Village Communities, 53.

(m) Punjab Customs, 11; Punjab Customary law, ii., 100—142.

ence to cognates, such as a sister's son, whose capacity for offering sacrifices ranks very high. The doctrine that heirs are to be placed in the direct order of their spiritual merit was announced, for the first time, by Jimuta Vahana, and has been expanded by his successors. But it rendered necessary a complete remodelling of the order of succession. Cognates are now shuffled in among the agnates, instead of coming after them; and the very definition of cognates is altered, so as to exclude those who are actually named as such by the Mitakshara. The result is a system whose essence is Brahmanism, and whose logic is faultless; but which is no more the system of early India, or of the rest of India, than the English Statute of Distributions (n). In Bengal, the inheritance follows the duty of offering sacrifices. Elsewhere, the duty follows the inheritance.

Law of adoption.

§ 10. The law of adoption has been even more successfully appropriated by the Brahmans, and in this instance they have almost succeeded in blotting out all trace of a usage existing previous to their own. There can be no doubt that, among those Aryan races who have practised ancestor-worship, the existence of a son to offer up the religious rites has always been a matter of primary importance. Where no natural-born son exists, a substituted son takes his place. This naturally leads to the practice of adoption. But apart from all religious considerations, the advantages of having a son to assist a father in his life, to protect him in his old age, and to step into his property after his death would be equally felt, and are equally felt, by other races. We know that the Sudras practised adoption, for even the Brahmanical writers provide special rules for their case. The inhabitants of the Punjab and North-West Provinces, whether Hindus proper, Jains, Jats, Sikhs, or even Muhammedans, practise adoption, without religious rites, or the slightest reference to religious purposes. The same may be said of the Tamils in Ceylon. Even the Brahmanical works admit that the celebration of the name, and the perpetuation of the lineage, were sufficient reasons for affiliation, without reference to the rescue of the adopter's soul from Hell. In fact some of the very earliest instances mentioned are of the adoption of daughters. This latter practice is followed to the present day by the Bheels, certainly from no motives of piety, and by the Tamils of Ceylon. There can, I think, be no doubt that if the Aryans brought the habit of adoption with them into India, they also found it there already; and that the non-Aryan races, at all events, derive it from their own immemorial usage, and not from Brahmanical invention. There seems, also, every reason to believe that, even among the Aryan Hindus, the importance now ascribed to adoption is comparatively recent. Little is to be found on the subject in the works of any but the most modern writers, and the majority of the ancient authors rank the adopted son very low among the subsidiary sons. The series of elaborate rules, which now limit the choice of a boy, are all the offspring of a metaphor; that he must be the reflection of a son. These rules may be appropriate enough to a system which requires the fiction of actual sonship for the proper performance of religious rites; but they have no bearing whatever upon affiliation, which has not this object in view, and, as we shall find, they are disregarded in many parts of India where the practice of adoption is strongly rooted. Yet the Brahmans have created the belief that every adoption is intended to rescue the soul of a progenitor from Put, and that it must be judged of solely by its tendency to do so. And our tribunals gravely weigh the amount of religious conviction present to the minds of persons, not one of whom probably connects the idea of religion with the act of adoption, more than with that of procreation (o).

(n) As to the whole of this, see chap. xvi.

§ 11. If I am right in the above views, it would follow that races who are Hindu by name, or even Hindu by religion (p), are not necessarily governed by any of the written treatises on law, which are founded upon, and developed from, the Smritis. Their usages may be very similar, but may be based on principles so different as to make the developments wholly inapplicable. Possibly all Brahmans, however doubtful their pedigree, may be precluded, by a sort of estoppel, from denying the authority of the Brahmanical writings which are current in their district (q). But there can be no pretence for any such estoppel with regard to persons who are not only not Brahmans, but not Aryans. In one instance, a very learned judge, after discussing a question of inheritance among Tamil litigants, on the most technical principles of Sanskrit law, wound up his judgment by saying, "I must be allowed to add that I feel the grotesque absurdity of applying to these Maravers the doctrine of Hindu Law. It would be just as reasonable to give them the benefit of the Feudal Law of real property. At this late day it is, however, impossible to act upon one's consciousness of the absurdity" (r). I must own I cannot see the impossibility. In Northern and Western India, the Courts have never considered themselves bound to apply these principles to sects who did not profess submission to the Smritis. In the case of the Jains, for instance, research has established that their usages, while closely resembling those of orthodox Hinduism, diverge exactly where they might be expected to do, from being based on secular, and not on religious, principles (s). The Bengal Court, as might be anticipated, is less tolerant of heresy. But it is certainly rather startling to find it assumed as a matter of course that the natives of Assam, the rudest of our provinces, are governed by the Hindu law as modified by Jimuta Vahana (t). It would be curious to enquire whether there was any reason whatever for this belief, except the fact that appeals lay to the High (p) Many of the Dravidian races, who are called Hindus, are worshippers of snakes and devils, and are as indifferent to Vishnu and Siva as are the inhabitants of Whitechapel.

Limited applicability of Sanskrit law.

(o) Manu gives a preference to the eldest son, on the ground that he alone has been begotten from a sense of duty, ix., § 118, 119. See this subject discussed at length, post ch. v., § 135, et seq.

(q) See Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan, 7 Mad. H. C., 255.

(r) Holloway, J., Muttu Vizia v. Dorasinga, 6 Mad. H. C., 341.

(s) Post § 46.

(t) Deepo Debia v. Gobindo Deb, 16 Suth., 42; S. C., 11 B. L. R., 131.

Court of Bengal. It is a singular and suggestive circumstance that the Oriya chieftains of Orissa and Ganjam, who are identical in origin, language and religion, have been supposed to follow different systems of law; the system ascribed to each being precisely that which is most familiar to the Courts to which they are judicially subject (u).

§ 12. On the other hand, while I think that Brahmanical law has been principally founded on non-Brahmanical customs, so I have little doubt that those customs have been largely modified and supplemented by that law. Where two sets of usage, not wholly reconcilable, are found side by side, that which claims a divine origin has a great advantage in the struggle for existence over the other (v). Further, a more highly developed system of law has always a tendency to supplant one which is less developed. A very little law satisfies the wants of rude communities. As they advance in civilization, and new causes of dispute arise, they feel the necessity for new rules. If they have none of their own, they naturally borrow from their neighbours. Where evidence of custom is being given, it is not uncommon to find a native saying, "We observe our own rules. In a case where there is no rule we ask the pundits." Of course the pundit, with much complacency, produces from his Shasters an answer which solves the difficulty. This is first adopted on his authority, and then becomes an accretion to the body of village usage. This process would, of course, be aided by the influence which the Brahmans always carry with them, by means of their intellectual superiority. Dr. Jolly points out that a large number of law Commentaries and Digests have been written either by Indian Kings and Prime Ministers themselves, or under their auspices and by their order (Jolly, Lect. 27). The Hindu Brahmanism has modified usage.

(u) See as to Orissa, note to Bishenpivea v. Soogunda, 1 S. D., 37 (49, 51). But in a case reported by Mr. MacNaghten from Orissa, in 1813, the fatwah was certainly given according to Mitakshara law. 2 W. MacN., 306. In the case of Parbati Kumara v. Jagadis Chunder, both the Courts of India treated it as undoubted that Orissa was governed by Mitakshara law. 29 L. A., pp. 85, 88; S. C., 29 Cal., pp. 440, 442. No decision on the point was given by the Privy Council. As to Ganjam, see Raghunadha v. Brozo Kishoro, 3 L. A., 154; S. C., 1 Mad., 69; S. C., 25 Suth., 291.

(v) See Maine's Vill. Com., 52.

judges were also Brahmans. Both writers and judges would naturally tinge native usages with their own views, and supplement them by their own doctrines. The change must have gone on with great rapidity during the last century, when so many disputes were referred to the decision of our Courts, and settled in those Courts solely in accordance with the opinions of the pundits (w).

§ 13. The practical result of this discussion, so far as it may turn out to be well founded, seems to be—First, that we should be very careful before we apply all the so-called Hindu Law to all the so-called Hindus. Secondly, that in considering the applicability of that law, we should not be too strongly influenced by an undoubted similarity of usage. Thirdly, that we should be prepared to find that rules, such as rules of inheritance, adoption, and the like, may have been accepted from the Brahmans by classes of persons who never accepted the principles, or motives, from which these rules originally sprung; and therefore, lastly, that we should not rashly infer that a usage, which leads to necessary developments, when practised by Brahmans, will lead to the same developments, when practised by alien races. It will not do so, unless they have adopted the principle as well as the practice. Without both, the usage is merely a branch severed from the trunk. The sap is wanting, which can alone produce growth (x).

(w) See post § 40. The following remarks, drawn from the Census of 1891, appear to have an important bearing on the subject:—"Hinduism includes a fluctuating mass of beliefs, opinions, usages and observances, social and religious ideas, the exact details of which it is impossible to reduce to anything like order, and in the most diverse aspects of which it is impossible to recognise anything that is common. A belief in the religious superiority of Brahmans, veneration for the cow, and respect for the distribution of castes, are the elements of Hinduism, which are most generally recognised as fundamental. But each and all of these has been rejected, or is rejected by tribes, castes or sects, whose title to be included amongst Hindus is not denied."—(Census of 1891, N.-W. Province Report, 192. "As a general rule it would seem that it is more the effect of the exclusiveness of their Hindu neighbours than the efforts of the Gosains, which induces these rude tribes to change their social status. For, after all, it is a matter of social status more than anything else. Hinduism asks for very little in the way of dogma or belief. A man may be a theist or shamanist; it is all one so long as he conforms to certain prescribed usages; and if he consents to conform to them he is rewarded by a recognised place in the Hindu system, without being troubled by questions regarding the orthodoxy of his religious beliefs."—Census of 1891, Assam Report I., 84.

(x) For a full discussion as to the cases in which Hindu law is made the rule of decision in the Courts of British India, see W. & B. (3rd ed.), 1—7. Where a person fails to establish that he conforms to any religion which carries with it any special form of law, his rights will be dealt with according to "justice, equity and good conscience." Raj Bahadur v. Bishen Dyal, 4 All., 343.

CHAPTER II.

THE SOURCES OF HINDU LAW.

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1. The Smritis , § 15. | 3. Schools of Law , § 33. |
| 2. The Commentators , § 25. | 4. Judicial Decisions , § 35. |

§ 14. I PROPOSE in this chapter to examine the sources of Hindu Law, so far as they are to be found in the writings of the early Sanskrit sages and their commentators. A general reference to the accessible authorities on this branch of the subject is given below (a). I have not thought it necessary to give special references, unless where the statement in the text was still a matter of controversy; nor have I attempted to make a show of learning, which I do not possess, by referring at length to the works of Hindu writers, of whom I know nothing but their names. Under this branch of the subject, I shall offer some observations upon those differences of opinion, which are generally spoken of as constituting various "schools of law." I shall conclude by making some remarks upon the influence which our judicial system has exercised upon the natural development of Hindu Law. The important subject of Custom will be reserved for the next chapter.

§ 15. I. THE SMRITIS.—The great difficulty, which meets us in the study of Hindu Law, is to ascertain the date to which any particular statement should be referred. Chronology has absolutely no existence among Hindu writers.

Chronology
non-existent.

(a) See M. Müller's Ancient Sanskrit Literature; Dr. Bühler's Introduction to the Digest of Hindu Law by West and Bühler; Colebrooke's Prefaces to the Daya Bhaga and the Digest, and his note, 1 Stras. H. L., 315; the Preface to Sir Thomas Strange's Hindu Law; Dr. Burnell's Prefaces to his translations of the Daya Vibhaga and Varadrajah, and the introduction to the first volume of Morley's Digest; Stenzler's Preface to his translation of Yajnavalkya; Dr. Jolly's Preface to Narada; Mayr, Ind. Erbrecht, 1—10, where the conclusions of Professor M. Müller and Dr. Bühler are adopted; Professor Monier Williams' Indian Wisdom; N. Mandlik's Introduction and Appendix I.; Dr. Bühler's Introductions to Apastamba and Gautama, Vasishtha and Baudhayana, and Manu; Dr. Jolly's Introduction to Vishnu. Sacred Books of the East, Vols. II, VII, XIV and XXV. R. Sarvadhikari, § 4; Jolly, Lect. 1—69; Jolly, Recht und Sitte, Chap. 1.

They deal in a vast, general, way with cycles of fabulous length, which, of course, have no relation to anything real. It is impossible to ascertain when the earliest sages lived, or whether they ever lived. Most of the recorded names are probably purely mythical. Tradition is of no value when it has a fable for its source. Names of indefinite antiquity are assumed by comparatively recent writers, or editors, or collectors of texts. Even when we can ascertain the sequence of certain works, it is unsafe to assume that any statement of law represented an existing fact. To a Hindu writer, every sacred text is equally true. Maxims, which have long since ceased to correspond with actual life, are reproduced, either without comment, or with a non-natural interpretation. Extinct usages are detailed, without a suggestion that they are extinct, from an idea that it is sacrilegious to omit anything that has once found a place in Holy Writ. In short we have exactly the same difficulty in dealing with our materials as a palæontologist would find, if all the archaic organisms which he compares had been discovered, not reposing in their successive strata, but jumbled together in a museum.

§ 16. The two great categories of primeval authority are the Sruti and the Smriti. Somewhere in the order of precedence, either between the Srutis and the Smritis, or more probably after them, come the Puranas, which, according to Colebrooke, "are reckoned as a supplement to the Scripture, and, as such, constitute a fifth Veda" (b). The Sruti is that which was seen or perceived in a revelation, and includes the four Vedas. The Smriti is the recollection handed down by the Rishis, or sages of antiquity (c). The former is of divine, the latter of human, origin. Where the two conflict, if such a conflict is conceivable, the latter must give way. Practically, however, the Sruti has little, or no, legal value. It contains no statements of law, as such, though its statements of facts are occasionally referred to as conclusive evidence of a legal usage. Rules, as distinct from instances, of conduct are, for the first time, embodied in the Smriti. The Smriti, again, are found on examination to fall under two heads, viz., works written in prose, or in prose and verse mixed, and works written wholly in verse. The latter class of writings, being fuller and clearer, are generally meant when the term Smriti is used; but it properly includes both classes. To Professor Max Müller we owe the important generalisation that the former, as a rule, are older than the latter. His views may be summarised as follows (d).

(b) Per Mahmood, J., Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 All., p. 289.
(c) Manu, ii., §§ 9, 10; W. & B., 25; Jolly, Recht u. Sitte, 2.

§ 17. The first duty of a Brahman was to study the Sutras. Vedas. These were orally transmitted for many ages before they were committed to writing, and orally taught, as they are even at the present time (e). Naturally many various versions of the same Veda arose, and sects or schools were formed, headed by distinguished teachers, who taught from these various versions. To facilitate their teaching they framed Sutras or strings of rules, chiefly in prose, which formed rather a memoria technica by which the substance of the oral lessons might be recalled, than a regular treatise on the subject. Every department of the Vedas had its own Sutras. Those which related to the rules of practical life, or law, were known as the Dharma-Sutras, and these last again were as varied as the sects, or Charanas, from which they originated, and bore the names of the teachers by whom they were actually composed, or whose views they were supposed to embody. Thus the Dharma-Sutras, which bear the name of Apastamba, Baudhayana, Gautama and the like, contain the substance of the rules of law imparted in the Charanas which recognized those teachers as their heads, or which had adopted those names. Works of this class are known to have existed more than two hundred years before our era. Professor

(d) See his letter to Mr. Morley, 1 M. Dig. Introd., 196; A. S. Lit., pp. 125-134, 260, 377; W. & B., 31.

(e) See as to the introduction of writing, A. S. Lit., 497; Ind. Wisdom, 252.

Max Müller places the Sutra period roughly as ranging from B.C. 600-200. But the composition of these works may have continued longer, and it cannot be asserted of any particular Sutra now in existence that it is of the age above specified.

§ 18. The Dharma-Sutras, which bear the names of Gautama, Baudhayana, Apastamba, Vasishtha and Vishnu have been translated, the last named by Dr. Jolly and the others by Dr. Bühler (f). As to their relative antiquity, Gautama is the oldest of all, being quoted by Baudhayana who ranks next in order of time. He belonged to the school of the Sama Veda. His use of the word Yavana, a term applied in very early Indian parlance to the Greeks, has been supposed to mark his period as not earlier than 300 B.C. The word, however, appears to have had other applications, and Dr. Bühler considers that it would be unsafe to found any opinion upon its use. At present nothing else is known by which the date of Gautama can be even approximately fixed (g). Next in point of time is Baudhayana. His Sutras were originally studied by the followers of the Black Yajurveda alone, but subsequently were accepted by all Brahmans as an authority on the Sacred Law. He was probably of Southern origin. Dr. Bühler considers that a period counted by centuries elapsed between his date and that of Apastamba, whom he places before the first century B.C. (h). Apastamba was also an inhabitant of Southern India, probably of the Andhra district, and a follower of the same Veda as Baudhayana. He is remarkable for the uncompromising vigour with which he rejects certain practices recognized by the early Hindu Law, such as the various species of sons, the Niyoga and the Paisacha form of marriage (i). Ex-

(f) Sacred Books of the East, Vols. II., VII and XIV.

(g) Bühler's Introduction to Gautama, 45, 49, 56; Jolly, Recht u. Sitte, 5.

(h) Bühler's Introduction to Baudhayana, 29, 35, and to Apastamba, 18, 22, 40. Dr. Jolly considers that the 4th Prasna of Baudhayana, which is almost wholly written in verse, is probably a later addition, and that the 3rd is also open to suspicion, Recht u. Sitte, 4.

(i) Bühler's Introduction to Apastamba, 16, 18, 30, 34; Jolly, Recht u. Sitte, 3.

cept from quotations contained in his work there is nothing to show the date of Vasishtha. He knew of Yama, Gautama, Harita, and a Manu, the author of the Manava Sutras. He may perhaps be supposed to have known Baudhayana. Dr. Jolly considers that he quoted from Vishnu, but in this opinion Dr. Bühler differs from him. Vasishtha appears to have been a native of the Northern part of India (k). No tradition exists as to the authorship of the Vishnu-Sutra. Dr. Bühler and Dr. Jolly agree in thinking that in its present form it has been recast with additions by those who, ignorant of its origin, wished to attribute it to the God Vishnu. Much of the work, both in style and substance, bears the mark of extreme antiquity, and portions of it are thought by Dr. Jolly to have been borrowed by Vasishtha or even by Baudhayana. He, like Vasishtha, was a follower, of the black Yajurveda (l). Harita, Hiranyakesin, Uçanas, Yama, Kaçyapa and Çankha, all of whom are quoted in Colebrooke's Digest and by the commentators, are also of the Sutra period. Of these Harita is earlier than Baudhayana, and Hiranyakesin is later than Apastamba (m).

A manuscript of Harita has lately been found at Nasik. From the account of it given by Dr. Jolly, it would appear to contain much which, in language and subject, evidences great antiquity, combined with passages on the law of debts and on judicial procedure which are quite of a modern character. Not only, therefore, is the manuscript untrustworthy in much which it contains, but it is thoroughly defective in what it ought to contain. Numerous quotations from Harita, which are found in Baudhayana and Apastamba, and even in Hemadri, a writer of the 13th century, are wanting in the Nasik copy. Harita is supposed by Dr. Jolly to be the earliest of the Smritis. The genuine portion of the manuscript (k) Bühler's Introduction to Vasishtha, 16, 17, 21, 25; Jolly, Recht u. Sitte, 6.

(l) Dr. Jolly's Introduction to Vishnu. Lectures, 38. W. & B., 35.

(m) Bühler's Introduction to Apastamba, 23, 27.

contains much upon ceremonial matters, moral precepts, impurity, penance and the like: but it does not lead us to suppose that we should derive from the complete work anything of a legal character, except, perhaps, indications of the dawning of secular law (n).

Dharma-Sastras generally more recent.

§ 19. The Dharma-Sastras, which are wholly in verse, Professor Max Müller considers to be merely metrical versions of previously-existing Dharma-Sutras. Dr. Bühler, after pointing out "that almost in every branch of Hindu science, where we find text-books in prose and in verse, the latter are only recent redactions of works of the former class," proceeds to say: "This view may be supported by some other general reasons. Firstly, if we take off the above-mentioned Introductions, the contents of the poetical Dharma-Sastras agree entirely with those of the Dharma-Sutras, whilst the arrangement of the subject-matter differs only slightly, not more than the Dharma-Sutras differ amongst each other. Secondly, the language of the poetical Dharma-Sutras and Dharma-Sastras is nearly the same. Both show archaic forms, and in many instances the same. Thirdly, the poetical Dharma-Sastras contain many of the Slokas or Gathas given in the Dharma-Sutras, and some in an apparently modified form. Instances of the former kind are exceedingly numerous. A comparison of the Gathas from Vasishtha, Baudhayana, Apastamba and Hiranyakesin with the Manu Smriti, shows that more than a hundred of the former are incorporated in the latter." And he goes on to point out other instances in which passages of Manu are only modernised versions of passages now existing in Vasishtha's Sutra. In one case Manu (viii., § 140) quotes Vasishtha on a question of lawful interest, and the passage so quoted is still extant in the Sutras of that author. The result in Dr. Bühler's opinion is that "it would seem probable that Dharma-Sastras, like that ascribed to Manu and Yajnavalkya, are versifica-tions of older Sutras, though they, in their turn, may be older than some of the Sutra works which have come down to our times" (o). A third work of a similar class is that known by the name of Narada. All of these are now accessible to English readers (p). As to relative age they rank in the order in which they are named. Their actual age is a matter upon which even proximate certainty is unattainable.

(n) Recht u. Sitte, 8.

§ 20. The Code of Manu has always been treated by Hindu sages and commentators, from the earliest times, as being of paramount authority, an opinion, however, which does not prevent them from treating it as obsolete whenever occasion requires (q). No better proof could be given of its antiquity. Whether it gained its reputation from its intrinsic merits, or from its alleged sacred origin; or whether its sacred origin was ascribed to it in consequence of its age and reputation, we cannot determine. The personality of its author, as described in the work itself, is upon its face mythical. The sages implore Manu to inform them of the sacred laws, and he, after relating his own birth from Brahma, and giving an account of the creation of the world, states that he received the Code from Brahma, and communicated it to the ten sages, and requests Bhrigu, one of the ten, to repeat it to the other nine, who had apparently forgotten it. The rest of the work is then admittedly recited, not by Manu but by Bhrigu (r). Manu, the ancestor of mankind, was not an individual, but simply the impersonal

(o) W. & B., 42.

(p) Yajnavalkya has been wholly translated in German by Professor Stenzler (1849). An English translation of the whole of the second Book, and of part of the first, has been made by Dr. Roer (Calcutta, 1859). The entire work has lately been translated by Mr. V. N. Mandlik (Bombay, 1880). Vrihaspati, whom Dr. Bühler classes in the same category, is only known by fragments cited by the commentators, and by Jagannatha in his Digest.

(q) See Preface by Sir W. Jones, p. 11, and general note at the end, p. 363 (London, 1796). V. N. Mandlik, Introduction, 46. Per curiam, 14 M. I. A., 570. Not only is Manu revered by the Hindu lawyers, but he is referred to as of supreme weight by the Buddhist writers of Burmah, Siam and Java. Jolly Recht u. Sitte, 41-44.

(r) Manu, i., § 1-60, 119; iii., § 16; viii., § 204; xii., § 1. This fiction of recital by an early sage is a sort of common form in Hindu works of no great antiquity. W. & B., Introd., 24 (2nd ed.).

and representative man. What is certain is, that among the Brahmanical schools was one known as the school of the Manavas, and that they used as their text for teaching a series of Sutras, entitled the Manava-Sutras. The Dharma-Sutras of this series are unfortunately lost, but it may be supposed that they were, to a great extent, the concentrated essence from which the Manava Dharma-Sastras were distilled. Whether the sect took its name from a real teacher called Manu, or from the mythical being, cannot now be known (s).

His age.

§ 21. The age of the work in its present form is placed by Sir W. Jones at 1280 B.C.; by Schlegel at about 1000 B.C.; by Mr. Elphinstone at about 900 B.C.; and by Professor M. Williams at about the 5th century B.C. (t). Professor Max Müller would apparently place it as a post-Vedic work, at a date not earlier than 200 B.C. (u). One of his reasons for this view, viz., that the continuous slokas in which it is written did not come into use until after that date, has been shown not to be beyond doubt, as Professor Goldstücker has established their existence at an earlier period (v). In order to determine the question of age, it is necessary to settle whether the present rescension of Manu is the earliest or the latest of the many which undoubtedly existed. The introduction to Narada states that the work of Manu originally consisted of 1,000 chapters and 100,000 slokas. Narada abridged it to 12,000 slokas, and Sumati again reduced it to 4,000. The treatise which we possess has been supposed to be a third abridgment, as it only extends to 2,685. We also find a Vridhha, or old, Manu quoted, as well as a Brihant, or great, Manu (w). Further, while the existing Manu quotes from Vasishtha a rule which is actually found in his Various versions.

(s) A. S. Lit., 532; 1 M. Dig. Introd., 197; Ind. Wisd., 213; Jolly, Lect. 47, Recht u. Sitte; 18 Bühler's Introduction to Manu, 14, 40, 91, 57, 63.

(t) Ind. Wisd., 215; Elphinstone, 227; Stenz. Pref. to Yajnavalkya, 10.

(u) A. S. Lit., 61, 244.

(v) Dr. Jolly shows that these epithets have no historical significance, and that in general the authors to whose names they are appended are more recent than those with the same names and without the epithet, Lect., 65.

(w) W. & B., 42.

treatise, Vasishtha in turn quotes from Manu verses two of which are found still, and two of which are not found, one of these latter being in a metre unknown to our Manu. Obviously, the interval between the Manu quoted by Vasishtha, and the Manu who quotes Vasishtha, must be very considerable. Further, Baudhayana quotes Manu for a proposition exactly the reverse of that now stated by him (ix., § 89). Even in a work so late as the 6th century A.D. verses are cited from Manu which can only be found in part in the existing work. The same fact would be apparent, as a matter of internal evidence, from the contradictions in the code itself. For instance, it is impossible to reconcile the precepts as to eating flesh-meat (x), or as to the second marriage of women (y). Even as regards men, some passages seem to indicate that a man could not marry again during the life of his first wife, while in others second marriages are expressly recognized and regulated (z). So the texts which refer to the marriage of a Brahman with a Sudra woman (a), and to the procreation of children upon a widow for the benefit of the husband (b), are evidently of different periods. In former treatises Dr. Bühler had been disposed to accept the view that the Manu which we possess was the most recent form of the work. In the introduction to his present translation, he has examined the whole question again and has reached a different result. He considers that the Manu which we now possess was a compilation founded partly on a Sutra work of the Manava school of very much greater antiquity and partly upon a floating mass of proverbial wisdom which already existed in metrical form. From this latter source the compiler, Manu, and the author of the Mahabharata (3rd to 5th century A.D.) drew independently of each other, though, in some instances, the Mahabharata appears to have borrowed directly from the present Manava-Smriti, which it distinctly names. Further, he

(x) Manu, iv., § 250; v., § 7-57; xi., § 156-159.
 (y) Manu, v., § 157, 160-165; ix., § 65, 76, 175, 176, 191.
 (z) Manu, v., § 167; viii., § 204; ix., § 77-87, 101, 102.
 (a) Manu, iii., § 13-19; ix., § 148-155, 178; x., § 64-67.
 (b) Manu, ix., § 56-66, 120, 143, 162-165, 167, 190, 191, 203.

relies on the discovery first made by Dr. Jolly that the Dharma-Sastra of Vrihaspati (Circ. 600, A.D.), of which only fragments now exist, was founded on a text of Manu apparently the same as that which we have. On the whole, he arrives at the conclusion that Bhrigu's Samhita is the first and most ancient recast of a Dharma-Sastra, attributed to Manu, which latter must be identified with the Manava Dharma-Sutra. Though this recast must be considered the work of one hand, the possibility that single verses may have been added later or altered is of course not excluded. The age of this version he places between the 2nd century B.C., and the 2nd century A.D. (e).

Yajnavalkya.

§ 22. Next to Manu in date and authority is Yajnavalkya. No Sutras corresponding to it have been discovered, and the work is considered by Professor Stenzler to have been founded on that of Manu. It has been the subject of numerous commentaries, the most celebrated of which is the Mitakshara, and is practically the starting point of Hindu law for those provinces which are governed by the latter. Of the actual author nothing is known. A Yajnavalkya is mentioned as the person who received the White Yajur-veda from the Sun, and this mythical personage is apparently put forward as the author of the law book. Of course the two works are widely distant in point of time, but Dr. Bühler is disposed to think that the Dharma-Sastras, known by the name of Yajnavalkya, may have been based on Sutras which proceeded from the school which followed the Vedic author, or perhaps even from that author himself (d). This, of course, is mere conjecture. As in the case of Manu, an "old" and a "great" Yajnavalkya are spoken of, evidencing the existence of several editions of the same work. Its date can only be determined approximately within wide limits. It is undoubtedly much later than Manu, as is shown by references to the worship of Ganesa and the planets, to

(e) Bühler's Introduction to Manu 75-90, 92-117. Introduction to Vasishtha 18-20; Jolly, Lect. 60; Recht u. Sitte, 14-18, 21.
(d) Yaj., i., § 1; iii., § 110; A. S. Lit., 329; W. & B., 47.

the use of deeds on metal plates, and the endowment of monasteries, while other passages, speaking of bald heads and yellow robes, are supposed to be allusions to the Buddhists (e). Professor Wilson points out that "passages taken from it have been found on inscriptions in every part of India, dated in the 10th and 11th centuries. To have been so widely diffused, and to have then attained a general character as an authority, a considerable time must have elapsed, and the work must date therefore long prior to those inscriptions." He considers that the mention of a coin, Nanaka, which occurs in Yajnavalkya, refers to one of the coins of Kanerki, and therefore establishes a date later than 200 A.D. This inference, however, is considered by Professor Max Müller to be very doubtful. Passages from Yajnavalkya are found in the Panchatantra, which cannot be more modern than the end of the 5th century, (f), and it is quoted wholesale in the Agni Purana, which is supposed to be earlier than the 8th century (g). It seems therefore tolerably certain that the work is more than 1,400 years old, but how much older, it is impossible to state (h).

His age.

§ 23. The last of the complete metrical Dharma-Sastras which we possess is the Narada-Smriti, which has been recently translated by Dr. Jolly. The work, as usual, is Narada.

(e) Yaj., i., § 270, 271, 272, 284, 318; ii., § 135.

(f) Wilson's Works, iv., 89.

(g) Wilson's Works, iii., 87, 90. See Stenzler's Preface, 10; A. S. Lit., 330.

(h) The above conclusions are substantially the same as those arrived at by Mr. V. N. Mandlik, in his Introduction, pp. 48-59. He says (p. 51): "From an examination of the Yajnavalkya Smriti and its comparison with others, I may roughly state that I consider it to be later than Manu, Vasishtha, Gautama, Çankha, Likhita, and Harita, nearly contemporaneous with Vishnu and prior to Parasara and others. It does not seem to have at any one time formed the distinct basis of the Aryan law, like Manu, Gautama, Çankha, Likhita, and Parasara; but as bearing the impress of the leading exponent of the doctrines of the White Yajur-veda, it formed the principal guide of the fifteen Sakhas of that Veda. These Sakhas, as we find from the Charana Vyaha and other authorities, have chiefly predominated in the countries to the North of the Narmada." At p. 49, he says: Yajnavalkya himself is only one of the numerous Smritikars, and his authority outside his own Sakha is of no peculiar importance." This latter statement seems inconsistent with the fact that the commentators of every district of India refer to, and rely on, his authority. Dr. Jolly says: "The composition of the metrical Smriti of Yajnavalkya cannot be referred to an earlier date than the first centuries A.D." Lect. 49. In his late work he places the probable date somewhere about the 4th century A.D. Recht u. Sitte, 21.

ascribed to the Divine sage Narada, and purports to have been abstracted by him from the second abridgment of Manu in 4,000 slokas. It differs from Manu, however, in many most important respects, which are enumerated by Dr. Bühler and Dr. Jolly. One point of even greater importance than any mentioned by them is the rank he gives to the adopted son. Manu places him third in the order of sons, and Narada places him ninth, thereby excluding him from the list of collateral heirs (i). It is, of course, possible, and I think probably, that in this respect Narada may be really following what was the original and genuine text of Manu. With this exception, if it be one, the whole of Narada is marked by a modern air as compared with Manu. Some of his rules for procedure in particular seem to anticipate the English principles of special pleading (k). The same mode of comparison also establishes that Narada is more recent than Yajnavalkya. On the other hand, his age is so much greater than that of the Mitakshara that he is not only quoted throughout that work, but quoted as one of the inspired writers. His views also appear to be of a more ancient character than those announced by Katyayana, Vrihaspati, Yama, and other Smritis referred to by the commentators. The result, according to Dr. Jolly, is that the Narada-Smriti should be placed about the 5th or 6th century, or perhaps a little later; that is to say, about midway between Yajnavalkya and the time when the Smritis ceased to be composed. Dr. Bühler has recently made the interesting discovery of a fragment of a larger rescension of Narada than the one translated by Dr. Jolly. It is evidently the edition which was used by the earliest commentators, as it contains texts ascribed by them to Narada which are not found in the existing and abridged form of the work. Unfortunately the fragment does not extend beyond v. 19. Narada is supposed by Dr. Jolly to have been a native of Nepal (l).

His age.

(i) Manu, ix., § 159; Nar., xiii., § 46. (k) See Nar., i., § 50-57.
(l) Jolly, Lect. 54; Recht u. Sitte, 21.

§ 24. Fragments of many metrical Dharma-Sastras, which are now lost, are to be found in the writings of commentators and in Digests. The most ancient and important of these are the verses of Vrihaspati and Katyayana. Both appear to belong to nearly the same epoch, probably about the 6th or 7th century, and to be founded upon Manu, with such enlargements and developments as a later form of society demanded (m). Of still later date is a class of Smritis, which are described by Dr. Bühler as "secondary redactions of metrical Dharma-Sastras." Under this head he enumerates "the various Smritis which go under the names of Angiras, Atri, Daksha, Devala, Prajapati, Yama, Likhita, Vyasa, Sankha, Sankha Likhita, Vriddha-Satatapa. All these works are very small and of little significance. That they are really extracts from, or modern versions of, more extensive treatises, and not simply forgeries, as has been supposed, seems to follow from this, that some of the verses quoted by the older commentators of Yajnavalkya and Manu, such as Vijnanesvara, are actually found in them, whilst they cannot be the original works which those lawyers had before them, because other verses quoted are not found in them. In the case of the Vriddha-Satatapa Smriti, the author himself states in the beginning that he only gives an extract from the larger work" (n). Of course, the texts contained in these works may be very ancient, though the editions which contain them are comparatively modern. Many of the names in the above list are actually enumerated by Yajnavalkya as original sources of law (o). They must, therefore, have existed, though not in their present shape, long before his time. Dr. Jolly treats it as "certain that the most recent metrical Smriti

Fragmentary
Dharma-Sastras.

Secondary
Smritis.

(m) Jolly, Lect. 60-64; Recht u. Sitte, 26.

(n) W. & B., 50. For complete list of the Smritis, see ibid., 13; 1 Morl. Dig., 193; Stokes, H. L. B., 5; Ind. Wisd., 211; V. N. Mandlik, xiv.; Jolly, Lect. 51; Recht u. Sitte, 23.

(o) "Manu, Atri, Vishnu, Harita, Yajnavalkya, Usanas, Angiras, Yama, Apastamba, Samvarta, Katyayana, Vrihaspati, Parasara, Vyasa, Sankha Likhita, Daksha, Gautama, Satatapa, and Vasistha, are they who have promulgated Dharma-Sastras." Yaj., i., § 4, 5. See an elaborate examination of these works. V. N. Mandlik, Appx. I.

fragments must be older than the 11th and 12th centuries, in which most of them are quoted as inspired writers by Vijnanesvara and Apararka, and older for the most part even than the 8th or 9th century in which many of them are quoted by Medhatilhi" (p).

Authority of Smritis.

§ 25. II. THE COMMENTATORS.—All the works which come under the head of Smritis agree in this—that they claim, and are admitted to possess, an independent authority. One Smriti occasionally quotes another, as one judge cites the opinion of another judge, but every part of the work has the same weight, and is regarded as the utterance of infallible truth. No doubt these Smritis exhibit the greatest difference in their statements, owing to the lapse of time, and, probably, in part to local peculiarities. Parasara, one of the latest of this class, recognized this difference, and its cause, and is recorded as laying down that the Institutes of Manu were appropriate to the Krita Yuga, or first age; those of Gautama to the Treta, or second age; those of Sankha and Likhita to the Dvapara, or third age; and his own to the Kali, or sinful age, which still continues (q). Unhappily the legal portion of his work, which we may imagine was founded on some attempt at historical principles, has disappeared. Later writers assume that the Smritis constitute a single body of law, one part of which supplements the other, and every part of which, if properly understood, is capable of being reconciled with the other (r). To a certain extent this may, perhaps, be true, as none of the Dharma-Sutras, or Dharma-Sastras, purport to cover the whole body of law (s). But the variances between them are not, and could not in the nature of things be, reconcilable. The unquestioning acceptance of the whole mass of Smritis in bulk could only arise—first, when their antiquity had become so great that the real

(p) Jolly, Lect. 68.

(q) 1 Stru. H. L. Pref., 12. Manu, as we now possess it, mentions all four ages, i., § 81—86.

(r) It seems doubtful whether Manu considered that any texts, except those of the Vedas, were necessarily true, and therefore reconcilable. See ii., § 14, 15.

s) W. & B. (2nd ed.), Intro., 3, 32; Stenz. Preface, 6.

Their antiquity.

facts which they represented had been forgotten, and that a halo of semi-divinity had encircled their authors; and, secondly, when the existing law had come to rest on an independent foundation of belief, so as to be able to maintain itself in defiance of the authorities on which it was based. A direct analogy may be found in modern theology, where systems of the most conflicting nature are all referred to the same documents, which are equally at variance with each other and with the dogmas which they are made to support.

§ 26. The earliest commentary on Yajnavalkya is that of Visvarupa. "The author of the Mitakshara at the very beginning of his work says that Yajnavalkya Smriti had before his term been explained at length by Visvarupa in words rather difficult to understand." His commentary is about two centuries older than that of Vijnanesvara. Till very lately it was supposed to be lost, but quite recently a copy was discovered in Malabar, which has been translated and published by S. Sitarama Sastri, a learned Vakil at the Madras Bar (t), who made it known to me. Visvarupa.

Far the weightiest of all the commentaries is that by Vijnanesvara, known as the Mitakshara (u). Its authority is supreme in the city and province of Benares, and it stands at the head of the works referred to as settling the law in the South and West of India. It is the basis of the works which set out the law in Mithila. In Bengal alone it is, to a certain extent, superseded by the writings of Jimut Vahana and his followers, while in Guzerat the Mayukha is accepted in preference to it, in the very few points on which they differ (v). The age of Vijnanesvara has been Mitakshara.

(t) Visvarupa Preface.

(u) The portion of this work, which treats of Inheritance, is familiar to students by Mr. Colebrooke's translation. The portion on Judicial Procedure has been translated by Mr. W. MacNaghten, and forms the latter part of the first volume of his work on Hindu law. A table of contents of the entire work will be found at the end of the first volume of Borrodalle's Reports (folio 1825).

(v) Colebrooke's note, 1 Stru. H. L., 317; W. & B., 10; Krishnaji v. Pandurang, 12 Bom. H. C., 65; Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 437; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; Gridhari Lal v. Government of Bengal, 12 M. I. A., 448; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 44; Jagannath Prasad v. Ranjit Singh, 25 Cal., p. 367.

fixed by recent research to be the latter part of the 11th century (w). His work is followed, with occasional, though slight, variances, by the writers to whom special weight is attributed in the other provinces.

Apararka.

Another commentator of little later date than Vijnanesvara is Apararka, a sovereign who reigned in the Konkan between 1140 and 1186. His views are very similar to those of the Mitakshara, which, however, he never mentions by name. His work is of paramount authority in Kashmir, and is referred to with respect by many of the later digests. A portion of it, stating the order of succession, has been translated by Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari (x).

Authorities in Southern India.

§ 27. The principal of the supplementary works in Southern India are the Smriti Chandrika, the Daya-Vibhaga, the Sarasvati Vilasa, and the Vyavahara Nirnaya (y). The Smriti Chandrika was written by Devanda Bhatta during the existence of the Vijayanagara dynasty in the Deccan, and his date is stated by Dr. Burnell and by Dr. Jolly to have been about the middle of the 13th century. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari places him a century earlier. The only translation as yet published is that by Kristnasawmy Iyer, Madras, 1867. Dr. Goldstücker is stated by Dr. Burnell (z) to have left an edition and translation ready for the Press; but it appears never to have been printed. The Sarasvati-Vilasa was written in the beginning of the 16th or, according to Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari, early in the 14th century by Pratapa Ruda Deva, one of the kings of Orissa. It has recently been translated by the Rev. Mr. Foulkes (a). To Dr. Burnell we owe translations of the two other works above mentioned. The Daya-Vibhaga was written by Madhaviya, who was prime minister of several kings of the (w) W. & B., 17.(x) Sarvadhikari, 426; W. & B., 18; Jolly, Lect. 13.(y) See Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, ante, § 26, note (v).(z) Pref. to Varadaja.(a) Foulkes' Preface to Sarasvati-Vilasa, vii.

Vijayanagara dynasty, and who flourished during the latter half of the 14th century. The Vyavahara-Nirnaya was written by Varadaraja, of whom his editor remarks: "it is impossible to say any more than that he was probably a native of the Tamil country, and lived at the end of the 16th or beginning of the 17th century."

§ 28. The works which supplement the Mitakshara in Western India. Western India. are the Vyavahara Mayukha, and the Viramitrodaya. Of these, the Mitakshara ranks first and paramount in the Maratha country and in Northern Kanara, and Ratnagiri, while in Guzerat, and apparently also in the Island of Bombay, the Mayukha is considered as the overruling authority when there is a difference of opinion (b). In Ahmednagar, Poona and Khandesh the Mayukha appears to be an authority equal to, though not capable of, over-ruling the Mitakshara (c). The Mayukha has been translated by Mr. Borrodaile, and quite recently by Mr. V. N. Mandlik. It is written by Nilakantha, whose family appears to have been of Mahratta origin, but settled in Benares. He lived about 1600 A.D., and his works came into general use about 1700. The Viramitrodaya was written by Mitra Misra, and, like the Mayukha, follows the Mitakshara in most points. Its composition may be assigned to the beginning of the 17th century (d). It has lately (1879) been translated by Golapchandra Sarkar Sastri. It is rather a Benares than a Bombay authority, and of inferior weight to the Mayukha in Western India (e). Other works of authority in Western India are mentioned by Dr. Bühler in his Introduction, but being untranslated I have not referred to them any further.

§ 29. In Mithila (or Tirhut and North Behar) the Mitak- Mithila.

(b) W. & B., 39, 11, 19; Krishnaji v. Pandurang, ante, § 26, note (v); Lallubhai v. Mankwarbai, 2 Bom., 418; Balkrishna v. Lakshman, 14 Bom., 605; Janki Bai v. Sundra, ib., 612, 623. The Mayukha is also said to be an authority paramount to the Mitakshara in the North Konkan. Sakharam v. Sitabai, 3 Bom., 353; Jankibai v. Sundra, 14 Bom., 624.

(c) Bhagirathi Bhai v. Kahnujirav, 11 Bom., 285, 294.(d) W. & B., 22.(e) Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 438, 466, ante, § 26, note (v); Dhondu Gurav v. Gangabai, 3 Bom., 369.

shara is also an authority, though the pundits of that district appear to be in the habit rather of referring to the Vivada Chintamani and Vyavahara Chintamani of Vachiespati Misra, whose laws they say "are to this day venerated above all others by the Mithilas," and the Ratnakara and the Vivada Chandra (f). The date of the first-named work is put by Mr. Colebrooke, writing in 1796, as ten or twelve generations previously, that is, about the middle of the 15th century. The Vivada Chintamani has been translated by Prossonno Coomar Tagore. The Ratnakara has been translated by Golapchandra Sarkar Sastri. It purports to be composed by Chandesvara Thakkura, prime minister and son of another Prime Minister Viresvara Thakkura. He styled himself the Conqueror of the Chiefs of Nepal, and from internal evidence is shown to have flourished in A.D. 1314. Of what king he was prime minister he vouchsafes no information. Of the other works, I only know the name.

§ 30. The two special works on adoption, viz., the Dattaka Chandrika and the Dattaka Mimamsa, possess at present an authority over other works on the same subject, which is, perhaps, attributable to the fact that they became early accessible to English lawyers and judges from being translated by Mr. Sutherland. Mr. W. H. MacNaghten says of them (g): "In questions relative to the law of adoption, the Dattaka Mimamsa and Dattaka Chandrika are equally respected all over India; and, where they differ, the doctrine of the latter is adhered to in Bengal and by the Southern jurists, while the former is held to be the infallible guide in the provinces of Mithila and Benares." This statement was accepted by the Judicial Committee in the Ramnad case (h), and has no doubt largely added to the weight which the works would otherwise have possessed. On the other hand, Mr. V. N. Mandlik states positively, as to the Bombay Presidency, that the Dattaka Mimamsa "was not even known to the people in original for many years after the publication of its translation under the auspices of Government. And now the people are guided by the Nirnaya Sindhu, the Viramitrodaya, the Kaustubha, the Dharma Sindhu, the Mayukhas, and not by the Mimamsa or the Chandrika" (i). Mr. W. H. MacNaghten had no special knowledge of Southern India. It is possible that he was equally mistaken as to the acceptance of these works in the Madras Presidency (k). Probably his belief that the Dattaka Chandrika was an authority in Southern India arose from his supposing that it was written by Devanda Bhatta, the author of the great southern work the Smriti Chandrika. But there seems strong reason to doubt this. The last verse of the original work expressly states that the author's name was Kuvera, but because the author avowed himself to be the writer of the Smriti Chandrika, which was supposed to be the well known production of Devanda Bhatta, the latter name was substituted by Mr. Sutherland in his translation (l). Now Mr. V. N. Mandlik points out that there were several works named Smriti Chandrika by different authors, and that there is strong internal evidence for supposing that the Dattaka Chandrika and the Smriti Chandrika of Devanda Bhatta were by different writers, while the influence possessed by the (i) V. N. Mandlik, Introduction, 73. See per Mahmood, J., 9 All., 322. West and Bühler say of the Dattaka Mimamsa and Dattaka Chandrika and the position to which they are entitled in Western India that "as supplementary to the Mitakshara and Mayukha these may fairly be regarded as the principal authorities," p. 864. In a Full Bench decision of the Bombay High Court the judges stated that the Dattaka Mimamsa and Dattaka Chandrika were regarded by the Court as the leading authorities on adoption, and they declined to allow the reasonings of Mr. Mandlik to alter the usage of the Court in that respect. Waman Raghupati v. Krishnaji, 14 Bom., 259. The same question, as to the weight to be ascribed to these works, arose still more recently in two cases from Allahabad. Beni Prasad v. Hardai Bibi, 14 All., 67. Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 17 All. (F. B., 294), in both of which the two treatises were held to be of slight authority, while, in the latter, Edge, C. J., entered into an elaborate argument to prove that Nanda Pandita was not an authority at all in Benares. Both these cases were considered on appeal by the Judicial Committee, and in each it was held that, although caution was required in accepting their glosses where they deviate from, or add to the Smritis, it was clear that both works must be accepted as bearing high authority for so long a time that they have become embedded in the general law. 26 I. A., pp. 131, 161.

(f) Rutcheputty v. Rajunder, 2 M. I. A., 134, 146; Coleb. Pref. to Dig., 19.

(g) W. MacN. Preface, xxiii. and p. 74.

(h) Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 437; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1. See also Rungama v. Atchama, 4. M. I. A., p. 27.

(k) See Nelson's Scientific Study, 87 n., citing a native of Madras on this point.

(l) Stokes H. L. B., 662.

former work in Bengal could only be accounted for by supposing that it was really written by Kuvera, who was a Bengal author (m).

Nanda Pandita, the author of the Dattaka Mimamsa, was a member of a Benares family, whose descendants of the ninth generation are stated by Mr. V. N. Mandlik to be still flourishing in Upper India. He must, therefore, have lived about 250 or 300 years ago (n). The Dattaka Chandrika is said to be the earlier work, though, of course, the doubt, as to its authorship, makes it impossible to fix the date with certainty (o).

A collection of texts on adoption from the Dattaka Mimamsa, the Dattaka Chandrika, and five other works on adoption has been published by Mr. P. C. Tagore (Calcutta, 1867) under the title Dattaka Ciromani. It is not yet translated. Dr. Jolly, as an appendix to his lectures, has translated the most important passages of this work.

Authorities in Bengal.

§ 31. In Bengal the Mitakshara, and the works which follow it, have no authority, except upon points where the law of that province is in harmony with the rest of India. In respect to all the points on which they disagree, the treatise of Jimuta Vahana is the starting point, just as that of Vijñanesvara is elsewhere. Little is known either of his identity or of his age. Mr. Colebrooke's suggestion that he may be identified with the founder of the dynasty of Cilahara in Western India is no longer tenable, as Cilahara himself has been proved to be a merely fabulous character. Many portions of his work are supposed to be a refutation of the Mitakshara, and he is expressly named and followed by Raghunandana, who lived in the beginning of the 16th century. On the other hand, he quotes the commentary of (m) V. N. Mandlik, Introduction, 73. In this opinion he is supported by Dr. Bühler (W & B., 10 n.) and by Dr. Jolly. The latter writer says that, in the opinion of eminent Bengal pundits, the name Kuvera is itself merely a nom de plume, Jolly, Lect. 22.

(n) V. N. Mandlik, Introduction, 72 and p. 486.

(o) Jolly, Lect. 22, per Banerji, J., 17 All., p. 313, Sutherland's Preface. Stokes H. L. B., 527.

Govindaraja, which was written in the 12th century. His date must lie between the 13th and 15th centuries (p). His authority must have been over-powering, as no attempt seems ever to have been made to question his views, except in minute details; and the principal works of the Bengal lawyers, since his time, have consisted in commentaries on his treatise. Particulars of these works will be found in Mr. Colebrooke's Prefaces to the Daya Bhaga and to Jagannatha's Digest. The Dayatatwa by Raghunandana has been translated by Golap Chandra Sarkar. The only other work of the Bengal school, which I know of in an English form, is the Daya Krama-Sangraha by Sri Krishna Tarkalankara, translated by Mr. Wynch. It is very modern, its author having lived in the beginning of the last century; but it is considered as of high authority. It follows, and develops, the peculiarly Brahmanical views of the Daya Bhaga.

Dr. Jolly suggests that the isolation¹ of the Bengal school may be more apparent than real, and may be accounted for by the loss of many works quoted in the Daya Bhaga, which may have formed intermediate links between the Bengal doctrines and the teaching of the other schools. Many of his doctrines may be traced to texts which are controverted in the Mitakshara, and some are identical with those of the Mithila writers (q).

§ 32. Before quitting this part of the subject, a few words should be said as regards two digests made under European influence. I mean the Vivadarnava Setu, compiled at the request of Warren Hastings, and commonly known as Halhed's Gentoo Code, from the name of its translator; and the Vivada Bhangarnava, compiled at the instance of Sir William Jones by Jagannatha Turkapunchanana, and translated by Mr. Colebrooke, which is generally spoken of as Jagannatha's or Colebrooke's Digest. The former work, Halhed's Code, in its English garb, is quite worthless. It was translated by Mr. Halhed, not from the original Sanskrit, of which he was ignorant, but from a Persian version supplied to him by his interpreter, which Sir W. Jones describes as "a loose, injudicious, epitome of the original Sanskrit, in which abstract many essential passages are omitted, though several notes of little consequence are interpolated from a vain idea of elucidating, or improving, the text" (r). No such drawback exists in the case of the latter work, which was translated by one who was not only the greatest Sanskrit scholar, but the greatest Sanskrit lawyer, whom England has ever produced. But Mr. Colebrooke himself early hinted a disapproval of Jagannatha's labours as abounding with frivolous disquisitions, and as discussing together the discordant opinions maintained by the lawyers of the several schools, without distinguishing which of them is the received doctrine of each school, or whether any of them actually prevail at present. This feature drew down upon the Digest the criticism of being "the best law-book for a Counsel and the worst for a Judge" (s). On the other hand, Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, who was of the greatest eminence as a Bengal lawyer, lately pronounced a high eulogium upon Jagannatha and his work, of whom he says: "I venture to affirm that, with the exception of the three leading writers of the Bengal school, namely, the author of the Daya Bhaga, the author of the Dayatatwa, and the author of the Daya-kramasangraha, the authority of Jagannatha Turkapunchanana is, so far as that school is concerned, higher than that of any other writer on Hindu law, living or dead, not even excluding Mr. Colebrooke himself" (t). It certainly seems to me that Jagannatha's work has fallen into rather undeserved odium. As a repertory of ancient texts, many of which are nowhere else accessible to the English reader, it is simply invaluable. His own commentary is marked by the minute balancing

(p) Jolly, Lect. 22; Sarvadhikari (403).

(q) Jolly, Lect. 25.

(r) Pref. to Colebrooke's Digest, 10.

(s) Pref. to Digest, 11; Pref. to Daya Bhaga; 2 Stra. H. L., 176; Pref. to Stra. H. L., 18.

(t) Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 13 B. L. R., 50; S. C., 19 Suth., 394.

of conflicting views, which is common to all Hindu lawyers. But as he always gives the names of his authorities, a very little trouble will enable the reader to ascertain to what school of law they belong. His own opinion, whenever it can be ascertained, may generally be relied on as representing the orthodox view of the Bengal school.

§ 33. The Mimamsa of Jaimini "consists chiefly of a critical commentary on the Brahmana or ritual portion of the Veda in its connection with the Mantras." "It does not concern itself, like the other systems, with investigations into the nature of Soul, Mind, and Matter; but with a correct interpretation of the ritual of the Veda, and the solution of doubts and discrepancies in regard to Vedic texts caused by the discordant explanations of opposite schools. Its only claim to the title of a philosophy consists in its mode of interpretation, the topics being arranged according to particular categories (such as authoritativeness, indirect precept, etc.), and treated according to a kind of logical method, commencing with the proposition to be discussed, the Purvapaksha or primâ facie and wrong view of the question, the Uttara-paksha a refutation of the wrong views, and the conclusion" (u). His age is unknown, but it must have been earlier than the Mitakshara, as passages from his works are referred to by Vijnaneswara as the Sutras of a venerable author (v). Though primarily intended for exposition of the Vedas, the rules laid down by Jaimini have been considered by later writers as authoritative in discussing doubtful questions of law (w).

In Mr. Siromani's Commentary on Hindu law (x), he gives 26 rules of interpretation, many of them being such

Rules of Interpretation.

(u) Indian Wisdom, 108: Mimamsa means investigation of the meaning of the Veda, ib. 214, note. Jaimini's treatise is also spoken of as the Purva or earlier Mimamsa, in opposition to the Uttara or later Mimamsa by Vyasa.

(v) Mit. I., 1, § 10; I., 9, § 11; IL. 1, § 34.

(w) (Colebrooke's Transactions of Royal Asiatic Society, II., 457. Golapchandra Sarkar on adoption, 74. Cited 14 All., p. 71). It has been partly edited and translated by Dr. Ballantyne; but is practically inaccessible to any but Sanskrit scholars.

(x) Calcutta, 1855, pp. 47-54.

as would be applied by any lawyer in the construction of a statute or document; as for instance, that an apparent contradiction of texts is to be ascribed to their applying to different fields of law, or by supposing that the one contains the general rule, and the other a special rule, or, in a very extreme case, by holding that the matter in question is optional, to do or not to do. As regards that apparent balancing of conflicting opinions, which is so common among Hindu writers, he states that "if the same text is interpreted in different ways, in the same work, then the interpretation last proposed is to be accepted as correct in the opinion of the author." "If two reasons are given, in the same clause, for any particular proposition, the reason last given is said to be by way of Sadhak or additional support, and the last reason may be rejected." "When, in order to establish any particular proposition, several reasons are given in successive clauses, each successive reason being preceded by such words as and, or, etc., then the reason last given is to be accepted as correct in the opinion of the author."

Jaimini's Rule.

§ 34. In a recent case, one of Jaimini's rules assumed great importance. The text to be interpreted was that of Vasishtha "Let no man give or receive an only son, since he must remain to raise up a progeny for the obsequies of ancestors." In reference to this text, Mr. Mandlik says (p. 499): "It is a rule of the Purva-Mimamsa that all texts supported by the assigning of a reason are to be deemed not as vidhi (an injunction), but simply as artha-vada (recommendatory). When a text is treated as an artha-vada, it follows that it has no obligatory force whatever." Accordingly, in the case which turned upon this text, it was treated as having no binding authority. When the Judicial Committee had to deal with this matter in appeal, they say of Jaimini's rule: "That if sound, would be conclusive as to Vasishtha's text. But it is rather startling, and a very intimate acquaintance with the Smritis would be needed before admitting its truth. It has not been brought forward in any case prior to this case from Allahabad. It may, however, fairly be argued that one who, having the power to give an absolute command, gives an injunction not expressed in unambiguous terms of absolute command, but resting on a reason, is addressing himself rather to the moral sense of his hearers than to their duty of implicit obedience" (y).

The rule, if finally accepted as a governing principle of interpretation, would be of such a far-reaching character, that it may be advisable to examine whether such a novel and disturbing element should be added to the difficulties which already encompass every discussion upon Hindu law. It must be admitted that the rule does not carry its own evidence with it, like a rule of grammar. Nor can it be shown that it was ever accepted by the Rishis, to whose words it is applied, or that it was thought of by anybody before it was evolved by Jaimini. Nor can it rest on his personal authority, unless it can be shown that it has received general acceptance as part of the law of the country. And here it is remarkable that during the present century, no previous instance can be produced in which it has been relied on by any pundit, or vakil, or Native Judge, though numberless cases must have arisen in which it would have settled the controversy. It must, therefore, rest upon some obvious accordance with natural logic, and must apparently harmonise with the style of the early sages. In the case of a merely earthly judge, if he states a rule of law without anything more, his statement carries with it exactly the weight due to his authority. If he proceeds to say why he states the law to be so, his reasons can be discussed and rejected. But in the case of the early sages, who are either themselves Divine, or are speaking the language of the Deity, every word, whether rule or reason, is equally inspired, and is entitled to equal respect. It is still necessary to put a construc-

Discussion of the Rule.

(y) Beni Prasad v. Hardai Bibi, 14 All., pp. 73, 106, 126; Radha Mohun v. Hardai Bibi, 26 I. A., p. 146; S. C., 21 All., 460.

tion upon the words, and to see whether the speaker intended to order, or to advise. But it is difficult to see how an apparent order, which it is impossible to disobey, can be deprived of its character, because it is followed by a reason, which it is impossible to dispute. The second branch of the test would involve an exhaustive examination of all the Smritis. A few instances, however, lie upon the surface, which suggest a doubt as to the practical value of the rule. Probably the earliest Rishi, who spoke of a widow as heir to her husband, is Vrihaspati. He states her right distinctly and positively, and then follows it up with the very satisfactory reason—"Of him whose wife is not deceased half the body survives. How should another take the property, while half the body of the owner lives?" (z). So Manu gives a reason for the position which he assigns to the son of an appointed daughter, and to the son of an ordinary daughter (a). No one, I suppose, doubts that these texts are mandatory. It is also to be remarked that, when a commentator cites a text which contains a reason, he generally leaves the reason out, as for instance, in quoting Vasishtha as to the adoption of an only son, and Vrihaspati as to the succession of a widow (b). This would indicate that he did not suppose that the reason nullified the text. Apparently the reason was intended to strengthen the injunction, where the sage was stating a rule which had not been laid down by his predecessors. It is probable that Jaimini's principles of interpretation, which were intended to elucidate Vedic ritual, are incapable of universal application to secular law.

Only two schools of Law.

§ 35. III. DIFFERENT SCHOOLS OF LAW.—The term "school of law," as applied to the different legal opinions prevalent in different parts of India, seems to have been first used by Mr. Colebrooke (c). He points out that there really are only two schools marked by a vital difference of opinion, viz., those who follow the Mitakshara, and those who follow the Daya Bhaga. Those who fall under the former head are again divided by minor differences of opinion, but are in principle substantially the same. Of course in every part of India, though governed by practically the same law, the pundits refer by preference to the writers who lived nearest to, and are best known to, themselves; just as English, Irish, and American lawyers refer to their own authorities, when attainable, on any point of general jurisprudence. This has given rise to the idea that there are as many schools of law as there are sets of local writers, and the sub-division has been carried to an extent for which it is impossible to suggest any reason or foundation. For instance, Mr. Morley speaks of a Bengal, a Mithila, a Benares, a Maharashtra, and a Dravida School, and sub-divides the latter into a Dravida, a Karnataka and an Andhra division (d). So the Madras High Court and the Judicial Committee distinguish between the Benares and the Dravida schools of law (e), and a distinction between an Andhra and a Dravida School has also received a sort of quasi-recognition (f). On the other hand, Dr. Burnell ridicules the use of the terms Karnataka and Andhra, which he declares to be wholly destitute of meaning, while the term Dravidian has a very good philological sense, but no legal signification whatever. Practically he agrees with Mr. Colebrooke in thinking that the only distinction of real importance is between the followers of the Mitakshara and the followers of the Daya Bhaga (g).

(z) 3 Dig., 456. (a) Manu IX., 130, 133, 139. (b) Mit. I., 11, § 11; II., 11, § 6. (c) 1 Stra. H. L., 315. As to the mode in which such divergences sprung up, see the remarks of the Judicial Committee in the Ramnad case, Collector of Madurai v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 435; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1.

§ 36. In discussing this subject, it seems to me that we Causes of variance.

(d) 1 M. Dig. Introd., 221. In this he is supported by Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari (p. 409), who (p. 334) traces the origin of divergent opinions on questions of law to the teaching of Srikara in the 11th century.

(e) See the Ramnad adoption suit, 2 Mad. H. C., 206; 12 M. I. A., 397, supra note (c).

(f) Narasammal v. Balaramacharlu, 1 Mad. H. C., 420.

(g) Pref. to Varadarajah, 5; Nelson's View of Hindu Law, 21; V. N. Mandlik: Introduction, 70. See the remarks of Mahmood, J., in Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 All., p. 290.

must distinguish between differences of law arising from differences of opinion among the Sanskrit writers, and differences of law arising from the fact that their opinions have never been received at all, or only to a limited extent. In the former case there are really different schools of law; in the latter case there are simply no schools. I think it will be found that the differences between the law of Bengal and Benares come under the former head, while the local variances, which exist in the Punjab, in Western, and in Southern, India, come under the latter head.

The Daya
Bhaga.

§ 37. Any one who compares the Daya Bhaga with the Mitakshara will observe that the two works differ in the most vital points, and that they do so from the conscious application of completely different principles. These will be discussed in their appropriate places through this work, but may be shortly summarised here.

First: the Daya Bhaga lays down the principle of religious efficacy as the ruling canon in determining the order of succession; consequently it rejects the preference of agnates to cognates, which distinguishes the other systems, and arranges and limits the cognates upon principles peculiar to itself (h).

Secondly: it wholly denies the doctrine that property is by birth, which is the corner-stone of the joint family system. Hence it treats the father as the absolute owner of the property, and authorises him to dispose of it at his pleasure. It also refuses to recognize any right in the son to a partition during his father's life (i).

Thirdly: it considers the brothers, or other collateral members of the joint family, as holding their shares in quasi-severalty, and consequently recognizes their right to dispose of them at their pleasure, while still undivided (k).

Fourthly: whether, as a result of the last principle, or upon independent grounds, it recognizes the right of a widow in an undivided family to succeed to her husband's share if he dies without issue, and to enforce a partition on her own account (l).

(h) See post Chap. xvi.

(i) See post § 248, 259.

(k) See post § 265.

It is usual to speak of the doctrine factum valet as one of universal application in the Bengal school. But this is a mistake. When it suits Jimuta Vahana, he uses it as a means of getting over a distinct prohibition against alienation by a father without the permission of his sons (m). I am not aware of his applying the doctrine in any other case. No Bengal lawyer would admit of any such subterfuge as sanctioning, for instance, the right of an undivided brother to dispose of more than his own share in the family property for his private benefit, or as authorising a widow to adopt without her husband's consent, or a boy to be adopted after upanayana, or marriage. The principle is only applied where a legal precept has been already reduced by independent reasoning to a moral suggestion. Dr. Wilson points out that even Jimuta Vahana never applies this principle, except to cases where, in his view of the law, a person is doing that which he is strictly entitled to do, though the exercise of the right violates a moral obligation to others (n).

§ 38. Now in all the above points, the remaining parts of India agree with each other in disagreeing with Jimuta Vahana and his followers. Their variances inter se are comparatively few and slight. For the most important is the difference, which exists between Western India and the other provinces which follow the Mitakshara, as to the right of females to inherit. A sister, for instance, who is excluded in Benares and Bengal, ranks very high in the order of succession in the Bombay Presidency, and many other heiresses are admitted, who would have no locus

Females in Western India.

(l) See post § 266, 479.

(m) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 30; Jolly, Lect. 113.

(n) Dr. Wilson's Works V., 71-74, Rao Balwant Singh v. Keshori, 25 I. A., p. 69; S. C., 20 All., p. 235. See a discussion upon the meaning and limitation of this doctrine, post § 155, 156.

standi elsewhere (o). Any reader of Indian history will have observed the public and prominent position assumed by Maharatta Princesses, and it seems probable that the doctrine, which prevails in other districts, that women are incapable of inheriting, without a special text, has never been received at all in Western India. Women inherit there, not by reason, but in defiance, of the rules which regulate their admission elsewhere. In their case, written law has never superseded immemorial custom (p).

Law of adoption.

§ 39. Another matter as to which there is much variance is the law of adoption. For instance, as regards the right of a widow to adopt a son to her deceased husband. In Mithila no widow can adopt. In Bengal and Benares, she can with her husband's permission. In Southern India, and in the Punjab, she can adopt, even without his permission, by the consent of his sapindas. In Western India, she can adopt without any consent (q). So as regards the person to be adopted. The adoption of a daughter's or a sister's son is forbidden to the higher classes by the Sanskrit writers. It is legal in the Punjab. It is commonly practised in the South of India (r). In all these cases we may probably trace a survival of ancient practices which existed before adoption had any religious significance, unfettered by the rules which were introduced when it became a religious rite. The similarity of usage on these points between the Punjab and the South of India seems to me strongly to confirm this view. It is quite certain that neither borrowed from the other. It is also certain that in the Punjab adoption is a purely secular arrangement. There seems strong reason to suppose that in Southern India it is nothing more (s). But what is of importance with regard to the present discussion is that these differences find no support in the writings of the

(o) Vyavahara Mayukha, iv., 8, § 19; W. & B., 127—132.

(p) See post § 517, 529, 531.

(q) See post § 112.

(r) See post § 135, 136.

(s) See post § 106.

early sages, or even of the early commentators. They appear, for the first time, in treatises which are absolutely modern, or merely in recorded customs. To speak of such variances as arising from different schools of law would be to invert the relation of cause and effect. We might just as well invent different schools of law for Kent and Middlesex, to account for Gavelkind and the customs of London. Even Hindu lawyers cannot alter facts. In some instances, they try to wrest some holy precept into conformity with the facts (t); but in other cases, and especially in Western India, the facts are too stubborn. The more closely we study the works of the different so-called schools of law, other than those of Bengal, the more shall we be convinced that the principles of all are precisely the same. The local usages of the different districts vary. Some of these usages the writers struggle to bring within their rules; others they silently abandon as hopeless. What they cannot account for, they simply ignore (u).

§ 40. IV. JUDICIAL DECISIONS.—A great deal has been said, often by no means in a flattering spirit, of the decisions upon Native Law of our Courts, whether presided over by civilian, or by professional, judges. It seems to be supposed that they imported European notions into the questions discussed before them, and that the divergences between the law, which they administered, and that which is to be found in the Sanskrit law-books, are to be ascribed to their influence. In one or two remarkable instances, no doubt, this was the case; but those instances are rare. My belief is that their influence was exerted in the opposite direction, and that it rather showed itself in the pedantic maintenance of doctrines whose letter was still existing, but whose spirit was dying away. It could hardly have been otherwise. It seems to be forgotten that upon all

Influence of English Judges.

(t) See, for instance, the mode in which four conflicting views as to the right of a widow to adopt have been deduced from a single text of Vasishtha, Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 435; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1.

(u) For instance, second marriages of widows, or wives which are equally practised in the North, the West, and the South of India, see post § 94.

The pundits.

disputed points of law, the English judges were merely the mouthpieces of the pundits who were attached to their Courts, and whom they were bound to consult (v). The slightest examination of the earliest reports, at a time when all points of law were treated as open questions, will show that the pundits were invariably consulted, wherever a doubt arose, and that their opinions were, for a long time, implicitly followed. If, then, the decisions were not in accordance with Hindu law, the fault rested with the pundits, and not with the judges. The tendency of the pundits would naturally be to magnify the authority of their own law-books; and, accordingly, we find that they invariably quoted some text in support of their opinion, even when the text had no bearing whatever upon the point. The tendency of the judges was even more strongly in the same direction. The pundit, however bigoted he might be, was, at all events, a Hindu, living amongst Hindus, and advising upon a law which actually governed the every-day lives of himself and his family and his friends. He would torture a sacred text into an authority for his opinion; but his opinion would probably be right, though unsustained by, or even opposed to, his text. With the English Judge there was no such restraining influence. He was sworn to administer Hindu law to the Hindus, and he was determined to do so, however strange or unreasonable it might appear. At first he accepted his law unhesitatingly from the lips of the pundits; and, so long as he did so, probably no great harm was done. But knowledge increased, and the fountains were opened up, and he began to enquire into the matter for himself. The pundits were made to quote chapter and verse for their opinions, and it was found that their premises did not warrant their conclusions. Or their opinions upon one point were compared with their opinions upon an analogous point, and found not to harmonise, and logic demanded that they should be brought into conformity with each other. Sometimes the variance between the futwahs and the texts was so great that it was ascribed to ignorance, or to corruption. The fact really was that the law had outgrown the authorities. Native judges would have recognized the fact. English judges were unable to do so, or else remarked (to use a phrase which I have often heard from the Bench), "that they were bound to maintain the integrity of the law." This was a matter of less importance in Bengal, where Jimuta Vahana had already burst the fetters. But in Southern India, it came to be accepted that Mitakshara was the last word that could be listened to on Hindu law. The consequence was a state of arrested progress, in which no voices were heard unless they came from the tomb. It was as if a German were to administer English law from the resources of a library furnished with Fleta, Glanville and Bracton, and terminating with Lord Coke (w).

(v) The pundits, as official referees of the Courts, were only abolished by Act XI of 1864.

§ 41. In Western and Northern India, the differences Force of usage. between the written and the unwritten law were too palpable to be passed over. Accordingly, in many important cases in Borrodaile's Reports, we find that the Court did not merely ask the opinion of their pundits, but took the evidence of the heads of the castes concerned as to their actual usage. The collection of laws and customs of the Hindu castes, made by Mr. Steele under the orders of Government, was another step in the same direction. It is probable that the laxity, which has been remarked as the characteristic of Hindu law in the Bombay Presidency, would be found equally to exist in many other districts, if the Courts had taken the trouble to look for it. In quite recent times the Courts of the N.-W. Provinces and of the Punjab have acted on the same principle of taking nothing for granted. The result has been the discovery that, while the actual usages existing in those districts are remarkably similar to those which are declared in the Mitakshara and the kindred works, there is a complete absence of those religious principles, which are so prominent in Brahmanical law. Consequently, the usages themselves have diverged exactly at the points where they might have been expected to do so (x). Absente causâ, abest et lex.

(w) The substance of this paragraph was written by me in an Indian journal so long ago as 1863. I mention the fact, lest it should be supposed that I have borrowed, without acknowledgment, from a very interesting passage in Sir H. S. Maine's Village Communities, p. 44.

(x) See Punjab Customs, 5, 11, 78. Sheo Singh Rai v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 382; aff'd. 5 I. A., 87; S. C., 1 All., 688; Chotay Lall v. Churno Lall, 6 I. A., 15; S. C., 4 Cal., 744.

CHAPTER III.

THE SOURCES OF HINDU LAW.

Custom.

§ 42. IF I am right in supposing that the great body of Custom binding existing law consists of ancient usages, more or less modified by Aryan or Brahmanical influence, it would follow that the mere fact that a custom was not in accordance with written law, that is, with the Brahmanical code, would be no reason whatever why it should not be binding upon those by whom it was shown to be observed. This is admitted in the strongest terms by the Brahmanical writers themselves. Manu says that "immemorial usage is transcendant law," and that "holy sages, well knowing that law is grounded on immemorial custom, embraced, as the root of all piety, good usages long established" (a). And he lays it down that "a king who knows the revealed law must enquire into the particular laws of classes, the laws or usages of districts, the customs of traders, and the rules of certain families, and establish their peculiar laws" (b): to which Kulluka Bhatta adds, as his gloss, "If they (that is, the laws) be not repugnant to the law of God," by which no doubt he means the text of the Vedas as interpreted by the Brahmins. But that Manu contemplated no such restriction is evident by what follows a little after the above passage. "What has been practised by good men and by virtuous Brahmins, if it be not inconsistent with the legal customs of provinces or districts, of classes or families, let him establish" (c). So Yajnavalkya says (d): "Of a newly-subjugated territory, the monarch shall preserve the social and religious usages, also the judicial system, and the state of classes, as they already obtained." And the Mitakshara

(a) Manu, i., § 108, 110.

(b) Manu, viii., § 41. See, too, Vrihaspati, cited Vyavahara Mayukha, i., 1, § 13, and Vasishtha and other authorities, cited M. Müller, A. S. Lit., 50.

(c) Manu, viii., § 46.

(d) Yajnavalkya, i., § 342.

quotes texts to the effect that even practices expressly inculcated by the sacred ordinances may become obsolete, and should be abandoned if opposed to public opinion (e).

Recognized by modern law.

§ 43. The fullest effect is given to custom both by our Courts and by legislation. The Judicial Committee in the Ramnad case said: "Under the Hindu system of law, clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law" (f). And all the recent Acts which provide for the administration of the law dictate a similar reference to usage, unless it is contrary to justice, equity or good conscience, or has been actually declared to be void (g).

Records of local customs.

§ 44. It is much to be regretted that so little has been done in the way of collecting authentic records of local customs. The belief that Brahmanism was the law of India was so much fostered by the pundits and judges, that it came to be admitted conventionally, even by those who knew better. The revenue authorities, who were in daily intercourse with the people, were aware that many rules which were held sacred in the Court, had never been heard of in the cottage. But their local knowledge appears rarely to have been made accessible to, or valued by, the judicial department. I have already mentioned, as an exception, Mr. Steele's collection of customs in force in the Deccan. In the Punjab and in Oudh most valuable records of village and tribal customs, relating to the succession to, and disposition of, land have been collected under the authority of the settlement officers, and these have been brought into relation with the judicial system by an enactment that the entries contained in them should be presumed to be true (h). Many most (e) Mitakshara, i., 3, § 4. See V. N. Mandlik, Introduction, 43, 70. Raghunandana, i., 33.

(f) Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 436; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1.

(g) See, as to Bombay, Bom. Reg. IV of 1827, s. 26; Act II of 1864, s. 15. As to Burmah, Act XVII of 1875, s. 5. Central Provinces, Act XX of 1875, s. 5. Madras, Act III of 1873, s. 16. Oudh, Act XVIII of 1876, s. 3. Punjab, Act XII of 1878, s. 1. See Sundar v. Khuman Singh, 1. All., 613.

(h) These records are known by the terms, Wajib-ul-arz (a written representation or petition) and Riwazi-i-am (common practice or custom). See Punjab interesting peculiarities of Punjab law will be found in a book to which I shall frequently refer, which gives the substance of these customs, and of the decisions of the Chief Court of Lahore upon them, and in three volumes issued under the authority of the Punjab Government on the same subject (i). The special interest of these customs arises from the fact, already noticed (k), that Brahmanism seems never to have succeeded in the Punjab. Accordingly, when we find a particular usage common to the Punjab and to Sanskrit law, we may infer that there is nothing necessarily Brahmanical in its origin (l). Another work of the greatest interest, which I believe no previous writer has ever noticed, is the Thesawaleme, or description of the Customs of the Tamil inhabitants of Jaffna, on the Island of Ceylon. The collection was made in 1707, under the orders of the Dutch Government, and was then submitted to, and approved by, twelve Moodelliar, or leading natives and finally promulgated as an authoritative exposition of their usages (m). Now, Thesawaleme.

Customs, 19; Act XXXIII of 1871, s. 61; XVII of 1876, s. 17. Lekraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh, 7 I. A., 63; S. C., 5 Cal., 744; Harbaj v. Guman, 2 All., 493; Isri Singh v. Ganga, ib., 876; Thakur Nitepal Singh v. Jai Singh, 23 I. A., 147; S. C., 19 All., 1; Muhammad Imam v. Sardar Husain, 25 I. A., 161; S. C., 26 Cal., 81. In the case of Uman Parshad v. Gandharp Singh, 14 I. A., 127; S. C., 15 Cal., 20, the Judicial Committee called attention to a practice which had grown up in Oudh of allowing the proprietor to enter his own views upon the Wajib-ul-arz, whereas it ought to be an official record of customs, arrived at by the inquiries of an impartial officer. See, too, per curiam, 12 All., 335, 15 All., p. 152. A Wajib-ul-arz, which has long stood on record, and been unquestioned by the parties who would be affected by it, is prima facie evidence of custom, though not signed by any landholder in the village. Kustam Ali v. Abbasi, 13 All., 407.

(i) Notes on Customary Law as administered in the Courts of the Punjab, by Charles Boulnois, Esq., Judge of the Chief Court, and W. H. Rattigan, Esq., Lahore, 1876. I cite it shortly as Punjab Customs. Punjab Customary Law. Edited by C. L. Tupper, C.S., Calcutta, 1881.

(k) Ante § 8.

(l) Mr. C. L. Tupper says of the Punjab, "The Brahmans are not in the Punjab the depositaries of Customary law. To ascertain it, we must go to the Tribal Council, if there be one, or to the elders of the tribe." It is not, I think, the custom which has modified the law. It is the Brahmanical law occasionally, and the Muhammedan law more often, which has modified the custom." Punjab Customary Law, II., 82, 86. Mr. Baden-Powell says "whatever early Aryan clans may have settled in the Punjab, they were non-Brahmanical." "In the Punjab clans there are no ancient Brahmanical monuments. The Hindu law of the books is unknown, and to this day local customs of various kinds, sometimes quite opposed to the later Hindu ideals, are in vogue." The Indian Village Community, 1896, 102.

(m) The edition which I possess was published in 1862, with the decisions of the English Court, by Mr. H. F. Mutukistna, who gave it to me.

we know that from the earliest time there has been a constant stream of emigration of Tamulians into Ceylon, formerly for conquest, and latterly for purposes of commerce. We also know that the influence of Brahmans, or even of Aryans, among the Dravidian races of the South has been of the very slightest, at all events until the English officials introduced their Brahman advisers (n). The customs recorded in the Thesawaleme may, therefore, be taken as very strong evidence of the usages of the Tamil inhabitants of the South of India two or three centuries ago, at a time when it is certain that those usages could not be traced to the Sanskrit writers. The suggestions derivable from the Thesawaleme may now be supplemented from information drawn from the records of the Pondicherry Courts. The early tribunals of this settlement, being gifted with a fortunate ignorance of Hindu law, had been in the habit of referring questions depending upon that law for the decision of the leaders of the caste, or of other persons supposed to possess a special knowledge of the laws or usages bearing on the case. This practice was formally recognised by a regulation of 1769, and in 1827 the Government established a Consultative Committee of Indian Jurisprudence to assist the administration and the tribunals in questions involving a knowledge of the Indian laws and usages. This committee consisted of nine Natives, selected with reference to their integrity and their knowledge of the laws, usages and customs, with a special preference for those whose fortunes guaranteed their independence. A great deal of most interesting information derived from these sources has lately been made available by the labours of Leon Sorg, Juge President du Tribunal de 1re Instance de Pondicherry (o). Undoubted evidence of the condition of Hindu law at a very much earlier period may also be found in the usages of the Nambudri Brahmans on the West Coast in Pondicherry.

Nambudri
Brahmans.

(n) See ante, § 6.

(o) Introduction a l'Etude du Droit Hindou, Traité Theorique et Pratique du Droit Hindou, 1897, Avis du Comité Consultatif de Jurisprudence Indienne, 1896.

the Madras Presidency. The tradition is that they were introduced into Malabar as an organised community by king Parasurama, and the evidence tends to show that they must have been settled there about 1200 or 1500 years ago. As they took their place among a community, which was governed by a totally different system, it may safely be assumed that the form of Hindu law, which prevails among the Nambudries of the present day, is that which was universal among the Brahmans of Eastern India at the time of their emigration. Its archaic character exactly accords with such a conclusion (p). Many very interesting customs still existing in Southern India will be found in the Madura Manual by Mr. Nelson; the Malabar Manual by Mr. Logan; the North Arcot Manual by Mr. Cox; the South Canara Manual by Mr. Sturrock; the Manual of the Administration of the Madras Presidency (1885) by Dr. Maclean, and in the Madras Census Report of 1871 by Dr. Cornish. The various reports contained in the census of 1891 also supply much valuable information of which I have made use in this edition. These show what rich materials are available, if they were only sought for.

§ 45. Questions of usage arise in four different ways in India: First, as regards races to whom the so-called Hindu law has never been applied; for instance, the aboriginal Hill tribes, and those who follow the Marumakattayem law of Malabar, or the Alya Santana law of Canara. Secondly, as regards those who profess to follow the Hindu law generally; but who do not admit its theological developments. Thirdly, as regards races who profess submission to it as a whole; and, fourthly, as regards persons formerly bound by Hindu Law, but to whom it has become inapplicable.

Various applications of customary law.

§ 46. The first of the above cases, of course, does not come within the scope of this work at all. The law which prevails upon the Malabar coast is, however, both so interesting in itself, and is so mixed up with, and bears so strongly upon Hindu Law proper, that I have discussed it at greater length in the present than in former editions. The distinction between the second and third classes is most important, as the deceptive similarity between the two is likely to lead to erroneous conclusions in cases where they really differ. For instance, in an old case in Calcutta, where a question of heirship to a Sikh was concerned, this question again turning upon the validity of a Sikh marriage, the Court laid it down generally that "the Sikhs, being a sect of Hindus, must be governed by Hindu Law" (q). Numerous cases in the Punjab show that the law of the Sikhs differs materially from the Hindu law, in the very points, such as adoption and the like, in which the difference of religion might be expected to cause a difference of usage. Similar differences are found among the Jats (r), and even among the orthodox Hindus of the extreme north-west of India (s). So as regards the Jains, it is now well recognised that, though of Hindu origin, and generally adhering to ordinary Hindu law, that is the law of the three superior castes. (t), they recognize no divine authority in the Vedas, and do not practise the Shradhs, or ceremony for the dead, which is the religious element in the Sanskrit law. Consequently, that the principles which arise out of this element do not bind them, and therefore, that their usages in many respects are completely different (u). I strongly suspect that

Cases where religious principles are ignored.

(p) Vasudevan v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad., 160, 181.

(q) Juggomohun v. Saumcoomar, 2 M. Dig., 43, followed Bhagwankuar v. Jogendra Chandra, 30 I. A., 249; S. C., 31 Cal., 11.

(r) The Jats (Sanskrit, Yadava) are the descendants of an aboriginal race. Manning's Ancient India, i., 66.

(s) See Punjab customs, passim. As to the effect of the introduction of the Punjab Code as creating a lex loci, see Mulka Do v. Mirza Jehan, 10 M. I. A., 252; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 55.

(t) Sheo Singh Rai v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 382; affd. 5 I. A., 87; S. C., I All., 688; Ambabai v. Govind, 23 Bom., 257.

(u) Bhagvandas v. Rajmal, 10 Bom. H. C., 241; see cases where such difference of usage was held not to be made out, Lalla Mohabeer v. Mt. Kundun, 8 Suth., 116; affd. Sub nomine Doorga Prasad v. Mt. Kundun, II. A., 55; S. C., 21 Suth., 214; S. C., 13 B. I. R., 235, Bachebi v. Mahan, 3 All., 55; Mari Devamma v. Jinnamma, 10 Mysore, 384. The religion of the Jains is a compound of Buddhism and Brahmanism. Elphinstone History of India, 108, Dubois most of the Dravidian tribes of Southern India come under the same head.

§ 47. Southern India is, except perhaps in some few hill or jungle districts, entirely occupied by Dravidian tribes, who differ in race, origin, colour and language from the Aryans. Nothing can be stated with certainty as to the time when the Aryan first penetrated into the South. It was, probably, much before the Christian era. "As far as is actually known from direct evidence, the first Aryans, who settled permanently in the South, were hermits who, by civilising the people round about them, gradually opened a pathway for more effectual invasions" (v). They never colonised, or even conquered it. "Southern India has no other connection with the Aryan race than that it has, for many ages, been under the influence of Aryan, in other words, of Brahman, administrators." At the present day the Brahmans are only 3 per cent. of the Southern Indian population. They are practically the only Aryans. There may be a few Vaisyas, or Kshatriyas; but their number is inappreciable. None of the existing Sudras can be recognised as Aryans, and it is doubtful whether any Aryan Sudras ever came to Southern India. Those who are now called Sudras are simply that large class of the community who, not being of the twice-born classes, are still recognised by the Brahmans as being within the pale of caste, as distinguished from the mere outcastes (w). Primâ facie one would not expect that Brahman laws and usages would have been widely accepted by an alien race. The Jesuit Bouchet, who lived in Madura in the beginning of the 18th century, stated that the natives whom he knew had no writings embodying their laws, and were governed entirely by Dravidian usage.

Appx. I, p. 693. Mr. Fergusson remarks on the curious identity between the architecture of South Canara under Jain influence and that of Nepal, cited by Mr. Logan, Malabar Manual, I, 184. They revere the gods of the Hindu Pantheon, but reject the Vedas. Their supreme deity is Narankar. Their Scriptures are the thirty-two sutras written by Mahavir. They neither reverence nor feed Brahmans. Census of 1891, Punjab Report, XIX, 181, 182.

(v) Man. Adm., Mad., I, 114.

(w) Id., 33, 37, Sorg Int., 46.

immemorial usage (x). The Abbé Dubois writing in reference to Mysore and the Southern parts of the Madras Presidency in the beginning of this century, says that there are two or three Hindu works which contain rules and directions concerning the administration of justice both civil and criminal, and mentions as the best known of these the Dharma-Sastras, the Niti-Sastras, and the Manu-Sastras; but he remarks that these books are quite beyond the comprehension of the majority of Hindus, and that their disputes are settled by common-sense and by customs handed down from father to son (y). M. Leon Sorg states that the decisions of the Pondicherry Court in the last century show that the Tamil population was ignorant of the Sanskrit law books, and even of the Sanskrit terms, such as Brahma, or Asura marriage, Stridhan, Sapinda or Bandhu. Only two cases are to be found which were referred to the pundits of Conjeveram, and in these the parties were Brahmans (z). At the present day all classes, even the majority of the hill and forest races, who are Muhammedans, call themselves Hindus, and even offer a nominal allegiance to the Vedic deities; but the real worship of the greater number is offered to the village deities, whose priests are never Brahmans, and who are propitiated by blood-sacrifices which are repugnant to Brahmanical feeling. Demons, serpents and even plants are also the object of an adoration, which is as much intended to propitiate against evil as to procure good (a). As regards a principle which is at the root of much of the Brahman law, it is stated "Homage to remote ancestors is not a practice among the Dravidians, though observances are paid to relatives lately deceased with the intent that they may not return to do harm to the living. Hero-worship is unknown to the Dravidians. They do not act with any hope of reward, or any fear of punishment, which will (x) Cited Sorg Int., 8.

(y) Dubois, 661-63.

(z) Sorg Int., 9.

(a) Census of 1891, XIII, 56-60; N. Arcot Man., I, 186-189; Man. Adm., Mad., I, 70-84.

arise after death" (b). "Again, it is part of the Brahmanical doctrine that a man must have a son to save him from hell; but this belief obtains little currency among the generality of the people, and the strong tendency to marriage has little, if any, connection with religious sentiments" (c).

§ 48. As regards those who profess submission to the Hindu law as a whole, questions of usage arise, first, with a view to determine the particular principles of that law by which they should be governed; and, secondly, to determine the validity of any local, tribal, or family exceptions to that law. Prima facie, any Hindu residing in a particular province of India is held to be subject to the particular doctrines of Hindu law recognized in that province. He would be governed by the Daya Bhaga in Bengal; by the Vivada Chintamani in North Behar and Tirhut; by the Mayukha in Guzerat, and generally by the Mitakshara elsewhere (d). But this law is not merely a local law. It becomes the personal law, and a part of the status of every family which is governed by it. Consequently, where any such family migrates to another province, governed by another law, it carries its own law with it (e). For instance, a family migrating from a part of India, where the Mitakshara or the Mithila system prevailed, to Bengal, would not come under the Bengal law from the mere fact of its having taken Bengal as its domicile. And this rule would apply as much to matters of succession to land as to the purely personal relations of the members of the family. In this respect the rule seems an exception to the usual principles, that the lex loci governs matters relating to land, and that the law of the domicile governs personal Disputed applicability of local law.

(b) Man. Adm., Mad., I, 71.

(c) Census, 1891, XIII, 128.

(d) See ante, § 26-31. Ram Das v. Chandra Dasia, 20 Cal., 409. As to Assam and Orissa, which are supposed to be governed by Bengal law, and Ganjam by the law of Madras, see ante, § 11.

(e) Ambabai v. Govind, 23 Bom., 257; Nilathi Ammi v. Subbaraya, 24 Mad., 650; Parbati Kumari v. Jagadis Chunder, 29 I. A., 82, S. C., 29 Cal., 453. This law will not necessarily be the law now prevailing in the domicile of origin, but that which did prevail there at the time of emigration. Vasudevan v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad., 157, 162.

relations. The reason is that in India there is no lex loci, every person being governed by the law of his personal status. The same rule as above would apply to any family which, by legal usage, had acquired any special custom of succession, or the like, peculiar to itself, though differing from that either of its original, or acquired, domicile (f).

Change of personal law.

§ 49. When such an original variance of law is once established, the presumption arises that it continues; and the onus of making out their contention lies upon those who assert that it has ceased by conformity to the law of the new domicile (g). But this presumption may be rebutted, by showing that the family has conformed in its religious or social usages to the locality in which it has settled; or that, while retaining its religious rites, it has acquiesced in a course of devolution of property, according to the common course of descent of property in that district, among persons of the same class (h).

Act of Government.

Of course the mere fact that, by the act of Government, a district, which is governed by one system of law is annexed to one which is governed by a different system, cannot raise any presumption that the inhabitants of either district have adopted the usages of the other (i).

Evidence of valid custom.

§ 50. The next question is as to the validity of customs differing from the general Hindu law, when practised by persons who admit that they are subject to that law. According to the view of customary law taken by Mr. Austin (k), a custom can never be considered binding until it has become a law by some act, legislative or judicial, of the sovereign power. Language pointing to the same view is to be found in one judgment of the (f) Rutcheputty v. Rajunder, 2 M. I. A., 182; Byjnath v. Kopilmon, 24 Suth., 95, and per curiam, Soorendronath v. Mt. Heeramonee, 12 M. I. A., 91, infra, note (g); Manik Chand v. Jagat Settani, 17 Cal., 518.

(g) Soorendronath v. Mt. Heeramonee, 12 M. I. A., 81; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 26; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 35; Obunnessurree v. Kishen, 4 Wym., 226; Sonatum v. Ruttin, Suth. Sp., 95; Pirthee Singh v. Mt. Sheo, 8 Suth., 61.

(h) Rajchunder v. Goculchund, 1 S. D., 43 (56); Chundro v. Nobin Soondur, 2 Suth., 197; Rambromo v. Kaminee, 6 Suth., 295; S. C., 3 Wym., 3; Junarudeen v. Nobin Chunder, Marsh., 232; per curiam, Soorendronath v. Mt. Heeramonee, 12 M. I. A., 96, supra, note (g).

(i) Prithee Singh v. Court of Wards, 23 Suth., 272.

(k) Austin, i., 148, ii., 229.

Madras High Court (l). But such a view cannot now be sustained. It is open to the obvious objection that, in the absence of legislation, no custom could ever be judicially recognized for the first time. A decision in its favour would assume that it was already binding. The sounder view appears to be that law and usage act, and re-act, upon each other. A belief in the propriety, or the imperative nature of a particular course of conduct, produces a uniformity of behaviour in following it; and a uniformity of behaviour in following a particular course of conduct produces a belief that it is imperative, or proper, to do so. When from either cause, or from both causes, a uniform and persistent usage has moulded the life, and regulated the dealings, of a particular class of the community, it becomes a custom, which is a part of their personal law. Such a custom deserves to be recognized and enforced by the Courts, unless it is injurious to the public interests, or is in conflict with any express law of the ruling power (m). Hence, where a special usage of succession was set up, the High Court of Madras said: "What the law requires before an alleged custom can receive the recognition of the Court, and so acquire legal force, is satisfactory proof of usage, so long and invariably acted upon in practice, as to show that it has, by common consent, been submitted to as the established governing rule of the particular family, class, or district of country; and the course of practice upon which the custom rests must not be left in doubt, but be proved with certainty" (n). This decision was affirmed on appeal, and (l) Narasammal v. Balaramacharlu, 1 Mad. H. C., 424.

(m) See the subject discussed, Khajah's case, Perry, O. C., 110; Howard v. Pestonji, ib., 535; Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C., 56; Bhanu Nanaji v. Sundrabai, 11 Bom. H. C., 249; Mathura v. Esu, 4 Bom., 545; Savigny, Droit Rom., i., 33-36, 165-175; Introduction to Punjab Customs. As to the effect of judicial decisions in evidencing a custom, see Shenbhu Nath v. Gayan Chand, 16 All., 379.

(n) Sivananjanja v. Muttu Ramalinga, 3 Mad. H. C., 75, 77; affirmed on appeal, Sub nomine, Ramalakshmi v. Sivanantha, the Oorcad case, 14 M. I. A., 570; S. C., 12 B. L. R., 896; S. C., 17 Suth., 553. Approved by the Bombay High Court, Shidhojirav v. Naikojirav, 10 Bom. H. C., 234. See also Bhujangarav v. Malojirav, 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 161; Chinnammal v. Varadarajulu, 15 Mad., 307.

the Judicial Committee observed (o): "Their Lordships are fully sensible of the importance and justice of giving effect to long established usages existing in particular districts and families in India, but it is of the essence of special usages, modifying the ordinary law of succession, that they should be ancient and invariable; and it is further essential that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence. It is only by means of such evidence that the Courts can be assured of their existence, and that they possess the conditions of antiquity and certainty on which alone their legal title to recognition depends." Accordingly, the Madras High Court, when directing an inquiry as to an alleged custom in the south of India that Brahmans should adopt their sister's sons, laid it down that: "I. The evidence should be such as to prove the uniformity and continuity of the usage, and the conviction of those following it that they were acting in accordance with law, and this conviction must be inferred from the evidence; II. Evidence of acts of the kind; acquiescence in those acts; decisions of Courts, or even of panchayets, upholding such acts; the statements of experienced and competent persons of their belief that such acts were legal and valid, will all be admissible; but it is obvious that, although admissible, evidence of this latter kind will be of little weight if unsupported by actual examples of the usage asserted" (p). Finally, the custom set up must be definite, so that its application in any given instance may be clear and certain, and reasonable (q).

Onus of proof of custom.

§ 51. Where a tribe or family are admittedly governed by Hindu law, but assert the existence of a special custom in derogation of that law, the onus of course rests upon

(o) 14 M. I. A., 535. A long continued practice which appears to have originated from, and to be maintained by, a series of erroneous decisions cannot be supported as a custom, if the decisions themselves are ultimately reversed. The Pittapur case, 26 I. A., 83, post § 341.

(p) Gopalayyan v. Raghupatnayyan, 7 Mad. H. C., 250, 254. See too, per Markby, J., Hiranath v. Baboo Ram, 9 B. I. R., 294; S. C., 17 Suth., 316; Collector of Madaya v. Mooloo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 436; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1 and Hurpurshah v. Sheo Dyal, 31 A., 285; S. C., 26 Suth., 55; Vishnu v. Krishnan, 7 Mad., 3; Harnabh v. Mandil, 27 Cal., 379.

(q) Luchman v. Akbar, 1 All., 440; Lala v. Hira, 2 All., 49.

those who assert the custom to make it out. For instance, a custom forbidding adoption, or barring inheritance by adoption, might be established, though, in a family otherwise subject to Hindu law, it would probably require very strong evidence to support it (r). But if the tribe or family had been originally non-Hindu, and only adopted Hindu usages in part, the onus would be shifted, and the burthen of proof would rest upon the side which alleged that any particular doctrine had become part of the personal law. A case of this sort arose in regard to the Baikantpur family, who were not originally Hindus, but who had in part, though not entirely, adopted Hindu customs. On a question of succession, when the estate was claimed by an adopted son, it was held by the Judicial Committee that the onus rested upon those who relied on the adoption to show that this was one of the Hindu customs which had been taken into the family law. If the family was generally governed by Hindu law the claimant might rely on that, and then the onus of proving a family custom would be on him who asserted it (s).

§ 52. It follows from the very nature of the case that a mere agreement among certain persons to adopt a particular rule cannot create a new custom binding on others, whatever its effect may be upon themselves (t). Nor can a family custom ever be binding where the family, or estate, to which it attaches is so modern as to preclude the very idea of immemorial usage (u). Nor does a custom, such as that of primogeniture, which has governed the devolution of an estate in the hands of a particular family, follow it into the hands of another family, by whom it may have been purchased. In other words, it does not run with the land (v).

Custom cannot be created by agreement.

(r) Bishnath Singh v. Ram Churn Mujmodar, S. D. of 1850, 20; Patel Vandrayan Jekison v. Manilal, 16 Bom., 470.

(s) Famindra Deb v. Rajeswar, 12 I. A., 72; S. C., 11 Cal., 463.

(t) Per cur., Myna Boyee v. Ootaram, 8 M. I. A., 420; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 4; Abraham v. Abraham, 9 M. I. A., 242; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 1; Scarupi v. Mukh Ram, 2 N.-W. P., 227; Bhaoni v. Maharaj Singh, 3 All., 788.

(u) Umritnath v. Gowreenath, 13 M. I. A., 542, 549; S. C., 15 Suth. (P. C.), 10.

(v) Gopal Dass v. Nurotum, 7 S. D., 195 (230).

Continuity essential.

§ 53. Continuity is as essential to the validity of a custom as antiquity. In the cases of a widely-spread local custom, want of continuity would be evidence that it had never had a legal existence; but it is difficult to imagine that such a custom, once thoroughly established, should come to a sudden end. It is different, however, in the case of family usage, which is founded on the consent of a smaller number of persons. Therefore, where it appeared that the members of a family, interested in an estate in the nature of a Raj, had for twenty years dealt with it as joint family property, as if the ordinary laws of succession governed the descent, the Privy Council held that any impartible character which it had originally possessed, was determined. They said: "Their Lordships cannot find any principle, or authority, for holding that in point of law a manner of descent of an ordinary estate, depending solely on family usage, may not be discontinued, so as to let in the ordinary law of succession. Such family usages are in their nature different from a territorial custom which is the lex loci binding all persons within the local limits in which it prevails. It is of the essence of family usages that they should be certain, invariable, and continuous; and well established discontinuance must be held to destroy them. This would be so when the discontinuance has arisen from accidental causes; and the effect cannot be less when it has been intentionally brought about by the concurrent will of the family. It would lead to much confusion, and abundant litigation, if the law attempted to revive and give effect to usages of this kind after they had been clearly abandoned, and the abandonment had been, as in this case, long acted upon" (w).

Usage of single family.

§ 54. The above cases settle a question, as to which there was at first some doubt entertained, viz., whether a particular family could have a usage differing from the law of the surrounding district applicable to similar persons (x). There is nothing to prevent proof of such a family usage. But in the case of a single family, and especially a family of no great importance, there will of course be very great difficulty in proving that the usage possesses the antiquity and continuousness, and arises from the sense of legal necessity as distinguished from conventional arrangement, that is required to make out a binding usage (y). Where the family is a very great one, whose records are capable of being verified for a number of generations, the difficulty disappears. In the case of the Tipperah Raj, usage has been repeatedly established by which the Raja nominates from amongst the members of his family the Jobraj (young sovereign) and the Bara Thakoor (chief lord), of whom the former succeeds to the Raj on a demise of the Raja, and the second takes the place of Jobraj (z). Also a custom in the Raj of Tirhoot, by which the Raja in possession abdicates during his lifetime, and assigns the Raj to his eldest son, or nearest male heir (a). Many of the cases of estates descending by primogeniture appear to rest on the nature of the estate itself, as being a sort of sovereignty, which from its constitution is impartible (b). But family custom alone will be sufficient, even if the estate is not of the nature of the Raj, provided it is made out (c). And where an impartible Raj has been confiscated by Government, and then granted out again, either to a stranger, or to a member of the same family, the presumption is that it

(w) Rajkishen v. Ranjoy, 1 Cal., 186; S. C., 19 Suth., 8. See, also, per cur., Abraham v. Abraham, 9 M. I. A., 243; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 1.

(x) See Basvantrav v. Mantappa, 1 Bom. H. C., Appx. 42 (2nd ed.); per cur., Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C., 58; Madhavav v. Balkrishna, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 113.

(y) See the subject discussed, Bhau Nanaji v. Sundrabai, 11 Bom. H. C., 269; Ismail v. Fidayat, 3 All., 723.

(z) Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder, 12 M. I. A., 523; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 21; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 13.

(a) Gunesh v. Moheshur, 6 M. I. A., 164, which see in the Court below, 7 S. D., 228 (271); see the Pachete Raj, Gurundarain v. Unund, 6 S. D., 282 (354), affd. sub nomine, Anund v. Dheraj, 5 M. I. A., 82.

(b) There may, however, be a partible Raj. See Ghiraharee v. Koolahul, 2 M. I. A., 344; S. C., 6 Suth. (P. C.), 1.

(c) Rawut Urjun v. Rawut Ghunsiam, 5 M. I. A., 169; Chowdhry Chintaman v. Nowlukho, 2 I. A., 263; S. C., 24 Suth., 255; Yarlagadda Mallikarjuna v. Y. Durga, 17 I. A., 134; S. C., 13 Mad., 406; Thakur Nitopal Singh v. Jai Singh, 23 I. A., 147; S. C., 19 All., 1; Garurudhwaja v. Sagarandhwaja, 27 I. A., 238; S. C., 23 All. 37; Lakshmpati v. Kandasami, 16 Mad., 54.

has been granted with its incidents as a Raj, of which the most prominent are impartibility and descent by primogeniture (d). This presumption, however, will not prevail, when the mode of dealing with the Raj after its confiscation, and the mode of its re-grant are consistent with an intention that it should for the future possess the ordinary incidents of partibility (e).

Immoral usages. § 55. Customs which are immoral, or contrary to public policy, will neither be enforced, nor sanctioned (f). For instance, prostitution is not only recognized by Hindu usage and honoured in the class of dancing girls, but the relations between the prostitute and her paramour were regulated by law, just as any other species of contract (g). Even according to Hindu views, however, it is immoral, and entails degradation from caste (h). It is quite clear, therefore, that no English Court would look upon prostitution as a consideration that would support a contract; and it has been held that the English rule will also be enforced to the extent of defeating an action against a prostitute for lodgings, or the like, supplied to her for the express purpose of enabling her to carry on her trade (i). On the other hand, until the passing of the Penal Code in 1861, no aspect of prostitution was illegal; and the Courts recognised, and gave effect to the usages of that class as relating to rights of property, power of adoption, and special rules of inheritance inter se (k); the first element

(d) Beer Pertab v. Maharajah Rajendar (Hunsapore case), 12 M. I. A., 1; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 15; Mutta Vaduganatha v. Dorasinga, 8 I. A., 99; S. C., 8 Mad., 290; Ram Nundun Singh v. Janki Koer, 29 I. A., 178; S. C., 29 Cal., 828; Muhammad Afzul Khan v. Ghulam Kasim, 30 I. A., 190; S. C., 30 Cal., 843.

(e) Venkata Narasimha v. Narayya (Nuzvid case), 7 I. A., 38; S. C., 2 Mad., 128; Mirangi Zamindar v. Satrucharla Ramabhadra, 18 I. A., 45; S. C., 14 Mad., 227; the Ramnad case, 24 Mad., p. 626.

(f) Manu, viii., § 41; M. Müller, A. S. L., 50. See statutes cited, ante, § 43, note (g).

(g) Dubois, 592; see Viv. Chint., 101.

(h) 2 W. MacN., 182; Sivasungu v. Minal, 12 Mad., 277; Tara Naikin v. Nana Lakshman, 14 Bom., 90; Kalam v. Sadagopa Sami, 1 Mad., 356; Muttukannu v. Paramasami, 12 Mad., 214.

(i) Goureenath Modhoomonee, 18 Suth., 445; S. C., 9 B. L. R., appx. 37; see Sutao v. Hureeram, Bellasis 1.

(k) Tara Munnee v. Mottee, 7 S. D., 273 (325); Shida v. Sunshidapa, Morris, Pt. I., 137; Venkatachalam v. Venkatasami, Mad., Dec. 1856, p. 65; Chalakovda v. Rainachalam, 2 Mad. H. C., 58; Kamakshi v. Nagarathnam, 5 Mad. H. C., 161; Nanee Tara Naikin v. Allarakia, 4 Bom., 573 of illegality was introduced by secs. 372 and 373 of the Penal Code, which made it a punishable offence to dispose of, or obtain possession of, a minor under sixteen for the purposes of prostitution. In 1876 the Madras High Court refused to recognise a right alleged by the dancing girls of a pagoda to exclude all new dancing girls, except such as were approved by themselves. The decision went upon general principles of morality, and upon the ground that the right alleged would countenance such a traffic in minors as was prohibited by the Penal Code (l). In the same year, however, the same Court held that a dancing girl, who had been dismissed from her office, because she had refused to recognise dancing girls introduced in violation of the right alleged in the previous case, had a good cause of action. The two cases were distinguished on the ground that, in the later case, it was alleged that the plaintiff's office was an hereditary one, with endowments and emoluments attached (m). In 1879 Mr. Justice West in a very elaborate judgment, decided that the adoption of a daughter by a dancing girl, though undoubtedly practised and recognised, was invalid on general grounds of morality and public policy. The ruling was absolutely unnecessary, as the suit was brought by the adopted daughter and it was found that there were natural daughters who would bar her claim (n). The grounds of the decision were disapproved by the Madras Courts in a case where the validity of such an adoption was raised and affirmed, and were certainly not adopted in their entirety in a later Bombay case, where the validity of an endowment, in favour of the dancing girls of a pagoda, was disputed (o). The Madras Court has now, by a series of decisions, adopted the rule laid down by Justice Muttusami Aiyar in 11 Mad., 492, which limits the illegality of adoptions to cases where they involve the (l) Chinna Ummaiyyi v. Tegarai, 1 Mad., 168.

(m) Kalam v. Sadagopa, 1 Mad., 356.

(n) Mathura Naikin v. Esu, 4 Bom., 545.

(o) Venku v. Mahalinga, 11 Mad., 393; Tara Naikin v. Nana, 14 Bom., 90.

commission of an offence under the Penal Code. "We may set aside, or decline to enforce, a contract or disposition which has for its immediate object the prostitution during her minority, so as to leave her no choice of married life when she is over sixteen years." Where no such result is contemplated, the usages of the caste, if established, will be enforced (p). A very similar question came before the Privy Council where the rights of females adopted into what were called family brothels were discussed. The case arose between Muhammedans, and the Committee held that the customs proved were contrary to the policy of that community since, by the law of the Koran, intercourse with prostitutes is unlawful, prohibited, and punishable. The difference of the view taken by Hindus was glanced at, but did not call for consideration (q).

Marriage customs.

So it has been held in Bombay that caste customs authorising a woman to abandon her husband, and marry again without his consent, were void for immorality (r). And it was doubted whether a custom authorising her to marry again during the lifetime of her husband, and with his consent, would have been valid (s). In Madras, it has been held that there is nothing immoral in a custom by which divorce and re-marriage are permissible by mutual agreement, on repayment by one party to the other, of the expenses of the original marriage (t). Among the Nairs, as is well known, the marriage relation involves no obligation to chastity on the part of the woman, and gives no rights to the man. But here what the law recognizes is not a custom to break the marriage bond, but the fact

(p) Ex parte Padmavati, 5 Mad. H. C., 415; Reg. v. Rammanna, 12 Mad., 273; Srinivasa v. Annasami, 15 Mad., 323; Kamalakshmi v. Ramasami, 19 Mad., 127; Sanjivi v. Jalajakshi, 21 Mad., 229; R. v. Jaita, 6 Bom., 6 H. C. (C. C.), 60; Manjamma v. Sheshgiri Rao, 26 Bom., 491.

(q) Ghasite v. Umrao Jan, 20 L. A., 193; S. C., 21 Cal., 149.

(r) R. v. Karsan, 2 Bom. H. C., 124; see R. v. Manohar, 5 Bom. H. C. (C. C.), 17; Uji v. Hathi, 7 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 133; Narayan v. Lavang, 2 Bom., 140.

(s) Khemkor v. Umiashankar, 10 Bom. H. C., 381.

(t) Sankaralingam Chetti v. Subban Chetty, 17 Mad., 479.

that there is no marriage bond at all (u). In a case before the Privy Council, a custom was set up as existing on the West Coast of India, whereby the trustees of a religious institution were allowed to sell their trust. The Judicial Committee found that no such custom was made out, but intimated that in any case they would have held it to be invalid, as being opposed to public policy (v). An agreement to assist a Hindu for money to obtain a wife has also been held valid on the same ground (w). Public policy.

§ 56. The fourth class of cases mentioned before (§ 45) arises when circumstances occur which make the law, which has previously governed a family, no longer applicable. In one sense any new law, which is adopted for the governance of such a family, must be wanting, as regards that family, in the element of antiquity necessary to constitute a custom. On the other hand, the law itself which is adopted may be of immemorial character: the only question would be as to the power of the family to adopt it. We have already seen that a family migrating from one part of India to another may either retain the law of its origin, or adopt that of its domicile (x). The same rule applies to a family which has changed its status. If the new status carries with it an obligation to submit to a particular form of law, such form of law is binding upon it. If, however, it carries with it no such obligation, then the family is at liberty, either to retain so much of its old law as is consistent with its change of status, or to adopt the usages of any other class with which the new status allows it to associate itself. Change of family usage.

§ 57. Where a Hindu has become converted to Muhammedanism, he accepts a new mode of life, which is governed by a law recognized, and enforced, in India. It has been stated that the property, which he was possessed Conversion to Muhammedanism.

(u) See Koraga v. Reg., 6 Mad., 374, post § § 100, 101.

(v) Rajah Yirmah v. Ravi Yirmah, 4 L. A., 76; S. C., 1 Mad., 255.

(w) Vaithyanatham v. Gungarazu, 17 Mad., 9, Act IX of 1872, s. 28.

(x) Ante § 48.

of at the time of his conversion, will devolve upon those who were entitled to it at that time, by the Hindu Law, but that the property, which he may subsequently acquire, will devolve according to Muhammedan law (y). The former proposition, however, must, I should think, be limited to cases where by the Hindu law his heirs had acquired an interest which he could not defeat. If he was able to disinherit any of his relations by alienation, or by will, it is difficult to see why he should not disinherit them by adopting a law which gave him a different line of heirs. The latter part of the proposition, however, has been affirmed by the Privy Council, in a case where it was contended that a family, which had been converted several generations back to Muhammedanism, was still governed by Hindu law. Their Lordships said: "This case is distinguishable from that of Abraham v. Abraham (z). There the parties were native Christians, not having, as such, any law of inheritance defined by statute; and, in the absence of one, this Committee applied the law by which, as the evidence proved, the particular family intended to be governed. But the written law of India has prescribed broadly that in questions of succession and inheritance, the Hindu law is to be applied to Hindus, and the Muhammedan law to Muhammedans; and in the judgment delivered by Lord Kingsdown in Abraham v. Abraham, p. 239, it is said that 'this rule must be understood to refer to Hindus and Muhammedans, not by birth merely but by religion also.' The two cases in W. H. Mac-Naghten's Principles of Hind. L., Vol. II., pp. 131, 132, which deal with the case of converts from the Hindu to the Muhammedan faith, and rule that the heirs according to Hindu law will take all the property which the deceased had at the time of his conversion, are also authorities for the proposition that his subsequently acquired property is to be governed by the Muhammedan law. Here there is nothing to show conclusively when or how the property was acquired by 'the great ancestor'; there was no conflict as in the cases just referred to, between Hindus and Muhammedans touching the succession to him. Whatever he had is admitted to have passed to his descendants, of whom all, like himself, were Muhammedans; and it seems to be contrary to principle that, as between them, the succession should be governed by any but Muhammedan law. Whether it is competent for a family converted from the Hindu to the Muhammedan faith to retain for several generations Hindu usages and customs, and by virtue of that retention to set up for itself a special and customary law of inheritance is a question which, so far as their Lordships are aware, has never been decided. It is not absolutely necessary for the determination of this appeal to decide that question in the negative, and their Lordships abstain from doing so. They must, however, observe that, to control the general law, if indeed the Muhammedan law admits of such control, much stronger proof of special usage would be required than has been given in this case" (a).

(y) 2 W. Mac N., 131, 132; Jowala v. Dharam, 10 M. I. A., 537.

(z) 9 M. I. A., 195; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 1.

§ 58. These remarks of the Judicial Committee were not necessary for the decision of the case before them, as they held that the plaintiff would equally have failed if the principles of Hindu law had been applied to his claim. Nor did they profess absolutely to decide that a convert to Muhammedanism might not still retain Hindu usages, and they partly rest their view against such retention of usage upon the ground that there was no decision upon the subject. The point, however, has been repeatedly decided the other way in Bombay, with regard to a sect called Khojahs. These are a class of persons who were originally Hindus, but who became converts to Muham-

Retention of Hindu usages.

(a) Jowala v. Dharam, 10 M. I. A., 511, 537. See Hakim Khan v. Gool Khan 8 Cal., 826, in which the Court, with much reason, doubted the decision in Rupchand v. Lata Chowdhry, 3 C. L. R., 97, where it was laid down as settled law that, with Muhammedans living in a Hindu country, the presumption of joint family and commensality arises. See next paragraph.

medanism about four hundred years ago, retaining, however, many Hindu usages, amongst others an order of succession opposed to that prescribed by the Koran. A similar sect named the Memon Cutchees had a similar history and usage. In 1847, the question was raised in the Supreme Court of Bombay, whether this order of succession could be supported, and Sir Erskine Perry, in an elaborate judgment, decided that it could. His decision has been followed in numerous cases in Bombay, both in the Supreme and High Court, and may be considered as thoroughly established (b). It has, however, been held that these decisions did not establish that the Khojahs had adopted the entire Hindu family law, and that it could not be assumed, without sufficient evidence, that they were bound by the law of partition, so far as it allows a son to claim a share of the family property in his father's lifetime (c). Similar rulings have lately been given as regards the Suni Borahs of Guzerat, and the Molesalem Girasias of Broach, both of which tribes were originally Rajput Hindus converted to Muhammedanism (d). In the former of these cases, Ranade, J., said "the principles laid down in these decisions may be thus stated: (1) that though the Muhammedan law generally governs converts to that faith from the Hindu religion, yet (2) a well-established custom of such converts following the Hindu law of inheritance would over-ride the general presumption; (3) that this custom should, however, be confined strictly to cases of succession and inheritance; (4) and that, if any particular usage, at variance with the general Hindu law applicable to these communities in matters of succession, be alleged to exist, the burthen of proof lie on the party alleging such special custom." But, although these cases may probably be taken as settling that an adherence to the religion of the Koran does not necessarily entail an adherence to its civil law, there may be cases in which religion and law are inseparable. In such a case the ruling of the Privy Council would be strictly in point, and would debar any one who had accepted the religion from relying on a custom opposed to the law. For instance, monogamy is an essential part of the law of Christianity. A Muhammedan, or Hindu convert to Christianity could not possibly marry a second wife after his conversion, during the life of his first, and, if he did so, the issue by such second marriage would certainly not be legitimate, any Hindu or Muhammedan usage to the contrary notwithstanding (e). His conversion would not invalidate marriages celebrated, or affect the legitimacy of issue born before that event. What its effect might be upon issue proceeding from a plurality of wives retained after he became a Christian would be a very interesting question, which has never arisen.

(b) Khajah's case, Perry, O. C., 110; Gangbai v. Thavur, 1 Bom. H. C., 71, 73; Mulbai, in the Goods of, 2 Bom. H. C., 292; Rahimbai, in the Goods of, 12 Bom. H. C., 294; Rahimatbai v. Hirbai, 3 Bom., 34; Suddurtonnessu v. Majada, Cal., 694; Haji Ismail's Will, 6 Bom., 452; Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb, 9 Bom., 115; Abdul Cadur v. Turner, ibid., 158; Mahomed Sidick v. Haji Ahmed, 10 Bom., 1; Re Haroon Mahomed, 14 Bom., 19.

(c) Ahmedboy v. Cassumbhoy, 13 Bom., 534, over-ruling; S. C., 2 Bom., 280.

(d) Bai Baiji v. Bai Santok, 20 Bom., 53, at p. 57; Fatesangji v. Rewar Harisangji, 20 Bom., 181. In the latter the claim, which was affirmed, was by a son for maintenance.

§ 59. The second part of the rule above stated (f) is illustrated by the case of Abraham v. Abraham (g) referred to above. There it appeared that there were different classes of native Christians of Hindu origin. Some retained Hindu manners and usages, wholly or chiefly, while others, who were known as East Indians, and who are generally of mixed blood, conformed in all respects to European customs. The founder of the family in question was of pure Hindu blood, and belonged to a class of native Christians which retained native customs. But as he rose in the world and accumulated property, he assumed the dress and usages of Europeans. He married an East Indian wife, and was admitted into, and recognized as a Case of the Abrahams.

(e) See Hyde v. Hyde, L. R., 1 P. & D., 130; Skinner v. Orde, 14 M. I. A., 309, 324; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 125; S. C., 17 Suth., 77.

(f) Ante § 56.

(g) 9 M. I. A., 195; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 1. Native Christians are now governed by the Indian Succession Act. Ponnusami v. Dorasami, 2 Mad., 209. See Sarkies v. Prosonomoyee, 6 Cal., 794.

member of, the East Indian community. After his death the question arose whether his property was to be treated as the joint property of an undivided Hindu family, and governed by pure Hindu law; or if not, whether it was to be governed by a law of usage, similar to Hindu or to European law. The former proposition was at once rejected. Their Lordships said (h) "It is a question of parcenership and not of heirship. Heirship may be governed by the Hindu law, or by any other law to which the ancestor may be subject; but parcenership, understood in the sense in which their Lordships here use the term, as expressing the rights and obligations growing out of the status of an undivided family, is the creature of, and must be governed by, the Hindu law. Considering the case, then, with reference to parcenership, what is the position of a member of a Hindu family who has become a convert to Christianity? He becomes, as their Lordships apprehend, at once severed from the family and regarded by them as an outcast. The tie which bound the family together is, so far as he is concerned, not only loosened but dissolved. The obligations consequent upon, and connected with, the tie must, as it seems to their Lordships, be dissolved with it. Parcenership may be put an end to by a severance effected by partition; it must, as their Lordships think, equally be put an end to by severance which the Hindu law recognizes and creates. Their Lordships, therefore, are of opinion that, upon the conversion of a Hindu to Christianity, the Hindu law ceases to have any continuing obligatory force upon the convert. He may renounce the old law by which he was bound, as he has renounced his old religion; or, if he thinks fit, he may abide by the old law, notwithstanding he has renounced the old religion." Their Lordships then reviewed the facts, showing the different usages of different classes of Christians, and the evidence that (h) 9 M. I. A., 237; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 5; Jalbhai Ardeshir v. Louis Manoel, 19 Bom., 680.

Abraham had, in fact, passed from one class into another, and proceeded to say (i): "That it is not competent to parties to create, as to property, any new law to regulate the succession to it ab intestato, their Lordships entertain no doubt; but that is not the question on which this case depends. The question is, whether, when there are different laws as to property applying to different classes, parties ought not to be considered to have adopted the law as to property, whether in respect of succession ab intestato or in other respects, of the class to which they belong. In this particular case the question is, whether the property was bound by the Hindu law of parcenership." "The law has not, so far as their Lordships can see, prohibited a Christian convert from changing his class. The inconvenience resulting from a change of succession consequent on a change of class is no greater than that which often results from a change of domicile. The argumentum ab inconvenienti cannot therefore be used against the legality of such a change. If such change takes place in fact, why should it be regarded as non-existing in law? Their Lordships are of opinion that it was competent for Matthew Abraham, though himself both by origin and actually in his youth a 'native Christian,' following the Hindu laws and customs on matters relating to property, to change his class of Christians, and become of the Christian class to which his wife belonged. His family was managed and lived in all respects like an East Indian family. In such a family the undivided family union, in the sense before mentioned, is unknown (k).

§ 60. On the same principle, where a European had illegitimate issue of European. sons by two Hindu women, and they conformed in all respects to Hindu habits and usages, it was held that they must for all purposes be treated as Hindus, and governed by Hindu law as such. "They were not an united Hindu family in the ordinary sense in which that term is used by the text writers on Hindu law; a family of which the father was in his lifetime the head, and the sons in a sense parcerers in birth, by an inchoate, though alterable, title; but they were sons of a Christian father by different Hindu mothers, constituting themselves parcerers in the enjoyment of their property, after the manner of a Hindu joint family" (l). And it was held that their rights of succession inter se and to their mother, must be judged by Hindu law, which recognized such rights, and not by English law, which denied them (m). On the other hand, the vast majority of the class known as East Indians, and referred to in the judgment in Abraham v. Abraham, have been the illegitimate sons of Europeans by natives or half-caste women, who, from being acknowledged and cared for by their fathers, have adopted European modes of life. These, as already stated, would be governed by European law.

(i) 9 M. I. A., 242, 244; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 6.

(k) A Hindu convert to Christianity may revert to Hinduism, and may as guardian of his infant son treat him as having also reverted, as for instance for the purpose of being given away in adoption. Kusum Kumari v. Satya Rangan, 30 Cal., 999.

(l) Myna Boyee v. Ootaram, 8 M. I. A., 400, 420; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 4.
 (m) Same case, 2 Mad. H. C., 196.

CHAPTER IV.

FAMILY RELATIONS.

Marriage and Sonship.

§ 61. No part of the Hindu Law is more anomalous than that which governs the family relations. Not only does there appear to be a complete break of continuity between the ancient system and that which now prevails, but the different parts of the ancient system appear in this respect to be in direct conflict with each other. We find a law of inheritance, which assumes the possibility of tracing male ancestors in an unbroken pedigree extending to fourteen generations; while coupled with it is a family law, in which several admitted forms of marriage are only euphemisms for seduction and rape, and in which twelve sorts of sons are recognized, the majority of whom have no blood relationship to their own father. I am not aware that any attempt has hitherto been made to harmonise, or to account for, these apparent inconsistencies. It has been suggested, however, that some of the peculiarities of the system may be referred to the practice of polyandry, which is supposed to have been once universal (a). It seems to me that the proved existence of such a practice would not account for the facts. I also doubt whether polyandry, properly so called (b), ever

Anomalies in Family Law.

(a) I refer, of course, to the views put forward by Mr. MacLennan throughout his Studies in Ancient History, 1876. Also in two articles in the "Fortnightly Review," May and June, 1877. MacLennan. Patriarchal Theory, 1885.

(b) By polyandry, properly so called, I mean a system under which a woman is the legal property of several husbands at once, as among the Todas; or under which a woman, who is legally married to one husband, has the right, which he cannot dispute, to admit other men at her own pleasure, as among the Nairs. I exclude cases of mere dissoluteness. No one would apply the term polyandry to the institution of the cavalier servente in Italy or Spain. I also exclude cases in which a woman is allowed to offer herself to a man, who claims a sort of semi-divinity, as in the case of the Maharajas of Bombay; and the analogous cases of promiscuous prostitution of married women as a sort of religious rite. See Dubois 601, Man. Madras i., 106; Cochin Census 1891, § 176; Wilson Works i., 263.

prevailed among the races who were governed by the system now under discussion, while they were governed by it. It is quite possible that it may have prevailed among them at a still earlier stage of their history. But this circumstance would be immaterial, if there is reason to suppose that they had escaped from its influence before the introduction of the Family law, which we find in force at the time of the earliest Sanskrit writings. Still more, if that law can be accounted for on principles which have nothing to do with polyandry. It will be well, however, to clear the ground for the discussion, by enquiring what are the actual facts.

Polyandry
among non-
Aryan races.

§ 62. Among the non-Aryan races of India, both the former and the present existence of polyandry is beyond dispute. It is peculiarly common among the Hill tribes, who are probably aboriginal; but it is also widely diffused among the inhabitants of the plains (c). Among the Nairs, the woman remains in her own home after her marriage, and there associates with as many men as she pleases (d). The Teehurs of Oude "live together almost indiscriminately in large communities, and even where two people are regarded as married, the tie is but nominal" (e). Among the Western Kallans of Madura, "it constantly happens that a woman is the wife of either ten, eight, six, or two husbands, who are held to be the fathers jointly and severally of any children that may be born of her body. And still more curiously, when the children of such a family grow up, they, for some unknown reason, style themselves the children, not of ten, eight, or six fathers, as the case may be, but of eight and two, or six and two, or four and two fathers" (f). Among the Kannuvans of Madura, "a woman may legally marry any number of men

(c) In the Punjab it is still found existing in Seoraj, Lahoul and Spiti. Punjab Customary Law, II, 186, 187, 191. Here the joint husbands are always brothers.

(d) See post § 99.

(e) Lubbock, Origin of Man (ed. 1870), 73, citing the People of India, by Kaye and Watson, ii., 85.

(f) Madura Manual, Pt. II, 54.

in succession, though she may not have two husbands at one and the same time. She may, however, bestow favours on paramours without hindrance, provided they be of equal caste with her" (g). Among the Todas of the Nilgiris, as in Thibet, the wife is the property of all the brothers, and lives in their home (h). A similar custom prevails among the Tiyars, or palm cultivators of Malabar and Travancore (i), and among the low caste Malyalis of Cochin. It formerly existed, but has now almost died out, among the astrologer caste on the Malabar Coast (k). Among the Badagas of the Nilgiris "Immorality within the family circle is not regarded very harshly—a tolerance that is no doubt a survival of polyandrous customs" (l). Mr. O. Chanda Menon, in his Memorandum annexed to the Malabar Marriage Report, p. 103, says: "Among the carpenter and blacksmith classes in Malabar, polyandry exists as an institution, and we see every day the four or five chosen husbands among this class celebrating their polyandrous marriage openly according to their caste rules and with much ceremony and pomp." Polyandry in its patriarchal and simplest form is found in the Himalayan valleys, chiefly wherever the food-supply of the surrounding country is scarce. It is found in the North-West Provinces among both Buddhist and Brahmanic tribes. In the Northern plains of India, there are also traces of this custom in certain tribes (m). In the Punjab, polyandry is confined to the Kulu sub-division. The rule of inheritance is that of three or four brothers who have a wife in common, the eldest is deemed the father of the first-born son, the second of the next, and so on. This is an absolute presumption of law, even though the facts are opposed to it. Among the monks of Lahul, polyandry arises from the fact that monks who have no vow of celibacy enter into monasteries, and remain in communion

(g) Madura Manual, Part II, 34.

(i) Madras Census Report, 162.

(l) Census, 1891, xiii., 243.

(h) Brecks Primitive Tribes, 10.

(k) Cochin Census, 1891, § 180; Census,

1891, xiii., 272, Mal. Man., I, 141.

(m) Census of 1891, General Report, 254.

with their elder brother, who stops at home and manages the estate (n). In Assam polyandry is stated to be of rare occurrence, but not unknown. The form in which a woman enters a family as the wife of several brothers, or other near relations, still flourishes among the Bhutias (o). Among the Tottiyars, a caste of Madura, it is the usage for brothers, uncles, nephews and other relations, to hold their wives in common, and their priests compel them to keep up the custom, if they are unwilling; outside the family they are chaste (p). An indication of similar practices is probably to be found in the license given to girls before their marriage in some of the inferior castes on the West Coast (q). Among many tribes in Assam, so long as a woman remains unmarried, chastity is not usually expected of her, and she may dispense her favours to whom she pleases. But when once she is married, this freedom is no longer tolerated. Adultery is very severely punished (r).

among Aryans.

§ 63. It is difficult to believe that polyandry in its lowest form, as authorising the union of women with a plurality of husbands of different family, could ever have been common among the Aryan Hindus. Such a system, as Mr. McLennan points out (s), would necessarily produce a system of kinship through females, such as actually exists among the polyandrous tribes of the West Coast of India. Among the Khasis and Garos of Assam, inheritance goes through the female. The tribes are divided into clans. Marriage within the clan is forbidden. In most cases the children enter into the clan of their father, but among the Khasis and Garos they enter into the clan of their mother, who remains with her own people instead of living in the family of her husband (t). This seems to have nothing to do (n) Census of 1891, Punjab Report, xix., 224.

(o) Census of 1891, Assam Report, I, 119.

(p) Dubois, 18, Madura Manual, Part II, 82.

(q) S. Can., Man., I, 162, 170.

(r) Census of 1891, Assam Report, I, 118.

(s) Studies in Ancient History, 124, 135. Mr. L. H. Morgan's objections (p. 515) to the general proposition stated by Mr. McLennan as to kinship through females seem not to apply to the limited form of that proposition, as stated in the text.

(t) Census of 1891, Assam Report, I, 119, 122.

with polyandry, which apparently only exists among the Bhutias (u). Now, the most striking feature in the Aryan Hindu customs is the strictness with which kinship is traced through males. Except in Bengal, where the change is comparatively modern, agnates to the fourteenth degree exclude cognates. This rule is connected with, if it is not based upon, their religious system, the first principle of which was the practice of worshipping deceased male ancestors to the remotest degree (v). This, of course, involved the assumption that those ancestors could be identified with the most perfect certainty. The female ancestors were only worshipped in conjunction with their deceased husbands. We can be quite certain that this system was one of enormous antiquity, since we find exactly the same practice of religious offerings to the dead prevailing among the Greeks and Romans. We may assert with confidence that a usage common to the three races had previously existed in that ancient stock from which Hindus, Greeks, and Romans alike proceeded. No doubt Mr. McLennan points out numerous indications of kinship through females among the Greeks, especially in the case of the Trial of Orestes. But, if I may be allowed to say so, all these instances seem to be less the voice of a living law, than the feeble echoes of one sounding from a past that was dead (w). I by no means deny that polyandry of the second, or Thibet, type, may have existed among the Hindu Aryans. But I think that at the earliest times of which we have any evidence it had become very rare, and had fallen into complete discredit even where it existed. Also, that everything which we find in the oldest Hindu laws can be accounted for without any reference to it.

(u) Census of 1891, Assam Report, I, 119.

(v) Manu, iii., § 81—91, 122—125, 159, 193—231, 262—284; Spencer, Sociology, i., 304, Appx. 1; M. Müller, A. S., Lit., 386; Ind. Wisd., 255.

(w) See Teulon, La Mère, 7. "Sous les conquérants Aryas et Sémites s'étend souvent, suivant l'heureuse expression de M. d'Eckstein, un humus scientifique. Sous cette couche d'êtres humains, d'autres, races ont vécu, obéissant à des lois qui, si elles n'ont été générales, ont régné du moins sur d'immenses étendues. Leurs civilisations reposaient sur le droit de la mère, &c." See also Teulon, 62, 63. "Partout, où les Aryas se sont établis, ils ont introduit avec eux la famille gouvernée par le père."

Evidences of polyandry.

§ 64. What then is the actual evidence upon the subject? The earliest indication of polyandry of which I am aware is to be found in a hymn in the Rig-Veda, which is addressed to the two Asvins. "Asvins, your admirable horses bore the car which you have harnessed first to the goal for the sake of honour; and the damsel who was the prize came through affection to you, and acknowledged your husbandship, saying, you are my lords" (x). This evidently points to the practice of Svayamvara, when a maiden of high rank used to offer herself as the prize to the conqueror in a contest of skill, and in this instance became the wife of several suitors at once. It is exactly in conformity with the well-known case of Draupadi, who, as the Mahabharata relates, was won at an archery match by the eldest of the five Pandava princes, and then became the wife of all. As far as I know, this is the only definite instance in which an Aryan woman is recorded to have become the legal permanent wife of several men. Undoubtedly, as Professor Max Müller remarks (y) the epic tradition must have been very strong to compel the authors to record a proceeding so violently opposed to Brahmanical law. Yet the very description of the transaction represents it as one which was opposed to public opinion, and which was rather justified by very remote tradition than by existing practice. I take the account of it given by Mr. McLennan (z). "The father of Draupadi is represented by the compilers of the epic as shocked at the proposal of the princes to marry his daughter. 'You who know the law,' he is made to say, 'must not commit an unlawful act which is contrary to usage and the Vedas.' The reply is, 'The law, O King, is subtle. We do not know its way. We follow the path which has been trodden by our ancestors in succession.' One of the princes then pleads precedent.

Draupadi.

(x) Cited Wheeler, Hist. of India, ii., 502.

(z) Fort. Rev., May 1877, 698.

(y) A. S., Lit., 46.

'In an old tradition it is recorded that Iatila, of the family of Gotama, that most excellent of moral women, dwelt with seven saints; and that Varski, the daughter of a Muni, cohabited with ten brothers, all of them called Prachetas, whose souls had been purified with penance.' " Now, upon this statement the alleged ancestral usage appears really to have been non-existent. The only specific instances that could be adduced were certainly not cases of marriage. They were instances of special indulgence allowed to Rishis, who had passed out of the order of married men, and whose greatness of spiritual merit made it impossible for them to commit sin (a). It is also to be remembered that the Pandava princes were Kshatriyas, to whom greater license was allowed in their dealings with the sex, and for whom the loosest forms of marriage were sanctioned (b). If polyandrous practices existed among the aborigines whom they conquered, these would naturally be imitated by them. Just as the English knights who settled beyond the Pale became Hibernis Hiberniores. On the other hand, in a passage of the Ramayana (c), where the Rakshasa meets Rama and his brother wandering with Sita, the wife of the former, the giant accosts them in language of much moral indignation, saying, "Oh little dwarfs, why do you come with your wife into the forest of Dandaka, clad in the habit of devotees, and armed with arrows, bow and scimitar? Why do you two devotees remain with one woman? Why are you, oh profligate wretches, corrupting the devout sages?" The giant seems to have looked upon polyandry with the same abhorrence as Draupadi's father.

Rama and Sita.

§ 65. Other passages of the Mahabharata are referred to, which seem rather to evidence the greatest grossness and want of chastity in the relations between the sexes, than anything like polyandry. It is said that "women

Looseness of marriage tie.

(a) See Apastamba, ii., vi., 13, § 8-10, and post § 65. (b) Manu, iii., § 26.

(c) Cited Wheeler, Hist. of India, ii., 241. Mr. V. N. Mandlik (p. 397) says that the original passage contains nothing to show that the giant accused the brothers of having a joint wife.

were formerly unconfined, and roamed about at their pleasure independent. Though in their youthful innocence they abandoned their husbands, they were guilty of no offence; for such was the rule in early times. This ancient custom is even now the law for creatures born as brutes, which are free from lust and anger. This custom is supported by authority, and is observed by great Rishis, and it is still practised among the northern Kurus." Dr. Muir goes on to add, "A stop was, however, put to the practice by Svetaketu, whose indignation was on one occasion aroused by a Brahman taking his mother by the hand, and inviting her to go away with him, although his father, in whose presence this occurred, informed him that there was no reason for his displeasure, as the custom was one which had prevailed from time immemorial. But Svetaketu could not tolerate the practice, and introduced the existing rule. A wife and a husband indulging in promiscuous intercourse were thenceforward guilty of sin" (d). So the Gandhara Brahmans of the Punjab are said "to corrupt their own sisters and daughters-in-law, and to offer their wives to others, hiring and selling them like commodities for money. Their women, being thus given up to strangers, are consequently shameless;" as might have been expected (e). In exactly the same way, the Koravers of Southern India, who are not polyandrous, sell and mortgage their wives and daughters when they are in want of money (f). Of course, delicacy, or chastity, must be utterly unknown in such a state of society. But these very texts seem to show that each wife was appropriated to a single husband, though he was willing to allow her the greatest freedom of action. (g).

(d) Muir, A. S. T., ii., 418 (2nd ed.). The first passage is cited by Mr. McLennan, p. 173, n., from the 1st ed., ii., 336. See also other passages from the Mahabharata, cited 2 Dig., 392-394.

(e) Muir, A. S. T., ii., 482, 483.

(f) Madras Census Report, 167.

(g) Mr. V. N. Mandlik says of the passages cited from Dr. Muir "To me the whole chapter shows that the northern Kurus were then what the Nairs in Malabar are now; so that a man did not know his own father." But he admits that these and similar passages "point to times anterior to the compilation of the Vedas. For even in the earliest Veda marriage appears to have become a well-established institution," pp. 395-397.

§ 66. When we come to the law writers it is quite certain that a woman could never have more than one husband at a time. But we also find that sonship and marriage seem to stand in no relation to each other. A man's son need not have been begotten by his father, nor need he have been produced by his father's wife. How is such a state of the family, which appears to set genealogy at defiance, reconcilable with a system of property which is based upon the strictest ascertainment of pedigree? I believe the answer is simply this—that a son was always assigned in law to the male who was the legal owner of the mother. Further, that the filial relation was itself capable of being assigned over by the person to whom the son was subject, or by the son himself if emancipated. If I am right in this view, the theory that the levirate is invariably a survival of polyandry will fall to the ground.

Early Family Law.

Principle of sonship.

§ 67. The various sorts of sons recognized by the early writers were the following:—The legitimate son (awrasa), the son of an appointed daughter (putrika putra), the son begotten on the wife (kshetraja), the son born secretly (gudhaja), the damsel's son (kanina), the son taken with the bride (sahodha), the son of a twice-married woman (paunarbhava), the son by a Sudra woman (nishada), or by a concubine (parasava), the adopted son (dattaka), the son made (kritrima), the son bought (kritaka), the son cast off (apavidha), and the son self-given (svayamdattaka) (h). Of these it will be at once seen that the five last never could be the actual sons of their father, and of the other nine only the first and the last two need be. Of the remaining seven, some necessarily, and others probably, were not begotten by him at all. Further, many of these were not even the offspring of his wife. The problem for solution is, how they came to be considered as his sons? To answer this, we must enquire into the Hindu idea of paternity.

Different sorts of sons.

(h) Baudhayana, xvii., 2, § 10-24; Gautama, xxviii., § 32, 33; Vasishtha, xvii., § 9-22; Vishnu, xv., § 1-27; Narada, xiii., § 17-20, 45-47; Manu, ix., § 127-140, 158-184; Devana, 3 Dig., 153; Yama, ib., 154; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 128-

Necessity for sons.

§ 68. In modern times children are a luxury to the rich, an encumbrance to the poor. In early ages female offspring

132; Mit., i., 11. Apastamba stands alone among the earlier writers in only recognizing the legitimate son, ii., vi., 13, § 1—11.

The following table shows the order in which the different sons are placed by the various authors.

Aurasa.	Legitimate sons.	Kshetrja.	Son begotten on wife.	Putrika putra.	Son of appointed daughter.	Kantira.	Damsel's son.	Gudhaja.	Secretly born.	Pannabhava.	Son of twice-married woman.	Sahodra.	Son of pregnant bride.	Nishada.	Son of Sudra woman.	Dattaka.	Adopted son.	Kritima.	Son made.	Kritaka.	Son bought.	Apavidha.	Son cast off.	Swaymdatata.	Self-given son.
Baudhayana, ii. 2, § 10—23	1	1	2	2	2	8	6	11	9	9	9	9	8	13	4	4	4	5	10	10	7	7	12	12	11
Gautama, xviii., § 32—33	1	1	2	10*	10*	7	5	4	8	6	9	8	8	—	3	3	3	4	4	12	12	6	6	11	12
Vasishtha, xvii., § 9—21	1	1	2	3	3	5	6	6	6	10	4	7	7	12	8	8	8	—	9	9	9	11	10	10	10
Vishnu, xv., § 1—27	1	1	2	2	2	7	5	4	5	10	4	7	8	—	3	3	3	—	4	4	4	6	6	11	11
Manu, ix., § 158—160	1	1	2	2	2	7	5	4	5	10	4	7	8	—	3	3	3	—	4	4	4	6	6	11	11
Kalika Purana, 3 Dig., 155	1	1	3	2	2	5	4	6	4	6	6	11	11	—	7	7	7	9	8	8	8	12	10	10	10
Yajurveda, ii., § 128—132	1	1	2	3	3	4	6	6	6	4	4	5	5	—	9	9	9	11	10	10	10	8	8	12	12
Narada, xiii., § 45—46	1	1	2	3	3	4	6	6	6	4	4	5	5	—	9	9	9	11	10	10	10	8	8	12	12
Sancha and Licchita, 3 Dig., 151	1	1	2	3	3	4	6	6	6	4	4	5	5	—	9	9	9	11	10	10	10	8	8	12	12
Harita, 3 Dig., 152	1	1	2	3	3	4	6	6	6	4	4	5	5	—	9	9	9	11	10	10	10	8	8	12	12
Devala, 3 Dig., 153 +	1	1	2	2	2	4	5	6	6	4	4	5	5	—	9	9	9	11	10	10	10	8	8	12	12
Yama, 3 Dig., 154	1	1	2	3	3	5	6	6	6	4	4	5	5	—	9	9	9	11	10	10	10	8	8	12	12
Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 162—171	1	1	2	2	2	10	12	12	12	9	9	11	11	—	7	7	7	6	5	5	5	4	4	4	—
Brahma Purana, 3 Dig., 174	1	1	3	3	3	7	5	5	5	10	10	8	8	—	4	4	4	—	9	9	9	6	6	11	11

Vijnanesvara quotes both Yajurveda and Manu, but seems to follow the latter as to the order of the sons. Mit., i., 11, § 30, 31. Jimuta Vahana follows Devala. D. Bh., x., § 7. The Smṛiti Chandrika follows Manu, Chap. x. * Mitakshara (i., 11, § 35) explains the low position assigned by Gautama to the son of an appointed daughter as being relative to one differing in tribe. † The son of an appointed daughter is not specified in Manu's list of twelve sons. He had been already described, and stated to be equal to an actual son. Manu, ix., § 134—136. ‡ See an explanation offered of Devala's text Paddo Kumaree v. Juggut Kishore, 5 Cal., 630, post § 165.

stood in the same position, but male issue was passionately prized. The very existence of a tribe, surrounded by enemies, would depend upon the continual multiplication of its males. The sonless father would find himself without protection or support in sickness or old age, and would see his land passing into other hands, when he became unable to cultivate it. The necessity for male offspring extended in the case of the Aryan even beyond this world. His happiness in the next depended upon his having a continuous line of male descendants, whose duty it would be to make the periodical offerings for the repose of his soul. Hence the works of the Sanskrit sages state it to be the first duty of man to become the possessor of male offspring, and imprecate curses upon those who die without a son (i). Where a son was so indispensable, we might expect that every contrivance would be exhausted to procure one. What has been already said about the relations between the sexes in early times would make it certain that neither delicacy, nor sentiment, would stand in the way.

§ 69. A frequent subject for discussion in Manu is as to the property in a child. He says: "They consider the male issue of a woman as the son of the lord; but on the subject of that lord, a difference of opinion is mentioned in the Veda, some giving that name to the real procreator of the child, and others applying it to the married possessor of the woman." He argues the point on the analogy of seed sown by a stranger on the land of another, or of flocks impregnated by a strange male. He sums up by declaring: "Thus men who have no marital property in women, but sow in the fields owned by others, may raise up fruit to the husbands, but the procreator can have no advantage from it. Unless there be a special agreement between the owners of the land and of the seed, the fruit belongs clearly to the landowner, for the receptacle is more important than the seed. But the owners of the seed and of the soil

Theory of paternity among Hindus.

(i) Vasish., xvii., § 1—5; Vish., xv., § 43—46; Manu, vi., § 36, 37; ix., § 45 Atri., D. M., i., § 3.

may be considered in this world as joint owners of the crop, which they agree by special compact, in consideration of the seed, to divide between them" (k). The conflicting opinions referred to by Manu are probably the texts mentioned by the early Sutra writers (l). In one of these passages quoted from the Vedas, a husband is reported as announcing, with considerable naïveté, that he will not any longer allow his wives to be approached by other men, since he has received an opinion "that a son belongs to him who begot him in the world of Yama." In this world it is to be observed, there seems to be no doubt entertained that the son begotten by others on his wife would be his own.

Origin of the Niyoga.

§ 70. It was upon this principle—viz., that a son by whomsoever begotten, was the property of the husband of the mother—that the kshetraja, or son begotten upon a wife, ranked so high in the list of subsidiary sons. The Mahabharata and Vishnu Purana relate how king Saudasa, being childless, induced Vasishtha to beget for him a son upon his wife Damayanti. So king Kalinga is represented as requesting the old Rishi Dirghatamas to beget offspring for him; and Pandu, when he became a Sunnysi, accepted, as his own, sons begotten upon his wife by strangers. The same passage of the Mahabharata which relates how Svetaketu put an end to promiscuous intercourse on the part of husbands and wives, also states that a wife, when appointed by her husband to raise up seed to him by connection with another man, is guilty of sin if she refuses (m). And so the law-books expressly sanction the begetting of offspring by another on the wife of a man, who was impotent, or disordered in mind, or incurably diseased; and the son so begotten belonged to the incapacitated husband (n). No

(k) Manu, ix., § 32—44, 48—55, 181; x., § 70; Nar., xii., § 56—60. Viramit., p. 104, § 4.

(l) Apast., ii., vi, 13, § 6, 7, and note; Baudh., ii., 2, § 25; Vasish., xvi., § 6, 7; Gautama, xviii., § 11.

(m) Muir., A. S. T., i., 418, 419; Wilson, Works, v., 810; M. Müller, A. S., Lit., 56; 3 Dig., 252.

(n) Baudh., ii., 2, § 12; Manu, ix., § 162, 167, 203. Section 162 shows that a man might have a son begotten by procreation, and also a son begotten by himself.

rule is laid down that the person employed to beget offspring during the husband's life should be a near relation, or any relation (o). In fact, in the instances just mentioned, the procreator, who was called in aid, was not only not of the same family, but was not even of the same caste, the owner of the wife being a Kshatriya, and his assistant being a Brahman.

§ 71. The begetting of offspring upon the widow of a man who had left no issue is, of course, merely an extension of the practice just discussed (p). But there was this difference between the two cases; that in the latter, for the first time, the element of fiction was introduced. In the former case, the husband became the father, not by any fiction of paternity, but by the simple fact that he was the owner of the mother. But after his death the ownership had ceased; unless, indeed, by another fiction, he was considered as still surviving in her (q). Therefore, unless the husband had given express directions during his lifetime, the process to be adopted was to be as like as possible to an actual begetting by him, or was to be such a substituted begetting as he would probably have sanctioned. Hence, such a connection was never permitted when the widow had issue already. Nor was it to be continued further than was necessary for the purpose of conception. Nor was it allowable to procreate more than one son, though at one time it was thought that a second might lawfully be produced (r). Nor was the widow allowed to consort with any one she pleased, or to do so at all merely of her own free will. The procreator was to be the brother of the deceased if possible, or, if he was not begotten upon widow.

Offspring

(o) Apastamba, who is strongly opposed to the Niyoga, says (ii., x., 27, § 2) that a husband shall not make over his wife, who occupies the position of a gentilis, to others than to his gentilis in order to cause children to be begotten for himself. It is probable that this refers to an authority to beget after the husband's death. If not, it is merely a restriction on the old usage.

(p) This alone is the levirate referred to by Mr. McLennan, see Fort. Rev., May 1877. The general usage of begetting a son upon the wife of another on his behalf was known by the term Niyoga, (that is, order or commission) of which levirate was only a special instance.

(q) Manu, ix., § 45; Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 458.

(r) Manu, ix., § 58—63, 143, 147; Narada, xii., § 62, 80—88; Yama, 2 Dig., 468.

attainable a near sapinda (s). This was either to enhance the fiction of paternity; or, perhaps, still further to exclude any personal feeling on the part of the widow. Further some authorisation was necessary, though it is not very clearly stated by whom it was to be given. In a legend mentioned in the Mahabharata, Vyasa begets children on both the widows of his brother, at the request of Satyavat, the mother of the deceased (t). Gautama asserts that the widow must obtain the permission of her Gurus. Narada speaks of the authorisation as being given to the widow by her spiritual parents, or by her relations. Manu merely speaks of her being authorised, to which Kulluka Bhatta adds by the husband or spiritual guide. Yajnavalkya refers to the authority of the latter (u). It is quite plain that even the brother could not perform the act without some external authority.

Niyoga not connected with polyandry.

§ 72. If I am right in this view, it is evident that the levirate, as practised among the Aryan Hindus, was not a survival of polyandry. The levir did not take his brother's widow as his wife. He simply did for his brother, or other near relation, when deceased, what the latter might have authorised him, or any other person, to do during his lifetime. And this, of course, explains why the issue so raised belonged to the deceased and not to the begetter. If it were a relic of polyandry, the issue would belong to the surviving polyandrous husband, and the wife would pass over to him as his wife. Such a course would have been natural enough even among Hindus, and, as we shall see presently, the practice actually existed (v). But it is something completely different from the Hindu Niyoga. And the same explanation which accounts for the origin of the

(s) Gautama, xviii., § 4-7, xxviii., § 23; Manu, ix., § 59; Narada, xii., § 80-88; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 126. Manu permits either a brother or another. Yajnavalkya, either a relative or another. Kulluka Bhatta in his gloss adds the word sapinda as limiting the vague word another.

(t) Ind. Wisd., 376.

(u) Gautama, xviii., § 5; Narada, xii., § 80-87; Manu, ix., § 58; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 68.

(v) Post § 73.

levirate accounts also for its extinction. As soon as any idea of mutual fidelity, sentiment, or delicacy, arose as an element in the marriage union, the notion of allowing issue to be begotten on a wife would become most repulsive. And as that practice died away, the usage of authorising it in regard to a widow would naturally die away also, though it might continue longer in the latter case than in the former. We can see that a considerable amount of refinement in the relations between man and wife had already sprung up at the date of our compilation of Manu (w); and we can understand how it came about that texts were interpolated forbidding a practice which the preceding texts had sanctioned and regulated (x). The Niyoga would also become unpopular, as partition became more common. So long as the family remained undivided, the afterborn son would be merely an additional mouth to feed, accompanied by a pair of hands to work, and he would take upon himself the entire duty of performing the recurring ceremonies to his quasi-father. But as soon as the practice of division sprang up, he would be entitled to claim a share, and to stand generally in his parent's place. At one time, too, it appears that the widow had a right to manage the property of her deceased husband on his behalf (y). Naturally the relations would cease to authorise an act which tended to defeat their own rights.

§ 73. The actual marriage of a widow with the brother of her deceased husband is, of course, something quite different from the levirate. This was sanctioned by Manu in the single case of a girl who had been left a virgin widow (z). The practice still exists in many parts of India. It has been found among the Ideiyars, a pastoral race of Southern India; among the Gaudas of South Canara, and the Savaras of Vizagapatam and Ganjam; in Orissa, among the Jat families of the Punjab, both Brahman and Rajputs Marriage of widow with husband's brother.

(w) Manu, iii., § 45, 55-62; ix., § 101-105.

(y) Manu, ix., § 210, 146, 190.

(x) Manu, ix., § 64-68.

(z) Manu, ix., § 60, 70.

and among some of the Rajput class of Central India (a). In the Punjab such marriages are considered of an inferior class, and do not give the issue full right of inheritance (b). Marriages to the husband's brother may in some cases be a relic of polyandry, but they seem to me capable of a much simpler explanation. There is nothing in the usage of itself unnatural and revolting. The marriage of a woman with two brothers successively is merely the converse of the marriage of a man with two sisters successively, a sort of union which, though illegal, is by no means uncommon in Great Britain, and which is absolutely legal in several of our colonies. Marriage with a deceased wife's sister is believed to be very common among the lower orders, from the simple fact that a sister-in-law very frequently becomes a permanent member of the family during the life of the sister, and continues in it after her death. She naturally takes the place of her sister as mother and wife. Exactly the same facts would lead to the converse result in a Hindu undivided family. On the death of the husband the widow would continue to reside in the same house with her brother-in-law. He would take possession of all the effects of his deceased brother, not as heir but as manager of the family corporation by virtue of seniority (c). At a time when women were regarded merely as chattels (d), the wives of the deceased would naturally pass over to the manager, who was bound to support them. To take

(a) Madras Census Rep., 149; S. Can. Man., I., 162; Census 1891, xiii., 254, 257. Punjab Cust., 94; Lyall, Fort Rev., Jan. 1877, 103; Sarvadhikari, 528, n.

(b) Census of 1891 General Report, 255.

(c) Among some tribes of the Punjab the custom is that the widow should marry not her husband's elder brother but his younger brother. Punjab Customary Law, II., 94.

(d) The prohibition against dividing women at a partition (Manu, ix., § 219; Gautama, xxviii., § 46) seems to point to a time when they had been looked upon merely as a part of the family property. Perhaps those curious texts which state the liability of a man who had taken the wife, or widow, of another to pay his debts, may be founded on the same principle (1 Dig., 321—323, 2 Dig., 476; Narada, iii., § 21—26; V. May, v., 4, § 16, 17; Spencer, i., 680; post § 327). Accordingly Narada says (iii., § 23, 24):—"In all the four classes, wives and goods go together; he who takes a man's wives takes his property also." "The wife is considered as the dead man's property." In Assam the heir to a Miri estate inherits with it the whole body of his father's wives, with the exception of his own actual mother. Among the Garos the bridegroom by his marriage pledges himself to the reversion of his mother-in-law.

the illustration from Scandinavian history cited by Mr. McLennan: "Now Bork set up his abode with Mordissa, and takes his brother's widow to wife with his brother's goods; that was the rule in those days, and wives were heritage like other things." The only difference is that the Hindu Mordissa would have been living all along in the house with the Hindu Bork, and that on the death of her husband the latter would have become her natural protector and legal guardian. The transition to husband is so natural that it is strange it did not more universally take place.

§ 74. The same principle, viz., that the son belongs to the owner of the mother, can be shown with greater ease in the other cases. The secretly born son is described by Vishnu as follows: "The son who is secretly born in the house is the sixth. He belongs to him on whose bed he was born" (e). Manu is to the same effect, and the gloss of Kulluka Bhatta shows that the mother is supposed to be a married woman, whose husband's absence makes it certain that he was not the father. Yet the child belongs to him (f). In the case of the son of a damsel (Kanina)^{Son of damsel;} born in her father's house, if she marries, the son belongs to the husband, and inherits to him. If she does not marry, he belongs to, and is the heir of, her father, under whose dominion she remains (g). So, "if a pregnant^{or bride;} young woman marry, whether her pregnancy be known or unknown, the male child in her womb belongs to the bridegroom, and is called a son received with his bride" (Sahodha) (h). As regards the sons of twice-married^{or twice-married woman.} women (paurnarbhava), and of disloyal wives, Narada lays down the same rule. "Their offspring belongs to the begetter, if they have come under his dominion, in consideration of a price he had paid to the husband. But the children of one who has not been sold belong to her husband" (i). Of course the children of a woman who had actually been married to a second husband would, a fortiori, have belonged to him (k).

(e) Vishnu, xv., § 13, 14. (f) Manu, ix., § 170; Viramit., ii., 2, § 5.

(g) Vishnu, xv., § 10—12; Vasishtha, xvii., § 14; Narada, xiii., § 17, 18. The Viramitrodaya, p. 113, says that the child belongs to the father of the woman or husband, according as she was affianced or not at the time of birth. This is also the view taken by Nanda Pandita in the Vaijayanti. Jolly, § 152.

(h) Manu, ix., § 173; Vishnu, xv., § 15—17; Narada, xiii., § 17.

Son by a concubine.

§ 75. The same considerations seem to govern the case of a child by a concubine, who is classed by some writers with the child by a Sudra (l). The union of a man of the higher classes with a Sudra was, in the later law, though not originally, looked upon as so odious that the son was only entitled to maintenance, and not to inheritance (m). And the position of a son born to him by a concubine was no better (n). But the son of a Sudra by a concubine was always entitled to inherit under certain events. The distinction, however, seems to have been taken that, in order to do so, he must have been begotten upon a woman who was under the absolute control of the begetter. Manu speaks of the son begotten by a man of the servile class "on his female slave, or on the female slave of his male slave" (o). And so Narada says: "there is no issue if a man has had intercourse with a woman in the house of another man; and it is termed fornication by the learned if a woman has intercourse with a man in the house of a stranger" (p) obviously, because in the latter case the woman is not under his dominion. Her issue would belong to the person who was her owner.

Son of an appointed daughter.

§ 76. The case of the son of the appointed daughter is a little more complicated, but appears to me to be explicable in the same way. She was lawfully married to her husband. Yet her son became the son of her father, if he had no male issue; and he became so, not only by agreement with her husband, but by a mere act of intention on the

(i) Narada, xii., § 55. For the definition of a "paunarbhava," see Vishnu, xv., § 7-9; Manu, ix., § 175; Narada, xii., § 46-49; Vasishtha, xvii., § 13.
 (k) Katyayana, 3 Dig., 236.
 (l) See Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 21, 22; Vishnu, xv., § 27, note.
 (m) Cf. Manu, iii., § 13-19, ix., § 145-155, 178; Gautama, xxviii., § 39; Devala, 3 Dig., 135, and other authorities cited 3 Dig., 115-133; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 125.
 (n) Mitakshara, i., 12, § 3. (o) Manu, ix., § 179. (p) Narada, xii., § 61.

part of her father, without any consent asked for or obtained. Hence a man was warned not to marry a girl without brothers, lest her father should take her first son as his own (q). Now Vasishtha quotes a text of the Vedas as showing that "the girl who has no brother comes back to the males of her own family, to her father and the rest. Returning she becomes their son" (r). In her case, therefore, the father seems to have retained his dominion over her, to the extent of being able to appropriate her son if he wished it (s). The same result of course followed, where the marriage took place with an express agreement that this dominion should be reserved (t).

A custom precisely similar to that of the son of an appointed daughter still exists among the Nambudri Brahmins of the Malabar Coast in Madras. They are believed to have emigrated from Eastern India about 1200 or 1500 years ago, bearing with them a system of Hindu law of an archaic character, more nearly representing that of the Sutra writers than the later form to be found in the Mitakshara (u). Where a Nambudri has no male issue, he may give his daughter in Sarvasvadhanam marriage. The result of such a marriage is that, if a son is born, he inherits to, and is for all purposes the son of, his father-in-law. If there is no male issue, or on failure of such issue, the property of the wife's family does not belong to the husband, but reverts to the family of the father-in-law (v), unless the marriage has been accompanied by a formal appointment of the son-in-law as heir of the Illom (w).

§ 77. The remaining sons are all adopted sons, and avowedly the original property of their natural parents. Their case will be separately treated in the next chapter.

(q) Gautama, xxviii., § 19, 20; Manu, iii., § 11. (r) Vasishtha, xvii., § 12.
 (s) In Russia, a father retains his dominion over his daughter after marriage, and may claim her services at his own home if they are required in case of illness, or by the death of his wife. See an article on Marriage Customs, in the Pall Mall Budget, xix., 249, one of a series on the Russians of to-day.
 (t) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 11.
 (u) Vasudevan v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad., 157, 160.
 (v) 11 Mad., 158, 162; Kumaran v. Narayanan, 9 Mad., 260; Chemnautha v. Palakuzhu, 25 Mad., 662, p. 664.
 (w) Mad. H. Ct. S. A., 247 of 1881, cited Wigram, 16.

The only matter of remark bearing on the present enquiry is this: that in two of the cases, viz., the son given (dattaka) and the son bought (kritaka), the boy was a minor, and the right in him was given over by those who had dominion over him, and could be given over by no one else (§ 132). In the case of the son made (kritrima) the youth was of full age, and therefore able to dispose of himself; and in the case of the son self-given (svayam-dattaka) or cast off (apaviddha) he had been abandoned, or ill-treated by his parents, or had lost them. Their dominion had accordingly come to an end (x).

All but two now obsolete.

§ 78. All of these sons, except the legitimate and the adopted, are long since obsolete (y). Possibly traces of the old usage may still linger on in remote districts. Jaganatha says that in Orissa it is still the practice with some people to raise up issue on the wife of a brother, but his own opinion is strongly expressed against the legality of such a proceeding. Mr. Colebrooke states that, in his time, the practice of appointing brothers to raise up male issue to deceased, impotent, or even absent brothers, still prevailed in Orissa. Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari says in reference to this statement,—“From all the enquiries we have made on the subject, it appears that the practice is highly reprobated among the higher classes in Orissa, and if it exists among the lower classes at all, it exists in such a form that it is of no importance whatever from a juridical point of view.” He adds that, among some of the rich and noble classes in Orissa, the practice of Niyoga has probably assumed the modernised form of marriage with an elder brother's widow (z). The same reason which caused the Kshetraja son to fall into disrepute, necessarily led to the disappearance of several of the others also. The increasing strictness of the marriage tie made a husband refuse to recognize as his son any issue which was not begotten upon his own wife by himself, or, at all events, might not be supposed to have been so begotten. This would eliminate from the list of sons the Kanina, the Gudhaja, and the Sahodha, unless, in the latter case, the son conceived before marriage was born after marriage (a). When a second marriage came to be forbidden (§ 93), the Pawnarbhava would follow the same fate (b). The practice of appointing a daughter would also fall into disuse since, so long as it lasted, there would be a difficulty in finding a husband for a girl who had no brothers. It was probably at this period that the son of a daughter not appointed came to take the high rank which he at present occupies in the list of heirs (c). Among the Nambudris in Malabar, the son of the appointed daughter is still recognised as heir to his maternal grandfather, where the marriage of the daughter has taken place according to the form known as Sarvasvadhanam; the formula used being, “I give unto thee this virgin, who has no brother, decked with jewels; the son who may be born of her shall be my son” (d). The validity of such an appointment was recognised in Pondicherry on at least two occasions so lately as 1830; but in 1868 the Civil Court decided that the usage had become obsolete from time immemorial (e). In one case the Judicial Committee intimated a doubt whether such a son might not even now be lawfully created in the orthodox parts of India (f). It is improbable,

(x) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 13, 14, 16, 19, 21; Vasishtha, xvii., § 17—20; Vishnu xv., § 18—26; Manu, ix., § 168, 169, 174, 177; post, § 105. Similarly in Rome there were two sorts of adoption; adoptio, properly so called of a child who was under the dominion of another, and adrogatio, of a person who was sui juris.

(y) Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 271; Aditya Purana, ib., 272, 288; Apararka, cited, Sarvadhikari, 512; V. May, iv., 4, § 46; Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 64; Smriti Chandrika, x., § 5; D. Ch., i., 9; 2 Bor., 456; post, § 105. The mention of them in works so late as the Daya Bhaga cannot be taken as any evidence that they were still recognized at that time. See ante, § 15. Sarvadhikari, 519.

(z) 3 Dig., 288, 289, 276, note; Sarvadhikari, 528.

(a) See Collector of Trichinopoly v. Leekamani, 1 I. A., 283, 293; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 115; S. C., 21 Suth., 358.

(b) The Sudder Court of Bengal, however, admitted that, by local usage, such a son might inherit. In the particular instance, that of the Nagur Brahmans of Benares, the Custom was negatived, Mohun Singh v. Chuman Rai, 1 S. D. A., 28 (37).

(c) See post, § 519.

(d) Kumaran v. Narayan, 9 Mad., 260; Vasudevan v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad., 157; Travancore Census, 1891, p. 687; Ohemnautha v. Palakuzhu, 25 Mad., 662.

(e) Sorg H. L., 109; Co. Con., 55, 62, 69.

(f) Thakur Jeebnath Singh v. Court of Wards, 2 I. A., 163; 23 Suth., P. C., 409; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 190.

however, that this doubt will be found to have any substantial foundation. The cessation of marriage between persons of different classes (§ 88) would similarly put an end to the Nishada. The five sorts of adopted sons would alone remain. These are reserved for future discussion (§ 104).

Eight forms of marriage.

§ 79. The above statements will show that, in the view of early Hindu law, sonship was not by any means founded on marriage. A consideration of the marriage law itself will show that, in ancient times, it meant something very different from what it does at present. Eight forms of marriage are described by Manu, and in less detail by Narada and Yajnavalkya (g). "The ceremony of Brahma, of the Devas, of the Rishis, of the Prajapatis, of the Asuras, of the Gandharvas, and of the Rakshasas; the eighth, and basest, is that of the Pisachas. The gift of a daughter, clothed only with a single robe, to a man learned in the Veda, whom her father voluntarily invites, and respectfully receives, is the nuptial rite called Brahma. The rite which sages call Daiva is the gift of a daughter, whom her father has decked in gay attire, when the sacrifice is already begun, to the officiating priest, who performs that act of religion. When the father gives his daughter away, having received from the bridegroom one pair of kine, or two pairs, for uses prescribed by law, that marriage is termed Arsha. The nuptial rite called Prajapatya is when the father gives away his daughter with due honour, saying distinctly, 'May both of you perform together your civil and religious duties.' When the bridegroom, having given as much wealth as he can afford to the father and paternal kinsmen, and to the damsel herself, takes her voluntarily as his bride, that marriage is named Asura. The reciprocal connection of a youth and a damsel with mutual desire is the marriage denominated

(g) Manu, iii., § 20—42; Narada, xii., 39—45; Yajnavalkya, i., § 58—61; Apastamba, ii., 11 and 12, and Vasishtha, i., 28—36, omit the Prajapatya and Pisacha forms.

Gandharva, contracted for the purpose of amorous embraces, and proceeding from sensual inclination. The seizure of a maiden by force from her house, while she weeps and calls for assistance, after her kinsmen and friends have been slain in battle or wounded, and their houses broken open, is the marriage styled Rakshasa. When the lover secretly embraces the damsel, either sleeping or flushed with strong liquor, or disordered in her intellect, that sinful marriage, called Pisacha, is the eighth and the basest."

§ 80. It is obvious that these forms are founded upon different views of the marriage relation, that they belong to different stages of society, and that their relative antiquity is exactly in the inverse ratio to the order in which they are mentioned. The last three point to a time when the rights of parents over their daughters were unknown or disregarded, and when men procured for themselves women (they can hardly yet be called wives) by force, fraud or enticement. But even these three show variations of barbarism. The Pisacha form is more like the sudden lust of the ourang-outang than anything human. The first dawning of the conjugal idea cannot have arisen, when the name of marriage could be given to a connection, which it would be an exaggeration to describe as temporary. The Rakshasa form is simply the marriage by capture, the existence of which, coupled with the practice of exogamy, Mr. McLennan has tracked out in the most remote ages and regions. It is at the present day practised among the Meenas, a robber tribe of Central India, and among the Gonds of Berar, not as a symbol but a matter of real earnest—as real as any other form of robbery (h). The connection between the Rakshasa and the Gandharva forms is evidenced by the fact that both were considered lawful for the warrior tribe (i). The Different stages of law marked by:

The Pisacha;

The Rakshasa;

The Gandharva forms.

(h) Lyall, Asiatic Studies, 163. V. N. Mandlik, 441. As to survivals of this practice in the Punjab, see Punjab Customary Law, ii., 91, and in Assam, Census of 1891; Assam Report I, 118.

(i) Manu, iii., § 26.

latter is an advance beyond the former in this respect, that it assumes a state of society in which a friendly, though perhaps stealthy, intercourse was possible between man and woman before their union, and in which the inclinations of the female were consulted. Both forms admitted of a permanent connection, though there is certainly nothing in the definition to show that permanence was a necessary element in either transaction. The remaining forms of marriage all agree in this, that the dominion of the parents over the daughter was fully recognized, and that the essence of the marriage consisted in a formal transfer of this dominion to the husband.

The Asura form. § 81. The Asura form, or marriage by purchase, which the Sanskrit writers so much condemn (k), was probably the next in order of antiquity to those already mentioned. When it became impossible, or inconvenient, to obtain wives by robbery or stealth, and when it was still necessary to obtain them from another tribe (l), the only other mode would be to obtain them by purchase. And, of course, the same system would survive even when marriage was permitted within the tribe, though not within the family, if an unmarried girl was a valuable commodity in the hands of her own family, either as a servant, while she remained unmarried, or as a possible wife, where the balance of the sexes rendered it difficult to obtain wives. As delicacy increased in the relation between the sexes, marriage by sale would fall into disrepute from its resemblance to prostitution (m). Hence Manu says: "Let no father, who knows the law, receive a gratuity, however small, for giving his daughter in marriage, since the man who, through avarice, takes a gratuity for that purpose is a seller of his offspring" (n). The Arsha form. The Arsha form, which is one of the (k) Manu, iii., § 41.

(l) See as to this necessity, post § 86.

(m) See Teulon, 12. Tusco more iute tibi dotem quæris corpore. "Among the Tiyars of North Malabar, a sum of money is paid during the marriage ceremony to the bride's karnavan, called the bride's kanom. This shows that the bride was once treated as mortgaged for use until the kanom was repaid." Mal. Mar. Rép., 52.

(n) Manu, iii., § 5; ix., § 98, 100.

approved forms, appears to be simply a survival from the Asura, the substantial price paid for the girl having dwindled down to a gift of slight, or nominal, value (o). Another mode of preserving the symbol of sale, while rejecting the reality, appears to have been the receipt of a gift of real value, such as a chariot and a hundred cows, which was immediately returned to the giver, much in the same way as our Indian officials touch a valuable muzzur, which is at once removed by the servants of the donor. This arrangement is said by Apastamba to have been prescribed by the Vedas "in order to fulfil the law,"—that is, apparently, the ancient law, by which the binding form of marriage was a sale (p). The ultimate compromise, however, appears to have been that the present given by the suitor was received by the parents for the benefit of the bride, and became her dowry. Manu says: "When money or goods are given to damsels, whose kinsmen receive them not for their own use, it is no sale; it is merely a token of courtesy and affection to the brides" (q). This gift, which was called her fee (sulka), passed in a peculiar course of devolution to the woman's own brothers; that is, back again into her original family, instead of to her own female heirs. One rendering of the text of Gautama which regulates this succession, even allowed the fee to go to her brothers during her life. In either view, it was evidently considered to be something over which her family had special rights. If they abandoned the possession, they retained the reversion (r). This was probably the reason that where a girl, who had been allowed to pass maturity, exercised her right of choosing a husband for herself, the bridegroom was not to give a nuptial present to her father, "since he had lost his dominion over her, by detaining her at a time when she (o) Manu, iii., § 29; Yajñavalkya, i., § 59.

(p) Apastamba, ii., vi., 13, § 12. See Mayr, 155, who compares the Roman "Coemptio," and the German "Fraukauf."

(q) Manu, iii., § 54; Mayr, 157. See a case held to be of this sort in Bombay. In the goods of Nathibai, 2 B.M., 9 Mr. McGahan mentions an exactly similar usage as prevailing among the Kirghiz, Campaigning on the Oxus, 60.

(r) Mayr, 170.

might have been a parent." But, on the other hand, as the reversion was thus lost, she was not allowed to carry with her the ornaments she had received from her own family (s). If the girl died before marriage, the gifts made by the bridegroom reverted to him, after deducting any expenses that might have been already incurred (t).

Essence of remaining forms is absence of equivalent.

Brahma form.

§ 82. The essential difference between the three remaining forms, viz., the Brahma, Daiva and Prajapatya, and those just described, is this: that while, on the one hand, the girl is voluntarily handed over by her parents, they, on the other hand, receive no equivalent. The Daiva form is expressly stated to be appropriate to an officiating priest, that is, a Brahman. Manu describes the bridegroom in the Brahma form as "a man learned in the Vedas," therefore presumably a Brahman also. It is probable that these forms first arose in the case of Brahmans. When mixed marriages were allowed, the great reverence shown to the Brahman would naturally have led to his being accepted upon his own merits, without any payment. In time, the same practice would be adopted, even when he was marrying a girl of his own caste. When these forms came to be universally adopted by the Brahmans, they would be followed by the inferior classes also as a mark of respectability: just as a marriage in St. George's, Hanover Square, is specially prized by persons who do not happen to have houses in that fashionable district. Prima facie one would imagine that a Brahma marriage, from its very definition, was inadmissible for a Sudra; and Manu certainly seems to contemplate only the last four as applicable to the case of the three lower classes (u). But there is no doubt that the Brahma marriage has long since ceased to be the property of any class; and the Madras Sudder Court have held that, in the case of Sudras, the mere fact that the bride is given without the bestowal of any gift by the bridegroom constitutes the marriage one of the Brahma form (v).

(s) Manu, ix., § 90—93; Gaut., xviii., § 20.

(t) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 146; Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 30.

(u) Manu, iii., § 22—26. (v) Sivarama v. Bagavan, Madras Dec. of 1859, 44.

§ 83. Of these various forms of marriage all but two, the Brahma and the Asura, are now obsolete. Manu treats the first four as the approved forms, and the latter four as disapproved. He permits the Gandharva and the Rakshasa to a military man. Narada forbids the Rakshasa in all cases. Both absolutely forbid the Asura and the Pisacha (w). The existence of the disapproved forms, or some of them, at a period much later than Narada, is evidenced by the rules which provide a peculiar descent for the stridhana of a woman so married (x). It is stated generally that the Brahma is the only legal form at present, and probably this may be so among the higher classes, to whom the assertion is limited by Mr. Steele (y). But there is no doubt that the Asura is still practised; and in Southern India, among the Sudras, it is a very common, if not the prevailing, form (z). In Assam, "as a rule, women are looked on as a species of property to be bought with a price, or by service in the father's house." The Gharos and Khasis alone do not purchase their wives (a). Even in Madras, however, and among Sudras, it has been held that the presumption will be against the assertion that a marriage is in a disapproved form, and that it must be proved by those who rely on it for any purpose. The same point has been decided by the High Court in Calcutta, as regards Bengal, and seems to have been assumed by the Judicial Committee in a case Brahma and Asura alone survive.

Presumption as to form.

(w) Manu, iii., § 23, 24, 36—41; Narada, xii., § 45.

(x) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 11.

(y) Gibelin, i., 63; Colebrooke, Essays, 142 (ed. of 1858); Steele, 159; V. N. Mandlik, 301.

(z) 3 Dig., 605; 1 Stra. H. L., 43; Mayr, 155. I have often heard the same statement made, arguendo, in the Madras Courts by the late Mr. J. W. Branson, a Barrister of great local and professional experience, and thoroughly versed in the languages and customs of Southern India. The statement seemed to be accepted by the Bar and the Bench. Jagannatha quotes a text from Yajnavalkya, stating that the Asura ceremony is peculiar to the mercantile and servile classes, which is not to be found in Stenzler's edition. It ought to come in after i., § 61. See 3 Dig., 604; In the goods of Nathibai, 2 Bom., 9. Even between Brahmans such a marriage has been held valid in Madras. Visvanathan v. Saminathan, 13 Mad., 83. Where under the form of an Asura marriage the parents contracted for a maintenance to be paid to themselves in consideration of giving their daughter to an ineligible suitor, the Allahabad High Court held that the agreement for maintenance was contrary to public policy and could not be enforced. It was not contended, however, that the marriage itself was invalid. Baldeo Sahar v. Jumna Kunwar, 23 All., 495.

(a) Census of 1891; Assam Report, I, 117, 118.

from Tirhoot (b). In a case in Western India, the Shastras stated that, although Asura marriages were forbidden, it had nevertheless been the custom of the world for Brahmans and others to celebrate such marriages, and that no one had ever been expelled from caste for such an act (c). M. Sorg states that among the Tamil population the Asura form of marriage is universal, and that the Brahma form, which is known as Cannigadanam, or gift of a virgin, is not thought reputable, and that the son-in-law so married is considered to become adopted into the family of his father-in-law, and loses his right of succession in his natural family (d). In fact a marriage, in which the bridegroom gets his bride for nothing, is looked upon as a purchase of Gandharva form.

the bridegroom. The validity of a Gandharva marriage between Kshatriyas appears to have been declared by the Bengal Sudder Court in 1817, and to have been assumed both by the District and Sudder Court so late as 1850 and 1853 (e). It seems to me, however, that this form belongs to a time when the notion of marriage involved no idea of permanence or exclusiveness. Its definition implies nothing more than fornication. It is difficult to see how such a connection could be treated at present as constituting a marriage, with the incidents and results of such a union. This view was unhesitatingly laid down by the Allahabad High Court in a case between Rajputs, when the offspring of such a marriage claimed as, but was held not to be, legitimate (f). The Madras High Court considers that a Gandharva marriage would be legal, if celebrated with nuptial rites, of which the homam ceremony, or sacrifice by fire is an essential part (g). It is obvious that such a ceremonial proceeding is something very

(b) Kaithi v. Kulladasi, Madras Dec. of 1860, 201; Judoonath v. Bussunt Coomar, 11 B. L. R., 286, 288, S. C., 19 Suth., 264; Jagannath Prasad v. Ranjit Singh, 25 Cal., 354; Mt. Thakoor v. Rai Baluk Ram, 11 M. I. A., 175, S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 3.

(c) Keshow Rao v. Naro, 2 Bor., 198 [215, 221], and see Nundlal v. Tapeedas, 1 Bor., 18 [16, 20].

(d) Sorg H. L., 30—33.
(e) Hujmu Chul v. Ranees Bhadoorun, cited S. D. of 1846, 540; S. C., 7 B. S. D., 355, 3 Dig., 606; Jogendro Deb v. Fumendro Deb, 14 M. I. A., 375.

(f) Bhaoni v. Maharaj Singh, 3 All., 738.

(g) Brindavana v. Radhamani, 12 Mad., 72, per curiam, 13 M. I. A., 506.

different from the unconventional arrangement described by Manu. No doubt the texts referred to in the Judgment of the High Court result from the attempt of later writers to reconcile a respect for ancient usages with the greater formality of modern society.

§ 84. As regards the persons who are authorised to dispose of a girl, Narada says: "A father shall give his daughter in marriage himself, or a brother with the father's consent, or a grandfather, maternal uncle, kinsmen, or relatives. In default of all these, the mother, if she is qualified; if she is not, the remoter relations should give a girl in marriage. If there be none of these, the girl shall apply to the king, and having obtained his permission to make her own choice, choose a husband for herself" (h). Where a father had abandoned his wife and daughter, the mother would be capable to give away her daughter (i). But under no other circumstances would a marriage contract be binding without the father's consent (k). And the maternal grandfather has a right of disposal superior to that of the stepmother (l). Where the natural guardian is a female, she is not necessarily invested with exclusive authority in the matter, as is clear from the fact that the mother, who ranks next to the father as natural guardian, ranks low in the list of relations for the purpose of disposing of her daughter in marriage (m). But the High Court of Madras refused to allow a divided uncle to dispose of his niece in marriage without consulting her mother. They admitted that the text of Yajnavalkya (i., § 63) could not be limited to the case of a divided family, but they thought that the object of placing the male relations before the mother was merely to supply that protection and advice which the Hindu system considered to be neces-

(h) Narada, xii., § 20—22; Yajnavalkya, i., § 63.

(i) Bace Rulyat v. Jeychund, Bellasis, 43; S. C., 1 Mor. (N. S.), 181; Khushalchand v. Bai Mani, 11 Bom., 247.

(k) Nundlal v. Tapeedas, 1 Bor., 14 [16]; Nanabhai v. Janardhan, 12 Bom., 110; Shenkapa Setiapa v. Revana, 17 Mysore, 33.

(l) Ram Bunssee v. Soobh Koonwaree, 7 Suth., 321; S. C., 3 Wym., 219; S. C., 2 In. Jur., 193.

(m) Per cur., 7 Suth., 323.

sary on account of the dependent condition of women. That dependence had now practically ceased to be enforced by the law. Where the mother was at once the guardian of the girl, and the legal possessor of the estate out of which the marriage expenses must be defrayed, they considered that she was entitled to be consulted on the one hand, and the male relations on the other, but that the Court would probably interfere to compel the marriage of a girl to a suitable husband, if chosen by either party, and rejected without reasonable cause by the other (n). Where the guardian is about to effect a marriage which is obviously injurious to the girl, the Court has power to interfere, especially where his conduct is actuated by improper or interested motives. Such interference, however, would very rarely, and only in extreme cases, be allowed, where the guardian was the father (o).

Interference of Court.

§ 85. The above rules are of importance so long as the marriage rests in contract, and an attempt to give away a girl in marriage by a person not authorised to do so would be over-ruled by the Court upon a proper application by the person in whom the right was reposed (p). A very different question arises where the marriage has actually been celebrated. A very strong case of that sort recently arose in Madras (q). There the mother had caused her daughter's marriage to be celebrated without her husband's permission. The Brahman who celebrated the marriage was falsely informed by her that the father's consent had been given. It was found as a fact that the mother acted bonâ fide in the interest of her daughter, and, as her natural guardian, desiring to secure her a suitable husband. The father repudiated the marriage. The husband sued for a declaration that the marriage was irrevocable. The High Court decided in his favour. They said: "two propositions

(n) Namasevayam v. Annamal, 4 Mad., H. C., 839; Mt. Ruliyat v. Madkowjee, 2 Bor., 680 [739]; Kumla Buhoo v. Muneeshunkur, ib., 689 [746].

(o) Shridhar v. Hiratal, 12 Bom., 480.

(p) Per curiam, 11 Bom., 253.

(q) Venkatacharyulu v. Rangacharyulu, 14 Mad., 316.

of law may be taken to be established beyond controversy, viz., (1) where there is a gift by a legal guardian, and the marriage rite is duly solemnised (r) the marriage is irrevocable, and (2) where the girl is abducted by fraud or force and married, and there is no gift either by a natural or legal guardian, there is a fraud upon the policy of the religious ceremony, and there is therefore no valid religious ceremony" (s). "The third proposition of law, which is material to the case before us, is that when the mother of the girl, acting as her natural guardian, in view to her welfare, and without force or fraud, gives away the girl in marriage, and the marriage rite is duly solemnised, the marriage is not to be set aside. This view is supported by authority (t) and is sound in principle."

§ 86. The selection of persons to be married is limited by two rules: first, that they must be chosen outside the family: secondly, that they must be chosen inside the caste. The first of these rules is only a special instance of that singular prohibition against marriage between persons belonging to the same family or tribe, which is to be found in almost every part of the world, and to which Mr. McLennan has given the name of Exogamy. According to the Sanskrit writers, persons are forbidden to marry who are related as sapindas. This relationship extends to six degrees where the common ancestor is a male. Where the common ancestor is a female there is a difference of opinion; Manu and Apastamba extending the prohibition in her case also to six degrees, while Gautama, Vishnu, Vasishtha, Sankha, Narada and Yajnavalkya limit it to four degrees. To this restriction some of the above writers add a further rule that the bride and the bridegroom must not be of the same Persons to be selected.

Exogamy.

Forbidden affinities.

(r) See as to presumption in a favour of due performance of a marriage actually celebrated. Brindabun Chundra v. Chundra Karmokar, 12 Cal., 140.

(s) See per Norman, J., Aurjona Dasi v. Prahlad Chandra, 6 B. L. R., p. 254.

(t) Citing Bai Ruliyat v. Jeychand Rewal, Bellasis, 43; S. C., 1 Morley N. S., 181; Modhoosoodhan v. Jaidoo Chunder, 3 Suth., 194; Brindabun Chundra v. Chundra Karmokar, 12 Cal., 140; Khushal Chand v. Bai Mani, 11 Bom., 247; Ghazi v. Sakru, 19 All., 515; Bai Divali v. Moti Karson, 22 Bom., 509; Mulchand Kuber v. Bhudea, ibid., 812.

gotra or pravara. That is, that they must not be of the same family, nor invoke the same ancestor (u). In counting according to the above rules the person under consideration is to be excluded. That is to say, begin from the bride or bridegroom, and count, exclusive of both, six or four degrees upwards according as their relationship with the common ancestor is through the father or the mother respectively, and if the common ancestor is not reached within those degrees on both sides, they are not sapindas, and marriage between them can be solemnised (v). In this way 2,121 possible relations are rendered ineligible for marriage; while further complications, rendered more complex by differences of opinion among the commentators, arise in the case of an adopted son, who is excluded from marriage in two families, or where relationship is traced through stepmothers (w). Where the relationship arises from mere affinity, as distinguished from consanguinity, a marriage may be improper, but is not forbidden, in the sense of being invalid. For instance, a man may marry the daughter of his wife's sister; or his wife's sister, niece or aunt; or the sister or niece of his stepmother; or a paternal uncle's wife's sister, or niece (x). On the other hand, the strictness of these rules is relaxed as regards Western and Southern India by writers who recognise the validity of district or family custom permitting intermarriages within the forbidden degrees. They expressly refer to marriages between first cousins, such as that of a man with the daughter of his mother's brother or of his father's sister (y). Usage, unsupported by direct authority, permits the union

(u) Manu, iii., 5; Apastamba, ii., v., 11, § 15, 16; Gautama, iv., § 2—5; Vishnu, xxiv., § 9, 10; Narada, xii., § 7. Yajñ., i., § 52, 53; V. N. Mandlik, 411. It is said that a woman married within the forbidden degrees, though she cannot be the wife of the bridegroom for any conjugal or religious purposes, yet cannot be married by another, and must be maintained by her attempted husband. V. N. Mandlik, 508. See as to the prohibited degrees in the Punjab Customary Law, II, 120, 174.

(v) V. N. Mandlik, 347; Mitakshara, cited W. & B., 121. The apparent variance in the authorities quoted above arises from some counting exclusively and others inclusively.

(w) See V. N. Mandlik, 352.

(x) Ragavendra Rau v. Jayaram Rau, 20 Mad., 283.

(y) See the authorities cited by Mr. V. N. Mandlik, 403, 413, 416—424, 448.

of a man with his own sister's daughter (z). Marriage with a niece has, however, been held by the Bombay High Court to be incestuous, and the Madras High Court, while admitting that the rules among Sudras were not as strict as among Brahmans, and that instances existed of a man marrying his brother's daughter, intimated that such a practice was not warranted by usage (a).

§ 87. The restrictive Sanskrit texts, which have been referred to above, only apply to the twice-born classes. Even amongst these it is stated by Mr. V. N. Mandlik, that the Kshatriyas and Vaisyas have neither gotra nor pravara, and that thousands of Brahmans, in different parts of the country, are in the same position. As regards Sudras, the restraint upon intermarriage must arise from usage, or from voluntary adoption of the Sanskrit rules, not from any inherent efficacy of the rules themselves (b). But exactly the same rule against intermarriages between members of the same family has been observed among the Kurumbas of the Nilgiris, the Meenas of Central India, the Kandhs of Orissa, and among the Dravidian races of Southern India (c). Most of the Canarese castes are divided into sects, called babis, and members of the same bali cannot intermarry (d). In Madura, the women of the Chakkili tribe belong to the right-hand faction, and the men to the left-hand (e). Evidently a relic of the time when men had to marry women of a different tribe. So the chiefs of the Maravers are accustomed to marry Ahambadyan women, and of the children born of such marriages, the males must marry Ahambadyans, and the females must marry Maravers (f). Exactly the opposite rule of Endogamy is found to exist among other tribes in the same district. For instance, among the Kallans, the most proper marriage for a man is with his first cousin, that (z) V. N. Mandlik.

(a) Ramangavda v. Shivaji, cited V. N. Mandlik, 438; Vythilinga v. Vijithammal, 6 Mad., 43.

(b) V. N. Mandlik, 412, 431.

(c) Breeks, 51; Lyall, Fort. Rev., Jan. 1877, 106; Hunter, Orissa, ii., 81.

(d) S. Can. Man., I, 143, 160.

(e) Mad. Manual, Pt. II, 7.

(f) Mad. Manual, Pt. II, 42.

Limited application of rules.

Endogamy.

is, the daughter of his father's sisters or brother, and failing her, with his own aunt or niece. Among the Maravars, also, marriage is permitted between the children of brothers (g). The Konga caste in Southern India look upon a marriage with a maternal uncle's daughter as so desirable that a mere child is often married to such a girl who is twice his age (h). Among some of the Tamil castes, the children of a brother can intermarry with those of his sister, but neither the children of two brothers, nor those of two sisters can intermarry, the relationship in such cases being considered nearer, by some obscure process of reasoning (i). Among the Pullavans, or medicine men, of Malabar, brothers and sisters are said to marry (k). In many of the Dravidian castes it is said that the father will marry the son's widow (l). In ancient times, the incestuous marriages of the Sakya princes with their own sisters, and the similar intercourse of the Gandhara Brahmans with their own sisters and daughters-in-law (m), present an illustration of the same curious conflict of principle.

Mixed marriages
formerly permitted.

§ 88. The prohibition against marriages between persons of different castes is comparatively modern. Originally, marriages between men of one class and women of a lower, even of the Sudra class, were recognized (n), and must have tended strongly to produce that amalgamation of the customs of the Aryans and the aborigines, which I have already suggested as probable (o). The sons of such unequal unions were said to rank and to inherit, not equally, but in proportions regulated according to the class of their mother (p). Even this rule, however, appears to have been an innovation. Baudhayana lays it down

(g) Mad. Manual, Pt. II, 40, 50.

(h) Census 1891, xiii., 233.

(i) Sorg Int., 10. (k) Census 1891, xiii., 272. (l) Man. Adm. Madras, 106.

(m) Wheeler Hist. Ind., iii., 102; Muir, A. S. T., ii., 483.

(n) Apastamba stands alone among the early writers in not recognizing unequal marriages, ii., vi., 13, § 4, 5. It will be remembered that he does not recognize the subsidiary sons either. I cannot account for this difference, unless some passages have fallen out in the text.

(o) I take the Sudras as representing the aborigines in early times, but I am aware there is much controversy upon the point. See Muir, A. S. T., i., 140—159, 289—295, ii., 368, 455, 485; Lassen, Ind. Alt., i., 799.

(p) Manu, ix., § 149—154.

generally that "in case of a competition of a son born from a wife of equal class, and of one born from a wife of a lower class, the son of the wife of lower class may take the share of the eldest, in case he be possessed of good qualities" (q). All the writers allow marriages between a Sudra woman and a Kshatriya or Vaisya, but there is much conflict as to marriages between a Brahman and a Sudra woman. Among the Sutra writers the validity of such marriages seems to be undisputed, but there is much variance as to the position of the offspring. Some texts represent him as sharing with the higher sons; others as only inheriting in default of them; others as never taking more than a small fraction of the estate; and others as never entitled to more than maintenance (r). The conflict in Manu is still greater, and shows that the present compilation is made up of texts of different periods. Some texts forbid the marriage, some permit it. Some allow the son to inherit, others forbid him to do so (s). But perhaps the strongest possible recognition of such marriages is that afforded by Manu himself, when he admits that the offspring resulting from them might in seven generations rise to the highest class (t). It seems, however, to have been always admitted that a Sudra man could not lawfully marry a woman of a higher class than his own (u).

§ 89. Marriages between persons of different classes are long since obsolete (v). No doubt from the same process of ideas which has split up the whole native community into countless castes, which neither eat, drink, nor marry with each other (w). It is impossible now to say when obsolete.

Mixed marriages

(q) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 8. See Gautama, xxviii., § 35—38.

(r) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 6, 7, 21; Gautama, xxviii., § 39; Vasishtha, xvii., 21, 25.

(s) Cf. Manu, iii., § 12—19, ix., § 149—155; Narada, xii., § 4—6; Yajnavalkya, i., § 56, 57; Smṛiti Chandrika, ii., 2, § 8.

(t) Manu, x., § 64; see, too, § 42. (u) Manu, iii., § 13, ix., § 157.

(v) Vṛihat Naradiya Purana, 3 Dig., 141; D. K. S., i., 2, § 7.

(w) Marriages between persons in different sub-divisions of the same caste, e.g., of Brahmans or Sudras, have been said to be invalid, unless sanctioned by local custom. Melaram v. Thavooram, 9 Suth., 552; Narain Dhara v. Rakkhal, 1 Cal., 1; S. C., 23 Suth., 334. Contra, Pandaiya Talaver v. Puli Talaver, 1 Mad. H. C., 478; affd., 13 M. I. A., 141; S. C., 4 Mad. Jur., 323; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 41; Ramamani v. Kulanthai, 14 M. I. A., 346, 352; Upoma Kuchain v. Bholaram Dhubi, 15 Cal., 703; Fakir Gauda v. Gangi, 22 Bom., 277.

mixed marriages first became extinct. The Mitakshara follows Yajnavalkya in recognizing such marriages, though the phrase, "under the sanction of the law instances do occur," seems to show that they were dying out (x). They are also mentioned without disapproval by the Daya Bhaga, Smriti Chandrika, Sarasvati Vilasa, Viramitrodaya, Madhaviya, and Varadrajah (y). But in the case of the later authors, at all events, it is probable the discussion was merely introduced to give completeness to the subject, and not because such a practice really subsisted. Illegitimacy is of itself no disqualification for marriage. Where one or both parties to a marriage are illegitimate, it will be valid if they are in fact recognised by their caste men as belonging to the same caste (z).

Physical or mental capacity.

§ 90. As the great and primary object of marriage is the procuring of male issue, physical capacity is an essential requisite, so long as mere selection of a bridegroom is concerned; but a marriage with a eunuch is not an absolute nullity as with us (a). Mental incapacity stands in the same position. While the matter rested in contract, no Court, I imagine, would treat a promise to marry a lunatic or an idiot as binding; but the marriage, if celebrated, would be valid. The lunatic, or idiot, would be incapable of inheriting; but his issue would receive their shares (b). A Hindu marriage is the performance of a religious duty (c), not a contract; therefore the consenting mind is not necessary, and its absence, whether from infancy or incapacity, is immaterial (d).

A curious custom exists among the Ayodhya (Oudh) Reddis of Tinnevely and Madura, the Kammas, a widely (x) Mitakshara, i, 8, § 2.

(y) Daya Bhaga, ix.; Smriti Chandrika, ii., 2, § 6—9; Viramit., p. 101, § 2; Madhaviya, § 24; Varadrajah, 18; Sarasvati Vilasa, § 163—167.

(z) In re Ram Kumari, 18 Cal., 264.

(a) Cf. Narada, xii., § 8—19; Manu, ix., § 79, 203; Jolly, Lect. 280. See as to withdrawal from contract, post § 111; Kanahi v. Biddya, 1 All., 549.

(b) See Gautama, xviii., § 44; Narada, xiii., § 22; Manu, ix., § 201—203; W. & B., 908; Dabychurn v. Radachurn, 2 M. Dig., 99.

(c) Manu, ii., § 66, 67, vi., § 36, 37. See, however, v., § 159.

(d) Supra, 2 M. Dig., 99, W. & B., 903, per curiam, 5 All., 513.

prevalent caste in the Madras Presidency, and the Ravan-dans, a small caste of Canarese farmers. Among these it is a common thing that an adult girl is married to a mere child. Till he grows up the wife may associate with any member of her husband's family or caste, and if children result they are recognised as the husband's lawful offspring (e).

§ 91. All the early writers inculcate the giving of a girl in marriage before she attains puberty; the father who fails to do so incurs the guilt of slaying an embryo after the evidences of maturity have appeared. According to Gautama, a marriageable maiden who has not been given in marriage may take the matter into her own hands after three months have passed, and select a husband for herself. Manu, Baudhayana and Vasishtha require her to wait three years. If, however, she chooses for herself, she is not to take with her any ornaments given by her father or her mother or brothers (f). In Southern India this practice of infant marriage is recognised among the Brahmans and the higher and middle classes; in fact among those who, by origin or imitation, claim to be considered orthodox Hindus. Early marriage, and its concomitant enforced widowhood, are most common among the Telugu people and least prevalent among the Malayalam and Tamil castes. In the lower castes it is neither required nor usual (g). In the Punjab child marriages are little known except in the Eastern districts. Elsewhere the marriage ceremony between infants is merely an inviolable betrothal, followed by a further ceremony named Muklawa at puberty (h). In the N.-W. Provinces it is an occasional custom of some castes to betroth children before they are born, subject to the condition of turning out of opposite sexes (i).

(e) Census 1891, xiii., 236, 238, 239.

(f) Gaut., xviii., §§ 20—23; Vasishtha, xvii., §§ 67—71; Baudh., iv., 1, §§ 11—14; Man., ix., § 4, §§ 88—91; Vrihaspati, 2 Dig., 386; Paithinasi, ib., 387.

(g) Census Report, 1891, xiii., 123, 151; S. Can. Man., I, 143, 151, 160, 166, 167; Mal. Mar. Rep., 57; Cochin Census Rep., 1891, §§ 180, 181; Census of 1891. General Report, 264, see post § 94.

(h) Manu, ii., § 66, 67, vi., § 36, 37. See, however, v., § 159.

(i) Census of 1891, N.-W. Provinces Report, xix., 221, 225.

In Assam child marriage is not permitted, except possibly among some of the higher castes. "Sometimes a father bespeaks for his son the daughter of another man as soon as she is born, and the two are looked upon as married; But the arrangement is nothing more than a betrothal. Cohabitation is not permitted before maturity, and the actual partners can, if they so desire, refuse to carry out the arrangements entered into by their parents" (k). As regards the Bengal Provinces, the marriage of infant girls "is found to an appreciable extent" only in the western half of the Province, that is, in Behar and Western Bengal; the practice may be said not to exist among the non-Hinduized Dravidian tribes (l). In Burmah, juvenile marriage does not exist (m).

Polygamy.

§ 92. The efficacy of the marriage tie, as binding either party to the transaction, is a matter upon which there has been a considerable change in the Hindu law, while its earlier stage was evidently in accordance with usages which we find at present existing among the non-Aryan races. Among the Kandhs, "so long as a woman remains true to her husband, he cannot contract a second marriage, or even keep a concubine, without her permission" (n). The same rule prevails among the caste of musicians in Ahmedabad, and in the Vadanagara Nagar caste (o), and seems, from the evidence of the Thesawaleme, to have been in force among the Tamil emigrants into Ceylon (p). The Pondichery Courts, upon the advice of their Consultative Committee, have decided so lately as 1893, that the husband cannot without the consent of the first wife take a second, unless the first is suffering from some incurable disease, or has failed to produce male offspring. A wife who is barren may be replaced after eight years; one whose children are dead after ten years, and one who has only (k) Census of 1891, Assam Report, I, 113, 118.

(l) Census of 1891, Bengal Report, III, 185.

(m) Census of 1891, General Report, 269.

(n) Hunter's Orissa, II, 84.

(o) Muhashankur v. Mt. Oottum, 2 Bor., 524 [572], V. N. Mandlik, 406.

(p) Thesawaleme, i., § 11.

given birth to females after eleven years. A second marriage, contracted otherwise than under the above conditions, may be annulled at the instance of the first wife, and when annulled neither the second wife, nor her children, can inherit (q). These decisions appear to have been given on the authority of Manu and other native writers, as well as upon actual usage. They accord with the observation of the Abbé Dubois; he says that polygamy was tolerated among persons of high rank; though even among them it was looked upon as an infraction of law and custom, in fact an abuse (r). One text of Manu seems to indicate that there was a time when a second marriage was only allowed to a man after the death of his former wife (s). Another set of texts lays down special grounds which justify a husband in taking a second wife, and except for such causes it appears she could not be superseded without her consent (t). Other passages provide for a plurality of wives, even of different classes, without any restriction (u). A peculiar sanctity, however, seems to have been attributed to the first marriage, as being that which was contracted from a sense of duty, and not merely for personal gratification. The first married wife had precedence over the others, and her first-born son over his half-brothers (v). It is probable that originally the secondary wives were considered as merely a superior class of concubines, like the handmaids of the Jewish patriarchs. It is now quite settled in the Courts of British India that a Hindu is absolutely without restriction as to the number of his wives, and may marry again without his wife's consent, or any justification,

(q) Sorg H. L., 51; Co. Con., 265, 306, 364, 371.

(r) Dubois, 210.

(s) "Having this kindled sacred fires and performed funeral rites to his wife, who died before him, he may again marry, and again light the nuptial fire." Manu, v., § 168; and see ix., § 101, 102. Monogamy is one of the tenets of the modern Brahmo-Somaj sect. Sonaluami v. Vishnu Prasad, 28 Bom., 597.

(t) Manu, ix., § 77—82, Apastamba, ii., v., ii., § 12—13. This seems still to be the usage among some castes of the Deccan. Steele, 30, 168, and in Bengal. Kally Churn v. Dukhee, 5 Cal., 692.

(u) Manu, iii., § 12, viii., § 204, ix., § 85—87.

(v) See Manu, iii., § 12, 14, ix., § 107, i22—125.

except his own wish (w). He cannot, however, divorce his wife, except by special local usage; nor does conversion to Christianity, with its consequence of expulsion from caste, operate as a dissolution of the union (x).

§ 93. The prohibition against second marriages of women, either after divorce or upon widowhood, has no foundation either in early Hindu law or custom. Passages of the Vedas quoted by Dr. Mayr sanction the remarriage of widows (y). And the second marriage of women who have left their husbands for justifiable cause, or who have been deserted by them, or whose husbands are dead, is expressly sanctioned by the early writers (z). The authority of Manu is strongly on the other side; but I think it is plain that this is one of the many instances in which the existing text has suffered from interpolations and omissions. Manu declares that a man may only marry a virgin, and that a widow may not marry again (a). The only exception which he appears to allow is in the case of a girl whose husband has died before consummation, who may be married again to the brother of the deceased bridegroom (b). On the other hand, two other texts appear to recognize and sanction the second marriage, either of a widow, or of a wife forsaken by her husband (c). The contradiction appears to arise from the deliberate omission of part of the original text in an earlier portion of the same chapter. At ix., § 76, a wife, whose husband resides abroad, is directed to wait for him eight, six, or three, years according to the reason for his original absence. Nothing is said as to what is to happen at the end of the time. Kulluka Bhatta inserts a gloss:—"after these (w) Daya Bhaga, ix., § 6, note; 1 Stra. H. L., 56; Steele, 168; Huwei Bhuae v. Nuthoo, 1 Bor., 59 [65]; Virasvamy v. Appasvamy, 1 Mad. H. C., 375.

(x) Administrator-General v. Anandachari, 9 Mad., 466. See Act XXI of 1866.

(y) Mayr, 181. It is now restored by Act XV of 1856.

(z) Narada, xii., § 97-101; see, too, § 18, 19, 24, 46-49, 62; Devala, 2 Dig., 470; Baudhayana, ii., § 20; Vasishtha, xvii., § 13; Katyayana, 3 Dig., 236.

(a) Manu, viii., § 226, v., § 161-163. See, to the same effect, Apastamba, ii., vi., 13, § 4.

(b) Manu, ix., § 69, 70; ante, § 73. Vasishtha, xvii., 74, places no restriction on her second choice.

(c) Manu, ix., § 175, 176. See 1 Gib., 34, 104.

Second marriages of women formerly allowed.

Probable omission in present text of Manu.

terms have expired, she must follow him" (d). Now if we look to the corresponding part of Narada, who had an earlier text of Manu before him (e), we find that he lays down that "there are five cases in which a woman may take another husband; her first husband having perished, or died naturally or gone abroad, or if he be impotent, or have lost his caste." Then follow the periods during which a woman is to wait for her absent husband, and the whole thing is made into sense by the direction that, when the time has expired, she may betake herself to another man (f). Nothing is said about her following him, which after such an absence would probably be impossible or useless. If a similar passage had followed § 76 in Manu, the texts at § 175, 176 would be intelligible and consistent. When second marriages were no longer allowed, these passages seem to have been left out, and others of an exactly opposite character were inserted; the texts at § 175, 176 then became unmeaning, but they were retained to explain the phrase, "son of an unmarried woman," which had already appeared in the list of subsidiary sons. It is probable that the change of usage on this point arose from the influence of Brahmanical opinion, marriage coming to be looked upon as a sort of sacrament, the effect of which was indelible. A similar cause has produced that difference of opinion upon the legality of marriage following upon divorce which prevails in Protestant and Roman Catholic countries. If it is asked why the law varied in exactly the opposite direction in regard to second marriages of men, the only answer I can suggest is that men have always moulded the law of marriage so as to be most agreeable to themselves.

§ 94. When we examine the usages of the aboriginal races, or of those who have not come under Brahmanical influence, we find a system prevailing exactly like that described by Narada. Among the Jat population of the Usage of other tribes.

(d) This is apparently founded on a text attributed to Vasishtha, xvii., 75-80, which is to the same effect.

(e) See ante § 21; Introd. to Narada.

(f) Narada, xii., § 97-101. See also authorities, ante § 92, note (t).

Punjab, not only a widow, but a wife who has been deserted or put away by her husband, may marry again, and will have all the rights of a lawful wife. The same rule exists among the Lingaits of South Canara (g). In Western India, the second marriage of a wife or widow (called Pat by the Mahrattas, and Natra in Guzerat) is allowed among all the lower castes. The cases in which a wife may re-marry are stated by Mr. Steele as being, if the husband prove impotent, or the parties continually quarrel; if the marriage were irregularly concluded; if by mutual consent the husband breaks his wife's neck-ornament, and gives her a chorchittee (writing of divorcement), or if he has been absent and unheard of for twelve years. Should he afterwards return, she may live with either party at her own option, the person deserted being reimbursed his marriage expenses. A widow's pat is considered more honourable than a wife's, but children by pat are equally legitimate with those by a first marriage (h). The right of a divorce and second marriage has been repeatedly affirmed by the Bombay Courts (i). So, in Southern India, including Cochin and Travancore, "the re-marriage of widows is not forbidden by either religious or caste custom to the majority of the population. The prohibition exists among the Brahmans and among castes desirous of obtaining a high relative position by close observance of Brahmanical customs, but the restriction is entirely foreign to Dravidian ideas" (k). Widow marriage and divorce is common among many of the lower castes, such as the Vellalans of the Second marriages and divorce.

(g) Punjab Customary Law, II, 181, 174, 190, 192, 193; Punjab Cust., 95; Virasangappa v. Kudrappa, 8 Mad., 440.

(h) Steele, 26, 169, 168; W. & B. (2nd ed.), 139 to 146, 162, 163, 167. The futwals recd. at pp. 112, 114, 139, 141, were evidently given by Shastries, who treated such second marriages as illegal. See, too, Huree Bhaee v. Nuthoo, 1 Bor., 59 [65], note.

(i) As to divorce, see Kaseram v. Umbaran, 1 Bor., 357 [429]; Kasee Dhoolubh v. Rutton Bae, ib., 410 [452]; Muhashunker v. Mt. Oottum, 2 Bor., 524 [572]; Dyaram v. Baeumba, Bellasis, 86; R v. Karsan, 2 Bom. H. C., 124; R. v. Sambhu, 1 Bom., 347; Government of Bombay v. Ganga, 4 Bom., 350; Empress v. Umi, 6 Bom., 126. As to widow marriage, Hurkoonwur v. Rutton Bae, 1 Bor., 431 [475]; Treekumjee v. Mt. Laro Laroo, 2 Bor., 361 [397]; Bae Rutton v. Lalla Munmoohur, Bellasis, 86; Bae Sheo v. Ruttonjee, Morris, Pt. I, 103. See Percuriam Bah v. Govind, 1 Bom., 114.

(k) Census of 1891, xiii., 123; Mysore Census of 1871, p. 71, of 1891, xxv., 226, 229.

Palanis, the Maravers (except in the case of the women of the Sambhu Nattan division), the Kallans, the Pallans (l), the tank diggers, the potters, the barbers, and the pariahs generally (m). So in numerous castes in North Arcot, in South Canara and in Cochin (n). In many such cases, what is called a divorce is really nothing more than an abandonment by one party or the other of a marriage union which, from the first, was merely an agreement to live together as long as the arrangement suited both parties (o). Among the Malyalis of North Arcot "a wife may, at her pleasure, desert her lawful husband, and live with any other man of the caste, but all her children are considered to be those of her husband alone" (p). In the better classes, such as the oil-mongers, the weavers, and a wandering class of minstrels, called the Bhat Rajahs, who claim to be Kshatriyas, divorce is found in some localities, and not in others (q). It is not practised at all among the Brahmans and Kshatriyas, or among the higher classes of Sudras, such as the shepherds, the Komaty caste, the writers or the five artisan classes, who claim equality with the Brahmans and wear the thread (r). Similarly the Bengal High Court has recognised the validity of widow marriage among the Nomosudras (s). The degree in which divorce and widow marriage prevails is probably in the direct ratio to the degree in which the respective castes have imitated Brahman habits. The Thesawaleme treats widow marriage as a matter of course (t), and we may fairly assume that it was so originally among all the Dravidian races. This is the view taken by the author of the Report on Madras

Divorce and widow marriage.

(l) Mad. Manual, Pt. II, 33, 40, 53; Kattama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tear, 6 Mad. H. C., 329; Murugayi v. Viramakali, 1 Mad., 226.

(m) Madras Census Report, 157, 159, 164, 171; Sorg H. L., 50., Co. Con., 373; Sankaralingam Chetty v. Subban Chetty, 17 Mad., 479.

(n) N. Arcot Man., I, 204, 227, 229, 236; S. Can. Man., I, 143, 159, 161, 162, 166, 169—171; Cochin Census, 1891, § 180.

(o) Census of 1891, XIII, 216, 218, 239, 242, 245, 257, 304; N. Arcot Man., I, 245, 246, 250.

(p) N. Arcot Man., I, 213.

(q) Madras Census Report, 141, 143, 155.

(r) Ibid., 137, 140, 143, 149, 152; N. Arcot Man., I, 205; S. Can. Man., I, 137, 165, 166; Cochin Census, 1891, § 181; Travancore Census, 1891, 685; Sorg H. L. C., 49.

(s) Hurry Churn v. Nunai Chand, 10 Cal., 138.

(t) Thesawaleme, i, § 10.

in the Census of 1891. He gives a list of sixty castes, in none of which, as far as he had been able to ascertain, was the remarriage of widows prohibited. On the other hand, he says, that the Brahman marriage system, which requires that every girl should be married before puberty, prohibits the remarriage of widows, and allows a dissolution of marriage only on the ground of the adultery of the wife, has been adopted in its entirety by many Telugu and a few other castes, and there is hardly a caste or tribe in which its influence has not been felt to some extent. After an examination of statistics, he says, "we shall probably not be far wrong, if we assume that the marriage of widows is permitted and practised by about 60 per cent. of the total population" (u). The same rule appears to prevail in Upper India and from the same cause. In the North-West Provinces amongst Hindus remarriage is in the higher castes permitted only for males (v). In the Lower Provinces of Bengal, and in Eastern and Western Bengal, widow-marriage is not practised by Brahmans, or those castes which aim at imitating them. In Behar the whole sub-castes of Baniyas adopt widow-marriage. In Western Bengal the Dravidian tribes, whether Hinduized or not, adopt widow-marriage. In north Behar, Orissa and Chutia Nagpur, it is generally practised, except among the Brahmans, Kayasth, Bania and Rajputs. It is universal among the Darjeeling tribes (w). In Assam such marriages prevail among all, except a few of the higher castes, though it is observed that Brahmanism is tending to bring them into disrepute, and to lower the general opinion as to their solemnity and validity (x). In Burmah divorce is available to both classes alike, and is apparently more often initiated by the wife than by the husband (y).

§ 95. Marriage is not to be confounded with betrothal.

(u) Census of 1891, XIII, 148—151, General Report, 264.

(v) Census of 1891, N.-W. P. Report, XVI, 249.

(w) Census of 1891, Bengal Report, III, 186, 191, 194, 200, 208.

(x) Census of 1891, Assam Report, I, 111, 114, 115, 118. Kudomee v. Jotee-ram, 3 Cal., 305. On the remand in that case, the finding was that the custom of divorce had not been established, Assam Report, 115.

(y) Census of 1891, General Report, 269.

Betrothal.

The one is a completed transaction; the other is only a contract. Manu says, "Neither ancients nor moderns who were good men have ever given a damsel in marriage after she has been promised to another man" (z). But Narada and Yajnavalkya both admit the right of a father is revocable. to annul a betrothal to one suitor, if a better match presents himself; and either party to the contract is allowed to withdraw from it, where certain specified defects are discovered (a). Narada states that a man, who withdraws from his contract without proper cause, may be compelled to marry the girl even against his will. But it is now settled by decision that a contract to marry will not be specifically enforced, and that the only remedy is by an action for damages (b). All expenses resulting from the abortive contract would be recoverable in such an action (c). Of course, no such claim could be maintained where the contract failed from the wilful or negligent conduct of the complaining party (d). Probably the real difficulty has often been to distinguish between two things which are sometimes called by the same name, viz., the betrothal, which is only a promise to marry, and the pledging of troth, which forms part of the marriage itself. The former class of betrothal is often celebrated with much ceremony; but this does not alter its character. So, in the actual marriage there are numerous formalities, and many recitals of holy texts; but the operative part of the transaction consists in the seven steps taken by the bridal pair. On the completion of the last step, the actual marriage has taken place (e). Till then it is imperfect Saptapati.

(z) Manu, ix., § 99.

(a) Narada, xii., § 30—38; Yajnavalkya, i., § 65, 66; Vasishtha, 2 Dig., 487, 490; Katyayana, ib., 491; Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 27.

(b) Narada, xii., § 35; Umed v. Nagindas, 7 Bom. H. C. O. C., 122; Nowbut v. Mt. Lad Kooer, 5 N.-W. P., 102; re Gunput Narain Singh, 1 Cal., 74; Karibassaka v. Karibassana, 3 Mysore, 153.

(c) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 28. Mulji Thakersey v. Gomi, 11 Bom., 412; Rambpat v. Timmayya, 16 Bom., 673; Purshotamdas v. Purshotamdas, 21 Bom., 23.

(d) Divi Virasalingam v. Alaturti, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 274.

(e) Manu, ix., § 227; Narada, xii., § 2; Yama, 2 Dig., 438; Viramit., ii., 2, § 4; Coleb. Essays, 128. See cases last cited. As to the ceremonies essential to a Brahman marriage, see Vaikantam v. Kallipiran, 26 Mad., 497.

and revocable. Even this proceeding, however, is not absolutely essential. It is a form which, if complied with, is conclusive. But if it is shown that by the custom of the caste, or district, any other form is considered as constituting a marriage, then the adoption of that form, with the intention of thereby completing the marriage union, is sufficient (f). In some communities there is a custom that, after the actual marriage has taken place, a further ceremony must be performed before cohabitation, and if the man who has gone through the first ceremony declines to perform the second, the girl may lawfully marry again (g). In Bombay, a custom was proved, and held valid, that mere babies should be married with all religious ceremonies, but that the marriage should not be treated as effectual, unless certain conditions agreed on at the time were performed on either side (h). But the legal result of such custom would appear to be that there is no binding and complete marriage until after the second ceremony, or the performance of the condition precedent. In the absence of any such custom the marriage is complete, even though never followed by consummation and though, in consequence of the conversion to Christianity of one party, the other renounces the obligations of marriage (i).

§ 96. A marriage actually and properly celebrated will be legal and binding, although it has taken place in violation of a previous agreement to marry another person (k); or although it has been performed without the consent of the person whose consent ought to have been obtained (l). For this is one of the cases in which necessity compels the application of the maxim, Factum valet quod fieri non debuit. When the marriage is once completed, if either party

(f) Manu, iii., § 35; see futwah, 2 M. Dig., 45; Gatha Ram v. Mookita Kochin, 14 B. L. R., 298; S. C., 23 Suth., 179; Kally Churn v. Dukhee, 5 Cal., 692; V. N. Mandlik, 404; Hurry Churn v. Nimai Chand, 10 Cal., 138. When the fact of the celebration of marriage is established, it will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that all the necessary ceremonies have been complied with. Brindabum Chundra v. Chandra Kurmoker, 12 Cal., 140.

(g) Boolechand v. Janokee, 25 W. R., 386.

(h) Bai Ugri v. Patel Purshottam, 17 Bom., 400.

(i) Administrator General v. Anandachari, 9 Mad., 466.

(k) Khoosial v. Bhugwan Motee, 1 Bor., 138 [155].

(l) Baee Rulyat v. Jeychund, Bellasis, 43; S. C., 1 Mor. N. S., 181, ante § 85.

refuses to live with the other, the case is no longer one for specific performance of a contract, but for restitution of conjugal rights. It has long since been settled that such a suit would lie between Hindus, but there was much how enforced. conflict of authority as to the mode in which the decree was to be enforced (m). The point has now been settled by s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), which provides that where the party against whom the decree has been made has had an opportunity of obeying it, and has wilfully failed to do so, it may be enforced by imprisonment, or by attachment of property, or by both (n). Any person who assists a wife in leaving, or remaining away from her husband without a justifying cause, and, à fortiori, any one who enters into a criminal connection with her, by which he seduces her from her home, is liable to an action for damages (o). Primâ facie, the husband is the legal guardian of his wife, and is entitled Custody of wife. to require her to live in his house from the moment of the marriage, however young she may be. But this right does not exist where, by custom, or agreement, the wife is to remain in her parents' house, until puberty is established (p). It has been held in Allahabad in a case between Muhammedans that a suit for jactitation of marriage was cognisable in a Civil Court (q).

(m) See Gatha Ram v. Mookita Kochin, 14 B. L. R., 298; S. C., 23 Suth., 179; Jogendronundini v. Hurry Doss, 5 Cal., 500; Pakhandu v. Manki, 3 All., 506; Dadaji v. Rukmabai, 10 Bom., 801; Binda v. Kamsilia, 13 All., 126; Kesha Lal v. Bai Parvati, 18 Bom., 327; the suit lies in the Court within whose jurisdiction the husband resides. Lalitagar v. Bai Suraj, 18 Bom., 316. As to the evidence required in such a suit, see Surjyamonî v. Kalikanta, 28 Cal., 37.

(n) Under this section, as in England, the Court will take into consideration any circumstances which establish a reasonable objection on the part of the wife, and will impose proper conditions upon the husband in reference to such objection. Paigi v. Sheonarrain, 8 All., 78. It is no defence to such a suit that the defaulting party is, from illness or other cause, unfit for conjugal intercourse, though if the complainant was the party so unfitted, and if the incapacity was of a permanent and incurable nature, it would, primâ facie, be a bar to the relief sought for. Purshotamdas v. Bai Mani, 21 Bom., 610.

(o) Zamoona Boyee v. Narayen, 1 Bom., 164; Linga v. Goojia, 2 Mysore, 144. As to the assessment of damages, see Siddah v. Doddannah, 12 Mysore, 54, following Kelly v. Kelly, 3 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 67.

(p) Kateeran v. Mt. Gendhenee, 23 W. R., 178; Suntosh Ram v. Gera Pat-tuck, ib., 22, re Dhurondhar Ghose, 17 Cal., 298; Surjyamonî v. Kalikanta, 28 Cal., 37; Tekait Von Mohini v. Basanta Kumar, 28 Cal., 751. Cf. Arununga v. Viraraghava, 24 Mad., 255.

(q) Miramat Ali v. Mahmood-ul-Nissa, 20 All., 96.

Malabar
marriages.

§ 97. The legal, or rather the legalised, relations between the sexes on the West Coast of India are so dependent upon the system which governs family property in that region, that it is impossible to examine the one without understanding the other; that system, which is called in Canara, Alya Santana, in the more southern districts, Marumakkathayam (r), has for its central principle that descent is always traced through the female line to a female ancestor. "The relation of husband and wife, or of father and child is not inherent in the conception of a Marumakkathayam family" (s). Each male who is born into the family acquires a personal position as a member of the tarwad and a claimant upon its property, but he never becomes a stock of descent; the family is perpetuated by the female members. The person who occupies the position of a son to him is not his own son, who is a stranger to the family, but the son of his sister.

Mythical origin of Marumak-kathayam.

Such a system, which ignores paternity, must have originated either in absolute sexual license, or in polyandry. A mythical source is ascribed both to the Marumakkathayam and the Alya Santana law. The former is attributed to Sri-Parasu Rama, one of the incarnations of Vishnu who, by the exercise of his supernatural powers, reclaimed from the sea the land which now lies between it and the Western Ghâts, and peopled it partly with Brahmans, and partly with an inferior race, who ministered to their pleasures and wants (t). The present teaching of the Nambudri priesthood, and the beliefs and practice of the leaders of society in Marumakkathayam families, are derived from a work called the Kerala Mahatmyam, which is supposed to embody the teaching of Parasu Rama. "It recites how Parasu Rama pronounced his commandment to the women (not being of the Brahman caste) to satisfy the desires of Brahmans, enjoining upon them to put off chastity and the cloth which covered their breasts, and declaring that promiscuous intercourse with three or four men in common, was void of the least taint of sin" (u). Shaikh-Zui-ud-din, who wrote about the middle of the sixteenth century, and Hamilton in his New Account of the East Indies (1727), each speaks of the Nayar women as cohabiting with a plurality of husbands. Hamilton says as many as twelve but not more, with whom they shared their time by mutual arrangement (v).

(r) Each term has exactly the same meaning, descent in the line of a Nephew or sister's son. Mal. Mar. Rep., 105.
(s) Mal. Mar. Rep., 49. (t) Mal. Man., 121; Travancore Census, 1891, 178.

The Alya Santana system is said to have been introduced into South Canara A. D. 77 by Bhutala Pandya. He had been surrendered, as a sacrifice, to Kundodara, the king of the demons. When Kundodara demanded another sacrifice, the reigning prince, his uncle, refused to grant one, upon which Kundodara compelled the prince to bestow his kingdom upon his nephew, and not upon his sons, and this example was made compulsory by Bhutala Pandya upon his subjects (w).

§ 98. The Marumakkathayam system is followed by all the Nayars (x) with the sole exception of the Mannadiyars in Palghat, and by the great majority of the Tiyans and Mukkavans in North Malabar, and by a very small number of the same castes in South Malabar and Wynaad (y). The great bulk of the population of Travancore follow the same rule, which has been adopted by a few families of the Nambudris and Muhammedans and by the Ambalavasis, a caste peculiar to Travancore, consisting of Brahmans who, from one cause or another, have lost caste (z).

The Alya Santana law is followed in South Canara "by all the old Tulu land-owning, cultivating, and labourer (u) Mal. Mar. Rep., 10. The Kerala Mahatmyam is said not to be really an ancient treatise, but to have been composed about 150 years ago by a Nambudri Brahman, ibid., 51.

(v) Mal. Man., I, 136; Cochin Census Rep., 1891, § 177.

(w) Mal. Mar. Rep., 105. The legend is given in a different form in the South Canara Manual, I, 141.

(x) As to the origin and early position of the Nayars, see the Madras Census of 1891, VIII, 222; Mal. Man., I, 111, 131.

(y) Mal. Mar., I, 134, 154; Mal. Mar. Rep., 5.

(z) Travancore Census Rep., 1891, pp. 253, 743; Cochin Census Rep., 1891, § 176.

castes, as well as by the Moplahs, who are the descendants of Arab settlers who formed connections with Tulu women of the land-owning classes, and adopted the prevailing rule of inheritance (a). Also by the majority of the Bants, a military class, who correspond to the Nayars (b).

Makkathayam.

The Makkathayam system is followed by all the Brahmans, with the few exceptions above noticed, and by the low-class Malayalis, the agrestal slaves and the hill-tribes (c).

Nayar marriages.

§ 99. Among the Nayars polyandry, as the recognition by a woman of several men, each having a legal claim to be her husband, seems to have now died out, existing, if it exists at all, only as a survival in some nooks and corners of the district (d). It seems also to be clear that, among the better classes at all events, the Nayar marriage has begun to assume a permanence which gives it all the appearance of a binding contract. "According to the North Malabar witnesses the rule is that the union of a man and woman lasts for life. The wife lives with her husband. Divorces are almost unheard of, or are extremely rare. Respectable people set their faces against polygamy." The same rule seems to prevail throughout the greater part of South Malabar (e). A similar change of practice is observed in Cochin (f). The question still remains, however, what is the jural relation created by a Nayar marriage, as regards the restrictions which it imposes upon the parties, and as affecting third persons who interfere between the parties? The answer will require an examination of the various forms which are spoken of as actual or quasi-marriages (g).

(a) S. Can. Man., I, 155.

(b) S. Can. Man., I, 158.

(c) Mal. Man., I, 155; Cochin Census Rep., 1891, § 180; Travancore Census Rep., 1891, pp. 253, 770-776. The mere fact that a community in Malabar follows the Makkathayam system of succession by sons does not lead to any necessary inference that it is governed by the entire Hindu law of inheritance. Ravichan v. Perachi, 15 Mad., 281.

(d) Mal. Mar. Rep., 103.

(e) Mal. Mar. Rep., 36.

(f) Cochin Census Rep., 1891, § 178.

(g) An initial difficulty arises from the significant fact, that the proper Malayalam terms for marriage are not applied by the Marumakkathayam Hindus to the union of man and woman among themselves. Mal. Mar. Rep., 12.

"As regards the freedom either to marry, or not to marry, it is conceded to women as well as to men; the rule of Hindu law, which prescribes marriage as indispensable to women, having no obligatory force either among Nambudri Brahmans, or among Nayars and Tiyars" (h).

Marriage is optional.

The only ceremonial savouring of matrimony, which appears to be indispensable to a Nayar girl, is that known as the tali-kettu-kalyanam, or marriage by tying the tali. It ought to be performed before puberty, generally about eleven. The bridegroom (manavalan) is a boy whose horoscope is suitable to hers. The ceremonial, which lasts four days, follows out the whole drama of an actual marriage, going even to the length of a fictitious cohabitation. It terminates with the tearing of a cloth, the pieces of which are given to the boy and to the girl, and which typifies a divorce. The whole thing is then at an end. The parties separate, and may possibly never see each other again. The effect of the ceremony is to give the girl a marriageable status, without which she cannot enter into any matrimonial contract. Failure to perform it is said to involve excommunication from caste (i). The symbolical character of the ceremony is shown by the fact that the same manavalan will tie the tali on a number of girls at the same time, which naturally reduces the cost to each. Where extreme economy is required, the manavalan is dispensed with. The girl's mother makes an idol of clay, adorns it with flowers, and invests her daughter with the tali in the presence of the idol (k).

Tali-kettu-kalyanam.

§ 100. The difference between the tali-kettu-kalyanam, and the various forms of marriage, which come within Sambhandham.

(h) Mal. Mar. Rep., 57.

(i) Mal. Mar. Rep., 13, 54, 90, 101; Mal. Man., I, 134; Cochin Census, 1891, § 176; Travancore Census, 1891, 767; Madras Census, 1891, XIII, 225. It has been suggested that the effect of this ceremony is to free the girl from the gods who are supposed to lay claim to every virgin. Mal. Mar. Rep., 18, 19.

(k) Mal. Mar. Rep., 19, 20, 54. Among the Tiyars of North Malabar, but not of South Malabar, the tali-kettu-kalyanam exists, and is subsequently followed by the practical marriage called mangalam. Madras Census of 1891, XIII, 298.

the generic name sambhandham, or marriage properly so called, is that the latter is intended to be followed by cohabitation and the former is not. This being so, the persons who can enter into this relation with each other are strictly defined. All sexual relations between Nayars and Tiyars, or members of any other caste, are absolutely forbidden on penalty of excommunication. The man can associate with a Nayar woman of sub-divisions of the caste inferior to his own. A Nayar woman can associate with men of castes superior to her own, but not with men of lower castes, or of sub-divisions of the Nayar caste inferior to her own (l). There is an exception to the latter part of the rule in the case of Nayar women in and around the Cochin taluq. As regards relationship, the limit within which one may not marry, is for both males and females in South Malabar the circle of one's own tarwad, meaning by tarwad all members tracing descent from a common female ancestor in the female line only. In North Malabar, this limit is wider, and includes all the members of the same illom, which consists of several tarwads, with no community of interest or even pollution, provided they can all be traced back to a common ancestor, however remote (m).

Ceremonies.

As to the essentials of a sambhandham, the Malabar Marriage Report says: "Many respectable witnesses tell us that no formality, religious or secular, need attach to sambhandham, and that in very many cases the consent of the girl and of her guardian are all that is thought necessary. But it is also an undoubted fact that recent usage (especially in North Malabar) tends to surround the occasion of first cohabitation with a more or less elaborate ceremonial." The ceremonies usual with various forms of sambhandham are then described in much detail, the most solemn and fashionable being the "podamuri" form. Of these, the Commissioners say: "it is an essential part of the podamuri ceremony that there should be a gift of cloth by the bridegroom to the bride, and of no other form of sambhandham can it be said that any formality is of its essence" (n).

(l) Mal. Mar. Rep., 5, 7, 55.(m) Madras Census, 1891, XIII, 227.

With reference to the legal results of a sambhandham, it is admitted that exactly the same form is frequently adopted as sanctioning the connection between a Nambudri Brahman and a Nayar woman, which is not asserted to constitute a marriage; that a Nayar woman, who consorts with a Nayar man of suitable rank without any form of marriage, is not put out of caste, even in respectable families, that the religious teaching of the Nambudri Brahmans, who are the priests of the Nayars, actually denounces chastity in the women; that there is no religious element in the marriage itself; and that the right of divorce, though becoming gradually restricted among the higher classes to fairly justifying causes, practically puts it in the power of either party to the union to dissolve it at pleasure, the other party having no remedy (o). From these premises the conclusion was drawn by the Malabar Marriage Law Commission, "that Marumakkathayam was and still is destitute of the institution of marriage." The same conclusion is reached by those who have investigated the working of the system in Cochin and Travancore (p).

This view is not inconsistent with the equally admitted fact that such unions are tending to become as permanent as marriages under the strictest system, that they are guarded with the utmost jealousy, and that their violation is most savagely avenged (q). Jealousy and vengeance are not limited to unions which are binding by law.

(n) Mal. Mar. Rep., 21—24, 98.(o) Mal. Mar. Rep., 24, 27, 58, 64; Madras Census, XIII, 228. There is nothing to prevent a woman, who has been separated from her husband, or after his death, from marrying again. Travancore Census, 1891, 770; Mal. Mar. Rep., 57. The child born during the continuance of a sambhandham marriage is presumably the offspring of the male partner so as to sustain a maintenance order against him under the Criminal Procedure Code, Act V of 1898, s. 488. Venkatakrishna Puttar v. Chimma Kutti, 22 Mad., 246.(p) Mal. Mar. Rep., 27; Cochin Census, 1891, § 178; Travancore Census, 1891, 767.(q) Mal. Man., 136; Mal. Mar. Rep., 102. In North Malabar, it is the practice for Nayar females to reside in the tarwad of the men with whom they cohabit, and, during such residence, they and their children are maintained at the expense of the tarwad of the males. Parvati v. Kumarah, 6 Mad., 341.

Whether it constitutes a legal marriage.

Alya Santana marriages.

§ 101. The sexual relations of those who are governed by Alya Santana law bear upon their face less marks of license than those of the Marumakkathayam classes; the legendary teaching of unchastity by Parasu Rama is no part of their religion. The Brahman chronicles record that the Brahmans introduced by Parasu Rama were driven out, and that the first establishment of Brahmans took place in the eighth century under the auspices of Kadamba, the Jain sovereign of North Canara. When introduced, they never assumed the position in regard to the women of the country to which the Nayars submitted in regard to the Nambudris (r). The fictitious marriage of the southern districts was unknown in Canara, even to the Bants, who most closely resemble the Nayars. Betrothal was the first step towards an actual marriage, and the marriage was followed by cohabitation in the house of the husband (s). Mr. M. Bangera, District Munsif of Mangalore, and a member of the Malabar Marriage Law Commission, says that the marriage is held sacred by the society to which the parties belong, and Mr. Sturrock, C. S., formerly Collector and Magistrate of the district, reported to the Commission as follows: "The impression formed by me during thirteen years' residence in South Canara was that, among the higher classes, the Tulu women, who follow the Alya Santana rules, enjoyed a reputation for singular fidelity and that even the lower classes did not regard the marriage tie more lightly than their neighbours, governed by other laws." It seems clear, however, that both the strictness of the marriage bond, and the facility for escaping from it by divorce, are more matters of high-class feeling than of absolute obligation. Men and women have an equal right to effect a divorce. It is said that divorce is effected generally on reasonable grounds, such as adultery, and disobedience on the part of the wife, and cruelty on the part of the husband. "But it is not uncommon among the lower classes to get divorce effected on insufficient grounds, or at the mere will and pleasure of either the husband or the wife. Such conduct is, however, looked down upon by society with disapprobation" (t). This was the view upon which the High Court acted in two cases, where it decided that the relation of husband and wife under Alya Santana law did not constitute a marriage which could be either enforced or protected (u). The Alya Santana races do not intermarry with Nayars or Tiyars, and the rules of anuloma and pratiloma, which allow men of superior classes to enter into sambhandham with women of inferior classes are not practised among them. Persons of the same bali or gotra are also incapable of marriage union, and even sexual intercourse between persons so connected entails loss of caste (v).

(r) S. Can. Man., I, 134, 142. As to the Bants, see ibid., 54, 156.

(s) S. Can. Man., I, 160; Mal. Mar. Rep., 107, 109.

Widows are allowed to marry, but the exercise of the privilege is generally confined to young widows. Those who have had children by the first husbands do not ordinarily remarry. In no case can a widow marry any one but a widower. The gradual tendency to follow Hindu practices is causing permanent widowhood to be looked upon as more respectable (w).

§ 102. The Nambudri Brahmans, with only rare exceptions, follow the Makkathayam law, in which descent from father to son proceeds on the usual principles. The peculiarity of their marriage system is that only the eldest son can marry (x). This rule is supplemented by the practice that the younger members should form connections with the Nayar women. Such unions are frequently dignified with the ceremonials of a Nayar marriage, but they have no binding efficacy. Among the kovilogams, or families of the ancient rulers, the ladies go through a Numbudri marriages.

(t) Mal. Mar. Rep., 108, 109, 110; S. Can. Man., I, 142.

(u) Higadi v. Tonga, 4 Mad. H. C., 196; Koraga v. Reg., 6 Mad., 374. An act to enable persons following the Marumakkathayam or Alya Santana law to adopt a form of marriage, which shall be considered legally binding, has now been passed by the Madras Legislature, Madras Act IV of 1896.

(v) Mal. Mar. Rep., 37, 75, 106; S. Can. Man., I, 143, 160.

(w) Mal. Mar. Rep., 75, 10; S. Can. Man., I, 143, 161.

(x) This is the 59th of the 64 rules called Kerala Anacharam, said to have been promulgated by Sankara Acharya in A. D. 825. Mal. Man., I, 155. The peculiarities of the law, which governs Nambudri Brahmans, were discussed in the case of Vasudevan v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad., 157.

ceremony before maturity similar to the tali-kettu-kalyanam. Anyone who wishes to do so may then consort with the person who ties on the tali. "If not, she consorts with a Nambudri Brahman without any further formality or ceremony, and, after a time, she is free to put him away at her pleasure, and take another Nambudri in his place with the consent of her karnavan and protector, the senior Rajah of the kovilogam, for the time being." In any case the Nambudri is maintained by his own family, while his offspring is incorporated into the family of its mother (y).

Adult marriage of women.

It follows from this arrangement that the Nambudri women find it difficult to provide themselves with husbands. Accordingly the rule of Hindu law, which requires every girl to be married before puberty, does not exist in their case. They can be married at any age, and frequently never are married. In the case of those who die unmarried, the corpse cannot be burnt till a marriage ceremony is performed, which, in the time of the Abbé Dubois, was carried out to the extreme limits of realism; but at present is said to consist in the tying of a tali string round the neck of the corpse while lying at the funeral pile (z).

Among the limited class of Nambudri Brahmans, who follow Marumakkathayam law, marriage is said to be "solemnised with all the religious ceremonies that are undergone with every Brahman marriage in India. The homam, the mantrams, the Saptapadi ceremonies are rigidly and strictly observed" (a).

In the case of all Brahman marriages, whether of Nambudris or others, widow marriages are strictly forbidden (b). Neither husband nor wife can divorce the other except on the ground of excommunication from caste (c).

(y) Mal. Mar. Rep., 24, 53; Cochin Census, 1891, § 175; Travancore Census, 1891, 688.

(z) Mal. Mar. Rep., 8, 57; Mal. Man., 127; Dubois, 17; Cochin Census, 1891, § 175.

(a) Mal. Mar. Rep., 103.

(b) Mal. Mar. Rep., 57, 103; Travancore Census, 1891, 685; Cochin Census, 1891, § 181.

(c) Travancore Census, 1891, 683; Mal. Man., 125.

CHAPTER V.

FAMILY RELATIONS.

Adoption.

§ 103. THERE is a singular disproportion between the space necessarily devoted to adoption in the English works on Hindu law, and that which it occupies in the early law-books. One might read through all the texts from the Sutra writers down to the Daya Bhaga without discovering that adoption is a matter of any prominence in the Hindu system. But for the two treatises translated by Mr. Sutherland, it may almost be affirmed that Englishmen would never have discovered the fact at all. Even in Jagannatha's Digest, the subject only takes up thirty-two pages. The fact is that the law of adoption, as at present administered, is a purely modern development from a very few old texts. The very absence of direct authority has caused an immense growth of subtleties and refinements. The effect that every adoption must have upon the devolution of property causes every case that can be disputed to be brought into Court. Fresh rules are imagined, or invented. Notwithstanding the spiritual benefits, which are supposed to follow from the practice, it is doubtful whether it would ever be heard of, if an adopted son was not also an heir. Paupers have souls to be saved; but they are not in the habit of adopting.

Little noticed in early writings.

§ 104. I have already (§ 68) pointed out the advantages which all early races would derive from the possession of sons, and the peculiar necessity for male offspring which would press upon the Aryans, on account of their religious system. This want was amply met by the early Hindu law, which provided twelve sorts of sons, all of whom were competent to prevent a failure of obsequies, in the absence

Importance of
sons,

of legitimate issue (a). For religious purposes, the son of the appointed daughter seems to have been completely equal in efficacy with the natural-born son (b), and where any one of several brothers had a son, the latter was considered to be the son of all the brothers; Kulluka Bhatta actually adds a gloss: "So that if such nephew would be the heir, the uncles have no power to adopt a son"; and the same view was maintained by Chandesvara and other commentators (c). It is evident, therefore, that in early times the five sorts of adopted sons must have been of very secondary importance. Apastamba expressly states that "the gift or acceptance of a son, and the right to buy or sell a child, is not recognized" (d). And Katyayana permits the gift, or sale, of a son during a season of distress, but not otherwise (e). The same low estimation of adopted sons is evidenced by the rank which they occupied in the order of sons. A reference to the table which accompanies § 68 will show that, out of fourteen authorities there quoted, only five place even the dattaka among the first six. Now this is not a mere matter of arrangement, for they all, without exception, give rights of inheritance to the first six sons, which are denied to the remaining six. No doubt Manu is one of the five who thus favours the adopted son. But it may be questioned whether his text has not undergone an alteration in that respect. Both Yajnavalkya and Narada, who were subsequent to Manu, place the adopted among the later six. Narada expressly states that he took Manu as the basis of his work. An examination of the marginal references in Stenzler's Yajnavalkya will establish that he did the same. It will be seen by the table that these two agree much more closely with each other than either does with Manu

(a) Manu, ix., § 180; cf. § 161, which, as explained by Kulluka Bhatta, seems to be an interpolation, introduced when subsidiary sons had become obsolete. Vrihaspati, Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 8.

(b) Vishnu, xv., § 47; Manu, ix., § 217-189.

(c) Vasishtha, xvii., § 8; Vishnu, xv., § 42, Manu, ix., § 182; 3 Dig., 266; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 21.

(d) Apastamba, ii., 13; vi., § 11.

(e) Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 7, 8; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 10 refers this prohibition to the giver not the taker of the son. A contrary view was taken by Apararka.

as it now stands. It is difficult to account for their differing from so high an authority, if they had before them the text which we possess. In any case, the mere fact that differences of opinion did exist on such a point would seem to show that it had not assumed any great prominence.

§ 105. When the number of subsidiary sons was diminished from the causes I have already suggested (§ 78), the importance of the adopted sons, who alone were left, would naturally increase. Even where a brother's son existed, though he might procure for his uncle all the required spiritual blessings, still an adoption would be necessary, "for the celebration of name, and the due perpetuation of lineage" (f). As partition and self-acquisition became more common, the latter objects would naturally be more desired. It is singular, then, that we should find the same diminution exhibiting itself in the forms of adoption (g). The explanation is probably to be found in the growth of Brahmanical influence, and the consequent prominence given to the religious principle. If the primary object of adoption was to gratify the manes of the ancestors by annual offerings, it was necessary to delude the manes, as it were, into the idea that the offerer really was their descendant. He was to look as much like a real son as possible, and certainly not to be one who could never have been a son. Hence arose that body of rules which were evolved out of the phrase of Çaunaka, that he must be "the reflection of a son" (h). He was to

(f) Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 22; V. Darp., 739.

(g) In addition to the general authorities cited, ante § 78, see as to the obsolescence of the Krita form, 1 Str. H. L., 132; 1 N. C., 72; Eshan Kishor v. Haris Chandra, 13 B. L. R., Appx. 42; S. C., 21 Suth., 381. As to the Svayam-datta, Bashetiappa v. Shivlingappa, 10 Bom. H. C., 268. As to a form called paluk patro, Kalee Chunder v. Sheeb Chunder, 2 Suth., 281. Other forms might perhaps be valid, when sanctioned by local custom, as the Krita system is said still to exist among the Gosains, 1 W. MacN., 101.

(h) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 15. It seems possible that this metaphor is itself a mistake. Dr. Bühler translates the verse, "He then should adorn the child, which (now) resembles a son of the receiver's body; that is, which has come to resemble a son by the previous ceremony of giving and receiving. See Journal, As. Soc. Bengal, 1866, art. Çaunaka Smṛiti. The translation, as given in the Dattaka Mimamsa, is, however, followed by Mr. Golapchandra Sarkar, at p. 308 of his work on adoption, and by Mr. Mandlik, p. 52, in his translation be a person whose mother might have been married by the adopter (i); he was to be of the same class; he was to be so young that his ceremonies might all be performed in the adoptive family; he was to be absolutely severed from his natural family, and to become so completely a part of his new family as to be unable to marry within its limits. His introduction into the family must appear to be a matter of love and free-will, unsullied by every mercenary element. All these restrictions had the effect of eliminating the other forms of adoption, and leaving the dattaka alone in force.

Influence of secular motives.

§ 106. It must not be supposed that the religious motive for adoption ever excluded the secular motive. The spiritual theory operated strongly upon the Shastries who invented the rule; but those who followed them were, in all probability, generally unconscious of any other aim than that of securing an heir, on whom to lavish the family affection which is so strong among Hindus. The propriety of this motive was admitted by the Sanskrit writers themselves. In the ceremonial for adoption given by Baudhayana, the adopter receives the child with the words: "I take thee for the fulfilment of religious duties. I take thee to continue the line of my ancestors" (k). A text which is by some attributed to Manu states that "a son of any description must be anxiously adopted by one who has none, for the sake of the funeral cake, water and solemn rites, and for the celebrity of his name" (l). And the author of the Dattaka Chandrika admits that even where no spiritual necessity exists, a son may, and even ought to be adopted, for "the celebration of name, and the due perpetuation of lineage" (m). In fact, the earliest instances of the Mayukha where the passage occurs in full, and was accepted in preference to that of Dr. Bühler by Banerji, J., 17 All., p. 321. Edge, C. J., was of the opposite opinion, ibid., p. 386.

(i) It will be seen (post § 135) that the origin and scope of this rule is open to much doubt.

(k) The whole passage is translated by Dr. Bühler in his article on Çaunaka, Journ. As. Soc. Bengal, 1866, and in his edition of Baudhayana, vii., 5.

(l) Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 9; 3 Dig., 297.

(m) Ibid., § 22.

of adoption found in Hindu legend are adoption of daughters (n). The Thesawaleme shows that such adoptions were practised among the Tamil races of Southern India (o). At the present day the Bheels carry away girls by force for wives, and then, with a zeal for fiction which is interesting among savages, adopt them into one family, that they may marry them into another (p). The Kritrima form of adoption, which is still in force in Mithila, and which, in several particulars, strongly resembles that which is practised in Jaffna, has no connection with religious ideas, and is wholly non-Brahmanical. Among the tribes who have not come under Brahmanical influence, we find that adoption is equally practised; but without any of those rules which spring from the religious fiction. One Sanskrit purist actually laid it down that Sudras could not adopt, as they were incompetent to perform the proper religious rites (q). As a matter of fact they always did adopt; but were expressly freed from the restrictions which fettered the higher classes. They not only might, but ought to, adopt the son of a sister, or of a daughter, who was forbidden to others; and they might take, as their son, a person of any age, and even a married man (r); that is to say, they adopted persons who made no pretence to religious fitness, but who were perfectly suitable for all other objects. So, in the Punjab, adoption is common to the Jats, Sikhs, and even to the Muhammedans, just as in other parts of India. But with them the object is simply to make an heir. "The religious notion of a mystical second birth is not imported into the transaction." No religious ceremonies are used. There is no exclusion of an only son, or of the son of a daughter, or of a sister, nor is there any limit of age. Of later years, however, a tendency to introduce these Brahmanical rules is showing itself. The explanation given by Mr. Justice Campbell is interesting, as illustrating the way in which the process

Adoptions
among non-Brahmanical races.

(n) See Dattaka Mimamsa, vii., § 30—38.

(o) Thesawaleme, ii., § 4.

(p) Lyall, Asiatic Studies, 163.

(q) Vachaspati, cited Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 26.

(r) See post § 136, 141.

has often taken place:—"In Sikh times when the land was of little value, and young men of much value, the introduction of a new boy into the community was probably looked on with satisfaction. But by the time of our regular settlements the value of land was discovered, and the brotherhood would naturally look to the chances of dividing the land of an heirless co-sharer, rather than to the introduction of an extra hand to share in the profits, which had begun to be considerable. Hence the main body of a tribe would be inclined to enter as a custom what they wished should be the custom, and unless there were men with interests to defend, the general wish for the future was entered without protest" (s). Among the Jain dissenters, and in the Talabda Koli caste in Western India, adoption is also practised, but without any religious significance attached to it (t). It is now, however, established by decision that the Jains have so completely adopted Hindu law, that even rules of the law of adoption which depend on principles quite foreign to their belief will be applied to them, in the absence of proof of some contrary usage (u). Among the Ooriya Rajahs of Ganjam, who are Kshatriyas, the exequial rites are always performed by a Brahman official, who is permanently attached to the family, and who is called the son-Brahman (v). Yet these Rajahs invariably adopt, as might be expected, where an old feudality has to be maintained. In Jaffna, the Tamil people adopt both boys and girls, and so little is there any idea of a new birth into the family, that the adopted son can marry a natural-born daughter of the adopting parents; and, where both a boy and girl are adopted, they can intermarry (w). The secular character

(s) Punjab Cust., 78—83.

(t) Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 382, 392, affd. 5 I. A., 87; S. C., 1 All., 688; Bhala Nahana v. Parbhu, 2 Bom., 67.

(u) Amava v. Mahadganda, 22 Bom., 416, p. 422.

(v) This usage was frequently proved in cases in which I was counsel. For instance, in the case of the Scerghur succession, and that of the Chinna Kimedya taluq (Tammirazu v. Pantina, 6 Mad. H. C., 301; Raghanatha v. Brozokishoro, 3 I. A., 154; S. C., 1 Mad., 69; S. C., 25 Suth., 291), but the custom has not been noticed in either of the reports. It was fully set out in the evidence. It is stated in a more recent case, 11 Mad., 289.

(w) Thesawaleme, ii., § 4.

of the transaction is even more forcibly shown by the circumstance that the person who makes the adoption must obtain the consent of his heirs. If they withhold it, their rights of inheritance will be unaffected (x). These facts appear to be of much weight in support of the suggestion I have already made (§ 10), that the spiritual theory is not the sole object of an adoption, even upon Brahmanical principles, and that it can only be applied with the greatest possible caution in the case of non-Aryan tribes, or such as dissent from orthodox Hinduism (y).

§ 107. The whole Sanskrit law of adoption is evolved from two texts and a metaphor. The metaphor (if it is not itself a mis-translation) is that of Çaunaka, that the boy to be adopted must be "the reflection of a son" (§ 105, note (h)). The texts are those of Manu and Vasishtha.

Manu says (z): "He whom his father or mother gives to another as his son, provided that the donee have no issue, if the boy be of the same class, and affectionately disposed, is considered as a son given, the gift being confirmed by pouring water."

Vasishtha says (a): "A son formed of seminal fluids and of blood, proceeds from his father and mother as an effect from its cause. Both parents have power to sell, or to desert him. But let no man give, or accept, an only son, since he must remain to raise up a progeny for the obsequies of ancestors. Nor let a woman give, or accept, a son, unless with the assent of her lord. He who means to adopt a son must assemble his kinsmen, give humble

(x) Ibid., ii., § 1, 5, 6; see post § 129, note.

(y) Where the family, being non-Hindu by origin, has adopted Hinduism in part, though not entirely, the onus lies on those who set up an adoption to show that this part of the Hindu law has been incorporated in the family usage. Where a family is governed by Hindu law, it may be possible to make out a usage forbidding adoption. It is evident, however, that it would be very difficult to establish a negative usage of such a nature. Panindra Deb v. Rajeswar Das, 12 I. A., 72; S. C., 11 Cal., 463.

(z) Manu, ix., § 168.

(a) xv., 1—8; § Dig., 242. The passage from the Grihyasutra of Baudhayana, translated by Dr. Bühler in the Journal As. Soc. Bengal, 1866, art. Çaunaka Smriti, is almost word for word the same, but contains no limitation as to relationship of class. See also the passage from Çaunaka on Adoption, translated in the same article, which is also given V. May., iv., 5, § 8.

notice to the king and then having made an oblation to fire with words from the Veda, in the midst of his dwelling-house, he may receive, as his son by adoption, a boy nearly allied to him, or (on failure of such) even one remotely allied. But if doubt arise, let him treat the remote kinsman as a Sudra. The class ought to be known, for through one son the adopter rescues many ancestors."

These texts only apply to the Dattaka form. The Kritrima, which prevails in Mithila, but nowhere else, will be treated of subsequently. From this small beginning a body of law has been developed, which will be considered under the following heads:—FIRST, who may take in adoption; SECOND, who may give in adoption (§ 131); THIRD, who may be adopted (§ 135); FOURTH, the ceremonies necessary to an adoption (§ 150); FIFTH, the evidence of adoption (§ 157); SIXTH, the results of adoption (§ 164).

Adopter must be without issue.

§ 108. FIRST, WHO MAY ADOPT.—An adoption may either be made by the man himself, or by his widow on his behalf. But in either case it is a condition precedent that he should be without issue at the time of adoption (b). Issue is taken in the wide sense peculiar to the term in Hindu law, as including three direct descents in the male line. Accordingly, if a man has a son, grandson, or great-grandson actually alive, he is precluded from adopting. Because any one of such persons is his immediate heir, and is capable of performing his funeral rites with full efficacy (c). But the existence of a great-great-grandson, or of a daughter's son is no bar to an adoption (d). Still less the previous existence of issue who are now dead (e). Nanda Pandita

Only one son at a time.

(b) The same rule prevailed as regards adoption both in Greece and Rome. It is singular that the earliest instance of adoption is that in the Rigveda, where Visvamitra, who had at the time a hundred living sons, adopted Sunahsepa. V. N. Mandlik, 454.

(c) Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 13; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 6.

(d) F. MacN., 149; 1 W. MacN., 66, note.

(e) Cankha. Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 4; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 4.

in discussing this subject suggests, upon the authority of a legend in the Purana, that an adoption might be valid even during the life of a natural-born son, if made with the consent of the latter; and in Bengal the validity of such an adoption has been maintained, and also that of two successive adoptions, the latter of which was made while the son first adopted was still alive (f). But the contrary rule is now established; and it is settled that a man cannot have two adopted sons at the same time, though of course he may adopt as often as he likes if, at the time of each successive adoption, he is without issue (g). On the same principle, the simultaneous adoption of two or more sons is invalid as to all (h). And where an adoption is invalid by reason of the concurrent existence of a son, natural or adopted, the death of the latter will not give validity to a transaction which was an absolute nullity from the first (i). It is suggested by Mr. Sutherland and assented to by Mr. MacNaghten, that if the son, natural or adopted, became an outcast, and therefore unable to perform the necessary funeral rites, an adoption would be lawful; and a practice to that effect is stated to exist in Bombay (k). But since Act XXI of 1850 a son would not forfeit any legal right by loss of caste. Therefore an adopted son could not, by virtue of his adoption, step into his place on the ground that he had lost his caste. If the question were to arise, it is possible the Courts would refuse to recognize an adoption which could confer no civil rights. The question might, however, become of importance on the death of the natural son without issue.

§ 109. It has been suggested that an adoption by a Bachelor or widower.

(f) Mt. Solukna v. Ramdotal, 1 S. D., 324 (434); Goureepershad v. Mt. Jymala, 2 S. D., 136 (174); Steele, 45, 188.

(g) Rungama v. Atchama, 4 M. I. A., 1; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 57; Mohesh Narain v. Taruck Nath, 20 I. A., 80; S. C., 20 Cal., 487. But an adoption will not be invalid because it is made in breach of an agreement to adopt another person, where such agreement has not been carried out. 2 Stra. H. L., 115.

(h) Akhoy Chunder v. Kalapar Haji, 12 I. A., 198; S. C., 12 Cal., 406; Doorga Sundari v. Surendra Keshav, 12 Cal., 686; Surendra Keshav v. Doorga Sundari, 19 I. A., 108; S. C., 19 Cal., 513.

(i) Basoo v. Basoo, Mad. Dec. of 1856, 20.

(k) 2 W. MacN., 200; Steele, 42, 181.

bachelor, or a widower, would be invalid, either on the ground that such a person was not in the order of gri-hastha (house-holder or married man), or that the right of adoption was only allowed where the legitimate mode of procreation had failed. But it may now be taken as settled in British India that an adoption, in either of the above cases, would be valid (l). In Pondicherry a Brahman bachelor is considered to be incapable of adopting (m). In one case the Madras Sudder Court held that an adoption was illegal which had been effected during the pregnancy of the adopter's wife; not on the ground that she afterwards produced a son, which it does not appear that she did, but because it was "of the essence of the power to adopt that the party adopting should be hopeless of having issue" (n). This principle, if sound, would preclude a man ever adopting until extreme old age, or until he was on his death-bed. It is also opposed to the rules which provide for the case of a son born after an adoption (§ 168). Accordingly, in a later case (1881), where an adoption had been held invalid on the ground that the wife was at the time pregnant, and known to be so by her husband, the Court, after an examination of the above decision, over-ruled it, and held the adoption to be valid. They pointed out that the logical result of such a rule would be to suspend an adoption during the pregnancy, not only of the adopter's wife, but also of the wives of his sons and grandsons, since the existence of issue, in the most extended sense of the word, is a bar to an adoption (o).

Pregnancy.

Adoption by disqualified heir.

§ 110. Where a person is disqualified from inheriting by any personal disability, such as blindness, impotence, (l) Suth. Syn., 664, 671; 3 Dig., 252; 1 W. MacN., 66; 2 W. MacN., 175; Gunnappa v. Sankappa, Bom. Sel. Rep., 202; Nagappa v. Subba Sastry, 2 Mad. H. C., 367; Chandrasekharudu v. Bramhanna, 4 Mad. H. C., 270; Gopal Anant v. Narayan Ganesh, 12 Bom., 329; per Mahmood, J., 12 All., 352.

(m) Sorg H. L., 121, Co. Con., 375.

(n) Narayana v. Vedachala, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 97; see Steele, 43.

(o) Nagabhushanam v. Seshamma, 3 Mad., 180; acc. Hanmant Ramchandra v. Bhimacharya, 12 Bom., 105.

leprosy, or the like, a son whom he may adopt can have no higher rights than himself, and would be entitled to maintenance only (p). Mr. Sutherland was of opinion that the adoption itself would be valid, in which case, of course, the adopted son would succeed to the self-acquired or separate property of his adoptive father (q). On the other hand, in two cases which Mr. MacNaghten cites with approbation, the Bengal pundits held that the capacity of a leper to adopt depended upon his having performed the necessary expiation. When he had done so the adoption was valid. When he had not done so, or where the disease was such as to be inexpiable, the adoption was invalid (r). This opinion rested on the ground that until expiation he was unable to perform the necessary religious ceremonies. Accordingly, the Bengal High Court decided that an adoption was invalid when effected by a widow who was living in concubinage, as this made her unfit to take part in any religious ceremony (s). In Bombay it was contended that an adoption by a widow was invalid, as she had not undergone tonsure, and was therefore impure. It appeared, however, that she had made certain expiatory gifts, which the Shastras, on being consulted previous to the adoption, had pronounced sufficient. The Court refused to allow their opinion to be questioned. In a later case, where no such expiation was proved, the Court treated the obstruction as a mere matter of religious ceremony, which was not of the essence of the adoption (t). In a case before the Privy Council it was argued, and seems to have been assumed, that an adoption would have been invalid, if it had been made while the adopter

(p) Dattaka Chandrika, vi., § 81; Sevachetumbara v. Parasucty, Mad. Dec. of 1857, 210. This incapacity is not recognised by the Custom of Pondicherry, Sorg H. L., 120, Co. Con., 375. In the Punjab a man who is blind, impotent, or lame can adopt, though the Brahmans deny the right of one who was always impotent. Punjab Customary Law, II, 154.

(q) Suth. Syn., 664, 671.

(r) 2 W. MacN., 201, acc.; Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 11; Mohunt Bhagavan v. Mohunt Roghunundun, 22 I. A., 94; S. C., 22 Cal., 843.

(s) Sayamalal v. Saudamini, 5 B. L. R., 362.

(t) Ravji Vinayakra v. Lakshmbai, 11 Bom., 381, 392; Lakshmbai v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., 590; W. & B., 998.

was still in a state of pollution (u). No decision was given upon the point, as the facts which would have raised it were negatived. When the case arises it will require a previous determination of the question, What religious ceremonies are necessary to an adoption, and who must take part in them? (v). This was the distinction which formed the ratio decidendi in two cases, in one of which a Sudra leper was held entitled to adopt, as among Sudras no religious ceremonies are required for adoption (w). In the other a Hindu father who had become a convert to Muhammedanism gave his son, who had remained a Hindu, in adoption. In this case the father exercised the right of giving by virtue of his authority as guardian, but delegated to the uncle of the boy the function of handing him over. The Court doubted whether this could have been done if the parties were Brahmans, so that datta homam would be essential (x).

§ 111. The law as to the capacity of a minor to adopt, or to authorise an adoption, seems also unsettled. The various Acts which constitute a Court of Wards all contain provisions forbidding a disqualified landholder to adopt without the consent of the Court (y). It has been held that these provisions do not apply at all unless actual possession has been taken by the Courts of Wards; but that where they do apply, they equally forbid the giving of an authority to adopt, and that an adoption made in violation of them is absolutely invalid (z). Under Act

(u) Ramalinga v. Sadaswa, 9 M. I. A., 506; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 25.

(v) See as to this, post § 152, 153, and as to the grounds upon which disability to inheritance arises, post chap. xix.

(w) Sourindra Mohun v. Siromoni, 28 Cal., 171.

(x) Shamsing v. Santabai, 25 Bom., 551.

(y) Beng. Reg. X of 1793, s. 33; LII of 1803, s. 37 (N.-W. P.); Mad. Reg. V of 1804, s. 25; Act XXXV of 1858, s. 74; Act IV of 1870, s. 74 (B. C.); Act IX of 1879 (B. C.), s. 61. This last Act also extends the prohibition to an authority to adopt.

(z) Jumoona v. Bamasoonderai, 3 I. A., 72; 1 Cal., 289; Neelkaunt v. Anundmoyee, S. D. of 1855, 218; Anundmoyee v. Sheebchunder, 9 M. I. A., 287; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 19. But see per Pontifex, J., Banee Pershad v. Moonshee Syud, 25 Suth., 192, 198. It has been held that the corresponding provision in Bombay, Act II of 1863, s. 6, cl. 2, only applies as between Government and the person claiming as adopted son, and cannot be taken advantage of by third parties for the purpose of invalidating the adoption. Vasudevanant v. Ramkrishna, 2 Bom., 529.

IX of 1875 (Majority), § 3, minority in the case of Hindus now extends to the end of the eighteenth year, unless in cases where a guardian has been appointed by a Court of Justice, or where the minor is under the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards, in which case it lasts till the end of the twenty-first year. It has, however, been held in Bengal and Bombay that both an actual adoption effected by a minor, and an authority to adopt given by him, will be valid, provided he has attained years of discretion, and this opinion appears to have been approved by the Judicial Committee. Mr. Justice Mitter said: "Every act done by a minor is not necessarily null and void. Those acts only which are prejudicial to his interest can be questioned and avoided by him after he reaches his majority. But no such prejudicial character can be predicated of adoption in the case of a childless Hindu, and as under the Hindu Shastras a minor who has arrived at the age of discretion is not only competent but bound to perform the religious ceremonies prescribed for his salvation, we cannot hold the adoption made in this case to be invalid, merely because the adoptive father was in the eye of the law a minor" (a). The judgment does not state when a Hindu arrives at years of discretion; whether the period is a fixed one, or whether it depends upon the special capacity of each individual. In general, the Hindu law-books speak of the age of discretion and majority as convertible terms, and treat each period as being attained at the sixteenth year. But a further sub-division is stated, viz., infancy to the end of the fourth year, boyhood to the end of the ninth, and adolescence to the end of the fifteenth. This distinction, according to Jagannatha, regards penance, expiation, and the like. An opinion is also mentioned by him that the period of legal capacity may be determined with reference to the degree in which a youth has actually become conversant with affairs (b). It may be that Mr. Justice Mitter meant that an adoption would be valid if effected by a boy between the ages of ten and sixteen, who was shown to be capable of understanding the nature of his act (c). The actual decision appears to have been as to an authority to adopt given by the minor. Of course he could not authorise an adoption which he could not effect. The converse of the proposition does not seem necessarily to follow. An act done might be valid, though an authority to do it might be invalid.

Age of discretion.

(a) Rajendro Narain v. Saroda, 15 Suth., 548; Patel Vandhravan Jekisan v. Manilal, 15 Bom., 565; per curiam, Jumoona v. Bamasoonderai, 3 I. A., 83; S. C., 1 Cal., 289; Mt. Pearee v. Mt. Hurbunsee, 19 Suth., 127; V. Darp., 770, where conflicting opinions are cited.

Adoption by
wife.

§ 112. As an adoption is made solely to the husband and for his benefit, he is competent to effect it without his wife's assent, and notwithstanding her dissent (d). For the same reason, she can adopt to no one but her husband. An adoption made to herself, except where the Kritrima form is allowed, would be wholly invalid (e). Nor can she ever adopt to her husband during his lifetime, except with his assent (f). Her capacity to adopt to him, after his death, whether with or without his assent, is a point which has given rise to four different opinions, each of which is settled to be law in the province where it prevails. "All the schools accept as authoritative the text of Vasishtha, which says, 'Nor let a woman give or accept a son unless with the assent of her lord' (§ 107). But the Mithila school apparently takes this to mean that the assent of the husband must be given at the time of the adoption, and therefore that a widow cannot receive a son in adoption, according to the dattaka form, at all (g). The Bengal school interprets the text as requiring an widow.

Adoption by

Mithila.

Bengal.

(b) 1 Dig., 291—293; 2 Dig., 115—117; Mitakshara on Loans, cited V. Dark., 770.

(c) Act IX of 1875 (Majority) does not settle the point, as s. 2 provides that the Act is not to affect any person in the matter of adoption.

(d) Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 22; Rungama v. Atchama, 4 M. I. A., 2; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 57.

(e) Chowdry Padum v. Koer Oodey, 12 M. I. A., 356; S. C. 12 Suth. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 101. Adoptions by women of the dancing-girl caste rest on a different footing, see post § 199.

(f) Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 27.

(g) Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 16; Vivada Chintamani, 74; 1 W. MacN., 95, 100; Jai Ram v. Musan Dhami, 5 S. D., 3.

express permission given by the husband in his lifetime, but capable of taking effect after his death (h); whilst the Mayukha, Kaustubha, and other treatises which govern the Mahratta school, explain the text away by saying, "that it applies only to an adoption made in the husband's lifetime, and is not to be taken to restrict the widow's power to do that which the general law prescribes as beneficial to her husband's soul" (i). The same interpretation is put upon the text by the Nambudry Brahmins of the West Coast (§ 45) with the same result (k). A fourth and intermediate view was established by the Judicial Committee in the case from which this quotation is taken, viz., that in Southern India the want of the husband's assent may be supplied by that of his sapindas. The doctrine of the Benares school, as it prevails in Northern India, appears to be the same as that of Bengal, as to the necessity for the husband's assent; though upon this point a greater difference of opinion has prevailed, from the circumstance that the Viramitrodaya, which allows the assent of the kinsmen to be sufficient, is an authority in that province (l). The result is that, in the case of an adoption by a widow, in Mithila, no consent is sufficient; in Western India no consent is required; in Bengal and Benares the husband's assent is required; in Southern India the consent either of the husband or of the sapindas is sufficient. The cases of Western and Southern India alone require any further discussion. Before examining them, it will be well to dispose of the other matters relating to an adoption by a widow upon which the law is uniform.

(h) 1 W. MacN., 91, 100; 2 W. MacN., 175, 182, 183; Janki Dibeh v. Suda Sheo, 1 S. D., 197 (262); Mt. Tara Muneo v. Dev. Navayajun, 3 S. D., 357 (516).

(i) Per curiam, Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 435; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17; V. N. Mandlik, 463.

(k) 11 Mad., 167, 178, 187. A similar custom has been decided to exist in various sects of the Jains. Harnabh v. Mandil, 27 Cal., 379.

(l) Viramit., ii., 2, § 8; 1 W. MacN., 91, 100; 2 W. MacN., 189; Shumshere v. Dilraj, 2 S. D., 169 (216); Haiman v. Koomar, 2 Kn., 203; Chowdry Padum Singh v. Oodey Singh, 12 M. I. A., 350; per curiam, Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 440; S. C. in Court below, 2 Mad. H. C., 216; 2 Stra. H. L., 92; Tulshi Ram v. Behari Lal, 12 All. (F. B.), 328, where it was also held that the want of proper authority could not be cured on the principle of factum valet. Semble, Lala Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, 14 Cal., 401—415.

Nature of authority.

§ 113. No particular form of authority is required. It may be given in writing or in words (m), or by will (n). It may also be conditional; that is, an authority to adopt upon the happening of a particular event, provided an adoption made when the event happened would be legal. For instance, an authority to a widow to adopt, in the event of a disagreement between herself and a surviving son, would be invalid, because the father himself could not adopt so long as the son lived (o). But an authority to adopt in the event of the death of a son then living would be good, and so it would be if the authority were to adopt several sons in succession, provided one was not to be adopted till the other was dead (p).

Must be strictly followed.

§ 114. The authority given must be strictly pursued, and can neither be varied from nor extended (q). If the widow is directed to adopt a particular boy, she cannot adopt any other, even though he should be unattainable. If she is directed to adopt a son, her authority is exhausted as soon as she has made a single adoption; and she cannot adopt a second time, even on the failure of the son first adopted (r). In Madras, however, where want of authority by a husband can be supplied by the assent of sapindas, it has been held that where the husband's will authorised the widow to make an adoption, which she made, and on the death of the adopted son she made another adoption with the consent of the sapindas, the latter adoption was also

(m) Futwah, 1 Mad. Dec., 104; per curiam, Soondur Koomaree v. Gudalhuw, M. I. A., 64; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 116.

(n) Savoda v. Tincowry, 1 Hyde, 223.

(o) Mt. Solukna v. Ramdolal, 1 S. D., 324 (434); Gopee Lall v. Mt. Chundraolee, 19 Suth., 12 (a Privy Council case).

(p) Shamchunder v. Narayni, 2 S. D., 209 (279); Bhoobun Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 10 M. I. A., 279; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15; Jumoona v. Bamasoonderei, 3 I. A., 72; S. C., 1 Cal., 269; Vellanki v. Venkata Rama (Guntur case), 4 I. A., 1; S. C., 1 Mad., 174; S. C., 26 Suth., 21.

(q) Even though the act directed will be illegal when done, as for instance, that two widows should simultaneously adopt two boys. Surendra Keshav v. Doorgasundari, 19 I. A., 108, p. 122; S. C., 19 Cal., 513.

(r) Per curiam, Ohoudry Padum v. Koer Oodey, 12 M. I. A., 356; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 1; F. MacN., 166, 175; 1 W. MacN., 89, dub.; Purmanand v. Oomakunt, 4 S. D., 318 (404); Gournath v. Annapoorna, S. D. of 1852, 332; Amirthayyan v. Ketharamayyan, 14 Mad., 65; but see contra, Suryanarayana v. Venkataramana, 26 Mad., 681.

valid. It would have been different if a second adoption had been forbidden by the husband (s). Where a man died, leaving his wife pregnant, and authorised her to adopt, in case the son to be born should die, and she had a daughter, it was held she could not adopt (t). And so it was decided that a direction to a widow to adopt a boy along with a living son, which was illegal and could not be carried out, did not authorise her to adopt after the death of that son (u). But an authority to adopt generally authorises the adoption of any person whose affiliation would be legal (v). A direction by a testator that his widow should adopt a son "with the good advice and opinion of the manager," whom he had appointed as a sort of agent, was held only as a direction, and that an adoption made without consulting him was valid (w); on the other hand an authority to adopt given by a testator to his wife and executors, being bad as to the executors was held to be incapable of execution by the widow, the entire authority being single and indivisible (x).

In one case decided at Madras, the authority to the widow was contained in the following words of her husband's will:—"If Iyah Pillay beget a son, beside his present son, you are to keep him to my lineage." At the testator's death, Iyah Pillay had no second son. Sir Thomas Strange decided that the widow was not bound to wait indefinitely, and he affirmed the validity of the adoption by her of another boy (y). This decision is canvassed with much vigour by the author of Considerations on Hindu Law (z), who argues that the authority was specific; that under it no one could be adopted but a son of Iyah Pillay; that the widow was bound to wait till after possibility was extinct of further issue by him, and

Case of Iyah Pillay.

(s) Parasara Bhattar v. Rangaraja, 2 Mad., 202.

(t) Mohendro Lall v. Rookimny, 1 Coryton, 42; cited V. Darp., 814.

(u) Joychundro v. Bhyrub, S. D. of 1849, 41.

(v) 1 Mad. Dec., 105.

(w) Surendra Nandan v. Sailaja Kant, 18 Cal., 335.

(x) Amrito Lall Dutt v. Surnomoyee, 24 Cal., 589; 25 Cal., 662; 27 I. A., 128; S. C., 27 Cal., 996.

(y) Veerapermall v. Narain Pillay, 1 N. C., 91.

(z) F. MacN., 197.

then that the authority would lapse, from the failure of any object upon whom it could be exercised. Sir Thomas Strange, however, construed the document as evidencing a primary desire to be represented by an adopted son, coupled with a subsidiary desire that that son should have been begotten by Iyah Pillay. In this construction he is supported by Bombay authorities. "It is common for a husband authorising an adoption to specify the child he wishes to be taken. Should that child die, or be refused by his parents, the authority will be held, at least in Bombay, to warrant the adoption of another child, unless, indeed, he said, 'such a child and no other.' The presumption is that he desired an adoption and by specifying the object merely indicated a preference" (a).

§ 115. Another limitation to the right of adoption has been laid down by the Privy Council, in some cases which decide that a widow cannot adopt to her deceased husband where he has left a son, who has himself died, leaving an heir to his estate. The first case, in which this point arose, was that of Bhoobun Moyee v. Ram Kishore Achari (b). There Gour Kishore died leaving a son, Bhowani, and a widow, Chundrabullee, to whom he gave an express authority to adopt in the event of his son's death. Bhowani married, attained his majority, and died, leaving a widow, but no issue. Chundrabullee then adopted a son, Ram Kishore, who sued Bhowani's widow to recover the estate. The Privy Council held that her estate could not be divested by the subsequent adoption. Lord Kingsdown, however, went on to say "that at the time when Chundrabullee professed to exercise it the power was incapable of execution." Their Lordships admitted that Gour Kishore had fixed no limits to the period during which his power might be acted on by his widow, but they said, "it is plain that some limits must be assigned. It might well have been that Bhowani had left a son, natural born or adopted, and that such son had died himself, leaving a son, and that such son had attained his majority in the lifetime of Chundrabullee. It could hardly have been intended that, after the lapse of several successive heirs, a son should be adopted to the great-grandfather of the last taker, when all the spiritual purposes of a son, according to the largest construction of them, would have been satisfied. But whatever may be the intention, would the law allow it to be effected? We rather understand the Judges below to have been of opinion that, if Bhowani Kishore had left a son, or if a son had been lawfully adopted to him by his wife under a power legally conferred upon her, the power of adoption given to Chundrabullee would have been at an end. But it is difficult to see what reasons could be assigned for such a result which would not equally apply to the case before us." The same question arose again after the deaths of Bhowani's widow and of Chundrabullee. Ram Kishore got into possession of the property left by Gour Kishore and Bhowani. He was sued for its recovery by a more distant relation. It was admitted that he was entitled to hold it, if his adoption was valid, and the High Court of Bengal decided in his favour (c). They limited the effect of the Privy Council judgment to that which it had actually decided, viz., that the plaintiff in the suit had no right to the property which he claimed. This decision, however, was in its turn reversed by the Judicial Committee (d). They said: "the substitution of a new heir for the widow was no doubt the question to be decided, and such substitution might have been disallowed, the adoption being held valid for all other purposes, which is the view the Lower Courts have taken of the judgment, but their Lordships do not think that this was intended. They consider the decision to be that, upon

(a) W. & B., 965, followed; Lakshmi Bai v. Rajaji, 22 Bom., 996.

(b) 10 M. I. A., 279; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15. See this case referred to on another point, § 185.

(c) Puddo Kumaree v. Juggut Kishore, 5 Cal., 615.

(d) Pudma Coomari v. Court of Wards, 8 I. A., 229.

the vesting of the estate in the widow of Bhowani, the power of adoption was at an end, and incapable of execution and if the question had come before them without any previous decision upon it they would have been of that opinion." Both these cases were again considered and followed in a subsequent case from Madras (e), when the facts were exactly similar, except that the widow acted upon an authority from her husband's sapindas, given after the death of the natural born son, but during the life of his widow. After her death the distant collaterals sued for, and obtained a declaration that the adoption was wholly invalid, and could not stand in the way of their reversionary rights. Of course the same doctrine would apply à fortiori as against the independent right of a widow in Bombay to adopt to her late husband (f).

Further consideration of the rule.

§ 116. The applicability of this doctrine to cases differing in their facts has been considered in later cases in Bengal and Bombay. In the first (g) a husband had left his widow authority to adopt five sons in succession. She adopted Kristo Churn who died twelve years after his adoption, apparently unmarried. She then adopted another boy, whose right to succeed to the husband's property was disputed by a collateral relation of the husband. Before the High Court, the only point raised was that under the decision in Bhoobun Moyee's case (h) the power to the widow to make a second adoption was incapable of execution, inasmuch as Kristo Churn had lived long enough to perform all acts of spiritual benefit for the deceased, and it must be assumed he had performed them. The High Court found that the second adoption was valid. They said that "an adopted son attaining an age of sufficient maturity, and performing the religious services enjoined by the Shastras cannot exhaust the whole of the spiritual benefit which a son is capable of conferring upon (e) Thayammal v. Venkatrama, 14 I. A., 67; S. C., 10 Mad., 205; Tavachurn v. Suresh Chunder, 16 I. A., 166; S. C., 17 Cal., 122.

(f) See W. & B., 987-991. Ramji v. Graman, 6 Bom., 498; Keshav Ramkrishna v. Govind Ganesh, 9 Bom., 94.

(g) Ram Soondar v. Surbanee Dossee, 22 Suth., 121.

(h) Ante § 115.

the soul of his deceased father. Because these services are enjoined to be repeated at certain stated intervals, and the performance of them on each successive occasion secures fresh spiritual benefit to the soul of the deceased father." As regards Bhoobun Moyee's case, they proceeded to state their opinion that the Privy Council had not meant to hold that the power was incapable of execution for all purposes, but only for the purpose of divesting the widow of Bhowani Kishore of her proprietary rights. This view can no longer be maintained after the more recent decisions of the Judicial Committee. But the case before the High Court differed from the three cases in the Privy Council which followed and explained Bhoobun Moyee's case (i), in this respect that, on the death of Kristo Churn, the estate vested in no one as his heir, other than the widow who exercised the power of adoption. In this respect, the case may well stand along with the four already discussed. In fact, it comes within the express words of Lord Kingsdown, when he said (k)—"If Bhowani Kishore had died unmarried, his mother, Chundrabullee Debia, would have been his heir, and the question of adoption would have stood on quite different grounds. By exercising the power of adoption she would have divested no estate but her own, and this would have brought the case within the ordinary rule." This language was adopted by the Judicial Committee in a similar case (l) and was acted on by the Bombay Court, where after the death of a son, who was succeeded by the widow as his mother, she made an adoption, and so did her mother-in-law. The adoption by the mother-in-law was held invalid as it would have divested the right of the mother. That of the mother was held good, as it divested no right but her own (m). Where, however, a man had

(i) 8 I. A., 229; 14 I. A., 67; 16 I. A., 166.

(k) 10 M. I. A., p. 311.

(l) Vellanki Venkata v. Venkata Rama, 4 I. A., 1, p. 9, and see Verabhai v. Bai Hiraba, 30 I. A., 234; S. C., 27 Bom., 492.

(m) Gavilappa v. Girimallappa, 19 Bom., 331; Payappa v. Appanna, 23 Bom., 327, p. 331; Venkappa v. Jivaji, 25 Bom., 306. See, too, Jammabai v. Raychand, 7 Bom., 225; Ravji Vinayakrav v. Lakshmi Bai, 11 Bom., 383, p. 397.

died leaving a married son, and his own widow, and the estate passed first to the son, and on his death to his widow, and on her death, the father's widow succeeded as heir to her son, it was held that her power of adopting to her own husband was gone (n).

Adoption by grandmother
of deceased.

Lord Kingsdown's dictum was the ground of the later decision of the Bengal High Court (o). There Jagat Sett died in 1865 leaving an adopted son, Gopal Chand, and a widow, Pran Kumari. Gopal Chand died in 1868, leaving a son Gopi Chand, and he again died unmarried and without issue. On his death Pran Kumari, who was his heir, adopted Jibun Mull. The plaintiff, a distant collateral relation of Gopi Chand, sued for a declaration that he was entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of Pran Kumari, and that the adoption of Jibun Mull was invalid. The High Court appears to have admitted that the adoption would have been invalid if it had been based upon an authority to adopt granted by Jagat Sett. In this case, however, the parties were Jains, and by Jain law a widow can adopt without authority from her husband (p). They held that this distinguished the case from that of Pudma Kumari Debi v. The Court of Wards (q), and brought it within the dictum of Lord Kingsdown above quoted. But, although a Jain widow can adopt without any authority from her husband, it is difficult to suppose that she can do what her husband could not have authorised her to do. Both in Madras and Bombay a widow is precluded from adoption where a prohibition from her husband can be proved or inferred (r). Can she be in a better position, where the law would have prohibited her to act upon his directions, if they had been given? (s).

Adoption by
minor;

§ 117. A widow who is duly authorised by her husband, may adopt while she is a minor, because the act is her (n) Krishnarav v. Shankarrav, 17 Bom., 164, folld.; Ramkrishna v. Shamrao, 26 Bom., 526.

(o) Manick Chand v. Jagat Settani, 17 Cal., 518, p. 536.

(p) Post § 131.

(r) 12 M. I. A., p. 443, post § 122 and § 130.

(s) Acc. Krishnarav v. Shankarrav, 17 Bom., 164.

(q) 8 I. A., 229.

husband's, and she is only the instrument (t). I presume the same rule would apply in cases where an authority by his sapindas is requisite, and is given. In Western India it is stated that a widow under the age of puberty cannot adopt (u). I suppose the reason for the difference is that there the adoption is the act of the widow, for which no authority, or consent, is required.

An unchaste widow cannot adopt even with the express authority of her husband, because her dissolute life entails a degradation which renders her unable to perform the necessary ceremonies. This incapacity may, it is said, be removed by performing the penances proper for expiation. But these cannot be performed during pregnancy; therefore, while it lasts, an unchaste widow cannot possibly adopt (v). In the case of an adoption by a Vaisya widow, under authority from her husband, it seems to have been considered by the Madras High Court, though it was not necessary to decide the point, that the adoption was bad, being made while the corpse was still in house, and the widow was therefore in a state of pollution (w). Whether this ground of incapacity would apply in the case of Sudras, depends upon the question, whether in their case any religious ceremonies are necessary (x).

or unchaste
widow.

§ 118. Where there are several widows, if a special authority has been given to one of them to adopt, she, of course, can act upon it without the assent of the others, and, I presume, she alone could act upon it (y). If the authority has been given to the widows severally, the junior may adopt without the consent of the senior, if the

Several widows.

(t) 2 W. MacN., 180; V. Darp., 769; Mondakini v. Adinath, 18 Cal., 69. In a case in Mysore a question was raised but not decided whether the minor widow could repudiate the adoption on coming of age. In the absence of circumstances showing that the adoption was bad ab initio I cannot imagine such a repudiation possible. Nanammah v. Ramiah, 5 Mysore, 24.

(u) Steele, 48 W. & B., 995.

(v) Thukoo v. Ruma, 2 Bor., 446, 456 [488]; Sayamalal v. Saudamini, 5 B. L. R., 362, approved by Mitter, J., Kery Kolitany v. Monceram, 13 B. L. R., 14; S. C., 19 Suth., 367. As to the possibility of removing by penance the results of unchastity, see per Mitter, J.; S. C., 13 B. L. R., 39.

(w) Ranganayakamma v. Alwar Setti, 13 Mad., p. 222.

(x) As to this, see post § 152.

(y) 2 Stra. H. L., 91.

latter refuses to adopt (z). In Bombay, it is said, that where there are several widows, the elder has the right to adopt even without the consent of the junior widow, but that the junior widow cannot adopt without the consent of the elder, unless the latter is leading an irregular life, which would wholly incapacitate her (a). This rule, however, only applies where both widows are holding as heirs of the husband. Jivanrav left two widows, Lakshmibai and Kashibai, and died leaving them and a son by Kashibai; on the son's death Kashibai inherited as his mother. Lakshmibai then adopted a son to her husband without the consent of Kashibai. It was held that her adoption was invalid, and semble that it would not have been valid even if she had obtained that consent (b).

Widow alone can adopt for husband.

§ 119. It is a curious thing, that while the husband's right is recognized to delegate to his widow an authority to adopt, he can delegate it to no one else, nor can he join anyone else with her, as for instance, his executors, as joint adopters (c). In cases where the assent of sapindas will supply the place of an authority by the husband, that assent must be sought for and acted upon by the widow. Where no authority is given or required, equally the widow alone can perform the act (d). The reason probably is, that she is looked upon, not merely as his agent, but as the surviving half of himself (e), and, therefore, exercising an independent discretion, which can neither be supplied, nor controlled, by anyone else. It is no doubt upon the same principle, that an express authority, or even direction, by a husband to his widow to adopt, is, for all legal purposes, absolutely non-existent

Her discretion
absolute.

(z) Mondakini v. Adinath, 18 Cal., 69.

(a) Steele, 48, 187; W. & B., 977, 999; Rakhmabai v. Radhabai, 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 181.

(b) Anandibai v. Kashibai, 28 Bom., 461, see post § 195.

(c) Amrito Lal v. Surnomoyee, 25 Cal., 662, affd. 27 I. A., 128; S. C., 27 Cal., 996, e.g., a direction by a testator to his son's widow to adopt might justify an adoption to the son, but not to the testator. Karsandas v. Ladkavahu, 12 Bom., 185.

(d) F. MacN., 202; 2 Strv. H. L., 94; Veerapermall v. Narain Pillay, 1 N. C., 103; Bhagandas v. Rajmal, 10 Bom. H. C., 241.

(e) See Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 458.

until it is acted upon. She cannot be compelled to act upon it unless, and until, she chooses to do so (f). If she acts upon it, not voluntarily, but under the influence of coercion, physical or moral, the adoption is invalid (g). And so it has been held in a case where a widow adopted in ignorance of the legal effect of her acts in divesting her estate (h). The Court will not even recognize the authority to the extent of making a declaration as to its validity (i). Till she does act, her position is exactly the same as it would be, if the authority had never been given. If she would be the heir to her husband's estate in the absence of a son, she is such heir until she chooses to descend from that position; and she is in of her own right, and not as trustee for any son to be adopted hereafter (k). If she is not the heir, she can claim no greater right to interfere with the management of the estate, or to control the persons in possession, than if she had no authority. The only mode of giving it effect is to act upon it (l). If a husband directs his widow to adopt a particular boy, or the child of a particular father, she is under no obligation to submit to any conditions which the latter may attempt to impose (m). A question has arisen, but not been decided, whether a widow with power to adopt can bind herself not to adopt. The Court refused an interim injunction against the adoption, but there the matter ended (n). Should the case arise again, it might affect the decision to consider the nature of the widow's power; whether she was expressly directed by her husband to adopt, or only allowed to do so at her own discretion, or whether her husband had been wholly silent on the point, and her authority to adopt arose

(f) Dyamoyee v. Rasbeharee, S. D. of 1852, 1013; Bamundoss v. Mt. Tarinee, 7 M. I. A., 190; Uma Sunduri v. Sowobinee, 7 Cal., 288.

(g) Ranganayakamma v. Alwar Setti, 13 Mad., 214, 220.

(h) Bayabai v. Bala, 7 Bom. H. C., Appx. 1.

(i) Mt. Pearee v. Mt. Hurbunsee, 19 Suth., 127; Sreemutty Rajkoomaree v. Nobocoomar, 1 Boul., 137; Sev. 641, note.

(k) Bamundoss v. Mt. Tarinee, 7 M. I. A., 169, overruling Bijaya v. Shama, S. D. of 1848, 762.

(l) Mt. Subudra v. Goluknath, 7 S. D., 143 (166).

(m) Shamavahoo v. Dwarkadas, 12 Bom., 202.

(n) Assar Purshotam v. Ratanbai, 13 Bom., 56.

from consent of sapindas, or, in the West Coast, from her own independent power. Nor is there any limit to the time during which a widow may act upon the authority given to her (o). In a Bengal case, an adoption made fifteen years after the husband's death was supported; and in Bombay cases, the periods were twenty, twenty-five, fifty-two, and even seventy-one years (p).

Absence of husband's authority.

§ 120. Having now seen the effect of an authority to adopt when given by the husband, it remains to examine the mode in which it may be supplied when wanting. This can only be in Southern and Western India and in some parts of Northern India (§§ 112, 121, 130). In Madras the balance of opinion had always been that, in the absence of authority from the husband, the assent of sapindas was sufficient. Till lately, however, the point was certainly open to argument. It has now been definitively settled by the judgment of the Privy Council in the case of the Ramnaad Zemindary, and in several other cases which followed, and were founded upon, that decision.

Ramnaad case.

§ 121. In the Ramnaad case (q), the adoption in dispute was made by a widow, who had taken as heir to her late husband a Zemindary, which was his separate estate. The adoption was made with the assent, original or subsequent, of a number of sapindas of the last male holder, who were certainly the majority of the whole number then alive, if, indeed, they did not constitute the entire body of sapindas. The only question, therefore, which required decision was, whether in Southern India any amount of assent on the part of sapindas could give validity to an adoption made by a widow without her husband's consent. The High Court of Madras, after an elaborate examination of all the authorities, came to the conclusion that such an adoption was valid. They relied much on the theory that the law of adoption was founded upon, and a development from, the old principle of actual begetting by a brother or sapinda. Arguing from this analogy, they proceeded to say (r): "On the reason of the rule, then, it seems to us that if the requirement of consent is more than a moral precept, and it must never be forgotten that in all Hindu authors, as in the works of all authors who expound a system of positive law, professing to be based upon divine revelation, ethical and jural notions are inextricably intermixed, the assent of any one of the sapindas will suffice. If, however, the sapindas are by a fanciful, rather than a solid, analogy to be treated as a juridical person in which the whole authority of the husband is to be vested, it would be wholly contrary to sound jurisprudence to treat the assent of every individual member as necessary. On the contrary, the will of the majority of individual members must be taken as the will of the body, in any matter not manifestly repugnant to the purpose for which the body was created."

(o) F. MacN., 157; 1 N. C., 111; Ramkishan v. Mt. Strumuttee, 3 S. D., 367 (489, 494).

(p) Anon., 2 M. Dig., 18; Bhasker v. Narro Ragoonath, Bom. Sel. Rep., 24; Brijbhoojunjee v. Gokoolootsaojee, 1 Bor., 181 [202]; Nimbalkar v. Jayavant-rav, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 191; Giriowa v. Bhimaji Ragunath, 9 Bom., 58. See Dukhina v. Rash Beharee, 6 Suth., 221, where it was suggested that a widow could not act upon an authority after twelve years. Sed quare.

(q) Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 2 Mad. H. C., 206; affd., 12 M. I. A., 397; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17.

§ 122. The Judicial Committee confirmed this decision upon the ground of positive authority and precedent, while declining to accept the supposed analogy between adoptions according to the Dattaka form, and the obsolete practice of raising up issue to the deceased husband by carnal intercourse with the widow. They then proceeded as follows (s):—

"It must, however, be admitted that the doctrine is stated in the old treatises, and even by Mr. Colebrooke, with a decree of vagueness that may occasion considerable difficulties and inconveniences in its practical application. The question, who are the kinsmen whose assent will supply

(r) 2 Mad. H. C., 231 I have already suggested my belief that the two things were perfectly independent of each other. See ante § 66, et seq.

(s) 12 M. I. A., 441; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17.

Undivided property.

the want of positive authority from the deceased husband, is the first to suggest itself. Where the husband's family is in the normal condition of a Hindu family, i.e., undivided, that question is of comparatively easy solution. In such a case, the widow, under the law of all the schools which admit this disputed power of adoption, takes no interest in her husband's share of the joint estate, except a right to maintenance. And though the father of the husband, if alive, might, as the head of the family and the natural guardian of the widow, be competent by his sole assent to authorise an adoption by her, yet, if there be no father, the assent of all the brothers, who, in default of adoption, would take the husband's share, would probably be required, since it would be unjust to allow the widow to defeat their interest by introducing a new co-parcener against their will. Where, however, as in the present case, the widow has taken by inheritance the separate estate of her husband, there is greater difficulty in laying down a rule. The power to adopt, when not actually given by the husband, can only be exercised when a foundation is laid for it in the otherwise neglected observance of religious duty, as understood by Hindus. Their Lordships do not think there is any ground for saying that the consent of every kinsman, however remote, is essential. The assent of kinsmen seems to be required by reason of the presumed incapacity of women for independence, rather than the necessity of procuring the consent of all those whose possible and reversionary interest in the estate would be defeated by the adoption. In such a case, therefore, their Lordships think that the consent of the father-in-law, to whom the law points as the natural guardian and 'venerable protector' of the widow, would be sufficient (t). It is not easy to lay down an inflexible rule for the case in which no father-in-law is in existence. Every such case must depend on the circumstances of the family. All that can be said is, that there should be such evidence of the assent of kinsmen as Separate estate.

(t) So held in Bombay where the case arose. Vithoba v. Bapu, 15 Bom., 110.

suffices to show that the act is done by the widow in the proper and bonâ fide performance of a religious duty, and neither capriciously, nor from a corrupt motive. In this case no issue raises the question that the consents were purchased, and not bonâ fide obtained. The rights of an adopted son are not prejudiced by any unauthorised alienation by the widow which precedes the adoption which she makes; and though gifts improperly made to procure assent might be powerful evidence to show no adoption needed, they do not in themselves go to the root of the legality of an adoption.

"Again, it appears to their Lordships that, inasmuch as the authorities in favour of the widow's power to adopt, with the assent of her husband's kinsmen, proceed, in a great measure, upon the assumption that his assent to this meritorious act is to be implied wherever he has not forbidden it, so the power cannot be inferred when a prohibition by the husband either has been directly expressed by him, or can be reasonably deduced from his disposition of his property, or the existence of a direct line competent to the full performance of religious duties, or from other circumstances of his family, which afford no plea for a supersession of heirs, on the ground of religious obligation to adopt a son in order to complete, or fulfil, defective religious rites" (u).

Express or implied prohibition.

§ 123. Of course, in all subsequent instances of adoption by a widow without express authority from her husband, the effort has been to bring the case within, or to exclude it from, some of the above dicta. I say dicta, because the only point actually decided was that the assent of the majority of the sapindas was sufficient.

Ramnaad doctrine not to be extended.

Accordingly, in a Madras case, which followed shortly after the decision of the Ramnaad suit, an attempt was made to push that doctrine to the extent of holding that the consent of sapindas was wholly unnecessary, and that the widow might adopt of her own authority. But the Court refused to carry the law further than had been laid down in that judgment, in which "there had been the assent of a majority of the husband's sapindas to the adoption on his behalf" (v).

(u) The practice in the Punjab appears to be exactly the same as that laid down in the Ramnaad case. An adoption is there looked upon merely as a mode of transferring, or creating, a title to property. A widow may adopt either with her husband's permission, or by consent of his kinsmen, but in no case against an express prohibition by him. Punjab Cust., 88.

Travancore case.

§ 124. The next case arose in the Travancore Courts, where a widow had made an adoption without the consent of her husband's undivided brother, but with the consent of her divided kinsmen. The Court, after weighing the judgments of the High Court and the Privy Council in the Rammaad case, decided against the sufficiency of the authorization. The Chief Judge, after observing that a woman under Hindu law was in a perfect state of tutelage, passing from the control of her father to that of her husband, and after his death to that of the head of his family, pointed out that, in the absence of the father-in-law, the eldest surviving brother must necessarily be that head. He said: "it is clear to me, then, that the kinsman whose assent the law requires for this act, is the one who would be liable to support her through her widowhood, and to defray the marriage expenses of her female issue. In the case of divided kinsmen the case may be different, because no one in particular can claim to control her, or is chargeable for her maintenance; but it seems to be clear that, united as the family is, the natural head and venerable protector, contemplated by the Shastras is the surviving brother, or if there are more than one, the eldest of them. It seems to me impossible to affirm that the liability to maintain the widow, and undertake the other duties of the family, is not coupled with a right to advise and control her act in so important a matter as the introduction of a stranger into the family, with claims to the family property" (w). It will be seen that this reasoning was approved and followed by the Privy Council in the case which follows.

Head of family must assent.

(v) Arundadi v. Kuppammal, 3 M. H. C., 263; and per curiam, Parasara v. Rangaraja, 2 Mad., 206. Venkata Krishnamma v. Annampurnamma, 23 Mad., 486.

§ 125. The next case was one of the class contemplated by the Judicial Committee in their remarks above quoted, and exactly similar to that in the Travancore suit, the family being an undivided family, and the consent of the father-in-law being wanting. In it (x) the Zamindar of Chinna Kimeddy died, leaving a wife, a brother, and a distant and divided sapinda, the Zamindar of Pedda Kimeddy; there were no other sapindas. The deceased and his brother were undivided. Therefore, in default of an adoption, the brother was the heir. The widow adopted the son of the Pedda Kimeddy Zamindar, admittedly without the consent of the brother. She alleged a written authority from her husband, but pleaded that, even without such authority, she had sufficient assent of sapindas within the meaning of the Rammaad decision. The Lower Court found against her on both points. On appeal, the High Court was inclined to think the authority proved, but reversed the decision of the Lower Court, on the ground that the assent of the Pedda Kimeddy Zamindar, evidenced by his giving his son, was sufficient. The Court expressly ruled (y) and it was necessary so to rule,—1st. That the consent of one sapinda was sufficient; 2nd. That proximity to the deceased with regard to rights of property was wholly beside the question. In the particular instance the assenting sapinda was not only not the nearest heir, but was not an immediate heir at all, because, being divided, he could not take till after the widow.

Berhampore case.

High Court.

§ 126. The Judicial Committee, on appeal, held that the written authority was made out. It was therefore unnecessary to go into the question of law, but being of opinion that the views laid down by the High Court were unsound, they proceeded to intimate their dissent from them (z).

Judicial Committee.

(w) Ramaswami Iyer v. Bhagati Ammal, 8 Mad. Jur., 58.
(x) Raghunadha v. Prozo Kishoro, 3 I. A., 154; S. C., 1 Mad., 69; S. C., 25 Suth., 291.
(y) 7 M. H. C., 301. (z) 3 I. A., 190, 192.

In the first place, they reiterated their opinion that speculations derived from the practice of begetting a son upon the widow, upon which Mr. Justice Holloway had again founded his opinion, were inadmissible as a ground for judicial decision. They also stated that the analogy of that practice would not support the conclusions drawn from it. "Most of the texts speak of 'the appointed' kinsman. By whom appointed? If we are to travel back beyond the Kali age, and speculate upon what then took place, we have no reasonable grounds for supposing that a Hindu widow, desirous of raising up seed to her deceased husband, was ever at liberty to invite to her bed any sapinda, however remote, at her own discretion (a); and that his consent of itself constituted a sufficient authorization of his act."

"Positive authority, then, does not do more than establish that, according to the law of Madras, which in this respect is something intermediate between the stricter law of Bengal and the wider law of Bombay, a widow, not having her husband's permission, may adopt a son to him, if duly authorized by his kindred. If it were necessary, which in this case it is not, to decide the point, their Lordships would be unwilling to dissent from the principle recognized in the Travancore case, viz., that the requisite authority is, in the case of an undivided family, to be sought within that family. The joint and undivided family is the normal condition of Hindu society. An undivided Hindu family is ordinarily joint, not only in estate, but in food and worship; therefore, not only all the concerns of the joint property, but whatever relates to their commensality and their religious duties and observances, must be regulated by its members, or by the manager to whom they have expressly, or by implication, delegated the task of regulation. The Hindu wife upon her marriage passes into, and becomes a member of, that family. It is upon that family that, as a widow, she has her claim for maintenance. It is in that family that, in the strict contemplation of law, she ought to reside. It is in the members of that family that she must presumably find such counsellors and protectors as the law makes requisite for her. These seem to be strong reasons against the conclusion that for such a purpose as that now under consideration, she can, at her will, travel out of that undivided family, and obtain the authorization required from a separated and remote kinsman of her husband (b).

(a) Gautama expressly declares that "a son begotten on a widow whose husband's brother lives, by another more distant relation, is excluded from inheritance," xxviii., § 23. See ante § 71.

Authority of separate kinsman insufficient.

"In the present case there is an additional reason against the sufficiency of such an assent. It is admitted on all hands that an authorization by some kinsman of the husband is required. To authorize an act implies the exercise of some discretion whether the act ought or ought not to be done. In the present case there is no trace of such an exercise of discretion. All we know is that the Mahadevi, representing herself as having the written permission of her husband to adopt, asked the Rajah of Pedda Kimeddy to give her a son in adoption, and succeeded in getting one. There is nothing to show that the Rajah ever supposed that he was giving the authority to adopt which a widow, not having her husband's permission, would require."

Conscious exercise of discretion.

The remarks last quoted would probably make it difficult hereafter for a widow to plead, as she did in this case, first, that she had express authority from her husband to adopt, and, secondly, that if she had not such authority, the want of it was supplied by authority from kinsmen. Accordingly, in a later case, decided by the Judicial Committee (c), an adoption was set aside inter alia on the ground that the consent of the managing member of the family,

(b) Where, however, all the branches of the family are divided from the deceased husband and from each other, the Madras High Court has held that the bona fide consent of one divided member is sufficient, where the assent of the other is withheld from improper motives. Parasara v. Rangaraja, 2 Mad., 202. The widow, however, is bound to apply to each sapinda for his consent and the knowledge that he would refuse does not relieve her from this obligation. Subrahmanyam v. Venkamma, 26 Mad., 627.

(c) Karunabdhī v. Ratnamaiyar, 7 I. A., 173; S. C., 2 Mad., 270; Venkatalakshamma v. Narasayya, 8 Mad., 545.

which might in other respects have been sufficient, had been obtained by the widow upon a representation that she had received authority to adopt from her deceased husband, no such authority having been in fact given.

Guntur case.

§ 127. In a case, subsequent to the Berhampore case, one would have imagined that everything had concurred to place the validity of the adoption beyond dispute. The family was divided; all the sapindas had assented, and the persons in possession of the property had no title whatever. But the High Court set the adoption aside on the ground "that it was not made out that there had been such an assent on the part of the widow as to show, to quote the words of the judgment of the Privy Council in the Ramnaad case, 'that the act was done by the widow in the proper and bonâ fide performance of a religious duty'"; and that there was no appearance of any anxiety or desire on the part of the widow for the proper and bonâ fide performance of any religious duty to her husband. Her object appeared to have been to hold the estate till her death, and then continue the line in the person of the plaintiff. This judgment was reversed on appeal. The Privy Council, after pointing out that the facts of the case did not justify the inference drawn from them by the High Court, proceeded to say:—

Religious motive for adoption.

Judicial Committee.

"This being so, is there any ground for the application which the High Court has made of a particular passage in the judgment in the Ramnaad case? The passage in question, perhaps, is not so clear as it might have been made. The Committee, however, was dealing with the nature of the authority of the kinsman that was required. After dealing with the vezata questio, which does not arise in this case, whether such an adoption can be made with the assent of one or more sapindas in the case of joint family property, they proceed to consider what assent would be necessary in the case of separate property; and after stating that the authority of the father-in-law would probably be sufficient, they said: 'It is not easy to lay down an inflexible rule for the case in which no father-in-law is in existence. Every such case must depend upon the circumstances of the family. All that can be said is, that there should be such evidence,' not, be it observed, of the widow's motives, but 'of the assent of kinsmen, as suffices to show that the act is done by the widow in the proper and bonâ fide performance of a religious duty, and neither capriciously nor from a corrupt motive. In this case no issue raises the question that the consents were purchased and not bonâ fide attained.' Their Lordships think it would be very dangerous to introduce into the consideration of these cases of adoption, nice questions as to the particular motives operating on the mind of the widow, and that all which this Committee in the former case meant to lay down was, that there should be such proof of assent on the part of the sapindas as should be sufficient to support the inference that the adoption was made by the widow, not from capricious or corrupt motives, or in order to defeat the interest of this or that sapinda, but upon a fair consideration by what may be called a family council, of the expediency of substituting an heir by adoption to the deceased husband. If that be so, there seems to be every reason to suppose that in the present case there was such a consideration, both on the part of the widow and on the part of the sapindas; and their Lordships think that in such a case, it must be presumed that she acted from the proper motives which ought to actuate a Hindu female, and that, at all events, such presumption should be made until the contrary is shown" (d).

§ 128. It does not seem quite clear, even now, whether their Lordships are of opinion that the motive which operates upon the mind of a widow in making an adoption, can be material upon the question of its validity, where she has Discussion as to motive.

(d) Vellanki v. Venkata Rama, 4 I. A., 113; S. C., 1 Mad., 174; S. C., 26 Suth., 21. In this case the husband had died, leaving a son. The decision established that sapindas had the same power of authorising an adoption in lieu of a son who died, as they would have had if there had never been a son.

obtained the necessary amount of assent: that is, whether evidence would be admissible which went to show that the widow was indifferent to the religious benefits supposed to flow from an adoption to her husband, or even disbelieved in the efficacy of such an adoption; and that her real and only object in making an adoption was to enhance her own importance and position, and to prevent the property of her late husband from passing away to distant relations. With the greatest deference to any conclusions to the contrary, which may be drawn from the above passages, it seems to me that the Judicial Committee did not mean to lay down that such evidence would be material or admissible. The fair result of all their judgments appears to be, that the assent of one or more sapindas is necessary, as a sort of judicial decision that the act of adoption is a proper one. That decision, like any other, may be impeached, by showing that it was procured by fraud or corruption. But if it was arrived at bona fide by the proper judges, it is conclusive as to the propriety of the adoption. The judgment of the Court cannot be affected by the motives of the suitor. The reasons which influence the widow may be puerile or even malicious. But what the family decide upon is the propriety of her act, not the propriety of her reasons. Accordingly it has been lately decided by the Privy Council that the fact that a widow in Madras made an adoption, viz., that of an only son, which was sinful and irreligious, though not illegal, did not affect its validity when she had obtained the necessary consent of sapindas. This consent invested her with a power co-extensive with that of her husband (e).

In Bombay, where the widow acts on her own discretion, it was for sometime laid down that proof that she had been acting from sinful or corrupt motives in making an adoption would vitiate it. The Courts, (e) Balasu Gurulingaswami v. B. Ramalakshmanma, 26 I. A., 113; S. C., 22 Mad., 398.

Sinfulness of adoption.

however, were so liberal in placing the most favourable construction upon her acts and motives, that no case appears to have arisen in which an adoption was set aside for such a reason (f). The whole question was referred to a Full Bench in 1898 when it was decided that, inasmuch as the adoption procured for her husband all the religious benefits which he could have desired, any discussion of her motives was irrelevant (g).

§ 129. As might have been anticipated, the ingenuity of Hindu litigants was next directed to invalidating the assent of the sapindas. Accordingly an adoption by a widow, with the consent of the managing member and only adult sapinda of an undivided family, was set aside on the ground (inter alia) that his consent was given from interested motives (h). But where the assent is fair and bona fide, I would submit that it could not be objected to on the ground that it did not arise from religious motives. I have already suggested that, even according to Brahmanical views, religious grounds were not the only ones for making an adoption, and that among the dissenting sects of Aryans, and all the non-Aryan races, religious motives had absolutely nothing to do with the matter (i). But further, when a religious act comes to be indissolubly connected with civil consequences, it follows that the act may be properly performed, either with a view to the

Is religious motive essential?

(f) Vithoba v. Bapu, 15 Bom., 134; Patel Vandravan Jekisan v. Manilal, ibid., 565; Mahableshtar v. Durgabai, 22 Bom., 199; Bhimawa v. Sangawa, ibid., 206.

(g) Ramchandra Bhagavan v. Mulji Nanabhai, 22 Bom., 558.

(h) Karunabāhi v. Ratnamaiyar, 7 I. A., 173, 2 Mad., 270, and see Parasara v. Rangaraja, 2 Mad., 202. It will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the consent of the majority was given bona fide. Venkatakrishnamma v. Annapurnamma, 23 Mad., 486.

(i) See ante § 105, 106. I have already stated (§ 106) that among the Tamil inhabitants of Northern Ceylon even the husband, when desirous to adopt, must obtain the consent of his heirs, and they must evidence their assent by dipping their fingers in the saffron water. If such consent is withheld, the rights of the dissenting parties to the inheritance will not be affected. Thesawaleme, ii., 1, 5, 6. Probably this was the original law in Southern India, though it may have passed away when the Brahmanical view of adoption, as a duty and not merely a right, was introduced. But the necessity for obtaining the consent of sapindas to an adoption by a widow, and the sufficiency of such consent, may be a survival from the old law. If so, it would be an additional reason for supposing that religious motives had nothing to do with the adoption itself, or with the consent given to it by kinsmen. See as to the Nambudri Brahmans, 11 Mad., 188.

religious or the civil results. Not only so, but that if the act is in fact performed, the civil consequences must follow, whatever be the motive of the actor. Marriage is just as much a duty with a Hindu as adoption. It could not be contended that the validity of a marriage, or any of its legal results, could be in the slightest degree affected by the motives of either of the parties to the transaction. When the Test and Corporation Acts rendered it necessary that a candidate for office should have taken the sacrament, it was not material or permissible to enquire, whether the communicant had spiritual or temporal benefits in view.

Western India.

§ 130. In Western India the widow's power of adoption is even greater than in Southern India. The Mayukha, commenting on the same text of Vasishtha, draws from it, as already remarked (§ 112), exactly the opposite conclusion from that arrived at by Nanda Pandita. The latter infers that a widow can never adopt, as she can never obtain her husband's assent; the former infers that the prohibition can only extend to a married woman, as she only can receive such an assent (k). The whole of the authorities are collected and reviewed in several cases in the Bombay High Court which have established, first, that in the Mahratta country and in Gujerat, a widow, who is sole or joint heir to her husband's estate, may adopt a son to her deceased husband, without authority from her husband, and without the consent of his kindred, or of the caste or of the ruling authority. The qualification is added, borrowed from the dictum of the Privy Council in the Ramnaad case, provided "the act is done by her in the proper and bona fide performance of a religious duty, and neither capriciously nor from a corrupt motive" (l).

(k) V. May., iv., 5, § 17, 18. Dr. Bühler says that the principal argument advanced by the Mahratta writers for this view is a version of the text of Çaunaka, where they read "a woman who is childless, or whose sons have died" (may adopt), instead of "a man," etc. The error of this reading is shown by the fact that in the subsequent verses (13, 14) the adopter is referred to in the masculine gender. See art. Çaunaka Smṛiti, Journ. As. Soc. Bengal, 1866.

(l) Rakhmabai v. Radhabai, 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 181, acc. per curiam; Bhagvandas v. Rajmal, 10 Bom. H. C., 257; Ramji v. Ghaman, 6 Bom., 498;

Secondly, that she cannot do so, where her husband has expressly forbidden an adoption (m), or where she has ceased to possess the character of his widow, as for instance by re-marriage (n). Thirdly, that she can never adopt during his lifetime without his assent (o). Fourthly, that a widow, who has not the estate vested in her, and whose husband was not separated at the time of his death, is not competent to adopt a son to her husband without his authority, or the consent of her father-in-law, or her husband's undivided co-parceners (p). A further qualification is suggested by the Bombay High Court, viz., that where the adoption by a widow would have the effect of divesting an estate already vested in a third person, the consent of that person must be obtained (q). This will be considered subsequently under the head of effects of an adoption (r). Fifthly, that an adoption made by a widow, which in other respects is valid, is not rendered invalid by the fact that the husband to whom she adopted was a minor (s).

Under the second of the above rules, it was held by Sir Michael Westropp, C. J., in the case of Lakshmappa v. Ramappa (t), that where a widow made an adoption which, though legal was sinful, as for instance that of an only son, her husband's assent could not be assumed, and therefore the adoption would be invalid. This decision was relied on in a recent case from Madras, where the widow, having no express authority from her husband, had adopted an only son with the consent of the husband's sapindas. The Judicial Committee said "we are not Resumption of husband's assent.

Dinkar Sitaram v. Ganesh Shivram, ib., 505; Giriowa v. Bhimaji Raghunath, 9 Bom., 58. The onus of proving such a corrupt motive lies heavily on him who alleges it. Patel Vandravan Jekisan v. Manilal, 15 Bom., 565, and the importance of her motive is now denied. See ante § 128, note (d).

(m) Bayabai v. Bala Venkatesh, 7 Bom. H. C., Appx. 1.

(n) Panchappa v. Sanganbasawa, 24 Bom., 89.

(o) Narayan v. Nana Manohar, 7 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 153.

(p) Ramji v. Ghaman; Dinkar v. Ganesh, ib. sup.

(q) Rupchand v. Rakhmabai, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 114; Gopal Balakrishna v. Vishnu, 23 Bom., 250.

(r) See post § 184, et seq.

(s) Patel Vandravan Jekisan v. Manilal, 15 Bom., 565.

(t) 12 Bom. H. C., 364.

retrying this Bombay decision. In Madras it is established that, unless there is some express prohibition by the husband, the wife's power, at least with concurrence of sapindasin cases where that is required, is co-extensive with that of the husband. That is certainly the simplest rule and it seems to their Lordships most consistent with principle. The distinction taken by Westropp, C.J., appears to have been quite novel and also at variance with a decision by his predecessor Sir Matthew Sausse. There may be some peculiarity in the school of law which prevails at Bombay to support it, though it has not been brought to their Lordships' notice; but if there is any such it does not apply to these parties in Madras" (u).

Jains.

§ 131. Among the Jains, a sonless widow has the same power of adoption as her husband would have had, if he chose to exercise it. Neither his sanction, nor that of any other person is necessary (v). The Court said of this class:—"They differ particularly from the Brahmanical Hindus in their conduct towards the dead, omitting all obsequies after the corpse is burnt or buried. They also regard the birth of a son as having no effect on the future state of his progenitor, and consequently adoption is a merely temporal arrangement, and has no spiritual objects (w)." In the Punjab the custom appears to vary. In Gurgaon a widow can adopt without any consent, if she selects a son from her husband's agnates. She cannot adopt any one else without the consent of such agnates. In Rohtak and several other districts, the husband's consent is necessary. In three cases, the Punjab Courts set aside adoptions by a widow for want of her husband's permission. Two of these cases came from Lahore and Delhi respectively. It does not appear where the third

Punjab.

(u) Balasu Gurulingaswamy v. B. Lakshmappa, 26 I. A., p. 128; S. C., 22 Mad., p. 408.

(v) Govindnath Ray v. Gulal Chand, 5 S. D., 276 (322); Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 382; affd., 5 I. A., 87; S. C., 1 All., 688; Lakmi Chand v. Gatto Bai, 8 All., 319; Manik Chand v. Jagat Settani, 17 Cal., 518; Harnabh v. Maadil, 27 Cal., 379.

(w) Per cur., 6 N.-W. P., 392.

case arose (x). In Madras the High Court has held that the right of a Jain widow to adopt without her husband's permission must be proved, like any other special custom (y).

§ 132. SECOND, WHO MAY GIVE IN ADOPTION.—As the act of adoption has the effect of removing the adopted son from his natural into the adoptive family, and thereby most materially and irrevocably affects his prospects in life, and as the ceremony almost invariably takes place when the adoptee is of tender years, and unable to exercise any discretion of his own in the matter, it follows that only those who have dominion over the child have the power of giving him in adoption. According to Vasishtha (z), both parents have power to give a son, but a woman cannot give one without the assent of her lord. Manu says (a): "He whom his father or mother (with her husband's assent) gives to another, etc., is considered as a son given." The words in parenthesis are the gloss of Kulluka Bhatta. Different explanations have been given to Vasishtha's text (b). Some say that the wife's assent is absolutely necessary; others, that if not given, the adopted son remains the son of his natural mother and performs her obsequies: others that the words mean that either parent has the power to give, but that the wife can only exercise this power during her husband's life with his assent. The last explanation is the one which is now accepted. It is quite settled that the father alone has absolute authority to dispose of his son in adoption, even without the consent of his wife, though her consent is generally sought and obtained (c). The wife cannot give away her son while her husband is alive and capable of consenting, without his consent; but she may do so

Only parents can give.

Assent of wife.

(x) Punjab Customary Law, II, 154, 178, 205; III, 87, 89, 90.

(y) Peria Ammani v. Krishnasami, 16 Mad., 182.

(z) Vasishtha, xv., § 2, 5; 3 Dig., 212.

(b) 3 Dig., 254, 257, 261; V. May., v.; Steele, 45, 183.

(c) Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., 13-17; v., 14, n.; 3 Dig., 244; Alank Manjari v. Fakir Chand, 5 S. D., 356 (418); Chitko Raghunath v. Janaki, 11 Bom. H. C., 99; Mitaksbara, i., 11, § 9.

(a) Manu, ix., 168.

after his death, or when he is permanently absent, as for instance an emigrant, or has entered a religious order, or has lost his reason (d), provided the husband was legally competent to give away his son, and has not expressly prohibited his being adopted (e). But in a Bengal case the pundits laid it down, and it was held accordingly, that an adoption was bad where a widow had given away her only son as dwyamushyayana without the express consent of her late husband (f). It does not, however, appear from the report whether the decision went upon the ground that the adopted son was an only son, or upon the ground that he was given away without sufficient authority. The former seems rather to have been the case. It has been expressly ruled in Bombay, that whether the giving in adoption of an only son by his father is valid or invalid, it is at all events so improper that a widow, without the direct sanction of her husband, cannot be assumed to have authority to give such a son away (g). It was evidently the opinion of the High Court that a widow, in giving her son, exercises not an independent but a delegated authority, and that such an authority will be negatived when it is exercised in a manner which it may be supposed the husband would have disapproved. No other relation but the father or mother can give away a boy. For instance, a stepmother cannot give away her stepson (h), a brother cannot give away his brother (i). Nor can the paternal grandfather, or any other person (k). Nor can the parents delegate their authority to another person, for (d) Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., 10—12; Dattaka Chandrika, i., 31, 32; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 9; Arnachellum v. Iyasamy, 1 Mad. Dec., 154; Huro Soondree v. Chundermoney, Sevest., 938; Rangubai v. Bhagirthibai, 2 Bom., 377; Mhalsabai v. Vithoba, 7 Bom. H. C., Appx. 26; Jogesh Chandra v. Nrityakali, 30 Cal., 965.

(e) Narayanasami v. Kuppasami, 11 Mad., 113; Gurulingaswami v. Ramalakshamma, 18 Mad., 53, p. 58; affd. 26 I. A., 113; S. C., 22 Mad., 198.

(f) Debee Dial v. Hur Hor Singh, 4 S. D., 320 (407).

(g) Lakshmappa v. Ramappa, 12 Bom. H. C., 364; Somasekhara v. Subdramaji, 6 Bom., 524. See, however, as to this decision per Privy Council, ante § 130.

(h) Papamma v. V. Appa Row, 16 Mad., 384.

(i) V. Darp., 325; Mt. Tara Mune v. Dev Narayun, 3 S. D., 367 (516); Mootoosamy v. Lutchmeedavummah, Mad. Dec., 1852, p. 97. See F. MacN., 223, combating Veerapermal v. Narain Pillay, 1 N. C., 91.

(k) Collector of Surat v. Dhirsingji, 10 Bom. H. C., 235.

instance a son, so as to enable him, after their death, to give away his brother in adoption, for the act when done must have parental sanction (l). And, therefore, even an adult orphan cannot be adopted, because he can neither give himself away, nor be given by any one with authority to do so (m). But what the law declines to sanction is the delegation by an authorised person to an unauthorised person of the discretion to give in adoption which is vested solely in the former. Where the necessary sanction has been given by an authorised person, the physical act of giving away in pursuance of that sanction may be delegated to another (n).

§ 133. The person who is authorised to give away a boy in adoption may make his consent dependent on the fulfilment of certain conditions; and it has been held that, where these conditions are not complied with, the adoption is invalid. For instance, where a father by letter authorised the giving of his son in adoption, provided the adopting party first obtained the assent of the British Government, an adoption made without such assent was held invalid, though the assent was not in other respects necessary (o).

Conditions imposed by natural parent.

§ 134. The consent of the Revenue Board is necessary to an adoption by a person whose estate is under the actual management of the Court of Wards (p). It was once supposed that the consent of Government was also necessary in the case of Inamdars, Zemindars, and feudal chieftains whose estates would fall into the hands of the Government in the event of their dying without heirs, and in the time of Lord Dalhousie this principle was frequently acted on. But it seems clear that, though it was customary Consent of Government.

(l) Bashetiappa v. Shivlingappa, 10 Bom. H. C., 268.

(m) Subbaluvammal v. Ammakutti, 2 M. H. C., 129; Balvantrav v. Bayabai, 6 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 83; supra, 10 Bom. H. C., 268. So held even in the case of Jains where there is no limit of age. Mari Devamma v. Jivamma, 10 Mysore, 384.

(n) Vijjarangam v. Lakshuman, 8 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 244; Venkata v. Subadra, 7 Mad., 549; Subbarayar v. Subbammal, 21 Mad., 497; Shamsing v. Santabai, 25 Bom. 551, p. 553.

(o) Rangubai v. Bhagirthibai, 2 Bom., 377.

(p) See ante § 111.

in such cases to ask for the sanction of the ruling power, and to pay a nazzur on receiving it, still the sanction was considered to be due as a matter of right, and was not a condition precedent to the validity of the adoption itself, although in some cases the native power, with a high hand, may have refused to allow the adopted son to succeed (q).

Origin of restrictions.

§ 135. THIRD, WHO MAY BE TAKEN IN ADOPTION.—The restrictions upon the selection of a person for adoption appear all to be of Brahmanical origin, and to rest upon the theory, that as the object of adoption was the performance of religious rites to deceased ancestors, the fiction of sonship must be as close as possible (§ 105). Hence, in the first place, the nearest male sapinda should be selected, if suitable in other respects, and, if possible, a brother's son, as he was already, in contemplation of law, a son to his uncle. If no such near sapinda was available, then one who was more remote; or in default of any such, then one who was of a family which followed the same spiritual guide, or, in the case of Sudras, any member of the caste (r). Probably this rule was strengthened by the feeling that it was unjust to the members of the family to introduce a stranger if a near relative was available. Originally it seems to have been a positive precept. Subsequently it sunk to a mere recommendation. It is now settled that the adoption of a stranger is valid, even though near relatives, otherwise suitable, are in existence (s). In the second place, no one can be adopted whose mother the adopter could not have legally married (t). The origin and binding Nearest sapinda.

One whose mother could have been married.

(q) Steele 183; Bhasker Bhachajee v. Narro Ragonath, Bom. Sel. Rep., 24; Ramchandra v. Nawaji, 7 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 26; Narhar Govind v. Narayan, 1 Bom., 607; Rangubai v. Bhagirthibai, 2 Bom., 377; Bell's Empire in India, 127; Bell's Indian Policy, 10; Sir C. Jackson's Vindication of Lord Dalhousie, 9; see Balaji Ramchandra v. Datta Ramchandra, 27 Bom., 75. By Lord Canning's proclamation the right to adopt has now been recognized in the case of feudal chiefs and jaghiredars.

(r) Dattaka Mimamsa, ii., § 2, 28, 29, 67, 74, 76, 80; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 10, 20, ii., § 11; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 13, 14, 36; V. May., iv., 5, § 9, 16, 19.

(s) 1 W. McN., 68; 2 Stra. H. L., 93, 102; Gocoolanund v. Wooma Dase, 15 B. L. R., 405; S. C., 23 Suth., 340; affd. sub nomine, Uma Deyi v. Gocoolanund, 5 I. A., 40; S. C., 3 Cal., 587; Bubaji v. Bhagirthibai, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 70; Darma Dagu v. Ramkrishna, 10 Bom., 80. These authorities must be taken as over-ruling the case of Ooman Dut v. Kumbha Singh, 3 S. D., 144 (192), which was also a Kritrima adoption.

(t) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 20.

character of this rule have been criticised with great learning and force by Mr. V. N. Mandlik (u). He admits that "the Dattaka Chandrika, the Dattaka Mimamsa, the Samskara Kaustubha, the Dharma Sindhu and the Dattaka Nirnaya contain this prohibition." These authorities base their opinion, first, on the text of Çaunaka that the adopted boy must bear the reflection of a son, to which they append the gloss "that is the capability to have been begotten by the adopter through niyoga and so forth" (v). Many objections are offered to this gloss by Mr. V. N. Mandlik, and, as I have already pointed out (§ 105, note), it is possible that the text itself had originally a different meaning. Secondly, they rely upon a text which is attributed variously to Çaunaka, Vriddha Gautama, and Narada, which states that a sister's son and a daughter's son may be adopted by Sudras, but not by members of the three higher classes, and upon a text of Çakala which explicitly forbids the adoption by one of the regenerate classes of "a daughter's son, a sister's son, and the son of the mother's sister" (w). As to the former text, Mr. Mandlik argues that the correct translation is "Sudras should adopt a daughter's son, or a sister's son. A sister's son is in some places not adopted as a son among the three classes beginning with a Brahmana." He points out that the Mayukha, as properly rendered, interprets the text as meaning that Sudras should adopt only, or primarily, a daughter's or a sister's son, but not as forbidding such adoptions by Brahmans. This view is also supported by the Dvaita Nirnaya, and the Nirnaya Sindhu (x). The text of Çakala he dis-

(u) Pages 478—495, 514. Dr. Jolly also says that "a close examination of the original authorities shows, that there is very little, if anything, in the Sanskrit treatises to warrant the formation of such a rule as this," Lect. 163. The rule itself was re-affirmed by the High Court of Madras after a full examination of Mr. Mandlik's argument. Minakshi v. Ramanada, 11 Mad., 49, and by the Privy Council. Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 26 I. A., 153; S. C., 21 All., 412.

(v) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 15—17; Dattaka Chandrika, ii., § 7, 8. I am unable to refer to the other authorities, but Mr. V. N. Mandlik says that they rely upon the same texts, p. 489.

(w) Dattaka Mimamsa, ii., § 32, 74, 107; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 17, 7.

(x) V. May., iv., 5, § 9, 10; V. N. Mandlik, pp. 53—56.

poses of (p. 495) by treating its authority as of no weight in opposition to usage and conflicting authorities. The fact still remains, however, that the five digests above referred to lay down the rule in distinct and positive terms. The rule so laid down was stated by Mr. Sutherland, both the MacNaghtens, and both the Stranges (y); and, as limited to the three regenerate classes, it has been affirmed by a singularly strong series of authorities in all parts of India as forbidding the adoption of the son of a daughter, or of a sister, or of an aunt (z). In a recent case the Allahabad Court by a Full Bench ruling held that the Dattaka Mimamsa was not an authority in Provinces governed by Benares law, and that, in the absence of any prohibition of such adoptions in works earlier than it and the Dattaka Chandrika, such adoptions were valid. This decision, however, was reversed by the Judicial Committee in a judgment which has finally established the invalidity of adoptions of that class in all cases to which the general Hindu law applies, and in which no countervailing custom is established (a). On the same ground, it is unlawful to adopt a brother, or step-brother, or an uncle, whether paternal or maternal (b). And it makes no difference that the adopter has himself been removed from his natural family by adoption; for adoption does not remove the bar of consanguinity which would operate to prevent inter-marriage within the prohibited degrees (c). This rule must, of course, be understood as excluding only the sons

(y) Suth. Syn., 664; F. MacN., 150; 1 W MacN., 67; 1 Stra. H. L., 83, S.M., § 84.

(z) Baee Gunga v. Baee Sheekoovur, Bom. Sel. Rep., 73; Narasammal v. Balarama Charlu, 1 M. H. C., 420; Jivani v. Jivu, 2 M. H. C., 462; Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan, 7 M. H. C., 250; Ramalinga v. Sadasiva, 9 M. L. A., 506; S. C., 1 Suth. (P.C.), 25, where the side-note calls the parties Vaisyas, though they were really Sudras. See supra, 2 M. H. C., 467; Kora Shunkov. Bebee Munnee, 2 M. Dig., 32; Gopal Narhar v. Hanmant, 3 Bom., 273, where all the authorities are examined; Bhagirthibai v. Radhabai, 3 Bom., 298; Purbati v. Sundar, 8 All., 1; affd. 16 I. A., 186; S. C., 12 All., 51.

(a) Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 17 All., 294, 26 I. A., 153.

(b) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 17; Runjeet Singh v. Obhya, 2 S. D., 245 (315); Moottoosamy v. Lutchedavummah, Mad. Dec. of 1852, 96; Sriramulu v. Ramayya, 3 Mad., 15; Minakshi v. Ramanada, 11 Mad., 49. The adoption of an uncle's son was sanctioned in Madras, apparently on the ground that such adoptions were sanctioned by usage. Virayya v. Hanumanta, 14 Mad., 459.

(c) Moothia v. Uppen, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 117.

of woman whose original relationship to the adopter was such as to render them unfit to be his wives. A man could not lawfully marry his brother's or nephew's wife, but a brother's son is the most proper person to be adopted, and so is a grand-nephew (d). A wife's brother, or his son, may be adopted (e), and so may the son of a wife's sister (f), or of a maternal aunt's daughter (g).

§ 136. This rule again appears to be of Brahmanical origin. The same authorities which lay it down as regards the higher classes state that Sudras (h) may adopt a daughter's, or sister's son. The Mayukha even states that, as regards them, such a person is the most proper to be adopted (i). He is obviously the most natural person to be selected. A mother's sister's son may also be adopted among Sudras (k). In the Punjab such adoptions are common among the Jats, and this laxity has spread even to Brahmans, and to the orthodox Hindu inhabitants of towns, such as Delhi (l). They are also permitted among the Jains (m), and in Southern India even among the Brahmans such adoptions are undoubtedly very common. It was decided, so late as 1873, that the practice had not attained the force of a legal custom (n). But in 1881, upon a renewed enquiry, the High Court pronounced that in Southern India such adoptions were valid among Brahmans. A similar practice among the Nambudri Brahmans of Malabar has also received judicial Rules not universal.

(d) Morun Moe v. Bojoy, Suth. Sp., No. 122.

(e) Kristniengar v. Vanamamalay, Mad. Dec. of 1856, 213; Runganaigum v. Namesevoja, Mad. Dec. of 1857, 94; Ruvec Bhudr v. Roopshunker, 2 Bor., 662 [713]; Sriramulu v. Ramayya, 3 Mad., 15.

(f) Baee Gunga v. Baee Sheekoovur, Bom. Sel. Rep., 73, 76.

(g) Venkata v. Subhadra, 7 Mad., 549.

(h) The Kayasthas in Bengal are Sudras, and may make such adoptions. Rajecoomar Lall v. Vissessor Dyal, 10 Cal., 688.

(i) V. May., iv., 5, § 10, 11.

(k) Chinna Nagayya v. Pedda Nagayya, 1 Mad., 62.

(l) Punjab Cust., 79—83; Punjab Customary Law, II, 111, 154, 205, 210.

(m) Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W.P., 382, affd. 5 I. A., 87; S. C., 1 All., 688; Hassan Ali v. Nagamal, 1 All., 288; Lakshmi Chand v. Datto Bai, 8 All., 319.

(n) Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan, 7 M. H. C., 250; 2 Stra. H. L., 101; 1 Gibelin, 89; Nelson's View of the Hindu Law, 90.

sanction (o). In the North-West Provinces the adoption of a step-brother is allowed among the unregenerate classes (p), and among the Borah Brahmans even sister's sons may be adopted (q). In Pondicherry the rule, as a general principle, is not recognised. A man may adopt his daughter's, or his sister's son, or any one of his wife's relations, but he may not adopt his own brother (r). In Western India also they appear to be permitted. It is also said that in the Deccan a younger brother may be adopted, and, though the adoption of uncles is forbidden, a different reason is alleged for the prohibition (s).

§ 137. A singular extension has been given to this rule by Nanda Pandita. He quotes a text of Vriddha Gautama:—"In the three superior tribes a sister's son is nowhere mentioned as a son,"—and says that here a sister's son is inclusive of a brother's son. But as the brother's son is not only not prohibited, but is expressly enjoined, for adoption, he draws the remarkable conclusion that a brother's son must not be adopted by a sister. And this opinion was acted upon in the North-Western Provinces, where the Court set aside an adoption by a widow, acting under her husband's authority, where she had selected the son of her own brother (t). If the adoption had been made by her husband, and not by herself, it would have been perfectly valid (u). The same principle seems to have been the ground of a case which is reported, and discussed at much length, by Sir F. MacNaghten (v). There a man died leaving three widows, and an authority to them to adopt. As they could not agree, a reference was made to the Master, who reported in favour of a boy

(o) Vayidinada v. Appu, 9 Mad., 44; Vishnu v. Krishnan, 7 Mad., 3; per curiam, 11 Mad., 55.

(p) Phundo v. Jangi Nath, 15 All., 327.

(q) Chain Sukh Ram v. Parbati, 14 All., 53.

(r) Sorg H. L., 130; Co. Con., 377.

(s) Steele, 44; Hvebuti Rao v. Govindrao, 2 Bor., 85; V. N. Mandlik, 474, 495; W. & B., 887.

(t) Dattaka Mimamsa, ii., § 33, 34; Mt. Battas v. Lachman Singh, N.-W. P., 117.

(u) See authorities quoted, § 135, notes (c), (d).

(v) Dagumbaree v. Taramonee, F. MacN., 170, App. 10.

who was the son of the second widow's uncle. The next question that arose was, whether the boy could be received in adoption by the second widow. It was argued that this was impossible, because she could not without incest have been the mother of a boy by her own uncle. The pandits differed, and no decision was ever given, the second widow having waived her right in favour of the elder. Sir F. MacNaghten, however, pronounces unhesitatingly in favour of the objection. It seems to me, however, with the greatest respect, that this is introducing into the Hindu theory of adoption a second fiction, for which there is no foundation. The real fiction is, that the adopting father had begotten the child upon its natural mother; therefore, it is necessary that she should be a person who might lawfully have been his wife. There is no fiction that the natural father had also begotten the child upon the adopting mother. The natural son becomes the son, not merely of the particular wife from whom he is born, but of all the wives; and the authors of the Dattaka Mimamsa and Dattaka Chandrika seem to think that the same result follows in the case of several wives from an adoption (w). The fiction can hardly extend to the length of his being conceived by all. In fact it would appear that the Hindu law takes no notice of the wife in reference to adoption. The relation of the adopted son to her arises upon adoption. But the balance of authority and reasoning appears to be opposed to the idea that relationship to her has any effect upon the choice of the boy to be adopted (x).

§ 138. The adopted son must be of the same class as Identity of caste. his adopting father, that is, a Brahman may not adopt a Kshatriya, or vice versa (y). This rule is probably an innovation upon ancient usage, as Medhatithi and others

(w) Mauu, ix., § 183; Dattaka Mimamsa, ii., § 69; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 23. And so the pandits stated in this case, F. MacN., App. 11.

(x) This view was approved by the Madras High Court. Sriramulu v. Ramayya, 3 Mad., p. 17; and in Bombay, Bai Nani v. Chunilal, 22 Bom., 973.

(y) An orthodox Hindu may adopt the son of a member of the Sadharam Brahma Somaj. Kusum Kumari v. Satyan Ranjan, 30 Cal., 999.

interpret the words of Manu "being alike" (translated by Sir W. Jones "being of the same class") as meaning merely, possessing suitable qualities, though of a different class (z). In the time of Manu a man might have married wives of different class, and the sons of all such wives would have been legitimate, and would have inherited together, though in different proportions (a). Each of such sons must have been competent to perform his father's obsequies, though perhaps with varying merit. It would have been remarkable, therefore, if a man could not have adopted the son of a woman whom he might have married. Baudhayana makes no reference to caste, and Vasishtha merely says, "the class ought to be known" (§ 107), which is natural enough, as determining a preference. The other authors (Katyayana, Çaunaka, Yajñavalkya, and Yaska), who forbid the adoption of one of unequal class, admit that such adoptions do take place, and are effectual as prolonging the line, though not for purposes of oblations. They, therefore, declare that a son so adopted is entitled to receive maintenance (b). From this, I presume, they considered that he was effectually severed from his natural family. It is probable, therefore, that, as long as mixed marriages were lawful the adoption of sons of inferior caste was also lawful (c). When the former ceased, the latter also ceased. At present, I imagine that the adoption of a Kshatriya by a Brahman would be a mere nullity, and would neither take the boy out of his natural family, nor give him any claim upon the family of the adopter. The case has never occurred, and is quite certain never to occur.

§ 139. As the chief reason for adoption is the performance of funeral ceremonies, it follows that one who from any personal disqualification would be incapable of per-

(z) Manu, ix., § 166; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 9; V. May., v., 5, § 4; Dattaka Mimamsa, ii., § 23-25; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 12-16.

(a) Manu, ix., § 148-156. (b) See, too, D. K. S., vii., § 23, 24, citing Narada.

(c) In Northern Ceylon this is the case still. The son, if adopted by a man, passes into his caste. If adopted by a woman, he remains in the caste of his natural father. Thesawaleme, ii., § 7.

Personal disqualification.

forming them, would be an unfit person to be adopted (d). Nothing is said upon the point by Hindu law writers. Probably the idea that such an adoption could be made would never have occurred to their minds. As a person so adopted would also be incapable of succeeding to the property of the adopter, and so continuing his name and lineage, every object would fail which an adoption is intended to serve.

§ 140. A further limitation upon the selection of a son for adoption arises from age, and the previous performance of ceremonies in the natural family (e). The leading authority upon this point is a passage from the Kalikapurana, which is relied on by Nanda Pandita, but which is treated as spurious by the author of the Dattaka Chandrika, Nilakanta, and others, and which is admittedly wanting in many copies of that work. It lays down absolutely that a child must not be adopted whose age exceeds five years, or upon whom the ceremony of tonsure has been performed in the natural family (f). The result of a lengthened commentary on this passage in the Dattaka Mimamsa appears to be: first, that the limit of age as not exceeding five is absolute; secondly, that one who has had the tonsure performed ought not to be adopted, as he will at the outside be the son of two fathers; but, thirdly, that if no other is procurable, a boy on whom tonsure has been performed may be received. In that case, however, the previous rites must be annulled by the performance of the putreshthi, or sacrifice for male issue. As regards other age.

Limitation from

Dattaka Mimamsa.

(d) Suth. Syn., 665; V. Darp., 828, 830.

(e) As to the eight ceremonies for a male, see Colebrooke, note to Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., § 23; 3 Dig., 104. Of these tonsure is the fifth, and upanayana, or investiture with the sacred thread, is the eighth. The former is performed in the second or third year after birth, the latter, in the case of Brahmans, in the eighth year from conception. But it may be performed so early as the fifth, or delayed till the sixteenth year. The primary periods for upanayana in the case of a Kshatriya are eleven, and of a Vaisya twelve years, but it may be delayed till the ages of twenty-two and twenty-four respectively. For Sudras there is no ceremony but marriage.

(f) Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., § 22; Dattaka Chandrika, ii., § 25; V. May., v., 5, § 20; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 13, note; Jolly, § 161.

rites, those previous to tonsure are immaterial, the performance of the upanayana is an absolute bar (g).

Jagannatha.

Jagannatha appears to accept the text as literally binding, and not to recognize the right of performing the tonsure over again. He, therefore, considers an adoption to be invalid, if it is made after tonsure, or after the fifth year (h).

Dattaka Chandrika.

On the other hand, the author of the Dattaka Chandrika refuses to accept the text of the Kalika-purana as authentic. But even if it should be genuine, he explains it away by the possibility of performing tonsure a second time in the adoptive family. The result he arrives at is, that age is only material as determining the term at which upanayana may be performed. So long as this rite in the case of the three higher classes, and marriage in the case of Sudras, can be performed in the family of the adopter, there is no limit of any particular time (i).

Mr. W. MacNaghten is of opinion that the rules laid down by the Dattaka Mimamsa and the Dattaka Chandrika should be followed in the Provinces in which they are respectively in force: that is, the Dattaka Mimamsa in Benares, and the Dattaka Chandrika in Bengal and Southern India (k). From what has been already stated (§ 30) as to the authorship of the Dattaka Chandrika there seems to be no reason for ascribing to it any special authority in Southern India. The authority of the Dattaka Mimamsa in Benares, after much hostile criticism, has been recently recognised by the Privy Council as having acquired by long acceptance an independent authority (l).

Benares law.

§ 141. The only decisions upon this point under Benares

(g) Dattaka Mimamsa, 30-56; 1 W. MacN., 72. Mr. Sutherland's gloss upon Dattaka Mimamsa, § 53, that the words "a boy five years old" means under six is a mistake. It means one who has not passed his fifth birthday. Per Mahmood, J., Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 All., 310.

(h) 3 Dig., 148, 249-251, 263. See, too, F. Mac., 139-146, 194.

(i) Dattaka Chandrika, ii., § 20-33; 1 W. MacN., 72.

(k) 1 W. MacN., 73.

(l) Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 26 I. A., 153; S. C., 21 All., 412.

law have been given in the Courts of the North-West Provinces. The first of these was in 1868 (m), when it was held that under the Dattaka Mimamsa an adoption was valid so long as the boy was below six years. Here the Court accepted the authority of the Dattaka Mimamsa, and of the Kalika-purana on which the rule is based, but fell into a mistake as to the meaning of the rule, in consequence of the gloss put upon it by Mr. Sutherland [§ 140 (f)]. The question arose again in 1886, and was examined in the most elaborate manner by Mr. Justice Mahmood (n). The conclusions he arrived at are stated as follows: "I hold that the passage of the Kalika-purana upon which the limitation of five years for adoption is entirely founded, is not proved to be authentic; that even if it be taken to be authentic, the interpretation adopted by Nanda Pandita in his Dattaka Mimamsa is not shown to be universally applicable; that the interpretation may be restricted only to Brahmans intended for priesthood; that this interpretation would bring the Dattaka Mimamsa in accord with the Dattaka Chandrika; that various other plausible interpretations of the passage have been adopted by other authorities; that such authorities may be referred to for the purposes of this question; and that the matter being so dealt with by those authorities, it would be unsafe to set aside the plaintiff's adoption upon the solitary ground that he was older than five years at that time." He then proceeded to express his opinion that, as regards the twice-born classes, age was only material as determining the time at which the upanayana may be performed, and that its performance was the ultimate limit for a valid adoption. As regards Sudras adoption could be performed effectually till marriage.

§ 142. In Bengal and Southern India the decisions are in favour of the view laid down by the Dattaka Chandrika. Bengal.

(m) Thakoor Oomrao Singh v. Thakooranee Mehtab Koonwer, N.-W. P. H. C. Rep., 1868, 103a. See per Mahmood, J., 9 All., p. 312.

(n) Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 All., 253, pp. 316-324, 327, 328.

In some of the earlier Bengal cases, the pundits, while agreeing that the age of five years was not an absolute limit which could not be exceeded, seem to have thought that if tonsure had already been performed in the natural family and in the name of the natural father, a subsequent adoption would be invalid (o). In 1838, however, the Sudder Court Pundit, in reply to a question as to age, answered "that the period fixed for adoption with respect to the three superior tribes, Brahmans, Kshatriyas, and Vaisyas, was prior to their investiture with their respective cords: and with respect to Sudras, prior to their contracting marriage" (p). This opinion has been affirmed in several subsequent cases, and may now be treated as beyond doubt (q). The same rule has been repeatedly laid down in Madras, both by the pundits and the Court (r). It is also suggested by Mr. Ellis that, even after upanayana, an adoption would be valid, if the person adopted was of the same gotra as his adopter. He bases this view on the ground that where the gotra is different, the upanayana is a bar, since by it the person is definitely settled in his natural family, and this renders the performance of the datta homam (§ 151) impossible. But where the gotra is the same, the performance of the datta homam, though proper, is not necessary for an adoption. And this view was adopted by the Travancore Court in a case between Brahmans. There the upanayana had been performed previous to adoption. But the Court held the objection to be immaterial since the person adopted was the son of Madras.

(o) Kerutnaraen v. Mt. Bhobinesree, 1 S. D., 161 (213) (as to the remark appended to this decision, see 1 W. MacN., 75); 2 W. MacN., 180; Mt. Dullabh v. Manu, S. D., 50 (61).

(p) Bullabakant v. Kishenprea, 6 S. D., 219 (270).

(q) Niradayee v. Bholanath, S. D. of 1853, 553; Ramkishore v. Bhoobun, S. D. of 1859, 229, 236; affirmed on review, S. D. of 1860, i., 485, 490; reversed on a different point in the Privy Council sub nomine Bhoobun Moyee v. Ramkishore, where, however, the ruling as to the validity of the adoption on the ground of age was not disputed, 10 M. I. A., 279; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15.

(r) 1 Stra. H. L., 87, 91; 2 Stra. H. L., 87, 110; Mootoo Vizia Raghoonadha Satooputty, alias Annasamy v. Sevagamy Nachiar, 1 Mad. Dec., 106; affirmed by Privy Council on the 28th April, 1828, Chetty Colum Prusuma v. Chetty Colum Moodoo, 1 Mad. Dec., 406; Sreenevassian v. Sashyammal, Mad. Dec. of 1859, 118; Veerapermall v. Narrain Pillay, 1 N. C., 133; Vythilinga v. Vyithammal, 6 Mad., 43; Pichuvayyan v. Subbayyan, 13 Mad., 128.

the adopter's brother (s). This ruling was followed by the High Court of Madras after a very full investigation of the authorities, and upon evidence of local usage (t). In a later case the fact that the person taken in adoption was an unmarried man aged forty, who had succeeded to his father's estate, was held to be no valid objection to the adoption (u). The statement by M. Gibelin, that usage in Pondicherry admits of adoption after the upanayana in any case, appears to be incorrect as regards Brahmans (v).

§ 143. This restriction again does not exist where the Brahmanical fiction of an altered paternity is unknown. In the Punjab there is no restriction of age (w). Among the Jains the period extends to thirty-two, and it is said by Holloway, J., that there is no limit of age (x). So in Western India, the author of the Mayukha says: "And my father has said that a married man, who has even had a son born, may become an adopted son" (y). In accordance with this dictum the pundits of the Surat Sudder Court reported that "the rule that a boy should be adopted under five years related to cases where no relationship exists; but when a relation is to be adopted, no obstacle exists on account of his being of mature age, married and having a family, provided he possesses common ability, and is beloved by the person who adopts him" (z). So Mr. Steele states, "the Poona Shastries do not recognize the necessity that adoption should precede moonj and marriage." And he gives various statements as to the proper age for adoption ranging from five to fifty, and ending, "there is no limit as to age. The adoptee should Limit of age not universal.

(s) 2 Stra. H. L., 104; Ramaswami Iyen v. Bhagati Ammal, 8 Mad. Jur., 58.

(t) Viraragava Ramalinga, 9 Mad., 148, overruling Venkatasaiya v. Venkata Charlu, 3 Mad. H. C., 28.

(u) Papamma v. V. Appa Rau, 16 Mad., 384, p. 396.

(v) 1 Gibelin, 94; Sorg H. L., 132; Co. Cou., 170, 377.

(w) Punjab Cust., 82.

(x) Rithcurn v. Soojun, 9 Mad. Jur., 21, cited in Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 402; Govindnath v. Gulalchund, 5 S. D., 276 (322).

(y) V. May., iv., 5, § 19. His father was Shanker Bhatt, author of the Dvait Nirnaya, a work of special authority in the Deccan. Nathaji v. Hari, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 70.

(z) Brijbhookunjee v. Gokoolotsaojee, 1 Bor., 195 [217].

not be older than the adopter" (a). None of these authorities make any distinction as to the caste of the person adopted. In the Surat case the parties appear to have been Brahmans, or at least Kshatriyas. In some of the cases in which the adoption of a married man has been held valid by the Bombay High Court, the parties happened to be Sudras, but the decision did not turn upon that circumstance (b). It has been settled by recent cases, after some doubt, that a married Brahman may be lawfully adopted, and that it makes no difference as to the legality of the transaction whether he belongs to a different or to the same gotra as the adopter (c).

Only son.

§ 144. The prohibition against adopting an only son rests on the texts of Vasishtha, Baudhayana and Çaunaka, (§ 107). "Let no man give or accept an only son, since he must remain for the obsequies of his ancestor" (d). So Çaunaka says, "By no man having an only son is the gift of a son to be ever made." From these Nanda Pandita infers a prohibition against accepting also, and says that the offence of extinction of lineage, denounced by Vasishtha, is incurred by both giver and receiver (e). This prohibition is by some authorities extended to the adoption of an eldest son, since his merits are specially appropriated in the interests of his own father (f). And even to the adoption of one of two sons, since such an act would leave the father with an only son, and thereby Eldest son.

(a) Steele, 44, 182; V. N. Mandlik, 471; 1 W. MacN., 75. This was also the case in Rome. The rule as to difference of age, if it has any force at all, does not apply as between an adopting widow and the adoptee. Gopal Balkrishna v. Vishnu Raghunath, 23 Bom., 250, p. 256.

(b) Rajo Nimbalkar v. Jayavantrav, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 191; Nathaji v. Hari, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 67.

(c) Sadashiv v. Hari Moneshwar, 11 Bom. H. C., 190; Lakshmappa v. Ramappa, 12 Bom. H. C., 364; Dharma Dagu v. Ramkrishna, 10 Bom., 80. Among the Nambudri Brahmans (§ 44), the power to adopt a married man appears only to exist when the adoption is of the Kritrima form, 11 Mad., p. 176.

(d) So in Rome, the only male of his genus could not be adopted, for the sacra would in such a case be lost.

(e) Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., § 1—6; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 27, 28; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 11; V. May., iv., 5, § 9, 16; V. N. Mandlik, 502.

(f) Mitakshara, i., 11, § 12, citing Manu, ix., § 106; Viramit., ii., 2, § 8; Sarasvati Vilasa, § 368, 369; 2 Stra. H. L., 105; 2 W. MacN., 182; V. May., iv., 5, 4; Permaul Naicken v. Pottee Ammal, Mad. Dec. of 1851, 234.

subject him to the chance of being left wholly without issue. But this final precept is admittedly only dissuasive, and not peremptory (g). And the same decision has lately been given as regards the adoption of an eldest son (h). The value to be placed upon these texts, according to Hindu rules of interpretation, is discussed at length by Mr. V. N. Mandlik. His view is that they are recommendatory only, and not prohibitory, and that a violation of them affects the offender, but does not detract from the validity of the rite (i).

§ 145. It seems to be admitted everywhere that there is no objection to the adoption of an only son, when he is taken as dvyamushyayana, or the son of two fathers; either by an express agreement that his relationship to his natural family shall continue (k), or by the fact that the only son of one brother is taken in adoption by another brother, in which case the double relationship appears to be established without any special contract (l). The remaining question, as to the validity of the adoption of an only son, has given rise to an extraordinary amount of discussion, and has been treated with a series of conflicting judgments commencing from the beginning of the last century, and only settled in its closing year by a final decision of the Judicial Committee (m). The Son of two fathers.

Only son.

(g) Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., § 8; 1 Stra. H. L., 85; 1 W. MacN., 77.

(h) Janokee v. Gopaul, 2 Cal., 365; affl. on facts 10 I. A., 32; S. C., 9 Cal., 766; Kashibai v. Tatia, 7 Bom., 221; Jamnabai v. Raichand, ib., 225.

(i) V. N. Mandlik, 496—508, where he gives instances of the adoption of only sons from the Vedic ages downwards.

(k) 2 W. MacN., 192; 1 Stra. H. L., 86; fatwahas, 2 Kn., 206; Shumshere v. Dilraj, 2 S. D., 189 (216); Joymonee v. Sibosondry, Fulton, 75; Behari Lal v. Shib Lal, 26 All., 472.

(l) Dattaka Mimamsa, ii., 37, 38, vi., § 34—36, 47, 48; Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 27, 28, iii., § 17, v., § 33; 1 Stra. H. L., 86; 2 Stra. H. L., 107; Steele, 45, 183; Sarvadhikari, 535; Permaul Naicken v. Pottee Ammal, Mad. Dec. of 1851, 234; per curiam, Gocoolamund v. Wooma Dace, 15 B. L. R., 415; S. C., 23 Suth., 340; Nilmadhuv v. Bishumber, 13 M. I. A., 101; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 29; Chinna Gaundan v. Kumara, 1 Mad. H. C., 57; Uma Deyi v. Gocoolamund, 5 I. A., 42; S. C., 3 Cal., 587; V. May., iv., 5, § 21, 22. The power of giving or taking a son in adoption in the dvyamushyayana form may in Bombay be exercised not only by the brothers but also by their widows. Krishna v. Paramshri, 25 Bom., 537.

(m) In the last and previous editions of this work the whole law bearing upon this subject, which has now only a historical interest, was given in great detail: 5th ed., §§ 133—138.

Bengal.

decisions in the Bengal Sudder and High Courts were uniformly against the adoption. The earlier cases were decided, as was the habit in those days, upon the futwabs of the pundits, but in two later cases in the High Court the whole subject received a thorough discussion, in the former of the two by that great Hindu lawyer Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter (n). In Madras there was no case which directly raised the question till 1862. It arose incidentally in various cases from 1801, and during the time Sir Thomas Strange was collecting materials for his work on Hindu Law, he consulted Mr. Colebrooke and Mr. Ellis, and laid before them various futwabs of Madras pundits upon the subject. Mr. Colebrooke was of opinion that such an adoption was invalid. Mr. Ellis, a Madras civilian, and the pundits thought that the adoption was forbidden, but that if made it would be effectual (o). This was the view which Sir Thomas Strange himself took, and which he put forward from the Bench, and in his own book (p). In 1862 a direct decision to the same effect was given on appeal by the Madras High Court (q). The judgment was not a satisfactory one. The Chief Justice professed to hold by decided cases, and for these he referred to several earlier Madras cases in which the point had not been decided at all, and to a Bengal case in which the decision was exactly the opposite to what he supposed it was. The decision, however, appears to have been accepted as final, and was followed as such, and without argument in two later cases, the last of which gave rise to the final appeal to the Privy Council (r).

Allahabad.

In Allahabad the question had a very short history. The case came before a Full Bench in 1879, when the (n) Nandram v. Cashee Pande, 3 S. D., 232 (310); 4 S. D., 70 (89); Debee Dial v. Hur Dhor Singh, 4 S. D., 320 (407); Upendra Lal v. Rani Prasanna Mayr, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 221; S. C., 10 Suth., 347; Manick Chunder v. Bhuggobatty, 3 Cal., 443.

(o) 2 Stra. H. L., 87, 88, 105, 106, 107.

(p) Veerapermall v. Narrain Pillay, 1 N. C., 91, 125; 1 Stra. H. L., 86.

(q) Chinna Gaundan v. Kumara Gaundan, 1 Mad. H. C., 54.

(r) Narayanaswamy v. Kuppusami, 11 Mad., 43; Balasu Gurulingaswami v. Rama Lakshamma, 18 Mad., 53; affd., 26 I. A., 113; S. C., 22 Mad., 398.

rival views of the Bengal and Madras Courts were considered, and the view taken by the latter was preferred. This would naturally have closed the discussion in that Presidency, but in consequence of doubts, expressed by Straight and Mahmood, JJ., in a later case, the question when it next arose was a second time referred to a Full Bench. There it received a most exhaustive examination from Edge, C. J., and Knox, J., with the result that the Court adhered to its former opinion. The last case came on appeal before the Privy Council, where it was heard separately from the Madras case, both, however, being dealt with and affirmed in a single judgment (s).

§ 146. In Bombay the current of events was much more varied. The earliest case, as far as I am aware, in which the point was discussed, was one which arose in 1819. There the legality of adoption of an eldest son was disputed, but it appeared that the natural father had given away both his sons, and the Shastries were asked whether this was lawful. Their opinion was that the sin lay with the giver, not with the receiver, and that when made the adoption was valid (t). This view was followed in several cases in the Bombay High Court where the adoption of an only son was disputed, and it is stated by Mr. Mandlik that this had been the course of decision in the Sudder Court in cases which are not recorded (u); the current began to change under the influence of Sir M. Westropp, C. J., in 1875. The case before him was, whether the giving by a widow of an only son in adoption was valid or invalid. The only question necessary to be decided was, whether the authority of the deceased husband could be presumed. The whole law, and all the precedents upon the point, were minutely examined, and the conclusion he arrived at was that the giving or receiving of an only son was so improper that the consent of the husband could not be presumed. The Chief Justice, however, expressed himself most unfavourably to the validity of such an adoption, though he admitted that such cases had been recognised as legal under the old Sudder Court (v). This view was followed in an unreported case between Lingayets, where the validity of such an adoption had to be decided on an application for a certificate of heirship under Act XXVII of 1860. The case was referred to a Full Bench presided over by Sir Michael Westropp and the adoption was set aside (w). Finally, in 1889, in a formal litigation between parties, the Full Bench treated the decision in the Lingayet case as binding upon them, and held that the adoption of an only son was absolutely invalid (x).

(s) Hanuman v. Chirai, 2 All. (F. B.), 164; Beni Pershad v. Mt. Hardai Bibi, 14 All. (F. B.), 67; affd. Radhamohun v. Hardai Bibi, 26 I. A., 113.

(t) Huebut Rao v. Govindrao, 2 Bor., 75, 86.

(u) Mhalsabai v. Vithoba, 7 Bom., A. C., Appx. 26; Rajz Nimbalkar v. Jayavantrav, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 191; Rangubai v. Bhaghirtibai, 2 Bom., p. 379; Mandlik, 507.

Privy Council
Decision.

§ 147. It is singular that a case of constant occurrence, upon which such varying views had been expressed during an entire century, should never have come before the Privy Council till 1898, and should then have appeared simultaneously in two cases, one from Madras and the other from Allahabad. Each case was argued separately, the Court which had heard the Madras case being reinforced by Lords Herschell and Watson on the hearing of that from Allahabad, and it is believed that every available material on either side was produced during the discussion. The result was that the validity of the adoption was finally affirmed, in a judgment which certainly avoided none, and dealt with all the difficulties of the case (y). The committee first grappled with the dictum of Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter in his judgment in 1868 (z), (v) Lakshmappa v. Ramappa, 12 Bom. H. C., (2nd ed.), 364. This decision, though delivered in 1875, was not reported till 1878, folld. Kashibai v. Tatia, 7 Bom., 221. See as to the point actually decided, B. Gurulingaswami v. B. Lakshmappa, 26 I. A., 113; S. C., 22 Mad., 398, ante § 130.

(w) Ramchandra v. Vihoba, W. & B., 129.

(x) Waman Raghupati v. Krishnaji, 14 Bom. (F. B.), 249, folld. Rai Jadar v. Bai Mathura, 19 Bom., 658.

(y) Balasu Gurulingaswami v. B. Lakshmappa; Radha Mohun v. Hardei Bibi, 26 I. A., 113; S. C., 22 Mad., 398.

(z) 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 221. See, too, Rajendro Narain v. Saroda Soondari, 15 W. R., 548, where the same Judge had enunciated the same views in even stronger language.

“that the subject of adoption is inseparable from the Hindu religion itself, and all distinction between religious and legal injunctions must be inapplicable to it.” They pointed out that in various instances in the texts on adoption, where directions or prohibitions of an undoubtedly religious character were given in regard to particular acts, the distinction had been taken; that in some such cases it had never been suggested that the precept had any binding legal operation, and that in other cases, where the suggestion had been made, it was set aside. They examined the two leading texts of Vasishta and Çaunaka, and expressed their opinion that neither of the sages intended that an adoption of an only son should be an absolute nullity. They pointed out that, in Mr. Colebrooke’s translation of Mit. I, 11, §§ 10, 11, 12, he had used the words “should not” as regards two prohibitions which are certainly recommendatory, and the words “must not” in reference to the prohibition of an only son, whereas the words were identical, and equally capable of expressing obligation or recommendation. This weakened the judgment of Sir M. Westropp in 1875, where he had relied on the express language of the Mitakshara, and had apparently also influenced Sir W. Markby in his decision in 1877 (a). They also relied on the widespread and recognised usage of making such adoptions in many parts of India, and on the circumstance that such adoptions, when made by orthodox Hindus, had never been followed by any social penalties from the authorities of their caste. Finally, as to the argument that it was unsafe to disturb a long series of decisions, they said “But their Lordships are placed in the position of being forced to differ with one set of Courts or the other. And so far as the fear of disturbance can affect the question, if it can rightly affect it at all, it inclines in favour of the law which gives freedom of choice. People may be disturbed at finding themselves deprived of a power which they believed themselves to possess, and may want to use. But they can hardly be disturbed at being told that they possess a power which they did not suspect, and need not exercise unless they choose." This decision, which did not profess to govern cases in Bombay, was subsequently followed in a case from Guzerat where the Mayukha ranks as an authority higher than the Mitakshara (b).

(a) Manick Chunder v. Bhuggobatty, 3 Cal., 448.

Discussion as to reason of conflicting usage.

§ 148. The whole of this judgment was directed to orthodox Hindus, who were anxious to obey every positive order of their ancient law, and were only anxious to know, what was positive precept and what was moral advice. Their Lordships did not enquire, and it was not necessary to enquire, how it happens that, as a matter of fact, in wide districts, and among large classes of the community, this and similar passages in the Sanskrit law books are treated as absolutely binding, while in other equally large districts and classes they are utterly disregarded. No Hindu lawyer denies the moral and religious weight of these precepts, whatever may be their legal force. Why does one set of Hindus bow to these precepts, and another set fly in their face? The answer seems to me to be of some interest, not as bearing on Hindu law but on Hindu usages, and as strengthening the views advanced in Chapter I of this work. To one set Hinduism is a religion, the whole of which they are bound to obey. To the other it is merely a secular condition, of which they adopt and reject exactly as much as they like.

The absolute unanimity of pundits and Judges in Bengal, broken only by a rather unsatisfactory decision of the Supreme Court (c) is the natural result of the fact that in Bengal Hindu Law, as distinguished from Hindu usage, is a living principle which governs every-day life. In Bengal alone the heir to an intestate is determined by ascertaining the religious benefits which he is capable of conferring on the deceased. Mr. Justice Dwarkanath

(b) Vyas Chimanlal v. Vyas Ramchandra, 24 Bom., 473.

(c) Joymoney v. Sibosoonderi, Fulton, 75.

Mitter may have been wrong in the statement criticised by the Judicial Committee, but there can be no doubt he was sincere, and that his language reflected the opinions of educated Hindus in Bengal. He would have been unable to understand that different degrees of obedience could be due to different precepts proceeding from the same inspired lips, or that an act which drew its whole authority from a sacred utterance could be valid, if it was done in a manner which the speaker had pronounced to be a sin. Jagannatha (d) seems to stand alone among Bengal lawyers in taking such a view.

When, however, we pass to Madras the case is just the reverse. The pundits, who were all Brahmans, unite in saying that such an adoption is prohibited; but they almost invariably add that when done it is effectual. The reason was that they could not shut their eyes to the fact that such adoptions were practised all round them, and this practice, like many others equally opposed to the teaching of the sages, was due to the fact that the Dravidians had adopted Hindu law without any of the beliefs from which it originated. Especially are the ideas wanting upon which the religious theory of adoption is founded. "The fear of hell and the hope of heaven appear in the puranic beliefs; but this doctrine has very little currency beyond the Brahmans and a few of the higher castes, and even among these classes the moral code of their religion is but vaguely known and of no great influence." "It is part of the Brahmanical doctrine that a man must have a son to save him from hell, but this belief obtains little currency among the generality of the people." "Homage to remote ancestors is not a practice among the Dravidians, though observances are paid to relatives recently deceased with the intent that they may not return to do harm to the living" (e).

(d) 3 Dig., 243.

(e) Census Report of 1891, VIII, 60, 128. Manual of Madras Adm., I (71). Upon a reference by the Pondicherry Court in 1803 to the Consultative Committee, the following profession of faith was set forth:—"The virtues and the

The Pondicherry Court sanctions the disputed adoption on the express ground that, though it is opposed to the Sanskrit law, it is in conformity with popular usage (f). In Western India, so far as the Mayukha is recognised, it is evident that the Brahmanical theory can have no force when a married man, who has even had a son born to him, may become an adopted son (g). Until the adoption of an only son was tested by the rule of Vasishtha, the Bombay Courts were in the habit of allowing it, and Mr. Mandlik says "this is consonant to the daily practice and the usages of the people" (h). It is a curious thing that the first authoritative decision in Bombay, that such adoptions were invalid, was in a case between Lingayets, a sect which originated in a religious movement of an anti-Brahmanical character (i). When a similar case arose subsequently between members of the same sect in a regular suit, it was proved conclusively that such adoptions were allowed by local custom, and the adoption was supported (k).

In the leading case from Allahabad, Edge, C. J., supports his interpretation of the Sanskrit authorities by asking how it happened that if such adoptions were sinful, the persons who shared in them were not outcasted, "particularly as they belong to a caste, the members of which are such sticklers for caste, and for keeping their caste pure, as are the Agarwala Banias of Benares" (l). It never occurred to any one to ask what the real relief of these people was. Now it is certain that the majority of these Agarwala Banias are of Jain origin (m), and that the pious works that men have practised in this world procure for their souls in the other world, according to their merit, one of the four degrees of beatitude—Salogam (to be with god), Sanibam (to be near god), Saroubam (to be like god) Sayoutchiam (to be identified with god). As for the soul of a sinner, it passes into the body of a quadruped or of a bird, according to the heinousness of its offences, and when it has expiated its faults, it proceeds again to animate a human body. Such is the belief of Hindus of all castes and of all sects in regard to a future life." Sorg Co. Con., 383, § 4.

(f) Sorg H. L., 131, Co. Con., 376.

(g) V. May., iv., 5 § 19.

(h) Mandlik, 505.

(l) Beni Prasad v. Harjai Bibi, 14 All., p. 86.

(m) Sherring, Castes of the Hindus, 285.

(i) Census Report, 1891, XXV, 238.

(k) Basava v. Lingangauda, 19 Bom., 428.

Jains do not practise any of the shrads or religious ceremonies for the dead, the due performance of which lies at the base of the religious theory of adoption (n). If then the litigants in that case were Jains, they would certainly not be outcasted for doing an act which, from the Jain point of view, could not be sinful or capable of any moral quality. Whether they were Jains or not it is impossible to say. But it is curious that the mind of the Court was never directed to a question of fact which, if answered in one way, would have rendered the whole discussion absolutely irrelevant.

§ 149. Two persons cannot adopt the same boy, even if the persons adopting are brothers. It is, however, suggested by the author of the Dattaka Mimamsa that two brothers may jointly adopt the son of a third brother, so that he may be the dvyamushyayana, or son of both. Mr. W. MacNaghten expresses a strong opinion against the legality of such a proceeding (o).

Two persons cannot adopt same boy.

§ 150. FOURTH, THE CEREMONIES NECESSARY TO AN ADOPTION are stated by Vasishtha as follows: "A person being about to adopt a son, should take an unremote kinsman, or the near relation of a kinsman, having convened his kindred, and announced his intention to the king, and having offered a burnt offering, with recitation of the holy words in the middle of his dwelling" (p). A fuller ritual, which, however, is merely an enlargement of the above, is given by Çaunaka and Baudhayana, in passages which are referred to by writers as the leading authorities upon the subject (q). In these much stress is laid upon the giving and receiving of the boy. Upon this Baudhayana says, "Then having performed the ceremonies beginning with drawing the lines on the altar, and ending with the placing (n) Bhagvanās v. Rajmal, 10 Bom. H. C., pp 250, 252, 253.

Ritual

(o) Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 30, ii., § 40—47; 1 W. MacN., 77. Where a boy has been adopted by one brother, he cannot be adopted again by another brother. Tinma v. Siddamma, 4 Mysore, 88.

(p) Vasishtha, xv., § 6; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 13.

(q) Baudh., vii., 5; V. May., iv., 5, § 8, 36—42; Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 2, 42; Dattaka Chandrika, ii. See, too, 2 Stra. H. L., 218; Steele, 45.

of the water vessels, he should go to the giver of the child, and ask him, saying, Give me thy son. The other answers, I give him. He receives him with these words, I take thee for the fulfilment of my religious duties. I take thee to continue the line of my ancestors" (r). "The expression 'king,' in these texts has been explained by commentators to signify the chief of the town, or village. They seem, however, agreed that the notice enjoined, and the invitation of kinsmen are no legal essentials to the validity of the adoption, being merely intended to give greater publicity to the act, and to obviate doubt regarding the succession" (s).

Notice to officials.

Giving and receiving.

§ 151. The giving and receiving are absolutely necessary; they are the operative part of the ceremony, being that part of it which transfers the boy from one family into another (t). Where this part was performed by the widow, a girl of fifteen who had just lost her husband, it was held to be no objection to the adoption that she remained in an inner room, and deputed a relation to perform the homa and other parts of the religious ceremony (u), and even the physical act of giving away may be similarly delegated by a person who would be entitled to perform the act himself (v). According to some authorities, nothing else is so essential that the want of it will absolutely invalidate an adoption. Even the datta homam, or oblation to fire, though a most important part of the rite in the case of the three higher classes, has been held to be a mere matter of unessential ceremonial (w). On this point, however, there is a conflict of authority. The Datta homam.

(r) Baudhayana, ii., § 7—9; Journ. As. Soc. Bengal, 1886, art. Çaunaka Smṛiti.

(s) Suth. Syn., 667, 675; 1 N. C., 117; as to assent of Government, ante, § 134.

(t) Mahashoya Shosinath v. Srimati Krishna, 7 I. A., 250; S. C., 6 Cal., 381; Ranganayakamma v. Alwar Setti, 13 Mad., 214.

(u) Lakshmbai v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., 590.

(v) See ante § 132, note (n).

(w) Veerapermall v. Narrain Pillay, 1 N. C., 91, 117; 1 Stra. H. L., 95; 3 Dig., 244, 248; Singanma v. Venkatacharlu, 4 M. H. C., 165; per cur. Sootroyun v. Sabitra, 2 Kn., 290; 2 W. MacN., 199; 1 Gib., 93; see the native authorities cited, Jolly, Lect. 159.

Dattaka Mimamsa, after reciting the ritual prescribed by Vasishtha and Çaunaka, both of which include the oblation to fire, says: "Therefore the filial relation of these five sons proceeds from adoption only with observance of the forms of either Vasishtha or Çaunaka; not otherwise" (x). And he winds up the chapter on the mode of adoption by saying, "It is, therefore, established that the filial relation of adopted sons is occasioned only by the (proper) ceremonies. Of gift, acceptance, a burnt sacrament, and so forth, should either be wanting, the filial relation even fails" (y). So the Dattaka Chandrika, after giving the ritual of Baudhayana for the followers of the Taittiri Veda, which also includes the datta homam, says, "In case no form, as propounded, should be observed, it will be declared that the adopted son is entitled to assets sufficient for his marriage" (z). A Madras Pundit says, datta homam is essential to Brahmans, but not to the other classes; and his opinion is stated to be correct by Mr. Colebrooke and Mr. Ellis (a). So Mr. Steele says, "Sudras cannot perform any ceremonies requiring Muntras from the Vedas" (b). Judging from these passages, it would certainly seem that the sacrifice to fire was essential to those classes for whom it was prescribed, and probable that it was not prescribed for the Sudras.

§ 152. After a good deal of conflict of decisions, it appears to be now settled that for Sudras, at all events, no religious ceremony is necessary; whether this applies to the superior classes seems to be still unsettled. In 1834 the Judicial Committee said, "Although neither written acknowledgments, nor the performance of any religious ceremonials, are essential to the validity of adoptions, such acknowledgments are usually given, and such ceremonies observed, and notices given of the times when adoptions are to take place, in all families of distinction, as those of Zemindars or opulent Brahmans; so that No religious ceremonies for Sudras.

(x) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., 50.

(y) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., 56.

(z) Dattaka Chandrika, ii., 16, 17, vi., 3; 2 W. MacN., 198.

(a) 2 Stra. H. L., 87—89.

(b) Steele, 46.

wherever these have been omitted, it behoves the Court to regard with extreme suspicion the proof offered in support of an adoption" (c). It appears from the report of the case in Bengal that the parties were Brahmans. It was admitted that no religious ceremonies were performed. But both in the Sudder Court and in the Privy Council their absence was treated as merely a matter of evidence, and not as in itself invalidating the adoption. As a matter of fact both Courts found that the adoption had not taken place. In a much later case before the Privy Council, where a Sudra adoption was concerned, the High Court of Bengal had treated it as an open question whether or not a Sudra could be adopted without the performance of religious ceremonies, viz., the offering of burnt sacrifice and the like. On appeal, the Judicial Committee said, "In the case of Streemutty Joymonee v. Streemutty Sibosoonderee (Fult., 75), it was held by the Supreme Court in Calcutta that amongst Sudras no religious ceremony, except in the case of marriage, is necessary" (d). In the view taken of the case by their Lordships point did not arise, and was not decided. The next time the point arose in Bengal between Sudras the High Court decided, on the authority of a passage in the Dattaka Nirnaya, cited in the Vayavastha Darpana, that the performance of the datta homam was essential to an adoption even amongst Sudras, and as no such ceremony had been performed in the particular case, held the adoption invalid (e). In a later case, however, which was also between Sudras, the Court professed to treat this decision as having gone upon the special facts, which it certainly had not done; and drew a further distinction between the two cases, on the ground that "in the present

Case of Sudras.

(c) Sootrogun v. Sabitra, 2 Kn., 287, 290; S. C. in the Sudder Adawlut, sub nomine, Sabitreea v. Suttur Ghun, 2 S. D., 21 (26).

(d) Sreenarain Mitter v. Sreemutty, 11 B. L. R. (P. C.), 171, 187; S. C., 19 Suth., 133; S. C. I. A. Sup. Vol. 149: in the High Court, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 279; S. C., 11 Suth., 196.

(e) Bhairabnath v. Maheschandra, 4 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 162; S. C., Suth., 168 cited and approved, Sayamalat v. Saudamini, 5 B. L. R., 366.

case, the adopted son is a brother's son, a member of the same family, in regard to whom the mere giving and taking may be sufficient to give validity to the adoption" (f). Finally, express point was referred to a Full Bench. It was then found that the passage in the Dattaka Nirnaya, which had formerly been relied upon as showing that a Sudra should adopt with the datta homam, proved exactly the opposite; an essential part of the passage having been omitted. The Court accordingly answered the question put by saying, "Amongst Sudras in Bengal no ceremonies are necessary in addition to the giving and taking of the child in adoption" (g).

§ 153. Whether the same rule holds good in the three superior classes is, of course, a different question. In Madras, it has been expressly decided that even among Brahmans the datta homam, or any other religious ceremony, is unnecessary (h). The same rule is certainly implied in the case in Knapp, cited in the last section, though not decided, and the opinion of Jagannatha is to the same effect (i). The ruling in the Madras case was affirmed in a later decision where the parties were Kshatrias (k), and again in the adoption of a Nambudri Brahman (l). In other cases where the parties were Brahmans, the same Court doubted the authority of the ruling; but affirmed the adoption on the ground that the datta homam had in fact been performed, though at an interval of five years after the giving and receiving (m). In those cases it would appear that the giving and receiving had been made with reference to a formal adoption to

Case of superior classes.

(f) Nittianand v. Kishna Dyal, 7 B. L. R., 1; S. C., 15 Suth., 300. As to the last point suggested, see ante § 142.

(g) Behari Lal v. Indramani, 13 B. L. R., 401; S. C., 21 Suth., 285, aff'd. in Privy Council sub nomine Indramani v. Behari Lal, 7 I. A., 24; S. C., 5 Cal., 770, acc. Dyamoyee v. Rasbeharee, S. D. of 1852, 1001; Perkash Ohunder v. Dhunmonnee, S. D. of 1853, 96; Alwar v. Ramasamy, 2 Mad. Dec., 67; Thangathanni v. Ramu Mudali, 5 Mad., 358.

(h) Singanma v. Vencatacharlu, 4 Mad. H. C., 165; 1 Stra. H. L., 96; contra, 2 Stra. H. L., 131.

(i) 3 Dig., 244, 248.

(k) Chandramala v. Muktamala, 6 Mad., 20.

(l) Shankaran v. Kesavan, 15 Mad., 7.

(m) Venkata v. Subhadra, 7 Mad., 548; Subbarayar v. Subbammal, 21 Mad., 497.

take place afterwards. This adoption, when it took place, was duly accompanied by the datta homam. It may be a question whether the decision would have been the same if the adoption had been completed without performing or intending to perform the datta homam, and that ceremony had been appended at a later period, pro majori cautela. In 1884 a case arose in which a Brahman had adopted a boy of the same gotra as himself without the homam ceremony. The Court seemed to treat the case of Singamma v. Venkatacharlu as of little weight, pointing out that it was not argued on both sides, and that Jagannatha, who was cited, was no authority in Southern India. They held that in this case the adoption was good, because both parties were of the same gotra, relying upon the authority of Mr. Ellis in 2 Strange's Hindu Law, p. 155 (n). Both in this case and in the later one of Ranganayakamma v. Alwar Setti (o), the Judges relied on the dictum of the Judicial Committee in Mahashoya Shosinath v. Srimati Krishna (p), where their Lordships say: "All that has been decided is that amongst Sudras no ceremonies are necessary in addition to the giving and taking of the child in adoption. The mode of giving and taking a child in adoption continues to stand as Hindu law and usage, and it is perfectly clear that amongst the twice-born classes there could be no such adoption by deed, because certain religious ceremonies, the datta homam in particular, are in their case requisite." So the pundits in two Bengal cases seem to have laid down that the datta homam was essential in the case of an adoption among the three superior classes (q), and the same statement was made more recently by Mr. Justice Mitter (r). It seems also to have been assumed that this was the general rule in a Bombay case. There it had been omitted

(n) Govindayyar v. Dorasami, 11 Mad., 5.

(o) 13 Mad., 214, 219.

(p) 7 I. A., 250, p. (256).

(q) Alank Manjari v. Fakir Chand, 5 S. D., 356 (418); Bullubakant v. Kishenprea, 6 S. D., 219 (270).

(r) Luchmun v. Mohun, 16 Suth., 179; see, too, Tkakoov Oomrao v. Tkakoov ranev, N.-W. P. H. C., 1868, 103.

in the case of an adoption of a brother's son. The pundits held the adoption nevertheless valid under a special text of Yama. "It is not expressly required that burnt sacrifice and other ceremonies should be performed on adopting the son of a daughter, or of a brother, for it is accomplished in those cases by word of mouth alone" (s). In Allahabad, where a similar case arose among Dakhani Brahmans, the inclination of some of the members of the Court seems to have been to hold that no religious ceremonies were necessary. The decision, however, was limited to holding that, when the boy was the son of a daughter or of a brother, a gift and acceptance was sufficient (t).

The Pondicherry Court has repeatedly laid down that the performance of the datta homam, and the accompanying religious ceremonies, is essential to the validity of an adoption. M. Sorg, however, doubts the application of this rule to any classes which can be shown not to have adopted the Brahmanical law in its religious bearing (u).

So far as it is possible to reconcile these conflicting decisions, they seem to point to the conclusion that, among the twice-born classes, the datta homam is necessary, unless the adopted boy is of the same gotra as his adopter, or unless a usage to the contrary can be established. In Madras there is also high authority for limiting the application of the rule to Brahmans.

§ 154. In any case it is quite clear that if the omission of the ceremonies has been intentional, with a view to leaving the adoption absolutely unfinished; or, if from death, or any other cause, a ceremony which had been intended has not been carried out, no change of condition will take place, even though the ceremonies which have Intentional omission.

(s) Huebut Rao v. Govindrao, 2 Bor., 75, 87 [83]; Steele, 45. This is in accordance with many authorities cited by Dr. Jolly, § 159. See W. & B., 923, 1083. In Ravji Vinayakrav v. Lakshmbai, 11 Bom., 381 (393), the Court, while not deciding the point, expressed a strong opinion that the datta homam was essential among Brahmans. In a later case the Bombay High Court followed the authorities stated in the earlier part of this note; Valubai v. Govind, 24 Bom., 218.

(t) Ayma Ram v. Madho Rao, 6 All., 276.

(u) Sorg H. L., 133; Co. Con., 110, 170, 374.

been omitted might lawfully have been left out. Because the mutual assent, which is necessary to a valid and completed adoption, has never taken place (v). So an adoption by will, without the performance of the necessary acts, will be invalid as an adoption. If the testamentary adoption is followed by a bequest to the person intended to be adopted, its validity will depend on the question, whether it was made to the devisee on the assumption that he was clothed with the character of an adopted son, or was an unconditional bequest to him, as persona designata (w). And even in cases where giving and receiving are sufficient, there must be an actual giving and receiving. A mere symbolical transfer by the exchange of deeds would not be sufficient (x).

Punjab.

In the Punjab and among the Jains, no ceremonial whatever is required, the transaction being purely a matter of civil contract (y). Among the Moodeliars of Northern Ceylon the only ceremonial appears to be the drinking of saffron water by the adopting person (z).

Ceylon.

Doctrine of factum valet.

§ 155. In many of the cases previously discussed, where it was necessary to admit that an adoption had been made in violation of a rule laid down by ancient authorities, an attempt has been made to support the adoption on the principle of Factum valet quod fieri non debuit. The existence of this rule in other districts than that of Bengal has been expressly affirmed by the Privy Council (a). The limits within which the rule can be applied have been much discussed in several cases in Bombay and in Allahabad. In the former Presidency it has been said of this rule "That its proper application must be limited to cases

(v) 2 W. MacN., 197; Isserchunder v. Rasbeharee, S. D. of 1862, 1001; Banee Pershad v. Moonshee Syud, 25 Suth., 192; per curiam 24 Bom., p. 226.

(w) Sorg H. L., 185; Co. Con., 171, post § 180-182.

(x) Sreenarain Mitter v. Sreemutty Kishen, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 279; S. C., 11 Suth., 196; Mhashoya Shosinath v. Srimati Krishna, 7 I. A., 250; S. C., 6 Cal., 381.

(y) Punjab Customs, 82, Punjab Customary Law, III, 82. Lakmi Chand v. Gatto Bai, 8 All., 319.

(z) Thesavaleme, ii.

(a) Uma Deyi v. Gokoolanund, 5 I. A., p. 53; S. C., 3 Cal., p. 601.

in which there is neither want of authority to give nor to accept, nor imperative interdiction of adoption. In cases in which the Shastra is merely directory and not mandatory, or only indicates particular persons as more eligible for adoption than others, the maxim may be usefully and properly applied, if the moral precept or recommended preference be disregarded" (b).

In an Allahabad case (c) where all the previous decisions were reviewed by Mahmood, J., he said: "In the case of adoption there are, of course, questions of formalities, ceremonies, preference in the matter of selection, and other points which amount to moral and religious suggestions. Such matters, speaking generally, are dealt with in the texts in a directory manner, relating to what I may perhaps call the modus operandi of adoption. To such matters, which do not affect the essence of the adoption, the doctrine of factum valet would undoubtedly apply upon general grounds of justice, equity and good conscience, and irrespective of the authority of any text in the Hindu law itself. There may, indeed, be codes where the express letter of the texts renders that which would in other systems be regarded as a matter of form, a matter of imperative mandate or prohibition affecting the very essence of the transaction." "Adoption under the Hindu law being in the nature of gift, three main matters constitute its elements apart from questions of form. The capacity to give, the capacity to take, and the capacity to be the subject of adoption, seem to me to be matters essential to the validity of the transaction, and, as such, beyond the province of the doctrine of factum valet." And similarly, in a case where the Judicial Committee had to consider the application of this maxim to the adoption of an only son, they said: "No system of law makes

(b) Lakshmappa v. Ramava, 12 Bom. H. C., p. 398, approved and followed; per curiam, 3 Bom., 293; 10 Bom., p. 86; W. & B., 90, and by the Judicial Committee, 26 I. A., p. 144, where they say "the truth is that the two halves of the maxim apply to two different departments of life."

(c) Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 All., 253, pp. 296, 297.

the province of legal obligation co-extensive with that of religious or moral obligation. A man may, in his conduct or in the disposition of his property, violate the plainest dictates of duty. And yet he may be within his legal rights. The Hindu sages doubtless saw this distinction as clearly as we do, and the precepts they have given for the guidance of life must be construed with reference to it. If a transaction is declared to be null and void in law, whether on a religious ground or another, it is so; and if its nullity is a necessary implication from a condemnation of it the law must be so declared. But the mere fact that a transaction is condemned in books, like the Smritis, does not necessarily prove it to be void. It raises the question, "What kind of condemnation is meant" (d).

Application of these rules.

§ 156. In accordance with these rules, the principle of factum valet has been held to be ineffectual where the son was given or received by a mother who was destitute of the necessary authority (e), or where the boy taken in adoption was one whose mother could not have been married by the adopting father (f). It has been held to be effectual where a preferential relation has been passed over in favour of the son of a stranger (g), or where the limit of age fixed by the Dattaka Mimamsa has been exceeded (h). On the other hand, the above principles give no help in a case where it is possible to hold different views on the question, whether a particular direction is, or is not so imperative as to be of the essence of an adoption. For instance, not only different Courts, but the same Court at different times, have disagreed as to the applicability of the doctrine of factum valet in cases of the adoption of an only son (i), or of a member of the superior classes, where the prescribed religious ceremonies were omitted (k). Of

(d) Balasu Gurulingaswami v. B. Ramalakshamma, 26 I. A., p. 139.

(e) Rangabai v. Bhagirathibai, 2 Bom., 377; Narayan Babaji v. Nana Manohar, 7 Bom. H. C. A. C., 153.

(f) Gopal Narhar v. Hanmant Ganesh, 3 Bom., 273.

(g) Uma Deyi v. Gokoolanund, 5 I. A., 40; S. C., 3 Cal., 587.

(h) Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 All., 254.

(i) Ante §§ 144—148.

(k) Ante § 155.

course, completely different considerations arise where a direct prohibition has been worn away by conflicting usage. Probably no Court, except one governed by the authority of the Mayukha, and of the practices recognised by it, would give effect to the adoption of a married Brahman (l).

§ 157. FIFTH, THE EVIDENCE OF AN ADOPTION.—There is no particular evidence required to prove an adoption. Those who rely on it must establish it like any other fact, whether they are plaintiffs, or defendants (m). In one respect they are in a favourable position; that is, in consequence of the peculiar religious views of Hindus. The probability is that a sonless Hindu will contemplate adoption; and this probability is increased if he is advanced in years, or sickly; if he has property to leave behind, as regards which he would naturally wish for a lineal successor; and still more if, from family dissensions, the person who would otherwise be his successor is a person whom he would not be likely to desire. In countries governed by the Mitakshara law the further circumstance would arise that his widow, supposing him to leave one, would be dependent for her maintenance on a collateral, perhaps a distant, member of the family. If, therefore, he was on affectionate terms with her, he would naturally wish to leave her in the more advantageous position of mother and guardian of an adopted son (n). Similarly, an opposite state of things, such as the youth of the adopting father, the probability of his having issue by his wife, or the like, would render the fact of the adoption unlikely (o). No writing is necessary; though, of course, in case of a Presumption as to adoption.

Writing.

(l) Dharma Dagu v. Ramkrishna Chinnaji, 10 Bom., 80.

(m) Tarini Charan v. Saroda Sundari, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 146; S. C., 11 Suth., 468; Hur Dyal Nag v. Roy Krishto, 24 Suth., 107.

(n) 1 Hyde, 249; Huradhun v. Muthoranath, 4 M. I. A., 414; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 71; where the Privy Council reversed concurrent decisions of the Lower Courts, finding against the adoption; Soondur Koomaree v. Gudadhur, 7 M. I. A., 64; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 116; Rajhunanatha v. Brozo Kishoro, 3 I. A., 177; S. C., 1 Mad., 69; S. C., 25 Suth., 291. See as to force of presumption in favour of adoption, per Mitter, J., Rajendro Narain v. Saroda, 15 Suth., 548; Harman Chull Singh v. Koomar Gunsheam, 2 Kn., p. 220.

(o) Mt. Sabitreea v. Suttur Ghun, 2 S. D., 21 (26); affirmed, 2 Kn., 287.

large property, or of a person of high position, the absence of a writing would be a circumstance which would call for strict scrutiny, and for strong evidence of the actual fact (p). Nor is it even in all cases necessary to produce direct evidence of the fact of the adoption; where it has taken place long since, and where the adopted son has been treated as such by the members of the family and in public transactions, every presumption will be made that every circumstance has taken place which is necessary to account for such a state of things as is proved, or admitted, to exist (q).

Effect of *res
judicata*.

§ 158. It has been held that a decision in favour of an adoption, in a suit in which it was in dispute, is prima facie evidence of the fact of the adoption, even as against persons who were no parties to the suit (r). It has even been held that a valid regular judgment of a competent Court upon the status of an alleged adopted son is a judgment in rem, which is binding and conclusive as against the whole world, unless fraud, or collusion, can be made out; and that a summary adjudication of the same nature, though not conclusive, is prima facie evidence of the facts adjudicated upon, sufficient to throw the burthen of disproving the same upon the opposite party (s). But this doctrine is now over-ruled. The binding character of judgments of the Courts of India upon questions of personal status was exhaustively examined by Mr. Justice Holloway in a Madras case, where a decree upon a question of division was relied upon as a judgment in rem (t), and later in a Bengal case, where the point decided in 3 Suth., 14, was referred to a Full Bench. It had been held

(p) 2 Kn., 290; Only Kadaron v. Aroonachella, Mad. Dec. of 1857, p. 53.

(q) Perkash Chunder v. Dhunmonnee, S. D. of 1853, 96; Nittianand v. Krishna Dyal, 7 B. L. R., 1; S. C., 15 Suth., 300; Rajendro Nath v. Jogendro Nath, 14 M. I. A., 67; S. C., 15 Suth. (P. C.), 41; Hur Dyal v. Roy Krishto, 24 Suth., 107; Sabo Bewa v. Nuboghun, 11 Suth., 380; S. C., 2 B. L. R., Appx., 51; Vyas Chimanlal v. Vyas Ramchandra, 24 Bom., 473.

(r) Seetaram v. Juggobundoo, 2 Suth., 168.

(s) Kistomonee v. Collector of Moorshedabad, S. D. of 1859, 550; Rajkristo v. Kishoree, 3. Suth., 14.

(t) Yarakalamma v. Anakala, 2 Mad. H. C., 276; see also Gopalayyan v. Raghupati Aiyyan, 3 Mad. H. C., 217.

Not a judgment in rem.

upon the authority of that decision, where a reversioner had brought a suit against a widow as heiress, to set aside alienations by her, and to establish his title as reversioner, and the Court had found that her husband had been adopted, and therefore that the plaintiff was next heir, that this finding was conclusive against a person who was no party to that suit, and who denied the adoption. Peacock, C. J., after referring to Mr. Justice Holloway's judgment, said: "I concur with him entirely in the conclusion at which he arrived, viz., that a decision by a competent Court that a Hindu family was joint and undivided, or, upon a question of legitimacy, adoption, partibility of property, rule of descent in a particular family, or upon any other question of the same nature in a suit inter partes, or, more properly speaking, in an action in personam, is not a judgment in rem or binding upon strangers, or, in other words, upon persons who were neither parties to the suit nor privies. I would go further, and say that a decree in such a case is not, and ought not to be, admissible at all as evidence against strangers" (u).

But though the decree itself might neither be conclusive, nor admissible, as evidence, the proceeding in which the decree took place might be very important. For instance, when the fact of any adoption at all having taken place was in dispute, it would be most important to show that the alleged adopted son had put forward his title as owner of, or interested in, the property, by preferring or defending suits, or proceedings in the Revenue or Magisterial Courts, relating to the property; just as his failing to do so would be important the other way. Again, if those who now denied his title were shown to have been cognisant of, or to have joined him in, such transactions, the evidence would be still stronger in his favour.

Important as evidence.

(u) Kanhya v. Radha Churn, 7 Suth., 338; S. C., B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 662; followed in Jogendro Deb v. Punindro, 14 M. I. A., 367; S. C., 11 B. L. R., 244; S. C., 17 Suth., 104; Katama Nachiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M. I. A., 539; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Jumoona Dassya v. Bamasonderai, 3 I. A., 72, 54; S. C., 1 Cal., 289. Such a decree would now be admissible in evidence under s. 18 of the Indian Evidence Act, to the extent stated in that section.

Lapse of time

§ 159. Lapse of time may operate in two ways: First, as strengthening the probability of an adoption. Secondly, as barring any attempt to set it aside. In the first case, it goes to show that the adoption was valid; in the second case, it prevents the results which would follow from holding that it was invalid.

as evidence.

First, it is evident that where a length of time has elapsed since an alleged adoption, and that adoption has been treated by the family, and by the society in which the family moves, as a valid and subsisting one, this is in itself strong evidence of the opinion of those acquainted with the facts that everything had taken place necessary to a valid adoption. It is like that repute which is always so much relied on in cases of disputed marriage, or legitimacy (v). But it is evident that the force of the testimony lies in repute prevailing through a long period of time, not upon the time itself. If, therefore, it appears that the adoption was kept a secret, or that being asserted on one side, it was simply ignored on the other, and that no action was ever taken upon it, nor any course of treatment pursued in respect to the alleged adopted son, different from that which would have prevailed if no adoption had been set up, then there is no repute, and the longer the time during which such a state of things lasts the greater is the evidence against the adoption.

Where adoption admittedly invalid.

Secondly, such repute can have no effect whatever when the admitted facts show that there has been no valid adoption, e.g., in the case of the adoption of a sister's son by a Brahman, or of a son by a man who had one living. But there might be facts, or a course of dealing which, though they could not render the adoption valid, would prevent certain persons from disputing it. A bar of this sort would arise in two ways: (1) by way of estoppel; (2) by way of the Statute of Limitations.

(v) Rajendro Nath v. Jojendro Nath, 14 M. I. A., 67; S. C., 15 Suth. (P. C.), 41; S. C., 7 B. L. R., 216; Anandrav Sivaji v. Ganesh Eshvant, 7 Bom. H. C., Appx. 33.

Effect of acquiescence.

§ 160. FIRST.—A merely passive acquiescence by one person in an infringement of his rights by another person, or in an assertion of an adverse right by another person, will not prevent the former from afterwards maintaining his own strictly legal right in a Court of law, provided he does so within the period of limitation fixed by the law. The reason is that the law gives him a specified period during which he may, if he choose, submit with impunity to an encroachment on his rights, and there is nothing inequitable in his availing himself of this period. But it is different if his acquiescence amounts to an active consent to conduct on the part of another of which he might justly complain. If by his own behaviour he encourages another to believe that he has not the right which he really possesses, or that he has waived that right; or if by representations, or acts, he induces another to enter upon a course which he would not otherwise have entered on, or leads him to believe that he may enter on that course with safety, then he will not afterwards be allowed to assert any rights which are inconsistent with, or infringed upon by, that new state of things which he himself has been influential in bringing about. And this is equally so whether the right he is asserting is a legal, or an equitable, right. For it would be unjust that after he had by his own conduct induced another to alter his position, he should afterwards be allowed to complain of the very thing which he had himself brought about (w). This doctrine has been applied in India to cases of invalid adoption. In one, the adoption, being that of a sister's son by a Brahman, was held to be absolutely invalid. In another, in Western India, being the case of a Brahman adopted after upanayana and marriage, the Court declined to decide the question of invalidity. In both cases they were of opinion that the objecting party was estopped from disputing the adoption, since he had himself not only acquiesced in it, but in one case had encouraged it, and concurred in it, at the time it took place; and in another had, by treating the adopted son as a member of the family, induced him to abandon the right in his natural family which he might otherwise have claimed (x). The law of estoppel in India now rests on the Evidence Act, I of 1872, s. 115, as to which the Judicial Committee say (y): "the section of the Evidence Act by which the question must be determined does not make it a condition of estoppel resulting that the person, who by his declaration or act has induced the belief on which another has acted, was either committing or seeking to commit a fraud, or that he was acting with a full knowledge of the circumstances, and under no mistake of apprehension." "What the law and the Indian statute mainly regard is the position of the person who was induced to act; and the principle on which the law and the statute rest is, that it would be most inequitable and unjust to him that if another, by a representation made, or by conduct amounting to a representation, has induced him to act as he would not otherwise have done, the person who made the representation should be allowed to deny or repudiate the effect of his former statement, to the loss and injury of the person who acted on it. If the person who made the statement did so without full knowledge or under error, sibi imputet. It may in the result be unfortunate for him, but it would be unjust, even though he acted under error, to throw the consequences on the person who believed his statement, and acted on it as it was intended he should do." Nor does there seem to be any reason why this doctrine should be limited to cases where the adoption has been acted on for such a period as makes it final and irrevocable as regards the adoptee (z). Even if the invalidity of the adoption was such that the person adopted was not legally excluded from his natural family, he would necessarily be driven to legal proceedings to affect his return into it; he might be met by the Statute of Limitations, and so completely defeated; or might find that from change of circumstances his position, when restored to his natural family, was very different from what it would have been if he had never left it (a). It must, however, be remembered that estoppel is purely personal, and that it cannot affect any one who claims by an independent title, and who is not bound by the acts of the person estopped (b).

(w) Rama Rau v. Raja Rau, 2 Mad. H. C., 114; Peddamuthulaty v. N. Timma Reddy, ib 270; Rajan v. Basuva Chetti, ib 428, where the English cases are examined, and the distinction between legal and equitable rights and the mode in which they are barred, is pointed out; Taruck Chunder v. Huro Sunkur, 22 Suth., 267; Mohori Bibee v. Dharmodas, 30 I. A., 114; Narsingdas v. Rahimabai, 28 Bom., 440.

(x) Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan, 7 Mad. H. C., 250; Sadashiv v. Hari Moreshwar, 11 Bom. H. C., 190; Ravji Venayakrav v. Lakshmi Bai, 11 Bom., 381, 396; Kannamal v. Verasami, 15 Mad., 486; Santappayya v. Rangappayya, 18 Mad., 397, 54; see Sukhbasi v. Guman, 2 All., 366, where it is not clear whether the Court meant to lay down that a valid adoption once made could not be cancelled, or that a person, who had once deliberately made an adoption, was estopped from asserting that it was originally invalid. In Kuverji v. Babai, 19 Bom., 374, the Court seemed to think that no change of position had been produced by the acts of the widows in putting forward an adoption.

(y) Sarit Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, 19 I. A., 203, p. 215; S. C., 20 Cal., 206, overruling Ganga Sahai v. Hira Singh, 2 All., 809, and Vishnu and Krishnan, 7 Mad., 3. See also Mohori Bibi v. Dharmodas, 30 I. A., 114; S. C., 30 Cal., 539.

§ 161. SECONDLY.—The Statute of Limitations will also be a bar in some cases to an attempt to set aside a disputed adoption, that is, it will bar a suit to recover property held under colour of an adoption. The important question here will be, from what time does the statute run? The answer will be, from the time the party seeking to set it aside is injuriously affected by it. Where a person would be entitled to immediate possession, but for the intervention of one claiming as adopted son, of course the statute must run at the very latest from the time at which the title to possession accrues; because from this time, at all events, the possession of the adopted son must be adverse (c). But there are cases of greater difficulty, where an adopted son is in possession, but the person whose rights would be affected by the adoption is a reversioner, who is not entitled to immediate possession.

(z) See a case in which such a view was, I think, erroneously laid down. Parvatibayamma v. Rama Krishna, 18 Mad., 145.

(a) See per cur., Rajendro Nath v. Jogendro Nath, 14 M. I. A., 77; S. C., 15 Suth. (P. C.), 41; S. C., 7 B. L. R., 216.

(b) Lala Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, 14 Cal., 401, 19 I. A., pp. 209—212.

(c) Malapa v. Narasama, 17 Mysore, 150.

An instance of this sort is the case of an adoption by a widow who is in as heir to her husband.

time from which it runs.

§ 162. On this point there was a direct conflict of authority. In several cases previous to 1869 it was held that the statute ran from the time at which the adopted son was put in possession as such, with the cognisance of those whose rights would be affected by his adoption, and in such a public manner as to call upon them to defend their rights (d). The whole series of authorities, however, was reviewed in a case which was referred to the decision of the Full Bench of the High Court of Bengal. There the ancestor died leaving a widow, who adopted in 1824, and survived him till 1861. In 1866 the suit was commenced by the daughter's son of the ancestor, who claimed the property, alleging that the adoption was invalid. It was admitted that the adopted son and his son, the then defendant, had been in possession by virtue of the adoption since 1824. The plaintiff's suit was dismissed as barred by limitation. But this decision was reversed by the Full Bench, who held that the statute did not begin to run till the death of the widow (e). That decision was given under the Limitation Act XIV of 1859. Act IX of 1871, Sched. II, contained the following provision Art. 129: "To establish or set aside an adoption—twelve years from the date of the adoption, or (at the option of the plaintiff) the date of the death of the adoptive father." A suit was brought to recover property held adversely to the claimant by a person who had been admittedly adopted by the widow of the last male holder. Much more than twelve years had elapsed since the death of the husband, or since the adoption, but much less since the death of the widow. The adopted son had admittedly been placed in open adverse possession more than twelve years before suit and had been recognized by the plaintiffs themselves as legally in possession in such capacity. The plaintiffs contended that they were entitled to sue for possession within twelve years of the death of the widow, exactly as if she had made an alienation to the defendant. The latter contended that the suit was barred under Art. 129, inasmuch as the plaintiff could not recover without setting aside the adoption, and in fact the only issue recorded was as to its validity. The Judicial Committee, reversing the judgment of the Bengal High Court, held that the suit was barred, as the expression to "set aside an adoption" had been for many years applied in the ordinary language of Indian lawyers to proceedings which bring the validity of an alleged adoption under question, and applied indiscriminately to suits for possession of land and to suits of a declaratory nature. The present Limitation Act XV of 1877, § 118 provides a period of six years, for a suit "to obtain a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid, or never in fact took place," the statute to run from the time "when the alleged adoption became known to the plaintiff." Their Lordships declined to say whether the alteration of language in the later Act denoted a change of policy, or how much change of law it affected. They proceeded, however, to express themselves strongly against the probability that the same statute would apply two different periods of limitation for a suit declaring the invalidity of an adoption, and a suit to recover possession of land founded on such invalidity (f). In a later case upon the same statute, where the suit was also to recover possession against a person holding under an invalid adoption, and where it had been argued ineffectually that the suit was governed by Act XV of 1877, Art. 118, and not by Art. 129 of Act IX of 1871, the Judicial Committee said: "It seems to be more than doubtful whether, if these were the words of the statute applicable to the case, the plaintiff would thereby take any advantage (g).

(d) Bhyrub Chunder v. Kalee Kishwur, S. D. of 1850, 369, followed in various other cases which were examined in the one next cited.

(e) Srinath Gangopadhya v. Mahes Chandra, 4 B. L. R. (F. B.), 3; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 14; sub nomine, Sreenath Gangooly v. Mohesh Chunder.

(f) Jagadamba Chowdhurani v. Dakhina Mohun, 13 I. A., 84, 94,—explaining Raj Bahadur v. Achumbit Lal, 6 I. A., 110; foll'd. per cur., Malkarjun v. Narhar, 27 I. A., p. 230; S. C., 25 Bom., p. 352.

(g) Mohesh Narain v. Taruck Nath, 20 I. A., 30, at p. 37; S. C., 20 Cal., 487.

Suits under Act
XV of 1877.

§ 163. The only case in which the effect of Art. 118 of Act XV of 1877 in a suit for possession of property has arisen before the Privy Council was that of Luchman Lal v. Kanhya Lal (h). There the plaintiff sued after the death of the widow for a declaration of her rights and for possession of the husband's estate, notwithstanding an adoption by the widow. The argument rested upon Art. 118, which was assumed to govern the case. It was held, however, to be inapplicable, first, because the widow had adopted to herself and not to her husband; and, secondly, because the plaintiff was not shown to have had knowledge of the adoption within six years of the suit. No argument was raised as to whether Art. 118, or Art. 141 ought to be applied. In a Madras case (i) a widow sued for possession of her husband's property as against a son alleged to have adopted by him. The husband died in 1884. The adoption came to the knowledge of the widow in 1885, and the suit was begun in 1893. The defence was limitation under Art. 118. The High Court adopted the views of the Privy Council as laid down in 13 and 20 I. A., and decided that Arts. 129 of the Act of 1871 and 118 of the Act of 1877 meant exactly the same thing, and should be construed in the same way. On the other hand, in the case of suits brought by reversioners for possession of property simply, or for a declaration that an adoption was invalid followed by a prayer for possession, the Courts of Allahabad and Calcutta have held that Art. 118 was intended only to apply to a suit for a declaration of rights, and that the failure to bring such a suit within six years was no bar to a suit for possession within twelve years under Arts. 140 and 141 (k). The High Court of Bombay has varied in its decisions. It first ruled in accordance with the last named Courts in the case of Fannyamma v.

(h) 22 I. A., 51; S. C., 22 Cal., 609.

(i) Parvathe v. Saminatha, 20 Mad., 40; folld. Ayyadurai v. Solai, 24 Mad., 405; Ratnamasari v. Akilandammal, 26 Mad., 291.

(k) Basdeo Gopal, 8 All., 644; Natthu Singh v. Gulab Singh, 17 All., 167; Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, 14 Cal., 401; Ramchandra Mukerjee v. Ranjit Singh, 27 Cal., 242.

PARA. 163.]

Manjaya (l), but this decision was overruled by a Full Bench of the same Court in Strinivas v. Hanmant (m), where the rule was laid down as follows by Tyabji, J.: "Article 118 applies to every suit where the validity of the defendant's adoption is the substantial question in dispute, whether such question is raised by the plaintiff in the first instance, or arises in consequence of the defendant setting up his own adoption, as a bar to the plaintiff's success. Article 141 applies to the ordinary simple case of a reversioner, where the validity of the adoption is not the substantial point in dispute, or where the plaintiff can succeed without impugning the validity of the plaintiff's adoption."

Exactly the same question arises where the suit is by one claiming as adopted son. Art. 119 fixes a limit of six years to a suit "to obtain a declaration that an adoption is valid." The period beginning to run from the time "when the rights of the adopted son as such are interfered with." There the Courts of Bombay and Madras hold that where the plaintiff has no title on which he can recover possession except by establishing his adoption Art. 119 applies, even though he sues in form for recovery of land, and not for a declaration that his adoption was valid (n). The Courts of Allahabad and Calcutta hold that Art. 119 has no application to a possessory suit, even though it involves and requires a decision as to the validity of an adoption (o). It is curious that a question on which authority in India is so evenly balanced has never been referred to the Court of Final Appeal.

It may be necessary to remark, that neither the law of Estoppel nor the Statute of Limitations can make a person an adopted son if he is not one. They can secure him in the possession of certain rights, which would be his

(l) 21 Bom., 159.

(m) 24 Bom., 260, p. 266; folld. Ramchandra v. Narayan, 27 Bom., 614.

(n) Gangabai v. Tarabai, 26 Bom., 720; Ratnamasari v. Akilandammal, 26 Mad., 291, diss. Bhashyam Iyengar, J.

(o) Lali v. Murlidhar, 24 All., 195; Ohandania v. Sulig Ram, 26 All., 40; Jagannath Prasad v. Ranjit Singh, 25 Cal., 354.

Creates right not status.

if he were adopted, by shutting the mouths of particular people, if they propose to deny his adoption; or, by stopping short any suit which might be brought to eject him from his position as adopted. But if it becomes necessary for the person who alleges himself to have been adopted, to prefer a suit to enforce rights of which he is not in possession, he would be compelled strictly to prove the validity of his adoption, as against all persons but the special individuals who were precluded from disputing it.

Results of adoption.

§ 164. SIXTH.—THE RESULT OF ADOPTION may be stated generally to be, that it transfers the adopted son out of his natural family into the adopting family, so far as regards all rights of inheritance, and the duties and obligations connected therewith. But it does not obliterate the tie of blood, or the disabilities arising from it. Therefore, an adopted son is just as much incapacitated from marrying in his natural family as if he had never left it. Nor can he himself adopt a person out of his natural family, whom he could not have adopted if he had remained in it (§ 172).

Questions of inheritance arise, first: where there is only an adopted son; secondly, where there is also legitimate issue of the adoptive father. Under the first head, succession is either to the paternal line, lineally or collaterally, or to the maternal line.

Lineal succession.

§ 165. Where there is only an adopted son, properly constituted, he is beyond all doubt entitled to inherit to his adoptive father, and to the father and grandfather and other more distant lineal ancestors of such adoptive father, just as if he was his natural-born son (p). But there has been considerable discussion as to whether he was entitled to inherit to collaterals. A reference to the table of sonship (q) will show that eight of the fourteen authorities referred to place the adopted son beyond the sixth in number. Now, all of these say that the first six sons inherit to the father, and to collaterals; the last six only to the father. From this it is argued by those who rely on the eight, that he only succeeds lineally; by those who rely on the remaining six, that he inherits collaterally also. The real fact, of course, is that the two sets of authorities represent different historical periods of the law of adoption; the former relating to a period when the adopted son had not obtained the full rights which he was recognized as possessing at a later period. The Dattaka Chandrika as usual tries to make all the passages harmonise by saying: "In the same manner the doctrine of one holy saint that the son given is an heir to kinsmen—and that of another that he is not such heir—are to be reconciled by referring to the distinction of his being endowed with good qualities or otherwise," and concludes the controversy by saying that wherever a legitimate son would succeed to the estate of a brother or other kinsmen, the adopted son will succeed in the absence of such legitimate son (r). The Mitakshara follows Manu, who places the adopted among the first class of sons, and, of course, makes him a general and not merely a special heir, while it explains away the conflicting texts as being founded on the difference of good and bad qualities (s). The Daya Bhaga, on the other hand, follows Devala, who has been supposed to make the adopted son only heir to his father, and not to collaterals (t). But it seems that is a misapprehension. Devala no doubt enumerates the different sons so as to bring in the adopted son as ninth. But then he goes on, "These twelve sons have been propounded for the purpose of offspring, being sons begotten by a man himself, Collateral succession.

(p) Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 3, 8; Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 26, iii., § 20; Gourbullub v. Jaggenoth, F. MacN., 159; Mokundo v. Bykunt, 6 Cal., 289. Sir F. MacNaghten was of opinion that an adopted son in Bengal was even in a better position than a natural-born son, as having an indefensible right to his father's estate, which a natural-born son would not have. F. MacN., 157, 228. This opinion was rejected by the Privy Council in the Pittapur Case, 26 I. A., 83; S. C., 22 Mad., 383.

(q) Ante § 68.

(s) Mitakshara, i., 11, § 30–34.

(r) Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 22–24.

(t) Daya Bhaga, x., § 7, 8.

or procreated by another man, or received for adoption, or voluntarily given. Among these the first six are heirs of kinsmen, and the other six inherit only from the father." Now, if the words "the first six" refer, not to the original enumeration, but to the new arrangement by classes, the adopted son comes within the first six (u). Jagannatha, after appearing to rest the claim of an adopted son to collateral succession upon endowment with transcendent good qualities, finally states the present practice to be "for a son given in adoption, who performs the acts prescribed to his class, to take the inheritance of his paternal uncles and the rest" (v). This is also the opinion of Sir F. MacNaghten, of Mr. W. MacNaghten, of Sir Thomas Strange, and of Mr. Sutherland (w). The right has also been affirmed by express decision. In two cases, the right of an adopted son to succeed to another adopted son was declared (x). In other cases, the adopted son was held entitled to share an estate of his adoptive father's brother (y). In a later case, the adoptive son was held entitled to share in the property of one who was first cousin to his grandfather by adoption. And he takes exactly the same share as a legitimate son, when he is sharing with all other heirs than the legitimate son of his adoptive father (z). And so do his descendants, whether male or female (a). In the latest case upon the point, the right of an adopted son was maintained to succeed to all his adoptive father's sapindas, whether the latter were

(u) See D. Bh., x., 7, note, per curiam; Puddo Kumaree v. Juggut Kishore, 5 Cal., 630.

(v) 3 Dig., 270, 272; F. MacN., 162.

(w) F. MacN., 128, 132; 1 W. MacN., 78; 2 W. MacN., 187; 1 Stra. H. L., 97; 2 Stra. H. L., 116; Suth. Syn., 668, 677.

(x) Shamchunder v. Narayni, 1 S. D., 209 (279); affirmed 3 Kn., 55. (So much of this decision has allowed a second adoption to take place during the life of the first adopted son must be taken as bad. But a note states that it was considered as settling the right of an adopted son to inherit from the collaterals of his adoptive father.) Gourhurree v. Mt. Rutnasuree, 6 S. D., 203 (250); Joy Chundro v. Bhyrub Chundro, S. D. of 1849, 461; see also the Judgment of Hobhouse, J., in the Full Bench case of Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal, 5 B. I. R., 15; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49.

(y) Lokenath v. Shamasoonduree, S. D. of 1858, 1863; Kishenath v. Hurreegobind, S. D. of 1859, 18; Gooroopershad v. Rasbehary, S. D. of 1860, i., 411.

(z) Taramohun v. Kripa Moyee, 9 Suth., 423.

(a) S. D. of 1858, 1863; of 1859, 18.

related to the former through males only or through females (b).

§ 166. Another question as to which there was, till Succession ex parte materná. lately, a singular conflict of opinion, is as to the right of an adopted son to succeed to the family of his adoptive father's wife, or wives. Primá facie one would imagine that he must necessarily do so. The theory of adoption is that it makes the son adopted to all intents and purposes the son of his father, as completely as if he had begotten him in lawful wedlock. The authors of the Dattaka Chandrika and Dattaka Mimamsa seem to lay the point down with the most perfect clearness. The former states that "where there may be a diversity of mothers, the sires of the natural mothers are first designated by a son, who is son to two fathers, at the funeral repast in honour of the maternal grandsires; subsequently the sires of her who is the adoptive mother. But the absolutely adopted son presents oblations to the father and to the other ancestors of his adoptive mother only; for he is capable of performing the funeral rites of that mother only" (c). And the latter says: "The forefathers of the adoptive mother only are also the maternal grandsires of sons given and the rest; for the rule regarding the paternal is equally applicable to the maternal grandsires of adopted sons (d); and in an earlier chapter (I, § 22) Nanda Pandita says: "In consequence of the superiority of the husband, by his mere act of adoption, the filiation of the adopted, as son of the wife, is complete in the same manner as her property in any other thing accepted by her husband." So Mr. Sutherland states as the effect of these passages that—"He likewise represents the real legitimate son in relationship to his adoptive mother, whose ancestors are his maternal grandsires" (e). To the same effect is a futwah recorded by Mr. MacNaghten,

(b) Puddo Kumaree v. Juggut Kishore, 5 Cal., 615, affd. sub nomine Pudna Coomari v. Court of Wards, in Privy Council, 8 I. A., 229; S. C., 8 Cal., 302.

(c) Dattaka Chandrika, iii., § 16, 17.

(d) Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 50—52.

(e) Suth. Syn., 668.

Decisions.

where the adopted son of a sister was held to be an heir to that sister's brother, that is to say, he inherited to his adoptive mother's family (f). On the other hand, Mr. W. MacNaghten himself decides against the right of an adopted son to succeed to property, which the wife of the adopting father had received from her relations. For this he refers to a case in Bengal, where he says the point was determined (g). This, however, was a mistake, as has been repeatedly pointed out. There was no decision of the Sudder Court such as Mr. MacNaghten supposed, but there was an unnecessary opinion of the pundits, which itself rested only upon an irrelevant text of the Daya Bhaga. Upon this supposed decision, however, two express rulings, negating the right of the adopted son to succeed to property ex parte maternâ, were subsequently given in Bengal and in Madras (h). Yet, in direct conflict with the only principle which could have justified such a decision, it was settled that the next-of-kin of an adoptive mother would be the heirs of her adopted son (i) and that an adopted son would succeed to the stridhanum of his adoptive mother (k). Finally it was decided by the Allahabad High Court that an adopted son had all the rights of a natural-born son in the maternal line as well as in the paternal line, and would therefore succeed to property which his adoptive mother had inherited from her father (l). This decision was followed by the High Court of Bengal in a case where the plaintiff claimed property which had devolved upon the son of A, by virtue of his adoption by the daughter of A. In their judgment the former Bengal decision and that which followed it in Madras were formally over-ruled, and the general principle laid down by the Allahabad High Court was approved and adopted to the fullest

(f) 2 W. MacN., 86.

(g) 1 W. MacN., 78, citing Gunga Mya v. Kishen Kishore, 3 S. D., 128 (170).

(h) Marum Moer v. Bejoy, Suth. Sp. No. 121; Chinna Ramakristna v. Minachi, 7 Mad. H. C., 245.

(i) Gunga Persad v. Brojessaree, S. D. of 1859, 1091.

(k) Teen Gowrie v. Dinonath, 3 Suth., 49 and so laid down by the pundits in Bombay, W. & B., 513.

(l) Sham Kuar v. Gaya, 1 All., 256.

extent. This ruling was supported on appeal by the Judicial Committee, and has finally settled a controversy which had lasted for upwards of eighty years (m). In conformity with it, the adopted son of a daughter has been held to share equally with the natural-born son of another daughter the inheritance left by his maternal grandfather (n).

§ 167. Another question, which has only lately received a final decision, is that of the rights inter se of the wives or widows of a person to whom an adoption has been made to succeed to the property of the adopted son. This question cannot be settled by any analogy drawn from the text of Manu. "If among all the wives of the same husband, one bring forth a male child, Manu has declared them all, by means of that son, to be mothers of male issue" (o). There is a natural and insuperable distinction, which no fiction can destroy, between an actual mother and a stepmother, and accordingly the former inherits to her son where the other does not (p). Where, however, the adoption is made by the husband himself, and nothing is done to give one wife pre-eminence over the others, there seems to be no ground of distinction between them. The ceremonial of adoption utterly ignores the wife, who need not be present and to whom no part is assigned if she is present (q). She becomes the mother of the adopted son by the mere fact of his adoption (r). Neither the Dattaka Chandrika nor the Dattaka Mimamsa allude to the questions that may arise from a plurality of wives. Jagannatha recognises the difficulty, but does not settle it (s). Where the succession is to an impartible property, the senior widow would of course take just as she would if the succession were to her husband (t); but where the property was partible the rights of all would primâ facie be

(m) Uma Sunker v. Kati Komul, 6 Cal., 256; aff'd. 10 I. A., 138; S. C., 10 Cal., 232.

(n) Surjokant Nundi v. Mohesh Chunder, 9 Cal., 70.

(o) ix., 183.

(p) Post § 566.

(r) D. M., I, 22.

(q) Baudh., vii., 5.

(s) 3 Dig., 253.

(t) Annapurnai Nachiar v. Forbes, 26 I. A., 246; S. C., 23 Mad., 1.

Succession of wives of adopter to adopted son.

equal. This was the view taken by Mr. W. MacNaghten (u), though his opinion to the full extent to which it was pushed, has lately been over-ruled by the Privy Council. It is supported by the opinion of the pundit in a Bengal case, where he says that, even in the case of an adoption by one of several widows, the child becomes the child of all three (v). There is, however, a very obvious distinction in a case where the adoption is made not by the husband, but by his widow, acting under his authority, express or implied. In such a case, though she only represents her husband, the act is her own. She cannot be compelled to perform it; and when performing it she takes his place in the ceremonial, and is the person who actually receives the child. Accordingly the pundit, in the case last quoted, said that, if the adopted boy died, the widow adopting him will be called the mother, and the others the stepmothers (w). The principle was followed in another case to the extent of holding that where one of several widows made an adoption not only would she alone inherit to her adopted son, but on her death the estate would pass, not to the other widow, but to the collateral next in the order of succession (x). A less obvious distinction is the case of a husband who, while himself making the adoption, professes to make it in conjunction with one of several wives specially selected to assume the part of the mother. In such a case, where the wife so selected was the second wife of the adopter, and the adoptive mother died before the adopted son, it was held that on his death the eldest widow was not his heir as mother, being only a step-mother, and that the succession went to a nephew of the husband (y). This decision was followed by the Judicial Committee on an appeal from Madras. There the (u) 1 W. MacN., Preliminary Remarks, x.

(v) Degambery v. Taramony, F. MacN., Appx., xi.

(w) Ib. ub., Sup. F. MacN., 171; W. & B., 1181.

(x) 1 W. MacN., II, 62.

(y) Kashishwree Debia v. Greesh Chunder, W. R., Jan.—July, 1864, 71.

property was impartible. The husband had made an adoption in conjunction with his second wife, the first wife having ceased to live with him. After his death the adopted son succeeded, and on his death the succession to him was disputed by the widows, one claiming as senior widow, the other as adoptive mother. The Madras Court decided in favour of the latter, and this decision was affirmed by the Privy Council (z). They said: "it seems not to be doubted that a man may authorise a single one of several wives to adopt after his death, or that she would on adoption stand in the place of this natural mother. If he can do that, it would be very capricious to deny him the power of selecting a single wife to join with him in his lifetime in adopting a boy with the same effect on her relations with that boy. It is true that some rules of Hindu Law, resting perhaps on religious tenets or ancient customs, appear to be quite arbitrary; but when this Board is asked to affirm a rule of that nature they require some cogent authority for it. It certainly is a reasonable law that the head of a family should be able to take action likely to prevent disputes between his widows relative to adoption and the consequences of it. To unite one's wife with himself in adopting is one way; and it is satisfactory to find that besides the one direct judicial decision there is so much reason and opinion in its favour, and so little against it."

§ 167A. The question of succession as between a dwyamushyayana and his natural mother seems to have arisen for the first time in the year 1904. Raghunandan had been adopted in that form by a special agreement between the natural and adopting fathers, who were distant relations, that he should remain the sons of both. He succeeded to the estate of the adopter, and subsequently died leaving only a widow, on whose death the succession was claimed by his natural mother, and by the (z) Annapurnai Nachiar v. Forbes, 18 Mad., 277, affd. 26 I. A., 246; S. C., 25 Mad., 1.

Succession ex parte materna dwyamushyayana.

grandnephew of the adoptive father. It was admitted that but for the special form of adoption the male claimant would succeed. It was held by the Allahabad High Court that by virtue of the special agreement the relationship of the natural mother was unaffected by the adoption, and therefore her right of succession (a). If she had died leaving property it follows that Raghunandan might have been her heir. If the adoptive mother had survived him apparently both mothers would have been co-heiresses.

After-born legitimate son.

§ 168. Cases where a legitimate and an adopted son exist together can only occur lawfully, where a legitimate son has been born after an adoption. The adoption of a son by one who had male issue would be absolutely invalid (§ 108), and the son so adopted would be entitled to no share whatever. It may be suggested, on the authority of a text ascribed to Manu, that he would be entitled to have his marriage ceremony performed, which I suppose includes maintenance also. But the text, if in force at all at present, seems to me to relate rather to informal than to wholly invalid adoptions, which would create no change of status (b). Where, however, a legitimate son is born after an adoption, which was valid when it took place, the latter is entitled to share along with the legitimate son, taking a portion which is sometimes spoken of as being one-fourth, and sometimes as being one-third of that of the after-born son (c). Dr. Wilson says that the variance is only apparent, and that all the texts mean the same thing, viz., that the property should be divided into four shares, of which the adopted son gets one. That is to say, he gets one-fourth of the whole, or one-third of the portion of the natural-born son (d). Whatever may have been the original meaning of the texts, a difference of usage seems to have sprung up,

(a) Behari Lal v. Shib Lal, 26 All., 472.

(b) Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 1, 2; Dattaka Chandrika, vi., § 3.

(c) Dattaka Mimamsa, x., § 1; Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 16, 17; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 24, 25; Daya Bhaga, x., § 9; 3 Dig., 154, 179, 290; V. May., iv., 5, § 25; 2 W. MacN., 184.

(d) Wilson's Works, v., 52.

according to which the adopted son takes one-third of the whole in Bengal, and one-fourth of the whole in other Provinces which follow Benares law (e). The Madras High Court, however, have decided on the authority of the Sarasvati-Vilasa, that the fourth which he is to take is not a fourth of the whole, but a fourth of the share taken by the legitimate son. Consequently, the estate would be divided into five shares, of which he would take one, and the legitimate son the remainder. A similar construction has been put upon the texts in Bombay (f). Nanda Pandita suggests a further explanation, that he is to take a quarter share; i.e., a fourth of what he would have taken as a legitimate son; that is to say, a fourth of one-half, or one-eighth (g). Where there are several after-born sons, of course the shares will vary according to the principle adopted. Supposing there were two legitimate sons, then, upon the principle laid down by Mr. MacNaghten, the estate would be divided into seven shares in Benares, and into five shares in Bengal. According to the Sarasvati-Vilasa it would be divided into nine shares, the adopted son taking one share in each case. According to Nanda Pandita he would take one-twelfth (h). Among various castes in Western India the rights of the adopted son vary from one-half, one-third, and one-fourth to next to nothing, the adoptive father being at liberty, on the birth of a legitimate son, to give him a present and turn him adrift (i).

Madras.

Bombay.

According to a text of Vridha Gautama, an adopted and an after-born son share equally. This text is said, in the Dattaka Chandrika, to apply only to Sudras, and in the Dattaka Mimamsa it is explained away altogether, as referring to an after-born son destitute of good qualities.

Sudras.

(e) D. K. S., vii., § 23; 1 W. MacN., 70; 2 W. MacN., 184; F. MacN., 137; Taramohun v. Kripa Moyee, 9 Suth., 423; 1 Str. H. L., 99, and so amongst the Jains; Rukhal v. Chunilal, 16 Bom., 347.

(f) Ayyavu v. Niladatchi, 1 Mad H. C., 45; W. & B., 373; Giriapa v. Ningapa, 17 Bom., 100.

(g) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 40; Suth. Syn., 678.

(h) F. MacN., 151; 1 MacN., 70; Jolly, Lect. 182.

(i) Steele, 47, 186.

The High Court of Madras, following Mr. W. MacNaghten and Sir Thomas Strange, say it is in force among all Sudras in Southern India, and M. Gibelin says it is the rule among all classes in Pondicherry. It is the rule still in Northern Ceylon. Baboo Samachurn says that in Bengal this rule only applies to the lower class of Sudras (k). The above rules all apply to partible property. It is stated by the Madras High Court that "the succession to impartible property devolves on the after-born son in preference to the adopted son, the reason being that the adopted son is a substitute for the aurasa son, and that, when the latter comes into existence, he excludes the substitute" (l).

Rights of adopted son on partition with collaterals.

§ 169. A curious question as to which there has been a decision in Calcutta (m), is, whether the inferiority of an adopted son for purposes of inheritance is limited to the case of the subsequent birth of natural sons to the adopting father, or whether it applies also for the benefit of the brothers of such adopting father and their issue. In the particular case the pedigree was as follows:—

The family was governed by Mitakshara law. The plaintiff sued for a partition after the deaths of A, B, C, and D. In the Original and Appellate Courts the only points taken were to establish that he was not entitled to any share. The defendants being defeated in this contention urged on appeal to the High Court that his share would not be one-third but one-sixth. The High Court (k) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 43; Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 32; 1 Stra. H. L., 99; 1 W. MacN., 70, n.; 1 Gib., 82; Thesawaleme, ii., § 2; V. Darp., 979; Raja v. Subbaraya, 7 Mad., 253. A son-in-law affiliated in the Illatom form, which is in use in some of the Telugu-speaking districts of Madras takes an equal share with a natural-born son. Hanumantamma v. Rami Reddi, 4 Mad., 272.

(l) Ramasami Ramaya v. Sundaralingasami, 17 Mad., p. 435.

(m) Raghubanand Doss v. Sadhu Churn, 4 Cal., 425.

affirmed this view, relying upon the Dattaka Chandrika, V., 24 & 25. Markby, J., pointed out that Mr. Sutherland's translation of s. 24 omitted some lines, and that the two sections really ran as follows:—"24. 'Therefore by the same relationship of brother and so forth, in virtue of which the real legitimate son would succeed to the estate of a brother or other kinsman, the adopted son of the same description obtains his due share. And in the event of the ancestor having other sons, a grandson by adoption whose father is dead obtains the share of an adopted son. Where such son may not exist, the adopted son takes the whole estate even.' The words in italics are omitted by Mr. Sutherland.

"There is no dispute between the parties to this appeal that this emendation of Mr. Sutherland's translation ought to be made.

"Paragraph 25 is as follows:—'Since it is a restrictive rule that a grandson succeeds to the appropriate share of his own father, the son given, where his adopter is the real legitimate son of the paternal grandfather, is entitled to an equal share even with a paternal uncle, who is also such description of son: therefore a grandson who is an adopted son may (in all cases) inherit an equal share even with an uncle. This must not be alleged (as a general rule). For there would be this discrepancy where the father of the grandson were an adopted son, he would receive a fourth share; but the grandson, if he were such son (of him) would receive an equal share (with an uncle in the heritage of the grandfather) and accordingly, whatever share may be established by law for a father of the same description as himself, to such appropriate share of his father does the individual in question (viz., the adopted son of one adopted) succeed. Thus, what had been advanced only is correct. The same rule is to be applied by inference to the great-grandson also.' The words, viz., 'the adopted son of one adopted' do not occur in the original. But even if we strike out these words, and take the two paragraphs according to their more correct version, they clearly enunciate that, upon partition, an adopted son and the adopted son of a natural son stand exactly in the same position, and that each takes only the share proper for an adopted son,—i.e., half of the share which he would have taken had he been a natural son."

The learned Judge then proceeded to deal with the objection, that under Mitakshara law the plaintiff's adoptive father D acquired by birth a vested interest in one-third of the estate, and that the whole of this interest descended to the plaintiff by right of representation. This he answered by pointing out (p. 430), that under Mitakshara law no definite share vested in any member of the family so long as it remained joint, and that the share of each must be determined by the state of the family, and the position of each individual member at the time of partition. If then the sole adopted son of a natural-born son was only entitled to half the share that a natural-born son of the same father would have been entitled to, it made no difference that his father, if he had sought for a partition earlier, would have obtained twice that share, and that the whole share so obtained would have descended to him. It came back again to the same question, what were his own personal rights at the time of partition.

Case discussed.

§ 170. The text of Vasishtha upon which all the authorities rely is as follows (XV., 9): "when a son has been adopted, if a legitimate son be afterwards born, the given son shares a fourth part." To which the author of the Dattaka Mimamsa adds (X., 1): "on the default of him he is entitled to the whole." That is to say, to the whole of the property of his adoptive parent. This is quite intelligible. An adopted son is a substitute for a natural son, and cannot come legally into existence if there is a natural son. But a man may adopt under the belief that he will never have a natural son, and find himself mistaken. Then justice is done by giving a larger share to the natural son, and a smaller to the son who would never have been adopted, if it could have been foreseen how matters would really have turned out. But is there anything in the wording or principle of the rule to suggest that a person who has become by adoption the sole son of his adopter shall have his rights in the family diminished, because other legitimate sons have been born, not to his adopter but to the brothers of that adopter? It is admitted that no authority can be found for such a position in the text of Vasishtha itself, or in any commentary except that of the Dattaka Chandrika as cited. But the latter seems to me to bear a very different interpretation. The clauses 24 and 25 relate to the general rights of all adopted sons, not to the special position of an adopted son where there are after-born legitimate sons of his adoptive parent. The author is commenting not only on the text of Vasishtha, but on texts of Manu and others, some of which lay down that an adopted son only inherits to lineals, others that he inherits to lineals and collaterals also. He reconciles these by the usual formula that a son with good qualities is meant in the latter case (§ 168). It seems to me that § 24 merely states the general principle that, however distant from the common ancestor, an adopted son has the full rights of an adopted son as such; not merely of an adopted son who is driven to share with legitimate sons. The commencement of § 25 lays down explicitly that the adopted son of one natural son inherits equally with the natural-born brother of such son. Then the author meets the question whether every grandson by adoption would inherit in the same manner. To this he answers, not necessarily. If an adopted son himself adopted, then his son could take no more than himself; i.e., if there were legitimate sons along with the first adopted son he himself would only take one-fourth, and therefore his son by adoption could take no more. Or as the Smriti Chandrika expresses it "the individual in question (an assumed grandson by adoption) will only take whatever share may be established for a father of the same description as himself" (a son by adoption). What share that is would depend upon whether legitimate sons were afterwards born to the first adopting father or common ancestor. If there were he would only take one-fourth, and his son, whether natural or adopted, could take no more.

Survivorship.

§ 171. When the legitimate and adopted son survive the father, and then the legitimate son dies without issue, it has been held in Madras that the adopted son takes the whole property by survivorship (n). Of course, it would be different in Bengal, if the legitimate son left a widow, daughter, etc.

Removal from natural family.

§ 172. By adoption the boy is completely removed from his natural family as regards all civil rights or obligations. He ceases to perform funeral ceremonies for those of his family for whom he would otherwise have offered oblations, and he loses all rights of inheritance as completely as if he had never been born (o). And, conversely, his natural family cannot inherit from him (p), nor is he liable for their debts (q). Of course, however, if the adopter was already a relation of the adoptee, the latter by adoption would simply alter his degree of relationship, and, as the son of his adopting father, would become the relative of his natural parents, and in this way mutual rights of inheritance might still exist. The rule is merely that he loses the rights which he possessed, quâ natural son. And the tie of blood, with its attendant disabilities, is never extinguished. Therefore, he cannot after adoption marry

(n) 1 Mad. H. C., 49, note.

(o) Manu, ix., 142; Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 6—8; Dattaka Chandrika, ii., § 18—20; Mitakshara, i., 11, § 32; V. May., iv., 5, § 21; see contra, 1 Gib., 95, as to Pondicherry. In parts of the Punjab the rights of the adopted son in his natural family take effect if his natural father dies without leaving legitimate sons. Punjab Customary Law, III, 83. A son-in-law, affiliated by the Custom of Ulatom which prevails among some classes of Sudras in Madras, does not lose his rights in his natural family. Balarami v. Pera, 6 Mad., 267; Hanumantamma v. Rami Reddi, 4 Mad., 272. An adoption made under the very lax customs of the sect of Gyavals in Gya does not deprive the person adopted of his rights in his natural family. Luchmun Lal v. Kanhya Lal, 22 I. A., 51; S. C., 22 Cal., 609.

(p) 1 W. MacN., 69; Strinivasa v. Kuppanayyengar, 1 Mad. H. C., 180; Muthayya v. Minakshi, 25 Mad., 394.

(q) Pranvullabh v. Deocristin, Bom. Sel. Rep., 4; Kasheepershad v. Bunseedhar, 4 N.-W. P. (S. D.), 843.

any one whom he could not have married before adoption (r). Nor can he adopt out of his own natural family a person whom, by reason of relationship, he could not have adopted had he remained in it (s). He is equally incompetent to marry within his adoptive family within the forbidden degrees (t).

§ 173. An exception to the rule that adoption severs a son from his natural family exists in the case of what is called a dwyamushyayana, or son of two fathers. This term has a two-fold acceptance. Originally it appears to have been applied to a son who was begotten by one man upon the wife of another, but for and on behalf of that other. He was held to be entitled to inherit in both families, and was bound to perform the funeral oblations of both his actual and his fictitious fathers (u). This is the meaning in which the term is used in the Mitakshara, but sons of this class are now obsolete (v). Another meaning is that of a son who has been adopted with an express or implied understanding that he is to be the son of both fathers. This again seems to take place under different circumstances. One is what is called the Anitya, or temporary adoption, where the boy is taken from a different gotra, after the tonsure has been performed in his natural family. He performs the ceremonies of both fathers, and inherits in both families, but his son returns to his original gotra (w). This form of adoption seems now to be obsolete. At all events I know of no decided case affirming its existence. Another case is that of an adoption by one brother of the son of another brother. He is already for certain purpose considered to be the son of his uncle. When he is the only son, the law appears to reconcile the Case of son of two fathers.

(r) Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 10; Dattaka Chandrika, iv., § 8; V. May., iv., 5, § 30.

(s) Moottia Moodelly v. Uppon, Mad. Dec. of 1858, p. 117.

(t) Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 25, 38.

(u) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 12; Narada, 13, § 23; Dattaka Chandrika, ii., § 35.

(v) Mitakshara, i., 10; 2 Stra. H. L., 82, 118.

(w) 2 Stra. H. L., 120; 1 W. MacN., 71; see futwah of Pandits in Shumshere v. Dilraj, 2 S. D., 169 (216); Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 41—43; Dattaka Chandrika, ii., § 37; Behari Lal v. Shib Lal, 26 All., 472.

conflicting principles that a man should not give away his only son, and that a brother's son should be adopted, by allowing the adoption, but requiring the boy so adopted to perform the ceremonies of both fathers, and admitting him to inherit to both in the absence of legitimate issue. It is stated by Mr. Strange in his Manual that the dwyamushyayana in this sense also is obsolete. And so it was laid down in one Madras case. But the weight of authority in opposition to that statement seems to be overwhelming (x). Among the Nambudri Brahmans of the West Coast (§ 44) the dwyamushyayana form prevails generally without any special circumstances, as the ordinary incident of an adoption (y).

After-born son.

§ 174. Where a legitimate son is born to the natural father of a dwyamushyayana, subsequently to the adoption, the latter takes half the share of the former; if, however, the legitimate son is born to the adopting father, the adopted son takes half the share which is prescribed by law for an adopted son, exclusively related to his adoptive father, where legitimate issue may be subsequently born to that person (z), that is half of one-fourth or one-third, according to the doctrines of different schools (§ 168). The Mayukha, however, seems only to allow him to inherit in the adoptive family, if there are legitimate sons subsequently born in both, and then gives him the share usual in such a case where the adoption has been in the ordinary form, that is, one-fourth or one-third (a). It lays down no rule for the case of legitimate sons arising in one family only.

(x) Strm. Man., § 99; Mad. Dec. of 1859, p. 81; Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 33; V. May., iv., 5, § 22, 25; Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 34—36, 47, 48; W. B., 898, and see authorities cited ante § 145. Mr. V. N. Mandlik says that, whatever the theory may be, such adoptions are in practice obsolete, p. 506. In the N.-W. Provinces, adoptions of this character are said to be very common, Jolly, Lect. 166. The proposition stated in the text was adopted by the Bombay Court in a recent case between Lingayets. Chimapa v. Basangavda, 21 Bom., 105; following the opinions of Judges of the same Court in a former case in the same Sect. Basava v. Lingangavda, 19 Bom., pp. 454, 466.

(y) 11 Mad., 167, 178.

(a) V. May., iv., 5, § 25.

(z) Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 33, 34.

§ 175. It is probable that the rule which deprived an adopted son of the right to inherit in his natural family originated, not from any fiction of a change of paternity, but simply from an equitable idea, that one who had been sent to seek his fortunes in another family, and whose services were lost to the family in which he was born, ought not to inherit in both. This is the view taken of the matter in the Punjab, where it is said that if the natural father dies without heirs, the village custom would be in favour of the child's double succession (b). In Pondicherry, a boy, notwithstanding adoption, preserves his rights of inheritance in his natural family, if he has not found a sufficient fortune in his acquired family, and in all cases if his natural father and brothers have died without issue. This doctrine, however, is based not upon any special usage, but upon the view which the French jurists have taken of the Hindu texts (c). The Thesawaleme merely states that "an adopted child, being thus brought up and instituted as an heir, loses all claim to the inheritance of his own parents, as he is no longer considered to belong to that family, so that he may not inherit from them." It is not stated whether his right would revive if there were no heirs in his natural family. But he only forfeits rights to the extent to which he acquires others; therefore, if his adoption is only by the husband, he continues to inherit to his natural mother; if it is only by the wife, he continues to inherit to his natural father (d).

§ 176. A question of very great importance, which seems plain enough in theory, but which appears to be still unsettled, is as to the effect of an invalid adoption. Prima facie one would imagine that it would confer no rights in the adoptive family, and take away no rights in the natural family. The claim to enforce rights in the (b) Punjab Cust., 81; Punjab Customary Law, III, 83.

(c) 1 Gib., 95, citing Dattaka Mimamsa, i., § 31, 32; vi., § 9; Mitakshara, i., 10, § 1, note, § 32, note.

(d) Thesawaleme, ii., § 2.

Origin of rule.

Effect of an invalid adoption.

former family, or to resist them in the latter, must depend upon a change of status, and if the adoption, upon which such change depended, were invalid, it would seem as if no change could have taken place. But there certainly is much authority the other way. I have already (§ 138) noticed the texts which award maintenance to a son adopted out of an inferior class, and suggested that they are merely a survival from a time when such adoptions were in fact valid, though less efficacious than others (e). A text is also ascribed to Manu which lays down that "He who adopts a son without observing the rules ordained, should make him a participator of the rites of marriage, not a sharer of wealth." This text seems to be interpreted as applying to a person who makes an adoption without observing the proper forms (f). Sir Thomas Strange cites these texts, as establishing that a person may be adopted under circumstances which will deprive him of his rights in one family, without entitling him to more than maintenance in the other. But he questions the proposition in a note, and refers to Mr. Sutherland as being of opinion that if the adoption were void the natural rights would remain (g). In one old case the pundits of the Sudder Court of Madras laid it down that an adoption of a married man over thirty years of age, and with three children, was invalid, but that he was entitled to maintenance in the family of his adopting father. The proposition was cited before the High Court, and approved of. The approval, however, was extra-judicial, as the High Court considered that they were bound by former decrees to treat the adoption as valid, and actually awarded the plaintiff his full rights as adopted son (h). In a later case, where a boy had been adopted by a widow without any authority, it was held that the adoption was wholly invalid, and gave the boy no right to maintenance. The (e) See per cur. Bawani v. Ambabay, 1 Mad. H. C., 367.

(f) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., § 45; Dattaka Chandrika, ii., § 17; vi., § 3.

(g) 1 Str. H. L., 82.

(h) Ayyavu v. Niladatchi, 1 Mad. H. C., 45.

Court said: "in reason and good sense it would hardly seem a matter of doubt that where no valid adoption, in other words, no adoption, has taken place, no claim of right in respect of the legal relationship of adoption can properly be enforced at law." The Court also expressed their opinion that the natural rights of the plaintiff remained quite unaffected (i).

§ 177. In Bengal the case has twice arisen incidentally, Bengal, though in neither instance in such a manner as to require a decision. In the first case, which was before the Supreme Court, Colville, C. J., said: "It has been said on one side and denied on the other (neither side producing either evidence or authority in support of their contention) that a Dattaka, or son given, would forfeit the right to inherit to his natural father, even though he might not, for want of sufficient power, have been duly adopted into the other family. This proposition seems to be contrary to reason, but for all that may be very good Hindu law. But from the enquiries we have made, we believe the true state of the law on the subject to be this. There may undoubtedly be cases in which a person, whose adoption proves invalid, may have forfeited his right to be regarded as a member of his natural family. In such a case some of the old texts speak of him as a slave, entitled only to maintenance in the family into which he was imperfectly adopted. But one very learned person has assured me that the impossibility of returning to his natural family depends not on the mere gift or even acceptance of a son, but on the degree in which the ceremonies of adoption have been performed; and that there is a difference in this respect between Brahmans and Sudras: a Brahman being unable to return to his natural family if he has received the Brahmanical thread in the other family; the Sudra, if not validly adopted, being able to return to his natural family at any time before his marriage in the other family.

Depends on performance of ceremonies.

(i) Bawani v. Ambabay, 1 Mad. H. C., 368. Approved by Westropp, C. J. Lakshmappa v. Ramava, 12 Bom. H. C., p. 397.

Even if it be granted that a person, merely because he is a Dattaka, or son given, apart from the performance of any further ceremony, becomes incapable of returning to his natural family, that rule would not govern the case of an adoption that was invalid because the widow had not power to adopt. For to constitute a Dattaka, there must be both gift and acceptance. A widow cannot accept a son for her husband unless she is duly empowered to do so, and, therefore, her want of authority, if it invalidates the adoption, also invalidates the gift" (k).

Rule suggested.

§ 178. In the above passage, the words "ceremonies after adoption" ought apparently to be substituted for the words "ceremonies of adoption." The principle of the rule suggested seems to be that a man cannot take his place in his natural family unless the essential ceremonies have been performed in it, and that if performed in a wrong family, they cannot be performed over again in the right one. But that where no such ceremonies have followed upon the adoption, he can return, if there has not been a valid giving and receiving. Where there has been a valid giving and receiving, then, apparently, he could not return, even though, in consequence of some other defect, the adoption may have been so far invalid, as not to invest the person taken with the full privileges of an adopted son.

§ 179. In the other Bengal case, the Court refused to enforce specific performance of a contract to give a boy in adoption in consideration of an annuity. They said that this would be a Kritaka adoption which is now invalid, therefore that the contract, "if it were capable of being carried out, and were recognized by the Court, would involve an injury to the person and property of the adopted son, inasmuch as if it could be proved that the boy was purchased and not given, it is very probable that the adoption would be set aside; and if such adoption were set aside, he would not only lose his status in the family of his adopting father, but also lose his right of inheritance to his natural parents" (l). In this case there would have been a complete giving and acceptance. But if the mode of doing so had ceased to be lawful, it is difficult to see how there could be a valid giving and acceptance, any more than if the son had been a self-given or a castaway. It may be suggested whether the whole theory of imperfect adoption is not a relic of the times when some sorts of adoption were falling into disfavour, though still practised and permitted. The view taken by the Madras High Court that an adoption must either be effectual for all purposes, or a nullity, has the merit of being practical and intelligible, while doing substantial justice to all parties.

(k) Sreemutty Rajcoomaree v. Nobocoomar, 1 Boul., 137; S. C., Sevest., 64, note.

§ 180. The validity of an adoption often becomes material as determining the validity of a gift or of a bequest. Suppose a gift made to a person who is believed to be an adopted son, but whose adoption turns out to be invalid; is the gift to fail or to stand good? The answer to this question does not depend upon any special doctrine of Hindu law, but upon general principles applicable to all similar cases. Where a gift is bestowed upon a person who is described as possessing a particular character or relationship, the gift may be to him absolutely as an individual, the addition of his supposed character or relationship being simply a matter of description. In this case, if the identification is complete, the gift prevails, though the description is incorrect. For instance, a bequest to Charles Millar Standen and Caroline Elizabeth Standen, legitimate son and daughter of Charles Standen. It appeared that they were really illegitimate, but their claim was supported (m). So where a will was to this effect, "I declare that I give my property to Koibullo whom I have adopted. My wives shall perform the ceremonies according to the Shastras and bring him up." Then followed a clause showing that no other adoption was to be made till after his death. It was held in the Privy Council that even if the widows never performed the contemplated ceremonies, or performed them ineffectually, the bequest was valid (n). The two following cases went on the same principle: a testator recited that he had loved and supported A. C. and had intended to give him a large share of his property; and that he had subsequently adopted him. He then proceeded to devise substantially the whole of his property to him by name. The adoption was found to be invalid, but the bequest was held good (o). In the Pittapur Case, the Rajah, after many years of childlessness, adopted the plaintiff. He subsequently quarrelled with him, and some years later it was announced that one of his wives had given birth. The Rajah then made a series of wills in which, after stating that by Hindu law the property should go to the aurasa son, he proceeded to devise the whole of his property to his aurasa son, naming him, subject to legacies and to maintenance for the adopted son. After the Rajah's death the plaintiff sued to set aside the will as invalid on various grounds, and to recover the property, alleging that the son was suppositious. The Original Court decreed in his favour on all grounds. The case was argued in the High Court on the will only, on the assumption that the son was not the Rajah's. It was admitted that the Rajah must have known that this was so, and that for the purpose of argument it must be taken that the contrary assertions in the will were fraudulent. The High Court, finding that the will was in law valid, held that the boy took as persona designata, and this decision was confirmed by the Privy Council (p). So a foster child, that is, one who has been taken into the family of another, nurtured, (n) Nidhoomoni Dehya v. Saroda Pershad, 3 I. A., 253; S. C., 26 Suth., 91.

Validity of gift to a person whose adoption is invalid.

(l) Eshan Kishor v. Haris Chandra, 13 B. L. R., Appx. 42; S. C., 21 Suth., 381.

(m) Standen v. Standen, 2 Ves. Jun., 589.

(o) Bireswar v. Arda Chunder, 19 I. A., 101; S. C., 19 Cal., 452.

(p) Venkata Surya Mahipati v. The Court of Wards, 20 Mad., 167; affd., 26 I. A., 83; S. C., 22 Mad., 383; acc. Subbarayer v. Subbammal, 27 I. A., 162; S. C., 24 Mad., 214.

educated, married and put forward in life as his son, but without the performance of an actual adoption, does not obtain any rights of inheritance thereby (q). But a gift made to such a person by his foster-father, if in other respects valid, will not be made void, merely because he was under the mistaken belief that the foster-son would be able to perform his funeral obsequies (r).

§ 181. Again a gift may be made to a person who is supposed to possess some special relationship, in such a manner that the existence of the relationship is a condition precedent to the coming into operation of the gift, or is an essential limitation as determining the person who is to benefit by it. Here if the relationship does not exist the gift cannot take effect. A Hindu made an adoption under circumstances which were held not to justify him in making any adoption. At the same time he executed in favour of the boy so adopted an angikar-patra, which, after reciting the adoption, provided as follows: "I authorize you by this angikar-patra to offer oblations of water and pinda to me and my ancestors after my death, by virtue of your being my adopted son. Moreover you shall become the proprietor of all the movable and immovable properties which I own and which I may leave behind." The Judicial Committee held that the gift failed with the adoption, as it was evidently the intention of the donor to give his property to the boy as his adopted son, capable of inheriting by the adoption (s). A testator by his will made the following provisions: "I have two wives living. Each of the two Ranees will adopt one son. The two adopted sons of both wives shall remain the shebaites of the whole of the property dedicated to Annapurnah, the Kuranee." The Ranees adopted simultaneously as Gift to a supposed relation, as such.

(q) 2 Strn. H. L., 111, 113; Steele, 154; Bhimana v. Tayappa, Mad. Dec. of 1861; 124 Sarg H. L., 142; Co. Con., 369.

(r) Abhachari v. Ramachendrayya, 1 Mad. H. C., 393.

(s) Famindra Deb v. Rajeswar Dass, 12 I. A., 72; S. C., 11 Cal., 463; Doorga Sundari v. Surendra Keshav, 12 Cal., 686; Karsandas v. Ladhkavalu, 12 Bom., 185; Shamavahoo v. Dwarakadas, ib. 202; Patel Vandrayan Jekisan v. Manilal, 15 Bom., p. 573; Abba v. Kuppanmal, 16 Mad., 355.

directed. The Judicial Committee, affirming on this point the decision of the High Court, held that the adopted sons could not take under the will either as adopted, or as shebait; the adoptions were bad. "There is no gift to the adopted sons except in their character as shebait; and it would require very strong and clear expressions to show that a Hindu contemplated introducing as shebait of his family Thakoor, two persons unknown to himself, and strangers to his family. There is not a trace in this will to show any such intention, or to show that the testator doubted the legality of his scheme, or thought of any adoption but a legal one (t). In a later case the testator had named his nephew Karamsi as a boy whom he had wished to adopt, and whom he authorized his widow to adopt. He then proceeded to bequeath the residue of his property to this boy as his inheritance, and to appoint him his heir. The widow never did adopt him and her subsequent death made his adoption impossible. The High Court of Bombay held that he could not take except as adopted son, and this decision was supported, though with considerable hesitation, by the Privy Council. The argument to which they yielded was "that the testator assumed as a basis of his dispositions that there would be an adoption, and that the alternative did not occur to him. Thus, it is urged, with the failure of adoption the whole structure of the will fails; and there ensues an intestacy, not as desired or contemplated by the testator, but because he took for granted the existence of a condition which has not come to pass" (u). So where a testator left an annuity to his wife, "So long as she shall continue my widow and unmarried." After the date of the will, and before his death she obtained a divorce ab initio on the ground of nullity of marriage. It was held that she could not take the annuity, as it was only capable of being held by a person who occupied the position of widow of the testator (v). In all such cases, if the right of the donee depends on his possessing a particular character, and the existence or non-existence of such character depends upon a particular fact, the onus of proving that fact lies upon the party who will fail if it is not made out (w).

(t) Surendra Keshav v. Doorgasundari Dasse, 19 I. A., 108; S. C., 19 Cal., 513.

(u) Karamsi Madhowjee v. Karsondas, 20 Bom., 718; aff'd., 23 Bom. (P. C.), 271.

§ 182. An intermediate state of things is where the supposed character of the donee is the motive, but not necessarily the only motive, for the disposition in his favour. If a man makes a gift to one whom he erroneously supposes to be his son or his wife, he does so, partly because it is his duty to provide for such near relations, partly because feelings of affection have arisen in reference to them. Here the gift will be valid though the relationship never existed; à fortiori if the relationship had existed at the time the gift was made, though it had ceased before the gift came into effect (x). Where, however, "a legacy is given to a person under a particular character which he has falsely assumed, and which alone can be assumed to be the motive for the bounty, the law will not permit him to avail himself of it, and therefore he cannot demand the legacy." Hence a bequest to a person who had fraudulently induced the testator to contract a bigamous marriage with him or her, the testator being ignorant of the facts, is invalid (y).

Where relationship is a motive, but not the essence of the gift.

§ 183. The case of an adoption made by a widow to her husband, after her husband's death, raises special considerations, owing to the double fact that the person adopted has in general a better title than the person in possession, while, on the other hand, the title of the person so in possession has been a perfectly valid title up to the date of adoption. Questions of this sort arise in two ways: First, with regard to title to an estate; secondly, with

Adoption by widow:

(v) In re Boddington, 22 Ch. D., 597. aff'd., 25 Ch. D., 685.

(w) Rango Balaji v. Mudiema, 23 Bom., 296; Sham Chand Pal v. Protap Chunder, 24 I. A., 186; S. C., 25 Cal., 78; Ind. Evidence Act, ss. 101-104.

(x) Re Boddington ub. sup. Bullmore v. Wynter, 22 Ch. D., 619; Wilkinson v. Joughin, 2 Eq., 319. See, however, re Morrisson, 40 Ch. D., 30.

(y) Per Lord Cottenham, 5 Myl. & Cr., 150, following Kennel v. Abbott, 4 Ves., 302; Wilkinson v. Joughin, ub. sup.

regard to the validity of acts done between the date of the husband's death and the date of adoption.

act optional.

§ 184. It has already been pointed out (z) that a widow with authority to adopt cannot be compelled to act upon it unless she likes. Consequently, the vesting of the inheritance cannot be suspended until she exercises her right. Immediately upon her husband's death it passes to the next heir, whether that heir be herself or some other person, and that heir takes with as full rights as if no such power to adopt existed, subject only to the possibility of his estate being divested by the exercise of that power.

its effect.

But as soon as the power is exercised, the adopted son stands exactly in the same position as if he had been born to his adoptive father, and his title relates back to the death of his father to this extent, that he will divest the estate of any person in possession of the property of that father to whom he would have had a preferable title, if he had been in existence at his adoptive father's death (a). One of the most common cases is an adoption by a widow, who is herself heir to her husband. The result of such an adoption is that her limited estate as widow at once ceases. The adopted son at once becomes full heir to the property; the widow's rights are reduced to a claim for maintenance; and if, as would generally happen, the adopted son is a minor, she will continue to hold as his guardian in trust for him (b). Where there are several widows, holding jointly, one who has authority from her husband to adopt would, of course, by exercising it divest both her own estate and that of her co-widows, and no co-widow can, by refusing her consent, prevent the adoption, or destroy its effect upon her estate (c). And

(z) Ante § 119.

(a) Babu Anoji v. Ratnaji, 21 Bom., 319.

(b) Dharm Das Pandey v. Mt. Shama Soondri, 3 M. I. A., 229; S. C., 6 Suth. (P. C.), 43. Of course, the adopted son does not take any of the property which is held by the widow as her Stridhana, W. & B., 1174. The Court, in awarding the property to the adopted son, will take all necessary steps for determining and securing the maintenance of the widow. Vrandivandas v. Yamunabai, 12 Bom. H. C., 229; Jannabai v. Rychand, 12 Bom., 225.

(c) Mondakini Dasi v. Adinath, 18 Cal., 69.

in the Mahratta country, where no authority is required, it is held that the elder widow may of her own accord adopt, and thereby destroy the estate of the younger widow, without obtaining her consent. The Court said: "It would seem to be unjust to allow the elder widow to defeat the interest of the younger by an adoption against her wish. But, on the other hand, if the adoption is regarded as the performance of a religious duty and a meritorious act, to which the assent of the husband is to be implied wherever he has not forbidden it, it would seem that the younger widow is bound to give her consent, being entitled to a due provision for her maintenance, and if she refuses, the elder widow may adopt without it" (d). It was not decided, but it seems to be an inference from the language of the Court, that they did not think the junior widow would have had the same right. Of course, an adoption would à fortiori divest all estates which follow that of the widow, such as the right of a daughter or a daughter's son (e).

§ 185. An adoption will equally divest the estate of one who takes before the widow, provided he would take after the son. For instance, where, in the Madras Presidency, an undivided brother succeeded to an impartible Zemin-dary in Berhampore, on the decease of his brother, the last holder, it was held that his estate was divested by an adoption made by the widow of the latter after his death, and under his authority (f). And so it would be, in regard to partible property, held by two brothers the whole of which on the death of one brother, vests by or of inferior heir.

Estate of preferable heir not divested.

(d) Rakhmabai v. Radhabai, 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 181, 192. Per curiam, 18 Cal., p. 74. See post § 189.

(e) Ramkishan v. Mt. Sri Mutee, 3 S. D., 367 (489).
(f) Raghunadha v. Brozo Kishoro, 3 I. A., 154; S. C., 1 Mad., 69; S. C., 25 Suth., 291. The facts of this case seem to have been misunderstood by the High Court of Bengal, in Kally Prosonno v. Gacool Chunder, post § 191, where they say (2 Cal., 309), "The property in dispute in that case was not a joint family property, and the surviving members of the joint family unjustly took possession of it, by excluding the widow of the owner, who was entitled by the Mitakshara law to succeed to it." The property was joint, though impartible, and it was admitted that, as the brothers were undivided, the widow had no right to anything beyond maintenance. Nayammani v. Deva Raja, 3 Mysore, 174.

survivorship in the other. An adoption made to the deceased brother by a duly authorised widow puts an end to the survivorship, just as a posthumous birth would do (g). On the other hand, if the estate has once vested in a person who would have had a preferable title to that of a natural-born son, an adoption will not defeat his title or that of his successor, whether male or female, unless the successor be herself the widow who makes the adoption. Both branches of this rule are illustrated by decisions of the Privy Council. In the first case, Gour Kishore, a Zemindar in Bengal, died leaving a widow Chundrabullee and a son Bhowanee. Previous to his death he executed a document whereby he directed his wife to adopt a son in the event of failure of her own issue. Bhowanee succeeded to the Zemindary, married, came to full age and died, leaving no issue, but a widow Bhoobun Moyee. Chundrabullee then adopted Ram Kishore under her authority. He sued the widow of Bhowanee for the estate. It will be remembered that, under the law of Bengal, a widow is the heir of her husband, dying without issue, even though he has an undivided brother. The Judicial Committee held that the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed, since his adoption gave him no title that was valid against Bhowanee's widow. They said: "In this case Bhowanee Kishore had lived to an age which enabled him to perform, and it is to be presumed that he had performed, all the religious services which a son could perform for a father. He had succeeded to the ancestral property as heir: he had full power of disposition over it; he might have alienated it: he might have adopted a son to succeed to it if he had no male issue of his body. He could have defeated every intention which his father entertained with respect to the property. On the death of Bhowanee Kishore, his wife succeeded as heir to him, and would have equally succeeded in that character in exclusion of his brothers, if he had had any. She took a vested estate, (g) Surendra Nandan v. Sailaja, 18 Cal., 385; Vithoba v. Bapu, 15 Bom., 110.

PARA. 185.]

as his widow, in the whole of his property. It will be singular if a brother of Bhowanee Kishore, made such by adoption, could take from his widow the whole of his property when a natural-born brother could have taken no part. If Ram Kishore is to take any of the ancestral property, he must take all he takes by substitution for the natural-born son, and not jointly with him. Whether under his testamentary power of disposition Gour Kishore could have restricted the interest of Bhowanee in his estate to a life interest, or could have limited it over (if his son left no issue male, or such issue male failed) to an adopted son of his own, it is not necessary to consider; it is sufficient to say that he has neither done, nor attempted to do, this. The question is, whether, the estate of his son being unlimited, and that son having married and left a widow, his heir, and that heir having acquired a vested estate in her husband's property as widow, a new heir can be substituted by adoption, who is to defeat that estate, and take as an adopted son what a legitimate son of Gour Kishore would not have taken. This seems contrary to all reason, and to all the principles of Hindu law, as far as we can collect them. It must be recollected that the adopted son, as such, takes by inheritance and not by devise. Now the rule of Hindu law is, that in the case of inheritance, the person to succeed must be the heir of the last full owner. In this case Bhowanee Kishore was the last full owner, and his wife succeeds, as his heir, to a widow's estate. On her death the person to succeed will again be the heir at the death of Bhowanee Kishore. If Bhowanee Kishore had died unmarried, his mother Chundrabullee would have been his heir, and the question of adoption would have stood on quite different grounds. By exercising the power of adoption, she would have divested no estate but her own, and this would have brought the case within the ordinary rule; but no case has been produced, no decision has been cited from the text books, and no principle has been stated, to show that by the mere gift of a power of adoption to a widow, the estate of the heir of a deceased son, vested in possession, can be defeated or divested" (h).

Unless heiress is adopting widow.

Guntur case.

§ 186. The case suggested by their Lordships at the close of the above quotation, was the case which actually came before them for decision in 1876. There, a Zemindar in Guntur in the Madras Presidency died, leaving a widow, an infant son, and daughters. The son was placed in possession, but died a minor, and unmarried. His mother was then placed in possession, and adopted a son, without any authority from her deceased husband, but with the consent of all the husband's sapindas. This was before the decision in the Ramnaad case (§ 121), and the Government refused to recognize the adoption, and the adopted son was never put in possession. On the death of the mother, the Collector placed the daughters in possession, apparently treating the heirship as one which had still to be traced to their father, the last full-aged Zemindar. The Madras High Court treated the adoption as invalid, on grounds which have been already discussed. On appeal, the Privy Council maintained the adoption, and right of the adopted son to take as heir. They held that in the Madras Presidency the consent of the sapindas was as efficacious for the purpose of enabling a widow to adopt in lieu of a son who had died without issue, as it admittedly was where there never had been issue at all. As to the effect of the adoption they proceeded to say: "If, then, there had been a written authority to the widow to adopt, the fact of the descent being cast would have made no difference, unless the case fell within the authority of that of Chundrabullee, reported in 10 Moore, in which it was decided, that the son having died leaving a widow in whom the inheritance had vested, the mother could not defeat the estate which had so become vested by making an adoption, though in pursuance of a written authority from her husband. That authority does not govern the present case, in which the adoption is made in derogation of the adoptive mother's estate; and indeed expressly recognizes the distinction" (i).

(h) Bhoobun Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 10 M. I. A., 279, 310; S. C., 3 Suth. P. C., 15.

§ 187. It will be observed that, in both of the Madras cases in which the right of the adopted son was affirmed by the Privy Council, the property had descended lineally from the person to whom the adoption was made. In the Berhampore case (§ 185), the last male holder was the person to whom the adoption was made. In the Guntur case (§ 186), there had been an intermediate descent to his own son, and on his death without issue the Zemindary had reverted to the person making the adoption, who was at once his mother and his father's widow. Two different cases, however, have arisen: First, where the property has descended to A, the son of B, to whom the adoption is made, as in the Guntur case, but has passed at his death to a person different from the widow who makes the adoption; secondly, where the property has descended from A, and the adoption has been made to B, a collateral relation of A. Let it be assumed that the adopted son of B would in each case have been the heir to A, if he had been adopted previously to the death of A. The question arises, whether, if he is adopted subsequently to the death, he will divest the estate of the person who has taken as heir of A. It has been held that he will not.

Principle of above cases.

Cases in which estate will not be divested.

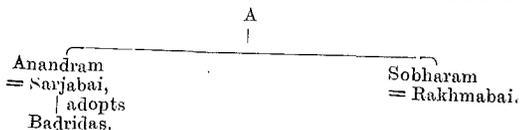

§ 188. The first point was decided in a Madras case. There N had died, leaving a widow, the first defendant, and a son, Sitappah, by another wife. Sitappah died unmarried, and thereupon his step-mother, the first defendant, adopted Munisawmy, who was the son of one Bali. Bali sued as guardian of his son to establish the adoption. Its validity was conceded by the High Court. It seems to have been admitted in argument that the first defendant, as step-mother, was not the heir of Sitappah, and that Bali was his heir. Upon this the High Court held that the adoption conveyed no title to the property. They said: "Even if it be considered that N's widow possessed or acquired in 1870 (the date of Sitappah's death) power to adopt a son to her husband, it has to be determined whether, according to Hindu law, any adoption could then be lawfully made by her. The principle of the decision of the Privy Council in the case reported in 10 Moore's Indian Appeals, 279 (ante § 185), appears to us to govern this case, and show that it could not. Chinna Sitappah had inherited his father's property; 'He had full power of disposition over it; he might have alienated it; he might have adopted a son to succeed to it, if he had no male issue of his body. He could have defeated every intention which his father entertained with respect to the property.' On the death of Chinna Sitappah, the next heir, it is here admitted, was Bali Reddy, who is the natural father of the minor plaintiff, and who has also other sons. The inheritance having passed in 1870 to Bali Reddy still remains in him; and we must hold, upon the authority cited, that the estate of the deceased son, thus vested in possession, cannot be defeated and divested" (k). Accordingly, where a father died leaving widows, and also the widow of a predeceased son, who made an adoption to her husband, the adoption was held bad, as the widow's power of adoption, for the purpose of representation, was gone as soon as the estate of the father became vested in his widows (l).

Madras decision.

(i) Vellanki v. Venkata Rama, 4 I. A., 1; S. C., 1 Mad., 174; S. C., 26 Suth., 21; Boicunt Money v. Kishen Soonder, 7 Suth., 392.

§ 189. The second point arose both in Bombay and in Bengal. In the Bombay case the facts were as follows:—

Anandram and Sobharam were undivided brothers, who (k) Annamah v. Mabbu Bali Reddy, 8 Mad. H. C., 08; followed, Doobomoyee v. Shama Churn, 12 Cal., 246; where the heir of the son was his grandmother; Keshar Ramkrishna v. Govind Ganesh, 9 Bom., 94; Chandra v. Gojrabai, 14 Bom., 463, where the son's estate vested in his widow.

(l) Darnidhar v. Chinto, 20 Bom., 250.

died leaving widows, but no male issue. Anandram died first, therefore his whole interest passed to Sobharam, and, on the death of the latter, the entire property vested in his widow Rakhmabai. After the death of Sobharam, Sarjabai, widow of Anandram, adopted a son. Thereupon a creditor raised the question, whether he took the estate of Sobharam. It was argued that the case in 10 M. I. A., 279 (ante § 185) established that an adoption can never be held valid, which has the effect of divesting an estate once vested. Upon that, however, Melville, J., remarked: "In that case A claimed, by virtue of adoption, an estate which B had inherited from C. Even if A had been a natural-born son, B and not A would have been the heir of C; and it was held that, under such circumstances, A could not defeat B's estate. There would seem to be no room for doubt on this point, and the decision in that case certainly does not support the argument (which is moreover at variance with the decision in Rakhmabai v. Radhabai (m), that an adoption can in no case operate to defeat an interest once vested." The same Judge, however, expressed a strong opinion that the adoption would not be valid on the ground suggested by the Judicial Committee in the Rammaad case (n). He summarised their views as follows:—"In other words, when the estate is vested in the widow, she may adopt without the consent of reversioners, but when the estate is vested in persons other than the widow, and the immediate effect of an adoption would be to defeat the interest of those persons, then justice requires that their consent should be obtained. This proposition seems very reasonable and just." He distinguished the case from that of Rakhmabai v. Radhabai by saying: "The two widows being equally bound to take the measures necessary to secure their husbands' future beatitude, the younger widow, who by withholding her consent, ignores the religious obligation imposed upon her,

Rupchand v. Rakhmabai.

(m) 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 181, ante § 184.
 (n) Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 M. I. A., 397; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 17, ante § 122.

Bombay decision.

has no right to complain of injustice if the adoption be made by the elder without her consent. But it does not follow that the plea of injustice is to be equally disregarded where it is put forward by a person who is under no such religious obligation. In Rakhmabai v. Radhabai, it was certainly laid down in the broadest terms that, in the Mahratta country, a Hindu widow may, without the consent of her husband's kindred, adopt a son to him, if the act is done by her in the proper and bona fide performance of a religious duty, and neither capriciously, nor from a corrupt motive. But the Judges by whom that case was decided were not dealing with an adoption which would have had the effect of divesting an estate vested in a relative other than a widow, nor in any of the decided cases on which they relied was the validity of such an adoption in issue. It does not appear to me that the authorities quoted would be sufficient to support the validity of an adoption working such manifest injustice" (o).

differs from Madras ruling.

§ 190. As a matter of fact, the Court found that Sobharam's widow had given her consent to the adoption, which, on the ground which has been frequently taken by the Bombay High Court, would have rendered it valid (p). It will, of course, be observed that the Madras and the Bombay Courts went upon different grounds. The Madras Court considered that the question was decided by the authority of the Privy Council. But there was this difference between the two cases that, in Chundrabullee's case, the adopted son, if natural-born, would not have been heir to the property he claimed. In the Madras case he certainly would have been. This was pointed out by the Bombay High Court (q). Their judgment proceeded upon the ground that the adoption itself was invalid. No

(o) Rupchand v. Rakhmabai, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 114. This reasoning was followed in the case of Ramji v. Ghaman, 6 Bom., 498; Dinker v. Ganesh, ib., 505; Patel Vandravan Jekisan v. Manilal, 15 Bom., 565.

(p) Post § 193.

(q) See also the remarks made upon it by the Bengal High Court in Ram Soondur v. Surhancee Dossee, 22 Suth., 121.

objection of that sort could be taken in the Bengal case, and there the judgment went upon different grounds from those taken in either of the cases last cited. The facts of it were as follows:—

§ 191. P and B, named in the annexed table, were ^{Bengal decision.} undivided brothers, who held their property in the quasi-severalty of the Bengal law. P, by his will, bequeathed his share to his widow B D for life, and after her to the sons of his daughter, if any, subject to trusts, legacies and annuities. The daughter died without issue during the widow's life, and at her death the widow made a will, bequeathing the property to the defendant, as executor, for religious purposes. K died in 1885, leaving to his widow authority to adopt. If she had exercised that authority prior to the death of B D, there can be no doubt that the son adopted to K would have been the heir of his grand-uncle P, and would have been entitled to set aside the will of B D, and to claim the property of P, so far as he had not disposed of it by his will. But the power was not exercised till 1876. When the suit was brought by the adopted son, the Court held that he could not succeed. At the death of B D, the whole property of P must have vested in some one who was then the heir of P; or if there was no such heir in existence, it must have passed to Government by escheat. The Court held, upon a review of all the cases, that there was no authority for holding that an estate, which had once vested in a person as heir of the last full owner, could be subsequently divested by the adoption of a person who would have been a nearer heir, had his adoption taken place previously to the death. They considered that the inheritance could not remain in a sort of latent abeyance, subject to be changed from one heir to another, on the happening of an event which might never take place, or only at some indefinite future time (r). Some passages in the judgment are more broadly expressed than they would have been, if the Court had not misconceived the facts of the case in the Privy Council from Berhampore (s). But the decision itself, coupled with the other cases cited, seems to lead to the following conclusions: First, where an adoption is made to the last male holder, the adopted son will divest the estate of any person, whose title would have been inferior to his, if he had been adopted prior to the death. Secondly, where the adoption is not made to the last male holder, but is made by the widow of any previous holder, it will, if in other respects valid, divest her estate. Thirdly, under no other circumstances will an adoption made to one person divest the estate of any one who has taken that estate as heir of another person. All these rules seem to be consistent with natural justice. In the first case, the object of an adoption is to supply an heir to the deceased. That heir, when created, properly takes precedence over any one who is a less remote heir. Further, the services which he renders to the deceased are fitly rewarded by the estate. In the second case, the widow who makes the adoption exercises a discretion which may be intended to produce a preferable heir to herself. Naturally she takes the consequences. But in the third case, there can be no reason why an adoption, which is intended to benefit A, should disturb the succession to the estate of B, who receives no benefit from it, and who has not been consulted upon it, or been instrumental in bringing it about (t).

Rules.

(r) Kally Prosmno v. Gocool Chunder, 2 Cal., 295, followed in a later case when it was held that it made no difference that the delay in adoption had arisen from the fraud of the person who took the estate in default of adoption. Nilcomul v. Jotendro, 7 Cal., 178. Affid. Bhubaneswari v. Nilkomul, 12 I. A., 137; S. C., 12 Cal., 18; Faizuddin v. Timcovri Saha, 22 Cal., 565; Anandibai v. Kashibai, 28 Bom., 461.

(s) See ante § 185, note (f).

(t) Approved and followed per curiam, 18 Cal., 74, 398; 20 Bom., p. 267. In § 192. The effect of assent by the parties interested, when given to an adoption which would have been invalid under the previous rules, has been much considered in Bombay, though it does not appear to be finally settled. The simplest case is that of an adoption to an undivided coparcener. Such an adoption, when made by the man himself, prevents survivorship, and, when made after his death, destroys the result of the survivorship. Yet it is quite certain that, except under Mithila law, whatever adoption the man himself might have made, may be made by his widow duly authorised (ante § 185). In such a case, however, it is laid down in Bombay that the ordinary authority, which, in Western India, a widow possesses to adopt for the benefit of her husband, does not enable her to adopt so as to nullify the operation of survivorship in an undivided family. That authority, where its exercise would divest any estate but her own, must be supplemented by such an authority of her father-in-law, or the undivided sapindas of her husband as would, in the Madras Presidency, suffice for a widow who had received no authority from her husband. This doctrine was not based on the idea that the consent of those who were prejudiced by an adoption was necessary to bar their interests. It was put upon the ground that the Maratha rule only applied to widows to whom the property had descended, and ought not to be extended. Where the Maratha rule did not apply, the only authority which could supply the want of one directly given by the husband was to be found in the decisions of the Judicial Committee in the Ramnaad and Berhampore cases (u).

Chandra v. Gojarabai, 14 Bom., pp. 469, 470. Telang, J., stated the following rules which seem substantially the same:—(1) that adoption by a widow under her husband's authority has the effect of divesting an estate vested in any member of the undivided family, of which the husband was himself a member; but it does not divest the estate if one on whom the inheritance has devolved from a lineal heir of the husband; (2) that the adoption, though authorised by the husband, cannot divest the estate which has already vested in a collateral relation of the husband, in succession to some other person, who had himself become owner in the meantime.

(u) Ramji v. Ghaman, 6 Bom., 498; Vithoba v. Bapu, 15 Bom., 110, p. 119; Amava v. Mahad Gauda, 22 Bom., 416, p. 418.

Effect of assent as giving validity to adoption.

Cases of assent to adoption which is itself invalid.

§ 193. On the other hand, there are cases where the Courts have held that an adoption by a widow, which did not come within the Maratha rule, and which was not authorised by sapindas under the Madras decisions, might be rendered valid by the consent of the person whose estate would be divested by it. In Rupchand v. Rukhmabai (v) the Court, after laying down the law as to the incapacity of a widow to adopt so as to divest the estate of the widow of the last holder, proceeded to find "that the adoption had been made with the consent of Rukhmabai, and with the intention on her part that it should have its full legal effect. Having been made with such consent and intention, I am of opinion that the adoption is valid." In a later case (w), the facts were exactly the same as those in Annamah v. Mabbu Bali Reddy (x). Atmaram and Sakharam were divided brothers. Atmaram had a son, Govind, who died before his father, leaving a widow, Ganga Bai. On the death of Atmaram without widow or children, his estate passed to Sakharam, who subsequently gave his son in adoption to Ganga Bai, who adopted to her deceased husband, Govind. It was held that as Sakharam had consented to the adoption, his estate was divested. This was what had happened in the Madras case, where the consent of the father was held not to operate in favour of his son. It may be suggested that, as there was no undivided family, the consent of the divided coparcener was sufficiently within the ruling in the Ramnaad case and those which followed it in the Privy Council. This, however, does not appear to have been the ground on which the decision went, and was not alleged to be so in the next case which followed it (y). There, Bhimaji had a son who predeceased him, leaving a widow, Sarasvati. He died leaving a widow, Umava, and Sarasvati, his daughter-in-law. The estate, of course, descended

(v) 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 114, 122, ante § 189.

(w) Bapu Anaji v. Ratnoji, 21 Bom., 319.

(x) 8 Mad. H. C., 108, ante § 188.

(y) Payappa v. Appanna, 23 Bom., 327, p. 329.

to Umava, and, on her death, would have passed to the distant kindred, if any, of Bhimaji. Sarasvati adopted with the consent of Umava. It was held that the adoption was valid. Here, it is plain that, on the principles previously laid down in Bombay, Sarasvati had no authority under Maratha law to adopt, and Umava had no power to supply her own authority. Ranade, J., stated the general rule to be that "it is only the widow of the last full owner who has the right to take a son in adoption to such owner, and that a person in whom the estate does not vest cannot make a valid adoption so as to divest (without their consent) third parties in whom the estate has vested of their proprietary rights." To this rule he said there were four exceptions: First, the power of the elder of several co-widows who had succeeded to their husband, to adopt to him without the consent of the others. Second, the power of a widow to adopt to her husband, though she has not succeeded to him immediately, but as heir of his unmarried son. Third, that, when the adoption takes place with the full assent of the party in whom the estate has vested by inheritance, the adoption is validated by such assent. The Fourth exception is clearly allied to the one discussed above, and is based on the principle of ratification by conduct or acquiescence. In a previous case where it was found that no consent had been given, the same Judge assumed that, if given, it would have made such an adoption valid (z).

§ 194. There are, however, cases where this position was doubted. In one case (a) Dharnidhar left three widows and a daughter-in-law, Venubai, the widow of a predeceased son, Chintaman. The estate ultimately vested in the surviving widow, Luxumbai. In 1871, while she was in possession, Venubai adopted the plaintiff to her own husband. In 1874 Chinto obtained possession of the estate by decree against Luxumbai. Then the plaintiff Conflicting cases.

(z) Gopal v. Vishnu, 23 Bom., 250.

(a) Dharnidhar v. Chinto, 20 Bom., 250, p. 258. See, too, Krishnarav v. Shankerrav, 17 Bom., 164; Ramkrishna v. Shamrao, 26 Bom., 526.

sued to establish his adoption. The Court held that "from the moment that Dharnidhar died and his estate was vested in his widows, the right of his daughter-in-law, Venubai, to adopt, for the purpose of inheritance was at an end." "Even if Luxumibai assented to the adoption of plaintiff by Venubai, the plaintiff's claim would not stand against the rights of Dharnidhar's collaterals who have come in now that Luxumibai is dead; and though she may have assented to Venubai taking a son for spiritual purposes, and agreed to recognise him as the principal ministrant at the Chinchwad shrine, whether as Venubai's adopted son, or as the son of Chinto who established his title as trustee, it is clear that these facts could not validate for the purpose of inheritance an adoption which, as regards the rights to property, was ab initio invalid." This decision was the cause of a reference to a Full Bench in the subsequent case of Vasudeo Vishnu v. Ramchendra Vinayek (b). There, Vishnu had died leaving two daughters, Dwarka and Godi, and Savitri the widow of his predeceased son, Vinayek. Savitri adopted the plaintiff after Vishnu's death. It was found as a fact that the daughters had consented to the adoption. No decision was given by the Full Bench as to the effect of the assent as one of the daughters who had assented was a minor whose assent was, of course, invalid. Farran, C. J., who had been a party to the decision in Bapu Anaji v. Ratnoji (c) admitted that it had been passed in ignorance of the Madras case Annamah v. Mabbu (d) and of the dictum in Dharnidhar v. Chinto just quoted. In consequence of the minority of Godi it was unnecessary to consider the effect of consent, if given by persons of full age, though he considered that the question was not concluded by any judgment of the Privy Council. He was of opinion that in any case the subsequent ratification of the adoption by the minor after she came of age was worthless. The adoption must be either valid or invalid when it takes place, and cannot be made good by matter subsequent. Ranade, J., thought that a complete consent would make the adoption good. "Mere presence at the ceremony and the absence of any objection might imply an acquiescence, but it has been ruled that mere acquiescence is not consent."

(b) 2 Bom., 551.(c) 21 Bom., 319.(d) 8 Mad. H. C., 108.

§ 195. It is not quite clear whether the Judges in all these cases had present to their minds, the distinction between an assent which made the adoption valid ab initio against the world, and one which estopped the asserting party from resisting it (ante § 160). To make the adoption valid ab initio, the widow must have had a sufficient authority, which was capable of being acted on at the time it was exercised. If the Bombay Courts have been right in holding that a widow in Western India can only adopt at her own discretion where the estate has vested in her, and where she affects no interest but her own and those of her co-widows, then, in every other case, she will require such an authority as is sufficient in the case of a widow in Madras. No one can give her such an authority but her husband, her father-in-law, or the male sapindas. If she has not received such an authority she has none, and her adoption is a mere nullity, and any consent to it would be ineffectual (e). The same difficulty would arise under the series of Privy Council decisions beginning with Bhoobun Moyee's case (ante § 115). These establish that even an authority to adopt, which was perfectly valid when it was given, comes to an end and becomes incapable of being executed, when by successive devolutions the actual holders of the property cease to occupy a relation to the giver of the authority which entitles him to affect their rights. In the case of Thayammal v. Venkatarama Aiyan (f), it was argued that the adoption itself might be perfectly good, though it was ineffectual against the person in possession. This view was rejected by the Judicial Committee, who treated the adoption as invalid for every purpose. It is clear that a consent to discussed.(e) Anandibai v. Kashibai, 28 Bom., 461.(f) 14 I. A., 67; S. C., 10 Mad., 205.

Question

the doing of an absolutely void act, which the consenting party cannot authorise, can give no validity to the act, though it may prevent the consenting party from insisting on its invalidity. Lastly, if it were possible to treat consent as amounting to authority, it would be necessary to show that the consenting party knew that the adoption was worthless without consent, and assented to it, not as a lawful, but as an unlawful act (g). In the majority of the cases where assent was treated as curing the defect in an adoption, there seems no reason to suppose that any doubt as to its legality was entertained.

Son's estate postponed.

§ 196. In Bengal, where a father has the absolute power of disposing of his property, he may couple with his authority to the widow to adopt, a direction that the estate of the widow shall not be interfered with during her life, or indeed any other condition derogating from the interest which would otherwise be taken by the adopted son (h). In provinces governed by the Mitakshara law, where a son obtains by birth a vested interest in his father's ancestral property, a person who has once made a complete and unconditional adoption could not derogate from its operation either by deed during his lifetime or by will, unless, according to recent decisions, the property is impartible (i). But where a man made a disposition of part of his property which was valid when made, and as part of the same transaction took a boy in adoption, the father of the adopted boy being aware of the provisions of the will, and assenting to them, and knowing that the testator would not have made the adoption without such assent, it was held that the will was valid against the adopted son (k). If, however, a will

(g) Raghnatha v. Brosa Kishoro, 3 I. A., 154, p. 192; S. C., 1 Mad., 69, p. 82.

(h) Radhamonree v. Jadubharain, S. D. of 1855, 139; Prosumomoyee v. Ransoondar, S. D. of 1859, 162; Bepin Behari v. Brojonath Mookhopadya, 8 Cal., 357.

(i) Sartaj Kuari v. Deorajkuari, 15 I. A., 51; S. C., 10 All., 272; Venkata Surya Mahipati v. The Court of Wards, 26 I. A., 83; S. C., 22 Mad., 383.

(k) Lakshmi v. Subramanya, 12 Mad., 490; Narayanusami v. Ramasami, 14 Mad., 172; Ganapathi Aiyar v. Savithri, 21 Mad., 10; Vinayek Narayan v. Govindrav Chintaman, 6 Bom. H. C., A. C., 224; Basava v. Lingangauda, 19 Bom., 428.

disposed of the whole of the testator's property, making no provision for an adopted son, it would probably be held that a subsequent adoption operated as a revocation of the will (l). It has been held in Bombay that if the parent of the boy, when giving him in adoption, expressly agree with the widow that she shall remain in possession of the property during her lifetime, and she only accepts the boy on those terms, the agreement will bind him, as being made by his natural guardian, and within the powers given to such guardian by law (m). In a later case, however, before the Privy Council, the effect of a similar agreement was much discussed, and not determined. The Committee refused to decide more than that such an agreement was not absolutely void, and therefore might be ratified by the youth on arriving at full age (n). In a subsequent case the Committee intimated a considerable leaning against such an agreement, though under special circumstances. The Maharajah of Balrampur gave his widow an authority and order to adopt a son "according to the custom of the family and according to the Hindu law." The adopted son was "to be in place of an actual son, the owner of the entire riyasat and the assets, moveable and immoveable," the widow taking a provision for maintenance. The widow arranged for an adoption, and obtained from the father of the boy to be adopted a document in which it was declared that she should have full control, during her lifetime, over the property left by the late Maharajah. A subsequent adoption deed contained no condition of the kind, nor did anything take place at the adoption pointing to any such condition. Subsequent to the adoption the widow executed a second deed purporting to revoke the deed of adoption, on the allegation that it ought to have contained a (l) Per Couch, C. J., 6 Bom. H. C., A. C., p. 230, citing fatwah of a pundit; 6 M. I. A., p. 320.

(m) Ohitko Raghnath v. Janaki, 11 Bom. H. C., 199; followed Ravji Vinayakrav v. Lakshmbai, 11 Bom., 381, p. 398. See as to the effect of such an arrangement; Antaji v. Dattaji, 19 Bom., 36.

(n) Ramasawmi v. Venecatarumaiyan, 6 I. A., 196; S. C., 2 Mad., 91.

provision postponing the interest of the adopted son till after her death. Lord MacNaghten said: "It is difficult to understand how a declaration by Gaman Singh, or an agreement by him, if it was an agreement, could prejudice or affect the rights of his son, which could only arise when his parental control and authority determined. The ceremonies of adoption are unimpeached, the deed of adoption is open to no objection, the second deed is admittedly inoperative. No conditions were attached to the adoption. Had it been otherwise, the analogy, such as it is, presented by the doctrines of Courts of Equity in this country relating to the execution of powers of appointment would rather suggest that, even in that case, the adoption would have been valid and the conditions void" (o). The Madras Court has in several cases refused to recognise the validity of such agreements (p). The question recently arose again before the Madras High Court in circumstances exactly similar to those in Jagannada v. Papamma, and was referred to a Full Bench. It decided that such an agreement when it formed part of the negotiation preceding the adoption, and was embodied in the deed of adoption, came within the powers of the father acting as guardian of his son in granting him in adoption, and would bind the son if "the agreement in regard to the property was in itself a fair and reasonable one, and one which, taken as part of the contract for the adoption, was for the minor's benefit, as being a condition on which alone the adoption would be made." As regards the language of Lord MacNaghten above quoted, it was pointed out that in the case before the Judicial Committee the agreement was previous to the adoption, and was not embodied in the adoption deed, or referred to at the time of adoption, and that the object of the suit was not to enforce the agreement, but to annul the adoption (q). An agreement by the adopted son himself when of full age, waiving his rights in favour of the widow, would be valid (r). And he may after adoption renounce all rights in his adopted family; but this will not destroy his status as adopted son, nor restore him to the position he has abandoned in his natural family. Upon his renunciation the next heir will succeed (s).

(o) Bhaiya Radibat Singh v. Inder Kuar, 16 I. A., 53, p. 59; S. C., 16 Cal., 56.

(p) Narainah v. Savoobhady, Mad. Dec. of 1854, 117; Lakshmana Rau v. Lakshmi Ammal, 4 Mad., 160; Jagannada v. Papamma, 16 Mad., 400.

§ 197. The second question, which arises in the case of an adoption by a widow after her husband's death, is as to the date at which the rights of the adopted son arise. It has been suggested that a son so adopted must be considered as a posthumous son, and that his rights would relate back to the death of the father when he ought to be considered as having been born, or even to the date of the authority to adopt, when he ought to be considered as having been conceived. The whole of the authorities on the point were examined in an elaborate judgment of the Sudder Court of Bengal, which was appealed against, and adopted in its entirety by the Privy Council, and which may be considered as having settled the question (t). The point for decision in the case was, whether a widow, who had received an authority to adopt, was thereby debarred from suing for her husband's estates in her own right. It was argued that she must be considered as a pregnant widow, and could only sue on behalf of the son whom she was about to bring forth. The Court refused to act upon any such fancyful analogy, and laid it down that, although a son, when adopted, entered at once into the full rights of a natural-born son, his rights could not relate back to any earlier period. Till he was adopted, it might happen that he never would be adopted; and when he was adopted, his fictitious birth into his new Son's rights date from adoption.

(q) Visalakshi v. Sivaramien, 27 Mad., 577, p. 585.

(r) Mt. Tara Mune v. Dev Narayun, 3 S. D., 387 (516); 2 W. Mac N., 183; Mt. Bhugobutty v. Chowdhry Bholanath, 15 Suth., 63.

(s) Ruvee Bhadr v. Roopshunker, 2 Bor., 656, 662, 665 [713]; Mahader Gann v. Rajaji Sidu, 19 Bom., 239.

(t) Bamundoss v. Mt. Tarinee, S. D. of 1850, 533; 7 M. I. A., 169. See cases collected, 3 M. Dig., 186; Narain Mal v. Kooer Narain, 5 Cal., 251; Rambhat v. Lakshman, 5 Bom., 630.

family could not be ante-dated. It must not, however, be supposed that an adopted son would necessarily have to acquiesce in all the dealings with the estate between the death of his adoptive father and his own adoption. The validity of those acts would have to be judged of with reference to their own character, and the nature of the estate held by the person whom he supersedes. Where that person, as frequently happens, is a female, either a widow, a daughter, or a mother, her estate is limited by the usual restrictions which fetter an estate which descends by inheritance from a man to a woman. These restrictions exist quite independently of the adoption. The only effect of the adoption is that the person who can question them springs into existence at once, whereas, in the absence of an adoption, he would not be ascertained till the death of the woman. If she has created any incumbrances, or made any alienations which go beyond her legal powers, the son can set them aside at once. If they are within her powers, he is as much bound by them as any other reversioner would be (u). And he is also bound, even though they were not fully within her powers, provided she obtained the consent of the persons who, at the time of the alienation, were the next heirs, and competent to give validity to the transaction (v). One case goes a good deal beyond this. A widow adopted a son under the authority of her husband. She succeeded him as his heir, and made an alienation, and then adopted another son. The Court held that the alienation was good as against the second adopted son (w). The decision was given without any inquiry as to the propriety of the alienation, and was rested on the authority of Chundra-

(u) Kishenmunnee v. Oodwunt, 3 S. D., 220 (304); Ramkishen v. Mt. Strimutee, 3 S. D., 367 (489), explained 7 M. I. A., 178; Doorga Soonduree v. Gourepersad, S. D. of 1856, 170; Sreenath Roy v. Ruttunmulla, S. D. of 1859, 421; Manikmulla v. Parbuttee, ib., 515; Lakshmana Rau v. Lakshmi Ammal, 4 Mad., 160; per curiam, 8 M. I. A., p. 443; Lakshman Bhau v. Radhabai, 11 Bom., 609; Antaji v. Dattaji, 19 Bom., 86; Moro Narayen v. Balaji Raghunath, ib., 809.

(v) Rajkrisho v. Kishoree, 3 Suth., 14.

(w) Gobindonath v. Ramkanay, 24 Suth., 183, approved per cur., Kally Prosonno v. Gocool Chunder, 2 Cal., 307. See per curiam, 11 Bom., 614.

bullee's case (x). It does not seem to have occurred to the Court that a mother had no more than a limited estate, which, upon the authority of the case cited, was divested by the adoption. The son then came in for all rights which had not been lawfully disposed of, or barred, during the continuance of that estate (y).

A recent decision in Madras was founded upon a view which, if finally established, cuts at the root of much of the above reasoning. It was there laid down, upon the very high authority of Bhashyem Iyengar, J., that alienations made by a widow before she exercised her power of adoption could not be set aside by the adopted son during her life. The decision rested on the view that previous to the adoption the widow was in possession of an estate which enabled her, first, to alienate it permanently for necessary purposes; secondly, to alienate it during her widowhood for purposes which were not necessary. It was held that the adopted son was equally bound by each alienation to the extent to which it was valid. It was admitted that no such decision had ever been given before, because the point had never been raised and considered (z). When the case arises again it will be material to consider whether the widowhood, meaning the possession of a widow's estate, was not terminated by the act of adoption as much as by civil death.

A different case which has arisen is where a widow gets and retains bonâ fide possession of her husband's estate, and is subsequently met by a claimant who asserts that he is entitled as adopted son. In this case the Court held that, in the absence of negligence, the plaintiff who obtained a decree for mesne profits was only entitled to the rents actually collected, and that the widow was entitled to set off her claim for maintenance, and for such sums as she had lawfully expended on behalf of her husband's funeral ceremonies. If she could have shown that she had incurred other proper and necessary outlay, within a widow's authority, the decree would no doubt have declared her right to set off in respect of it also (a). In this case it will be observed that the adoption which was subsequently established must have been made by the husband in his life. Therefore the widow's estate never existed, and she was all along in the position of a trespasser, who falsely but bonâ fide thought she had a good title.

(x) Bhoobum Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 10 M. I. A., 279; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15; ante § 172.

(y) See as to the effect of acts done during the estate of a woman, post § 625, as to the effect of a decree passed against a widow before the adoption, see Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhuvanewari, 15 T. A., 195; S. C., 16 Cal., 40.

(z) Sreeramalu v. Kristamma, 26 Mad., 143, p. 148.

Acts of previous male holder.

§ 198. I am not aware of any case which has raised the same question, where the person whose estate was devested by adoption was a male, and therefore a full owner. But I conceive the same principles would apply. Until adoption has taken place he is lawfully in possession, holding an estate which gives him the ordinary powers of alienation of a Hindu proprietor. No doubt he is liable to be superseded; but, on the other hand, he never may be superseded. It would be intolerable that he should be prevented from dealing with his own, on account of a contingency which may never happen. When the contingency has happened, it would be most inequitable that the purchaser should be deprived of rights which he obtained from one who, at the time, was perfectly competent to grant them. Accordingly, where the brother of the last holder of a Zemindary was placed in possession in 1869, and subsequently ousted by an adoption to the late Zemindar, the Privy Council held that he could not be made accountable for mesne profits from the former date. Their Lordships said: "At that time Raghunada was, in default of a son of Adikonda, natural or adopted, unquestionably entitled to the Zemindary. The adoption took place on the 20th November, 1870, and the plaintiff states that the cause of action then accrued to the plaintiff.

(a) Date Kunwar v. Ambika Partab, 25 All., 266.

The plaintiff itself was filed on the 15th December, 1870, and there is no proof of a previous demand of possession. Their Lordships are of opinion that the account of mesne profits should run only from the commencement of the suit" (b).

§ 199. It is hardly necessary to say that, as under the ordinary Hindu law an adoption by a widow must always be to her husband, and for his benefit, an adoption made by her to herself alone would not give the adopted child any right, even after her death, to property inherited by her from her husband (c). Nor, indeed, to her own property, however acquired, such an adoption being nowhere recognized as creating any new status, except in Mithila, under the Kritrima system, and apparently in Pondicherry (post § 205). But among dancing girls it is customary, in Madras and Pondicherry and in Western India, to adopt girls to follow their adoptive mother's profession, and the girls so adopted succeed to their property. No particular ceremonies are necessary, recognition alone being sufficient (d). In Calcutta and Bombay, however, such adoptions have been held illegal (e). A recent attempt by a Brahman in Poona to adopt a daughter, who should take the place of a natural-born daughter, was held to be invalid by general law, and not sanctioned by local usage (f).

Widow cannot adopt to herself.

Dancing girls.

§ 200. KRITRIMA ADOPTION.—According to the Dattaka Mimamsa, the Kritrima form is still recognized by the general Hindu law, since the modern rule, which refuses Prevails in Mithila.

(b) Raghunatha v. Brozo Kishoro, 3 I. A., 154, 193; S. C., 1 Mad., 69; S. C., 25 Suth., 291. This point was noticed but not decided by Bhashyam Iyengar, J., in a decision already referred to 26 Mad., p. 152. As to alienations by the father himself, see post § 252.

(c) Chowdhry Pudum v. Koer Oodey, 12 M. I. A., 350; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 101.

(d) Venkatachelum v. Venkataswamy, Mad. Dec. of 1856, 65; Stra. Man., § 98, 99; Steele, 185, 186; Sorg H. L., 324; Co. Con., 90, 124, 337, 341. In the absence of a special custom, and on the analogy of an ordinary adoption, only one girl can be adopted, Venku v. Mahalinga, 11 Mad., 393; Muttukannu v. Paramasami, 12 Mad., 214.

(e) Hencover v. Hanscower, 2 M. Dig., 133; Mathura v. Esu, 4 Bom., 545; see the discussion on this subject, ante § 55.

(f) Gangabai v. Anant, 13 Bom., 690.

to recognize any sons except the legitimate son and the son given, includes the Kritrima under the latter term (g). But the better opinion seems to be that this form is now obsolete, except in the Mithila country where it is the prevalent species (h), and among the Nambudri Brahmans of the West Coast where it exists along with the usual form (i). The cause of its continuance in Mithila is attributed by Mr. MacNaghten to the rule which exists there, which forbids an adoption by a widow even with her husband's authority. As the tendency of man is to defer an adoption until the last moment, the form which could be most rapidly and suddenly carried out naturally found most favour (k). This cannot be the reason for the existence of this form among the Nambudri Brahmans, who allow a widow to adopt without her husband's consent (l). Probably, in each case, the Kritrima has maintained a successful competition with the Dattaka form as being laxer in its rules, and therefore easier of application.

Described.

§ 201. The Kritrima son is thus described by Manu (m): "He is considered as a son made (or adopted) whom a man takes as his own son, the boy being equal in class, endued with filial virtues, acquainted with (the) merit (of performing obsequies to his adopter) and with (the) sin (of omitting them)." The Mitakshara adds the further definition "being enticed by the show of money or land, and being an orphan without father or mother; for, if they be living, he is subject to their control" (n).

§ 202. The consent of the adoptee is necessary to an adoption in this form (o), and the consent must be given in the lifetime of the adopting father (p). This involves (g) Dattaka Mimamsa, ii., § 65.

 (h) Suth. Syn., 663, 674; 3 Dig., 276; 2 Str., H. L., 202; note to Sutputtee v. Indranund, 2 S. D., 173 (221); Madhaviya, § 32. Mr. Sarvadrikari says (526) that this form of adoption is still practised in Behar, Benares and other places, citing the note to Srikant Sarma v. Radhakant, 1 S. D. A., 15 (19).
 (i) 11 Mad., 174, 176, ante § 44. (k) 1 W. MacN., 97.
 (l) 11 Mad., 174, 176. (m) Mon., ix., § 169. (n) Mitakshara, i., 11, § 17.
 (o) Suth. Syn., 673; Baudhayana, ii., 2, 14; 2 W. MacN., 196.
 (p) Sutputtee v. Indranund, 2 S. D., 173 (221); Durgopal v. Roopun, 6 S. D., 271 (340); Luchman v. Morun, 16 Suth., 179.

the adoptee being an adult. Consequently there appears to be no limit of age. The initiatory rites need not be performed in the family of the adopter, and the fact that those rites, including the upanivana, have already been performed in the natural family is no obstacle (q). Even marriage can be no obstacle, for it is stated by Keshuba Misra in treating of this species of adoption that a man may even adopt his own father (r). Only adult.

§ 203. The great distinction between this species of adoption and the dattaka, appears to be that the fiction of a new birth into the adoptive family, with the limitations consequent upon that fiction, do not exist. A Kritrima son "does not lose his claim to his own family, nor assume the surname of his adoptive father; he merely performs obsequies, and takes the inheritance" (s). Hence any person may be adopted who is of the same tribe as his adopter, even a father as above stated, or a brother. In one case, from the Mithila district, it was stated by the pundits and held by the Court that an adoption of an elder brother by the younger was invalid (t). But Mr. MacNaghten points out that the authorities relied upon in that case related exclusively to the dattaka form. A daughter's son may be adopted, and so may the son of a sister (u). For the same reason, the prohibition against adopting an only or an eldest son does not apply to a Kritrima adoption (v). It has been held in the case last cited that, where a brother's son exists, no other can be adopted. But the opinion of the pundits was principally founded upon texts applying to the dattaka form, and which, with reference to that form, have been long since (q) 2 Str., H. L., 204; 2 W. MacN., 196; Shibo Koeree v. Joogun, 8 Suth., 155; S. C., 4 Wym., 121.

 (r) 1 W. MacN., 76; Chowdree v. Hunooman, 6 S. D., 192 (235); Ooman Dut v. Kunhia, 3 S. D., 145 (192).
 (s) 3 Dig., 276, n.; 1 W. MacN., 76.
 (t) Runjeet Singh v. Obhya, 2 S. D., 245 (315). See 1 W. MacN., 76, n.
 (u) Ooman Dut v. Kunhia, 3 S. D., 144 (192); Chowdree v. Hunooman, 6 S. D., 192 (235).
 (v) Ooman Dut v. Kunhia, 3 S. D., (197); 2 W. MacN., 197, where, however, the opinion of the pundits was based upon the fact that the adopter was the uncle of the adoptee.

held to be no longer in force. It is probable, therefore, that they would be held inapplicable to the Kritrima form, which is so much laxer in its rules.

Results of adoption.

§ 204. As regards succession, the Kritrima son loses no rights of inheritance in his natural family. He becomes the son of two fathers to this extent, that he takes the inheritance of his adoptive father, but not of that father's father, or other collateral relations, nor of the wife of his adoptive father, or her relations (w). Nor do his sons, etc., take any interest in the property of the adoptive father, the relationship between adopter and adoptee being limited to the contracting parties themselves, and not extending further on either side (x). Among the Nambudri Brahmans (ante § 44), where it is desired to perpetuate the line of the adopter, the adopted son receives a special appointment to marry and raise up issue for the illom or line of the adopter (y).

Female may adopt to herself.

§ 205. It has already been stated that in Mithila a woman cannot adopt to her husband, after his death, whether she has obtained his permission or not. But she is at liberty to do in Mithila, what she can do nowhere else, viz., adopt a son to herself, and this she may do either during her husband's life, or after his death. And husband and wife may jointly adopt a son, or each may adopt separately. "If a woman appoint an adopted son, he stands in the relation to her of a son, offers to her funeral oblations, and is heir to her estate; but he does not become the adopted son of her husband, nor offer to him funeral oblations, nor succeed to his property. If a husband and wife jointly appoint an adopted son, he stands in the relation of son to both, and is heir to the estate of both. If the husband appoint one, and the wife another adopted son, they stand in the relation of sons to each of them respectively, and do not perform the ceremony of offering funeral oblations, nor succeed to the estate of the husband and wife jointly" (z). A similar usage can be traced among the records of the Pondicherry Courts in 1790 and 1796. So lately as 1893 the right of a widow to adopt an heir to her own property has been asserted (a).

(w) See note to Srinath Serma v. Radhakunt, 1 S. D., 15 (19); 1 W. MacN., 76; Deepoo v. Gowreeshunker, 3 S. D., 307 (410); Sreenurain Rai v. Bhya Jha, 2 S. D., 23 (29, 34); Shioo Koeree v. Jugun, 8 Suth., 155; S. C., 4 Wym., 121.
(x) Juswant Doolee, 25 Suth., 255.

(y) 11 Mad., 158, 175, 179.

§ 206. No ceremonies or sacrifices are necessary to the validity of a Kritrima adoption. "The form to be observed in this: At an auspicious time, the adopter of a son having bathed, addressing the person to be adopted, who has also bathed, and to whom he has given some acceptable chattel, says: 'Be my son.' He replies 'I am become thy son.' The giving of some chattel to him arises merely from custom. It is not necessary to the adoption. The consent of both parties is the only requisite; and a set form of speech is not essential" (b).

Ceremonies.

Among the Buddhists of Burma the term Kritrima adoption is applied to cases where one or more girls are adopted into a family as daughters. The essential part of such an adoption is publicity and notoriety of the fact of adoption—publicity of the relationship and of the intention of the adoptive parents in regard to the inheritance of their estate by the adoptive child. There are two kinds of adoption—the Kritrima child who is obtained from its own parents and openly brought up with a view to inherit; the Apatitha, who has no parents and has been casually picked up and adopted. The former stands in the same position as a natural child for all purposes, including the right to inherit. The latter is excluded from inheritance by either natural or Kritrima children (c).

It is a curious thing that this form of adoption, which now only exists in Mithila and among the Nambudris of Similar form practised in Jaffna.

(z) Futwah of pundits, Sree Narain Rai v. Bhya Jha, 2 S. D., 23 (29, 34); 1 W. MacN., 101; Collector of Tirhoot v. Europershad, 7 Suth., 500; Shioo Koeree v. Jugun, 8 Suth., 155; S. C., 4 Wym., 121.

(a) Sorg H. L., 116, 126, 140; Co. Con., 376.

(b) Rudradhara, cited note to Mitakshara, i., 11, § 17; 1 W. MacN., 98; Kullean v. Kirpa, 1 S. D., 9 (11); Durgopal v. Roopun, 6 S. D., 271 (340).

(c) Ma Me Gale v. Ma Sa Yi, 32 I. A., 78.

Western India, is almost identical in its leading features with that at present practised in Jaffna. There is the same absence of religious ceremonies, the same absence of any assumed new birth, and the same right of adoption both by husband and wife, followed by the same results of heirship only to the adopter (d). The explanation given by Mr. MacNaghten (§ 200) may account for the survival of the Kritrima adoption: but it does not explain its origin. It seems plain that both the Mithila and the Ceylon form arose from purely secular motives, and existed anterior to, and independent of Brahmanical theories. The growth of these put the Kritrima form out of fashion. But the similar type continued to flourish in Ceylon, where no such influence prevailed. An enquiry into the usages of the Tamil races in Southern India would probably disclose the existence of analogous customs, as already appears to be the case in Pondicherry.

Illatom adoption.

§ 207. A custom known as that of Illatom adoption prevails among the Reddi caste in the Madras Presidency. It consists in the affiliation of a son-in-law, in consideration of assistance in the management of the family property. No religious significance appears to attach to the act. It seems uncertain whether such an affiliation can take place where there is already a son, or whether the person so affiliated can claim a partition during the life of his adoptive father. Apparently the right to a partition, like every other incident of this peculiar status, must be proved as a special custom. After the death of the adopter he is entitled to the full rights of a son, even as against natural sons subsequently born or a son subsequently adopted in the usual manner (e). The Illatom son is not a coparcener of the natural-born or adopted son, though they may live together like an undivided family. Consequently there is no survivorship between them. His share passes to his own heirs as if it were separate property (f). As between himself and his own descendants he takes the property as self-acquisition, and therefore free from all restraints upon alienation (g). The property so taken descends to his relations, not to the heirs of the adopter (h), while he himself loses no rights of inheritance in his natural family (i). A very similar usage appears to exist in Pondicherry; but the rights of the adopted son will be defeated by the subsequent birth of a son to the adopter (k).

(d) Thesawaleme, ii.

(e) Hanumantamma v. Rami Reddi, 4 Mad., 272; Chinnaobayya v. Sura Reddi, 21 Mad., 226; Narasimha v. Veerabadra, 17 Mad., 237.

§ 208. The systems of adoption in force in Malabar vary according as the adoptive family is governed by the Marumakattayam, or by the Makattayam rule of inheritance. In the former case it is the absence of a female heir which threaten the family with extinction. Yet, in several cases cited by Mr. Wigram, adoptions, both of males and females in Nayar families, came before the Courts, and were supported by them. The right of adopting females seems to be undoubted, and Mr. Wigram says that the family of the Travancore Rajah would have been extinct long ago, but for the adoption of females to perpetuate the succession. In Canara it has been held by the Madras Sudder Court that the female ejaman or manager could not adopt if she had male issue living; but this decision is doubted by Mr. Wigram on the ground that the proper object of adoption in such families is to maintain the female stock of descent (l). I am not aware of any reported decision on the subject of Marumakattayam adoptions, except that of Payyath Nanu Menon v. Thiruthipalli Ramen Menon (m). The point actually decided was that, where the family was approaching extinction, only two aged males remaining, the karnaven could not Adoption in Malabar.

Nayars.

(f) Chenchamma v. Subbaya, 9 Mad., 114; Malli Reddi v. Padmamma, 17 Mad., 114.

(g) Chella Papi v. Chella Koti, 7 Mad. H. C., 25.

(h) Ramakristna v. Subbappa, 12 Mad., 442.

(i) Balarami v. Pera, 6 Mad., 267.

(k) Sorg H. L., 141; Co. Con., 138.

(l) Wigram, 4, 11, 12 citing Mad. Dec. 1859, p. 138.

(m) 20 Mad., 51, affd. 27 I. A., 231; S. C., 24 Mad., 73.

make a valid adoption without the consent of his anandraven. The record of the case, however, contains some interesting evidence not referred to in the report, which is worth preserving. Three adoptions in 1867, 1885 and 1889 were proved, in two of which the last males of the tarwaad adopted three females, and in the last the mother and the last four males adopted one female. In a fourth case in 1886 a female, the last member of the tarwaad, adopted a male and a female. In the case itself the karnaven had adopted his own son and daughter, and the son and daughter of his daughter. One witness said that this was improper, because it was the custom that the sons of the adopter should marry the females who were adopted. Three other witnesses, one of whom was the Zamorin Rajah of Calicut, said that such adoptions were usual, and two instances of the kind were stated. As to the result of an adoption, one witness said that the adoptee lost her interest in her natural tarwaad. Two other witnesses were Vaidiks, to whom religious questions were referred for decision. Of these, one said: "In the case of an adoption by a Nair the adoptee retains his or her interest, in his or her own tarwaad or not, according to agreement entered into at the time of adoption between the two families; but among Malabar Brahmans the adoptee does retain his interest in his Illom. 'Dwyamushyayana' is the usual form of adoption among Nambudris." The other said: "Among Nairs if the sole female of a tarwaad be adopted, she retains her interest in her natural tarwaad, and also acquires interest as a member of her new tarwaad."

§ 209. Among families which trace descent by sons, three systems of adoption prevail (n). The first strongly resembles the Kritrima. In it "ten hands, or five persons take part, viz., the parents who adopt, the parents giving away, and the boy given away. If the boy should belong to the same gotra as the adopting family, then there is no limit to the age at which he may be adopted. But if he should belong to a different gotra, then the adoption must take place before he goes through the upanayana ceremony. The two families are equally entitled to the performance of the funeral rites and obsequies by the son." In the second form, the only ceremony consists in offering a dry twig of the Ficus religiosa to the God of fire during the homam. A person thus adopted only performs the obsequies of his adoptive parents, and not those of their ancestors. The third form is resorted to only when the direct line of a man and his brothers is represented by an old man or a widow. "Then, for the due performance of their obsequies, an heir is sought after from among the distant sapindas and collateral relations, with the consent of them all. The person so adopted performs the funeral rites of the old man or woman, and succeeds to his or her properties." I presume, though it is not stated, that, in the first and second kinds, the adopted son is heir to the persons whose obsequies he celebrates.

(n) This account is drawn from the Report of the Travancore Census of 1891, p. 686.

The practice among Nambudris, that only the eldest Nambudris marries, necessarily limits the right of adoption to his line. "But if there be any male relative at all, however distant, then he is not entitled to the right of adopting. The nearest and oldest relative must be made to marry, and thus preserve the family continuity. But if there should be no prospect of his brothers getting issue, and if they should give their consent to the act, then he may have recourse to an adoption, to which the consent of the other relatives is not necessary. If, however, he adopts one of his distant relatives, in that case the consent of all his other relations, however distant, will be necessary" (o).

(o) Travancore Census, 1891, p. 635; Tottakara Nambudripad v. Poovully Nambudripad, Mad. Dec. 1855, 125; Keshadavan v. Vasudevan, 7 Mad., 297. In both these cases the adoption was made by a widow, and it is quite possible they were cases of a Sarvasvara danam son-in-law, ante § 76; see Wigram, 13-15.

CHAPTER VI.

FAMILY RELATIONS.

*Minority and Guardianship.*Period of minority.

§ 210. MINORITY under Hindu law terminates at the age of sixteen. There was, however, a difference of opinion as to whether this age was attained at the beginning, or at the end, of the sixteenth year. The Hindu writers seem to take the former view (a), and this was always held to be the law in Bengal (b). The latter limit is stated to be the rule in Mithila and Benares, and was followed in Southern India and apparently in Bombay (c). Different periods were also fixed for special purposes by statutes, which it does not come within the scope of this work to discuss. These variances will soon lose all importance in consequence of Act IX of 1875, which lays down, as a general rule for all persons domiciled in British India or the Allied States, that in the case of every minor of whose person or property a guardian has been, or shall be, appointed by any Court of Justice, and of every minor under the jurisdiction of any Court of Wards, minority terminates at the completion of the twenty-first year: in all other cases, at the completion of the eighteenth year (d). Where a guardian has once been appointed by a Court of Justice, minority will last till 21, whether the

(a) 1 Dig., 293; 2 Dig., 115; Mitakshara on Loans, cited V. Darp., 770; Daya Bhaga, iii., 1, § 17, note; Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., § 47.

(b) 1 W. MacN., 103; 2 W. MacN., 220, 288, note; Callychurn v. Bhuggobutty, 10 B. L. R., 231; S. C., 19 Suth., 110; Mothoor Mohun v. Surendro, 1 Cal., 108.

(c) W. MacN., ib. sup.; 1 Stra. H. L., 72; 2 Stra. H. L., 76, 77; Lachman v. Rupchand, 5 S. D., 114 (136); Shivji v. Datu, 12 Bom. H. C., 281, 290.

(d) Khwahush v. Surju, 3 All., 598; Reade v. Krishna, 9 Mad., 391. As to whether the appointment is complete until a certificate has actually been issued, see under Bombay Minors Act XX of 1864; Yeknath v. Warubai, 13 Bom., 285; under Bengal Act XL of 1858; Mungniram v. Mohunt Gursahai, 16 I. A., 195; S. C., 17 Cal., 347. A Collector appointed under Act XL of 1858, s. 7, is a guardian within the meaning of Act IX of 1875, s. 3, but one appointed under s. 12 is not, 17 Cal., p. 948.

guardian so appointed continues to act or not, or has or has not taken out a certificate (e). But where the Court of Wards has assumed jurisdiction, the disability of minority only continues so long as the Court of Wards retains charge of the minor's property, and no longer (f). The Act is not to affect any person in respect of marriage, dower, divorce, or adoption. Where the fact of minority is itself in dispute, a certificate of guardianship is not evidence of the fact, nor is a horoscope admissible for that purpose (g).

§ 211. GUARDIANSHIP.—The Hindu law vests the guardianship of the minor in the sovereign as parens patrie. Necessarily this duty is delegated to the child's relations. Of these the father, and next to him the mother, is his natural guardian. In default of her, or if she is unfit to exercise the trust, his nearest male kinsmen should be appointed, the paternal kindred having the preference over the maternal (h). Of course, in an undivided family, governed by Mitakshara law, the management of the whole property, including the minor's share, would be vested in the nearest male, and not in the mother. It would be otherwise where the family was divided (i). But

Order of guardianship.

(e) Rudra Prokash v. Bholanath Mukherjee, 12 Cal., 612; Girish Chunder v. Abdul Selam, 14 Cal., 55; Gordhan Das v. Harivalubh Das, 21 Bom., 281. As to the duration of a guardianship ad litem, see Jwala Dei v. Pirabhu, 14 All., 35.

(f) Birjmohun Lal v. Rudra Perkash, 17 Cal., 944.

(g) Salisunder v. Mohendro Lal, 17 Cal., 849; Gunraj Kuar v. Ablokh Pande, 18 All., 478.

(h) Manu, viii., § 27; ix., § 146, 190, 191; 3 Dig., 542—544; F. MacN., 25; 1 Stra. H. L., 71; 2 Stra. H. L., 72—75; Gungama v. Chendrappa, Mad. Dec. of 1859, 100; 1 W. MacN., 103; Moodookrishna v. Tandavaroy, Mad. Dec. of 1852, 105; Muhtaboo v. Gunesb, S. D. of 1854, 329. Under Mithila law, however, it has been held that the mother is entitled to be guardian of the person of her minor son in preference to the father. Jussoda v. Lallah Nettya, 5 Cal., 48. As to the claim of the step-mother, see Lukmee v. Umirchund, 2 Bor., 144 [163]; Ram Bunsee v. Soobh Koonwarree, 7 Suth., 321; S. C., 3 Wym., 219; S. C., 2 In. Jur., 193; Baee Sheo v. Ruttonjee, Morris, Pt. I, 103. As to the Punjab, see Punjab Customary Law, II, 133. A Hindu mother cannot appoint a guardian for her child by will. Where she has professed to do so, the actual appointment must be made under Act VIII of 1890, ss. 7, 8; Venkayya v. Venkata, 21 Mad., 401; see Pathan Alikhan v. Bai Panibai, 19 Bom., 832. Where the father has appointed a guardian by will, no other guardian can be appointed under Act VIII of 1890, s. 7 (3), until it is established that the will is invalid. Sayad Shahu v. Hapija, 17 Bom., 560.

(i) Alimelammal v. Arvnachellam, 3 Mad. H. C., 69; Bissonauth v. Doorgapersad, 2 M. Dig., 49; Gourakhoeri v. Gujadhur, 5 Cal., 219. But she can sue on his behalf if the proper guardian refuses to do so, Mokrund Deb v. Ranece Bissessuree, S. D. of 1853, 159.

this would not interfere with her right to the custody of the child itself (k). The husband, if of full age, is the guardian of his wife, and the fact that she has not attained puberty is immaterial. The practice that married girls should reside with their parents till puberty is a matter of special usage which cannot over-ride the husband's right unless pleaded and proved (l). The husband's relations, if any exist within the degree of a sapinda, are the guardians of a minor widow, in preference to her father and his relations (m). A mother loses her right by a second marriage (n), and a father loses his right by giving his son in adoption (o). And, of course, any guardian, however appointed, may be removed for proper cause (p). Little is to be found on the subject of guardianship in works on Hindu law. The matter is principally regulated by statute (q).

Right of guardian to custody of minor.

§ 212. The right of the guardian to the possession of the infant is an absolute right, of which he cannot be deprived, even by the desire of the minor himself, except upon sufficient grounds. In the case of parents, especially,

(k) Kooldeep v. Bajbunsee, S. D. of 1847, 557.

(l) Akama v. Puttaya, 3 Mysore, 119.

(m) Khudiram Mookerjee v. Bonwari, 16 Cal., 584.

(n) Bæe Sheo v. Rultonjee, Morri., Pt. I, 103.

(o) Lakshmbai v. Shridar, 3 Bom., 1.

(p) Alimelammal v. Arumachiellam, 3 Mad. H. C., 69; Gourmonee v. Bama-soonderee, S. D. of 1860, i, 532; Skinner v. Orde, 14 M. I. A., 309; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 125; S. C., 17 Suth., 77; Kanahiv. Biddya, 1 All., 549; Abasi v. Dunne, 1 All., 598.

(q) See Ct. of Wards Acts, Beng. Reg. XXVI of 1793, LII of 1803, VI of 1822; Mad. Reg. V of 1804; Act XX of 1864; Bengal Act IV of 1870. Minors not under Court of Wards, Acts XL of 1858, IV of 1872. Education and marriage of minors, Act XXVI of 1854, XXI of 1855, XIV of 1858. Ram Bunsee v. Soobh Koonwaree, 7 Suth., 321; S. C., 3 Wym., 219; S. C., 2 In. Jur., 193; Ramchunder v. Brojonath, 4 Cal., 929. See as to Procedure, Act IX of 1861; Guardian and Wards Act, XIII of 1874, VIII of 1890. Under Act VIII of 1890 a guardian cannot be appointed of the property of a minor who is a member of a joint Hindu family under Mitakshara law, and who has no separate property. Shankuar v. Mohanunda, 19 Cal., 301; Jhabbu Singh v. Ganga Bishen, 17 All., 529; Bandhu Prasad v. Dhiraji, 20 All., 400; Gharib Ullah v. Khalak, 30 I. A., 165; S. C., 25 All., 407. But a guardian of the person of such a minor may be so appointed. Virupakshappa v. Nilgangava, 19 Bom. F. B., 309. The High Courts still retain the powers conferred upon them by the High Courts Act of appointing guardians to the estate or person of infants, and are not limited by Act VIII of 1890 in the exercise of those powers: re Jairam Luxmon, 16 Bom., 634. Where the Law requires the appointment of a guardian under any statute, no greater powers can be exercised by a guardian de facto than would have been vested in him by statute, if he had been duly appointed. Abhassi Begam v. Rajroop Koonwar, 4 Cal., 33.

it is obvious that the custody of their child is a matter of greater moment to them than the custody of any article of property. Cases, however, have frequently occurred in the Indian Courts, where the right of a parent to recover his child has been contested, on the ground that the parent had changed his religion, and was therefore no longer a fit guardian for his child; or that the child had changed its religion, and was no longer willing to live with its parent. On the former point it has been decided that the fact that a father has changed his religion, whether the change be one to Christianity or from Christianity, is of itself no reason for depriving him of the custody of his children. It would be different, of course, if the change were attended with circumstances of immorality, which showed that his home was no longer fit for the residence of the child (r); or if he were applying to the Court for assistance in regaining possession of a child, whom at the time of conversion, he had voluntarily given up to his relation for the purpose of being brought up in the Hindu religion. The Court would then consider whether the granting of his request would be for the benefit of the infant (s). The case of a change of religion by the mother might, however, be different. The religion of the father settles the law which governs himself, his family, and his property. "From the very necessity of the case, a child in India, under ordinary circumstances, must be presumed to have his father's religion, and his corresponding civil and social status; and it is, therefore, ordinarily, and in the absence of controlling circumstances, the duty of a guardian to train his infant ward in such religion." Therefore, where a change of religion on the part of the mother would have the effect of changing the religion, and therefore the legal status of the infant, the Court would remove her from her position as guardian.

Change of religion by parent.

(r) R. v. Bezonji, Perry, O. C., 91.

(s) Mokoond Lal v. Nobodip Chunder, 25 Cal., 881. Such a suit is not barred by the provisions of the Guardian and Wards Act, VIII of 1890. Sharifa v. Mumekhan, 25 Bom., 574 contra; Sham Lal v. Bindo, 26 All., 594.

And the asserted wish of the minor, also, to change his religion, in conformity with that of the mother, would not necessarily alter the case; unless, perhaps, where the advanced age of the minor, and the settled character of his religious convictions would render it improper, or impossible, to attempt to restore him to his former position (t). The right of a father to direct the religion in which his children shall be brought up is so inseparable from his character as parent, that he cannot be bound by an agreement renouncing the right, even though the agreement is made before marriage and was a sine qua non to the marriage taking place (u). But where the father has allowed his agreement to be acted on during his life, and has died without expressing any contrary wish, these circumstances will be taken into consideration as showing that he had abandoned any desire that his children should be brought up in his own religion, especially if it appears that it would be for their temporal benefit to continue in the religion of their mother (v).

Change of religion by infant.

§ 213. The case of a child voluntarily leaving its parents has frequently occurred where there has been a conversion to Christianity. It seems at one time to have been the practice of the Courts of Calcutta and Madras to allow the child to exercise his discretion, if, upon a personal examination, they were satisfied that his wish was to remain away from his parents, and that he was capable of exercising an intelligent judgment upon the point. The contrary rule was for the first time laid down by the Supreme Court of Bombay, when they directed a boy of twelve years old to be given back to his father, and refused to examine him as to his capacity and knowledge of the Christian religion, or as to his wish to remain with his Christian instructors (w). This course was approved by (t) Skinner v. Orde, 14 M. L. A., 309; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 125; S. C., 17 Suth., 77.

(u) Re Agar Ellis, 10 Ch. D., 49. This right of the father continues in England till the child is 21. Re Agar Ellis, 24 Ch. D., 317.

(v) Re Clarke, 21 Ch. D., 817; re Violet Nevin, 2 Ch. (1891), 299; re McGrath, 1 Ch. (1893), 143.

(w) R. v. Nesbitt, Perry, O. C., 103.

Mr. Justice Patteson, to whom Sir Erskine Perry referred the point (x). That decision was followed in the Supreme Court of Madras in 1858, in the case of Kulloor Narrain-swamy (y), when Sir Christopher Rawlinson and Sir Adam Bittleston decided that a Hindu youth of the age of fourteen, who had gone to the Scottish missionaries, should be given up to his father, though he had become a convert to Christianity, and was most anxious to remain with his new protectors. A similar decision was given in Calcutta in 1863, by Sir Mordaunt Wells, where a boy of fifteen years and two months had voluntarily gone to reside with the missionaries (z). All these cases were lately examined and affirmed by the Madras High Court, which held that under Act IX of 1875 the period of parental control and custody lasted until 18 (a). It may also be observed that it is a criminal offence under the Indian Penal Code to entice from the keeping of its lawful guardian a male minor under the age of fourteen, or a female minor under the age of sixteen (b).

§ 214. More recently the Indian Courts, following the Recent decisions. rules of equity as administered in England, have refused to give effect to any inflexible application of paternal rights over minor children. The English practice, as deduced from recent cases, is laid down as follows in Seton on Decrees (c). "In equity a discretionary power has been exercised to control the fathers' or guardians' legal rights of custody, where their capricious exercise would materially interfere with the happiness and welfare of the child, or where such rights have been forfeited by misconduct or acquiescence, or where the father has so conducted himself, or is placed in such a position as to (x) Ib., p. 109.

(y) Not reported. I was counsel for the missionaries in the case.—J. D. M.

(z) Re Hinnauth Bose, 1 Hyde, 111.

(a) Reade v. Krishna, 9 Mad., 391. No agreement by which a parent surrenders to another the right to the custody of the child is binding, and in this respect the mother of an illegitimate child is in the same position as the father of one that is legitimate. Reg. v. Barnardo, A. C. (1891), 383.

(b) I. P. C., § 361, 363. The consent, or wish, of the minor is quite immaterial. Reg. v. Bhungee, 2 Suth. Cr., 5; Reg. v. Sooku, 7 Suth. Cr., 36.

(c) II, 884., Reg. v. Gyngall, 2 Q. B. (1893), 232; re Newton, 1 Ch. (1896), 740; re A and B, 1 Ch. (1897), 786.

render it not merely better for the children, but essential to their welfare in some very serious and important respect that their rights should be superseded or interfered with." In the first case, which arose in Bombay, the girl was fifteen, of Hindu birth, but had been left by her mother for eight years in an American Mission, where she had become a Christian, and had been trained up to earn her own living as a teacher (d). In the second case, the parents who were Chinese had, when about to leave Calcutta, handed over their infant daughter to a converted Chinaman and his wife to be adopted by them, and brought up as a Christian. They returned in a year and six months when the child was nine years old, and demanded it back again (e). In the third case, also from Calcutta, a Hindu father on his conversion to Christianity, left his son with its Hindu uncles to be brought up as a Hindu. When he tried to regain possession of the child it was twelve or thirteen years old, having been apparently four or five years in their charge (f). In all these cases there had been a voluntary abandonment of parental rights. The child had remained long enough in its new home to form new habits; and, from a worldly point of view, the child would undoubtedly have suffered by being restored to its parent. In the first two cases there were strong reasons to suppose that the parent was acting entirely with some indirect motives for his own benefit. In all, the application was refused on the ground that the Court, in the circumstances, was bound to consider what was most for the benefit of the minor. In the Bombay case Bayley, J., seemed to think that a boy at 14 or a girl at 16 was old enough to choose its own residence. There is nothing in any of these decisions to countenance the idea that a minor under this age could voluntarily leave or could be taken away from a parent who, however mean his position, was honestly endeavouring to perform his duties to his child, or that the fact that he had changed his religion, or that the child wanted to adopt a new religion, could be any ground for depriving him of his rights over his child.

(d) Re Saithri, 16 Bom., 307.

(e) Re Joshy Assam, 23 Cal., 290.

(f) Mokoond Lal v. Nobodip Chunder, 25 Cal., 881.

§ 215. Exactly such a case did, however, rise in Mysore, and the decision, though it would certainly not be followed in British India, deserves consideration from the influence it may exercise in Native States. The facts of that case were simple. The suit was brought by a father to recover possession of his infant children—one a child at the breast, and the other a girl of about two years old—who had been carried away from him by their mother. He had become a convert to Christianity by baptism on the 22nd November, and his wife had deserted him, carrying the children with her on the 27th. An allegation that she had joined him in his conversion was denied by her, and found against as a fact. There is nothing in the report to show the social position of the parties, or what property, if any, the father, while unconverted, possessed, or was interested in as a coparcener or otherwise. It was held by the Chief Court of Mysore (Ramachendra Iyer and Kristna Murti, JJ., Thumboo Chetty, C. J., dissenting) that the father was not entitled to the custody of his children (g). The legal conditions, under which the case was argued, were these: that Act XXI of 1850 (Freedom of Religion) had not been extended to Mysore; that the Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act, XXI of 1866, had been so extended, and that the Government had, by executive proceedings, in a case in which Hindus had disputed the right of Native Christians to make use of a well, "affirmed the principle that a mere change of religion did not deprive a citizen of the civil rights or social status he possessed prior to his changing his religion." The rule of procedure governing the Court was laid down by the 11th section of the Chief Court Regulation as follows:—

"Where in any suit or proceeding it is necessary for the (g) Dasapa v. Chikama, 17 Mysore, 324.

Case of Christian convert in Mysore.

Chief Court to decide any question regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, or caste, or any religious usage or institution, (a) the Hindu law where the parties are Hindus, or (b) any custom if such there be, having the force of law and governing the parties or property concerned, shall form the rule of decision unless such law, or custom, has, by legislative enactment, been altered or abolished (c). In cases where no specific rule exists, the Chief Court shall act according to justice, equity, and good conscience."

Kristna Murti, J., who pronounced the leading judgment, admitted that the case must be governed by the last rule. The ratio decidendi of his judgment will be found in the following passages:—"The rules of other systems of jurisprudence that a child belongs to his father, and that he should be educated and brought up in the religion of the father, do not seem to apply where the father has done something which the law declares shall sever him from all existing ties" (p. 342). "A Hindu son owes as much to his grandfather and great-grandfather in his observance of ancestral rites as to his own father. According to accepted Hindu notions, a father is one of the three fore-fathers or ascendants in one group, and all the three are equally interested in the religion of the son. We are now dealing with Hindu children, and as applied to them the rule that their religion should be that of their father must be read in an extended sense, so as to include the religion of all three of their ascendants. The father has no right by his act of conversion alone to do anything derogatory of his son's usefulness to his grandfather and great-grandfather" (p. 346). "Whatever we may do, we ought not to place them in a manifest disadvantage. The rule of the father's religion must be construed so as to mean his religion before conversion, or that of the infant's grandfather and great-grandfather. The father's right to the custody of his child ought not to entail upon the infant any sacrifice, social, religious or temporal, and no father has a right to change the position of an infant to his prejudice after his birth by anything he may do" (p. 348). Another argument was derived from the provisions of Act XXI of 1866, ss. 27, 28, and from the fact that the mother would necessarily be deprived of the society of her children, which it was said was contrary to the principles laid down by Sir James Hannen in D'Alton v. D'Alton (h). "With regard to the rights of the petitioner the principle which guides the Court is, that the innocent party shall suffer as little as possible from the dissolution of the marriage, and be preserved as far as the Court can do so, in the same position in which she was while the marriage continued—first by giving her a sufficient pecuniary allowance for her support, and, secondly, by providing that she should not be deprived of the society of her children unnecessarily." Sir R. J. Phillimore thought "that the first duty of the Court is to consider what is for the benefit of the children" (pp. 349—351).

§ 216. It may be doubted whether this argument, however plausible and ingenious, is satisfactory. It is quite clear that apostasy from Hinduism operates as a complete severance of the offender from the Hindu community and destroys all legal rights which he may possess under Hindu law. He could not sue for an inheritance or a partition, and it may be that, if he held property as member of a joint family, his coparceners might be able to oust him from a joint interest which Hindu law would no longer recognise. But though apostasy may make a man an outcaste, it does not make him an outlaw. When Hindu law has done its worst, he may still appeal to the rules of justice, equity, and good conscience. It cannot be suggested that anyone can plunder his house, or expel him from his land. It probably would not be asserted that anyone who met his child out of doors could take possession of it, and hold it in defiance of him. The Court does not rest its judgment on anything less than high views of equity. The first is, that the father will be depriving his own ancestors of the religious advantages which they may procure hereafter from the ceremonial services of his own children. If he may lawfully deprive them of his own services, it seems difficult to see why he may not also deprive them of the rather less effective services of his children. But no Court of Equity, such as those to which the learned judge appeals, would ever think of curtailing an admitted legal right, because its lawful exercise might trench on the happiness of ancestors who had passed, or when they passed, into another world. As regards the children, the rule asserted that "no father has a right to change the position of an infant to his prejudice after his birth by anything he may do" is too wide. It must at once be limited to acts of an unlawful and immoral or inequitable character. Suppose a father gives up an estate to which he discovers that he has no legal title, or resigns a lucrative office to become a Missionary in China, would any Court take his children from him? When it is said that the father's right of custody ought not to entail upon the infant any sacrifice, social, religious or temporal, it rests on no foundation of fact. It is of course absurd to talk of the religious sacrifice of babies, the eldest of whom was not three years old. As to social and temporal sacrifices, the learned judge seems to forget that the very act, which exiled the plaintiff from the Hindu community, introduced him to another, where his act was looked upon as meritorious and laudable. It is singular that, in using this argument, it did not occur to him that the Chief Justice, who presided at the hearing, was himself a Native Christian, whose change of religion had not prevented him reaching the highest offices in a Native State. As regards the rights of the wife, the answer is equally obvious. The judgment quoted referred to the case of a wife who, by the illegal and immoral acts of her husband, was compelled to break off all intercourse with him. It can have no application to the case of a wife, who, in her own interests, abandons her husband for a line of conduct on his part which the Court is not allowed to consider as either illegal or immoral. The Act XXI of 1866 recognises the fact that no wife, who does not share her husband's convictions, ought to be forced to share the fate of an outcast which he has conscientiously accepted. The act is framed for her benefit, but it contains nothing to show that, if she elects to deprive him of her own society, she has also a right to deprive him of the society of his children.

Discussion of
case.

(h) L. R., 4 P. D., 88, 89.

§ 217. The mother is the natural guardian of an illegitimate child. But where she has allowed the child to be separated from her and brought up by the father, or by persons appointed by him, the Court will not allow her to enforce her rights. Especially if the result would be disadvantageous to the child by depriving it of the advantages of a higher mode of life and education (i). Her own continued immorality would of itself be a sufficient reason against handing over to her a child which was otherwise properly provided for (k).

§ 218. The Contractual acts of a minor are governed by the provisions of the Indian Contract Act IX of 1872, but until very recently that Act has been interpreted by the Courts in India as if it had not altered the doctrines of the Common law. In 1902, however, the question was fully discussed by the Judicial Committee, and it was held that upon the true meaning of ss. 2, 10 and 11 of that Act the contract of a minor was absolutely void and not merely voidable, and that even if he had been supplied with necessaries suited to his condition in life no remedy could be obtained against himself personally, though under s. 68 the person who supplied the articles would be entitled to be reimbursed from his property (l). Under s. 183 no minor can employ an agent, but a person upon

(i) Ex parte Intiazoon Nissa Begam, 2 N. C., 271; R. v. Fletcher, Perry, O. C., 109; Mittibhayi v. Kottekarati, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 154; Lal Das v. Nekunjo, 4 Cal., 374; Kariyadan Pokkar v. Kajat Beeran, 19 Mad., 461.

(k) Venkanma v. Savitramma, 12 Mad., 67.

(l) Mohori Bibee v. Dhurmodas, 30 I. A., 114; S. C., 30 Cal., 539.

whom the law confers an authority to act as his agent can bind the minor, so long as he only exercises the authority for the purposes for which it is conferred. Hence contracts for such purposes will bind him when made by his guardian, though his name is not mentioned (m). He will also be bound by the act of his guardian, in the management of his estate, when bonâ fide and for his interest, and when it is such as the infant might reasonably and prudently have done for himself, if he had been of full age (n). But not where the act appears not to have been for his benefit (o) and the person who so deals with the guardian is bound to enquire into the property of his act (p). And where the act is done by a person who is

Power of guardian to bind infant

(m) Ranmal Sinji v. Vadilal, 20 Bom., 61, p. 70; Murari v. Tayana, 20 Bom., 286, contra if not necessary or manifestly beneficial. Sundararaja v. Pattanathusami, 17 Mad., 306.

(n) Caruminany v. Perumma, Mad. Dec. of 1885, 99; Temmakal v. Subbâmal, 2 Mad. H. C., 47; Manishankar v. Bai Muli, 12 Bom., 686; Nathuram v. Shoma Chhagan, 14 Bom., 662; Kumurooddeen v. Shaikh Bhadoo, 11 Suth., 134; Makbul v. Srimati Masnad, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 54; S. C., 11 Suth., 396; Gooroopersad v. Muddun, S. D. of 1856, 980; Soonder Narain v. Bennud Ram, 4 Cal., 76; Roshan Singh v. Har Kishan, 3 All., 535; Sikher Chand v. Dulputty, 5 Cal., 363; Nirvanaya v. Nirvanaya, 9 Bom., 365. See as to a guardian's power of leasing, Nubokishen v. Kaleepersad, S. D. of 1859, 607; Gopeenath v. Ranjeewun, ib., 913; Beebee Sowlutoonisa v. Robt. Savi, ib., 1575; Subramania Ayyar v. Arumuga Chetty, 26 Mad., 330. See also as to contracts requiring statutory sanction, Debi Dutt v. Subodra, 2 Cal., 283. Manji Ram v. Tara Singh, 3 All., 852; Doorga Persad v. Kesho Persad, 9 I. A., 27; S. C., 8 Cal., 656; Rai Balkrishna v. Mt. Masuma Bibi, 9 I. A., 182; S. C., 5 All., 142; Dunput Singh v. Shoobudra, 8 Cal., 620; Harendra Narain v. Moran, 15 Cal., 40; Bhupendro Narayan v. Nemye Chand, 15 Cal., 627; Girraj Baksh v. Kasi Hamid, 9 All., 340, as to dealings with the property of a minor by a guardian without sanction of Court, Act VIII of 1890, s. 29. Lala Hurro v. Basaruth, 25 Cal., 909; Dattaram v. Gungaram, 23 Bom., 287; Tejpal v. Ganga, 25 All., 59; Gharib Ullah v. Khalak, 30 I. A., 165; S. C., 25 All., 407, as to the power of a guardian when carrying on an ancestral trading establishment, Rampertab v. Foolibai, 20 Bom., 767, p. 777. Documents executed by a Hindu widow who described herself as "mother of A, minor," were held in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to be executed by her in her capacity as guardian of the infant, Watson v. Sham Lal Mitter, 14 I. A., 173; S. C., 15 Cal., 8. As to the power of the committee of a lunatic, see Abilakh Bhagat v. Bheki Mahto, 22 Cal., 864; Ampurnabai v. Durgapa, 20 Bom., 150.

(o) Sambasivien v. Kristnien, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 252; Naval Syud Ashrufooddeen v. Mt. Shama Soonderee, S. D. of 1853, 521; Nubokishen v. Kaleepersad, S. D. of 1859, 607; Lalla Bunseedhur v. Koonwar Bindeseree, 10 M. I. A., 454; Sonu v. Dhondu, 28 Bom., 330; Mahomed v. Sakatwat, 28 I. A., 190; S. C., 23 All., 394. See as to suits for specific performance by or against an infant, on contracts entered into by guardian Fatima Bibi v. Debnauth Shah, 20 Cal., 508; Jugulkishori v. Ananda Lal, 22 Cal., 545; Krishnasami v. Sundarapayah, 13 Mad., 415.

(p) Dalibai v. Gopebai, 26 Bom., 433. See as to carrying out, after the removal of a personal disability, a contract which was agreed upon while the disability lasted, Gregson v. Aditya Deb, 16 I. A., 221; S. C., 17 Cal., 223. Where it is open to a minor to repudiate a contract after attaining majority, the repudianot his guardian, but who is the manager of the estate in which he has an interest, he will equally be bound, if under the circumstances the step taken was necessary, proper, or prudent (q). It has been held that a guardian has authority to pay a debt barred by the statute, if really due (r). A widow certainly may, but that is on account of her religious duty to satisfy her husband's debts (post § 634). It has been held that an ordinary manager of a Hindu family cannot, as such, and without special authority, revive by acknowledgment a debt that is already time-barred (s). A fortiori, it would appear that he could not pay it, and the guardian, who is a mere trustee, can still less do so. In the same case it was held that a manager had the same authority to acknowledge an existing debt that he had to create debts. This doctrine was extended by the Madras Court to the case of the guardian of a minor (t); but in this respect the Calcutta High Court disagreed on the ground that the guardian of a minor cannot be considered his agent within the meaning of s. 19 of the Limitation Act (u). The Bombay High Court for some time took the same view, but subsequently on reference to the Full Bench, held that the guardian of a minor, acting properly for his benefit, was his agent within the meaning of the statute (v).

to pay debts barred by time.

tion must be made within a reasonable time after his coming of age. Carter v. Sitter, 2 Ch. (1892), 278; aff'd. A. C. (1893), 360; re Jones, 23 Ch. (1893), 461. A ratification will be of no effect, if the property has already passed away from the person who ratifies the transaction, Lallah Rawuth v. Chandee, S. D. of 1858, 312.

(q) Hunoomanpersaud v. Mt. Babooce, 6 M. I. A., 393; Mohanund Mondul v. Nafur Mondul, 26 Cal., 820; Balaji Narayan v. Nana, 27 Bom., 287. So held also in a case where the joint member was a lunatic, and the manager had no certificate under Act XXXV of 1858, Karti Chunder v. Bisheshwar Gaswami, 25 Cal. F. B., 585. As to the acts of a de facto guardian, see Majidan v. Rau Narain, 26 All., 22.

(r) Choudhry Chuttersal v. Government, 3 Suth., 57.

(s) Chinnaya v. Gurnathan, 5 Mad. F. B., 169; Bhasker Tatya v. Vijalal Nathu, 17 Bom., 512.

(t) Sobhanadri v. Sriannulu, 17 Mad., 221; fold. Subramania Ayyar v. Arumuga Chetty, 26 Mad., 330.

(u) Wajibun v. Kaden Buksh, 13 Cal., 292.

(v) Ranmal Singji v. Vadilal, 20 Bom., 61, p. 74; Annapagauda v. Keru, 26 Bom., 221.

Cannot bind
infant
personally.

§ 219. In all cases the power of the guardian or manager is limited to the disposal of the estate with which he is entrusted. He cannot bind the minor by any purely personal covenant. For instance, a guardian in order to pay off a charge upon the estate sold part of it, and was held to have acted properly in so doing. The part was sold as free of all Government claim for revenue, and naturally fetched a higher price on that account. The conveyance contained a covenant binding the minor and his heirs to indemnify the purchaser against any claims for revenue which the Government might make at any future time, and provided that the amount of such indemnity should be a charge upon the unsold portion of the estate, and should also be payable personally by the vendor and his heirs. After the termination of the minority Government assessed the land, and an action was brought upon the covenant by the purchaser. The Privy Council held that the personal covenant was not binding on the minor after he attained majority, such a covenant being beyond the guardian's powers. They thought that possibly it might bind the land, as the result of the covenant was to save part of the land which would otherwise have to be sold. It was unnecessary to decide this point, as under a special statute the land was made free from incumbrance (w). The following case was decided on the same principle: The suit was founded upon an alleged agreement by one Durga Pershad to maintain, educate and bring up one Ramanuj Dyal, son of Ganga Saran, and to constitute him his heir. Before the alleged agreement Durga Pershad had kept Ramanuj Dyal, who was his sister's son, in his house, and had formed a strong attachment to him. The agreement was made to induce Ganga Saran to give up his intention of taking the boy, and educating him in his own way. The father yielded. "I finally left the boy, saying that I waived all claim to the boy, and the thought of taking him did not remain in my mind." No deed or will was executed by Durga Pershad, and on his death the property was taken by his widows, as heirs. The Judicial Committee held that there was no contract or agreement, only an expectation on each side. Ganga Saran could only bind Ramanuj during his minority and it was improbable that Durga could have entered into an absolute agreement to make Ramanuj his heir, when the latter was under no obligation to remain with him after attaining majority (x).

(w) Waghela Raj Sanji v. Shekh Mastudin, 14 I. A., 89; S. C., 11 Bom., 551; Banmalsingji v. Vadilat, 20 Bom., 61.

Where the act is done by a person in possession of property, who does not profess to be acting on behalf of the minor, but who claims to be independent owner, and to be acting on his own behalf, it will not bind the infant who is really entitled (y).

Of course the objection to an act on the ground of minority must be taken by the minor himself. Those who deal with him are always bound, though he may not be (z).

Where a minor on coming of age sues to set a sale or mortgage aside, he is bound to refund the purchase money, when his estate has benefited by it, or to hold the property charged with the amount of debt from which it has been freed by the sale (a). But the authorities cited in this and the preceding paragraph must now be limited to cases where the contract was made by some one who was prima facie entitled to bind the minor. Where the contract relied on has been made by the minor himself it is void ab initio, (ante § 218) and therefore can form no consideration which would render the agreement binding on the other party. Nor can it raise any equities against the minor.

Equities on setting aside.

(x) Lala Narain v. Lala Ramanuj, 25 I. A., 46; S. C., 20 All., 209.

(y) Bahur Ali v. Sookeea, 13 Suth., 63; Gadgeppa v. Apaji, 3 Bom., 227; Inderchunder Singh v. Radhakishore, 19 I. A., 90; S. C., 19 Cal., 507.

(z) Canaka v. Cottavappah, Mad. Dec. of 1855, 184; Hannant Lakshman v. Jayarao, 12 Bom., 50; Mahamed Arif v. Saraswati Debya, 18 Cal., 259.

(a) Bukshun v. Doolhin, 12 Suth., 337; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 423; Paran Chandra v. Karunamayi, 7 B. L. R., 90; S. C., 15 Suth., 268; Bai Kesar v. Bai Ganga, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 81; Mirza Pana v. Saiad Sadile, 7 N.-W. P., 201; Kuvarji v. Moti Haridas, 3 Bom., 234; Sivaya Pillai v. Munisami, 22 Mad., 269.

As Romer, L. J., said in a case which was affirmed by the House of Lords, "The short answer is that a Court of Equity cannot say that it is equitable to compel a person to pay any moneys in respect of a transaction which, as against that person, the Legislature has declared to be void" (b).

False statement
by minor as to his age.

§ 220. Another question, which upon the Indian decisions is left uncertain, is this. Whether a minor, who has induced another to contract with him by a fraudulently false representation that he was of full age, can set up his actual minority when he is sued upon, or tries to repudiate the transaction. In the first case (c) the minor had borrowed money from the plaintiff and executed a mortgage to him. At the trial of the suit, which was for the usual mortgage decree and for a money decree, the plaintiff's counsel admitted that he could not obtain a mortgage decree, but that on proof of the false representation he was entitled to a money decree. The High Court held that the infant might be compelled to make restitution, where that was possible, of anything he had obtained by deceit, but that the deceit itself could not make the contract an effectual ground of suit. The second case (d) was exactly similar, except that the suit was expressly to enforce the mortgage by decree. Jenkins, J., distinguished the case from that last cited on the ground that there only a money decree was sought. He treated the admission as one that ought never to have been made, and then cited a series of decisions from Lord Cowper to the present day, to show that infancy cannot in equity be used as a defence to fraud, where the suit is for foreclosure or sale by virtue of a mortgage. This decision was brought before the High Court on appeal and was confirmed. The decision in Dhanmull v. Ramchunder was treated as doubtful, the Court intimating that, if the plaintiff had objected to the fact that no money decree had been granted, they would have referred the question to a Full Bench. Both cases were argued upon English decisions, it being admitted that they were binding upon the point. In the last case (e) the plaintiff sued to set aside a deed of sale which he had executed while a minor, and which contained a recital that he was 22 years of age. The High Court of Bombay dismissed the suit, not on the grounds discussed in the Calcutta decision, but upon the principle that, under s. 115 of the Evidence Act, he was estopped from contravening the assertion of fact upon which he had induced the defendant to act. In Mohori Bibee's case the same ground of estoppel was relied on as against the minor who had expressly alleged in writing that he was a major. The Judicial Committee declined to say whether the section would apply to infants, but held that in the particular instance it could not prevail, as the person to whom the statement was addressed knew the truth, and was not misled by it (f).

(b) Thurstan v. Nottingham Building Society (1902), 1 Ch., p. 13, aff'd. (1903) A. C. 6, folld. Mohori Bibee v. Dhurmodas, 30 I. A., p. 125.

(c) Dhanmull v. Ramchunder Ghose, 24 Cal., 265.

(d) Saral Chand Mitter v. Mohun Bibi, 25 Cal., 371.

§ 221. A minor, who is properly represented in a suit, Decrees. will be bound by its result, whether that result is arrived at by hostile decree, or by compromise or by withdrawal (g). But the Court will not make a decree by consent without ascertaining whether it is for the benefit of the infant. Without such approval by the Court, the compromise will not bind the infant, and the decree passed in accordance therewith will be set aside at his instance (h). It is

(e) Ganesh Lala v. Bapu, 21 Bom., 198.

(f) 30 I. A., p. 122.

(g) Kamaraju v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad., 309; Chengal Reddi v. Venkata Reddi, 12 Mad., 483; Tarinee Churn v. Watson, 12 Suth., 414; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 437; Modhoo Soodun v. Prithee Bullub, 16 Suth., 231; Jungee Lall v. Sham Lall, 20 Suth., 20; Lekraj v. Mahtab, 14 M. I. A., 393; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 35; S. C., 17 Suth., 117; Mrinamoyi v. Jogo Dishuri, 5 Cal., 450. As to mode of re-opening such a compromise, see Virupakshappa v. Shidappa, 23 Bom., 620. And the guardian may equally compromise claims before suit; Gopeenath v. Ramjeevun, S. D. of 1859, 913, or sue for part only relinquishing the rest, Gopal Rao v. Narasinga, 22 Mad., 308. As to effect of withdrawal of suit, Eshan Chunder v. Nundamoni, 10 Cal., 357.

(h) Ram Churn v. Mungul, 16 Suth., 232, Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882, § 462; Rajagopal v. Muttupalem, 3 Mad., 103; Karnali v. Rahimbhoy, 13 Bom., 137; Kalavati v. Chedi Lal, 17 All., 531; Ranga Rao v. Rajagopala, 22 Mad., 378; Virupakshappa v. Shidappa, 26 Bom., 109. Where, however, the decree on the compromise had become a final decree, the Court refused to enter-necessary that one who rests his case on a decree made by consent against an infant should show that the consent was given by somebody having authority to bind the infant; and even then the consent will not be binding, if it was given in reliance upon the false statements of a person who had an interest opposed to that of the infant (i). Where a decree binding on a minor has once been obtained, the creditor will not be deprived of the benefit of his decree, because he has by mistake taken out execution against the guardian by name instead of against the minor as represented by the guardian (k). And the mere fact that a proceeding was partly conducted through the intervention of a Civil Court—as for instance, a decree on a foreclosure—does not give it any additional validity against a minor, unless he is properly made a party to the proceeding at a stage when he can question it on its merits (l). Of course a compromise or a decree can always be set aside if obtained by fraud (m). Cases might also arise in which a guardian, by mere carelessness, amounting to gross neglect of duty, but without fraud, failed properly to support the interests of his ward, and thereby failed in a suit which he ought to have won. Where such negligence amounts to actual misconduct, the decree will not be held binding upon the infant, and may be set aside by suit (n).

The natural father of an adopted son is not his guardian, tain a suit by the infant on attaining majority to set it aside, Aman Singh v. Narain Singh, 20 All., 98. The proper course is to apply by way of review to reverse the decree. Rakkhal v. Advyta, 36 Cal., 613. As to reference to arbitration and award, where infant is concerned, see Roman Kissen Sett v. Hurro Lal, 19 Cal., 334.

(i) Muhammad Muntaz v. Sheo Rattangir, 23 I. A., 5; S. C., 23 Cal., 934; Ram Autar v. Raja Muhammad Muntaz, 24 I. A., 107; S. C., 24 Cal., 853.

(k) Hari v. Narayan, 12 Bom., 427.

(l) Buzrung v. Mt. Mautora, 22 Suth., 119.

(m) Lekraj v. Mahtab, 14 M. I. A., 398; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 85; S. C., 17 Suth., 117; Bibee Solomon v. Abdul Azeez, 6 Cal., 687; Eshan Chunder v. Nundamoni, 10 Cal., 357; Raghubar Dyal v. Bhikya Lal, 12 Cal., 69.

(n) Mungviram v. Mohunt Gursahat, 16 I. A., p. 204; S. C., 17 Cal., p. 361; Lalla Sheo Churn v. Ramnandan, 22 Cal., 8; Gursandas v. Ladkavahu, 19 Bom., 571; Gopal Rao v. Narasinga, 22 Mad., 808, per Lord Watson, Ram Autar v. Raja Muhammad Muntaz, 24 I. A., 107, p. 114; S. C., 24 Cal., p. 861, or by review Ram Sarup Lal v. Shah Latafat, 29 Cal., 735.

unless specially so appointed, so as to bind him by his conduct of a suit in his behalf (o). And although the minor may properly be represented by the manager of the undivided family, the mere fact that the suit is conducted or defended by the manager is not in itself sufficient to show that the minor is adequately represented (p). If, however, the Court has in fact given permission to any one to represent the minor, his acts will not be invalid for want of a certificate under Act XL of 1858, though the absence of such certificate may, if not rebutted, be evidence that there never has been such a permission (q). A mere want of form in the mode of describing the minors will not affect the validity of the decree, if they have been really represented and sued (r).

A decree in a suit in which a minor is properly represented may be liable to set aside for fraud or other reasons, but till set aside it binds him, and proceedings to get rid of it must be commenced within a year from the date of the decree or from the termination of the minority (s). Where the minor has not been properly represented the decree is a nullity, as far as he is concerned, even without any allegation of fraud (t). He need take no notice of it, and may proceed to enforce his rights within the period of limitation which would be applicable if no decree had been passed (u).

(o) Srinarain Mitter v. Broomuttu Kishen, 11 B. L. R., 171 (P. C.).

(p) Padmakar Vinayek v. Mahadev Krishna, 10 Bom., 21. Doubting Gan Savant v. Narayan Dhond, 7 Bom., 467; Vishnu Keshav v. Ramchandra, 11 Bom., 130.

(q) Jogi Singh v. Behari Singh, 11 Cal., 509; Alim Buksh v. Jhalo Bibi, 12 Cal., 48; Durgopershad v. Kesho Pershad, 9 I. A., 27; S. C., 8 Cal., 656; Suresh Chunder v. Jugat Chunder, 14 Cal., 204; Parmeshar Das v. Bela, 9 All., 508; Bibi Waklan v. Banke Behari, 30 I. A., 182; S. C., 30 Cal., 1021. As to suits brought on behalf of a minor without the sanction of the Court of Wards, see Dinesh Chunder v. Golam Mostapha, 16 Cal., 89.

(r) Jogi Singh, Behari Singh ub sup., Bhaba Pershad v. Secretary of State, 14 Cal., 159; Suresh Chunder v. Jugat Chunder, 14 Cal., 204; Natesvayyan v. Narasimmayyar, 13 Mad., 480; Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhubaneswari Debi, 15 I. A., 195; S. C., 16 Cal., 40.

(s) Act XV of 1877, Sched. II, Art. 12. Mungviram Marwari v. Mohunt Gursahat, 16 I. A., 203; S. C., 17 Cal., 347. As to the mode of setting aside such a decree, see Mirali Rahimbhoy v. Rehmoobhoy, 15 Bom., 694.

(t) Sham Lal v. Ghasita, 23 All., 459.

(u) Daji Himat v. Dhirajram, 12 Bom., 18.

Suits against guardian.

A guardian is liable to be sued by his ward for damages arising from his fraudulent or illegal acts (v). For debts due by the ward, the guardian of course is only liable to the extent of the funds which have reached his hands (w).

(v) Issur Chunder v. Ragab, S. D. of 1860, 1, 349; Bengal Reg. X of 1793, s. 32.
(w) Sheikh Azeemooddeen v. Moonshee Athur, 3 Suth., 137.

CHAPTER VII.

EARLY LAW OF PROPERTY.

§ 222. THE student who wishes to understand the Hindu system of property must begin by freeing his mind from all previous notions drawn from English law. They would not only be useless, but misleading. In England ownership, as a rule, is single, independent, and unrestricted. It may be joint, but the presumption will be to the contrary. It may be restricted, but only in special instances, and under special provisions. In India, on the contrary, joint ownership is the rule, and will be presumed to exist in each individual case until the contrary is proved. If an individual holds property in severalty, it will, in the next generation, relapse into a state of joint tenancy. Absolute, unrestricted ownership, such as enables the owner to do anything he likes with his property, is the exception. The father is restrained by his sons, the brother by his brothers, the woman by her successors. If property is free in the hands of its acquirer, it will resume its fetters in the hands of his heirs. Individual property is the rule in the West. Corporate property is the rule in the East. And yet, although the difference between the two systems can now only be expressed in terms of direct antithesis, it is pretty certain that both had a common origin (a). But in India the past and the present are continuous. In England they are separated by a wide gulf. Of the bridge by which they were formerly connected, a few planks, only visible to the eye of the antiquarian, are all that now remain.

§ 223. Three forms of the corporate system of property exist in India: the Patriarchal Family, the Joint Family and the Village Community. The two former, in one Misleading effect of English analogies.

Different forms of corporate property.

(a) See Maine, Village Communities, 82.

shape or other, may be said to prevail throughout the length and breadth of India. The last still flourishes in the north-west of Hindostan. It is traceable, though dying out, in Southern India. It has disappeared, though we may be sure it formerly existed, in Bengal and the upper part of the peninsula. In some regions, such as among the Hill tribes and the Nairs of the Western Coast, it appears never to have arisen at all. The analogy between the two latter forms is complete. The Village Community is a corporate body, of which the members are families. The Joint Family is a corporate body, of which the members are individuals. The process of change which has been undergone both by Village Communities and Families is similar, and the causes of this change are generally identical. It seems a tempting generalisation to lay down that one must have sprung from the other; that the Village Community has grown out of the extension of the Joint Family, or that the Joint Family has resulted from the dissolving of the larger body into its component parts. But such a generalisation would be unsafe. The same causes have no doubt produced the Village system and the Family system. But it is certain that there are many Villages which have never sprung from the same Family, and many places where the Family system has shown no tendency to grow into the Village system.

§ 224. The Village system of India may be studied with most advantage in the Punjab, as it is there that we find it in its most perfect, as well as in its transitional, forms (b). It presents three marked phases, which exactly correspond to the changes in an undivided family. The closest form of union is that which is known as the Communal Zemindari village. Under this system "the land is so held that all the village co-sharers have each their proportionate share in it as common property, without any possession of, or title to, distinct portions of it; and the measure of each proprietor's interest is his share as fixed by the customary law of inheritance. The rents paid by the cultivators are thrown into a common stock, with all other profits from the village lands, and after deduction of the expenses the balance is divided among the proprietors according to their shares" (c). Punjab. This corresponds to the undivided family in its purest state. The second stage is called the pattidari village. In it the holdings are all in severalty, and each sharer manages his own portion of land. But the extent of the share is determined by ancestral right, and is capable of being modified from time to time upon this principle (d). This corresponds to the state of an undivided family in Bengal. The transitional stage between joint holdings and holdings in severalty is to be found in the system of re-distribution, which is still practised in the Pathan communities of Peshawar. According to that practice, the holdings were originally allotted to the individual families on the principle of strict equality. But as time introduced inequalities with reference to the numbers settled on each holding, a periodical transfer and re-distribution of holdings took place (e). This practice naturally dies out as the sense of individual property strengthens, and as the habit of dealing with the shares by mortgage and sale is introduced. The share of each family then becomes its own. The third and final stage is known as the bhaichari village. It agrees with the pattidari form, inasmuch as each owner holds his share in severalty. But it differs from it, inasmuch as the extent of the holding is strictly defined by the amount actually held in possession. All reference to ancestral right has disappeared, and no change in the number of the co-sharers can

(b) The results of the latest information upon this subject will be found in two works by Mr. B. H. Baden-Powell upon Indian Village Communities; a large and exhaustive volume published in 1896, and a smaller work which is a summary of the former dated 1899.

(c) Punjab Customs, 105, 161. This stage is the same as that described by Sir H. S. Maine, as existing in Servia and the adjoining districts. Ancient Law, 267; see Evans, Bosnia, 44. (d) Punjab Customs, 106, 156.

(e) Punjab Customs, 125, 170. See Corresponding Customs, Maine, Anc. Law, 267; Village Communities, 81; Lavaleye, ch. vi.; Wallace, Russia, i., 189.

entitle any member to have his share enlarged. His rights have become absolute instead of relative, and have ceased to be measured by any reference to the extent of the whole village, and the numbers of those by whom it is held (f). This is exactly the state of a family after its members have come to a partition.

§ 225. The same causes which have broken up the Joint Family of Bengal have led to the disappearance of the Village system in that province. In Western and Central India, the wars and devastations of Muhammedans, Mahrattas, and Pindarries swept away the Village institutions, as well as almost every other form of ancient proprietary right (g). But in Southern India, among the Tamil races, we find traces of similar communities (h). The Village landholders are there represented by a class known as Mirasidars, the extent and nature of whose rights are far from being clearly ascertained. It is certain, however, that they have a preferential right over other inhabitants to be accepted as tenants by the Government, a right which they do not even lose by neglecting to avail themselves of it at each fresh settlement (i). They are jointly entitled to receive certain fees and perquisites from the occupying tenants, and to share in the common lands (k). Some villages are even at the present time held in shares by a body of proprietors who claim to represent the original owners, and a practice of exchanging and re-distributing these shares is known still to exist, though it is fast dying out (l). In Madras the Govern-

(f) Punjab Customs, 106, 161.

(g) See speech of Sir J. Lawrence, cited Punjab Customs, 188.

(h) Elphinstone, India, 66, 249.

(i) Ramanooja v. Peetayen, Mad. Dec. of 1850, 121; Alagappa v. Ramasamy, Mad. Dec. of 1859, 101; 5th Report House of Commons, cited Mootoopermall v. Tondaven, 1 N. C., 320 [275]. See Fakir Muhammad v. Tirumala Chariar, 1 Mad., 205.

(k) Mootoopermall v. Tondaven, 1 Stra. N. C., 300 [260]; Koomarasawmy v. Bagava, Mad. Dec. of 1852, 38; Viswanadha v. Mootoo Moodely, Mad. Dec. of 1854, 141; Muniappa v. Kasturi, Mad. Dec. of 1862, 50. In the Punjab this right may be retained by a co-sharer, though he has ceased to possess any land in the village. Punjab Customs, 108.

(l) Madura Manual, Pt. V., 12; Venkataswami v. Subba Rau, 2 Mad. H. C., 1, 5; Anandayyan v. Devarajayyan, ib., 17; Saminathaiyan v. Saminathaiyan, 4 Mad. H. C., 159; Sittiramaiyar v. Alagiri, 3 Mad. Rev. Reg., 189.

ment claim is made upon each occupant separately, not upon the whole village, as in the Punjab; but the contrary usage must once have existed. Sir G. Campbell mentions an instance in which the Government supposed that they were receiving their revenue as usual, from the individual ryots. It was ascertained that the village had really taken the matter into its own hands, and regularly re-distributed the burthen according to ancient practice among the several occupants (m).

§ 226. The co-sharers in many of these Village Communities are persons who are actually descended from a common ancestor. In many other cases they profess a common descent, for which there is probably no foundation (n). In some cases it is quite certain there can be no common descent, as they are of different castes, or even of different religions (o). But it is well known that in India the mere fact of association produces a belief in a common origin, unless there are circumstances which make such an identity plainly impossible. I have often heard a witness say of another man that he was his relation, and then upon cross-examination explain that he was of the same caste. The ideas presented themselves to his mind, not as two but as one. An instance is given by Sir H. S. Maine, in which some missionaries planted in villages converts collected from all sorts of different regions. They rapidly adopted the language and habits of a brotherhood, and will no doubt before long frame a pedigree to account for their juxta-position (p). It is evident that an actual community of descent must depend upon mere accident. If a family settled in an unoccupied district, it might spread out till it formed one community, or several Village Communities. The same result might happen if a family became sufficiently powerful to turn

(m) Land Tenures, Cobden Club, 97.

(n) Punjab Customs, 136, 164; Maine, Vill. Com., 12, 175; Early Instit., 1, 64; Lyall, Asiatic Studies, ch. vii.; Hunter's Orissa, ii., 72; McLennan, 214. It must be remembered that the co-sharers of a village are a much smaller body than the inhabitants.

(o) Maine, Vill. Com., 176; Muniappa v. Kasturi, Mad. Dec. of 1862, 50.

(p) Maine, Early Instit., 238.

Tradition of common descend.

out its neighbours, or to reduce them to submission. Where the country was more thickly peopled, several families would have to unite from the first for mutual protection, and would in time begin to account in the usual way for the fact that they found themselves united in interest. Families which settled, or sprung up, in regions that were fully occupied never could form new communities based on the possession of land.

Joint families do not always expand into village communities.

§ 227. As it is certain that Village Communities have not always sprung from a single Joint Family, so it is equally certain that a Joint Family does not necessarily tend to expand into a Village Community. For instance, the Nairs, whose domestic system presents the most perfect form of the Joint Family now existing, never have formed Village Communities. Each tarwād lived in its own mansion, nestling among its palm trees, and surrounded by its rice lands, but apart from, and independent of, its neighbours. This arises from the peculiar structure of the family, which traces its origin in each generation to females, who live on in the same ancestral house, and not to males, who would naturally radiate from it, as separate but kindred branches of the same tree. In a lesser degree the same thing may be said of the Kandhs. Among them the Patriarchal Family is found in its sternest type. But though the families live together in septs and tribes, tracing from a common ancestor, and acknowledging a common head, and although their hamlets have a deceptive similarity to a Hindu village, they want the one element of union—there is no unity of authority, and no community of rights. Each family holds its property in severalty, and never held it in any other way. It is absolute owner of the land it occupies; and it ceases to have any interest in the land which it abandons. The chieftain has influence, but not authority. The families live in proximity, but not in cohesion. They are not branches of one tree, but a collection of twigs (q). This, again, seems to arise from the circumstances of their position. With them land is so abundant, and their wants so few, that it has never been necessary to restrain the individual for the benefit of the community. Where the common stock is limited, it is necessary to make rules for its enjoyment; but where all can have as much as they want, no one would take the trouble to make rules, and no one would submit to them if made.

(q) Hunter's Orissa, ii., 72, 204.

Kandhs.

§ 228. The same causes which have prevented the Joint Family from extending into the Village Community appear also to check the Patriarchal Family at the stage at which it would naturally expand into the Joint Family. For instance, among the Kandhs, at the death of the father, the family union, which previously was absolute, appears to dissolve. The property is divided, and each son sets up for himself as a new head of a family (r). Among the Hill Tribes of the Nilgiris, and among the Kols, the same practice prevails (s).

Arrested expansion of the Patriarchal Family.

§ 229. It would appear, therefore, that in tracing society backwards to its cradle, one of the earliest, if not the earliest, unit, is the Patriarchal Family. In the language of Sir H. S. Maine (t), "Thus all the branches of human society may, or may not, have been developed from joint families which arose out of an original Patriarchal cell; but, wherever the Joint Family is an institution of an Aryan race (u), we see it springing from such a cell, and, when it dissolves, we see it dissolving into a number of such cells."

§ 230. The Patriarchal Family may be defined as "a group of natural or adoptive descendants, held together ^{Its origin and nature.}

(r) Hunter's Orissa, ii., 79.

(s) Breeks, Primitive Tribes of the Nilgiris, 9, 39, 42, 68.

(t) Early Institutions, 118. I have retained the following pages unaltered, notwithstanding the attack lately made upon Sir H. S. Maine's views by Mr. McLennan. Patriarchal Theory, 1885. For a reply to that work, so far as it affects Hindu Law, see an article by the present author in the Law Quarterly Review, I, 485. For a general reply by Sir H. S. Maine, see the London Quarterly Review, Jan. 1886.

(u) This qualification was no doubt intended to exclude cases where the Joint Family is of a polyandrous type.

by subjection to the eldest living ascendant, father, grandfather, great-grandfather. Whatever be the formal prescription of the law, the head of such a group is always in practice despotic; and he is the object of a respect, if not always of an affection, which is probably seated deeper than any positive institution" (v). The absolute authority over his family possessed by the Roman father in virtue of this position is well known. A very similar authority was once possessed by the Hindu father. Manu says: "Three persons, a wife, a son, and a slave are declared by law to have in general no wealth exclusively their own; the wealth which they may earn is regularly acquired for the man to whom they belong" (w). And so Narada says of a son, "he is of age and independent, in case his parents be dead; during their lifetime he is dependent, even though he be grown old" (x). But this doctrine was not peculiar to the Aryan races. Among the Kandhs it is stated that "in each family the absolute authority rests with the house father. Thus, the sons have no property during their father's lifetime; and all the male children, with their wives and descendants, continue to share the father's meal, prepared by the common mother" (y). An indication of a similar usage still exists among the Tamil inhabitants of Jaffna, where all acquisitions made by the sons while unmarried, except mere presents given to them, fall into the common stock (z). The records of the Pondicherry Courts show that the same rule was recognised there in 1788 (a). As soon as they are married, it would appear that each becomes the head of a new family.

§ 231. The transition from the Patriarchal to the Joint Family arises (where it does arise) at the death of the

(v) Early Institutions, 116; Ancient Law, 133. Here seems to be the origin of the great Hindu canon of inheritance, that the funeral cake stops at the third in descent. See post § 515.

(w) Manu, viii., § 416; Narada, v., § 39; Sancha & Lich., 2 Dig., 526.

(x) Narada, iii., § 38. See, too, Sancha & Lich., 2 Dig., 533.

(y) Hunter's Orissa, ii., 72.

(a) Sorg. H. L., 173.

(z) Thesawaleme, iv., 5.

common ancestor, or head of the house. If the family choose to continue united, the eldest son would be the natural head (b). But it is evident that his position would be very different from that of the deceased Patriarch. The former was head of the family by a natural authority. The latter can only be so by a delegated authority. He is primus but inter pares. Therefore, in the first place, he is head by choice, or by natural selection, and not by right. The eldest is the most natural, but not the necessary head, and he may be set aside in favour of one who is better suited for the post. Hence Narada says (c): "Let the eldest brother, by consent, support the rest like a father; or let a younger brother, who is capable, do so; the prosperity of the family depends on ability." And so the old Toda, when asked which of his sons would take his place, replied, "the wisest" (d). In the next place the extent of his authority is altered. He is no longer looked upon as the owner of the property, but as its manager (e). He may be an autocrat as regards his own wife and children, but as regards collaterals he is no more than the President of a Republic. Even as regards his own descendants, it is evident that his power will tend gradually to become weaker. The property which he manages is property in which they have the same interest as the other members of the family. The restrictions which fetter him in dealings with the property as against collaterals, will, by degrees, attach to his dealings with it as against his own children. They also will come to look upon him as the manager, and not as the father. The apparent conflict between many of the texts of Hindu sages as to the authority of the father may, perhaps, be traced to this source. Those which refer to the father as head of the Patriarchal Family will attribute to him higher powers than those which refer to him as head of a Joint Family.

§ 232. We have already seen (f) that the step from

(b) Manu, ix., § 105.

(c) Narada, xiii., § 5.

(e) See Maine, Early Institutions, 116.

(d) Breeks, Primitive Tribes, 9.

(f) Ante § 228.

Difference between Patriarchal and Joint
Family.

Not in necessary sequence.

the Patriarchal to the Joint Family is one which, in some states of society, never takes place. Conversely the Joint Family is by no means necessarily preceded by the Patriarchal Family. For instance, the Nair system absolutely excludes the Patriarchal idea. Its essence is the tracing of kinship through females, and not through males. Mr. McLennan considers that the Nair system was the necessary antecedent of the patriarchal form of relationship. According to his view, the loose relation between the sexes in early ages first settled into polyandry. Where it existed in its rudest shape, in which a woman associated with men unrelated to each other, the only family group that could be formed would be that of the mother and her children, and the children of such of them as were females. This is the Nair type, and still exists, at least in theory, in the Canarese and Malabar tarwāds. Here kinship by females was alone possible. When the woman passed into the possession of several males of the same family, the circle of possible paternity became narrowed. The wife then lived in the house of her husbands, and the children were born in their home as well as hers. They could be identified as the offspring of some one of the husbands, though not with certainty as the offspring of any particular one. This was the first dawning of kinship through males. It is the species of polyandry that exists in Thibet, Ceylon, among the Todas on the Nilgiri Hills and elsewhere. Where the woman was the wife of several brothers, the eldest, to whom she was first married, would naturally have a special claim upon her, and could be ascertained to be the father of the children who were first born. By degrees this special claim would change into an exclusive claim, and so a system of absolute monandry would arise, and the Patriarchal Family become possible (g). Substantially the same view is put

(g) McLennan, Studies in Ancient History. Patriarchal Theory. See further discussion on the same subject in Spencer's Principles of Sociology, I, chaps. iii.—viii.; Fortnightly Review, May and June, 1877; and in Mr. Morgan's "Ancient Society," Part III. Mr. C. Staniland Wake, "The development of marriage and kinship," chapters ii., viii., ix., x. Mr. Edward Westermarck,

Polyandrous origin of family system.

forward by Dr. Mayr in a less elaborate form (h). Now, as the tenure of property always moulds itself to the family relations of the persons by whom it is held, the result would be that property would first be held by the entire tribe; next by those who claimed relationship to a common mother; and next by a family, tracing either from several males, or from a single male. According to this theory, the Patriarchal Family would always be evolved from a wider Joint Family, instead of the reverse.

§ 233. It seems to me that the fallacy of these speculations consists in assuming that a cause, which is sufficient to produce a particular result, is the cause which has invariably produced that result. It is certain that polyandry, and the female-group system of property, has a tendency to change into monandry, and individual property. We have seen the process going on among the Kandyan chiefs of Ceylon, and the Todas evince the same tendency (i). Fidelity to a single husband is becoming common among the Nair women of the better class (k). And it is certain that the Malabar tarwāds would long since have broken up into families, each headed by a male, if our Courts had allowed them to do so. It is equally certain that the Patriarchal Family is capable of expanding, and has a tendency to expand into the wider Joint Family, for we see instances of it every day. Every Hindu who starts with nothing, and makes a self-acquired fortune, is a pure and irresponsible patriarch. But we know that in a couple of generations his offspring have ramified into a Joint Family, exactly, to use Mr. McLennan's simile, like a banian tree which has started with a single shoot. It may possibly be that the Village

Theory discussed.

"The History of Human Marriage," chapters iv., v. Maxime Kovalevsky, "Tableau des Origines et de l'Évolution de la Famille et de la Propriété," Leçons i.—v.

(h) Ind. Erbrecht, pp. 72—76. He appears not to have been acquainted with Mr. McLennan's work on Primitive Marriage, and bases his theory on the cruder speculations of Sir J. Lubbock, as to the early prevalence of what the latter terms "Communal Marriage." Lubbock, Origin of Civilisation, chap. iii.

(i) McLennan, 195; Brecks, Primitive Tribes, 9. Mr. Lewis H. Morgan gives numerous instances of the same transition among the American Indian tribes.

(k) Ante § 99.

Communities and undivided families of Southern India have originated among polyandrous tribes, for we have evidence of the existence of polyandry among the Dravidian and other primitive races (§ 62). But it is difficult to attribute to the same cause the existence of similar organizations among the Aryan races of Northern India. We know that the village and family system in these races must be of enormous antiquity, because we find an exactly similar system existing among the kindred races which branched off from them before history commenced. It is impossible to say that the ancestors of the common race were not polyandrous, but it is almost certain that their descendants neither are nor have been so during any period known to tradition (§ 63). It is difficult therefore to imagine that polyandry could have been the necessary antecedent of a system of property, which is able to flourish in every part of the world under exactly opposite conditions.

§ 234. The following suggestions seem to me capable of accounting for all the known facts, and are equally applicable to any families, however formed.

Tribal rights.

I assume that an original tribe, finding themselves in any tract of country, would consider that tract to be the property of the tribe; that is to say, they would consider that the tribe, as a body, had a right to the enjoyment of the whole of the tract, in the sense of excluding any similar body from a similar enjoyment (l). It would never occur to them that any individual member of the tribe had a right to exclude any other member permanently from any part of it; they would hunt over it and graze over it in common. When they came to cultivate the land, each would cultivate the portion he required. The produce would go to support himself and his family, but the land would be the common property of all. So long as the ratio between population and land was such as to enable anyone to occupy as much as he liked, and when the land was exhausted, to throw it up and exhaust another patch, the community would have no motive for restraining him in so doing. His rights would appear to be unlimited, merely because no one had an interest in limiting them. The same cause would produce the continual break-up of families. They might cling together for mutual protection; but as soon as each fraction grew strong enough to protect itself, it would wander apart to seek fresh pasturage for its flocks, or virgin soil for its crops (m). This is the condition of the hill tribes of India at present. But it would be different when population began to press upon subsistence, either from the increase of the original tribe, or from the closing in of adjoining tribes. Then the unlimited use of the land by one would be a limitation of its use by another. An individual or a family might be sufficiently strong to enforce an exclusive possession, but everyone could not encroach upon everyone else. The community would assert its right to put each of its members upon an allowance. That allowance would be apportioned on principles of equality, giving to each family according to its wants. The mode of apportionment might be, either by throwing all the produce into a common stock, and then re-distributing it, as in a communal Zemindari village; or by allotting separate portions of land to each family, with reference to the number of its members, as in a pattidari village. In the latter case equality would probably be from time to time restored by an exchange and re-distribution of shares, as in the Russian Mir, and the Pathan communities. In time this periodical dislocation of society would cease: it would tend to die out when the members began to improve their own shares. In the Punjab it is found that community has died out in spots whose cultivation depends entirely upon wells (n). Gradually the shares would come to be looked upon as private property. The Growth of restrictions.

(l) This is the sort of right which the Red Indians are always asserting against the Americans.

Private property.

(m) See the separation of Abraham and Lot, in Genesis, xiii.

(n) Punjab Customs, 128.

idea of community would be limited to a joint interest in the village waste, and a joint responsibility for the claims of Government. This is the bhaiacharry village. If Government chose to settle with each individual instead of with the village, the members would be exactly in the same position as the Mirasidars of Southern India.

Progress of the family.

§ 235. During the whole of this time the family system might be going through a series of analogous changes. The same causes which led to the compression or disruption of the tribe would lead to the compression or disruption of the family. The same feeling of common ownership which caused the tribe to look upon the whole district as their joint property, would cause the family to look upon their allotment in the same way. The same sense of individual property which led to the break-up of the village into shares, would lead to the break-up of the family by partition. But as the motives for union are stronger in a family than in a village, the union of the family would be more durable than that of the village. And this, in fact, we find to be the case.

Early Hindu writers.

§ 236. The ancient Hindu writers give us little information as to the earlier stages of the law of property. So far as property consisted in land, they found a system in force which had probably existed long before their ancestors entered the country, and they make little mention of it, unless upon points as to which they witnessed, or were attempting innovations. No allusion to the village coparcenary is found in any passage that I have met. Manu refers to the common pasturage, and to the mode of settling boundary disputes between villages, but seems to speak of a state of things when property was already held in severalty (o). But we do find scattered texts which evidence the continuance of the village system, by showing that the rights of a family in their property were limited by the rights of others outside the family. For instance, as long as the land held by a family was only Limitation of family rights.

(o) Manu, viii., § 237—265. Jolly, Lect. 88.

portioned out by the community for their use, it is evident that they could not dispose of it to a stranger without the consent of the general body. This is probably the real import of two anonymous texts cited in the Mitakshara: “Land passes by six formalities; by consent of townsmen, of kinsmen, of neighbours and of heirs, and by gift of gold and water.” “In regard to the immovable estate, sale is not allowed; it may be mortgaged by consent of parties interested” (p). This would also explain the text of Vrihaspati, cited Mitakshara, i., 1, § 30. “Separated kinsmen, as those who are unseparated, are equal in respect of immovables, for one has not power over the whole, to make a gift, sale or mortgage.” It is evident that partition would put an end to further rights within the family, but would not affect the rights which the divided members, in common with the rest of the village sharers, might possess as ultimate reversioners. Consequently they would retain the right to forbid acts by which that reversion might be affected. And this is the law in the Punjab to the present day (q). Perhaps the text of Uçanas, who states that land was “indivisible among kinsmen even to the thousandth degree” (r), may be referred to the same cause.

§ 237. A further extension of the rights of co-sharers took place, when each sub-division was saleable, but the members of the community had a right of pre-emption, so as to keep the land within their own body. This right exists, and is recognized at present by statute, in the Punjab (s). The existence of an exactly similar right among the Tamil inhabitants of Northern Ceylon is recorded in the Thesawaleme (t).

Right of pre-emption.

(p) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 31, 32; see, too, Vivada Chintamani, p. 309. It will be observed that here, as in other cases, Vijñaneswara gives the texts an explanation which makes them harmonize with the law as known to him. But it is more probable that they were once literal statements of a law which in his time had ceased to exist. See Mayr, 24, 30.

(q) Punjab Customs, 73.

(r) Mitakshara, i., 4, § 26. See Mayr, 31.

(s) Punjab Customs, 186; Act XII of 1878, § 2.

(t) Thesawaleme, vii., § 1, 2. The right of pre-emption is there said to extend to the vendor's “heirs or partners, and to such of his neighbours whose grounds are adjacent to his land, and who might have the same in mortgage, should they have been mortgaged.”

§ 238. With the exception of these scattered and doubtful hints, the Sanskrit writers take up the history of the family at a period when it had become an independent unit, unrestrained by any rights external to itself. As regards the rights of the members, inter se, their statements are very meagre. The status of the undivided family was, apparently, too familiar to everyone to require discussion. They only notice those new conditions which were destined to bring about the dissolution of the family itself. These were Self-Acquisition, Partition and Alienation.

§ 239. SELF-ACQUIRED PROPERTY in the earliest state of Indian society did not exist (u). So where the family was of the purely Patriarchal type, the whole of the property was owned by the father, and all acquisitions made by the members of the family were made for him, and fell into the common stock (v). When the Joint Family arose, self-acquisition became possible, but was gradual in its rise. While the family lived together in a single house, supported by the produce of the common land, there could be no room for separate acquisition. The labour of all went to the common stock, and if one possessed any special aptitude for making clothes or implements of husbandry, his skill was exercised for the common benefit, and was rewarded by an interchange of similar good offices, or by the improvement of the family property, and the increased comfort of the family home. But as civilization advanced, and commerce arose, new modes of industry were discovered, which had no application to the joint property. As the family had only a claim upon its members for their assistance in the cultivation of the land, and the ordinary labours of the household, they could not compel the exertion of any special form of skill, unless it was to meet with a special reward. It was recognized that a member, who chose to abandon his claims upon the family property, might do so, and thenceforward pursue his own special occupation for his own exclusive profit (w). But it might be for the advantage of all to keep the specially gifted member in the community by allowing him to retain for himself the fruits of his special industry. On the other hand, an injury would be done to the family, if, while living at its expense, he did not contribute his fair share of labour to its support, or if he used any appreciable portion of the family property for the purpose of producing that which he afterwards claimed as exclusively his own. The doctrine of self-acquired property sprung from a desire to reconcile these conflicting interests.

(u) See Mayr, 28.

(v) Manu, viii., § 416; ante § 230.

§ 240. The earliest forms of self-acquisition appear to have been the gains of science and valour, peculiar to the Brahman and the Kshatriya. Wealth acquired with a wife, gifts from relations or friends, and ancestral property, lost to the family and recovered by the independent exertions of a single member, were also included in the list; and Manu laid down the general rule, "What a brother has acquired by labour or skill, without using the patrimony, he shall not give up without his assent, for it was gained by his own exertion" (x). But we can see that self-acquisitions were at first not favoured, and that Manu's formula was rather strained against the acquirer than for him. Katyayana and Vrihaspati refuse to recognize the gains of science as self-acquisition, when they were earned by means of instruction imparted at the expense of the family (y); and Vyasa similarly limits the gains of valour, if they were obtained with supplies from the common estate, such as a vehicle, a weapon, or the like, only allowing the acquirer to retain a double share (z). It would also seem doubtful whether the acquirer was originally entitled to the exclusive possession of the whole of his acquisitions. Vasishtha says, "If any of the

Its earliest forms.

Not favoured.

(w) Manu, ix., § 207; Yajnavalkya, ii., 116; Mayr, 29, 43.

(x) Manu, ix., § 206—209; Gautama, xxviii., § 27, 28; Narada, xiii., § 6, 10, 11; Vyasa, 3 Dig., 333.

(y) 3 Dig., 333, 340.

(z) 3 Dig., 71; V. Mayr., iv., 7, § 12 brothers has gained something by his own efforts, he receives a double share." This text is supposed by Dr. Mayr to mark a stage at which the only benefit obtained by the acquirer was a right to retain, on partition, an extra portion of the fruits of his special industry (a). If that be the correct explanation, the text of Vyasa just quoted shows a further step in advance. He restricts the rights of the acquirer, only in cases where assistance, however slight, has been obtained from the family funds; as where a warrior has won spoil in battle, by using the family sword or chariot. In later times all trace of such a restriction had passed away. The text of Vasishtha had lost its original meaning, and was explained as extending Manu's rule, not as restricting it; and as establishing that a member of a family, who made use of the patrimony to obtain special gains, was entitled to a double portion as his reward (b). This is evidently opposed both to the spirit and the letter of the ancient law. It has, however, come to be the present rule in Bengal, as we shall see hereafter (§ 288).

§ 241. It does not appear that an acquirer had from the first an absolute property in his acquisition, to the extent of disposing of it in any way he thought fit. Originally the benefit which he derived from a special acquisition seems to have come to him in the form of a special share at the time of partition (c). While the family remained undivided, he would be entitled to the exclusive use of his separate gains. If he died undivided, they would probably fall into the common stock (d). Probably he was only allowed to alienate, where such alienation was the proper mode of enjoying the use of the

(a) Vasishtha, xvii., § 51; Mayr, 29, 30; Dr. Burnell's translation of Varad-rajah (p. 31) renders it, "If any of them have self-acquired property, let him take two shares." The text seems to be similarly interpreted by Jimuta Vahana. Daya Bhaga, ii., § 41. See post § 289.

(b) Mitakshara, i., 4, § 29; Daya Bhaga, vi., 1, § 24—29.

(c) Vishnu, xvii., § 1; Yajñavalkya, ii., 118—120, and texts referred to at note (a).

(d) This is at present the case with the Nambudri Brahmans of the West Coast (11 Mad., 162), as to whom, see ante § 44.

property. This would account for the distinction which is drawn between self-acquired movables and immovables. The right to alienate the former is universally admitted by the commentators, but the Mitakshara cites with approval a text, which states that, "Though immovables or bipeds have been acquired by a man himself, a gift or sale of them should not be made without convening all the sons" (e). According to the existing Malabar law, a member of a tarvād may make separate acquisitions, and dispose of them as he pleases during his life; but anything that remains undisposed of at his death becomes part of the family property (f). According to the Thesawaleme a member of an undivided family appears to have more power of disposal over self-acquired than he has over ancestral property, but not an absolute power (g).

§ 242. PARTITION of family property, so far as that property consisted of land, could not arise until the land possessed by each family had come to be considered the absolute property of the family, free from all claims upon it by the community. Nor would there be any very strong reason for partition, as long as the bulk of the property consisted of land. It would furnish a better means of subsistence to the members when it remained in a mass, than when it was broken up into fragments. The influence of the head of the family, and the strong spirit of union which is characteristic of Eastern races, would tend to preserve the family coparcenary, long after the

(e) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 27. This text is ascribed by Mr. Colebrooke to Vyasa. In the Vivada Chintamani, p. 309, it is attributed to Prakasha, while Jagannatha quotes it as from Yajñavalkya. 2 Dig., 110. How far this is still the law in Southern India appears unsettled. See post § 344. The Viramitrodaya treats the consent of the sons to the alienation of self-acquired and immovable property, like that of separated members to the alienation of separated immovable property as being desirable for purposes of evidence, but not necessary as a matter of law. Viramit., p. 87, § 22.

(f) Kallati v. Palat, 2 Mad. H. C., 162; Vira Rayen v. Valia Rani, 3 Mad., 141; Ryrapen Numbiar v. Kelu Kurup, 4 Mad., 150; Kunhaacha v. Kutti Mamm, 16 Mad., 201. The same rule applies in Mapilla families which are governed by Marumakhatayem law. Illikka Pakramar v. Kutti Kunhamid, 17 Mad., 69. By the Alysantana law of South Canara, such acquisitions pass to the personal representatives of the acquirer. Antamma v. Kaveri, 7 Mad., 575. The rule as to Nambudris appears to be still unsettled. Chemnantha v. Palakuzhu, 25 Mad., 662, p. 666.

(g) Thesawaleme, ii., § 1.

Originally unknown.

looser village bond had been dissolved. In Malabar and Canara, at the present day, no right of partition exists. In some cases, where the family has become very numerous, and owns property in different districts, the different branches have split into distinct tarwāds, and become permanently separated in estate. But this can only be done by common consent. No one member, nor even all but one, can enforce a division upon any who object (h). The text of Uçanas, already quoted (i), which forbids the division of land among kinsmen, seems to evidence a time when the Hindu joint family was as indivisible as the Malabar tarwād (k).

Its origin.

§ 243. Partition would begin to be desired, when self-acquisitions became common and secure. A man who found that he was earning wealth more rapidly than the other members of his family, would naturally desire to get rid of their claims upon his industry, and to transmit his fortune entire to his own descendants. This is one of the commonest motives which brings about divisions at present. But the family feeling against partition is so strong (l), since what one gains all the others lose, that it is probable the usage would have had a painful struggle for existence, if it had not been supported by the strongest external influence, viz., that of the Brahmans. This support it certainly had. As long as a family remained joint, all its religious ceremonies were performed by the head. But as soon as it broke up, a multiplication of ceremonies took place, in exact ratio to the number of fractions into which it was resolved. Hence a propor-

Stimulated by Brahmanism.

(h) Munda Chetty v. Timmaju, 1 Mad. H. C., 380; Timmappa v. Mahalinga, 4 Mad. H. C., 28. The same rule applies in the case of the Nambudri Brahmans who are governed by Hindu law of a primitive character, 11 Mad., 162; and of the Tiyans of Malabar who follow the Makkatayem law, Ramen Menon v. Chathunni, 17 Mad., 184; partibility exists among the Illiyans of Palghat, who were originally Tiyans, but who have separated from that class. Velu v. Chamu, 22 Mad., 297.

(i) Ante § 236.

(k) See Mayr, 31, 43.

(l) I have been assured that even in Bengal, where the family tie is so loose, no one can enforce a division except at the cost of all natural love and harmony. In Madras I have invariably found that a family feud was either the cause, or the consequence, of a suit or partition.

tionate increase of employment and emolument for the Brahmans. The Sanskrit writers are perfectly frank in advocating partition on this very ground. Manu says (m): "Either let them live together, or if they desire religious rites, let them live apart; since religious duties are multiplied in separate houses, their separation is therefore legal,"—to which Kulluka adds, in a gloss, "and even laudable!" And so Gautama says (n): "If a division take place, more spiritual merit is acquired."

§ 244. It was, however, by very slow steps that the right to a partition reached its present form. At first it is possible that a member who insisted on leaving the family for his own purposes, went out with only a nominal share, or such an amount as the other members were willing to part with (o). This is the more probable, since, so long as the family retained its Patriarchal form, the son could certainly not have compelled his father to give him a share at all, or any larger portion than he chose. The doctrine that property was by birth—in the sense that each son was the equal of his father—had then no existence. The son was a mere appendage to his father, and had no rights of property as opposed to him (p). The family was then in the same condition as a Malabar tarwād is now. There the property is vested in the head of the family, not merely as agent or principal partner, but almost as an absolute ruler. The right of the other members is only a right to be maintained in the family house, so long as that house is capable of holding them. The scale of expenditure to be adopted, and its distribution among the different members, is a matter wholly within the discretion of the karnaven. No junior member can claim an account, or call for an appropriation to himself of any special share of the income. Partition, as we have already seen, can never be demanded (q). It is quite certain that tarwād.

Malabar

Originally subject to consent of father.

(m) ix., § 111.

(n) xxviii., § 4.

(o) Ante § 239, note (w). See Peddajya v. Ramalingam, 11 Mad., 406.

(p) Manu, viii., § 416; ante § 230.

(q) Kunigaratu v. Arangaden, 2 Mad. H. C., 12; Subbu Hegadi v. Tongu, 4 Mad. H. C., 196; ante § 242, note (b); Varanakot v. Varanakot, 2 Mad., 323.

in the earlier period of Hindu law, no son could compel his father to come to a partition with him. Manu speaks only of a division after the death of the father, and says expressly that the brothers have no power over the property while the parents live. Kulluka Bhatta adds in a gloss, "unless the father chooses to distribute it" (r). This was no doubt added because the actual or mythical Manu did himself divide his property among his sons, or was alleged by the Veda to have done so, and the fact is put forward by the sages as an authority for such a division (s). The consent of the father is also stated by Baudhayana, Gautama, and Devala to be indispensable to a partition of ancestral property (t), and Sancha and Lichita even make his consent necessary where the sons desire to have a partition of their own self-acquired property (u). The usage among the Tamil population in the eighteenth century, that no partition could take place during the life of the father without his consent, seems to be equally clear (v). Subsequently a partition was allowed even without the father's wish, if he was old, disturbed in intellect, or diseased; that is, if he was no longer fit to exercise his paternal authority (w). A final step was taken when it was acknowledged that father and son had equal ownership in ancestral property; that is to say, when the Patriarchal Family had changed into the Joint Growth of son's right.

As to separate maintenance, see Pera Nayar v. Ayyappan, ib., 282. Narayani v. Govinda, 7 Mad., 352. As to power of removing the Karnaven for imprudent management, see Ponambilath Kunhamod v. Ponambilath Kuttiah, 3 Mad., 169. As to cases where a tarwad is split up into several taveris, or sub-divisions, see Chalayil Kandotha v. Chathu, 4 Mad., 169; Mammali v. Pakki, 7 Mad., 428. As to one member having separate property, as affecting his right to maintenance, see Thaya v. Shunguni, 5 Mad., 71.

(r) Manu, ix., § 104; see also Vasishtha, xvii., § 23-29. A text of Manu (ix., § 209) is, however, cited in the Mitakshara, (i. 6, § 11) as evidencing the right of sons to compel a partition of the ancestral property held by their father. The translation given by Sir W. Jones (brethren for sons) is incorrect, see 2 W. & B., xxiv., 1st ed. The text itself refers, not to partition, but to self-acquisition. It contemplates the continuance of the coparcenary, not its dissolution, and points out what property falls into the common stock, and what does not.

(s) Apastamba, xiv., § 11; Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 1.

(t) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 4; Gautama, xxviii., 2; Devala, 2 Dig., 522.

(u) 2 Dig., 526, 533.

(v) Sorg H. L., 173, Bouchet, cited Man. Adm. Madras, I, 107.

(w) Sankha, or Harita, cited Mitakshara, i., 2, § 7.

Family (x). It then became the rule that the sons could require a division of the ancestral property, but not of the acquired property (y). The joint family then ceased to be a corporation with perpetual succession, and became a mere partnership, terminable at will.

§ 245. The above sequence of rights is perfectly intelligible. It is more difficult to account for the early limitations upon partition with reference to the mother. There seems to be no doubt that originally the right of brothers to divide the family estate was deferred till after the death, not only of the father, but of the mother (z). Gautama, Narada and Vrihaspati allow of partition during the mother's life, but make it an essential that she should have become incapable of child-bearing, or that cohabitation on the part of the father should have ceased (a). The latter limitation, which is also the later, may be explained as intended to protect the interests of after-born children (b). It would operate as forbidding partition until after possibility of further issue was extinct. But why extend the prohibition to the death of the mother when the father was already dead? It might be suggested that this prohibition was necessary at a time when a widow was authorized to raise up issue by a relation. But it seems to me that it may evidence a time when the widow had a life estate in her husband's property, even though he left issue. It has often been said that the ground on which a widow's right of inheritance is rested, viz., that she is the surviving half of her husband, would be a reason for her inheriting before her sons, instead of after them (c). Now according to the Thesawaleme this is actually the rule. Where the father dies leaving children, the mother takes all the property and gives the daughters their dowry, but (x) See ante § 231; post § 253.

(y) Vyasa, 3 Dig., 35; Vishnu, xvii., § 1, 2.

(z) Manu, ix., § 104; Sancha & Lichita, 2 Dig., 533; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 117; Mitakshara, i., 3, § 1-3; Daya Bhaga, iii., § 1.

(a) Gautama, xxviii., § 2; Narada, xiii., § 3; 3 Dig., 48.

(b) Daya Bhaga, i., § 45. The Sarasvati Vilasa, p. 12, § 61 treats it as introduced in the father's interest, so as to secure him against a compulsory partition, so long as he might wish to marry again.

(c) See 3 Dig., 79.

Partition deferred till death of mother.

the sons may not demand anything as long as she lives (d). An indication of such a state of things having once existed may perhaps be found in the text of Sancha and Lichita (e), which, after forbidding partition without the father's consent, goes on to say: "Sons who have parents living are not independent, nor even after the death of their father while their mother lives." And similarly Narada makes the dependence of sons, however old, last during the life of both parents; and, in default of the father, places the authority of the mother before that of her first-born (f).

Restrictions become obsolete.

§ 246. When we come to the commentators who wrote at a time when all these restrictions had passed away, we find that the above passages had lost all meaning for them. But no Hindu lawyer admits that any sacred text can conflict with existing law. As usual, they attempt to reconcile the irreconcilable, either by forced explanations, or by simple collocation of contradictory passages, without any effort to explain their bearing upon each other. The Mitakshara, in dealing with the time of partition, quotes several of the texts just cited, as establishing that partition, during the father's lifetime, can only be made in three cases, viz., first, when he himself desires it; or, secondly, even against his will, when both parents are incapable of producing issue; or, thirdly, when the father is addicted to vice, or afflicted with mental or bodily disease (g). And so he quotes, without any objection or explanation, the passage which directs partition to take place after the death of both parents (h). But in treating of the rights of father and son to ancestral property, he explains these texts as referring only to the self-acquired property of Mitakshara.

(d) The Savaleme, i., § 9.

(e) 2 Dig., 583.

(f) Narada, iii., § 88, 40: "He is of age and independent in case his parents be dead. During their lifetime he is dependent, even though he be grown old. Of the two parents the father has the greater authority, since the seed is worth more than the field; in default of the father, the mother; in her default, the first-born. These are never subject to any control from dependent persons; they are fully entitled to give orders, and make gifts or sales."

(g) Mitakshara, i., 2, § 7. The Viramitrodaya only recognises the 1st and 3rd cases (p. 49, § 4).

(h) Mitakshara, i., 3, § 1, 2.

the father, and concludes that "while the mother is capable of bearing more sons, and the father retains his worldly affections, and does not desire partition, a distribution of the grandfather's estate does nevertheless take place by the will of the son" (i).

§ 247. The Smṛiti Chandrika explains the passage of Manu, ix., § 104, which defers partition till after the death of both parents, as meaning that the property of each parent can only be divided after his or her decease (k). But the result of an involved disquisition as to the right of sons to exact partition during the father's life, appears to be that, as long as the father is competent to beget children, and to manage the family affairs, the sons have not such independent power as entitles them to compel him to proceed to a division (l).

Smṛiti Chandrika.

It will be seen hereafter (m), that, until quite lately, the point was still open to discussion in Southern India.

§ 248. The writers of the Bengal school had to perform an exactly opposite feat of interpretation to that accomplished by those of the Benares schools. The latter considered the sons to be joint owners with their father, and had to explain away the texts which restricted or delayed their right to a partition. The former considered that the father was the exclusive owner, and had to explain away the other texts which authorised a partition. The mode in which they attained this result will be found in the first chapter of the Daya Bhaga. Jimuta Vahana takes up all the texts which assert that sons cannot compel a partition during the father's lifetime, as supporting his view that property in the sons arises not by birth, but by the death of the father. Consequently, even in the case of ancestral property, there can be no partition during the father's life, without his consent. Upon his death, whether actual or Bengal writers.

(i) Mitakshara, i., 6, § 5, 7, 8, 11. To the same effect is the Mayukha, iv., § 1-4.

(k) Smṛiti Chandrika, i., § 12-17. This view was adopted by Visvarupa, a very much earlier authority, s. 4.

(l) Smṛiti Chandrika, i., § 19-23, 28-38.

(m) Post § 471.

civil, the property of the sons arises for the first time, and with it their right to a division (n).

Rights of mother.

§ 249. The condition that the mother should be past child-bearing is taken by the writers of this school to be a limitation upon the father's power to make a partition, where the property is ancestral, on the ground that, if the ancestral estate were divided while the mother was still productive, the after-born children would be deprived of subsistence (o). They also interpret literally the prohibition against partition even after the father's death, while the mother is still alive, and repudiate the explanation that this prohibition relates to the separate property of the mother (p). Later commentators, however, do not allow that the rule is still in force, or get out of it, by the usual Bengal formula, that it is morally wrong but legally valid. In practice neither the mother's death nor consent is now required (q).

Results.

§ 250. The result of this long history is that the right to a partition at any time, between co-sharers, is now admitted universally. But the writers of the Bengal school do not allow that sons are co-sharers with their father. Elsewhere all members of a Joint Family are considered to be co-sharers, whether they are related to each other lineally or collaterally.

Development of right to alienate.

§ 251. THE RIGHT OF ALIENATION of course proceeds pari passu with the development of property from its communal to its individual form. As each new phase of property arose, there was a transitional period before it absolutely escaped from the fetters which had ceased to be properly binding upon it. We have already seen reason to believe that there was a time when the shares of separated kinsmen in land were not absolutely at their (n) Daya Bhaga, i., § 11—31, 38—44, 50; ii., § 8. Raghunandana, i., 5—14; ii., 26, 34, 35. This appears to be the rule in the Punjab. See Punjab Customary Law, II, 168, III, 122.

(o) Daya Bhaga, i., § 45; D. K. S., vi., § 1.

(p) Daya Bhaga, iii., § 1—11; D. K. S., vii., § 1. See F. MacN., 37, 57; 1 W. MacN., 49.

(q) 3 Dig., 78; 1 W. MacN., 50.

own disposal. But all such restrictions had passed away before the time of Narada (r). So it would appear that at first sons were not at liberty to dispose of their own self-acquired property, and it was till lately an unsettled point whether, under Mitakshara law, a father has absolute control over self-acquired land (s). Conversely, a relic of the supreme power of the father, as head of the family, may, perhaps, be found in his asserted right to dispose of ancestral movables at pleasure (t). Possibly the absolute obligation of the sons to pay his debts may be traceable to the same source (u).

§ 252. As regards joint property, it necessarily followed, Joint property. from the very essence of the idea, that no one owner could dispose of that which belonged to others along with himself, unless with their consent, or under circumstances of necessity, from which their assent might be implied (v). But a most important difference of opinion arose, as to who were joint owners in property, and as to the power of disposal each joint owner had over his own share.

The former point arose with reference to the position of Power of father. a father in regard to his sons. Where the Joint Family was an enlargement of the Patriarchal Family, the power of the head would necessarily be different, according as he was looked upon as the father of his children, or merely as the manager of a partnership (w). The texts which had their origin in the former stage of the family would necessarily ascribe to him wider powers than those which originated in its later stage. For instance, when Narada says, "women, sons, slaves, and attendants are dependent; but the head of a family is subject to no control in disposing of his hereditary property" (x); he is evidently quoting a text which had once been true of the father as a domestic despot, but which had long since ceased to be true of him as the head of a Joint Family. At each stage of the (r) Ante § 236; Narada, xiii., § 43.

(t) Post § 255.

(u) Post § 302.

(s) Ante § 230; post § 253, 257, 344.

(v) Vyasa, 1 Dig., 455; 2 Dig., 159.

(x) Narada, iii., § 36.

transition, the original writers, who spoke merely with reference to the facts which were under their own eyes, would speak clearly and unhesitatingly. When the era of commentators arrived, who had to weave a consistent theory out of conflicting texts, all of which they were bound to consider as equally holy and equally true, controversy would begin. Those who wished to diminish the father's authority would quote the later texts. Those who wished to enlarge his authority would quote the earlier texts. This is exactly what took place.

Mitakshara.

§ 253. The author of the Mitakshara enters into an elaborate disquisition, as to whether property in the son arises for the first time by partition, or the death of the previous owner, or exists previously by birth (y). He quotes two anonymous texts, "The father is master of the gems, pearls, corals, and of all other (movable property), but neither the father nor the grandfather is of the whole immovable estate;" and this other passage, "By favour of the father, clothes and ornaments are used, but immovable property may not be consumed even with the father's indulgence" (z). He sums up his views in § 27, 28 as follows:—"Therefore it is a settled point that property in the paternal or ancestral estate is by birth, although the father has independent power in the disposal of effects other than immovables for indispensable acts of duty, and for purposes prescribed by texts of law, as gifts through affection, support of the family, relief from distress, and so forth; but he is subject to the control of his sons and the rest in regard to the immovable estate, whether acquired by himself or inherited from his father or other predecessor; since it is ordained, 'though immovables or bipeds have been acquired by a man himself, a gift or sale of them should not be made without convening all the sons. They who are born, and they who are yet unbegot-

(y) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 17-27; Viramit., ch. i.

(z) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 21. The former of these texts is cited by Jimuta Vahana, ii., § 22, as from Yajnavalkya, but cannot be found in the existing text. It is also opposed to Yajnavalkya, ii., § 121, quoted post § 256.

ten, and they who are still in the womb, require the means of support. No gift or sale should therefore be made.'" An exception to it follows: "Even a single individual may conclude a donation, mortgage, or sale of immovable property during a season of distress, for the sake of the family, and especially for pious purposes."

§ 254. The opinion of Vijnanesvara that sons had by birth an equal ownership with the father, in respect of ancestral immovable property, is followed by all writers, except those of the Bengal school, and is now quite beyond dispute (a). But upon the other points, viz., as to the extent of the father's power over ancestral movables, and the limitation upon his power over self-acquired land, there is no such harmony, and his own views appear to have been in a state of flux upon the subject.

§ 255. As regards movables, it is evident that the head of the family, whether in his capacity as father or as manager, must necessarily have a very large control over them. Money and articles produced to be sold or bartered, he must have the power to dispose of, in the ordinary management of the property. Clothes, jewels, and the like he would apportion to and reclaim from the various members of the family at his discretion. Household utensils, and implements of trade or husbandry, he would buy, exchange and dispose of as the occasion arose. Now, in early times, movable property would be limited to such articles. Even at the present day, not one Hindu family in a thousand possesses any other species of chattel property. The very instance adduced by the text—gems, pearls and corals—points to things over which the father would necessarily have a special control. And the Mayukha says of this very text, "it means the father's independence only in the wearing and other use of earrings, rings, etc., but not so far as gift or other alienation."

Father's power over movables.

(a) Smṛiti Chandrika, viii., § 17-20; Madhaviya, § 15, 16; Varadrajah, pp. 4-6; V. May., iv., 1, § 3, 4; Vivada Chintamani, 309. As to whether land purchased with ancestral movable property possesses the incidents of ancestral immovable, see § 275.

Neither is it with a view to the cessation of the cause of his ownership in the production of a son. This very meaning is made manifest also by the text noticing only gems and such things as are not injured by use" (b).

§ 256. In another portion of the Mitakshara (c) he quotes without comment a text of Yajnavalkya (ii., § 121). "The ownership of father and son is the same in land which was acquired by the grandfather, or in a corrody (or settled income), or in chattels which belonged to him." This evidently contradicts the idea that the father had any absolute power of disposal over ancestral movables. Further, although in ch. i., 1, § 24, he lays down the general principle that "the father has power, under the same text, to give away such effects, though acquired by his father;" in § 27, already quoted, he seems to limit this power to the right of disposing of movables for such necessary or suitable purposes as would come within the ordinary powers of the head of a household. It is evidently one thing to bestow a rupee on a beggar, and another to give away the balance at the bank. Lastly, it is important to observe that none of the later writers in Southern India, who follow the Mitakshara, make any such distinction. They quote the above text of Yajnavalkya, and a similar one from Vrihaspati, which place ancestral movables and immovables on exactly the same footing as regards the son's right by birth (d).

§ 257. As regards the second point, viz., the restriction upon a father's power to dispose of his own self-acquired land, Vijnanesvara is equally at variance with himself. He asserts the restriction in the most unqualified terms in the passage already quoted. He denies it in equally unqualified terms in a later passage (e). "The grandson

(b) V. May., iv, 1, § 5.

(c) Mitakshara, i., 5, § 3.
(d) Smṛiti Chandrika, viii., § 17—20; Madhaviya, § 15, 16; Varadrajah, § 4—6. Exactly a similar conflict of opinion to that which is found in the Mitakshara as regards the father's power of disposal over movable property appears in the Viramitrodaya, at p. 6, § 9; p. 74, § 17, and p. 16, § 30. See the modern decisions on this point, post § 335.

(e) Mitakshara, i., 5, § 9, 10, 11.

has a right of prohibition, if his unseparated father is Mitakshara. making a donation, or a sale of effects inherited from the grandfather; but he has no right of interference, if the effects were acquired by the father. On the contrary, he must acquiesce, because he is dependent. Consequently the difference is this: although he has a right by birth in his father's and in his grandfather's property, still, since he is dependent on his father in regard to the paternal estate, and since the father has a predominant interest, as it was acquired by himself, the son must acquiesce in the father's disposal of his own acquired property; but since both have indiscriminately a right in the grandfather's estate, the son has a power of interdiction." And in the next paragraph he quotes Manu, ix., § 209, as showing that the father was not compelled to share self-acquired wealth with his sons. The Smṛiti Chandrika is explicit on the point that as regards all self-acquired property, without any exception, the father has independent power, to the extent of giving it away at his pleasure, or enjoying it himself, and he cites texts of Katyayana and Vrihaspati, which state this to be the rule as plainly as can be (f). On the other hand, the Vivada Chintamani, which always maintains the rights of the family in their strictest form, cites with approval the same text as that which is relied on by the Mitakshara, as restraining the dealings of the father with self-acquired land (g). But in an earlier chapter the author states the unqualified rule, "Self-acquired property can be given by its owner at his pleasure" (p. 76), and at p. 229 he repeats the same rule expressly as to a father.

§ 258. It is probable that the text, which is relied on both by the Mitakshara and the Vivada Chintamani, was one of a class of texts which forbid the alienation by a man of his entire property, so as to leave his family

(f) Smṛiti Chandrika, viii., § 22—28. Mr. Colebrooke refers to both the Smṛiti Chandrika and the Madhaviya as laying down exactly the opposite doctrine (2 Stra. H. L., 439, 441). I suppose the passages he refers to are in portions which have not yet been translated. I have been unable to find them.

(g) Vivada Chintamani, p. 309.

destitute (h). To our ideas such a prohibition would seem to be unnecessary. But in India, where generosity to Brahmans was inculcated as the first of virtues, and a life of asceticism and mendicancy was pointed out as the fitting termination of a virtuous career (i), a direction that a man should be just before he was generous, might not have been uncalled for. Whether the direction, so far as it regards self-acquired land, is anything more than a moral precept, is a point which has only been finally settled by a decision of the Privy Council in 1898 (k).

§ 259. When we come to Jimuta Vahana, we find that by a little dexterous juggling he arrives at exactly the opposite conclusion from that of the Mitakshara, out of precisely the same premises. He, too, discusses the origin of a son's right in property, with the same elaborate subtlety as Vijnanesvara, and announces as the result of the texts, "That sons have not a right of ownership in the wealth of the living parents, but in the estate of both when deceased" (l). The process he adopts is as follows. He relies on the texts of Manu and Devala which prohibit partition in the father's lifetime, without his consent, as showing that the father was the absolute owner of the property (m). He then grapples with the text—"The father is master of the gems, pearls and corals, and of all other (movable property), but neither the father nor the grandfather is so of the whole immovable estate." From this he argues: (1) That since the grandfather is mentioned, the text must relate to his effects, viz., to ancestral property; (2) That with regard to such property, "the father has authority to make a gift or other similar disposition of all effects other than land, etc., but not of immovables, a corrody, and chattels (i.e., slaves);" (3) That even as to land "the prohibition is not against (h) See Narada, iv., § 4, 5; Vrihaspati, 2 Dig., 98; Daksha, 2 Dig., 110; Viramit., p. 89.

(i) Manu, vi.

(k) See the modern decisions, post § 344.

(l) Daya Bhaga, i., § 30; D. K. S., vi., § 18; Raghunandana, i., 5—14; ii., 26.

(m) Daya Bhaga, i., § 12—34.

a donation or other transfer of a small part not incompatible with the support of the family. For the insertion of the word 'whole' would be unmeaning (if the gift of even a small part were forbidden)." The other texts which forbid a transfer by one of several joint owners, or even the sale by a father of his own self-acquisitions without the consent of his sons, he dismisses with the simple remark, that they only show a moral offence: "Therefore, since it is denied that a gift or sale should be made, the precept is infringed by making one. But the gift or transfer is not null, for a fact cannot be altered by a hundred texts" (n).

§ 260. Of course this argument is opposed to the first principles both of historical and legal reasoning. Manu and Devala forbid compulsory partition at the will of the sons, in order to prevent the family corporation being broken up. The whole object of the prohibition would be frustrated if the father was at liberty to dispose of its property, in whole or in part, at his own pleasure. Not a suggestion is to be found in any writer earlier than Jimuta Vahana himself, that he possessed such a right, or anything approaching to it (o). Every authority which speaks of alienation, directly negatives the existence of such a right. It might with equal logic be argued that the karnaven of a Malabar tarwād at the present day is absolute owner of its property, because none of the junior members can demand a share. The indissoluble character of the property would furnish as complete an answer to the former claim as it does to the latter. As to the suggestion that what is forbidden may still be valid, Mr. W. MacNaghten points out that there is a distinction between an improper but legal mode of dealing with a man's self-acquisition, which is wholly his own, and an improper and illegal manner of dealing with ancestral land which is only shared by him with his sons. He was of opinion that, as to the former, the father could dispose of it as he liked, while as to the latter he could only dispose of his own share (p). But the badness of the reasoning arose from the fact that Jimuta Vahana considered it necessary to reconcile the usage, which had sprung up in Bengal, with the letter of texts which applied to a state of things that had ceased to exist. He was the apologist of a revolution which must have been completed long before he wrote. But from his writings that revolution derived the stability due to a supposed accordance with tradition. If no law-books of a later tone than the Mitakshara had been in existence when our Courts were established, there can be little doubt that the conscientious logic of English judges would have refused to recognize that the revolution had ever taken place.

(n) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 22, 30; D. K. S., vi., § 18—20.

(o) The only exception is the text of Narada, cited ante § 252, which, even if it is to be taken literally, plainly refers to a time anterior to that of the Joint Family.

§ 261. There are probably no materials in existence which would enable us to trace the causes of that change in popular feeling and family law, which is marked by the difference between the Mitakshara and the Daya Bhaga. Much was of course due to the natural progress of society. A race so full of commercial activity as the Hindus who were settled along the lower course of the Ganges, would find their growth cramped by the Procrustean bed of ancient tradition. As soon as land came to be looked on as an object of mortgage and sale, the restraints upon alienation imposed by the early law would be found insufferable. But I imagine that the Brahmanical influence helped most strongly in the same direction. Sir H. S. Maine, while discussing a similar transition in Celtic law, says: "When this writer affirms that, under certain circumstances, a tribesman may grant or contract away tribal land, his ecclesiastical leaning constantly suggests a doubt as to his legal doctrine. Does he mean to lay down that the land may be parted with generally, or only that it may be alienated in favour of the Church? This difficulty of construction has an interest of its own. I am myself persuaded that the influence of the Christian Church on law has been very generally sought for in a wrong quarter, and that historians of law have too much overlooked its share in diffusing the conceptions of free contract, individual property, and testamentary succession, through the regions beyond the Roman Empire, which were peopled by communities held together by the primitive tie of consanguinity. It is generally agreed among scholars that churchmen introduced these races to wills and bequests. The Brehon tracts suggest to me at least that, along with the sacredness of bequests, they insisted upon the sacredness of contracts; and it is well known that, in the Germanic countries, their ecclesiastical societies were among the earliest and largest grantees of public or 'folk' land. The Will, the Contract, and the Separate Ownership, were in fact indispensable to the church as the donee of pious gifts" (q).

(p) 1 W. MacN. Pref., vi., 2—15. See per East, C. J., 2 M. Dig., 200—204; per Peacock, C. J., Mangala v. Dinanath, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 78; S. C., 12 Suth. (A. O. J.), 35. As to the modern decisions, see post § 371.

Suggested explanation of Bengal doctrines.

§ 262. It seems to me that every word of this passage is applicable to the effect caused by Brahmanical influence upon Hindu law. The moral law, as promulgated by Manu, might be described as a law of gifts to Brahmans. Every step of a man's life, from his birth to his death, required gifts to Brahmans. Every sin which he committed might be expiated by gifts to Brahmans. The huge endowments for religious purposes which are found in every part of India show that these precepts were not a dead letter. Every day's experience of present Indian life shows the practical belief in the efficacy of such gifts. Naturally, every rule of law which threw an impediment in their way would be swept aside as far as possible. And when we remember that the Brahman was the King's minister in his Cabinet, the King's judge in his Court, it is obvious that it was a mere question of the means that would be adopted to secure the end. Even the earlier writers had led the way, by mingling pious gifts with the necessary purposes which would justify an alienation of family property (r). It was a further step to emancipate the holder of the estate from all control whatever. This was effected in Bengal by the doctrine that a father was absolute owner of the property; and, by its further extension, that every collateral member held his share as tenant in common, and not as joint tenant. The favour shown to women, who are always the pets of the priesthood, by allowing them to inherit and to enforce partition in an undivided family, seems to me an additional stage in the same direction. The validity attributed to death-bed gifts for religious objects, which gradually ripened into a complete system of devise (s), completed the downfall of the common law of property in India.

Influence of Brahmans.

(q) Maine, Early Instit., 104.

Powerful in Bengal.

§ 263. There can be no doubt that Brahmanism was rampant among the law writers of Bengal. I think it can be shown that it was this influence which completely remodelled the law of inheritance in that Province, by applying tests of religious efficacy which were of absolutely modern introduction (t). We can easily see why this influence was more powerful in Bengal than in Southern and Western India, where the Brahmans had never been so numerous; and than it was in the Punjab, where Brahmanism seems from the first to have been a failure (u). But it is difficult to see why a similar system should never have been developed in Benares, which is the very hot-bed of Brahmanism. Much may, perhaps, have been due to the personal character and influence of Jimuta Vahana. It has been supposed that the Daya Bhaga was written under the influence of one of the Hindu sovereigns of Bengal, and perhaps even received his name, much as the great work of Tribonian came to Personal influence of Jimuta Vahana.

(r) Katyayana, 2 Dig., 96; Mitakshara, i., 1, § 28; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 63.

(s) See post § 405.

(u) See 2 Muir S. T., 462, ante § 8.

(t) See post § 609, et seq.

bear the name of Justinian (v). It would be unphilosophical to suppose that he originated the changes we have referred to. But if he had had the acuteness to see that these changes actually had taken place, the wisdom to adopt them, and the courage to avow that adoption, it is obvious that a work written under such inspiration would take precisely the form of the Daya Bhaga. It would be based upon the new system as a fact, while its arguments would be directed to show that the new system was the old one. Its authority would necessarily be accepted as absolute throughout the kingdom, and it would become a fresh starting point for all subsequent treatises on law. On the other hand, the Benares jurists, in consequence of the very strength of their Brahmanism, would continue slavishly to reproduce their old law books, without caring, or daring, to consider how far they had ceased to correspond with facts; just as we find comparatively modern works discussing elaborately the twelve sorts of sons, long after any but two had ceased to be recognized. Conversely, of course, the treatises themselves, both in Bengal and Benares, would alter the current of usage, by affecting the opinion of pundits and judges upon any concrete case that was presented for their decision. If any writer of equal authority with Jimuta Vahana had arisen in Southern India, had represented plainly the usages which he found in force, and painted up the picture with a plausible colouring of texts, we should probably find the Mitakshara as obsolete in Madras as it is in Bengal.

§ 264. When Jimuta Vahana had established to his own satisfaction that a father was the absolute owner of property, and that the sons had no right in it till his death, it would seem to follow, as a necessary consequence, Power of father to distribute.

(v) See Colebrooke's Introduction to the Daya Bhaga. Dr. Jolly, however, states that the fabulous character of the supposed monarch is now established, Lect. 22. He suggests that the difference between the doctrines of the Daya Bhaga and the Mitakshara may arise from the fact that Jimuta Vahana followed the views of commentators earlier than Vijnaneswara. Ibid. 25. It seems to me difficult to account for the uniformly progressive character of his doctrines by any such supposition.

that if the father chose to make a partition, he might distribute his estate among his sons exactly as he liked. But this conclusion he declined to draw. Nothing can show the artificial character of his reasoning more strongly than this fact. In the very chapter in which he lays down that the absolute ownership of the father enables him to deal with his ancestral property as he likes, he also lays down that if he chooses to distribute it, he must do so upon general principles of equality, and cannot, even for himself, reserve more than a double share (w). He affirms for one purpose the very ownership by birth which he denies for another. The reason probably was that unequal distributions of a man's property during his life had not become common, and that there was no particular motive for encouraging them. The result, however, possibly was to preserve the family union in many cases in which it would otherwise have been broken up.

Interest of coparcener in his share.

§ 265. The second point upon which Jimuta Vahana differed from the earlier writers was as to the nature of the interest which each person, who was admitted to be a co-sharer, had in the joint property. The point will have to be fully discussed hereafter (x). It is enough to say here that the Mitakshara, and those who follow its authority, consider that no coparcener has such an ascertained share, prior to partition, as admits of being dealt with by himself, apart from his fellow-sharers (y). They look upon every co-sharer as having a proprietary right in the whole estate, subject to a similar right on the part of all the others. Jimuta Vahana, on the other hand, denies the existence of such a general right, and says that their property consists in unascertained portions of the aggregate (z). Hence he argues that the text of Vyasa which prohibits sale, gift or mortgage by one of several (w) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 15—20, 47, 56—82. See the whole subject discussed, post § 490—492.

(x) See post § 378.

(z) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 26.

(y) See Vyasa, 1 Dig., 455.

coparceners, cannot be taken literally, for each has a property consisting in the power of disposal at pleasure (a).

§ 266. Another feature of Bengal law, which must have helped much to break up the family union, was the favour with which it regarded the rights of women. According to the Benares school, a widow could never inherit unless her husband had been a sole or a separated owner (b). This resulted from the nature of his interest in the property. So long as he was undivided, he had not a share but a right to obtain a share by partition. If he died without exercising this right, his interest merged, and went to enlarge the possible shares of the survivors. But according to the Daya Bhaga, a widow inherits to an issueless husband whether he dies divided or undivided. This would have been a logical result of holding that each coparcener during his lifetime held a definite though unascertained share. But though Jimuta Vahana relies upon this as an answer to his opponents, he grounds the right itself upon the texts of early sages. It is probable that in this respect he may have been really reviving the old law (c). Certainly he was so in allowing the mother a right to obtain a share. But the result is that in Bengal property falls far more frequently under female control than it does in other parts of India, and we may be certain, with proportionate advantage to the Brahmins.

§ 267. I have now traced the changes which the law of wills property underwent in India, up to the time when its administration fell into English hands. I have not touched upon the subject of wills. The fruitful germ of a system of bequest can be seen in very early writers, but all the evidences of its growth are to be found in the records of the British Courts.

The succeeding chapters will be devoted to a fuller examination of this law, as it has been developed and applied by our tribunals.

(a) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 27; 2 Dig., 99—105, 189; D. K. S., xi.

(b) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 30.

(c) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 1—26; see ante § 245.

Rights of women.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE JOINT FAMILY.

Division of subject.

§ 268. IN discussing the Joint Family or coparcenary which forms the subject of this chapter, we shall have to consider: first, who are its members; secondly, what is coparcenary property; thirdly, self-acquisition, and the burthen of proof when it is set up; fourthly, the mode in which the joint property is enjoyed. The historical discussion contained in the previous chapter has shown that originally every Hindu family, and all its property, was not only joint but indivisible. This state of things ceased when partition broke up the family, and when property came to be held in severalty, either as being the share of a divided member, or as being the separate acquisition of one who was still living in a state of union.

Presumption of union.

But the presumption still continues that the members of a Hindu family are living in a state of union, unless the contrary is established. "The strength of the presumption necessarily varies in every case. The presumption of union is stronger in the case of brothers than in the case of cousins, and the farther you go from the founder of the family, the presumption becomes weaker and weaker" (a). Even where separation, either of person or estate, is established, it can never be more than temporary. The man who has severed his union with his brothers, if he has children, becomes the head of a new joint family, composed of himself and his children, and their issue. And so property, which was the self-acquisition of the first owner, as soon as it descends to his heirs becomes their joint property, with all the incidents of that condition (b).

(a) Moro Visvanath v. Ganesh, 10 Bom. H. C., 444, 468; 2 Stra. H. L., 347; Pritkoer v. Mahadeo Pershad, 21 I. A., 134; S. C., 22 Cal., 85.

(b) Ram Narain Singh v. Pertum Singh 11 B. L. R., 397; S. C., 20 Sutn., 189.

§ 269. It is evident that there can be no limit to the number of persons of whom a Hindu joint family consists, or to the remoteness of their descent from the common ancestor, and consequently to the distance of their relationship from each other. But the Hindu coparcenary, properly so called, constitutes a much narrower body. When we speak of a Hindu joint family as constituting a coparcenary, we refer not to the entire number of persons who can trace from a common ancestor, and amongst whom no partition has ever taken place; we include only those persons who, by virtue of relationship, have the right to enjoy and hold the joint property, to restrain the acts of each other in respect of it, to burthen it with their debts, and at their pleasure to enforce its partition. Outside this body there is a fringe of persons who possess inferior rights such as that of maintenance, or who may, under certain contingencies, hope to enter into the coparcenary. In defining the coparcenary, therefore, it will be necessary somewhat to anticipate matters which have to be more fully treated of hereafter.

§ 270. The Hindu lawyers always treat partition and inheritance as part of the same subject (c). The reason of this is that the normal state of the property, with which they have to deal is to be joint property, and that they can only explain the amount of interest which each member has in the property, by pointing out what share he would be entitled to in the event of a partition.

There is no such thing as succession, properly so called, in an undivided Hindu family (d). The whole body of such a family, consisting of males and females, constitutes a sort of corporation, some of the members of which are

do not succeed to each other.

(c) The works of Jimuta Vahana and Madhaviya are known by names (Dayabhaga and Daya-vibhaga) which mean simply partition of heritage. See Bhimul Doss v. Choonee Lall, 2 Cal., 379, where the right of a nephew to share in the property with his uncles was argued as if he was claiming to succeed to the property before his uncles.

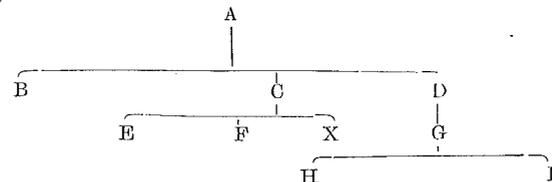

(d) Coparcenary and survivorship are incidents of Hindu law, which are repealed by the Succession Act, except as to rights previously vested, in the case of Native Christians. Tellis v. Saldanha, 10 Mad., 69.

Rights arise by birth:

coparceners, that is, persons who on partition would be entitled to demand a share, while others are only entitled to maintenance. In Malabar and Canara, where partition is not allowed, the idea of heirship would never present itself to the mind of any member of the family. Each person is simply entitled to reside and be maintained in the family house, and to enjoy that amount of affluence and consideration which arises from his belonging to a family possessed of greater or less wealth (§ 244). As he dies out his claims cease, and as others are born their claims arise. But the claims of each spring from the mere fact of their entrance into the family, not from their taking the place of any particular individual. Deaths may enlarge the beneficial interest of the survivors, by diminishing the number who have a claim upon the common fund, just as births may diminish their interests by increasing the number of claimants. But although the fact that A is the child of B introduces him into the family, it does not give him any definite share of the property, for B himself has none. Nor upon the death of B does he succeed to anything, for B has left nothing behind to succeed to. Now in every part of India where the Mitakshara prevails the position of an undivided family is exactly the same, except that within certain limits each male member has a right to claim a partition, if he likes. But until they elect to do so, the property continues to devolve upon the members of the family for the time being by survivorship and not by succession. The position of any particular person as son, grandson, or the like, or as one of many sons or grandsons, will be very important when the time for partition arrives, because it will determine the share to which he is then entitled. But until that time arrives he can never say, I am entitled to such a definite portion of the property; because next year the proportion he would have a right to claim on a division might be much smaller, and the year after much larger, as births or deaths supervene. For instance, suppose a family are ascertained by partition.

to consist only of A and his sons B and C, on a partition each would take one-third. But if D was born while the family remained joint, each would take one-fourth. Supposing the family still to remain undivided, on the death of A, the possible shares of the three sons would be enlarged to one-third; and if B were subsequently to die without issue, they would again be enlarged to one-half. As C and D married, their sons E, F and G would enter into the family and acquire an interest in the property. But that interest again would be a shifting interest, depending on the state of the family. If C were to die, leaving only two sons E and F, and they claimed a partition, each would take one-half of one-half. But if X had previously been born, each would only take one-third of one-half. If they put off their claim for a division till D, G, H and I had all died, they would each take one-third of the whole. It is common to say that in an undivided family each member transmits to his issue his own share in the joint property, and that such issue takes per capita inter se, but per stirpes as regards the issue of other members. But it must always be remembered that this is only a statement of what would be their rights on a partition. Until a partition their rights consist merely in a common enjoyment of the common property, to which is further added the right of male issue to forbid alienations, made by their direct ancestors (e). These observations, however, require modification in Bengal. There, "admitting the family to have been joint, and the sons joint in estate, Mitakshara.

Bengal.

(e) See this subject discussed, Appovier v. Rama Subbaiyan, 11 M. I. A., 75; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 1; Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbash Koer, 3 B. L. R. (F. B.), 81; S. C., 14 Suth., 340; Ram Narain v. Pertum Singh, 20 Suth., 189; S. C., 11 B. L. R., 897; Rajnarain v. Heeralal, 5 Cal., 142; Bhimul Doss v. Choonee Lall, 2 Cal., 379; Debi Parshad v. Thakur Dial, 1 All., 105; Raol Gorain v. Teza Gorain, 4 B. L. R., Appx. 90; Sudersanam v. Narasimhulu, 25 Mad., 149.

the right of any one of the co-sharers would not, under the Hindu law, pass over, upon his death, to the other co-sharers. It would be part of the estate of the deceased co-sharer and would devolve upon his legatees or natural heirs" (f). The share of an undivided brother dying without issue will pass to his widow, daughter and daughter's son, and may thus vest in a family completely different from his own (§ 527).

The coparcenary

§ 271. Now it is at this point that we see one of the most important distinctions between the coparcenary and the general body of the undivided family. Suppose the property to have all descended from one ancestor, who is still alive, with five generations of descendants. It by no means follows that on a partition every one of these five generations will be entitled to a share. And if the common ancestor dies, so that the property descends a step, it by no means follows that it will go by survivorship to all these generations. It may go to the representatives of one or more branches, or even to the widow of the survivor of several branches, to the total exclusion of the representatives of other branches. The question in each case will be, who are the persons who have taken an interest in the property by birth (g). The answer will be, that they are the persons who offer the funeral cake to the owner of the property. That is to say, the three generations next to the owner in unbroken male descent (h). Therefore, if a man has living, sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons, all of these constitute a single coparcenary with himself. Every one of these descendants is entitled to offer the funeral cake to him, and therefore every one of them obtains by birth limited to those who partake in the funeral cake.

(f) Per Turner, L. J., Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 553; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114. Subramaniya Pandiya v. Sivasubramaniya, 17 Mad., p. 330. This seems also to have been the view of Apararka. Partition, he says, does not create a new right; it has but the effect to render visible the right of each of the former joint owners to his share of the estate. Jolly, Lect. 87, 114, n.

(g) This principle will not apply in Bengal, where sons take no interest by birth in their father's property. See ante § 259.

(h) Manu, ix., § 186; Viramit., p. 72, § 16, post § 501. I may as well state once for all, that the word "issue" will be used throughout this work as embracing son, grandson, and great-grandson.

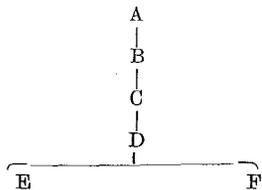

an interest in his property. But the son of one of the great-grandsons would not offer the cake to him, and therefore is out of the coparcenary, so long as the common ancestor is alive. But while fresh links are continually being added to the chain of descendants by birth, so earlier links are being constantly removed from the upper end of the chain by death. So long as the principle of survivorship continues to operate, the right to the property will devolve from those who are higher in the line to those who are lower down. As each fresh member takes a share, his descendants to the third generation below him take an interest in that share by birth. So the coparcenary may go on widening and extending, until its members may include persons who are removed by indefinite distances from the common ancestor. But this is always subject to the condition that no person who claims to take a share is more than three steps removed from a direct ascendant who has taken a share. Whenever a break of more than three degrees occurs between any holder of property and the person who claims to take next after that holder, the line ceases in that direction, and the survivorship is confined to those collaterals and descendants who are within the limit of three degrees. This was laid down in two cases in Bombay and Madras.

§ 272. In the former case the claim to partition was resisted, on the ground that the plaintiff was beyond the fourth degree from the acquirer of the property in dispute, the defendant being within that degree. It was argued that the analogy of the law of inheritance prevented a lineal descendant, beyond the great-grandson, from claiming partition at the hands of those who are legally in possession, as descendants from the original sole owner of the family property or any part of it (i). West, J., said: "The Hindu law does not contemplate a partition as absolutely necessary at any stage of the descent from a common ancestor; yet the result of the construction Coparcenary not limited to three degrees from common ancestor.

(i) Moro Vishvanath v. Genesh, 10 Bom. H. C., 444, 449.

pressed on us would be to force the great-grandson in every case to divide from his coparceners, unless he desired his own offspring to be left destitute. Where two great-grandsons lived together as a united family, the son of each would, according to the Mitakshara law, acquire by birth a co-ownership with his father in the ancestral estate; yet if the argument is sound, this co-ownership would pass altogether from the son of A or B, as either happened to die before the other. If a coparcener should die, leaving no nearer descendant than a great-great-grandson, then the latter would no doubt be excluded at once from inheritance and from partition by any nearer heirs of the deceased, as, for instance, brothers and their sons; but where there has not been such an interval as to cause a break in the course of lineal succession, neither has there been an extinguishment of the right to a partition of the property in which the deceased was a co-sharer in actual possession and enjoyment (k). Each descendant in succession becomes co-owner with his father of the latter's share, and there is never such a gap in the series as to prevent the next from fully representing the preceding one in the succession." The same principles were illustrated in detail by Mr. Justice Nanabhai Haridas. He said (l): "Take, for instance, the following case. A, the original owner of the property in dispute, dies, leaving a son B and a grandson C, both members of an undivided family. B dies, leaving C and D, son and grandson respectively; and C dies, leaving a son D and two grandsons by him, E and F. No partition of the family property has taken place, and D, E and F are living in a state of union. Can E and F compel (k) See per Jagannatha, 3 Dig., 446—450.

(l) 10 Bom. H. C., 463.

D to make over to them their share of the ancestral property? According to the law prevailing on this side of India they can, sons being equally interested with their father in ancestral property (m). In the same way, suppose B and C die, leaving A and D members of an undivided family, and then A dies, whereupon the whole of this property devolves upon D, who thereafter has two sons, E and F. They, or either of them, can likewise sue their father D for partition of the said property, it being ancestral. Now suppose B and C die, leaving A, D and D¹, members of an undivided family, after which A dies, whereupon the whole of his property devolves upon D and D¹ jointly, and that D thereafter has two sons, E and F, leaving whom D dies. A suit against D¹ for partition of the joint ancestral property of the family would be perfectly open to E and F, or even to G and F, if E died before the suit. It would be a suit against D¹ by a deceased brother's sons or son and grandson (n). But E and F are both fifth, and G sixth in descent from the original owner of the property, whereas D and D¹ are only fourth. Suppose, however, that A dies after D leaving a great-grandson, D¹ and the two sons of D, E and F. In this case E and F could not sue D¹ for partition of property descending from A, because it is inherited by D¹ alone, since E and F being sons of a great-grandson, are excluded by D¹, A's surviving great-grandson, the right of representation extending no further (o). The rule, then, which I deduce from the Rule

(m) 1 Stra. H. L., 177; 2 ibid., 316; Mitakshara, i., 1, § 27; i., 5, § 3, 5, 8, 11; V. May., iv., 6, § 13.

(n) V. May., iv., 4, § 21.

(o) See Jagannatha's Comment, on text, cccclxx.; 3 Dig., 388; 1 Nort. L. C., 292; Stra. Man., § 323; 2 Stra. H. L., 327.

authorities on this subject is, not that a partition cannot be demanded by one more than four degrees removed from the acquirer or original owner of the property sought to be divided, but that it cannot be demanded by one more than four degrees removed from the last owner, however remote he may be from the original owner thereof.

applied to im-partible Zemindary.

§ 273. This principle was also affirmed by the Madras High Court, and its application put to a more violent test. The question was as to the right of succession to an impartible Zemindary. The original owner and common ancestor of the claimant was A. The Zemindary had descended throughout in the line of H, and was last held by N, who died without issue, leaving a widow, the defendant. The plaintiff was G, who was admittedly the nearest male of kin to N. The family was undivided. It was conceded that, according to the law of the Mitakshara, an undivided coparcener would take before the widow. But it was contended on her behalf, "that only those of the unseparated kinsmen were co-heirs, who by birth had acquired a proprietary interest in the estate in common with the deceased; his coparceners, who, on a division in his lifetime, would have been sharers of the estate, and that such a coparcenership can exist only between kindred who are near sapindas (i.e., not beyond the fourth degree), and consequently, that the respondent (plaintiff) was not a co-heir of the deceased." The Court assented to the first branch of the argument, but denied the second. They held that the Zemindary, though impartible, was still coparcenary property, and that the members of the undivided family acquired the same right to it by birth, as they would have done to any other property, subject only to the limitation of the enjoyment to one. Then as to who were coparceners, they said: "It appears to us equally certain that the limit of the co-heirs must be held to include undivided collateral relations, who are descendants in the male line of one who was a coparcener with an ancestor of the last possessor. For, in the undivided coparcenary interest which vested in such coparcener, his near sapindas were co-heirs, and when on his death, the interest vested in his sons, or son, or other near sapinda in the male line, the near sapindas of such descendants or descendant became in like manner co-heirs with them or him, and so on, the co-heirship became extended through the new sapindas down to the last descendant. Obviously, therefore, as long as the status of non-division continues, the members of the family who have, in this way, succeeded to a coparcenary interest, are co-heirs with their kindred who possess the other undivided interests of the entire estate, and one of such kindred and his near sapindas in the male line cannot be the only co-heirs, until by the death of all the others without descendants in the male line to the third degree, he has, or he and they have, by survivorship acquired the entire right to the heritage, as effectually as if the estate had passed upon an actual partition with the co-heirs." The court, therefore, held that the plaintiff, as undivided coparcener, would succeed before the widow (p). In this case it will be observed the plaintiff was sixth in descent from the common ancestor, the defendant's husband being equally distant.

Definition of coparceners.

§ 274. The same principle, viz., that property vests in certain relations by birth, and not in other relations, gives rise to a division of property into two classes, which are

Obstructed and unobstructed
property.

(p) Yenumula v. Ramandora, 6 Mad. H. C., 94, 106. See also in Bengal, Girwurdharee v. Kulakul, 4 S. D., 9 (12), where property was divided among persons four, five, and six degrees removed from the common ancestor.

spoken of by Hindu lawyers as Apratibandha and Sapratibandha; terms which have been translated, not very happily, unobstructed and obstructed, or liable to obstruction. These terms are thus explained in the Mitakshara (g), "The wealth of the father or of the paternal grandfather becomes the property of his sons or of his grandsons, in right of their being his sons or his grandsons; and that is an inheritance not liable to obstruction. But property devolves on parents or uncles, brothers, or the rest, upon the demise of the owner, if there be no male issue; and thus the actual existence of a son, and the survival of the owner are impediments to the succession; and on their ceasing, the property devolves on the successor in right of his being uncle or brother. This is an inheritance subject to obstruction." The distinction is the same as that which is present to the mind of an English lawyer, when he speaks of estates as being vested or contingent, or of an heir as being the heir-at-law, or the heir presumptive. The unobstructed, or rather the unobstructible, estate is that in which the future heir has already an interest by the mere fact of his existence. If he lives long enough he must necessarily succeed to the inheritance, unless his rights are defeated by alienation or devise; and if he dies, his rights will pass on to his son, unless he is himself in the last rank of sapindas, in which case his son is out of the line of unobstructed heirs. On the other hand, the person who is next in apparent succession to an obstructed, or rather an obstructible estate, may at any moment find himself cut out by the interposition of a prior heir, as for instance a son, widow or the like. His rights will accrue for the first time at the death of the actual holder, and will be judged of according to the existing state of the family at that time. Any nearer heir who may then be in existence will completely exclude him; and if he should die before the succession opens, even though he would have succeeded, had he survived, his heirs will not take at all, unless they happen themselves to be the next heirs to the deceased. In other words, he cannot transmit to others rights which had not arisen in himself (r). Nor can he by any contract bar the rights of those who, after his death, are the actual reversioners when the succession opens (s). On the same principles, rights which have once vested in such an heir will not be affected by the subsequent birth of a person who would have taken along with him, or in preference to him, if in existence when the succession opened (t).

(g) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 3; Viramit., p. 3, V. May., iv., 2, § 2. See per curiam, Nund. Oommar Lall v. Ruzzooddeen, 10 B. L. R., 191; S. C., 18 Suth., 477; Debi Parshad v. Thakur Dial, 1 All., 112. These terms are not used by the writers of the Bengal or Mithila School. V. N. Mandlik, 369; Jolly, Lect. 176.

§ 275. The second question is as to the coparcenary property. The first species of coparcenary property is that which is known as ancestral property. The meaning of this phrase might be taken to be, property which descended upon another from an ancestor, however remote, or of whatever sex. Where property so descended upon several persons simultaneously, and with equal rights both of possession and enjoyment, as for instance upon several brothers, sons, grandsons, nephews or the like, it would generally be joint property, by the very hypothesis. But this is not what is known for this purpose as ancestral property. That term, in its technical sense, is applied to property which descends upon one person in such a manner that his issue acquire certain rights in it as against him (u). For instance, if a father under Mitakshara law is attempting to dispose of property, we enquire whether it is ancestral property. The answer to this question is that property is ancestral property if it has been inherited as unobstructed property, that it is not ancestral if it has been inherited as obstructed property (§ 274). The reason

(r) Bapu Anaji v. Ratnoji, 21 Bom., 319.

(s) Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh, 29 I. A., 1; S. C., 24 All., 94.

(t) Narasimha v. Veerabadhra, 17 Mad., 287.

(u) Property devised by a man to his widow and his son does not become joint property, with its attributes of survivorship and mutual restraint on alienation. Jogeswar Narain v. Ramchund Dutt, 23 I. A., 37; S. C., 23 Cal., 670, overruling Vyadinada v. Nagammal, 11 Mad., 258. Nor property settled on husband and wife married under Alya Santana law, the interest of which was payable to both jointly. Kanthu v. Vittamma, 25 Mad., 385. See post § 563A.

of this distinction is that, in the former case, the heir had an actual vested interest in the property, before the inheritance fell in, and therefore his own issue acquired by birth an interest in that interest. Hence, when the property actually devolved upon him, he took it subject to the interest they had already acquired. But in the latter case, he had no interest whatever in the property, before the descent took place; therefore, when that event occurred, he received the property free of all claims upon it by his issue, and à fortiori, by any other person. Hence all property which a man inherits from a direct male ancestor, not exceeding three degrees higher than himself, is ancestral property, and is at once held by himself in coparcenary with his own issue. But where he has inherited from a collateral relation, as for instance from a brother, nephew, cousin or uncle, it is not ancestral property (v); consequently his own descendants are not coparceners in it with him. They cannot restrain him in dealing with it, nor compel him to give them a share of it (w). On the same principle property, which a man inherits from a female, or through a female, as for instance a daughter's son, or which he has taken from an ancestor more remote than three degrees, or which he has taken as heir to a priest or a fellow-student, would not be ancestral property (x). And that which is ancestral, and therefore Ancestral property.

(v) It is hardly necessary to remark that I am speaking of inheritance, not of survivorship. The enlarged share which accrues to the remaining brothers on the death of an undivided brother is ancestral property, and subject to all its incidents. Gungoo Mull v. Bunseedhar, 1 N.-W. P., 170.

(w) Rayadur Nallatambi v. Mukunda, 3 Mad. H. C., 455; Nund Coomar Lall v. Huzzooddeen, 10 B. L. R., 183; S. C., 18 Suth., 477; Jawahir v. Guyan, 3 Agra H. C., 73; Lochin v. Nemdharee, 20 Suth., 170; Pitam v. Ujagar, 1 All., 652; Jolly, Lect. 121.

(x) 3 Dig., 61; W. & B., 710, approved per cur., 10 B. L. R., 192, supra. The High Court of Madras has held that property which descended to a man from his maternal grandfather was ancestral property, which he could not alienate to the detriment of his son. None of the above authorities were referred to. The decision was reversed by the Privy Council on another point (Muthayan Chetti v. Sangili, 3 Mad., 370, 9 I. A., 128; Sivagunga v. Lakshmana, 9 Mad., 188, 190). When the case arises again it will be material to remember that property only becomes joint property by reason of being ancestral property, where the ancestor from whom it was derived was a paternal ancestor. See Mit., i., 1, § 3, 5, 21, 24, 27, 33; i., 5, § 2, 3, 5, 9—11; per Mitter, J., Gunga Prosad v. Ajudhia Pershad, 8 Cal., 131, p. 134; per curiam, Jasoda Koer v. Sheo Pershad, 17 Cal., p. 85; Nanabhai v. Achrabai, 12 Bom., p. 133; Karuppai v. Sankara Narayanan, 27 Mad., p. 310; post § 276.

coparcenary property, as regards a man's own issue, is not so as regards his collaterals. For they have no interest in it by birth (y). On the other hand, property is not the less ancestral because it was the separate or self-acquired property of the ancestor from whom it came (z). When it has once made a descent, its origin is immaterial as regards those persons to whom it has descended. It is very material, however, as regards those who have not taken it by descent. A father with two sons, A and B, had self-acquired property. A died in his lifetime leaving a widow, and upon his death B took the property. A's widow claimed maintenance out of it as ancestral property. The Court admitted that, in any question between B and his sons, it would be ancestral property. But it was not so as regards A. During his life the property was absolutely at the disposal of the father. As regards A it was neither ancestral nor coparcenary property, and on his death his widow had no higher claim over it than her husband. Her rights were not enlarged by its change of character when it reached the hands of B (a). All savings made out of ancestral property, and all purchases or profits made from the income or sale of ancestral property, would follow the character of the fund from which they proceeded (b). On the same principle accretions to a (y) Ajooldhia v. Kashee Gir, 4 N.-W. P., 31; Gopal Singh v. Bheekunlal, S. D. of 1859, 294; Gopal Dutt v. Gopal Lall, ibid., 1314.

(z) Ran Narain v. Pertum Singh, 20 Suth., 189; S. C., 11 B. L. R., 397, per curiam, 9 Bom., 450.

(a) Janki v. Nandram, 11 All. F. B., 194, p. 198.

(b) Shudanund v. Bonomalee, 6 Suth., 256; S. C. on review; sub nomine, Sudanund v. Soorjo Monee, 8 Suth., 455; S. C., 11 Suth., 436, reversed on another point in Privy Council; sub nomine, Soorjomonee v. Suddanund, 12 B. L. R., 304; S. C., 20 Suth., 377; S. C., 8 Mad. Jur., 466; Ghansham v. Govind, 5 S. D., 202 (240); Umirthmath v. Gourreenath, 13 M. I. A., 542; S. C., 5 Suth. (P. C.), 10; Kristnappa v. Ramasavvy, 8 Mad. H. C., 25; Jugmohandas v. Mungalias, 10 Bom., 529. In the case of Gunga Prosad v. Ajudhia Pershad, the High Court of Bengal treated it as a point still unsettled, whether property purchased out of the income of ancestral property before the birth of a son was ancestral property vested in the after-born son. Mr. Justice Mitter was strongly of opinion that it was not. It was admitted that it would be otherwise as to property so purchased after his birth, 8 Cal., 131; S. C., 9 C. L. R., 417. In Madras it has been held that property purchased from the income of ancestral is ancestral property, which cannot be given to a stranger in derogation of the right of a son who was in gremio matris at the time of the gift. The Court refused to follow the dictum of Mitter, J., cited above Ramanna v. Venkata, 11 Mad., 246. As to savings from income of impartible Zemindary, or purchases made out of such savings, riparian village are ancestral property, if the village itself was such (c). Property which has been conferred on a widow for her maintenance retains its character as ancestral when it reverts to the family on her death (d). Similarly where a member of a joint family has assigned his undivided interest to a creditor to satisfy claims which do not exhaust the entire value of the interest, any residue continues to be ancestral property (e).

Divided property.

§ 276. Where ancestral property has been divided between several joint owners, there can be no doubt that if any of them have issue living at the time of the partition, the share which falls to him will continue to be ancestral property in his hands, as regards his issue, for their rights had already attached upon it, and the partition only cuts off the claims of the dividing members. The father and his issue still remain joint (f). But it is not so clearly settled whether the same rule would apply where the partition had been made before the birth of issue. In a case in Calcutta it was held that where a father by various deeds of gift had distributed his property among his sons, the portion obtained by each was ancestral property as regards his issue. It does not appear whether the issue had been in existence at the time of the gift. But the son contended that it was by the gift his self-acquired property. This the Court refused to admit. After a full examination of the Hindu authorities, they said: "We think that, according to the Mitakshara, landed property acquired by a grandfather and distributed by him amongst his sons, does not by such gift become the self-acquired property of the sons so as to enable them to dispose of it by gift or sale

Property obtained from ancestor by gift see post § 286. Semble, that movable property which has made a descent, and is then converted into land, possesses all the incidents of ancestral immovable property. Sham Narain v. Raghoobur, 3 Cal., 508.

(c) Ramprasad v. Radha Prasad, 7 All., 402.

(d) Beni Persha v. Puran Chund, 23 Cal., 262.

(e) Krishnasami v. Rajahgopala, 18 Mad., 73, p. 83.

(f) Lakshmbai v. Ganpat Moroba, 5 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 129; Chatterbhooj v. Dharamsi, 9 Bom., 438. The same point was very lately decided in Calcutta. The report does not state whether the son was born before or after the partition, but I think the latter seems to have been the case. Adurmoni Chowdhry, 3 Cal., 1.

without the consent, and to the prejudice of, the grandsons. The property cannot be said to have been acquired without detriment to the father's (i.e., ancestral) estate, because it was not only given out of that estate, but in substitution for the undivided share of that estate to which the father appears to have been entitled. It cannot therefore be taken to have been given simply by the favour of the father, but upon consideration of the father surrendering some interest or right to share in the grandfather's estate, which he did by the acceptance of this separate parcel. We think that the father took it with the incidents to which the undivided share for which it was substituted would have been subject" (g). This reasoning would appear to apply equally in favour of issue unborn at the time of the gift. Similarly it was held in Madras, that a father did not take his share of the estate as self-acquired property, in consequence of having received it under the will of his own father. The Court said: "It seems to us that there is no reason whatever in the contention that its quality was changed by his choosing to accept it, apparently under the terms of his father's will. Still less ground would there be for the contention that his acquiescence in that mode of receiving it would vest in himself a larger interest than he would have taken by descent" (h). The same principle was followed in a case under Mitakshara law, where a father bequeathed his self-acquired property to his widow and his three sons jointly. Two of the sons separated. The third continued to live in union with his mother, and on her death took her share by survivorship. The Court, after reviewing the above decisions, held that the share of the widow which came to the son must be considered in his hands as ancestral property, since it had originally formed part of his father's estate (i). Whatever the nature of the widow's interest may have been, its descent was governed by the incidents attaching to the source from which it arose. Where a man had obtained a share of family property on partition, which was mortgaged to its full value, and which he had subsequently cleared from the mortgage by his own self-acquisitions, it was held that the unencumbered property was ancestral property in his hands (k).

(g) Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh, 6 Suth., 71, 73; followed Nanomi Babuasin v. Modun Mohun, 13 I. A., 5. In Mohabeer Kooer v. Joobha, 16 Suth., 221; S. C., 8 B. L. R., 38; a contrary opinion seems to have been expressed by Jackson, J. But in that case the property appears not to have been ancestral at all. See as to what is "a gift through affection," Lakshman v. Ramachandra, 1 Bom., 561.

(h) Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C., 50, 55; Nagalingam v. Ramachandra Tevar, 24 Mad., 429. In this case an alienation by the devisee was held bad as against an after-born son.

In Bombay it has been recently decided, after a review of all the cases, that where a grandfather bequeaths his self-acquired property to a son, who has at the time male issue, in terms showing an intention that the devisee should take an absolute estate, the property so devised does not vest in the issue as ancestral estate, so as to entitle them to sue their father for a partition (l).

Property jointly acquired

§ 277. Secondly, property may be joint property without having been ancestral. Where the members of a Joint Family acquire property by or with the assistance of joint funds, or by their joint labour, such property is the joint property of the persons who have acquired it, whether it is an increment to ancestral property, or whether it has arisen without any nucleus of descended property (m). And it makes no difference that the form of the conveyance to them would make them tenants in common and not joint tenants (n). Whether the issue of such joint acquirers

(i) Nanabhai v. Achratbai, 12 Bom., 122, p. 133; Beni Pershad v. Pawan Chand, 23 Cal., 262.

(k) Visalatchy v. Annasamy, 5 Mad. H. C., 150; Krishnasami v. Rajahgopala, 18 Mad., 73, p. 63.

(l) Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas, 10 Bom., 528; acc. Nagalingam v. Ramachandra Tevar, 24 Mad., 429.

(m) Manu, ix., § 215; Yajnavalkya, ii., 120; Mitakshara, i., 4, § 15; 3 Dig., 386; F. MacN., 351, 362; Ramasheshaia v. Bhagavat, 4 Mad. H. C., 5; Rampershad v. Sheochurn, 10 M. I. A., 490; Radhabi v. Nanarav, 3 Bom., 151. In Bengal no such presumption would arise. Sarada v. Mahananda, 31 Cal., 445. By § 45 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) persons who purchase immovable property out of a common fund are, in the absence of any contract to the contrary, entitled to hold it in shares proportioned to their interest in the common funds; and similarly where a joint purchase is made by several with their separate funds.

(n) Pokermull's goods, 23 Cal., 980.

would by birth alone acquire an interest in such property, without evidence that they had in any way contributed to it, is a question which, as far as I know, has never arisen. If a single individual acquired a fortune by his own exertions, without any assistance from ancestral property, his issue would certainly take no interest in it. If several brothers did the same, the property would be joint as between themselves. It would certainly be self-acquired as regards all collaterals, and it is difficult to see why it should not be the same as regards their issue, unless they chose voluntarily to admit the latter to a share of it. This seems to have been the view taken by the High Court of Bombay in a case where property had been acquired by trade. They said: "There is no evidence to show that the parties were members of an ordinary trade partnership resting on contract. If the sons had a joint interest with their father in the piece-goods business, it was apparently because they were members of an undivided family carrying on business jointly in that capacity. If the property of the family firm had been acquired by the equal exertions of the three members, without the aid of any nucleus of property other than acquired by themselves, then, no doubt, the property of the firm with its accumulations would be self-acquired property even though it was owned jointly. And on a partition such property would apparently remain self-acquired property in the hands of the several members, even though one of them was the father of the other two" (o). In a later Madras case Bhashyem Iyengar, J., seemed to think that the issue would acquire an interest by birth if the acquirers intended to hold the property as joint family property, but not if they only intended to hold it as co-owners inter se, Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu, 25 Mad., p. 155.

§ 278. Thirdly, property which was originally self-acquired, may become joint property, if it has been voluntarily thrown by the owner into the joint stock, with the or thrown into common stock..

(o) Chatterbhooj v. Dharamsi, 9 Bom., 438, p. 445.

intention of abandoning all separate claims upon it. This doctrine has been repeatedly recognized by the Privy Council. Perhaps the strongest case was one, where the owner had actually obtained a statutory title to the property under the Oudh Talukdars Act I of 1869. He was held by his conduct to have restored it to the condition of ancestral property (p). To create such a new title, however, a clear intention to waive the separate rights of the owner must be established, and will not be inferred from acts which may have been done out of kindness and affection. A younger brother who was insane from birth had for many years been treated by his elder brother as if he was under no incapacity. His name was entered in the revenue records as joint owner, and documents were issued and taken in his name. It appeared that for many years his case had been treated by the family as one that might be cured. Finally a family arrangement was entered into by which he was set aside as incapacitated. The Privy Council held that the previous course of conduct could not be treated as amounting to a fresh grant of rights which the youth was incapable of taking by inheritance (q).

§ 279. Liability to partition is one of the commonest incidents of joint property, but it must not be supposed that joint property and partible property are mutually convertible terms. If it were so, an impartible Zemindary could never be joint property. The reverse, however, is the case. The mode of its enjoyment necessarily cuts

(p) Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal, 3 I. A., 259; S. C., 26 Suth., 55; Shankar Baksh v. Hardeo Baksh, 16 I. A., 71; S. C., 16 Cal., 397; (as to cases in which such a Taluqdar was held to have taken the Statutory estate on trust for the other members of the family, see Mt. Thukrain Sookraj v. Government, 14 M. I. A., 112; Thakoor Hardeo Bua v. Jowahir Singh, 4 I. A., 178; 6 I. A., 161; Thakuram Ramanund v. Raghunath Koer, 9 I. A., 41; S. C., 8 Cal., 769; Hasan Jafar v. Muhammad Askari, 26 I. A., 229); per cur., Rampershad Sheochurn, 10 M. I. A., 506; Chellayamal v. Mutialamal, 6 Mad., Jur. P. C., 108; Sham Narain v. Court of Wards, 20 Suth., 197; per curiam, 15 Bom., p. 39; 10 Cal., pp. 392, 398, 401; Madhavarav Manohar v. Atmarayam, 15 Bom., 519; Tribovandas v. Yorke Smith, 21 Bom., 349; reversing; S. C., 20 Bom., 316, the same rule was applied to property which, though not self-acquired, had descended from a maternal ancestor to daughter's sons. They would not be coparceners, but had elected to treat it as joint property, Gopaldasami v. Chinmasami, 7 Mad., 453.

(q) Lala Muddun Gopal v. Khikhinda Koer, 18 I. A., 9; S. C., 18 Cal., 341.

down to a very small point the rights of the other members of the family with respect to it. But there are two particulars in which its joint character becomes material—first, with reference to the order of succession; and, secondly, as to the powers of alienation possessed by each successive holder. Now, as to the first point, it has been repeatedly held by the Privy Council that the order of succession to a Zemindary depended upon whether “though impartible it was part of the common family property,” or was the separate or self-acquired property of the holder (r). As to the second point, the Courts of Madras, Calcutta and Allahabad till very lately ruled that the holder of an impartible Zemindary under Mitakshara law would be under the same restrictions as to alienation in regard to it as to any other ancestral property. This course of decisions has, however, been interrupted in consequence of a recent ruling of the Privy Council. The subject will have to be discussed more fully hereafter (s).

§ 280. An examination into the property of the joint family would not be complete without pointing out what property may be held by the individual members which is not joint property. Property which is not joint must be either separate property or self-acquired, or property which has devolved upon another in such a manner as to be held by him free of all claims by members of the same undivided family. The last of the three cases has already been discussed (§ 275, 276). Separate property, ex vi termini assumes that the holder of it has ceased to be in union with those in reference to whom the property is separate. But a man is very commonly separated from one set of persons, as, for instance, his brothers, while he is in union with others, as for instance, his own issue. As regards the former, his property is separate; as regards the latter, it is joint (§ 276). Self-acquisition, on the other hand, may be made by anyone while still in a state of union, and when made will be effective against the whole world. I have already (§ 239—241) pointed out the early history of this branch of the law. The following remarks will show how it has been dealt with by modern decisions:

(r) Katama Natchier v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M. I. A., 539, 539, 610; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Yanumula v. Boochia, 13 M. I. A., 333, 336; S. C., 13 Suth. (P. C.), 21; Chowdhry Chintamun v. Nowlukho, 2 I. A., 263; S. C., 24 Suth., 255; Yenumata v. Ramandora, 6 Mad. H. C., 93, 103; Periasamy v. Periasamy, 5 I. A., 61; S. C., 1 Mad., 312; Runganayakamma v. Bulli Ramaya, P. C., 5th July, 1879; Jogendra Bhupati v. Nityanand, 17 I. A., 128; S. C., 18 Cal., 151; Kali Krishna v. Raghunath, 31 Cal., 224. It has been suggested by the Calcutta High Court that Ghatwali tenures created by Reg. XXIX of 1814, though hereditary are the exclusive property of each successive owner. Chabradhari Singh v. Kunj Behari, 22 Cal., 156.

(s) See post § 338.

Self-acquisition.

§ 281. The whole doctrine of self-acquisition is briefly stated by Yajnavalkya as follows:—“Whatever is acquired by the coparcener himself, without detriment to the father’s estate, as a present from a friend, or a gift at nuptials, does not appertain to the coheirs (t). Nor shall he who recovers hereditary property which has been taken away give it up to the coparceners; nor what has been gained by science” (u). Upon this the Smṛiti Chandrika remarks that the estate of the father means the estate of any undivided coheir (v). While the Mitakshara adds that the words “without detriment to the father’s estate” must be connected with each member of the sentence. “Consequently what is obtained from a friend as the return of an obligation conferred at the charge of the patrimony; what is received at a marriage concluded in the form Asura or the like (w); what is recovered of the hereditary estate by the expenditure of the father’s goods; what is earned by science acquired at the expense of ancestral wealth; all that must be shared with the whole of the brethren and the father” (x). The author of the Mitakshara enlarges the text of Yajnavalkya by defining self-acquisition as “that which had been acquired by the (t) See as to presents from relations or friends, Manu, ix, § 206; Narada, xiii., § 6, 7; Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh, 6 Suth., 71; ante § 276; Mitakshara, i., 5, § 9.

(u) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 118; 119; Mitakshara, i., 4, § 1. See Daya Bhaga, vi., 1; D. K. S., iv., 2, § 1—12; V. May., iv., 7, § 1—14; Ragunandana, v., 1—12.

(v) Smṛiti Chandrika, vii., § 28.

(w) Sheo Gobind v. Sham Narain, 7 N.-W. P., 75.

(x) Mitakshara, i., 4, § 6.

coparcener himself without any detriment to the goods of his father or mother.” Hence the Madras High Court has recently decided that property inherited by a man from his mother’s father is not his self-acquisition, and this ruling has been affirmed by the Privy Council (y). The whole contest in each instance is to show that the gain has been without “detriment to the estate.” In early times the slightest assistance from the joint patrimony, however indirect, was considered to be such a detriment, and the possession of any joint property was considered as conclusively proving that there had been such an assistance. The Madras Court has always leant very strongly against self-acquisition. But the recent tendency of decisions seems to be towards a more sensible view of the law, following out its spirit rather than its letter.

§ 282. For instance, the gains of science or valour, Gains of science. which seem to have been the earliest forms of self-acquisition, were held to be joint property, if the learning had been imparted at the expense of the Joint Family, or if the warrior had used his father’s sword (§ 240). The law upon this point was examined with great fulness in a case where the adoptive mother of a dancing girl claimed her property, on the ground that it had been acquired by skill imparted at the mother’s expense. The High Court of Madras, over-ruling a very elaborate judgment of the Civil Judge, decided that if these gains were to be considered the gains of science, they were joint property of the acquirer and her mother (z). It would admittedly have been otherwise if her gains had merely been the result of prostitution, unaided by any special education (a). In a later case the gains of a Vakil were held to be divisible, on the ground that they had been obtained by education imparted at the family expense, although it was found that he had received

(y) Mit., i., 4, § 2; acc. Raghumandana, v., 5; Muttayan Chetty v. Sangili, 9 I. A., 127; 3 Mad., 370, 1882. The Privy Council declined to commit itself to the consequence drawn by the Madras High Court that property so inherited became the joint property of the taker and his son. See ante § 275, note.

(z) Chalakovanda v. Ratnachalam, 2 Mad. H. C., 56. See 2 W. MacN., 167.

(a) Boologam v. Swornam, 4 Mad., 330.

from his father nothing more than a general education. Holloway, J., referring to the dancing girl's case, said: "I fully adhere to the judgment of the High Court, for which I am responsible, and especially to the statement that the ordinary gains of science by one who has received a family maintenance are certainly partible" (b). The decisions in the above cases were adopted in general terms by the Chief Justice in Bombay in another case of a Vakil. There, however, the point really did not arise, as it appeared that he united the business of money-lender with that of Vakil, and that there was joint family property of which he had the use (c).

Effect of education in family.

§ 283. It is, however, difficult to see why a person who has made gains by science, after having been educated or maintained at the family expense, should be in a worse position than any other person who has been so educated or maintained, and who has afterwards made self-acquisitions. Jimuta Vahana lays it down, that where it is attempted to reduce a separate acquisition into common property on the ground that it was obtained with the aid of common property, it must be shown that the joint stock was used for the express purpose of gain. "It becomes not common merely because property may have been used for food or other necessaries, since that is similar to the sucking of the mother's breast" (d). This seems to be good sense. If a member of a Hindu family were sent to England at the joint expense, to be educated for the Bar or the Civil Service, it seems fair enough that his extra gains should fall into the common stock, as a recompense for the extra outlay incurred. It might be assumed that when the outlay was incurred the reimbursement was contemplated. But it is different where all start on exactly the same level, with nothing but the ordinary maintenance and education which is common to persons of that class of life. Accordingly in a Madras case, where

(b) Gungadhharudu v. Narasammah, 7 Mad. H. C., 47.

(c) Bai Manchha v. Narotamdas, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 1, 6.

(d) Daya Bhaga, vi., 1, § 44—50; 1 Str. H. L., 214; 2 Str. H. L., 347.

a Hindu had made a large mercantile fortune, his claim to hold it as self-acquired was allowed, though he had admittedly been maintained in his earlier years, educated and married out of patrimonial means (e). So in a Bengal case where self-acquisition was set up, and the defendant had been maintained at the family expense, but it was proved that in acquiring his property he did not use any funds which belonged to the joint family, his gains apparently being derived from some lucrative employment, it was held that the plea was made out. Mitter, J., said: "The plaintiff's case in the Court below was that the defendant received his education from the joint estate, and that he is consequently entitled to participate in every property that has been acquired by the defendant by the aid of such education. But this contention is nowhere sanctioned by the Hindu law, and I see nothing in justice to recommend it" (f). This case was approved by the Privy Council in an appeal where it had been contended that the property acquired by a successful merchant was joint property, because he had been educated out of the joint funds. The fact was negatived, upon which the Committee observed, "This being their Lordships' view, it does not become necessary to consider whether the somewhat startling proposition of law put forward by the appellant, which, stated in plain terms, amounts to this—that if a member of a joint Hindu family receives any education whatever from the joint funds, he becomes for ever after incapable of acquiring by his own skill and industry any separate property—is or is not maintainable. Very strong and clear authority would be required to support such a proposition. For the reasons that they have given, it does not appear to them necessary to review the textbooks or the authorities which have been cited on this subject. It may be enough to say that, according to their

(e) Chellaperoomall v. Veeraperoomall, 4 Mad. Jur., 54, affd., on appeal, ib., 240.

(f) Dhunookdaree v. Gunput, 11 B. L. R., 201, note; S. C., 10 Suth., 122.

Lordships' view, no texts which have been cited go to the full extent of the proposition contended." Then, after referring with approval to the Bengal case as laying the law down less broadly than those in Madras and Bombay, the judgment concluded by saying: "It may hereafter possibly become necessary for this Board to consider, whether or not the more limited and guarded expression of the law upon this subject of the Courts of Bengal, is not more correct than what appears to be the doctrine of the Courts of Madras" (g).

§ 284. All of the above cases were recently examined by the High Court of Bombay (h). They said: "It certainly appears to us that the dictum of Mitter, J., that the proposition which we are considering 'is nowhere sanctioned by Hindu law,' is not strictly accurate. The texts which have been cited to us do, in our opinion, establish it as a rule of Hindu law that the ordinary gains of science are divisible, when such science has been imparted at the family expense, and acquired while receiving a family maintenance, but that it is otherwise when the science has been imparted at the expense of persons who are not members of the student's family. But the question still remains, whether the term 'Science,' as used in the texts, is, in modern days, to be construed as meaning a mere general education, and not rather a special training for a particular profession. The words 'any education whatever' in the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Pauliem v. Pauliem, as well as an observation of one of their Lordships in the course of the argument, that the Madras case of the dancing girl was a case of a special training, and not necessarily applicable to a case of general training, may seem to indicate that, if the question again comes before their Lordships, it will be considered chiefly with reference to the nature and extent of the education imparted at the family expense." The Court, after citing with approval the remarks at the beginning of the preceding paragraph, proceeded to say: "We think that we shall be doing no violence to the Hindu texts, but shall be only adapting them to the condition of modern society, if we hold that, when they speak of the gains of science which has been imparted at the family expense, they intend the special branch of science which is the immediate source of the gains, and not the elementary education which is the necessary stepping stone to the acquisition of all science."

(g) Pauliem Valoo v. Pauliem Sooryah, 4 I. A., 109, 117; S. C., 1 Mad., 252.

(h) Lakshman v. Jumna Bai, 6 Bom., 225, p. 242. Approved and followed, Krishnaji Mahadev v. Moro Mahadev, 15 Bom., 32; Lakshman Kuar v. Debi Prasad, 20 All., 435.

The science must have been specially taught at the family expense.

§ 285. On the same principle, although the admitted possession or existence of joint funds will throw upon the self-acquirer the onus of proving that such funds did not form the nucleus of his fortune (i), the fact itself is not conclusive. In a case in the Supreme Court of Bengal, Grant, J., said: "Where the property descended is incapable of being considered as the germ whose improvement has constituted the wealth subsequently possessed, this wealth must evidently be deemed acquired. An ancestral cottage never converted, or capable of conversion to an available amount into money, in which the maker of the wealth had the trifling benefit of residing with the rest of the family when he commenced turning his industry to profit,—so of other things of a trifling nature" (k). Of course the contrary would be held, if it appeared that the income of the joint property was large enough to leave a surplus, after discharging the necessary expenses of the family, out of which the acquisitions might have been made (l). And purchases made with money borrowed on the security of the common property will belong to the Joint Family, the members of which will be jointly liable

Possession of joint funds not conclusive.

(i) Shib Pershad v. Gungamonee, 16 Suth., 291; Pran Kristo v. Bhageerutee, 20 Suth., 158; Subbaya v. Surayya, 10 Mad., 251.

(k) Gooroochurn v. Goluckmoney, Fulton, 165, 181; per curiam, Meenatchee v. Chetumbra, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 63; Jadoomonee v. Gungadur, 1 Boul., 600; V. Darp, 521; Ahmedbhoy v. Cassumbhoy, 13 Bom., 534; 10 M. I. A., p. 505.

(l) Sudanvnd v. Soorjo Monee, 11 Suth., 436; Tottempudi Venkataratnam v. Seshamma, 27 Mad., p. 234.

for the debt (m). But it would be otherwise if the loan was made on the sole credit of the borrower, or even if the loan was made out of the common fund, under a special agreement that it was to be at the sole risk of the borrower, and for his sole benefit (n).

Government grants.

§ 286. Estates conferred by Government in the exercise of their sovereign power become the self-acquired property of the donee, whether such gifts are absolutely new grants, or only the restoration to one member of the family of property previously held by another, but confiscated (o), unless some contrary intention appears from the grant (p). But where one member of a family forcibly dispossesses another who is in possession of an ancestral Zemindary, and there is no legal forfeiture, nor any fresh grant by a person competent to confer a legal title, the new occupant takes, not by self-acquisition, but in continuation of the former title (q). And where a confiscation made by Government was subsequently annulled, and no grant to any third person was ever made, it was held that the old title revived, for the benefit of all persons capable of claiming under it (r). So a grant made by Government to the holder of an estate, which merely operates as an ascertainment of the State claim for revenue, and a release of the reversionary right of the crown, is a mere continuance of the old estate (s).

(m) Sheopershad v. Kulunder, 1 S. D., 76 (101).

(n) Rai Nursingh v. Rai Narain, 3 N.-W. P., 218.

(o) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivaganga, 9 M. I. A., 606; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Beer Pertab v. Maharajah Rajender, 12 M. I. A., 1 (Humsapore Case); S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Venkataramaya v. Venkataramaya, 15 Mad., 284, ante § 54. As to grants in Oudh after the Confiscation of 1858, and under Act I of 1869 (Oudh Estate Act), see Thakurain Sookraj v. The Government, 14 M. I. A., 112; Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal, 3 I. A., 259; S. C., 26 Suth., 55; Hardeo Bux v. Jawahir, 4 I. A., 178; 6 I. A., 161; Brijindar v. Janki Koer, 5 I. A., 1; Thakur Shere v. Thakurain, 3 Cal., 615; Gouri Shunker v. Maharajah of Bulrampore, 6 I. A., 1; S. C., 4 Cal., 839; Mulka Jahan v. Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow, ib., 63; Mirza Jehan v. Nawab Afsur Bahu, ib., 76; S. C., 4 Cal., 727; Seth Jaidial v. Seth Siteeram, 8 I. A., 215; Ramanund v. Raghunath, 9 I. A., 41; S. C., 8 Cal., 769; Pirithi Pal v. Jewahir Singh, 14 I. A., 37. A grant of a jaghire is presumably only for life. Gulabdas v. Collector of Surat, 6 I. A., 54; S. C., 3 Bom., 186.

(p) Mahant Govind Rao v. Sitaram, 25 I. A., 195; S. C., 21 All., 53.

(q) Yanumula Boochia, 13 M. I. A., 393; S. C., 13 Suth. (P. C.), 21.

(r) Mirza Jehan v. Badshoo Bahoo, 12 I. A., 124; S. C., 12 Cal., 1.

(s) Narayana v. Chengalamma, 10 Mad., 1.

A point which has now been finally decided is, whether the savings made by the holder of an impartible estate under Mitakshara law, are his self-acquired property, or not. It is quite settled that, although an impartible Zemindary may be joint property, in the sense that all the family have a joint and vested interest in the reversion (§ 279), its annual income, and the accumulations of such income, are the absolute and exclusive property of the possessor of the Zemindary for the time being. None of his kindred can claim an account of the mode in which he has spent his income, nor a share in the profits annually accruing or laid by. He may spend as much or as little of his income as he likes. If he spends it all, it is not waste, and whatever he invests is absolutely at his own disposal during his life (t). There could therefore be no coparcenary in such savings, and therefore no survivorship (u). If, therefore, a Zemindar in Madras left no issue, it seems to me that his widow would take his savings before his brothers, or their issue, and if he left issue, they would take exclusively. This appears to have been the view of the Madras High Court in one of the two cases quoted above, where they say: "Whether regarded as the separately acquired funds of the Zemindar, or as it really is, his acquisition derived from ancestral property owned by him solely, it is equally divisible family property as between his sons" (v). Accordingly when a Poligar died leaving property which would not bind the family, but also leaving debts which had been purchased out of the savings of his income, it was held that such purchases were his separate property, to which his creditors would be entitled in discharge of their debts (w). Of course savings handed down from previous Zemindars would follow a different rule; they

(t) Maharajulungaru v. Rajah Row Pantalu, 5 Mad. H. C., 31, 41; Lutchmana Row v. Terimul Row, 4 Mad. Jur., 241.

(u) See Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder, 12 M. I. A., 540; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 13; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 21 (Tipperah Case).

(v) 5 Mad. H. C., 41; supra note (t).

(w) Kotta Ramasami v. Bangari, 3 Mad., 145. Both Judges agreed that this would be the case with a de jure Poligar, but they differed as to the law where the Poligar was one de facto but not de jure. See pp. 155, 165. Parbati Kumari v. Jagadis Chunder, 29 I. A., 82; S. C., 29 Cal., 433.

Savings from impartible property.

would become the joint property of his descendants, of whom the succeeding Zemindar was only one, his brothers and their issue being the others.

Recovery of ancestral property.

§ 287. Another mode of self-acquisition, which is not very likely to arise now, is where one coparcener unaided by the others or by the family funds, recovers, with the acquiescence of his co-heirs, ancestral property which had been seized by others, and which his family had been unable to recover (x). In order to bring a case within this rule, the property must have passed into the possession of strangers, and be held by them adversely to the family. It is not sufficient that it should be held by a person claiming title to hold it as a member of the family, or by a stranger claiming under the family, as for instance by mortgage. So also the recovery by one co-heir for his own special benefit is only permissible where "the neglect of the coparceners to assert their title had been such as to show that they had no intention to seek to recover the property, or were at least indifferent as to its recovery, and thus tacitly assented to the recoverer using his means and exertions for that purpose, or upon an express understanding with the recoverer's coparceners." "The recovery, if not made with the privity of the co-heirs, must at least have been bonâ fide, and not in fraud of their title, or by anticipating them in their intention of recovering the lost property." Finally, it must be an actual recovery of possession, and not merely the obtaining of a decree for possession (y).

Result to recoverer.

As to the result of such a recovery, there seems to be a conflict in the Mitakshara. At ch. i., 5, § 11, the author, referring to Manu, ix., § 209, makes the property which has been recovered belong exclusively to the recoverer. At (x) Manu, ix., § 209; Mitakshara, i., 4, § 2, 6; Daya Bhaga, vi., 2, § 31—37; D. K. S. iv., 2, § 6—9; Raghunandana, v., 29—31.

(y) Visalatchy v. Annasamy, 5 Mad. H. C., 150; Bisheswar v. Shitul, 8 Suth., 13; S. C., confirmed on review; sub nomine, Bissessur v. Seetul, 9 Suth., 69; Bolakee v. Court of Wards, 14 Suth., 34; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas, 10 Bom., 528; Muttu Vadlunganadha v. Dorasinga, 8 I. A., 99; S. C., 3 Mad., 300; Naraganti v. Venkatachalapati, 4 Mad., p. 259.

ch. i., 4, § 11, he quotes a text of Sankha as establishing that, "if it be land, he takes the fourth part, and the remainder is equally shared among all the brethren." Dr. Mayr reconciles the discrepancy by supposing that the former text refers to the case of a recovery by the father, while the latter refers to one of several brethren or other coparceners, who all stand on the same level (z). The Bengal authorities, however, take the latter rule as applying to every recoverer, but only in the case of land (a). It is to be observed that the recoverer takes one-fourth first, and then shares equally with the others in the residue (b).

§ 288. An intermediate case between self-acquired and joint property is the case, resting upon a text of Vasishtha, in which property acquired by a single coparcener, at the expense of the patrimony, is said to be subject to partition, the acquirer being entitled to a double share (c). It has already been suggested (§ 240) that this text probably applied originally to self-acquisition properly so called, and that it cut down the rights of a self-acquirer, instead of enlarging the rights of one who has made use of common property. The Smriti Chandrika and Madhaviya both restrict the text to the gains of learning, when considered to be partible in consequence of the education from which they sprung having been imparted at the expense of the family (d). The general principles laid down by Vijñanesvara seem to exclude the idea that any special and exclusive benefit can be obtained to any co-heir by a use of the family property (e). Mr. W. MacNaghten states that under Benares law no such benefit can be obtained, whatever may have been the personal exertions

Acquisitions aided by joint funds.

(z) Mayr, 25; Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 32.

(a) Daya Bhaga, vi., 2, § 36—39; D. K. S., iv., 2, § 7, 8; 1 W. MacN., 52; 2 W. MacN., 157.

(b) D. K. S., iv., 2, § 9; 3 Dig., 365.

(c) "And if one of the brothers has gained something by his own effort, he shall receive a double share." Vasishtha, xvii., 51; Mitakshara, i., 4, § 29; Daya Bhaga, vi., 1, § 27—29; Raghunandana, i., 20, v., 18.

(d) Smriti Chandrika, vii., § 9; Madhaviya, p. 49, and see fatwah, 2 W. MacN., 167.

(e) Mitakshara, i., 4, § 1—6.

of any individual, but that the rule does exist in Bengal (f). There is no doubt that in that province the rule has been repeatedly laid down (g), but little attempt has been made to define its extent, or the cases to which it applies. In a case before the Supreme Court of Bengal, Sir Lawrence Peel, C. J., laid down the law as follows: "The authorities establish, and the uniform course of practice in this Court is conformable to them, that the sole manager of the joint stock is thereby entitled to no increased share and that skill and labour contributed by one joint sharer alone in the augmentation or improvement of the common stock, establishes no right to a larger share; that the acquisition of a distinct property without aid of the joint funds or joint labour gives a separate right, and creates a separate estate; that the acquisition of a distinct property, with the aid of joint funds, or of joint labour, gives the acquirer a right to a double share, and prevents the character of separate estate from attaching to such an acquisition; and, lastly, that the union with the common stock of that which might otherwise have been held in severalty, gives it the character of a joint and not of a separate property." Grant, J., held to the same effect, adding that in this respect the law of Bengal and the Mitakshara coincide, and that to entitle the acquirer to a double share, he must only be "aided by means drawn from the joint funds of little consideration" (h). This decision is cited with approval by the Supreme Court of Bengal (i) as laying down both the rule and the exception as to joint and separate acquisitions. The first principle laid down by Sir Lawrence Peel that, in order to entitle the acquirer to a double share, the property acquired must be a distinct one, is in accordance with the Mitak-

(f) 1 W. MacN., 52; 2 W. MacN., 7, n., 158, 160, n., 162, n.

(g) Gudadhur v. Ajodhearam, 1 S. D., 6 (7); Koshul v. Radhanath, 1 S. D., 336 (448); Doorputtee v. Haradhun, 3 S. D., 98; Kripa Sindhu v. Kanhaya, 5 S. D., 335 (393); per curiam, Uma Sundari v. Dwarkanath, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 287.

(h) Gooroockurn v. Goluckmoney, Fulton, 165.

(i) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 539; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114; post § 292.

shara, which, after citing Vasishtha's text, proceeds: "The author (Yajnavalkya) propounds an exception to that maxim. But if the common stock be improved, an equal division is ordained;" and says that in such a case, a double share is not allotted to the acquirer (k). The second principle laid down by Grant, J., that the assistance derived from the joint funds must be of little consideration, seems also to be in accordance with the Daya Bhaga. It will be seen that Jimuta Vahana rests the doctrine of the double share of the acquirer, not upon the text of Vasishtha, which he seems to take as applying to self-acquisition, properly so called, but upon a text of Vyasa. "The brethren participate in that wealth, which one of them gains by valour or the like, using any common property, either a weapon or a vehicle" (l). Here the meritorious cause of the acquisition is the brother himself, the assistance derived from the joint funds being insignificant. This view is in accordance with the futwah of the Pundits in Purtab Bahaudur v. Tilukdharee (m), "of several brothers living together in family partnership, should one acquire property by means of funds common to the whole, the property so acquired belongs jointly to all the brothers. Should, however, the means of acquisition, drawn from the joint funds, be of little consideration, and the personal exertions considerable, two shares belong to the acquirer, and one to each of the other brothers." Both points have been affirmed by later decisions of the Bengal High Court (n).

§ 289. There is a good deal of conflict, probably more apparent than real, between the decisions of the High Court of Bengal as to the question upon whom lies the onus of proof, where property is claimed by one person as being joint property, and withheld by another as Burthen of proof.

(k) Mitakshara, i., 4, § 30, 31.

(l) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 41, vi., 1, § 28, 14.

(m) 1 S. D., 179 (236).

(n) Sree Narain v. Gooro Pershad, 6 Suth., 219; Sheo Dyal v. Judoonath, 9 Suth., 61; and per Colville, C. J., Jadomonee v. Gangadhur, 1 Bouln., 600; V. Darp., 521.

being self-acquired, or vice versa. The general principle undoubtedly is that, as every Hindu family is supposed to be joint unless the contrary is proved, so if nothing appears upon the case except that a member of a family, admittedly or presumably joint, is in possession of property, if he alleges that it is his own self-acquisition, he is alleging something which is an exception to the general rule, and it lies upon him to prove the exception (o). But on the other hand, the case of a plaintiff who seeks to establish a claim to Joint Family property, is no exception to the rule, that the plaintiff must make out his case. He starts with a presumption in his favour. But this presumption must be taken along with the other facts, proved or admitted, and those facts may so far remove the presumption arising from the ordinary condition of a Hindu family, as to throw back the burthen of proof on the other side (p). What, then, is the extent of the presumption as to the condition of a Hindu family? "The normal state of every Hindu family is joint. Presumably every such family is joint in food, worship, and estate. In the absence of proof of division, such is the legal presumption. But the members of the family may sever in all or any of these three things" (q). Of course there is no presumption that a family, because it is joint, possesses joint property or any property. But where it is proved or admitted that a Joint Family possesses some joint property, and the property in dispute has been acquired or is held in a manner consistent with that character, "the presumption of law is that all the property they were possessed of was joint property, until it was shown by evidence that one member of the family was possessed of separate Presumption as to union.

(o) Luximon Row v. Mullar Row, 2 Kn., 60, 63; Prit Koer v. Mahadeo Pershad, 21 I. A., 134; S. C., 22 Cal., 85; Ram Ghulam v. Ram Behari, 18 All., 90.

(p) Bholanath v. Ajoodhia, 12 B. L. R., 336; S. C., 20 Suth., 65; Booth Singh v. Gunesh, 12 B. L. R. (P. C.), 317; S. C., 19 Suth., 356; per curiam, 12 Bom., pp. 131, 309, 13 Bom., p. 66.

(q) Per curiam, Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder (Tipperah case), 12 M. I. A., 540; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 13; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 21; Naragunty v. Yengama, 9 M. I. A., 92; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 30.

property." And this presumption is not rebutted merely by showing "that it was purchased in the name of one member of the family, and that there are receipts in his name respecting it; for all that is perfectly consistent with the notion of its having been joint property, and even if it had been joint property, it still would have been treated in exactly the same manner" (r). The difference of opinion seems to arise as to the degree to which the presumption is to be pushed, where the family is joint, but where no nucleus of joint property is either admitted or proved, and where some property is held by one or more members in a manner, as regards either origin or enjoyment, apparently, though not necessarily, inconsistent with the idea of a joint interest.

§ 290. The law upon this point was laid down as follows by the Sudder Court of Bengal:—"Where, by the plaintiff's own admission, the properties in dispute were not acquired by the use of patrimonial funds, and the defendants never acknowledged that they were acquired by the joint exertions and aid of the plaintiff and his father, it was for the plaintiff to prove his own allegations as to the original joint interest in the purchase of the property. The mere circumstance of the parties having been united in food, arises no such sufficient presumption of a joint interest as to relieve the plaintiffs from the onus of proof" (s). And the Bengal High Court said: "To render it joint property, the consideration for its purchase must have proceeded either out of ancestral funds, or have been produced out of the joint property, or by joint labour. But neither of these alternatives is matter of legal presumption. It can only be brought to the cognizance of a Court of justice in the same way as any other fact,

Burthen of proof.

(r) Dhurm Das v. Mt. Shama Soondri, 3 M. I. A., 229, 240; S. C., 6 Suth. (P. C.), 43; Umirthnath v. Goureenath, 13 M. I. A., 542; S. C., 15 Suth. (P. C.), 10; Rampershad v. Sheochurn, 10 M. I. A., 490, 505. This presumption does not apply in the case of a joint family governed by Daya Bhaga law. Sarada v. Mahananda, 31 Cal., 448.

(s) Kishoree v. Chummun, S. D. of 1852, 111, citing 2 W. MacN., 152—156; F. MacN., 60, approved; Soobhedur v. Boloram, Suth., Sp. No. 57.

viz., by evidence. Consequently, whoever's interest it is to establish it, he must be able to produce the evidence. The plaintiff coming in to Court to claim a share in property as being Joint Family property, must lay some foundation before he can succeed in his suit. He must, at least, show that the defendants whom he sues constitute a Joint Family, and that the property in question became joint property when acquired, or that at some period since its acquisition it has been enjoyed jointly by the family. It will be sufficient for this purpose for him to show that the family, of which the defendants came, was at some antecedent period, not unreasonably great, living joint in estate; and that the property in question was either a portion of the patrimonial estate, so enjoyed by the family, or that it has been since acquired by joint funds. In this case the Principal Sudder Amin has found that the plaintiff has given no proof of the family being joint, beyond the admitted fact of the three persons being brothers, and the plaintiff has also given no sort of proof that these brothers ever were living in the joint enjoyment of any property, still less that this property was acquired by the use and employment of any joint funds. It seems to us that he was entirely right, on this finding, to dismiss the plaintiff's suit without looking further into the case" (t). The principles laid down in this case as to onus probandi were, however, denied to be law by the Chief Justice Sir Richard Couch, in Taruck Chunder v. Jodeshur (u). He laid down the rule to be that, "as the presumption of law is that all the property the family is in possession of is joint property, the rule that the possession of one of the joint owners is the possession of all would apply to this extent, that if one of them was found to be in possession of any property, the family being presumed to be joint in estate, the presumption would be, not that he was in possession of it as separate property acquired by him, but as a member of the Joint Family." This ruling, however, was considered and differed from by other Judges of the High Court in two subsequent cases (v), and was again considered by the High Court and affirmed by two later cases. One of these was the decision of a Court of Appeal, and in the second a single Judge refused to refer the point to a full bench as being conclusively settled (w).

(t) Shiu Golam v. Baran, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 164; S. C., 10 Suth., 198; sub nomine, Sheo Golam v. Burra.

(u) 11 B. L. R., 198; S. C., 19 Suth., 178; acc. Anundo Mohun v. Lamb, 1 Marsh., 169; Hait Singh v. Dabee Singh, 2 N.-W. P., 308; Nursingh Das v. Narain Das, 3 N.-W. P., 217; Sidapa v. Pooneakooty, Morris, 100.

§ 291. It seems to me that the difficulty arises from attempting to lay down an abstract proposition of law which will govern every case, however different in its facts. It is correct to say that a Hindu family is presumed to be joint. It is merely equivalent to saying that, where nothing else is known of a family, the probability is that its members have never entered into a partition with each other. It is a definite statement as to the probability of a single fact. But to say generally of any piece of property in the possession of any member of the family, that it is presumably joint estate, is to assert one or other of a great many different propositions. Either that in its present condition it was ancestral property, or that it was acquired by means or with the assistance of ancestral property, or by means of joint labour, or joint funds, or both, or that it was acquired by a single member without aid from other funds or from other members, and then thrown into the common stock. Now, these propositions are each different in their probability, and different in the facts which would establish them. The very statement of the plaintiff's case, or his evidence, may negative some of them, just as the defendant's case may admit some of them. It seems impossible to say what the presumption is, until it is known what proposition the plaintiff and defendant respectively put forward. This seems to be all that is laid down by the Bengal cases, which go most Suggested solution.

(v) Bholanath v. Ajoodhia, 12 B. L. R., 336; S. C., 20 Suth., 65; Denonath v. Hurrymarain, 12 B. L. R., 849.

(w) Gobind Chunder v. Doorgapersad, 14 B. L. R., 337; S. C., 22 Suth., 248; Shushee Mohun v. Aukhil, 25 Suth., 232; Vedavalli v. Narayana, 2 Mad., 19.

Burthen of proof varies.

strongly against the rights of an undivided family. The Judges say: "Tell us what your case is: when we find how much of it is admitted by the other side, we will then be able to say whether you are relieved of the necessity of proving any part of your case, and how much of it." For instance, if the plaintiff's case was that the property was ancestral, and the defendant admitted that it was purchased with his father's money, but alleged that the purchase was made in his own name, and for his own exclusive benefit, the burthen of proof would lie on him (x). Again, if the case was that the property was purchased out of the proceeds of the family estate, and it was admitted that there was family property of which the defendant was manager, the onus would also lie on him to show a separate acquisition (y). And so it would be where the property was acquired by any member, if the family was joint, and there was an admitted nucleus of family property (z). If it was denied that there ever had been any family property, or admitted that the defendant was not the person in possession of it, the plaintiff would, I imagine, fail if he offered no evidence whatever. The amount of evidence necessary to shift upon the other side the burthen of displacing it might be very small, but would necessarily vary according to the facts of each case. On the other hand, if the property was admitted to be originally self-acquisition, but stated to have been thrown into the common stock, this would be a very good case, if made out (§ 278), but the onus of proving it would be heavily on the party asserting it. And so it would be if the property were admitted to have been acquired by one member without the use of family funds, but the plaintiff asserted that he had rendered such assistance as made it joint property. Even where it appeared that the family had ancestral property in their joint possession, but that some of the family acquired separate property from their own funds, and dealt with it as their own without reference to the other members of the family, the Privy Council held "that such a state of things may be fairly held to weaken, if not altogether to rebut, the ordinary presumption of Hindu law as to property in the name of one member of a Joint Family, and to throw upon those who claim as joint property that of which they have allowed their coparcener, trading and incurring liabilities on his separate account to appear to be the sole owner, the obligation of establishing their title by clear and cogent reasons" (a). A fortiori, where there had been admitted self-acquisitions, and an actual partition, if one of the members sued subsequently for a share of property left in the hands of one of the members as his self-acquired property, alleging that it was really joint property; or if a member of the family admitted a partition among some of the members, but asserted that the others had remained undivided, the onus would lie upon him to make out such a case (b).

(x) Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud, 6 M. I. A., 53; Bissessur v. Luchmessur, 6 I. A., 233; S. C., 5 C. L. R., 477; Balaram Bhaskerji v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., 922.

(y) Luximon Row v. Mullar Row, 2 Kn., 60; Pedru v. Domingo, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 8; Janokee v. Kisto, Marsh., 1; Khadrapa v. Rungappa, 5 Mysore, 94.

(z) Prankristo v. Bhagerutee, 20 Suth., 158; Moolji Lilla v. Gokuldas, 8 Bom., 154; Lakshman v. Jamnabai, 6 Bom., 225.

§ 292. The fourth subject of examination relates to the mode in which the Joint Family property is to be enjoyed by the coparceners. This must necessarily vary according to the view taken of the nature of the family corporation. In Malabar and Canara, where the property is indissoluble, the members of the family may be said rather to have rights out of the property than rights to the property. The head of the family is entitled to its entire possession, and is absolute in its management. The junior members have only a right to maintenance and residence. They cannot call for an account, except as incident to a prayer for the removal of the manager for misconduct, nor claim family property.

Enjoyment of

Malabar.

(a) Both Singh v. Gunesb, 12 B. L. R., 317, 327; S. C., 19 Suth., 356; Murari Vithoji v. Mukund Shivaji, 15 Bom., 201.

(b) Badul v. Chutterdharee, 9 Suth., 558; Banoo v. Kashee Ram (P. C.), 3 Cal., 315; Radha Churn v. Kripa, 5 Cal., 474; Obhoy Churn v. Gobind Chunder, 9 Cal., 237; Upendra Narain v. Gopanath, ibid., 817; Bata Krishna v. Chintamani, 12 Cal., 262. In the two latter cases it was held that the mere fact that one member of the family had separated from the joint stock, raised no presumption that the other members had separated inter se. See the converse case, Kristnappa v. Ramasawmy, 8 Mad. H. C., 25.

Mitakshara.

any specific share of the income, nor even require that their maintenance or the family outlay should be in proportion to the income. An absolute discretion in this respect is vested in the manager (c). A family governed by Mitakshara law is in a very similar position, except as to their right to a partition, and to an account as incident to that right. In a judgment, which is constantly referred to, Lord Westbury said: "According to the true notion of an undivided family in Hindu law, no individual member of that family, while it remains undivided, can predicate of the joint and undivided property that he, that particular member, has a certain definite share. No individual member of an undivided family could go to the place of the receipt of rent, and claim to take from the collector or receiver of the rents a certain definite share. The proceeds of undivided property must be brought, according to the theory of an undivided family, to the common chest or purse, and there dealt with according to the modes of enjoyment by the members of an undivided family" (d). The position of a Joint Family under Bengal law is in some respects less favourable, and in other respects, apparently, more favourable than that of a family under Mitakshara law. Where property is held by a father as head of an undivided family, his issues have no legal claim upon him or the property, except for their maintenance. He can dispose of it as he pleases, and they cannot require a partition (§ 248). Consequently they can neither control, nor call for an account of his management. But as soon as it has made a descent, the brothers or other co-heirs hold their shares in a sort of quasi-severalty, which admits of the interest of each, while still undivided, passing on to his own representatives, male or females, or even to his assignees (e). How far this

Bengal.

(c) § 244, Tod v. Kunhamod, 3 Mad., 175, adopted by Malabar Marriage Commission Report, p. 28, § 52.

(d) Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyar, 11 M. I. A., 89; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 1.

(e) Per Turner, I. J., Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 553; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114; Daya Bhaga, ii., § 28, note xi., 1, § 25, 26; D. K. S., xi., § 2, 3, 7; 2 Dig., 104; ante § 265.

principle enlarges the rights of the co-sharers inter se is a matter of some obscurity. Prima facie one would imagine that it would entitle each coparcener under Bengal law to do what, according to Lord Westbury no coparcener can do under Benares law, viz., "to predicate of the joint and undivided family property that he, that particular member, has a certain definite share." But this seems hardly to be admitted by the Supreme Court of Bengal, in a passage where they laid down the following propositions as setting forth the characteristics of joint property held by an undivided family in Bengal. "First, each of the coparceners has a right to call for a partition, but until such partition takes place, and even an inchoate partition does not seem to vary the rights of the co-sharers, the whole remains common stock; the co-sharers being equally interested in every part of it (f). Second, on the death of an original co-sharer, his heirs stand in his place, and succeed to his rights as they stood at his death; his rights may also in his life-time pass to strangers, either by alienation, or as in the case of creditors, by operation of law; but in all cases those who come in, in the place of the original co-sharer, by inheritance, assignment or operation of law, can take only his rights as they stand, including of course the right to call for a partition. Third, whatever increment is made to the common stock whilst the estate continues joint, falls into and becomes part of that stock. On a partition it is divisible equally, no matter by what application of the common funds, or by whose exertions it may have been made; the single exception to the rule being, that on the acquisition by one co-sharer of a distinct property, with the aid only of the joint funds, the acquirer may take a double share in that property. The increment arising from the accumulations of undrawn income is obviously within the general rule" (g).

(f) This view is distinctly laid down by Raghunandana, i., 21—29.

(g) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 526, 539; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114, reversed by the Privy Council upon the construction of a will, but these propositions were not disputed. See, too, Chuckin v. Poran, 9 Suth., 483.

Position of manager;

§ 293. So long as the manager of the Joint Family administers it for the purposes of the family, he is not under the same obligation to economise or to save, as would be the case with a paid agent or trustee. For instance, where the family concern is being wound up on a partition, the account must be taken upon the footing of what has been spent, and what remains, and not upon the footing of what might have been spent, if frugality and skill had been employed (h). The reason is that the manager is dealing with his own property, and if he chooses to live expensively, the remedy of the others is to come to a partition. On the other hand "he is certainly liable to make good to them their shares of all sums which he has actually misappropriated, or which he has spent for purposes other than those in which the Joint Family was interested. Of course, no member of a joint Hindu family is liable to his coparceners for anything which might have been actually consumed by him in consequence of his having a larger family to support, or of his being subject to greater expenses than the others; but this is simply because all such expenses are justly considered to be the legitimate expenses of the whole family. Thus, for instance, one member of a joint Hindu family may have a larger number of daughters to marry than the others. The marriage of each of these daughters to a suitable bridegroom is an obligation incumbent upon the whole family, so long as they continue to be joint, and the expenses incurred on account of such marriages must be necessarily borne by all the members, without any reference whatever to respective interests in the family estate" (i). Observations to the same effect were made by the Supreme Court of Bengal in the case from which I have already quoted, and they add: "We apprehend that at the present day, when personal luxury has increased,

of ordinary member of family.

(h) Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C., 177; Choonee v. Prosunno, Sev., 231; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas, 10 Bom., 523; Damoderdas v. Uttamram, 17 Bom., 271.

(i) Per Mitter, J., Abhaychandra v. Pyari, 5 B. L. R., 347, 349.

and the change of manners has somewhat modified the relations of the members of a Joint Family, it is by no means unusual that in the common Khatta book an account of the separate expenditure of each member is opened and kept against him; and that on a partition, even in the absence of fraud or exclusion, those accounts enter into the general account on which the final partition and allotment are made" (k).

§ 294. The right of each member of an undivided Hindu family to require an account of the management has been both affirmed and denied in decisions which are not very easy to reconcile. Possibly, however, the apparent conflict may be explained, by considering the various purposes for which an account may be demanded. It is quite clear that every member of the coparcenary, who is entitled to demand a partition, is also entitled to an account, as a necessary preliminary to such partition. A different question arises, where the account is sought by a member who desires to remain undivided. A claim by a continuing coparcener to have a statement furnished to him of the amount standing to his separate account, with a view to having that amount or any portion of it paid over to him, or carried over to a fresh account, as in the case of an ordinary partnership, would, in a family governed by Mitakshara law, be wholly inadmissible. The answer to such a demand would be, "You have no separate account. Your claim is limited to the use of the family property, and everything that has not been specifically set apart for you belongs to the family and not to its members." It was a claim to an account of this sort to which Jackson, J., referred, when he said: "It appears to be admitted that, although a son has a joint interest in the ancestral estate with his father, he cannot, as long as that estate remains joint, call upon his father for an account of his management of that estate; that he, for instance, could account.

Right to an

(k) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 540; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114.

not sue his father for mesne profits for years during which it was under his father's management" (l). But it would be very different if he said: "I wish to know how the affairs of the corporation to which I belong are being managed." It certainly seems a matter of natural justice that such a demand should be complied with. The remedy which any coparcener has against mismanagement of the family property is his right to a partition. But he cannot know whether it would be wise to exercise this right, unless he can be informed as to the state of the affairs of the family. Yet even a right to an account of this nature has in some cases been denied. The Supreme Court of Bengal in the case already referred to (m) say: "the right to demand such an account, when it exists, is incident to the right to require partition; the liability to account can only be enforced upon a partition." In one case of a Bengal family, Phear, J., drew a distinction as to the liability to account between the case of a management on behalf of a minor and on behalf of one of full years. In the former case he considered that the manager was strictly a trustee, and was bound, when his trust came to an end, that is, at the end of the minority, to account for the manner in which he had discharged it. But as regards adult members, he said: "the manager is merely the chairman of a committee, of which the family were the members. They manage the property together, and the 'karta' is but the mouthpiece of the body, chosen and capable of being changed by themselves. Therefore, unless something is shown to the contrary, every adult member of an undivided Joint Family, living in commensality with the 'karta,' must be taken, as between himself and the 'karta' to be a participator in, and authoriser of, all that is from time to time done in the management of the joint property to this extent, namely, that he cannot, without further cause, call the 'karta' to account for it. Of course, it may, as a matter of fact, be the case in a given family that the 'karta' is the agent of, or stands in a fiduciary and accountable relation to one or more of the members. It would be easy to imagine a state of things under which he had become the trustee of the property relative to his adult coparcener, or in which, by reason of his fraud or other behaviour, they, some or one of them, had acquired an equity to call upon him for an account. All that I desire to say is that, in my judgment, he does not wear this character of accountability, merely because he occupies the position of 'karta' (n). In this case, the plaintiff sought for the account, not merely for information, but as incidental to a claim for his share of the surpluses which such an account would show that the manager had received. The suit was not one for partition, as is evident from the fact that the entire suit was dismissed. Had he sued for a partition he would of course have been entitled to it, though on different terms as to accounting from those which he tried to impose.

(l) Shudanund v. Bonomalee, 6 Suth., 256, 259; Ganpat v. Annaji, 28 Bom., 144.

(m) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 540; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114.

§ 295. This decision was relied on in a later case, where a widow (in Bengal) sued for a partition of the property, and, as incidental thereto, for the dissolution of a banking partnership, and that the defendant, the manager, should render an account of the estate of the common ancestor, and of the banking business (o). Markby, J., said: "I am clearly of opinion that, in the ordinary case of a joint Hindu family, the manager of the whole, or any portion of the family property, is not, by reason of his occupying that position, bound to render any accounts whatever to the members of the family." He granted an account in the special case on the ground that the banking business was carried on, not as a common family business in the strict sense, the profits of which were all to sink into the common family fund, but rather on the footing of a partnership, the profits of which, when realised, were to be divided among the individual members in certain proportions. This decision, however, was directly overruled by the Full Bench, in a case where the following questions were referred for decision:—(1) Whether the managing member of a joint Hindu family can be sued by the other members for an account, and (it appearing that one of the plaintiffs was a minor); (2) Whether such a suit would not lie, even if the parties suing were minors, during the period for which the accounts were asked. Mr. Justice Mitter, in making the reference said: “suppose, for instance, that one of the members of a Joint Family, with a view to separate from the others, asks the manager what portion of the family income has been actually saved by him during the period of his managership. If the manager chooses to say that nothing has been saved, but at the same time refuses to give any account of the receipts and disbursements, which were entirely under his control, how is the member, who is desirous of separation, to know what funds are actually available for partition? And according to what principle of law or justice can it be said that he is bound to accept the ipse dixit of the manager as a correct representation of the actual state of things?” Both questions accordingly were answered in the affirmative. The previous decision was overruled, and that of Chuckun v. Poran was reconciled and explained, as meaning only that joint managers must be taken to have authorized each other's acts, and, therefore, could not, after a lapse of years, call for an account by one of themselves of dealings which were in fact their own (p).

(n) Chuckun v. Poran, 9 Suth., 483. See this case explained by Phear, J., Abhaychandra v. Pyari, 5 B. L. R., 354; S. C., sub nomine, Obhoy Chunder v. Pearee, 13 Suth. (F. B.), 75.

(o) Ranganmani v. Kasinath, 3 B. J. R. (O. C. J.), 1; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 75, note.

Relief incidental to account.

§ 296. The decision upon the two questions referred is no doubt perfectly sound. But I cannot understand the framework of the suit. The plaint alleged that there was real and personal property, the management of which was taken by the defendant in 1863; that, although the profits were large, yet the plaintiffs had not been properly maintained; that the elder plaintiff had taken upon himself, in 1866, the management of the one-third share belonging to himself and his minor brother; he prayed for recovery of one-third share of the profits during the defendant's management from 1863 to 1866, and also for one-third share of personal property. No share of the real property was asked for. The account was asked for as incidental to this claim. The defendant pleaded a partition in 1849 which was found against. The original Court gave a decree for the plaintiff for a share of the profits of the real and personal property, but not for a share of the corpus. This decree seems to have been in principle affirmed on appeal. It would appear then that the claim made by the plaintiff was that a separate account should be kept in the name of each co-sharer, in which he should be credited with an aliquot share of the savings, and debited with the amount actually expended on himself, and that the balance should be paid over to him annually, or as it accumulated, whenever he chose to ask for it. It is evident that if this principle were carried out, no additions could ever be made to the family property. If the entire family chose to live up to their income, of course they could do so. But would any one member of the family have a right to insist upon living upon a scale higher than was thought suitable by the other members? Would he have a right to withdraw his own share of the income annually from the family system of management or trade, and to deal with it on his own account? If he did so, would the accumulations of such annual withdrawals and the profits made by means of them, be his own separate property, or would they continue to be joint property? Either supposition involves a contradiction. If they became separate property, that would be in conflict with the rule that the savings of joint property, and acquisitions made solely by means of joint property, continue to be joint. If they became separate, it would follow that a member of an undivided family might accumulate large separate acquisitions by simply investing portions of the family property. On the other hand, if such accumulations remained joint property, the absurdity would arise that A might sue B and get a decree for a thousand rupees, and B might sue A the very next week, to enforce a partition of that sum and recover a moiety of it.

(p) Abhaychandra v. Pyari, 5 B. L. R., 347; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 75; sub nomine, Obhoy Chunder v. Pearee; Damoderdar v. Ullamram, 17 Bom., 271.

Special family arrangement.

§ 297. It is, however, quite possible that the plaint was based upon a system of family management, which is by no means uncommon, when the family continues undivided, but each member holds a portion of the property separately, and applies the income arising from it to his own use. Of course, if the portion appropriated to A was placed in charge of B, the income would be held by him for the use of A, and he would be entitled to an account of its application, and to payment over of the balance. But this would be, not by virtue of the general usage of an undivided Hindu family, but in opposition to that usage, by virtue of a special arrangement for the apportionment of the income among the individual branches. It must be owned, however, that the language of Couch, C. J., looks as if he took a different view. He says (q): "It appears to me that the principle upon which the right to call for an account rests is not, as has been supposed, the existence of a direct agency, or of a partnership where the managing partner may be considered as the agent for his co-partners. It depends upon the right which the members of a joint Hindu family have to a share of the property; and where there is a joint interest in the property, and one party receives all the profits, he is bound to account to the other parties who have an interest in it, for the profits of their respective shares, after making such deductions as he may have the right to make." If by this the learned Chief Justice meant that he was bound to account for these profits, in the sense of paying them over, or holding them at the disposal of the individual members, the opinion must be founded upon a distinction between the rights of co-sharers under Bengal and Mitakshara law. It must proceed upon the idea that the entire share of each member, and therefore its entire income, is appropriated to him, free of all claims by the others, and therefore that the manager only receives it as his agent and trustee. Such a view is certainly the logical result of Jimuta Vahana's theory of joint-ownership. But it is opposed to many of the judicial dicta already quoted.

(q) Abhaychandra v. Pyari, 5 B. L. R., 353; S. C., sub nomine, Obhoy Chunder v. Pearee, 13 Suth. (F. B.), 75.

§ 298. A necessary consequence of the corporate character of the family holding is that, wherever any transaction affects that property, all the members must be privy to it, and whatever is done must be done for the benefit of all, and not of any single individual. For instance, a single member cannot sue, or proceed by way of execution (r), to recover a particular portion of the family property for himself, whether his claim is preferred against a stranger who is asserted to be wrongfully in possession, or against his coparceners. If the former, all the members must join, and the suit must be brought to recover the whole property for the benefit of all. And this, whether the stranger is in possession without a shadow of title, or by the act of one of the sharers, in excess of his power (s), or by the lawful act of the manager (t). If any of the members refuse to join as plaintiffs, or are colluding with Necessity for joint action.

(r) Banarsi Das v. Maharani Kuar, 5 All., 27.

(s) Sheo Churn v. Chukraree, 15 Suth., 486; Cheytt Narain v. Bunwaree, 23 Suth., 395; Parooma v. Valayooda, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 35; Rajaram Tewari v. Luchman, 4 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 118; S. C., 12 Suth., 478 approved in Phoolbas Poonwar v. Lalla Jogeshwar, 3 I. A. at p. 26; S. C., 1 Cal., 226; S. C., 25 Suth., 285; Biswanath v. Collector of Mymensing, 7 B. L. R., Appx. 42; S. C., 21 Suth., 69, note; affirmed by F. B. Unnoda v. Erskine, 12 B. L. R., 370; S. C., 21 Suth., 63; Dewakur v. Naroo, Bom. Sel. Rep., 190; Nundun v. Lloyd, 22 Suth., 74; Teeluk v. Ramjus, 5 N. W. P., 182; Nathuni v. Manraj, 2 Cal., 149; Arunacheta v. Pythialinga, 6 Mad., 27; Angamuthu v. Kolandavelu, 23 Mad., 190. The joinder of all necessary parties is the right not only of the plaintiff but of the defendant, as it is his interest that the decree should bind the whole family. Harigopal v. Gokaldas, 13 Bom., 158; Balkrishna v. Morokrishna, 21 Bom., 154. If the objection for non-joinder is not raised in the original stage of the suit, it cannot be set up on appeal. Paramasiva v. Krishna, 14 Mad., 493. As to amending the plaint by adding the proper parties, where this would prejudice the defence, see Alagappa v. Vellian, 13 Mad., 33; Vadital v. Shah Kushal, 27 Bom., 157.

(t) Alagappa v. Vellian, 18 Mad., 33, where the suit was brought against a person appointed to carry on a trading business for breach of his contract.

the defendant, they should be made co-defendants, so that the interests of all may be bound (u). One member cannot sue by himself, without joining or asking the consent of the others, and make the defect good by joining the others as defendants (v). If from any cause, such as lapse of time, the other members cannot be joined as plaintiffs the whole suit will fail (w). If the suit is against the coparceners, it is vicious at its root. The only remedy by one member against his co-sharer for possession is by a suit for partition, as until then he has no right to the exclusive possession of any part of the property (x). Suits for injunction in cases of family property, as between members of the family are confined to acts of waste, illegitimate use of the family property, and ouster (y). The same rule forbids one of several sharers to sue alone for the ejectment of a tenant (z), unless, perhaps, in a case where by arrangement with his coparceners the plaintiff has been placed in the exclusive possession of the whole (a); or for enhancement of rent (b) or for his share of the rent (c), unless where the defendants have paid

(u) Rajaram Tewari v. Lachman, ib sup; Juggodumba v. Haran, 10 Suth., 109; Gokool v. Etwaree, 20 Suth., 138; Kattusheri v. Vallotil, 3 Mad., 234; Bechu Lal v. Okullah, 11 Cal., 335; Kalichandra v. Raj Kishore, ib., 615; Dwarkanath Mitter v. Tara Prosunno, 17 Cal., 160.

(v) Paramswaran v. Shangaran, 14 Mad., 489; Savitri v. Raman, 24 Mad., 296.

(w) Kalidas Kevaldas v. Nathu Bhagvan, 7 Bom., 217.

(x) Phoolbas Koonwur v. Lalla Jogeshur, 3 I. A., 7; S. C., 1 Cal., 226; S. C., 25 Suth., 285; Dadjee v. Wittal, Bom. Sel. Rep., 151; Trimbak v. Narayan, 11 Bom. H. C., 69; Gobind Chunder v. Ram Coomar, 24 Suth., 393; Ramanuja v. Virappa, 6 Mad., 90. See, however, Naranbhai v. Ranchood, 26 Bom., 141.

(y) Anant Ramrav v. Kopal Balwant, 19 Bom., 269; Ganpat v. Annaji, 23 Bom., 144. As to the form of the decree to be made where one of the co-sharers has taken exclusive possession for himself or part of the land, see Jagernath v. Ja.nath, 27 All., 88; Ramcharan v. Kanlisher, ibid., 153.

(z) Sree Chand v. Nim Chand, 13 Suth., 337; S. C., 5 B. L. R., Appx. 25; Alum v. Ashad, 16 Suth., 138; Huloohur v. Gooroo, 20 Suth., 126; Krishnarav v. Gvind, 12 Bom. H. C., 85; Sobharan v. Gunga, 2 N.-W. P., 260; Balaji v. Gopal, 3 Bom., 23; Reasut v. Chorwar, 7 Cal., 470. See also Gopal v. MacNaghten, 7 Cal., 751.

(a) Amir Singh v. Moazzim, 7 N.-W. P., 58.

(b) Jogendro v. Nobin Chunder, 8 Cal., 353; Balkrishna v. Morokrishna, 21 Bom., 154, where the suit was brought by the manager in his own name, with the consent of the co-sharers.

(c) Indramonee v. Suroop, 15 Suth., 395; S. C., 12 B. L. R., 294 (note); Hur Kishore v. Joogul, 16 Suth., 281; S. C., 12 B. L. R., 293 (note); Bhyrub v. Gogaram, 17 Suth., 408; S. C., 12 B. L. R., 290 (note); Anmoda v. Kall Coomar, 4 Cal., 88; Manohar Das v. Manzar Ali, 5 All., 40. As to cases where the other co-sharers are colluding with the defaulting tenant, Cf. Jadu v. Sutherland, 4 Cal., 556 and Jadoo v. Kadumbinee, 7 Cal., 150.

their rent to him separately, or agreed to do so, in which case they at all events could not raise the objection. Even in such a case, however, it would clearly be open to any of the other sharers to intervene, if they considered that their rights were being endangered (d). And so where one member of a Joint Family has laid out money upon any portion of the joint estate, he cannot sue his co-sharers for repayment, unless there has been an express agreement that he should be repaid. Otherwise his outlay is only a matter to be taken into account on a partition (e).

On the other hand, where the act of a third party with respect to the joint property has caused any personal and special loss to one of the co-sharers, which does not affect the others, he can sue for it separately, and they need not be joined (f). And it would seem that one co-sharer may sue to eject a mere trespasser, when his object is to remove an intruder from the joint property, without at the same time claiming any special portion of it for himself (g), and so may the manager of a joint family, when he sues as manager on behalf of the family (h). Or where he is the official representative of the family as for instance the registered Zemindar of an estate (i). A fortiori, a member of a Joint Family, who has contracted in his own name for the benefit of the family, may sue upon the contract on their behalf, without joining the others (k).

§ 299. The right of shareholders inter se depend upon

Rights of coparceners inter se.

(d) Ganga v. Saroda, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 230; S. C., 12 Suth., 50; Hara-dhun v. Ram Newaz, 17 Suth., 414; Salchoonissa v. Mohesh, ib., 452; Sree Misser v. Crowdy, 15 Suth., 243; Dinobundhoo v. Dinonath, 19 Suth., 168; by F. B. Doorga v. Jampa, 12 B. L. R., 289; S. C., 21 Suth., 46; Rakhul v. Mahtab, 25 Suth., 221. Of course the co-sharers might agree that the tenant should pay each of them a portion of the rent, and would then be entitled to sue separately for their respective portions. Guni v. Moran, 4 Cal., 96; Lootfulhuck v. Gopee, 5 Cal., 941.

(e) Nubkoomar v. Jye Deo, 2 S. D., 247 (317); Jalaluddaula v. Sumsamud-daula, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 161; Mutiusvami v. Subbiramanija, 1 Mad. H. C., 309.

(f) Gopee v. Ryland, 9 Suth., 279; Chundee v. MacNaghten, 23 Suth., 386.

(g) Radha Proshad v. Esuf, 7 Cal., 414.

(h) Arunachella v. Vythialinga, 6 Mad., 27; Ramayya v. Venkataratnam, 17 Mad., 122; Jothi v. Timma Gowda, 8 Mysore, 119.

(i) Ayyappa v. Venkatakrishtnama Raz, 17 Mad., 122.

(k) Bungsee v. Soodist, 7 Cal., 739; Adaikkalam Chetty v. Marimuthu, 23 Mad., 326

the view taken by the law which governs them of their interest in the property. In the early conception of a Hindu family, the right of any member consisted simply in a general right to have the property fairly managed, in such a manner as to enable himself and his family to be suitably maintained out of its proceeds. The duties which he was to perform, and the profits which he was to receive, would be regulated by the discretion of the head of the family. This is at present the case in a Malabar tarvād (l). Except so far as it is varied by special agreement or usage, the members of a family governed by Mitakshara law are still in much the same position (m). It is laid down in Bombay that each joint owner is entitled to a joint possession of every part of the property equally with every other member (n). This of course can only refer to the very limited number of subjects which are capable of being jointly possessed by several persons. It cannot be held to interfere with the right of the manager to allot to the several members the use of such portions of the property as are necessary for their personal enjoyment. Still less can it be held to entitle any member to take possession at his own discretion of any portion of the joint funds or joint income. In Bengal, where the members hold rather as tenants in common than as joint tenants, a greater degree of independence is possessed by each (o). There, each member is entitled to a full and complete enjoyment of his undivided share, in any proper and reasonable manner, which is not inconsistent with a similar enjoyment by the other members, and which does not infringe upon their right to an equal disposal and management of the property (p). But he cannot, without

(l) Kunigaratu v. Arrangaden, 2 Mad. H. C., 12; Subbu Hegadi v. Tongu, 4 Mad. H. C., 196.

(m) See per Lord Westbury, Appovier v. Rama Subbaiyan, 11 M. I. A., p. 59; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 1; ante § 292.

(n) Ramchandra v. Damoderdas, 20 Bom., 467.

(o) See per Phear, J., Chuckun v. Poran, 9 Suth., 453; ante § 294.

(p) Eshan Chunder v. Nund Coomar, 8 Suth., 239; Gopee Kishen v. Hemchunder, 13 Suth., 322; Nundun v. Lloyd, 22 Suth., 74; Stalkart v. Gopal, 12 B. L. R., 197; S. C., 20 Suth., 168; Watson v. Ram Chand Dutt, 17 I. A., 110. And he may lease out his share, Ramdebul v. Mitterjeet, 17 Suth., 420.

permission, do anything which alters the nature of the property; as, for instance, build upon it (q). Where such an act is an injury to his coparceners the Court will, as a matter of discretion, though not as a matter of absolute right, direct the removal of the building (r). In exercising this discretion it is material to consider, whether the defendant is building on land in excess of that which would come to him on a partition, and whether on a partition the plaintiff could be adequately compensated (s). And the same rule has been applied when an entire change of crops has been introduced, where the produce would be valueless unless followed up by manufacture (t).

There is nothing to prevent one co-sharer being the tenant of all the others, and paying rent to them as such. But the mere fact that one member of the family holds exclusive occupation of any part of the property, carries with it no undertaking to pay rent, in the absence of some agreement to that effect, either express or implied (u). So several joint owners may mortgage their interest to another coparcener, but, unless a partition has intervened, all must unite in a suit to redeem (v).

Coparcener may be tenant.

§ 300. A very important species of joint property among the commercial classes consists of hereditary trading partnerships. These sometimes consist exclusively of members of the joint family. Sometimes they are composed in part of persons of another family. Where Family trading partnerships.

(q) See as to merely trivial acts, Mohanchand v. Isakbhai, 25 Bom., 248.

(r) Jankee v. Bukhooree, S. D. of 1856, 761; Inderdeonarain v. Toolseenaarain, S. D. of 1857, 765; Guru Dass v. Bijaya, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 108; S. C., sub nomine, Goroodoss v. Bejoy, 10 Suth., 171; Sheopersad v. Leela, 12 B. L. R., 188; S. C., 20 Suth., 160; Naju Khan v. Imtiaz-ud-din, 18 All., 115 (see Lala Bishwambhar v. Rajaram, 3 B. L. R., Appx. 67; S. C., 16 Suth., 140 (note), where such a decree was refused, and Nobin Chunder v. Mohesh Chunder, 12 Suth., 63); Holloway v. Mahomed, 16 Suth., 140; S. C., 12 B. L. R., 191 (note), sub nomine, Holloway v. Sheik Wahed (see apparently contra, Dwarkanath v. Gopeenath, 16 Suth., 10; S. C., 12 B. L. R., 159, note). Mehdee v. Anjud, 6 N.-W. P., 259; Rajendro v. Shama Churn, 5 Cal., 188.

(s) Paras Ramo v. Sherjit, 9 All., 661; Shadi v. Anup Singh, 12 All. (F. B.), 496.

(t) Crowdee v. Bhekdari, 8 B. L. R., Appx. 45; S. C., 16 Suth., 41.

(u) Aladinee v. Sreenath, 20 Suth., 258; Gobind Chunder v. Ram Cooman, 24 Suth., 393.

(v) Thillai Chetty v. Ramanatha, 20 Mad., 295.

one or more joint members trade by themselves, or in partnership with strangers on capital, which is not family property, the profits resulting are of course exclusively their own (w). If the capital is drawn from family property, the trade and profits are also family property (x). The interest of the family in the partnership passes by survivorship, and the partners are liable to account on the same principles, and to the same extent, as in respect of their management of any other portion of the property (ante §§ 294—297). This is all plain enough. A different question, which has been very little discussed in India, is as to the right of other members of the Joint Family, or of the descendants of one of the trading partners, to claim the right of a partner, as a matter of law and not by agreement. In England, of course, such a right could never be put forward by any relation of an existing partner. In the case of death of one partner, the well known law on the subject is laid down as follows (y): “Subject to any agreement between the partners, every partnership is dissolved as regards all the partners by the death of any partner; and, unless all the partners have agreed to the contrary, when one of them dies, his executors have no right to become partners with the surviving partners, nor to interfere with the partnership business. But the executors of the deceased represent him for all purposes of account, and, unless restrained by special agreement, they have the power by bringing an action to have the affairs of the partnership wound up in a manner which is generally ruinous to the other partners.” The obvious reason is that, as regards the outer world, each partner is a manager possessed of the full authority of all, and capable of binding them by his acts. Naturally no one can be a partner, except one who is accepted by all as a person to whom they are willing to delegate their authority. The same

(w) Vadital v. Shah Kushal, 27 Bom., 157.

(x) Hence reversioners will be bound by the proper acts of a widow who has succeeded to a trading property as heiress of her husband. Sakrabi v. Maganlal, 26 Bom., 206, where the incidents of such a property are discussed.

(y) Lindley on Partnership, 6th ed., 606.

principle seems equally to apply in India. Where some of the partners belong to a different family, the confidence which they repose in Ramasami, whom they know, cannot by implication be extended to his brothers or sons whom they do not know. Where the partnership is confined to members of the family, it forms an exception to the general rule that the whole property is governed by a single manager. For the convenience of trade there are several managers with equal powers. Here again these persons are chosen with regard to special fitness, and it would appear that no new person can be obtruded into the management without special agreement. As far as I know this question has only arisen in three cases in India. In one from Bombay (z), one of two brothers, who are described as being possessed of joint ancestral property, consisting inter alia of a shop at Poona, obtained an injunction restraining the other brother from preventing him entering the shop, inspecting the accounts, and taking part in the management. Candy, J., said: “The plaintiff, claiming to be a member of a joint Hindu family, cannot maintain a suit for an account of the profits of the Poona partnership which, he alleges, to be joint family property and an award of his share in such profits when ascertained.” “The rule of Hindu law does not prevent an injunction being granted in cases of the ouster of one member of the family from an item of family property.” Here it would appear that both brothers were not only coparceners, but also partners in trade. The distinction, however, does not seem to have been present to anyone’s mind. In another case (a), from Calcutta. Sale, J., said: “A trade like other personal property is descendible amongst Hindus, but it does not follow that a Hindu infant who, by birth or inheritance, becomes entitled to an interest in a joint family business, becomes at the same time a member of the trading partnership which carries on the business. He can only become a member of the partnership by a consentient act on the part of himself and his partners, and it was on this ground held by the late Supreme Court that an infant of tender years, whose name was used in a partnership business need not be joined as a co-plaintiff in a suit by the father to recover a trade debt" (b). I presume that in this, as in all other cases among Hindus, a proved usage that all adult members of the coparcenary, and the sons of such members, either on birth or at majority, should be treated as partners, would be carried into effect by the Courts.

(z) Ganpat v. Annaji, 23 Bom., 144.

(a) Lutchman Chetty v. Siva Prokasa, 26 Cal., 349, p. 354. A similar decision was given in a case where the members of the trading firm belonged to different families, Anant Ram v. Channu Lal, 25 All., 378.

(b) Petum Doss v. Ramdhone Doss, Taylor, 279; Ramlal v. Lakhmichand, 1 Bom. H. C., App. 51.

CHAPTER IX.

DEBTS.

§ 301. I have thought it well to treat the subject of Debts, as affecting property, before that of voluntary alienations, as it illustrates a principle which is constantly recurring in Hindu law, viz., that moral obligations take precedence of legal rights; or, to put the same idea in different words, that legal rights are taken subject to the discharge of moral obligations.

The liability of one person to pay debts contracted by another arises from three completely different sources, which must be carefully distinguished. These are: First, the religious duty of discharging the debtor from the sin of his debts; secondly, the moral duty of paying a debt contracted by one whose assets have passed into the possession of another; thirdly, the legal duty of paying a debt contracted by one person as the agent, express or implied, of another. Cases may often occur in which more than one of these grounds of liability are found co-existing; but any one is sufficient.

§ 302. The first ground of liability only arises in the case of a debtor and his own sons and grandsons. In the view of Hindu lawyers, a debt is not merely an obligation but a sin, the consequences of which follow the debtor into the next world. Vrihaspati says: "He who having received a sun lent or the like does not repay it to the owner will be born hereafter in his creditor's house, a slave, a servant, a woman, or a quadruped" (a). And Narada says: "When a devotee, or a man who maintained a sacrificial fire, dies without having discharged his debt, the whole merit of his devotions, or of his perpetual fire belongs to his creditors" (b). The duty of relieving the debtor from these evil consequences falls on his male descendants, to the second generation, and was originally quite independent of the receipts of assets. Narada says: "The grandsons shall pay the debt of their grandfather, which having been legitimately inherited by the sons has not been paid by them; the obligation ceases with the fourth descendant (c). Fathers desire offspring for their own sake, reflecting, 'this son will redeem me from every debt whatsoever due to superior and inferior beings.' Therefore a son begotten by him should relinquish his own property, and assiduously redeem his father from debt, lest he fall into a region of torment" (d). Vrihaspati states a further distinction as to the degrees of liability which attached to the descendants. "The father's debt must be first paid, and next a debt contracted by the man himself; but the debt of the paternal grandfather must even be paid before either of these. The sons must pay the debt of their father, when proved, as if it were their own, or with interest; the son's son must pay the debt of his grandfather, but without interest; and his son shall not be compelled to discharge it"; to which the gloss is added, "unless he be heir and have assets" (e). Finally Yajnavalkya adds an exception to these rules: that the son is not liable to pay if the father's estate is actually held by another; as, for instance, if he is from any cause incapacitated from succession (f).

(a) 1 Dig., 334.

Liability of son independent of assets.

§ 303. The liability to pay the father's debt arises from the moral and religious obligation to rescue him from the

(b) Narada, iii., § 10. The text of Manu, xi., § 66, which Jagannatha cites (1 Dig., 267) as referring to a money debt, seems to refer to the three debts which are elsewhere spoken of, viz., reading the Vedas, begetting a son, and performing sacrifices. See Manu, vi., § 36, 37, ix., § 106; Vishnu, xv., § 45.

(c) This is counted inclusive of the debtor, 1 Dig., 302; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 90. Narada, iii., § 4-6. According to the Thesawaleme (i., § 7), sons were also bound to pay their father's debts, even without assets.

(d) 1 Dig., 265; Katyayana, 1 Dig., 301; V. Manu, v., 4, § 17. (f) 1 Dig., 270; V. Manu, v., 4, § 16; Katyayana, 1 Dig., 273. It has been held that this principle of Hindu law does not apply to the Nambudri Brahmans of Malabar, who are governed by a combination of Hindu and Marumakatayem law, Nilakandan v. Madharan, 10 Mad., 9; Govinda v. Krishnan, 15 Mad., 333. See as to their usages, Vishnu v. Krishnan, 7 Mad., 15; Vasudevan v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad., 157.

penalties arising from the non-payment of his debts. And this obligation equally compels the son to carry out what the ancestor has promised for religious purposes (g). It follows, then, that, when the debt creates no such moral obligation, the son is not bound to repay it, even though he possesses assets. This arises in two cases: 1st, when the debt is of an immoral character; 2nd, when it is of a ready-money character.

"The sons are not compellable to pay sums due by their father for spirituous liquors, for losses at play, for promises made without any consideration, or under the influence of lust or of wrath; or sums for which he was a surety (except in the cases before mentioned), or a fine or a toll, or the balance of either," nor generally, "any debt for a cause repugnant to good morals" (h). Jagannatha denies that a son is not liable for the debts of his father as surety, and says with much reason that, if by a toll is meant one payable at a wharf or the like, that is a cause consistent with usage and good morals and it ought to be paid (i). Another meaning of the word "Çulka," translated toll, is a nuptial present, given as the price of a bride, and this has been Cases in which it does not arise.

(g) Katyayana, 1 Dig., 299.

(h) Vrihaspati Gautama, 1 Dig., 305; Vyasa, ib., 305; Yajnavalkya, ib., 311; Katyayana, ib., 300, 309; 2 W. MacN., 210. As to what are immoral debts, see Budree Lall v. Kantee, 23 Suth., 260; Wajed Hossein v. Nankoo, 25 Suth., 311; Luchmi v. Asman, 2 Cal., 213; S. C., 25 Suth., 421; Suraj Bansi Koeer v. Sheo Prakash, 6 I. A., 88; S. C., 5 Cal., 143; Sitaram v. Zalim Singh, 8 All., 231; Pareman Dass v. Bhattu Mahton, 24 Cal., 672; Natasayyan v. Ponnusami, 16 Mad., 99; Jamsetji v. Kashinath, 26 Bom., 326, p. 334. A decree against a father for money which he had criminally misappropriated does not bind his son's estate as being a debt which they were bound to pay. Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh, 6 All., 231; McDowell v. Ragava, 27 Mad., 71. The onus of proving that the debt was contracted for an immoral or illegal purpose lies upon those who allege it, and the onus is not discharged by showing that the father lived an extravagant or immoral life. Bhagbut Pershad v. Ginja Koeer, 15 I. A., 99; S. C., 15 Cal., 717; Subramanya v. Sadasiva, 8 Mad., 75; Chintamanrav v. Kashinath, 14 Bom., 320; Kishan Lal v. Garuruddhivaja, 21 All., 238.

(i) 1 Dig., 305, acc. Manu, viii., § 159, 160. As regards suretyship, the son's liability has been expressly affirmed. Moolchund v. Krishna, Bellasis, 54; Tukarambhatt v. Gangaram, 23 Bom., 454; Sitaramayya v. Venkatramanna, 11 Mad., 83; Maharaja of Benares v. Ramkumar, 26 All., 611. A grandson is only liable where the grandfather received consideration for accepting the suretyship. Narayan v. Venkatacharya, 28 Bom., 408. As regards fines, the reason is given "that a son is not liable for a penalty incurred by his father in expiation of an offence; for neither sins nor the expiation of them are hereditary." Nhanee v. Hureeram, 1 Bor., 90 [101], analogous to the principle of English Law that an action for a tort does not survive.

Obligation is religious.

determined not to be repayable by the son, apparently on the ground that it constitutes the essence of one of the unlawful forms of marriage (k). Sir Thomas Strange takes the term in its natural signification, and explains the non-liability on the ground that such payments are of a ready-money character, for which no credit is or, at all events, ought to be given (l).

Debt need not be beneficial.

It also follows that the obligation of the son to pay the debt is not founded on any assumed benefit to himself, or to the estate, arising from the origin of the debt; still less is that obligation affected by the nature of the estate, which has descended to the son, as being ancestral, or self-acquired. "Unless the debt was of such a nature that it was not the duty of the son to pay it, the discharge of it, even though it affected ancestral estate, would still be an act of pious duty in the son. By the Hindu law, the freedom of the son from the obligation to discharge the father's debt has reference to the nature of the debt, and not to the nature of the estate, whether ancestral or acquired by the creator of the debt" (m).

Ancestral estate equally liable.

Although the obligation of the son, which we have been discussing, is placed entirely upon religious duty by the Sanskrit writers, exactly the same obligation seems to have existed among the Tamil tribes. It can hardly have arisen among them from religious grounds, as the father appears to have been equally bound to pay the debts of his sons (n). Probably at a time when partition could not be enforced, all fair debts contracted by any member of the family were treated as a charge upon its property.

Origin of obligation.

§ 304. The law as administered in our Courts, in all the provinces except Bombay, has for many years held

Now limited to assets.

(k) Keshow Rao v. Naro, 2 Bor., 194 [215].

(l) 1 Stra. H. L., 166.

(m) Hunoomanpersad v. Mt. Babooee, 6 M. I. A., 421; S. C., 18 Suth., 81 (note); Girdhara Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I. A., 321; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 187; S. C., 22 Suth., 56; Suraj Bansi Koer v. Shoe Proshad, 6 I. A., 88; S. C., 5 Cal., 148; Muttayan Chetty v. Sangili, 9 I. A., 128; Narayanasami v. Samidas, 6 Mad., 298; Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer, 15 I. A., 99; S. C., 15 Cal., 717.

(n) Bouchet cited Sorg. H. L., 178; Man. Adm. Madras, I, 107.

that the heir is only liable to the extent of the assets he has inherited from the person whose debts he is called on to pay (o). But as soon as the property is inherited a liability pro tanto arises, and is not removed by the subsequent loss or destruction of the property, and still less, of course, by the fact that the heir has not chosen to possess himself of it, or has alienated it after the death (p). In Bombay, however, the stricter rule was applied, that a son was liable to pay his father's debts with interest, and a grandson those of his grandfather without interest, even though no assets had been inherited; but the Courts held that the rights of the creditor could only be enforced against the property of the descendant, and not against his person (q). But in that Presidency, also, the law has, by legislation, been brought into conformity with the more equitable rule observed elsewhere (r). In Allahabad it has been held that a son or grandson with assets is under exactly the same liability as his ancestor, and is therefore bound to pay the debt with interest (s).

§ 305. As regards the onus of proof that assets have come to the hands of the heir, it has been ruled by the Madras High Court that the plaintiff must, in the first instance, give such evidence as would prima facie afford reasonable grounds for an inference that assets had, or ought to have, come to the hands of the defendant. But when the Evidence of assets.

(o) Rajamma v. Ali Shaib, 2 Mad. H. C., 336; Karuppan v. Veriyal, 4 Mad. H. C., 1; Aga Haice v. Jugaut, Montr., 272; Jamoonah v. Mudden, ib., 227; Dyamonee v. Brindabun, S. D. of 1856, 97; Kumbha v. Bukhtawar, 1 N.-W. P. (S. D.), 3; Ponnappa v. Pappuvannangar, 4 Mad., pp. 9, 21, 45; S. C., 5 Ind. Jur., Supplement; and so in Mysore, Venkappaiya v. Visvesvaraiya, 15 Mysore, 196.

(p) Kasi v. Buchireddi, M-d. Dec. of 1860, 78; Ummooornna v. Gunga, 2 Suth., 296; Kenal Bhagwan v. Ganpati, 8 Bom., 220; Girdharlal v. Bai Shiv, ibid., 309.

(q) Pravunubh v. Deocristin, Bom. Sel. Rep., 4; Hurbojee v. Hurgovind, Bellasis, 76; Narasimharan v. Antaji, 2 Bom. H. C., 64.

(r) Bombay Act VII of 1866 [Hindus liability for ancestor's debts]. Sakharam v. Govind, 10 Bom. H. C., 361; Udaram v. Ramu, 11 Bom. H. C., 76. In Bombay the Courts appear still to hold that the creditor is entitled to obtain a decree with costs against the son as legal representative of the father for the debts of the latter, though the decree cannot be enforced without proof of assets. Lallu Bhagvan v. Tribhuvan Motiram, 13 Bom., 653. It seems hard, however, that the son should be put to the cost of proving a merely worthless claim.

(s) Lachman Das v. Khummu Lal, 19 All., 26.

plaintiff has laid this foundation for his case, it will then lie on the defendant to show that the amount of the assets is not sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, or that they were of such a nature that the plaintiff was not entitled to be satisfied out of them (t), or that there never were any assets, or that they have been duly administered and disposed of in satisfaction of other claims. The mere fact of a certificate having been taken out was held not to be even prima facie evidence of the possession of assets. But the Court refused to offer any opinion whether the same rule would apply since the Stamp Act, which made it necessary that the amount of assets to be administered under the certificate should be apparent from it (u). As to the doubt expressed by the High Court as to the effect of the stamp, it is probable that they would have given the same decision had it been necessary to decide the point. The primary object of a certificate is to collect debts, and the stamp would be assessed on the value of these. But this would be no evidence that the assets had been realised.

Assets include the whole joint property.

§ 306. Another very important question which was formerly much discussed is this: where property has descended from father to son, is the whole, or any lesser part, of such property to be treated as assets which are liable to be taken in payment of the father's debts? In Bengal no such question could arise, as the rights of the son come into existence for the first time on the father's death. He takes the ancestor's property strictly as heir, and all that he so takes is necessarily assets of him from whom it descends (§ 259). But it is different in districts governed by the Mitakshara. There each son takes at his birth a co-ordinate interest with his father in all ancestral property held by the latter, and on the death of the father the son takes, not as his heir, but by survivorship, the father's interest simply lapsing, and so enlarging the shares of his descendants (§ 253, 270). It is evident then that three views might be taken of the son's liability: First, that it only attached to the separate, or self-acquired, property of the father, which the son strictly took as his heir; secondly, that it attached to that share of the joint property which, according to the rulings in Madras and Bombay (§ 356—361), a father can dispose of in his lifetime; thirdly, that it applied to the whole property in the hands of the father as representing the Joint Family. After some conflict of decisions the last view has recently been decided to be the correct one, in a case where the property was of the ordinary partible character (v); and the same rule was applied by the Privy Council where the estate was an ancient impartible polliem of the nature of a Raj (w).

(t) Krishnaya v. Chinnaya, 7 Mad., 597.

(u) Kottala v. Shanganara, 3 Mad. H. C., 161; Joogal v. Kallee, 25 Suth., 224.

§ 307. The liability of the son is stated by the old writers to arise not only after the actual death of the father, but after his civil death, as when he has become an anchorite; or when he has been twenty years abroad, in which case his death may be presumed; or when he is wholly immersed in vice, which is explained by Jagannatha as indicating a state of combined insolvency and insolence, in which the father being devoted to sensual gratifications, gives up all attempts to satisfy his creditors, and sets them at defiance (x). And so when the father is suffering from some incurable disease, or is mad, or is extremely aged (y). In a Madras case where a son, living apart from his father, was sued for his father's debt during the life of the latter, the pundits being questioned as to his liability replied:

Liability arises after father's death.

(v) Ponnappa v. Pappuwayyanganar, 4 Mad., 1; S. C., 5 Ind. Jur., Supplement; Sheo Proshad v. Jung Bahadur, 9 Cal., 339. In such a case, if a decree against the father has been followed by attachment during his life, the proper course is to enforce the decree against the sons by way of execution. If, however, there has been no attachment, then the father's interest lapses by survivorship, and the remedy against the sons is by suit to enforce the liability established by the decree. Luchmi Narain v. Kunji Lal, 16 All., 449; Venkatarama v. Sentilivelu, 13 Mad., 265; Natasayyan v. Ponnusami, 16 Mad., 99.

(w) Muttayan Chetti v. Sangili, 9 I. A., 128, reversing S. C., 3 Mad., 370; Sivagiri v. Tiruvengada, 7 Mad., 339.

(x) Vishnu, 1 Dig., 266; Yajurvedikya, ib., 268; 2 Stra. H. L., 277; 2 W. MacN., 282.

(y) Katyayana; Vrihaspati, 1 Dig., 277, 278.

"The Hindu law-books, Vijnanesvareyum, etc., do not declare that the debt contracted by a person shall be discharged by his wife and son, while the said person is alive, is residing in his own village, and is still capable of carrying on business" (z). And in a later case, where the plaintiff sought to recover from the wife and brothers of the obligor of a bond, not on the ground of any personal liability, but as the representatives of the obligor, who was supposed to be dead, the Court held that no suit could be maintained before the lapse of the time which raised the legal presumption of the death of the obligor, unless there was proof of special circumstances which warranted the inference of the death within a shorter period (a). In Bombay a son had taken a share of the ancestral property by partition with his father, and held it as separate property for twenty years. A suit was brought against the son during his father's life to compel him to pay a debt of his father out of his share. The Poona Shastri gave his opinion that the son was liable, on the ground that "the expression 'incurable disease' is to be understood as referring to disease either mental or bodily, and a father having the anxiety of his debts in his mind may be considered as suffering from mental disease, and therefore it is binding on his son to discharge them." On appeal the Shastri of the Sudder Adawlut stated in his futwah "that if a son has taken possession of his share of the ancestral property, and a release has been passed, and if his father be free from any incurable disease, the father's debt cannot be recovered from the share allotted to his son," also, "that during the father's lifetime, his son is not obliged to liquidate his father's debts." This futwah was accepted by the Sudder Adawlut, and a decision was passed exempting the property of the son from liability (b).

(z) Chennapah v. Chollamanah, Mad. Dec. of 1851, p. 33.

(a) Karuppan v. Veriyal, 4 Mad. H. C., 1. Here, however, the supposed liability rested on possession of the estate.

(b) Amrut v. Trimbuck, Bom. Sel. Rep., 218. See Ponnappa v. Pappuwayangar, 4 Mad., pp. 13, 18, 26; Gurusami v. Chima Mannar, 5 Mad., 37, p. 46; W. & B., 648.

This limitation of the son's liability has, however, ceased to be of any importance, in view of the recent decisions which enable a creditor during the life of the father to enforce his claims by decree and execution against the entire family property. The limitation itself has therefore been declared to be no longer in force (c).

From these decisions it was at one time supposed that the creditor had two distinct remedies against the son in respect of his father's debt; one to enforce the claim against him during his father's life and the other to sue him in respect of it after the father's death. It has more recently been decided that there is only one cause of action, which arises equally against father and son at the time when the debt is due and payable. Consequently that the Statute of Limitations was equally against father and son from that date (d).

§ 308. Where the son is sued for the payment of his father's debts, it is, as already observed, utterly immaterial whether the debts had been contracted for the benefit of the family, or for the sole use of the father, provided, in the latter case, they were not of an immoral character (e). The Madras Court for some time struggled against the full application of this doctrine, on the ground that it would enable the father indirectly to make the family property liable to a greater extent than that to which he could have affected it by any direct act in his lifetime. Their views were, however, overruled by the Judicial Committee. The facts of the case were as follows: The holder of an impartible estate in Madras contracted certain debts for necessary purposes previous to the birth of his son. Subsequently he contracted other debts which were found by both Courts to be neither necessary nor beneficial to the family. For Son's liability not limited to father's interest in property.

(c) Khalilall Rahman v. Gobind, 20 Cal., 323, p. 336; Ramasami Nadan v. Ulaganatha, 22 Mad. F. B., 49; Bairi Prasad v. Madan Lal, 15 All. F. E., 75; Govind Krishna v. Sakharum, 28 Bom., 383.

(d) Mallesam v. Jugala, 23 Mad. F. B., 292; Narsingh Misra v. Lalji, 23 All., 206.

(e) Ante § 303; Udaram v. Ranu, 11 Bom. H. C., 76, 83; Goburdhon v. Singessur, 7 Cal., 52.

these he was sued in 1867, and to satisfy the decree he entered into an arrangement for payments by instalments, hypothecating part of his Zemindary as security for the debt. Upon default of payment this portion of the Zemindary was attached during his life. Upon his death the Court released the attachment. The creditor then sued the son and successor of his original debtor for the double purpose of restoring the attachment, and of making the entire property liable for payment of his debt. The High Court held that the estate was liable for so much of the debt as was contracted for necessary purposes, but refused to make it liable to any extent for the remainder of the debt contracted subsequent to the birth of the son, and not for the benefit of the family. On appeal the Privy Council refused to restore the attachment upon the portion of the estate which was specifically pledged, but held that the whole estate was liable in the hands of the heir for all the debts, which though neither necessary nor beneficial to him were free from any taint of immorality (f).

§ 309. The principle of these decisions has recently received a considerable extension by its application by the Privy Council to cases where the father has mortgaged or sold the family property to liquidate his private debts, or where it has been sold in execution of decrees against him for such debts. Where such transactions affect a larger share of the property than his own interest in it, the result evidently is that the sons are compelled indirectly to discharge during the father's life an obligation which in strictness only attaches upon them at his death. The body of law deducible from the rulings of the Judicial Committee seems to rest upon a series of exceptions to a general rule. The general rule is that no member of an

(f) Muttayan Chetti v. Sangili, 3 Mad., 370; S. C. on appeal, 11 I. A., 128, following Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I. A., 321; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 187; S. C., 22 Suth., 56; Suraj Bunsai Koer v. Sheo Proshad, 6 I. A., 88; S. C., 5 Cal., 148; and affirming Ponnappa v. Pappuvayyangan, 4 Mad., 1. Where the father's property has fallen to the son by survivorship, the liability of the latter must be enforced by fresh suit, and not by execution of the decree against the father, unless it had been enforced by attachment during his life, in which case it becomes a charge upon the estate. Ante § 306, note (v).

Father may alienate family property to satisfy his own debts.

undivided family can by any process appropriate to his own benefit a larger portion of the family property than the share he would obtain on partition. The exception is that, where the father has incurred a debt which would bind his son, the creditor can obtain satisfaction of the debt, either by conveyance from the father, or by a decree of Court, to the extent of even the whole family property. And this is subject to a further exception that a creditor, who wishes to enforce his claim against the interests of the sons, must show that he intended to do so by his proceedings in execution, or that he believed he was doing so by the form of the conveyance which he received. The first branch of these special rules was decided by the Privy Council under the following circumstances: Certain property descended from Kunhya Lall to his two sons, Bhikaree and Bhujrung. The former of the two had a son, Kantoo. The family was governed by Mithila law, and therefore, the property being ancestral, Kantoo acquired an interest in it by his birth. Subsequently to his birth Bhikaree executed a bond upon which judgment was obtained, and his share of the property was attached. To pay off this judgment a portion of the property was sold by both brothers. It does not appear that Bhikaree's bond was in any respect for the benefit of the family, or that the sale of the property was for the family benefit, except in so far as it went to satisfy the decree, and except as to a small portion which was applied in payment of Government revenue. Kantoo Lall sued to set aside the sale, as not having been made for his benefit or with his consent. A similar suit was brought by Mahabeer, the son of Bhujrung. The High Court dismissed Mahabeer's suit, on the ground that he was not born at the time the deed of sale was executed, but awarded to Kantoo Lall one-half of his father's share. The Privy Council reversed this decree. They remarked in their judgment: "It is said that they (Bhikaree and Bhujrung) could not sell the property, because before the deed of sale was executed, Kantoo Lall was born, and by reason of his birth, under the Mithila law, he had acquired an interest in that property. Now it is important to consider what was the interest which Kantoo Lall acquired. Did he gain such an interest in this property as prevented it from being liable to pay a debt which his father had contracted? If his father had died, and had left him as his heir, and the property had come into his hands, could he have said that because this was ancestral property, which descended to his father from his grandfather, it was not liable at all to pay his father's debts? They then quoted the passage above referred to (6 M. I. A., 421, § 303) and proceeded, "that is an authority to show that ancestral property which descended to a father under the Mitakshara law is not exempted from liability to pay his debts because a son is born to him. It would be a pious duty on the part of the son to pay his father's debts, and it being the pious duty to pay his father's debts, the ancestral property, in which the son, as the son of his father, acquires an interest by birth, is liable to the father's debts. The rule is, as stated by Lord Justice Knight Bruce, "the freedom of the son from the obligation to discharge the father's debt has respect to the nature of the debt, and not to the nature of the estate, whether ancestral or acquired by the creator of the debt." It is necessary, therefore, to see what was the nature of the debt for the payment of which it was necessary to raise money by the sale of the property in question. If the debt of the father had been contracted for an immoral purpose, the son might not have been under any pious obligation to pay it; and he might possibly object to those estates which had come to the father as ancestral property being made liable to the debt. That was not the case here. It was not shown that the bond upon which the decree was obtained was given for an immoral purpose: it was a bond given apparently for an advance of money, upon which an action was brought. The bond had been substantiated in a Court of Justice; there was nothing to show that it was given for an immoral purpose; and the holder recovered a decree upon it. There is no suggestion either that the bond, or the decree, was obtained benamée for the benefit of the father, or merely for the purpose of enabling the father to sell the family property, and raise money for his own purpose. On the contrary, it was proved that the purchase-money for the estate was paid into the bankers of the father, and credit was given to them with the bankers for the amount, and that the money was applied partly to pay off the decree, partly to pay off a balance which was due from the father to the bankers, and partly to pay Government revenue; and then there was some small portion of which the application was not accounted for. But it is not because a small portion is unaccounted for that the son has a right to turn out the bonâ fide purchaser who gave value for the estate, and to recover possession of it with mesne profits. Even if there was no necessity to raise the whole purchase-money, the sale would not be wholly void" (g).

Girdharee Lall
v. Kantoo Lall.

§ 310. This decision has been followed in numerous Indian decisions. cases from all the Presidencies, where sales or mortgages by a father for the purpose of satisfying antecedent debts of his own, which were neither immoral on the one hand, nor beneficial to the family on the other, have been held to bind the sons' and grandsons' share in the property as well as the father's share (h). The Bengal Court, however, takes a distinction which seems to be peculiar to itself.

Bengal rulings in regard to minors and adults.

(g) Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I. A., 324, 330; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 187; S. C., 22 Suth., 56; the facts are more fully set out, post § 312; Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Proshad, 6 I. A., 88; S. C., 5 Cal., 148. See these cases discussed, W. & B., 646.

(h) Muddun Gopal v. Mt. Gowrunbutty, 15 B. L. R., 264; S. C., 28 Suth., 365; Adurmoni v. Chowdhry, 3 Cal., 1; Ponnappa v. Pappuwayyengar, 4 Mad., 1; Gangulu v. Ancha, 4 Mad., 73; Narayana v. Narso, 1 Bom., 262; per curiam, 1; Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai, 2 Bom., 493; Kastur v. Appa, 5 Bom., 622; Darsu v. Bikarmajil, 3 All., 125; Sadashiv Dinkar v. Dinkar Narayan, 6 Bom., 520; Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain, 8 Cal., 517; S. C., 10 C. L. R., 489; Villiyammal v. Katha Chetty, 5 Mad., 61; Fakirchand v. Motichand, 7 Bom., 438; Trimbak Balkrishna v. Narayan Damodar, 8 Bom., 481; Johar Mal v. Eknath, 24 Bom., 343; Ponnappa v. Pappuwayyengar, 9 Mad., 342; Kottala Runganathan v. Pulicat Ramasami, 27 Mad., 162; Chidambara v. Kootha Perumal, 27 Mad., 326; Koer Hasmal v. Sunder Das, 11 Cal., 396. The Chief Court of Mysore in 1898 refused to follow the Privy Council rulings, so far as they go beyond the earlier cases, which limited the father's power of dealing with family property to alienations which were necessary or beneficial to the

They hold that such a transaction is valid against the other members of the family as being "an alienation for the performance of indispensable duties within the meaning of para. 29, Chap. I, § 1 of the Mitakshara." But they also hold that even such an alienation, though it binds minors, cannot bind adults without their consent, express or implied. Consequently, that a sale or mortgage by a father to satisfy his antecedent debt cannot per se bind his adult sons, though it would bind any who were minors at the time (i). Practically, however, the Court seems to get rid of its own distinction by holding that even in such a case, "the property would be bound; not indeed by virtue of the mortgage but by virtue of the father's debt antecedent to the suit being enforceable against the joint ancestral estate, and therefore against the mortgaged property as part of it. Strictly speaking, perhaps, the suit should be in the form of a suit upon the mortgage as against the father, and upon the debt as an antecedent debt as against the interests of the sons in the joint ancestral estate. But this would be merely matter of form" (k). Similarly, though the Bengal Court holds that the rule laid down by Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall only applies where the sale or mortgage was made in consideration of a debt antecedent to the transaction purporting to deal with the property (l), they practically arrive at the same result in cases where there has been no antecedent debt, by holding that the money, which is the consideration for the sale or mortgage, constitutes a debt to the purchaser or mortgagee, which, in a suit properly framed against the son, might be enforced by a decree directing the debt to be raised out of the whole ancestral family as a whole. Dasappa v. Nunjundia, 16 Mysore, 103. This decision seems to be opposed to an earlier decision of the same Court [1882], Chandrasekhara Davaroo v. Siddalingappa, 5 Mysore, 300.

(i) Upooroop v. Lalla Bandhjee, 6 Cal., 749, 753; see Muthoora v. Bootun, 13 Suth., 30; contra, Phulchand v. Mansingh, 4 All., 309.

(k) Laljee v. Fakcer, 6 Cal., 135, 138. See Baso Koer v. Hurry Dass, 9 Cal., 495.

(l) Supra (note) (k), 6 Cal., 138; Hanuman Kamat v. Dowlut Munder, 10 Cal., 528; Lal Singh v. Deo Narain, 8 All., 279; Arunachala v. Munsawmy, 7 Mad., 39.

estate, including the mortgaged property, and this whether the son was a minor or an adult at the time of the transaction (m).

§ 311. Where a father has sold or mortgaged the family property for an antecedent debt, not of an immoral or illegal character, it seems now quite settled that a sale under a decree against him enforcing such a transaction will bind his sons, even though they have not been made parties to the suit (n). The reason for this appears to be that the right of the purchaser or mortgagee was complete by means of the transfer made to him by the father, and did not require the decree to give it validity against his sons. The only effect of the decree is to give the stamp of genuineness to the demand, and to direct the mode in which the transaction is to be carried out. Where the Court enforces a mortgage by directing a sale of "the right, title and interest" of the mortgagor, these words may "include the entire interest which he had authority to mortgage at the time he executed the deed of mortgage, as distinguished from the share of the judgment-debtor which was available to creditors generally at the date of the attachment" (o). Hence where the decree would deprive the sons of any right which they would possess, not inconsistent with the validity of the mortgage, as for instance, the right to redeem, the Madras High Court holds that this right is not taken away from them by a decree to which they are not a party (p). The High Court

Sales in execution of decrees enforcing a mortgage.

(m) Luchman v. Giridhur, 5 Cal., 855 (F. B.); Gunga Prasad v. Ajudhia, 8 Cal., 131; Khalilall Raheman v. Gobind, 20 Cal., 238; Surja Prasad v. Golab Chand, 27 Cal., 762; contra, Jamma v. Nain Sukh, 9 All., 493; Badri Prasad, 28 Cal., 15 All., (F. B.), 75; Sami Ayyengar v. Ponnammal, 21 Mad., 28; Madan Lal, 15 All., (F. B.), 75; Sami Ayyengar v. Ponnammal, 21 Mad., 28; Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Pershad Singh, 6 I. A., 88; S. C., 5 Cal., 148;

(n) Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Pershad Singh, 6 I. A., 88; S. C., 5 Cal., 148; Ponnappa v. Pappavayyengar, 4 Mad., 1; 9 Mad., 343; Srinavasa v. Yelaya, 5 Mad., 251; Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain, 8 Cal., 517; Krishnamma v. Perumal, 8 Mad., 388; Sadashiv Dinkar v. Dinkar Narayan, 6 Bom., 520; Hurday Narain v. Rooder Perakash, 11 I. A., 26, 28; S. C., 10 Cal., 626; Basamal Sundraraja v. Jagannada, 4 Mad., 111. The decisions of the Privy Council in Simbhu Nath v. Golab Singh, and Pettachi Chetty v. Sivagiri Zemindar, 14 I. A., 77, 84, rested on grounds which are stated, post 318, 319.

(o) Per curiam, 8 Bom., p. 486, 4 Mad., p. 65, 17 I. A., p. 16.
(p) Ponnappa v. Pappavayyengar, 4 Mad., 1, 69. The High Court of Bengal appears to have taken the same view in Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain, 8 Cal., p. 525.

of Bombay had occasion to consider the same question in a case where there had been a partition between father and sons after the mortgage and before suit. They refrained from deciding the general question as to the effect of such a decree against the father alone in binding the sons. They considered it quite clear that after the partition the father could not be treated as representing the interests of his sons in the suit, and that, therefore, their right to redeem was unaffected by the decree (q).

Effect of Transfer Act, s. 85.

A further question has arisen since the Transfer Act IV of 1882 came into operation, whether the rule above stated was altered by s. 85 of that Act. Upon this the Court of Allahabad and Madras differ; the former Court holds that no decree for a sale under s. 88 can be made against the sons unless they have been made parties to the suit; the latter Court takes an opposite view (r). The proper remedy in the opinion of the Allahabad Court is to bring a fresh action against the son to enforce a liability which the previous decree against the father has shown that he was bound to discharge (s). If in any proceeding brought against the son to enforce the decree upon the mortgage, or by the son for a declaration that it does not bind him, the only issue set up is as to the validity of a decree passed under s. 88 of the Indian Transfer Act to which the son was not a party as directed by s. 85, the son will succeed if the original plaintiff had notice of his interest. But if a further issue is raised, viz., that the mortgage was in itself ineffectual against him as being tainted by immoral or illegal consideration, and this issue is found against the son, he will then be placed in the same position as if he had been a party to the suit on the mortgage, and the only relief that can be given is to allow him a right to redeem (t).

(q) Trimbak Balkrishna v. Narayan Damodar, 8 Bom., 481.

(r) Bhawani Persad v. Kallu, 17 All. (F. B.), 537. See, however, Hira Lal v. Parmeshar, 21 All., 356; contra, Ramasamayyan v. Virasami, 21 Mad., 222; Palani Gounden v. Rangayya, 22 Mad., 207.

(s) Dharam Singh v. Angan Lal, 21 All., 801.

(t) Kanharia Lal v. Raj Bahadur, 24 All., 211; Lala Suraj Prosad v. Golab Chand, 28 Cal., 517.

§ 312. After much conflict of decision in the Indian Money debt. Courts, arising from a misunderstanding of certain cases which will be referred to hereafter, it is now settled that the sons may be bound by proper proceedings taken by the creditor against the father to enforce a mere money debt due by him, although the sons are not made parties to the suit. The leading case upon this point is that of Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lal (u). The facts of that case were as follows:—Kunhya Lal died in 1843 leaving two sons Bhikaree and Bhujrung. Kantoo Lal, the son of Bhikaree, was born in 1844. In 1855 Bhikaree and Bhujrung borrowed Rs. 3,540 from Mt. Asmutanissa and others, and executed a bond for the amount, in which they hypothecated certain specified Mouzahs of the joint family property. In 1857 the bondholders obtained a decree against Bhikaree and Bhujrung in these terms: “Plaintiffs sue defendants for the recovery of Rs. 3,540 under a bond duly registered, and Rs. 1,189 interest thereon from date of bond to date of suit at one per cent. aggregating Rs. 4,729.” An acknowledgment by defendants was recited, and it was “ORDERED that this suit be decreed to plaintiffs according to acknowledgment filed by defendants. The plaintiffs do recover from defendants the money claimed with costs and interests from the date of suit to that of realisation.” It is evident that, though the plaintiffs might have sued to enforce the hypothecation as such, they choose to treat the bond as a mere money claim, upon which they sought a simple decree for money. Kantoo Lal, who was then of full age, was not made a party to the suit, nor was Mahabeer, an infant son of Bhujrung, who was born after 1856. In 1859 the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors in certain specified properties was sold in execution of the decree, and was purchased by a benamidar for Muddun Thakoor.

Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lal.

(u) 1 I. A., 321, 333; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 187; S. C., 22 Suth., 56, ante § 309. The facts of the case are not set out in the report, but are fully stated by the Chief Justice of Madras (9 Mad., 347) from a personal examination of the original record.

Judging from the names of the properties it would appear, that, although most of those which were hypothecated in 1855 were sold under the execution, yet some which were hypothecated were not sold, and some which were sold had not been hypothecated. The whole execution appears to have proceeded upon the footing of an ordinary money decree, and not of a mortgage. Kantoo Lall sued Muddun Thakoor to recover the whole property, a relief to which he would have been entitled if his share had been improperly sold (§ 365). The High Court of Bengal awarded him the share to which he would have been entitled on partition. This decree was reversed by the Judicial Committee. The judgment followed that in Girdhar Lall's case (§ 309) of which it formed part. It rested on the principle laid down in that case that, "It would be a pious duty on the part of the son to pay his father's debts, and it being the pious duty of the son to pay his father's debts, the ancestral property, in which the son, as the son of his father, acquires an interest by birth, is liable to the father's debts." It applied that principle to the particular case by saying: "It has already been shown that, if the decree was a proper one, the interest of the sons, as well as the interest of the father's in the property, although it was ancestral, were liable for the payment of the father's debts." Their Lordships were of opinion that in favour of the auction purchaser the propriety of the sale must be assumed. It has been suggested (v) that the decree in Muddun Thakoor's case was given on the footing of a mortgage or, at all events, that the Privy Council acted on that view. I think it is quite clear that such a supposition would have been a mistake, and that there is no reason to suppose that their Lordships were under any misapprehension.

§ 313. This case again has been approved and followed to its full extent by the Judicial Committee in more recent cases. In the case of Suraj Bansi v. Sheo Pershad, their Lordships quote Muddun Thakoor's case with approval, and cite it as establishing "that where joint ancestral property has passed out of a joint family, either under a conveyance executed by a father, in consideration of an antecedent debt, or in order to raise money to pay off an antecedent debt, or under a sale in execution of a decree for the father's debt, his sons, by reason of their duty to pay their father's debts, cannot recover that property unless they show that the debts were contracted for immoral purposes, and that the purchasers had notice they were so contracted" (w).

(v) By Kernan, Offg. C. J., 9 Mad., 196.

§ 314. These rules are subject, as already stated (§ 309) to a further exception, of which the first branch is that the creditor, who wishes to enforce his claim against the interests of the sons, must show that he intended to do so by his proceedings in execution. The leading case upon this point is that of Deendyal v. Jugdeep Narain (x). There Toofani Singh, the father of the respondent, being indebted to the appellant to the amount of Rs. 5,000, executed to him a Bengali mortgage bond for securing the repayment of that sum with interest. The appellant afterwards put that bond in suit, and obtained a decree against Toofani Singh for Rs. 6,328. The decree was an ordinary decree for money, and no proceedings were taken to enforce it against the property specially hypothecated. So far the case seems identical with that of Muddun Thakoor. Six years after decree, the appellant caused "the rights and proprietary and Mokurruri title and share of Toofani the judgment-debtor," in the joint family property to be sold for the amount then alleged to be due, and bought it himself and got into possession of the whole. The son then sued to recover the whole

(w) 6 I. A., 88, p. 106; S. C., 5 Cal., 148, p. 171; followed Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer, 15 I. A., 99; S. C., 15 Cal., 717; Minakshi Naidu v. Immudi Kanaka, 16 I. A., 1; S. C., 12 Mad., 142.

(x) 4 I. A., 247; S. C., 3 Cal., 193. Some of the facts of this case are more fully set out by Mr. Justice Mitter in 8 Cal., p. 903 than they are in the Privy Council report. See also Jugdeep v. Deendyal, 12 B. L. R., 100, the case appealed from.

property, on the ground that being under Mitakshara law the joint property of his father and himself, it could not be sold for his father's debts, which were incurred without any necessity. An issue was recorded as to whether Toofani Singh borrowed from the defendant under a legal necessity or not. No special issue was recorded as to whether the debt was of an immoral character, though evidence to that effect was given as bearing on the question of necessity. The Original Court appears to have considered that it could not go behind the order of sale, and that as that purported only to deal with the interests of Toofani Singh, the son was entitled to possession of the other moiety. The Zillah Judge dismissed the suit, being of opinion that a legal necessity was made out, that therefore the debt was binding on the son, and his share as well as the father's was liable for the debt. This finding of fact was binding on the High Court on special appeal. It held, however, upon the construction of the sale proceedings that the purchaser could get nothing more than what was put up to sale, viz., the rights and share of Toofani Singh. They further were of opinion that such an interest was not saleable under Mitakshara law (§ 356), and therefore decreed for the plaintiff. This was treated by the Judicial Committee as "the first and principal question," and, after an elaborate examination of the authorities, they decided that the father's interest could be sold, so as to enable the purchaser at the execution sale to compel such a partition as the debtor might have compelled, if no sale had taken place. In dealing with the conclusive finding of the Zillah Judge that the debt was contracted under a legal necessity, the Judicial Committee say:—"This issue, however, seems to their Lordships to be immaterial to the present suit, because, whatever may have been the nature of the debt, the appellant cannot be taken to have acquired by the execution sale more than the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor. If he had sought to go further, and to enforce the debt against the whole property, and the co-sharers therein who were not parties to the bond, he ought to have framed his suit accordingly, and have made those co-sharers parties to it. By the proceedings which he took, he could not get more than what was seized and sold in execution, viz., the right, title and interest of the father. If any authority be required for this proposition, it is sufficient to refer to the cases of Nugender Chunder Ghose v. Srimutty Kaminee Dossee, and Baijun Doobey v. Brij Bhookun Lall" (y). The result was that the son was held entitled to recover the whole property, subject to a declaration that the purchaser had acquired the share of Toofani Singh, and was entitled to have that share ascertained by partition (z).

§ 315. This case was followed in the Privy Council by Hurdey Narain v. Rooder Perkash (a). The facts there were exactly the same as in Deendyal's case, viz., a decree for a money debt against the father followed by execution against "whatever rights and interests the said judgment-debtor had" in the property sold. Here the Judicial Committee, agreeing with the High Court, held on the authority of Deendyal v. Jugdeep Narain that the interest purchased by the creditor was only "the right which the father, the debtor, would have to a partition, and what would come to him upon the partition." The cases of Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall, and of Suraj Bunsu v. Sheo Pershad were cited in argument, but not in the judgment. No doubt it was in reference to them that their Lordships said: "the decree was the ordinary one for the payment of the money, and this case is distinguishable from the cases where the father, being a member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, had mortgaged the family property to secure a debt, and the decree had been obtained upon the mortgage, and for a realisation of the debt by means of the sale of the

(y) 11 M. I. A., 241; 2 I. A., 275; Braja Lal Sen v. Jibankrishna, 26 Cal., 285.

(z) As to this last point, see also Hurdey Narain v. Rooder Perkash, 11 I. A., 26; S. C., 10 Cal., 626; Maruti Narayan v. Lilachand, 6 Bom., 564.

(a) 11 I. A., 26; S. C., 10 Cal., 626.

mortgaged property." No such distinction existed as to the case of Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall, which does not seem to have been referred to.

Explanation of these cases.

§ 316. These cases were for some time taken by the Courts in India as, to a certain extent, over-ruling Muddun Thakoor's case, and as laying down the general principle, that where a decree has been obtained against a father on a mere money debt it could not be executed so as to bind the rights of the sons, unless they were parties to the decree. It is abundantly clear, however, that the Judicial Committee did not intend to over-rule that decision. It was never referred to from beginning to end of Deendyal's decision. It never seems to have occurred to anyone that it had any bearing upon the decision. Both the Original Court and the High Court had accepted as an undisputed fact that the judgment-creditor chose, for reasons of his own, to sell only the right, title and interest of the father (b). The Privy Council adopted this finding and acted upon it. Between the hearing of Deendyal's case and that of Hurdey Narain the decision in Suraj Bunsu v. Sheo Prasad (§ 313) had been given, in which the rulings in Muddun Thakoor's case had been fully adopted. Yet in Hurdey Narain's case neither Muddun Thakoor nor Suraj Bunsu were noticed in the judgment as being at all in point. In a much later case, in which the Privy Council over-ruled a decision of the Madras High Court founded on this mistake, they say: "The High Court seems to have acted on the rule of law so laid down as a rigid rule of law apparently applicable to this particular case. But the distinction is obvious. In Hurdey Narain's case, all the documents show that the Court intended to sell, and that it did sell nothing but the father's share—the share and interest that he would take on partition, and nothing beyond it—and this tribunal in that case puts it entirely upon the ground that everything showed that the thing sold was 'whatever rights and interests the said judgment-debtor had in the premises' and nothing else" (c). Accordingly in the case in which those observations were made, and also in a previous one (d), the Privy Council affirmed sales under a money decree against the father to which the sons were no parties, being of opinion that the creditor and the Court both intended to put up for sale the entirety of the family property (e).

(b) See 12 B. L. R., pp. 101, 103.

§ 317. A further branch of the same exception (§ 309) Nanomi Babuasin v. Modun Mohun. is that the purchaser of family property for the debt of the father, whether he takes by a conveyance direct from the father, or by a sale at Court auction, must have intended to take, and must believe that he is taking the entire estate, and not merely the father's interest in it. This was laid down in several cases before the Privy Council, the first of which was that of Nanomi Babuasin v. Modun Mohun (f). There a father with minor sons was manager of an ancestral estate. In an ejectment suit against the father the plaintiff obtained a decree for mesne profits. The High Court stated the execution proceedings which ensued as follows: "In the petition for execution an inventory of the judgment-debtor's property was given, which described it as 'The share of 8 annas 11 gundahs out of the entire 16 annas, right and interest of the judgment-debtor in Mouzah Rampore,' and prayed that this might be attached and sold. The proceeding confirming the sale, and the certificate of sale are to the same effect, viz., describing the property as 8 annas 11 gundahs share, and stating it to be the right and interest of the judgment-debtor in the whole estate. This language might be regarded as specifically stating the object of the sale,

(c) Minakshi Naidu v. Immudi Kanaka, 16 I. A., 1, p. 5; S. C., 12 Mad., 142, p. 147.

(d) Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer, 15 I. A., 99; S. C., 15 Cal., 717.

(e) In considering this question it is not sufficient to examine the decree without also considering the proceedings in execution. Kagal Ganpaya v. Manjappa, 12 Bom., 691.

(f) 13 I. A., 1; S. C., 13 Cal., 21; followed, Daulet Ram v. Mehr Chand, 14 I. A., 187; S. C., 15 Cal., 70; Mahabir Pershad v. Moheswar Nath, 17 I. A., 11; S. C., 17 Cal., 584; Uman Hathi Singh v. Goman Bhaiji, 20 Bom., 385; Abdul Aziz v. Appayasami Naicker, 22 Mad., 110; Cooverji Hirji v. Dewsey Bhoja, 17 Bom., 718.

viz., an 8 annas 11 gundahs share, and the statement as to its being the right and interest of the creditor as mere description. Section 249 of the Civil Procedure Code, however, provides that the proclamation of sale shall declare that the sale extends only to the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property specified, and it may be contended that, read in the light of this section, this was the proper meaning of the petition and certificate. This is the view taken by the Original Court." The High Court then proceeded to state that in its opinion the intention of all parties was to bring the whole property to sale, and in this view the Privy Council agreed. They said: (g) "It appears to their Lordships that sufficient care has not always been taken to distinguish between the question, how far the entirety of the estate is liable to answer the father's debt, and the question how far the sons can be precluded by proceedings taken by or against the father alone from disputing that liability. Destructive as it may be of the principle of independent coparcenary rights in the sons, the decisions have for some time established the principle, that the sons cannot set up their rights against their father's alienation for an antecedent debt, or against his creditors' remedies for their debts, if not tainted with immorality. On this important question of the liability of the joint estate, their Lordships think that there is now no conflict of authority. The circumstances of the present case do not call for any enquiry as to the exact extent to which sons are precluded by a decree against their father from calling into question the validity of the sale, on the ground that the debt which formed the foundation of it was incurred for immoral purposes, or was merely illusory and fictitious. Their Lordships do not think that the authority of Deendyal's case bound the Court to hold that nothing but Girdhari's (the father's) coparcenary interest passed by the sale. If his debt was of a nature to support a sale of the entirety, he might legally have sold it without suit, or the creditor might legally procure a sale of it by suit. All the sons can claim is, that not being parties to the sale or execution proceedings, they ought not to be barred from trying the fact or the nature of the debt in a suit of their own. Assuming they have such a right, it will avail them nothing unless they can prove that the debt was not such as to justify the sale. If the expressions by which the estate is conveyed to the purchaser are susceptible of application either to the entirety, or to the father's coparcenary interest alone (and in Deendyal's case there certainly was an ambiguity of that kind), the absence of the sons from the proceedings may be one material consideration. But if the fact be that the purchaser has bargained and paid for the entirety, he may clearly defend his title to it upon any ground which would have justified a sale if the sons had been brought in to oppose the execution proceedings." The Committee then pronounced its opinion that the debt for which the property had been sold was a joint family debt, adding, "If it is a joint family debt, a sale to answer it effected either by Girdhari himself, or in a suit against him cannot be successfully impeached." Finally they agreed with the Courts below "that the execution and sale proceedings was such that the purchaser must have thought that he was buying the entirety. It is equally clear that all parties thought the same. The purchaser therefore has succeeded in showing that he bought the entirety of the estate which could lawfully be sold to him, the suit fails upon its merits" (h).

(g) 13 I. A., p. 17; 13 Cal., 35.

§ 318. Two later decisions of the Judicial Committee are in accordance with the view of the law stated in the last case. In one (i) Luchmun, who had four sons, was sued for a money debt by one Bhichook. The suit was terminated by a decree for a specified sum, to secure Simbhu Nath v. Golab Singh.

(h) See the construction put upon this case by the Madras High Court in Narasanna v. Gurappa, 9 Mad., 424.
(i) Simbhu Nath v. Golab Singh, 14 I. A., 77; 14 Cal., 572; Sakharam Shet v. Sitaram Shet, 11 Bom., 42.

which the debtor mortgaged "his right and interest in Mouzah Kindwar." The sons assented to this arrangement. Upon default execution was taken out upon the decree; and the property was sold to Bhichook, who received a certificate stating that "whatever right, title, and interest the said judgment-debtor had in the said property, being extinguished from the date of the sale, is transferred to Bhichook." The purchaser got into possession of the entire family property in the Mouzah. The sons sued to recover their shares. The Subordinate Judge held, upon the authority of Upooroop Tewary v. Lalla Bandajee (k) that the mortgage by Luchmun with his sons' assent bound the whole family property. This decision was reversed by the High Court, and their reversal was affirmed by the Judicial Committee in the following judgment:

"Their Lordships cannot agree with the Subordinate Judge. Whatever part any of the sons may have taken in negotiating between Luchmun and Bhichook, there is no evidence whatever of their proposing to mortgage their own interests. The sons may have assented to what was done, but the question is, what was done? That must be answered by the documents.

"Moreover if Bhichook relied on assent by the sons he should have taken care to make them parties to the execution proceedings. In Deendyal's case, where the expressions used by the mortgagor were much more favourable to the conveyance of the entirety than they are here, the creditor's omission of the sons from the proceedings was made a material circumstance against him. And in Nanomi Babuasin's case, where the decision was in favour of the purchaser, the same circumstance was recognized as being material when the expressions by which the estate is conveyed to the purchaser are susceptible of application either to the entirety or to the father's coparcenary interest alone.

(k) 6 Cal., 749.

"In the case of Upooroop Tewary, Mr. Justice Mitter thought that the words "my proprietary share" in a Mouzah were calculated to describe the entirety of the family property in dispute; and he distinguished them from the expression "right, title, and interest." In Hurdey Narain's case, 11 Ind. App., 26, there was no conveyance, but a sale on a money decree. The only description was "whatever rights and interests the said judgment-debtor had in the property," these were purchased by Hurdey Narain. The High Court held that nothing passed beyond the debtor's interest which gave him a right to partition, and which perhaps may for brevity be called his personal interest, and this Committee affirmed the decision. Each case must depend on its own circumstances. It appears to their Lordships that in all the cases, at least the recent cases, the inquiry has been what the parties contracted about if there was a conveyance, or what the purchaser had reason to think he was buying if there was no conveyance, but only a sale in execution of a money decree.

"Their Lordships are sorry that they cannot follow the learned Judges of the High Court into their examination of the vernacular petition. But they find quite enough ground in the decree to express a clear agreement with them. They conceive that when a man conveys his right and interest and nothing more, he does not primâ facie intend to convey away also rights and interests presently vested in others, even though the law may give him the power to do so. Nor do they think that a purchaser who is bargaining for the entire family estate would be satisfied with a document purporting to convey only the right and interest of the father. It is true that the language of the certificate is influenced by that of the Procedure Code. But it is the instrument which confers title on the purchaser. Its language, like that of the certificate in Hurdey Narain's case, is calculated to express only the personal interest of Luchmun. It exactly accords with the expressions used in the decree of August 1869, founded on Luchmun's own vernacular expressions, which the High Court construe as pointing to his personal interest alone. The other circumstances of the case aid the prima facie conclusion instead of counteracting it. For the creditor took no steps to bind the other members of the family, and the Rs. 625 which he got for his purchase appears to be nearer the value of one-sixth than of the entirety."

Pettachi Chetty v. Sivagiri Zemindar.

§ 319. In a later case (l), from Madras the Sivagiri Zemindar had contracted numerous debts to different creditors, in respect of the majority of which he had consented to decrees by which specific portions of his impartible Zemindary were hypothecated as security for payment. The debts in question were neither illegal nor immoral, but were not shown to be necessary or beneficial to the family. He had one son who was born before these decrees commenced. During the life of the judgment-debtor his whole Zemindary was attached and ordered to be sold at the demand of 13 creditors, of whom all but two held specific mortgages on the Zemindary. The sale did not take place till after his death. There can be little doubt that, if proper steps had been taken, it would have been possible to sell the Zemindary in such a manner as absolutely to bind the son's interest. But during the whole course of the execution proceedings the Civil Judge, acting upon the view of the law which was taken by the High Court previous to the decision in Muttayan Chetty v. Sangili (m), announced his opinion that the sale could only bind the father's life-interest, and that it would only pass to the purchaser the rents in arrear at his death. The son was made a party to the suit after his father's death as his legal representative. Upon these facts both the Indian Courts were of opinion that nothing was intended to pass and therefore that nothing did pass, to the auction purchaser except the father's life-interest, and this opinion was affirmed on appeal by the Privy Council.

(l) Pettachi Chetty v. Sangili Yira, 14 I. A., 84, 10 Mad., 241; Abdul Aziz Khan v. Appayasami Naicker, 31 I. A., 1; S. C., 27 Mad., 131.

(m) 9 I. A., 128; S. C., 6 Mad., 1.

§ 320. Lastly, there is a class of cases which has an indirect, though important, bearing upon the present question, in which the Privy Council has laid down the rule "that in execution proceedings the Court will look at the substance of the transaction, and will not be disposed to set aside an execution upon mere technical grounds, when they find that it is substantially right." Where therefore a defendant possesses both an individual and a representative character, and where he has been sued for a debt which would bind the whole family which he represents, and where execution is taken out against him under the decree, the Court is at liberty to look at the judgment to see what was intended to be sold under his right, title, and interest, and may treat the decree as binding the whole family which is represented by the defendant, and as properly executed against the joint family property (n).

Execution proceedings liberally construed.

§ 321. It appears to me that the above decisions lay down the following rules :

Suggested summary of decisions.

I. That in cases governed by Mitakshara law a father may sell or mortgage not only his own share, but his sons' shares in family property, in order to satisfy an antecedent debt of his own, not being of an illegal or immoral character, and that such transaction may be enforced against his sons by a suit and by proceedings in execution to which they are no parties (o).

II. That the mere fact that the father might have transferred his sons' interest, affords no presumption that he has done so, and that those who assert that he has done so must make out, not only that the words in the conveyance are capable of passing the larger interest, but that they are such words as a purchaser, who intended to bargain for (n) Bissessur Lall v. Luchmessur Singh, 6 I. A., 233; S. C., 5 C. L. R., 477; Darbhunga v. Coomar, 14 M. I. A., 605; Jugol Kishore v. Jotindra Mohun, 11 I. A., 66; S. C., 10 Cal., 985; Jairam Babaja Shet v. Joma Kondia, 11 Bom., 361; Jankibai v. Mahadev, 18 Bom., 147; Ramachendriah v. K. K. Seetharamiah, 1 Mysore, 60; Lala Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, 14 Cal., 401; Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhubaneswari, 15 I. A., 195; S. C., 16 Cal., 40; Sheo Pershad Singh v. Rajkumar Lal, 20 Cal., 453; Radha Pershad v. Ramkhelawan, 23 Cal., 302; Devi v. Sambhu, 24 Bom., 135.

(o) Girdhari Lall v. Kantoo Lall, ante § 309.

such a larger interest, might be reasonably expected to require (p).

III. That a creditor may enforce payment of the personal debt of a father, not being illegal or immoral, by seizure and sale of the entire interest of father and sons in the family property, and that it is not absolutely necessary that the sons should be a party either to the suit itself or to the proceedings in execution (q).

IV. That it will not be assumed that a creditor intends to exact payment for a personal debt of the father by execution against the interest of the sons, unless such intention appears from the form of the suit, or of the execution proceedings, or from the description of the property put up for sale; and the fact that the sons have not been made parties to the proceedings in execution is a material element in considering whether the creditor aimed at the larger, or was willing to limit himself to the minor remedy (r).

V. That the words "right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor" are ambiguous words, which may either mean the share which he would have obtained on a partition, or the amount which he might have sold to satisfy his debt (s).

VI. That it is in each case a mixed question of law and fact to determine what the Court intended to sell at public auction, and what the purchasers expected to buy. That the Court cannot sell more than the law allows. If it appears as a fact that the Court intended to sell less than it might have sold, or even less than it ought to have sold,

(p) Simbhu Nath v. Golab Singh, ante § 318.

(q) Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall, ante § 313; Nanomi Babuasin v. Modun Mohun, ante § 317; Bhana v. Ohindhu, 21 Bom., 616.

(r) Deendyal v. Jugdeep Narain, ante § 314; Hurday Narain v. Rooder Perakash, ante § 316; Nanomi Babuasin v. Modun Mohun, ante § 317; Maruti v. Babaji, 15 Bom., 87; Beni Pershad v. Purdu Chand, 23 Cal., 262, p. 277; Muhammad Husain v. Dip Chand, 14 All., 190; Cooverji Hirji v. Dewsey Bhoja, 17 Bom., 718.

(s) Same cases et per curiam, 17 I. A., p. 16; S. C., 17 Cal., p. 589; 8 Bom., p. 486; 4 Mad., p. 65; 15 Bom., p. 18.

and that this was known to the purchasers, no more will pass than what was in fact offered for sale (t).

§ 322. Another very important point which does not appear to be quite settled is this. Assuming that a decree against a father alone for a debt not immoral or illegal can be enforced against the whole family property, is it open to the sons to set up such immorality or illegality against the auction purchaser? Upon this point there have been three very important decisions of the Privy Council.

Can sons set up immorality of debt against purchaser under decree?

In the first case a son sought to set aside a sale made under a decree of Court against his father, the debt not being for the family benefit on one hand, nor immoral on the other. The Judicial Committee held that he had no such right. They said: "It appears that Muddun Mohun Thakoor purchased at a sale under an execution of a decree against the two fathers. He found that a suit had been brought against two fathers; that a Court of Justice had given a decree against them in favour of a creditor; that the Court had given an order for this particular property to be put up for sale under the execution; and therefore it appears to their Lordships that he was perfectly justified, within the principle of the case which has already been referred to in 6th Moore's Indian appeal cases, p. 423 (u), in purchasing the property, and paying the purchase money bonâ fide for the purchase of the estate. The same rule has been applied in the case of a purchaser of joint ancestral property. A purchaser under an execution is surely not bound to go back beyond the decree to ascertain whether the Court was right in giving the decree, or, having given it, in putting up the property for sale under an execution upon it. It has already been shewn that if the decree was a proper one, the interest of the sons, as well as the interest of the fathers, in the Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall.

Purchaser need not enquire beyond decree.

(t) Nanomi Babuasin v. Modun Mohun, ante § 317; Abdul Aziz Khan v. Appayasami Naicker; Simbhu Nath v. Golab Singh, ante § 318; Pettachi Chetty v. Sangili Vira, ante § 319; Muhammad Abdul v. Kutul Husain, 9 All., 185.

(u) Hunoomanpersaud v. Mt. Babooee; S. C., 18 Suth., 81 (note).

property, although it was ancestral, were liable for the payment of the father's debts. The purchaser under that execution, it appears to their Lordships, was not bound to go further back than to see that there was a decree against those two gentlemen; that the property was property liable to satisfy the decree, if the decree had been properly given against them; and, having inquired into that, and having bona fide purchased the estate under the execution, and bona fide paid a valuable consideration for the property, the plaintiffs are not entitled to come in, and to set aside all that has been done under the decree and execution, and recover back the estate from the defendant" (v).

Discussion of
case.

§ 323. It is evident that the general principle laid down in this judgment went very much beyond the necessities of the case. Even if the son had been allowed to rip up the decree, it appears that the evidence showed the debt to have been one which he was liable to pay, at all events after his father's death, and therefore the sale to satisfy it came within the ruling in Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall. But it might happen that the debt was contracted for purposes which would prevent its binding the son. These circumstances might fail to afford any defence to an action against the father, or they might not be set up by the father. In either case the decree would have been a proper one as against the father, and properly enforced against his interest in the property. But when the creditor tried to enforce it against the son's interest also, would the son be allowed to show that, although the decree was properly given against the debtor, the property, that is the son's interest in it, was not property liable to satisfy the decree? In other words, can he show that the facts do not exist which would entitle the creditor to seize the property of B in execution of a personal decree against A? A later decision of the Judicial Committee seems to show that he cannot do even this as against a bona fide purchaser at the execution sale, who has no notice of the original taint affecting the debt. In that case the sons sued to set aside a sale of joint property made to the defendant in execution of decree against the father. The lower Courts found that the debt was not for the benefit of the family, and that the money borrowed was spent by the father for immoral purposes. The High Court upon these findings held that, although the original creditor could not have enforced his claim against the sons, the purchaser at the sale, having purchased bona fide for value without notice, was entitled to hold the property free of all claims by the sons. For this view they relied upon the decision last cited. The Judicial Committee quoted the passage already set out, remarking that they desired to say nothing which could be taken to affect the authority of Muddun Thakoor's case, or of the cases which might have since been decided in India in conformity with it. They summarised the judgments in that case and in the kindred case of Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall as being "undoubtedly an authority for these propositions: first, that where joint ancestral property has passed out of a Joint Family, either under a conveyance executed by a father in consideration of an antecedent debt, or in order to raise money to pay off an antecedent debt, or under a sale in execution of a decree for the father's debt, his sons, by reason of their duty to pay their father's debts, cannot recover that property, unless they show that the debts were contracted for immoral purposes, and that the purchasers had notice that they were so contracted; and, secondly, that the purchasers at an execution sale, being strangers to the suit, if they have not notice that the debts were so contracted, are not bound to make inquiry beyond what appears on the face of the proceedings." Their Lordships, however, proceeded to distinguish the case before them from that of Muddun Thakoor, on the ground of notice, actual or constructive, of the plaintiffs' objections before the sale, by virtue of which the respondents must be held

(v) Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I. A., 321, 333; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 73; S. C., 22 Suth., 56.

Effect of notice that debt was immoral.

*Suraj Bansi
Koer v. Sheo
Proshad.*

to have purchased with knowledge of the plaintiffs' claim, and subject to the result of the suit to which the plaintiffs had been referred. It followed, therefore, that as against them, as well as against the original creditor, the plaintiffs had established that by reason of the nature of the debt neither they nor their interests in the joint ancestral estate were liable to satisfy their father's debt (w).

§ 324. It certainly does appear singular that a purchaser under a decree should be entitled, as against third parties, to assume the existence of a state of facts which was not, and perhaps could not have been, adjudicated upon in the suit which led to the decree. The primary effect of a personal decree against a father is to bind his interest alone. It might be imagined that a purchaser under such a decree, who claimed to extend its operation to the interests of others, would have to make out such facts as would warrant its extension. Even if it were held that he started with a presumption in his favour, it might have been thought that the presumption would have been rebuttable. In the case before the Privy Council, which has already been cited at length (§ 317), their Lordships treated this point as still open to argument. They said: "all the sons can claim is, that not being parties to the sale or execution proceedings, they ought not to be barred from trying the fact or the nature of the debt in a suit of their own. Assuming they have such a right, it will avail them nothing unless they can prove that the debt was not such as to justify the sale" (x). This of course is all they could desire. In some later cases the Judicial Committee appears to have laid down in general terms, and without any reference to the necessity of notice, that sons could successfully impeach a sale merely by proof of the immorality of the debt (y). But in all these cases, as in that of Nanomi Babuasin, the fact of immorality had been disproved, so that the question of notice could not have arisen. In India it has been repeatedly held that where a son is resisting a suit brought against him to enforce a decree obtained against his father, or where he is assailing an execution threatened or enforced in pursuance of such a decree, it rests upon him to establish that the debt was of such a character that he, as the son of a Hindu, would not be under a pious obligation to discharge it (z). In one of these cases the claim of the creditor was dismissed, the Court having found that the debt was immoral. In other cases (a) the rule was laid down that the sons were not entitled to go behind the decree, except for the purpose of showing that the judgment debt was immoral or illegal in its origin. In a later case, also from Madras, where a son sued to set aside a sale decreed under a mortgage executed by the father, and alleged that there had been no consideration for the mortgage, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to have the question tried, whether there was really a debt owing by the father to support the mortgage (b). Where the execution creditor is himself the purchaser at the auction, he cannot protect himself under the plea of being a purchaser without notice, if there is any flaw in the nature of the debt (c). Where the purchaser was the son of the execution creditor, it was considered to be a question of fact, whether he was such a stranger to the suit as to be entitled to rely upon the decree without further enquiry (d).

(w) Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Prashad, 6 I. A., 88, 106, 108; S. C., 5 Cal., 148; Krishnaji Lakshman v. Vithal Ravji, 12 Bom., 625.

(x) 13 I. A., p. 18; Jagabhai v. Vijbhokundas, 11 Bom., 37; Cooverji v. Dewsey Bhoja, 17 Bom., 718.

(y) Bhagbut Pershad v. Girja Koer, 15 I. A., 99; S. C., 15 Cal., 717; Minakshi Naidu v. Immudi Kanaka, 16 I. A., 1; S. C., 12 Mad., 142; Mahabir Pershad v. Moheswar Nath, 17 I. A., 11; S. C., 17 Cal., 584.

§ 325. Even if the strictest view should ultimately be taken of the rights of the purchaser under an execution, it must be remembered that under the Civil Procedure Code

Remedies under Civil Procedure
Code.

(z) Beni Mahdo v. Basdeo Patak, 12 All., 99; Bhawani Baksh v. Ram Dai, 13 All., 216; Pan Singh v. Partab Singh, 14 All. F. B., 179.

(a) Natasayyan v. Pommusami, 16 Mad., 99; Periasami v. Seetharama, 27 Mad., 243.

(b) Ramasamayyan v. Virasami, 21 Mad., 222.

(c) Luchmun Dass v. Giridhar Chowdhry, 5 Cal., 855; Ramphul Singh v. Deg Narain, 8 Cal., 517, p. 522; Beni Pershad v. Puran Chand, 23 Cal., 262.

(d) Trimbak Balkrishna v. Narayan Domodar, 8 Bom., 481.

the sons have ample opportunity of protecting themselves. When property is about to be sold for a money decree it is always attached before sale. The proper course is for the sons to come in under sect. 278, and object to the sale of their interests on the ground that the debt was immoral or illegal. The party against whom the order is made will then, under sect. 283, be entitled to bring a suit in which the whole question can be determined (e). Where the property is put up for sale under a decree enforcing a mortgage no attachment need take place (f), but the sale is always notified beforehand by proclamation. By giving public notice at the time of sale to all intending purchasers, the sons will obtain the benefit of the ruling in their favour in Suraj Bunsu's case, as stated above (§ 323). It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that the decree must be read with the plaint, and that where the latter contains express statements showing that the debt is one which could not bind the sons,—in the particular instance, a claim for the refund of money criminally misappropriated by the father,—this is in itself a constructive notice to the purchaser, which brings his case within that of Suraj Bunsu (g).

Mode of adjustment.

§ 326. A father's debts are a first charge upon the inheritance, and must be paid in full before there can be any surplus for division (h). As between the parceners themselves the burthen of the debts is to be shared in the same proportion as the benefit of the inheritance. But, except by special arrangement with the creditors, the whole property, and all the heirs are liable jointly and severally (i). Where however, a father has separated

(e) Umamañeswara v. Singaperumal, 5 Mad., 376.

(f) Krishnamma v. Perumal, 8 Mad., 388.

(g) Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh, 6 All., 234.

(h) Narada, xiii., § 32; Daya Bhaga, i., § 47, 48; V. May., iv., § 6; Taruchand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C., 177, 181.

(i) Katyayana, 1 Dig., 291; Narada, iii., § 2; Vishnu, 1 Dig., 288; D. K. S., vii., § 26—28; 2 Stra. H. L., 283. The case of Doorga Pershad v. Kesho Pershad, 9 I. A., 27; S. C., 3 Cal., 656, which seems to contradict the proposition in the text must, I think, depend on the special circumstances of the case. Certain minors had been decreed to pay money in a suit in which they were not really represented. The High Court, however, apparently prevent a fresh suit from his sons, the whole of his property will descend at his death to an after-born son. Therefore all debts contracted by him subsequent to the partition will, in the first instance, be payable by that son. But Jagannatha is of opinion that even in such a case, if the after-born son has not property sufficient to pay the debts, they should be discharged by the separated sons (k). This would certainly have been the case under the old law, when the possession of assets was not necessary in order to render the sons liable. But it is probable that a different view would be taken now, when the creditor must show that the sons' estate has been enlarged by the death, to the full extent of the liability attempted to be imposed (l).

§ 327. Secondly, the obligation to pay the debts of the person whose estate a man has taken is declared with equal positiveness. It does not rest, as in the case of sons, upon any duty to relieve the deceased at any cost, but upon the broad equity that he who takes the benefit should take the burthen also (m). And it is evident that this obligation attached whether the property devolved upon an heir by operation of law, or whether it was taken by him voluntarily, as an executor de son tort as an English lawyer would say; for the liability is said to arise equally whether a man takes possession of the estate of another or only of his wife. As Narada says: "He who takes the wife of a poor and sonless dead man becomes held them liable for so much of the decree as represented their father's debt. That debt originally due by himself and other members of the joint family to a stranger, had been apportioned at a partition. As between the father and his sons the sum so allotted to him was the only debt they could be equitably bound to pay.

Obligation arising from possession of assets.

(k) Vrihaspati, 1 Dig., 279; D. K. S., v., § 16—18.

(l) Krishnasami Konan v. Ramasami, 22 Mad., 519, where the decision was rested on the principle that the creditor could only seize for the debt of the father property which the father could have sold to discharge his debt; Rama-chandra v. Kondayya, 24 Mad., 555.

(m) "He who has received the estate of a proprietor leaving no son must pay the debts of the estate, or, on failure of him, the person who takes the wife of the deceased." Yajñavalkya, 1 Dig., 270; Katyayana, ib., 273, 330; Vrihaspati, ib., 274. "Of the successor to the estate, the guardian of the widow, or the son, he who takes the estate becomes liable for the debts." Narada, iii., 3, 18, 25; Gautama, cited 2 W. MacN., 284; 1 Dig., 314. This rule also applies to Khojahs. Rashid v. Sherbanoo, 29 Bom., 411.

liable for his debts, for the wife is considered as the dead man's property" (n). Even the widow is not bound to pay her husband's debts, unless she is his heir, or has promised to pay them, or has been a joint contractor with him (o).

§ 328. "Assets are to be pursued into whatever hands. See Narada, cited by Jagannatha, 1 Dig., 272. And innumerable other authorities may be cited were it requisite in so plain a case." This is the remark of Mr. Colebrooke, approving of a Madras pundit's fatwah, that where uncle and nephew were undivided members, and the nephew borrowed money and died, leaving his property in the hands of the uncle's widow, she might be sued for the debt (p). So in Bombay, a suit was maintained on an account current with a deceased debtor against his widow and three other persons, strangers by family, on the ground that they had taken possession of his property, but they were held only liable to the extent to which they became possessed of the property (q). Similarly in Madras, where a suit was brought against the representatives of two deceased co-debtors to recover a debt incurred for family purposes, it was decided that the son-in-law of one of the deceased co-debtors and his brothers were properly joined as defendants, on the ground that they in collusion with the widow of the deceased, had, as volunteers, intermeddled with, and substantially possessed themselves of, the whole property of the family of the deceased co-debtor (r). In each of these cases the person in possession of the property held it without any title or consideration, like an executor de son tort in England. On the other hand, in a Madras case, where the plaintiff sued on a bond by the first defendant's husband, and joined the second defendant, his son-in-law, as being

(n) Narada, iii., § 21—26; ante § 74.

(o) Narada, iii., § 17; Yajñavalkya, Vishnu, 1 Dig., 313; Katyayana, 1 Dig., 315; 2 W. MacN., 283, 286.

(p) 2 Stra. H. L., 282.

(q) Kupurchund v. Dadabhoy, Morris, Pt. II, 126.

(r) Magaluri v. Narayana, 3 Mad., 359; Kanakamma v. Venkataratnam, Mad., 586.

in possession of the property, and judgment was given against both, the Sudder Court reversed the decision against the second defendant, observing, "that he is not in the line of the first defendant's husband's heirs, and that although property derived by him from the deceased debtor may in execution be made liable for the debt, his possession of the property does not render him personally responsible" (s). Now, if a decree had been obtained during his lifetime against the debtor, it might, of course, have been executed against his property in the hands of the son-in-law. But it is difficult to see in what way the property could have been got at in the hands of the second defendant, except by a suit to which he was a party (t). In a suit against the widow she could only have been made liable to the extent of the assets she had received. According to English law, an administratrix might also be made liable to the extent of the assets which, but for her wilful default, she might have received, and if she chose to leave them in the hands of her son-in-law, this would be a wilful default. But I doubt whether a Hindu widow is bound to bring suits against third parties to recover assets for the benefit of creditors (u). It seems to me that the son-in-law was properly joined in order to enable him to show that he had no property of the deceased, or that he held the property for value. And so in Calcutta, where the half-brother of the deceased was sued jointly with his sons for a debt, the Court held that he could not be liable as heir, which he manifestly was not, but that he would have been liable if it had been shown that he had possessed himself of any of the property of the deceased (v).

§ 329. In some early cases this principle was pushed so far that it was even held that an heir could not alienate Liability is personal.

(s) Amanchi v. Manchiraz, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 73.

(t) See post § 643.

(u) See 2 W. MacN., 286, where a man left a widow, who was clearly his heir, but his father and brothers appropriated his property. The pundit said that they and not the widow were bound to pay his debts.

(v) Rampertab v. Gopeekishan, Sev., 101.

Debts are not a charge upon the estate.

property which had descended to him, while the debts of the deceased were unpaid. That is, that a simple debt immediately on death acquired all the force of a specific mortgage (w). But this view has been denounced by more recent decisions, and it is now held, "that the property of a deceased Hindu is not so hypothecated for his debt as to prevent his heir from disposing of it to a third party, or to allow a creditor to follow it, and take it out of the hands of a third party, who has purchased in good faith and for valuable consideration. The creditor may hold the heir personally liable for the debt, if he have alienated the property, but he cannot follow the property" (x). The same ruling has been applied by the High Court of Bengal, in a case where it was attempted to make a devisee liable for the debts of the testator, in respect of his possession of part of the estate. The Court held that no such liability attached, whether his possession had commenced before the death as by gift, or after the death as by bequest (y). The case was argued purely upon principles of English law, which, of course, had little bearing upon the point. It has, however, been held in Madras that a voluntary transfer of property by way of gift, if made bonâ fide, and not with the intention of defrauding creditors, is valid against creditors (z). What the deceased could have done during his life, it would probably be held, he could also do by will, unless a specific lien had attached to the property. And so a gift by the heir would probably also be held valid in favour of the (w) Luggah v. Trimbuck, Bom. Sel. Rep., 33; Kishundass v. Keshoo Wulud, Morris, Pt. II, 108.

(x) Unnoopoorna v. Gunga, 2 Suth., 296; Jamiyatram v. Parbhudas, 9 Bom. H. C., 116; Lakshman v. Sarasvatibai, 12 Bom. H. C., 78; Veerasokkaraju v. Papiiah, 26 M.d., 792. As to what circumstances will negative good faith, see Greender v. Mackintosh, 4 Cal., 897.

(y) Ram Oottum v. Oomesh, 21 Suth., 155. A contrary opinion, also founded upon arguments drawn from English statutes, was expressed by Pontifex, J., in Greender v. Mackintosh, 4 Cal., 897. The case was ultimately decided upon the law of Limitation.

(z) Gnanabhai v. Srinivasa, 4 Mad. H. C., 84; Raibishen Chand v. Asmaid Koer, 11 I. A., 164; S. C., 6 All., 560. By the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) a person who takes by gift the whole property of another is liable for all the debts due by the donor at the time of the gift to the extent of the property received, s. 128.

donee, though, of course, such a gift would in no degree lessen his own liability to the creditors (§ 303). The Bombay High Court, in Jamiyatram v. Parbhudas (a), says that Mr. Colebrooke laid the proposition down too broadly that the assets of the debtor may be pursued into whatsoever hands they may come, and they rather indicate an opinion that this rule only applies to those who take the inheritance as heirs. The case before them, however, was one of a purchaser for value. There is nothing to show that they would have exonerated a person who took the estate after the death by his own voluntary act, and without a title derived either from the deceased, or from the representatives of the deceased.

§ 330. Another question arises, how far the liability to pay debts out of assets prevails against the right of survivorship, in cases where the debtor does not stand in the relation of paternal ancestor to the heir. In this case the moral and religious obligation has vanished, and it is a mere conflict of two legal rights. It will be seen hereafter (§ 357) that in cases under the Mitakshara law there is a strong body of authority in favour of the view, that an undivided coparcener cannot dispose of his share of the joint property, unless in a case of necessity, without the consent of his coparceners. But it may now be taken as settled by the Privy Council, that even if this be so, still a creditor who has obtained a judgment against him for his separate debt may enforce it during his life by seizure and sale of his undivided interest in the joint property (b). But that decision left open the further question, whether the creditor loses his rights against the undivided share of the debtor, if the latter dies before judgment against him, and seizure in satisfaction of it? In other words, do those who take by survivorship take subject to the equities existing between their deceased co-sharer and his Liability of coparcener taking by survivorship.

(a) 9 Bom. H. C., 116.

(b) Deendyal v. Jugdeep, 4 I. A., 217; S. C., 3 Cal., 198. As to the mode of enforcing such a decree, see post 355.

creditors? I say equities, because it is quite clear that a debt is not a lien, but only a cause of action which may be enforced by way of execution.

This question, after being decided against the creditor by the High Courts of Bombay, Madras, and the North-West Provinces, has now been definitely settled in the same way by the Privy Council.

Cases in India.

§ 331. The first case in which the point arose directly for decision was in the North-West Provinces (c). There the share of Mahadev in a house, which was undivided family property, was attached in his lifetime, under a decree obtained against him for his separate bond. He died before any sale under the attachment. The High Court affirmed the ruling of the Courts below, which discharged the attachment on the ground that Mahadev at his death "left no right at all in the house, and that there was nothing, therefore, in connection with it which was liable to be sold" for the purpose of satisfying the plaintiff's claim. The principle of this decision was followed in Bombay in the case of Udaram v. Ramu (d). There a father and son were in possession of a shop which was ancestral property. The son contracted a separate debt and died, and the creditor obtained a decree against the father and widow for payment of the debt "out of the property and effects" of the deceased son, and then sued the father for a declaration that the son's share of the shop was liable in the father's hands for the son's debt. The High Court held that no such declaration could be made. After reviewing and approving of the cases which decided that an undivided Hindu might sell his share, and that it might be seized in execution during his lifetime, and admitting that the divided or separate estate of a Hindu would be liable to be sold after his death in execu-

(c) Goor Pershad v. Sheodeen, 4 N.-W. P., 137.
 (d) 11 Bom. H. C., 76; followed in Narasimbhat v. Chenapa, 2 Bom., 479; Balbadhar v. Bisheshar, 8 All., 495; Jaganath Prasad v. Sitaram, 11 All., 302. See also per Peacock, C. J., in Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbush Koer, 3 B. L. R. (F. B.), 34-37; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 1; and per Mitter, J., Goburdhon v. Singessur, 7 Cal., 52, 54

tion of a decree against his heir, they noticed the doctrine that, except in certain special cases, the whole of the undivided family estate would be, when in the hands of the sons or grandsons, liable to the debts of the father or grandfather. They then pointed out that "there is not any authority for the converse of that proposition, viz., that the father or grandfather is responsible for the debts of the son or grandson independently of the receipt of assets." Finally, they held that the son's interest in the shop could not be held to be assets in the hands of the father, since "the right of the son to share in it, as being ancestral property, had come into existence at his birth and it died with him." The Madras case was intermediate between the above two. There a decree had been obtained against a member of a Joint Family for his separate debt. He died before execution, and a suit was then brought by the decree holder, against his undivided cousin, to enforce the decree against the share of the property to which the deceased had been entitled. The decisions in the North-West Provinces and Bombay were cited, and the plaintiff's suit dismissed. The Chief Justice said: "I am not aware that it can be contended that the undivided interest of a coparcener, which passes by survivorship to the other coparceners by his death, can be proceeded against in execution. A distinction must be made between a specific charge on the land, and a general decree which is merely personal. Every debt which a man incurs is not necessarily a charge upon the estate, and there is no reason for saying that a man who has obtained judgment against an undivided member of a Joint Family, has established a charge upon the property" (e). The result is that if the deceased debtor is an ordinary coparcener, who has left neither separate nor self-acquired property, the creditor who has not attached his share before his death, is absolutely without a remedy (f). If he stood in the relation of

(e) Koopookonan v. Chinnayan, 1 Mad., Law Reporter, 63.

(f) Attachment before judgment is ineffectual. Ramanayya v. Rangappaya, 17 Mad., 144.

father to the survivors, his liability can only be enforced by a separate suit against the sons (g). If, however, the estate of a coparcener has vested in the Official Assignee under an insolvency, that estate would continue after his death, and would not be defeated by survivorship (h).

§ 332. Most of the above cases were reviewed, and, except as to one point, affirmed by the Privy Council in the case of Suraj Bunsji Koer v. Sheo Proshad (i), already referred to. There the Court held that the father's debt as being of an immoral character was not binding upon the sons, and that the purchaser under the decree was affected with notice of the fact, so that he could claim no protection under the decree. The result was that the special liability of the sons for their father's debt was swept away, and depended solely upon their possession of assets. On the other hand, the case agreed with that in the North-West Provinces, and differed from those in Madras and Bombay in this respect, that the sale after the father's death had taken place in pursuance of an attachment and order for sale during his life. Upon this state of facts their Lordships said: "The question remains, whether they (the purchasers) are entitled to any and what relief as regards the father's share in this suit? It seems to be clear upon the authorities that if the debt had been a mere bond debt, not binding on the sons by virtue of their liability to pay their father's debts, and no sufficient proceedings had been taken to enforce it in the father's lifetime, his interest in the property would have survived on his death to his sons, so that it could not afterwards be reached by the creditor in their hands. On the other hand, if the law of the Presidency of Fort William were identical with that of Madras, the mortgage executed by Adit Sahai (the father) in his lifetime, as a decision.

Privy Council

Attachment binds estate.

(g) Sivagiri v. Alwar Ayyangar, 3 Mad., 42; Karnataka Hanumantha v. Hanumayya, 5 Mad., 232; Luchmi Narain v. Kunji Lal, 16 All., 449; Beni Pershad v. Parbati Koer, 20 Cal., 895.

(h) Fakirchand v. Motichand, 7 Bom., 438.

(i) 6 I. A., 88, 108; S. C., 5 Cal., 148; ante § 303, 308.

security for the debt, might operate after his death as a valid charge upon Mouzah Bissumbharpore to the extent of his own then share. The difficulty is that so far as the decisions have yet gone, the law, as understood in Bengal, does not recognise the validity of such an alienation. Their Lordships are of opinion that it is not necessary in this case to determine that vexed question, which their former decisions have hitherto left open. They think that, at the time of Adit Sahai's death, the execution proceedings under which the Mouzah had been attached and ordered to be sold had gone so far as to constitute, in favour of the judgment-creditor, a valid charge upon the land, to the extent of Adit Sahai's undivided share and interest therein, which could not be defeated by his death before the actual sale. They are aware that this opinion is opposed to that of the High Court of the North-West Provinces (k), already referred to. But it is to be observed that the Court by which that decision was passed does not seem to have recognised the seizable character of an undivided share in joint property, which has since been established by the before mentioned decision of this tribunal in the case of Deendyal (l). If this be so, the effect of the execution sale was to transfer to the respondents the undivided share in the Mouzah, which had formerly belonged to Adit Sahai in his lifetime; and their Lordships are of opinion that, notwithstanding his death, the respondents are entitled to work out the rights which they have thus acquired by means of a partition." (m).

§ 333. The third, and only remaining ground of liability is that of agency, express or implied. Mere relationship, however close, creates no obligation. Parents are not bound to pay the debts of their son, nor a son the debt of his mother. A husband is not bound to pay the debts of Cases of agency.

(k) Goor Pershad v. Sheodeen, 4 N.-W. P., 137.

(l) 4 I. A., 247; S. C., 3 Cal., 198.

(m) See this decision followed in the converse case, where the property of the son after attachment had vested in the father. Rai Balkishen v. Sitaram, 7 All., 731; Bailur Krishna v. Lakshmana, 4 Mad., 302.

his wife, nor the wife the debts of her husband (n). Still less, of course, can any member of a family be bound to pay the debts of a divided member, contracted after partition, for such a state of things wholly negatives the idea of agency (o). It would be different if he had become the heir of the debtor, or taken possession of his assets. On the other hand, all the members of the family, and therefore all their property, divided or undivided, will be liable for debts which have been contracted on behalf of the family by one who was authorised to contract them (p). The most common case is that of debts created by the manager of the family. He is, ex-officio, the accredited agent of the family, and authorised to bind them, even when minors, for all proper and necessary purposes, within the scope of his agency (q). If a decree is passed against him in respect of a liability properly contracted for the necessities of the family, the binding character of this decree upon the interests of the other members depends, not upon their having or not having been parties to the suit, but upon the authority of the manager to contract the liability (r). So if the manager has borrowed money for family necessities upon his personal security, he will have a right to contribution from the other members, which will arise at the time when he expends the money for their benefit (s). But the liability of the family is not limited to contracts made, or debts incurred by him. "The householder is liable for whatever has been spent for the benefit of the family by the pupil, apprentice, (n) Narada, iii., § 11, 17, 19; Yajnavalkya, Vishnu, 1 Dig., 313; Vrihaspati, 1 Dig., 316; Katyayana, 1 Dig., 317; Mootoomarappa v. Hinnoo, Mad. Dec. of 1855, 183.

(o) Narayana v. Rayappa, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 51.

(p) Manu, viii., § 166; Raghunandana, v., 33—36. I presume that, as in the case of partnership debts, the joint property would be primarily liable, and the separate property only in case if proved insufficient.

(q) Gharib-ullah v. Khalak Singh, 30 I. A., 165; S. C., 25 All., 407. What are such necessary purposes will be examined fully in the next chapter, § 346.

(r) Hari Vithal v. Jairam Vithal, 14 Bom., 597; over-ruling Maruti Narayan v. Lilachand, 6 Bom., 564, and Lakshman Venkatesh v. Kashinath, 11 Bom., 703; Sakharam v. Devji, 23 Bom., 372; Baldeo v. Mobarak, 29 Cal., 583. An executor cannot bind the estate by debts contracted by himself for the purposes of the estate. Debendra Nath v. Hem Chandra, 31 Cal., 253.

(s) Aghore Nath Mukhopadhyaya v. Grish Chunder, 20 Cal., 18.

slave, wife, agent, or commissioned servant" (t). Of course, this implies that the persons referred to have acted either with an express authority, or under circumstances of such pressing necessity that an authority may be implied (u). Narada says: "Debts contracted by the wife never fall upon the husband, unless they were contracted for necessaries at a time of distress, for the household expenses have to be defrayed by the man" (v). A fortiori the husband is liable for any debts contracted by a wife in a business which he has assigned to her to manage (w). And on the same principle it has been stated "that persons carrying on a family business, in the profits of which all the members of the family would participate, must have authority to pledge the Joint Family property and credit for the ordinary purposes of the business. And, therefore, that debts honestly incurred in carrying on such business must over-ride the rights of all members of the Joint Family in property acquired with funds derived from the joint business" (x). This power, when exercised by an agent, or personal representative of the manager, cannot, however, exceed that which is vested in the principal. For instance when a family trading business has devolved upon a widow, her agent cannot exceed the limited powers of dealing with the estate which are possessed by the widow (y). The Official Assignee of a managing member of a family cannot dispose of the family estate except in discharge of debts which are binding on the whole family (z). Similarly a mortgage of family property by the managers of a family trade partnership for the purposes of the partnership binds

(t) Narada, iii., § 12, 13; Vishnu, 1 Dig., 295; Manu, viii., § 167; Yajnavalkya, 1 Dig., 313; Katyayana, 1 Dig., 296, 319; 1 W. MacN., 286. See as to the liability of the heir for debts bona fide incurred by executors acting under a will which was afterwards set aside, or by an adopted son whose adoption was afterwards held invalid. Fanindro Deb v. Jugulishwari, 14 Cal., 316.

(u) Mudir v. Ranglal, 29 Cal., 797.

(v) Narada, iii., § 19.

(w) Yajnavalkya, Vrihaspati, 1 Dig., 317, 318; 2 W. MacN., 278, 281.

(x) Per Pontifex, J., Johurra Bibee v. Strigopal, 1 Cal., 475; Sheo Pershad v. Saheb Lal, 20 Cal., 453.

(y) Sham Sunder v. Achhan Kunwar, 25 I. A., 183; S. C., 21 All., 71.

(z) Rangayya Chetti v. Thanikachalla, 19 Mad., 74.

all the other members of the family, and if the property is sold under a decree obtained against the mortgagors alone, the sale cannot be set aside by the other members, merely on the ground that they were not parties to the suit (a). Debts contracted or conveyances executed by any individual member of a Joint Family, for his own personal benefit, will not bind the interests of the other members (b). It is said, however, that a subsequent promise by one member of a family to pay the individual debt of another member, previously contracted, would bind him (c). But such a promise would now be held invalid for want of consideration (d).

(a) Daulat Ram v. Mehr Chand, 14 I. A., 187; S. C., 15 Cal., 70.
 (b) Venkatasami v. Kuppaian, 1 Mad., 354; Guruvappa v. Thimma, 10

Mad., 316.

(c) Narada, iii., § 17; Vrihaspati, Katyayana, 1 Dig., 316, 317.

(d) Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), § 25.

CHAPTER X.

ALIENATIONS.

§ 334. THE law of alienation falls naturally into two Division of Sub-branches, according as the property in question is joint or ^{ject.}
 several. Further distinctions arise under each head with respect to the nature of the property, as being movable or immovable. Again; under the first branch, the person who makes the alienation may do so, in his capacity of father of the family, or manager of the corporation, or merely as a private member of the corporation. Again; the act in dispute may purport to dispose of more than the alienor's share in the entire property, or of a portion equal to, or less than, his share. Finally; in each particular instance the validity of the transaction will vary, according as it is decided by the law of the Mitakshara or of the Daya Bhaga. I shall first examine the position of the father of the family under Mitakshara law.

§ 335. I have already explained the process by which the father descended from being the head of the Patriarchal Family to be the manager of a Joint Family, in which the sons acquired by birth rights almost equal to his own (a). But in respect of movables he was still asserted by Vijnanesvara to possess a larger power of disposition, even though they were ancestral. The texts upon which he founds this opinion may either be a survival from the period when the father actually possessed a higher power than belongs to him at present, or, more probably, merely indicate the authority which the manager of a family would necessarily possess over the class of articles which would come under the head of movables in early times (b). In fact Vijnanesvara himself does not claim for the father an absolute power of disposing of movables at his own over movables.

Power of father

Power over ancestral movables.

(a) See ante § 231, 244.

(b) See ante § 255, 256.

pleasure, but only an "independent power in the disposal of them for indispensable acts of duty, and for purposes prescribed by texts of law, as gifts through affection, support of the family, relief from distress and so forth," and this is the view taken by Sir Thomas Strange and Dr. Mayr (c). Mr. Colebrooke and Mr. MacNaghten, however, appear to lay it down that, in regard to ancestral movables, the power of the father is only limited by his own discretion, and by a sense of spiritual responsibility (d). The point has arisen incidentally in several cases, but until recently has never received a full discussion. In a case in the High Court of Bengal, it was said: "By the Mitakshara law the son has a vested right of inheritance in the ancestral immovable property; on the other hand, the father has it in his power to dispose as he likes of all acquired and all personal property" (e). This latter remark, however, was merely obiter dictum. In Madras a son sued his father for a partition of property, partly house property and partly jewels. As regards the latter, Bittleston, J., quoted the texts of the Mitakshara (I, i., § 21, 24) as showing that "it does not follow that the plaintiff has any right to complain of his father having made an unjust and partial distribution of them" (f). What the father was said by the plaintiff himself to have done was, that he gave the bulk of the jewels to the daughters of the family, only giving one to the wife of his son. Possibly this was only the sort of family arrangement which the Mayukha intimates as being within the powers of the head of the family (g). In any case the

Power over
ancestral
movables.

(c) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 27; Viramit., p. 16, § 30; 1 Stra. H. L., 20, 261; Mayr, p. 40. In the Punjab a father is said to be at liberty to make gifts of ancestral movable property without the consent of his male heirs, but not of immovable property, whether ancestral or self-acquired. Punjab Customary Law, ii., 102, 163, 178.

(d) 2 Stra. H. L., 9, 436, 441; 1 W. MacN., 3. The latter passage was cited with approval by the Privy Council in Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud, 6 M. I. A., 77, but this point was not then before them. M. Gibelin states the law with the same generality. 1 Gib., 126; 2 Gib., 14; and Dr. Wilson, Works, v., 69.

(e) Sudanund v. Bonomallee, Marsh., 320; S. C., 2 Hay, 205.

(f) Nallatambi v. Mukunda, 3 Mad. H. C., 455. See, too, per Turner, C. J., Ponnappa v. Pappuwayyengar, 4 Mad., 47.

(g) V. May., iv., 1, § 5; ante § 255.

remark was extra-judicial, as the learned Judge went on to decide that none of the property sued for was ancestral. In a later Madras case, a son had sued for a declaration of his right to succeed to the whole of the ancestral property, movable and immovable, in his father's possession, and for an injunction against waste. The original and appellate Courts decreed in his favour as regards the immovable, but not as regards the movable, property, "on the ground that the defendant had the absolute right to dispose of such portion." The High Court dismissed the suit, considering that the plaintiff was claiming a right to the whole property, which he did not possess. They did not notice the distinction taken below between movables and immovables, simply observing, "as only son he has a present proprietary interest in one undivided moiety of the property, and nothing more. Consequently, the suit for the establishment of an existing reversionary right in him as heir to the whole property on the death of the defendant, and the decrees declaring such rights, are groundless" (h). In the North-West Provinces the point has been spoken of as being "the subject of much discussion." The question then before the Court was whether ancestral movables were chargeable with maintenance. This it was held that they were, since whatever might be the father's power of disposal, they were not the subject of such separate ownership by him as to be free from the ordinary charges affecting Hindu inheritance (i). In one case in the Privy Council, where the extent of a father's power of disposal inter vivos became material, as determining his testamentary power, the Judicial Committee said that in cases under the Mitakshara law, "a Hindu without male descendants may dispose by will of his separate and self-acquired property, whether movable or immovable; and that one having male descendants may so dispose of self-acquired property, if movable, subject perhaps to the restriction that he cannot wholly disinherit

Power over
ancestral
movables.

(h) Rayacharlu v. Venkataramaniah, 4 Mad. H. C., 60.

(i) Shib Dayee v. Doorga Pershad, 4 N.-W. P., 63.

any one of such descendants" (k). Here it is not suggested that he had any such power over movables, when not self-acquired but ancestral. A case of exactly that nature was recently before the Privy Council on appeal from Madras. There it was attempted to set aside a will by which the testator left only about one-eleventh of his whole property to his only son, bequeathing the rest to his divided brother. The property was all movable (l). The lower Court found that the property was self-acquired, and therefore held the will valid. On appeal the entire argument before the Judicial Committee was directed to overthrow, or support, this finding. It was never contended on behalf of the respondent in any of the Courts that the father would have had an absolute power of disposition over the property, as being movable, even if it was ancestral—though such an argument, if well founded, would have been a complete answer to the contention of the appellant (m). Of course this is only a negative inference. But considering the experience of the Counsel who appeared for the respondent, it seems deserving of much weight. The point was raised in a somewhat similar case in Bombay, and decided. There a Hindu under the Mitakshara law died possessed of a large amount of ancestral movable property, leaving two undivided sons. By his will he bequeathed to one of his sons nearly the whole of the property. The Court, after reviewing the provisions of the Mitakshara and Mayukha, and the dicta in Marshall and 12 Moore I. A. already quoted (ante notes (e, k)), set aside the will. They held that it could not be valid either as a gift or a partition. They said: "It would be impossible to hold a gift of the great bulk of the family property to one son, to the exclusion of the other, to be a gift prescribed by texts of law; for the texts which

Power over ancestral
movables.

(k) Beer Pertab v. Maharajah Rajender (Hunsapore), 12 M. I. A., 38; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 15.

(l) It is not so stated in the report, probably because no argument was directed to the point, but the fact was so. It was all in Government paper, except two or three houses of trifling value.—J. D. M.

(m) Pauliem Valloo v. Pauliem Sooryah, 4 I. A., 109; S. C., 1 Mad., 252.

we next quote distinctly prohibit such an unequal distribution" (n). That is to say, the Court adopted the opinion of Sir Thomas Strange, that the father has a special power of dealing with ancestral movable property, but only for certain very special purposes, specified by the Mitakshara. Whenever the case arises again, the contention probably will be to bring the alienation within those purposes (*n*³). In Pondicherry in 1893 the Consultative Committee laid it down that in regard to ancestral property, whether movable or immovable, the rights of the sons were equal to those of their father (o).

§ 336. Except in this instance, and in regard to the liability for his debts (§ 308), there is under Mitakshara law no distinction between a father and his sons. They are simply coparceners (p). So long as he is capable, the father is the head and manager of the family. He is entitled to the possession of the joint property. He directs the concerns of the family within itself, and represents it to the world (q). But as regards substantial proprietorship, he has no greater interest in the joint property than any of his sons. If the property is ancestral, each by birth acquires an interest equal to his own. If it is acquired by joint labour or joint funds, then, from the very nature of the case, all stand on the same footing. And in the same manner his grandsons and great-grandsons severally take an interest on their respective births in the rights of their fathers who represent them, and therefore in unascertained shares of the entire property (§ 271). It is, therefore, an established rule that a father can make no disposition of the joint property which will prejudice

Authority of father restricted by rights of issue.

(n) Lakshman v. Ramchandra, 1 Bom., 561, affd. 7 I. A., 181; practically overruling the previous decision in Ramchandra v. Mahadev, 1 Bom. H. C., Appx. 76 (2nd ed.); acc. Chatturbhoj v. Dharamsi, 9 Bom., 438. See also per curiam, 10 Bom., p. 545; Baba v. Timma, 7 Mad., 357; Rathnam v. Sivabramania, 16 Mad., 353.

(o) Bachoo v. Mankorebai, 29 Bom., 51.

(p) Sorg H. L., 191; Co. Con., 381.

(q) See per curiam, Suraj Bansi v. Sheo Prashad, 6 I. A., p. 100; Palanivelappa v. Mamaru, 2 Mad. H. C., 417; Rayacharlu v. Venkataramiah, 4 Mad., H. C., 61; Shudanund v. Bonomalee, 6 Suth., 256; Latti Kuar v. Ganga, 7 N.-W. P., 279.

(g) Buldeo v. Sham Lal, 1 All., 77.

his issue, unless he obtains their assent, if they are able to give it, or unless there is some established necessity, or moral, or religious obligation to justify the transaction. Where his acts are questioned, he has not even the benefit of a presumption in his favour that they were necessary or justifiable (r). And it makes not the least difference whether the disposition is in favour of a stranger, or one of the family themselves. The test is, whether it is an infringement upon their vested rights (s). For instance, where the father had given a lease of land to the family dewan as a reward for faithful services, during the minority, and therefore without the consent, of his sons, the lease was set aside (t). On the same principle, it has been held that one of several coparceners has a right to forbid the common property being dealt with in any way that alters its character; as, for instance, by building upon it (u); or that places any part of it in the exclusive possession of one, so as to bar the joint rights of the others (v). Of course, it would be otherwise if such acts were done in the ordinary course of management, as by building on building-land, or leasing out houses held as an investment.

Life estates.

§ 337. In some cases property is vested in its holder only for life, or during good behaviour, as remuneration for services to be rendered from time to time to the Government, the village or the like. For instance, lands held on Ghatwali tenure in Bengal, or on Vatan tenure in Bombay, or by Karnams in Madras. Here, from the nature of the tenure, the land is neither alienable by the

(r) Gurusami v. Ganapathia, 5 Mad., 337; Subramaniya v. Sadasiva, 8 Mad., 75; Chinnaya v. Perumal, 13 Mad., 51.

(s) Sham Singh v. Mt. Umraotee, 2 S. D., 75 (92); Motee Lall v. Mitterjeet, 6 S. D., 71 (82); Rajaram Tewari v. Lachman, 8 Suth., 15; Ganga Bisheshar v. Pithi, 2 All., 635; Bala v. Boleji, 22 Bom., 825; Rajakkal v. Subbanna, 16 Mad., 84.

(t) Pratabnarayan v. Court of Wards, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 21; S. C., sub nomine, Protab Narain v. Court of Wards, 11 Suth., 343; Muttumaran v. Lakshmi, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 227.

(u) Jankee v. Bukhooree, S. D. of 1856, 761; Indurdeonarain v. Toolseonarain, S. D. of 1857, 765; Guru Das v. Bijaya, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 108; S. C., 10 Suth., 171; Sheepersad v. Leela, 12 B. L. R., 185; S. C., 20 Suth., 160.

(v) Stalkart v. Gopal, 12 B. L. R., 197; S. C., 20 Suth., 168.

holder, nor capable of being seized in execution of a decree against him. If upon his death it passes to his heir as successor, the latter takes it as successor, and not as heir. Consequently, it is not liable in his hands as assets for payment of the debts of the last holder (w).

§ 338. Until lately it was the settled usage of those provinces of India which administer Mitakshara law, that the holder of an ancestral impartible estate could not alien or encumber it beyond his own life, so as to bind his coparceners, except for purposes beneficial to the family and not merely to himself. It is very possible that a usage to this effect may have sprung up quite independently of the Mitakshara or any other law. The leading examples of estates of this class were in the nature of Royalties, whose owners did pretty much what they pleased under Native rule. A grant by one of these feudal sovereigns to a subject, not too powerful to be affronted with impunity, would naturally be set aside by his successor; not on any refined considerations of law, but simply because the power to grant could not rank higher than the power to revoke. Many others were granted on Military tenure, when of course no one of the successive tenants could deal with the land so as to deprive the next holder of the source from which his duties might be discharged. Even a larger number originated from the practice of the Muhammedan rulers of entrusting districts to the charge and administration of revenue officials. These collected the Government share of the produce from the ryots, keeping a considerable portion to pay themselves. Gradually these offices came to be held for life, then they became hereditary, and finally the officials came to be regarded as proprietors of the districts which they

Rights of the holder of an impartible estate under Mitakshara law.

(w) Nilmoni Singh v. Bakranath, 9 I. A., 104; Jaggivandas v. Imdad, 6 Bom., 211; Anundo Rai v. Kali Prosad, 10 Cal., 677; Muppidi Papaya v. Ramaya, 7 Mad., 85. See as to the result of an abolition of the services Radhabai v. Anantrav, 9 Bom., 198; Appaji Bapuji v. Keshav Shunrav, 15 Bom., 13. Akharagpore Ghatwali, which is held under a Zemindar and not under the Government, is alienable absolutely, and not merely for the life of the Ghatwal. Tekait Kali v. Anund Roy, 15 I. A., 18; S. C., 15 Cal., 471; post §§ 396-401.

administered. Here again, the restriction on alienation, which had been a matter of course so long as the official character of the holder was recognised, continued after the officer had gradually raised himself into a head landlord. When these estates came under the control of British tribunals, the exercise of such a right had to be placed upon a legal basis. The decisions of the Madras Sudder Court, in the early part of the century, while uniformly maintaining the substantive doctrine, varied from time to time in the grounds upon which it was supported. Ultimately, in the case of Hindus, it was rested upon the general principles by which the Mitakshara law restrains the head of a family in his dealings with the joint property. Where the impartible estate was ancestral it became the property, not only of each successive holder, but of him and of those who in respect of partible property would be his coparceners. It was true that they could not claim a share of either the corpus or the annual income, but it was contended that they had a vested interest in the succession which the holder for the time being could not defeat at his pleasure. It was held that these conflicting rights could be reconciled by allowing each holder to alienate for his own life, but not longer, unless for purposes of family necessity. In support of this view it was pointed out that the Privy Council had frequently treated an ancestral impartible estate as joint property when questions of succession arose, and that it might with equal propriety be treated as such for purposes of alienation (x). A doctrine which was in this way removed from the basis of usage, and rested upon certain definite propositions of law, naturally became open to attack. The first assault upon it was delivered by Couch, C. J., in a case before the High Court of Bengal. There forfeiture.

Effect of a

(x) I have not thought it necessary to set out again the series of decisions in the Madras Presidency which established the practice above referred to. They will be found in §§ 312 and 313 of the 4th ed. of this work, and the most of them are discussed in the judgment of the Privy Council in the Pittapur case, 26 I. A., p. 91, post § 341. See as to the effect of a long course of judicial decisions which are subsequently held to have been erroneous 13 M. I. A., 500; 2 I. A., 250; 3 App. Ca., p. 787; 5 App. Ca., p. 239 [1898]; A. C., p. 605.

an impartible estate, which descended by the law of primogeniture, was held during the mutiny by a rebel. He was sentenced to death, and his estate confiscated under Act XXV of 1857. (Native Army, Forfeiture for mutiny.) The family was governed by Mitakshara law. The son of the rebel claimed the estate, on the ground that by birth a joint interest in the estate vested in him, and that the confiscation could only apply to the life interest of his father. This contention was overruled. The Chief Justice said: "The question appears to be reduced to this:—Is the law of Mitakshara, by which each son has by birth a property in the paternal or ancestral estate (ch. i., s. 1, v., 27) consistent with the custom that the estate is impartible, and descends to the eldest son? The property by birth gives to each son a right to compel the father to divide the estate, which is inconsistent with the estate being impartible. On the father's death the whole estate goes to the eldest son, and the property by birth in the others has no effect. Property by birth in such an estate is a right which can never be enjoyed by the younger sons. It is not only not necessary to secure the estate to the eldest son, but if it had effect in respect to the younger sons, it would prevent it. This part of the Mitakshara law cannot be reconciled with the custom, and we think we should hold it is not applicable to this estate." "The plaintiff's case, in truth, is that only the eldest son becomes a co-owner with his father, which is not the law of the Mitakshara. Either all the sons must become so or none of them do, and the right of the eldest is only to inherit on his father's death" (y).

Right of son to impartible property denied.

§ 339. The same question arose again in the case of the Patkoom Raj in Chota Nagpore (z), where upon the death of one Rajah his successor claimed the right to set aside grants which had been made by the deceased for the Effects of grants for maintenance.

(y) Thakoor Kapilnauth v. The Government, 13 B. L. R., 445, 458, 460; S. C., 22 Suth., 17. The Court in fact found that the suit was barred by limitation.

(z) Uddoy Aditya Deb v. Jadubal, 5 Cal., 113. See as to the law which governed the family, p. 116.

maintenance of the junior members. No question of Mitakshara law arose, and it seems to have been assumed that the case was governed by Bengal law, so far as that law was applicable to the case. The argument appears to have been that "the very nature of the grant which created a Raj of this description, only gave each successive owner of the grant restricted rights." No evidence was adduced of any special terms annexed to the original grant, and it appeared that similar alienations had been customary in the family. The Court rejected the suits, saying: "The estate is an impartible one, but the effect of impartibility does not seem to interfere with the ordinary law as to rights beyond this, that it makes the estate pass to the eldest son. His right to alienate under the ordinary law can only be restrained by some family custom, which has the effect of overriding and controlling the general law." This of course would be so under Bengal law. This decision was affirmed on appeal. The Judicial Committee referred to a former decision of their own in the case of the Pacheet Raj, as showing that the mere impartibility of an estate did not render it inalienable, but that inalienability depended upon family custom which would require to be proved (a). Here again the case was under Bengal law. In a later case a dispute arose between several members of a Mitakshara priestly family, to whom a grant had been made by the Rajah of Chota Nagpore of a nature known as putro putrodik, which was said to be an hereditary grant, in which all the members of a Mitakshara family would share, and which would descend from father to son like any other ancestral property. One of the members asserted that a succeeding Rajah had revoked the joint grant, and conferred the whole property upon himself. The High Court held that such a revocation was unlawful. Garth, C. J., said: "The fact that the Raj is impartible does not prevent the Maharajah for the time being from making grants of the land in perpetuity" (b). Here again it does not appear that the Raj of Chota Nagpore was governed by any law but that of Bengal. From the remarks of Mr. Justice Mitter in the previous case that is the law which seems to govern the district in question (c).

(a) Uditya Deb v. Jadub Lal, 8 I. A., 248, citing Anund Lal v. Maharajah Dheraj Gurrood, 5 M. I. A., 82.

§ 340. In 1888, however, a decision was given by the Privy Council in a case governed by the Mitakshara law, which struck at the root of all the previous rulings (d). The Rajah of Maholi in the North-Western Provinces had alienated seventeen of the most valuable villages of his estate in perpetuity in favour of his junior wife. His son sued for a declaration that the Rajah had, according to Hindu law, no right "under any circumstances except to enjoy possession of the estate during his lifetime," and had no power to alien any part of it. This claim of course was stated too widely to be correct, but the proposition really contended for was rightly laid down by the Court as follows: "In other words the plaintiff claims that, except in so far as from the nature of the estate they are inapplicable, his case must be determined according to the principles of the Hindu law, which govern joint families and their property." After examining the previous decisions of the Judicial Committee, the Court said: "If we have correctly held that the Maholi Raj estate is joint family property, then, save for urgent or necessary expenses of the family, no one member, even though he stands in the position of father, or manager, can alienate it, or any part of it, without the consent of all. Such at least is the view of the Hindu Law that has been always recognised by this Court in a long, and as far as we know, unbroken series of decisions from which we should hesitate to depart." On

(b) Narain Khootea v. Lokenath, 7 Cal., 461.

(c) 5 Cal., p. 116. This decision seems to have been misunderstood in the case next discussed where Sir Richard Couch refers to it as the case of a Mitakshara family, as if it was governed by Mitakshara law (15 I. A., p. 65); that was the law which governed the rights of the grantees inter se, but the validity and effect of the grant depended on the law of the grantor.

(d) Rani Sartaj Kuari v. Rani Deoraj, 15 I. A., 51; S. C., 10 All., 272.

Rani Sartaj Kuari's case.

appeal to the Judicial Committee no reference was made to the numerous Madras decisions on the subject, which of course added nothing to the argument relied on by the Allahabad High Court, but were important as showing the wide extent and persistency of a course of decisions, now held to be erroneous. Nor does the attention of the Committee appear to have been drawn to the fact that all the cases on which they seem to rely, except the forfeiture case, were really beside the question, as being either cases under Bengal law, or alienations of self-acquired property. Their Lordships said: "The property in the paternal or ancestral estate acquired by birth under the Mitakshara law is, in their Lordships' opinion, so connected with the right to a partition, that it does not exist where there is no right to it. In the Hunsapore case (e) there was a right to have babuana allowances as there is in this case, but that was not thought to create a community of interest which would be a restraint upon alienation. By the custom or usage the eldest son succeeds to the whole estate on the death of the father, as he would if the property were held in severalty. It is difficult to reconcile this mode of succession with the rights of a Joint Family and to hold that there is a joint ownership which is a restraint upon alienation. It is not so difficult where the holder of the estate has no son, and it is necessary to decide who is to succeed." "If, as their Lordships are of opinion, the eldest son, where the Mitakshara law prevails, and there is the custom of primogeniture, does not become a co-sharer with his father in the estate, the inalienability of the estate depends upon custom, which must be proved, or, it may be in some cases, upon the nature of the tenure." "The absence of evidence of an alienation without any evidence of facts which would make it probable that an alienation would have been made, cannot be accepted as proof of a custom of inalienability."

(e) 12 M. I. A., 1. There the Raj was the self-acquired property of the alienor (p. 34), and, therefore, even under Mitakshara law, was absolutely at his disposal.

§ 341. This decision was, of course, followed, though Followed in Madras. reluctantly, by the Madras High Court. The son of the Shivagunga Zemindar sued to set aside a mining lease for 20 years granted by his late father. The High Court found "that the transaction was not one which the manager of a Joint Hindu Family, acting with ordinary care and prudence, in the exercise of his qualified power of dealing with family property should conclude." They said in reference to the recent decisions of the Privy Council: "These decisions are in direct conflict with the principle upon which the whole series of decisions in this Presidency as to the right of a zemindar to alienate depends. It has been invariably held that acts and alienations by the holder of an impartible Zemindary made to enure beyond his lifetime will, if otherwise than bonâ fide, and if prejudicial to the family, be set aside." Yielding, however, to the authority of the Judicial Committee, they directed an issue to enquire whether any family custom to restrain alienation could be made out. Of course none such could be established, and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed (f).

The same question arose again in a different form. The Pittapur case. The Rajah of Pittapur, after a long period of childless marriage, adopted a son. Many years after the adoption it was announced that one of his wives had given birth to a son. The Rajah died shortly afterwards, leaving a will by which all his property was bequeathed to the infant, subject to a maintenance for the adopted son. The latter brought a suit in which he contended that the child was supposititious and that the will was invalid. The original Court found both contentions in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal the High Court did not enter upon the question of legitimacy, but decided in favour of the defendant on the strength of the will. They held that the Privy Council having decided (f) Beresford v. Rama Subba, 12 Mad., 197; Rup Singh v. Purbhu Narain, 20 All., 537. See Sivasubramania v. Krishnammal, 18 Mad., 287, where a custom of inalienability was made out. Even where such a custom is proved the proprietor may still alienate for legal necessity. Gopal Prasad v. Raghunath, 32 Cal., 158.

in Sartaj Kuari's case that the Rajah might have given away any part of his estate to a stranger, he could equally do so by a will and therefore the plaintiff had no title. The question arising out of the will is noticed in its proper place (post § 418). On appeal to the Privy Council, it was of course impossible to contend against its own decision, but it was argued that a course of decisions extending over nearly three-quarters of a century, even assuming them to be all wrong, had created a new state of things on the principle Communis error facit legem, which the Privy Council would not disturb. It was further argued that the decisions themselves evidenced a custom restricting alienation by the possessor of an impartible estate which attached itself to every such estate, and therefore brought it within the exception stated by the Judicial Committee in Sartaj Kuari's case. Both these contentions were rejected. As to the former, the Committee said that the series of Madras decisions had varied from time to time in the grounds upon which they were based, and, therefore "in their Lordships' opinion, this is not a case to which they should apply the doctrine that, where there is a long course of decisions, they ought not to be reversed, and the law thus altered." As to the second contention the Committee considered that this was not a case of an ancient and invariable usage modifying the common law. "This custom now relied upon did not modify the law. It had no force independent of the law. There is no proof here of any custom or usage against alienation which the Courts in India should recognise as having the force of law" (g).

§ 342. Dispositions of property by a father can, of course, only be objected to by those who have a joint

Right to object.

(g) Venkata Surya Mahipati Rama Krishna Rao v. The Court of Wards, 26 I. A., 83; S. C., 22 Mad., 383; affg. 20 Mad., 167. These decisions were received with such dissatisfaction in Madras, that the Local Legislature intervened, and practically repealed them as regards that Presidency (Madra Acts II of 1902, II of 1903, II of 1904). Independently of legislation, the effect of the Allahabad and Madras rulings, as regards transactions entered into before they were passed, has been much attenuated by the recent decision of the Judicial Committee in Abdul Aziz Khan v. Appayasami Naicker, 31 I. A., 1; S. C., 27 Mad., 131.

interest with him in the property, either by joint acquisition, or by birth. Where the objection is based on the latter ground, it is necessary to show that such an interest vested in the objector at his birth, or by his birth. Therefore, a son cannot object to alienations validly made by his father before he was born or begotten, because he could only by birth obtain an interest in property which was then existing in his ancestor. Hence, if at the time of the alienation there had been no one in existence whose assent was necessary, or if those who were then in existence had consented, he could not afterwards object on the ground that there was no necessity for the transaction (h). Where, however, the father had contracted to sell family land, of which he was not in possession, as soon as he obtained possession, and after the contract, but before possession, a son was born, it was held that a decree for specific performance was not binding on the son, who had not been made a party to the suit. The Court held that the same decision would have been proper in the case of a son born after contract for sale, but before actual transfer (i). On the other hand, if the alienation was made by a father without necessity, and without the consent of sons then living, it would not only be invalid against them, but also against any son born before they had ratified the transaction; and no consent given by them after his birth would render it binding upon him (k). In one case the pundits advised the Madras Sudder Court that the rule as to the rights of sons extended so far, that a man "had not the power to dispose of all his property so long as he was able to beget children, but that he might alienate a small portion of the same, if by so doing he did not deprive his issue then born, or that might be born to him, of the means of support" (l).

Interest by birth.

(h) Jado v. Mt. Rance, 5 N.-W. P., 113; Raja Ram Tewary v. Luchmun, 8 Suth., 16, 21; Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I. A., 321; S. C., 15 B. I. R., 187; S. C., 22 Suth., 56. A mere right to bring a suit, or to make a representation to Government for the enlargement of a grant, on the ground of fraud, is not such a right as vests in a son by birth. Chaudhri Ujagar v. Chandhri Pitam, 8 I. A., 190; S. C., sub nomine, Ujagar v. Pitam, 4 All., 120.

(i) Pommambala v. Sundarappayar, 20 Mad., 354.

(k) Hurodoot v. Beer Narain, 11 Suth., 480.

(l) Soobbaputten v. Jungameeah, Mad. Dec. of 1851, 3.

This futwah evidently rested on a text of Vyasa cited in the Mitakshara (I, i., § 27): "They who are born, and they who are yet unbegotten, and they who are still in the womb, require the means of support. No gift or sale should therefore be made." But this text, so far as it applies to sons yet unbegotten was treated by the Madras High Court as merely a moral precept, and they held that the rights of an unborn son only extended to the case of one who was in the womb at the time of the transaction complained of (m). Whether a son could defeat an alienation for value made when he was in gremio matris, as he could a gift or devise, was a point which, after some indecision, the same Court has finally settled in favour of the son (n).

Adopted son.

§ 343. An adopted son stands in exactly the same position as a natural-born son, and has the same right to object to his father's alienations. In two cases pundits have relied on the above text of Vyasa, as enabling a son who had been adopted under an authority from the father to set aside alienations made by the father himself, before the adoption, but after the authority; the ground being that the possession of an authority to adopt by the widow was equivalent to a pregnancy (o). But this principle must now be taken as being overruled (p), and there can be no doubt that the interest of an adopted son arises for the first time on his adoption, and that he cannot after his adoption set aside any transaction which was valid when it took place, at all events as against his adopting father (q).

Alienation after authority.

(m) Yekejamian v. Agniswarian, 4 Mad. H. C., 307. See Parichat v. Zalim, 1 L. A., 159, where the Privy Council declined to pronounce upon the point and Baluant Singh v. Rani Kishori, 25 L. A., 54, p. 68; S. C., 20 All., 267, p. 235, where the Privy Council refused to apply the texts against alienation to the case of unbegotten children, post § 344.

(n) Minakshi v. Virappa, 8 Mad., 89; Sabapathi v. Somasundaram, 16 Mad., 76.

(o) Ram Kishen v. Mt. Stri Muttee, 3 S. D., 367 (489, 495); Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo, 6 M. I. A., 320, and per curiam, Durma v. Coomara, Mad. Dec. of 1852, 117.

(p) See ante § 197, 198.

(q) Sudanund Soorjoomonee, 11 Suth., 436; Rambhat v. Lakshman, 5 Bom., 630.

§ 344. A father who is separated from his sons can, of course, dispose at pleasure, not only of his share, but of all property acquired after partition; since as to the former the sons have relinquished the rights they obtained by birth, and as to the latter they never had any such rights (r). Prima facie one would imagine the same rule must apply as to self-acquisition, and on the same grounds. Self-acquisition ex vi termini does not belong to the co-heirs (s), and in one passage Vijnanesvara expressly states that "the son must acquiesce in the father's disposal of his own self-acquired property" (t). In an earlier passage, however, he states that the father "is subject to the control of his sons and the rest, in regard to the immovable estate, whether acquired by himself, or inherited from his father or other predecessor," citing as an authority the text of Vyasa above quoted (u). Hence, a conflict of decision has arisen as to whether self-acquired immovables are absolutely at the father's disposal, or not. In Madras it has been held that they are not, and in this opinion Mr. Colebrooke and Sir Thomas Strange concur (v). There is also a decision of the High Court of the North-West Provinces to the same effect (w). In Pondicherry the law was laid down in 1859 without any restriction that a father could dispose absolutely, at his own pleasure, of all his self-acquired property, movable or immovable, even as against his children. Subsequently the Courts appear to have leant to the rules which prohibit a father absolutely to disinherit his children, or to make an unequal partition among them. They then set themselves to fix what was the disposable Separate property.

Self-acquisitions.

Self-acquired immovable property.

(r) Narada, xiii., § 43; Vivada Chintamani, 314; Mitakshara, i., 1, § 80; Juvav v. Jaki, Mad. Dec. of 1862, 1. See as to the early law, ante § 236.

(s) Mitakshara, i., 4, § 1, 2.

(t) Mitakshara, i., 5, § 10.

(u) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 27; ante § 342. See the earlier law discussed, ante § 257, 258.

(v) 1 Stra. H. L., 261; 2 Stra. H. L., 436—441, 450; Muttumaran v. Lakshmi, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 227; Konala v. Gangadhera, Mad. Dec. of 1862, 41. See Meenatchee v. Chelumbra, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 61; per curiam, Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C., 55.

(w) Madhasookh v. Budree, 1 N.-W. P., 153.

fraction of his property which was excluded from this rule, and they ended by fixing it arbitrarily at one-eighth, the rights of his family being available against the residue (x). On the other hand, Mr. W. MacNaghten says, in speaking of a father's powers, "with respect to real property acquired or recovered by the occupant, he is at liberty to make any alienation or distribution which he may think fit, subject only to spiritual responsibility" (y). And this was expressly determined to be the law by the High Court of Bengal on a full examination of all the native texts. They said that "the apparent conflict between the passages of the Mitakshara is reconciled, if the right of the sons in the self-acquired property of the father is treated as an imperfect right incapable of being enforced" (z). The Vivada Chintamani, which is the ruling authority in the Mithila, but which is really little more than a compendium of the Mitakshara, states without any exception that a father may dispose of his self-acquired property at his pleasure, and this has been affirmed to be the law of that district by the Privy Council, and was assumed to be the law on appeal from the Sudder Court of the North-West Provinces (a). The same rule has been laid down by the High Courts of Bombay, Allahabad and Madras (b). Finally the case came on for direct decision on appeal from the High Court of Allahabad, and the Judicial Committee, on a review of all the texts and rulings, held that the father of an undivided family subject to the Mitakshara law, had full power of disposition over his (x) Sorg H. L., 196--199.

(y) 1 W. MacN., 2 cited with approval in the Privy Council, but as to a different point; Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud, 6 M. I. A., 77. See, too, Rungama v. Atchama, 4 M. I. A., 1, 103; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 57.

(z) Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh, 6 Suth., 71; Ojoodhya v. Ramsarun, ib., 77; Rajaram Tewary v. Luchman, 8 Suth., 15; Sudanund v. Soorjo Monee, 11 Suth., 436.

(a) Vivada Chintamani, 76, 229, but see p. 309; Bishen Perakash v. Bawa, (P. C.), 12 B. L. R., 430; S. C., 20 Suth., 137; affirming the decision of the lower Court, 10 Suth., 287, from which it appears that the property in dispute was immovable. Nana Nuran v. Hurce Punth, 9 M. I. A., 96, 121.

(b) Gangabai v. Vamanaji, 2 Bom. H. C., 318; Sital v. Madho, 1 All., 894; Subbaya v. Surayya 10 Mad., 251.

self-acquired immovable property. They said of the conflicting texts of the Mitakshara "all these old text books and commentaries are apt to mingle religious and moral considerations, not being positive laws with rules intended for positive laws. It is, as their Lordships think, the most reasonable inference that the precepts in Mit., I, sect. 1, belong to the former class of precepts, and those of Sections 4 & 5 to the latter" (c). And similarly a man is at perfect liberty to dispose of property which he has inherited collaterally, or in such a mode that his descendants do not by birth acquire an interest in it (d). And whatever be the nature of the property, or the mode in which it has been acquired, a man without issue may dispose of it at his pleasure, as against his wife, or daughters, or his remote descendants, or his collateral relations (e). Of course, as regards collaterals, it is assumed that it has not been acquired by him in such a way as to make them coparceners with him in respect of it (f).

Persons who have no interest by birth.

§ 345. Any want of capacity on the part of the father to alienate the family property may be supplied by the consent of the coparceners. Such consent may either be express, or implied from their conduct at or after the time of the transaction (g). Where the property is invested in trade, or in any other mercantile business, the manager of the property will be assumed to possess the authority usually exercised by persons carrying on such business (h). And, of course, ratification will supply the want of an original consent; such a ratification will be inferred where Consent.

(c) Rao Balwant Singh v. Rani Keshori, 25 I. A., 54, p. 67; S. C., 20 All., 267.
(d) See ante § 275; Jugmohandas v. Munguldas, 10 Bom., 528.

(e) Mulraz v. Chalekany, 2 M. I. A., 54; Nagalutchmee v. Gopee, 6 M. I. A., 309; Narottam v. Narsandas, 3 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 6; Ajoodhia v. Kashee, 4 N.-W. P., 31. These were all cases of wills, which of course are less favoured than alienations inter vivos.

(f) Tayumana v. Perumal, 1 Mad. H. C., 51.

(g) Arunuga v. Ramasami, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 258; Vittal v. Ananta, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 37; Virasami v. Varada, ib., 146; Miller v. Runganath, 12 Cal., 389. See as to the presumption arising from the fact that the father has been sued upon, and has properly defended the interests of the family as regards a particular transaction and that the sons have been aware of the litigation. Kunjan Chetti v. Sidda Pillai, 22 Mad., 461.

(h) Bemmola v. Mohun, 5 Cal., 792; Samalbhai v. Someshwar, 5 Bom., 38; in re Haroon Mohamed, 14 Bom., 169, p. 194; ante § 333.

a son, with full knowledge of all the facts, takes possession of, and retains that which has been purchased with the proceeds of the property disposed of (i). Whether the consent of all the coparceners is necessary will depend upon the question, which will be discussed hereafter, as to the power of one of several to dispose of his share (§ 353). If it is the law that he can do so, then, of course, the consent of some would bind their own shares, though not the shares of the dissenting members. If the contrary is the law, then the consent of all would be required to give any validity to the transaction (k). Where a grandfather alienates with the consent of his son, that consent binds an after-born grandson. But where the grandson is already in existence, and has taken a vested interest, his father's consent would not of itself bind him (l).

§ 346. Circumstances of necessity will also justify a father, as head of the family, in disposing of any part of the family property. In the Mitakshara the explanation which follows the text of Vyasa—"Even a single individual may conclude a donation, mortgage, or sale of immovable property, during a season of distress, for the sake of the family, and especially for pious purposes"—seems to limit this authority to cases where the other coparceners are minors and incapable of giving their consent (m). And it has been held in Bengal that the consent of those who are of age cannot be dispensed with, even where the transaction is for the benefit of the family (n). The contrary, however, was held in other cases, and seems to have been Mr. Colebrooke's opinion (o).

(i) Gungabai v. Vamanaji, 2 Bom. H. C., 318; per curiam, Modhoo Dyal v. Kolbur, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1020; S. C., 9 Suth., 511.

(k) See a case where the consent of one member was given on the understanding that the others would also consent. Sivasami v. Sevugan, 25 Mad., 389.

(l) Burak v. Gredharee, 9 Suth., 337, where the second proposition seems to follow from the statement that the grandson, if alive at the alienation, would have had a cause of action, notwithstanding his father's consent.

(m) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 28, 29.

(n) Muthoor v. Bootun, 13 Suth., 30, acc. 1 Stra. H. L., 20, ante § 310.

(o) Juggurnath v. Doobo, 14 Suth., 80; 2 Stra. H. L., 340, 348; Dishambhur v. Sudasheeb, 1 Suth., 96, per Muttusawmy Iyer, J., Ponnappa v. Pappuvayangar, 4 Mad., p. 18.

The whole current of authorities appears to support the view that the manager of the family property has an implied authority to do whatever is best for all concerned, and that no individual can defeat this power merely by withholding his consent. He can refer a partition to arbitration, and the award, if in other respects valid, will bind the family (p). His authority, however, only extends to the family property. His contracts within his authority bind the entire family property, but they impose no personal liability upon any who do not sign them, or upon their separate property (q). The powers of the manager of a Hindu estate were very fully considered by the Privy Council in a case which is always referred to as settling the law on the subject (r). That was the case of a mother managing as guardian for an infant heir. Of course, a father, and head of the family, might have greater powers, but could not have less, and it has been repeatedly held that the principles laid down in that judgment apply equally to fathers, or other joint owners, when managing property governed by the Mitakshara law (s). Their Lordships said (p. 436): "The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge an estate not his own is, under the Hindu law, a limited and qualified power. It can only be exercised rightly in case of need, or for the benefit of the estate. But where, in the particular instance, the charge is one that a prudent owner would make, in order to benefit the estate, the bonâ fide lender is not affected by the precedent mismanagement of the Hunoomanpersaud's case.

(p) Jagannath v. Mannu Lal, 16 All., 231; Gharib-ullah v. Khalak, 30 I. A., 165; C. E., 25 All., 407.

(q) Chalamayya v. Varadayya, 22 Mad., 166.

(r) Hunoomanpersaud v. Mt. Babooee, 6 M. I. A., 393; S. C., 18 Suth., 81, note. The same rules apply to the case of one who is de facto, though not de jure manager, ibid., 412; Sheo Shanker v. Ram Shewak, 24 Cal., 77. See as to the position of one who deals with the holder of an impartible estate, ante § 339.

(s) Deotaree v. Damodhur, S. D. of 1859, 1643; Tandavaraya v. Valli, 1 Mad. H. C., 398; Soorendra v. Nuv-dun, 21 Suth., 196; to widows in dealing with their limited estate Kameswar v. Run Bahadoor, 8 I. A., 8; Jala Amarnath v. Achan Kuar, 19 I. A., 196; S. C., 14 All., 420; Maheshar Baksh v. Ratan Singh, 23 I. A., 57; S. C., 23 Cal., 766; Chotiram v. Narayandas, 11 Bom., 605. As to alienations by manager for idol, Kouwar Doorganath v. Ramchunder, 4 I. A., 52, p. 63. The manager for a lunatic has the same power. Goureenath v. Collector of Monghyr, 7 Suth., 5.

estate. The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it, in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded (t). But, of course, if that danger arises, or has arisen, from any misconduct to which the lender is or has been a party, he cannot take advantage of his own wrong, to support a charge in his own favour against the heir, grounded on a necessity which his wrong has helped to cause; therefore the lender in this case, unless he is shown to have acted malâ fide, will not be affected, though it be shown that, with better management, the estate might have been kept free from debt. Their Lordships think that the lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate (u). But they think that if he does so enquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge (v), and they do not think that under such circumstance he is bound to see to the application of the money (w). It is obvious that money to be secured on any estate is likely to be obtained

(t) See Deotaree v. Damoodhur, ub. sup. A mere manager cannot revive or pay time-barred debts, except against himself, and à fortiori could not pledge or sell the estate on their account. Chimaya v. Gurunatham, 5 Mad., 169; Dinkar v. Appaji, 20 Bom., 155. But it is said that a widow may do so as regards debts of her husband, post § 634. It is within the power of a manager or guardian to continue to pay interest upon a debt which is not barred or to acknowledge its existence, though the effect of such an act is to give a fresh starting point for the statute. Appu Row v. Venkanna, 14 Mysore, 107; Basalingappa v. Gurusanthappa, 16 Mysore, 38; Bhosker Tatya v. Vijalal, 17 Bom., 512.

(u) See Nowrutton v. Baboo Bonree, 6 Suth., 193; Pertab Bahadur v. Chityal Singh, 19 I. A., 33; Lala Amarnath v. Achon Kuar, 19 I. A., 196; S. C., 14 All., 420. He is not bound to inquire into the causes which produced the necessity, Mohabeer v. Joobha, 16 Suth., 221; S. C., 8 B. L. R., 38; Sheeraj v. Nukchedee, 14 Suth., 72. A stranger purchasing from a guardian who sells or mortgages under the authority of the Court, given under Act XL of 1859, § 18 (Bengal—Minors), is protected unless he himself has been guilty of actual fraud. Sikher Chund v. Dubputty, 5 Cal., 363. And see Act V of 1881, § 90 (Probate and Administration), as to the powers of alienation of an executor by leave of the Court.

(v) See Soorendro v. Nimdun, 21 Suth., 196; Ratnam v. Govindarajulu, 2 Mad., 339.

(w) See Sundarayan v. Sitaramayan, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 1, where the head of the family misappropriated the money which he had raised.

upon easier terms than a loan which rests on mere personal security, and that, therefore, the mere creation of a charge securing a proper debt, cannot be viewed as improvident management; the purposes for which a loan is wanted are often future, as respects the actual application, and a lender can rarely have, unless he enters on the management, the means of controlling and directing the actual application. Their Lordships do not think that a bonâ fide creditor should suffer when he has acted honestly and with due caution, but is himself deceived."

§ 347. The case before the Privy Council was one of mortgage and not of sale. But it is evident that the same principles would apply in either case. A prudent manager should, of course, where it is possible, pay off a debt from savings rather than by a sale of part of the estate (x), and it might be more prudent to raise money by mortgage than by sale. On the other hand, where the mortgage was at high interest, it might be more prudent to sell than to renew (y). In every case the question is one of fact, whether the transaction was one which a prudent owner, acting for his own benefit, would enter into. A sale of part of the property in order to raise money to pay off debts which bound the family, or to discharge the claims of Government upon the land, or to maintain the family, or to perform the necessary funeral or marriage or family ceremonies, would be proper if it was prudent or necessary (z). And where there are binding debts, which cannot otherwise be met, a sale will be justifiable to pay

(x) Bukshui v. Doolhin, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 423; S. C., 12 Suth., 337.
(y) Muthoora v. Bootun, 13 Suth., 30. Whether there is a necessity for borrowing at an unusually high rate of interest is itself a matter to which the lender should apply his mind, and the Court may reduce the interest while affirming the loan. Hurronath Roy v. Rundhir Singh, 18 I. A., 1; S. C., 18 Cal., 311.

(z) Bishambhur v. Sudasheeb, 1 Suth., 95; Sacaram v. Lucumabai, Perry, O. C., 129; Saravana v. Muttayi, 6 Mad. H. C., 371; Babaji v. Krishnaji, 2 Bom., 666; Narsimmiah v. Narasiah, 8 Mysore, 71. See Kullar v. Modho Dhyal, 5 Wym., 28, where it is said the transaction must be necessary, and not merely advantageous. The marriage expenses of a daughter's son are not a valid charge on the family property. Aswatia v. Subbaraya, 2 Mysore Ch. Ct., 62. Nor apparently the maintenance of an illegitimate daughter, Parvati v. Ganpatrao, 18 Bom. 177.

Necessity justifying sale.

them off, even though there was no actual pressure at the time in the shape of suits by the creditors (a). For the manager is not bound, and indeed ought not, to put the estate to the expense of actions. A fortiori, of course, such dealings will be justified where there are decrees in existence, whether, ex parte or otherwise, which could at any moment be enforced against the property (b). And the same circumstances which would justify the sale of part, might justify the sale of the whole property, though probably a very strong case would have to be made out.

Ancestral debts.

§ 348. It must be owned that the principle of the Mitakshara that sons have a right to control their father in the alienation of the family property, is almost nullified by the other principle that they are bound after his death to pay his debts, even though contracted without necessity; and by the logical extension of that principle, recently laid down by the Privy Council, that the father is entitled to sell the family property in order to pay of his own debts, which were not contracted for the benefit of the family, but which the sons would be under moral obligation to discharge (c). The mode of reconciling what is now, undoubtedly, a conflict of principles, may perhaps be sought by tracing back the law to a time when no such conflict existed. While the family continued in what I have called (§ 230) its Patriarchal State, the head of the family was not merely the manager of a partnership; he was the autocratic ruler of the family and of its possessions. Its property was his property. His debts were its debts. Probably it would seldom happen in a primitive state of society that any debts would be incurred which would require a sale of the property, but such a sale, if necessary, would be within the functions of the head of the house. If he died leaving debts unpaid, they would be discharged by the survivors, without any enquiry whether they had been contracted for the joint benefit, or for the special purposes, of the original debtor. The notion of a religious as well as a civil obligation to pay debts evidences the introduction of Brahmanical theories into a law which was previously founded upon merely natural justice. The kindred theory that the soul of a deceased debtor could not find repose till his debts were discharged probably grew up still later. The religious theory of obligation could well co-exist with the civil theory, as affording an additional sanction for a liability which was already recognised. The antiquity of the texts which state this religious theory shows that it had sprung up before the family bonds were relaxed, by allowing the sons to possess a co-ordinate interest in the property, and a right to restrain their father in his dealings with it. But even after this later development, natural equity and convenience would continue to attach a specially binding character to debts which were contracted by the official head and representative of the family, while the religious obligation would assume greater prominence in proportion as the secular obligation was weakened. The tendency would be to reconcile a conflict of rights, which was becoming important, by allowing the sons to restrain their father in his dealings with the property before they matured into transactions which conferred rights upon others. Where such rights had been created, it might fairly be held, if a struggle ensued between the interest of a son in the paternal property and the interest of a creditor or a purchaser claiming by virtue of the father's acts, that the latter interest should prevail, as being the holder, and enforced by a double sanction. Where the rival interest was that of a collateral coparcener, who was under no religious obligation to discharge the liabilities of the debtor, a contrary decision would result (d).

(a) Kaithav v. Roop Singh, 3 N.-W. P., 4.

(b) Purmessur v. Mt. Goolbee, 11 Suth., 446; Sheoraj v. Nukchedee, 14 Suth., 72.

(c) Girāharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I. A., 321; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 187; S. C., 22 Suth., 56, ante § 309.

(d) See per Muthusawmy Iyer, J., Ponnappa v. Pappuwayyanganar, 4 Mad., p. 33, and per Turner, C. J., ibid., p. 41 et seq.

Pious gifts.

Another ground upon which alienations are valid, though made without necessity, is in the case of pious gifts. These, no doubt, were looked upon by the Brahmans as being of general benefit to the family from the store of religious merit which they procured. The subject will be treated fully in the chapter on religious endowments (§ 434).

§ 349. Those who deal with a person who has only a limited interest in property, and who professes to dispose of a larger interest, are prima facie bound to make out the facts which authorise such a disposition. But the nature and extent of the proof which they must offer will vary according to the facts of the case. In Hunoomanpersaud's case, it was contended that the burthen was discharged by showing an advance to the manager, and the factum of a deed by him, and in support of this a dictum of the Agra Sudder Court was quoted (e). Upon this the Judicial Committee remarked: "It might be a very correct course to adopt with reference to suits of that particular character, which was one where the sons of a living father were, with his suspected collusion, attempting, in a suit against a creditor, to get rid of the charge on an ancestral estate created by the father, on the ground of the alleged misconduct of the father in extravagant waste of the estate. Now, it is to be observed, that a lender of money may reasonably be expected to prove the circumstances connected with his own particular loan, but cannot reasonably be expected to know, or come prepared with proof of, the antecedent economy and good conduct of the owner of an ancestral estate, whilst the antecedents of their father's career would be more likely to be in the knowledge of the sons, members of the same family, than of a stranger ;

(e) It has been laid down in Bombay that there is no presumption that a loan contracted by the manager has been contracted for a family purpose. Soiru v. Narayanrao, 18 Bom., 520. Where, however, the debt is the balance on a running account it is not necessary for the creditor to show the purpose for which each item was borrowed. It is sufficient to show that the family was in a chronic need of money for the current outgoings of the family life, or its trade necessities, and that the monies were advanced on the representation of the manager that they were needed for such objects. Krishna Ramaya v. Vasudev, 21 Bom 808.

consequently this dictum may perhaps be supported on the general principle that the allegation and proof of facts, presumably in his better knowledge, is to be looked for from the party who possess that better knowledge, as well as on the obvious ground in such suits of the danger of collusion between father and sons in fraud of the creditor of the former. Their Lordships think that the question on whom does the onus of proof lie in such suits as the present is one not capable of a general and inflexible answer. The presumption proper to be made will vary with circumstances, and must be regulated by and dependent on them. Thus, where the mortgagee himself, with whom the transaction took place, is setting up a charge in his favour made by one whose title to alienate he necessarily knew to be limited and qualified, he may be reasonably expected to allege and prove facts presumably better known to him than to the infant heir, namely, those facts which embody the representations made to him of the alleged needs of the estate, and the motives influencing his immediate loan (f). It is to be observed that the representations by the manager accompanying the loan as part of the res gestæ, and as the contemporaneous declarations of an agent, though not actually selected by the principal, have been held to be evidence against the heir ; and as their Lordships are informed that such prima facie proof has been generally required in the Supreme Court of Calcutta, between the lender and the heir, where the lender is enforcing his security against the heir, they think it reasonable and right that it should be required. It is obvious, however, that it might be unreasonable to require such proof from one not an original party, after a lapse of time and enjoyment, and apparent acquiescence ; consequently, if, as is the case here as to part of the charge, it be created by substitution of a new security for an older one, where the consideration for the older one was an old precedent debt of an ancestor not

(f) As to the case where a suit is brought by the heir of a mortgagee against reversionary heirs, to enforce a mortgage by a widow. See Moheshar Baksh v. Ratan Singh, 23 I. A., 57 ; S. C., 23 Cal., 766.

Burthen of proof

Burthen of proof of necessity.

Proof of necessity varies.

previously questioned, a presumption of the kind contended for by the appellant would be reasonable" (g). It appears to have been the intention of the Legislature to summarise the above rulings in § 38 of the Transfer of Property Act IV of 1882. "Where any person, authorised only under circumstances in their nature variable to dispose of immovable property, transfers such property for consideration, alleging the existence of such circumstances, they shall, as between the transferee on the one part and the transferor and other persons (if any) affected by the transfer on the other part, be deemed to have existed, if the transferee, after using reasonable care to ascertain the existence of such circumstances, has acted in good faith."

in case of decrees.

§ 350. One point as to which there seems at first to be a conflict of decisions, is as to the amount of proof incumbent upon a purchaser under a decree, or upon one who lends money to the manager of an estate to pay off a decree, or who purchases a part of an estate from the manager to supply him with funds for that purpose. Is the production of a bona fide decree sufficient of itself to establish a case of necessity; or is it incumbent upon the purchaser or creditor to go further, and to show that the decree was passed for a purpose which would bind the estate? The result of the decisions appears to be, that the party who relies on the decree is entitled to assume that it was properly passed, and that everything done under it was properly done. But the extent to which this will benefit him depends upon the nature of the decree, and the person against whom it was given, and upon the form of the proceedings taken in execution of the decree. It is evident that a decree may be one which upon its face, and by the mere fact that it was passed, binds the person against whom it is enforced. Or it may be one which will not bind him unless something was proved in the course of the case, and that something may or may not have been proved. Again; the form of the decree, and of the proceedings taken under it, may show that the creditor, while only suing his debtor by name, sued him as the representative of the family, in order to bind its property. Or, conversely, it may appear that, although the creditor had a remedy, which he might have enforced, against the whole family and its property, he chose to restrict his claim to his original debtor and the interests of that debtor. Where the decree is against a father, it conclusively establishes that there was a debt due by him, and as against his issue, unless the debt is founded on immorality, nothing more is necessary. It is not, as we have seen, necessary to show that the debt was for the benefit of the family. Where property is sold under such a decree, "the purchaser is not bound to go back beyond the decree to ascertain whether the Court was right in giving the decree, or having given it, in putting up the property for sale under an execution upon it" (h). And, of course, the same rule would apply where a minor sought to set aside a sale made by his guardian in order to pay off a decree against the minor himself (i); or where the transaction was disputed by an heir, not being a coparcener, for he is bound to pay the debts of the person whose estate he takes (§ 327). But it would be otherwise where the decree was given against a simple coparcener. It would be a

(g) Hunoomanpersaud v. Mt. Babooc, 6 M. I. A., pp. 418—420; S. C., 18 Suth., 81, note; Tandavaraya v. Valli, 1 Mad. H. C., 398; Vadali v. Manda, 2 Mad. H. C., 407; Saravana v. Muttayi, 6 Mad. H. C., 371; Lalla Bunseedhur v. Koonwur Bindesree, 10 M. I. A., 454; Maheshwar Syud Tasoowar v. Koonj Beharee, 3 N.-W. P., 8; Chowdhry v. Brojo Soondur, 18 Suth., 77; Sikher Chund v. Dalputiy, 5 Cal., 363; Makundi v. Sarabsukh, 6 All., 417; Lal Singh v. Deo Narain, 8 All., 279; Gurawami v. Ganapathia, 5 Mad., 337. Where a son attempts to defeat an alienation by his father, or to escape from his debts by alleging immorality or illegality, the burthen of establishing such a state of things rests upon him. Subramaniya v. Sadasiva, 8 Mad., 75, ante § 303.

Transactions founded on decrees.

(h) Per curiam, Muddun Thakoor v. Kantoo Lal, 1 I. A., 321, 334; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 187; S. C., 22 Suth., 56, ante §§ 313, 322; Bhagbut Pershad v. Mt. Girja Koer, 15 I. A., 99; S. C., 15 Cal., 317. See numerous cases following this decision; Bhowna v. Roopkishore, 5 N.-W. P., 89; Budree v. Kantee, 23 Suth., 260; Kooldeep v. Bunjeet, 24 Suth., 231; Sheo Pershad v. Soorjibunsee, ib., 281; Burtoo v. Ram Purmessur, ib., 364; Anooragee v. Bhugobutty, 25 Suth., 148; Ramsahoy v. Mohabeer, ib., 185; Wajed Hossein v. Nankoo, ib., 311; Luchmi v. Asman, 2 Cal., 213; S. C., 25 Suth., 421; Sivasankara v. Parvati, 4 Mad., 96. As to how far it is necessary to make the sons parties to suit against a father to enforce his sales or mortgages or to recover debts due by him, see ante §§ 309—321. As to extent to which decrees are conclusive against the sons, see ante §§ 322—324.

(i) Sheoraj v. Nukchedee, 14 Suth., 72.

perfectly valid decree against him, and might during his life be enforced by execution and sale of his interest in the property (§ 330). But as his debt would not bind his coparceners or their share in the property, unless it was contracted by their consent or for their benefit (§ 333), so a decree against him can create no higher liability. It ascertains his debt, but does no more. If it is intended to procure payment of the debt, directly or indirectly, out of the shares of the other members, the creditor must show that the debts themselves were such as to be properly binding upon those who have not personally incurred them (k). This proof must be given in a suit to which the joint members of the family are parties, and in which they can resist the allegations made against them. If the managing member of the family executes a document which would bind the other members, the proper course is to sue them all. If the creditor chooses, he may only sue the person who executed the document to enforce his liability as executant. But if he adopts this course, his execution will only take effect upon the share of the execution debtor. He cannot enforce it against the other members (not being the sons of the debtor) merely by proving that the transaction was entered into for the benefit of the family. This only shows that he had a larger remedy, of which he did not avail himself (l). On the other hand, the manager who has executed in his own name, but in his capacity as manager, a document for a debt avowedly contracted for family purposes, may be sued upon the document in his representative character, and on proof that he was acting within his authority a decree will be given which will (k) Saravana v. Muttayi, 6 Mad. H. C., 371; Pareyasami v. Sabuckai, 8 Mad. H. C., 157; Reotee v. Ramjeet, 2 N.-W. P., 50; Venkatasami v. Kuppaian, 1 Mad., 354; Venkataramayyan v. Venkatasubramaniya, ib., 358; Loki v. Aghoree, 5 Cal., 144; Gangulu v. Ancha, 4 Mad., 78; Krishna Reddi v. Thambu, 26 Mad., 28.

(l) Deendyl v. Jugdeep Narain, 4 I. A., 247; S. C., 3 Cal., 198, ante § 314; Armugum v. Sabapathy, 5 Mad., 12; Subramanien v. Subramanien, ib., 125; Doraswamy v. Atiratra, 7 Mad., 136; Viraragavanna v. Samudrala, 8 Mad., 208; Guvvappa v. Thimma, 10 Mad., 316; Abilak Roy v. Rubby Roy, 11 Cal., 298; Masuti Narayan v. Lilachand, 6 Bom., 564; Kisansing v. Moreshuwar, 7 Bom., 91; Doolar Chand v. Lalla Chabul, 6 I. A., 47.

bind the whole property, and not merely his interest in it (m). Finally there is a class of cases in which it has been held that a suit against one member of the family must be taken as a proceeding against the family represented by him, so that the decree binds them, and may be enforced by execution against the shares of all (n). In a case where several brothers were jointly interested in a tenure, but the manager alone was registered as the owner, and he was sued for arrears of rent, and his right, title, and interest was sold in execution, it was held that the whole tenure passed to the purchaser. Garth, C. J., said: "Where it is clear from the proceedings, that what is sold, and intended to be sold, is the interest of the judgment-debtor only, the sale must be confined to that interest, although the decree-holder might have sold the whole tenure if he had taken proper steps to do so, or although the purchaser may have obtained possession of the whole tenure under the sale. But if, on the other hand, it appears that the judgment-debtor has been sued as representing the ownership of the entire tenure, and that the sale, although purporting to be of the right and interest of the judgment-debtor only, was intended to be, and in justice and equity ought to operate, as a sale of the tenure, the whole tenure then must be considered as having passed by the sale. And if the question is a doubtful one on the face of the proceedings, or one part of the proceedings may appear inconsistent with another, the Court must look to the substance of the matter, and not the form or language of the proceedings" (o).

(m) Hari Vithal v. Jairam Vithal, 14 Bom., 597. ante § 333. As to a case where the contract by the manager did not profess to bind any one but himself, see Kosuri v. Invaluri, 26 Mad., 74.

(n) Bissessur v. Luchmessur, 6 I. A., 233; 5 C. L. R., 477; Deva v. Ram Manohur, 2 All., 746; Ram Sevak v. Ragnubar, 3 All., 72; Radha Kishen v. Bachhaman, ibid., 118; Gaya v. Rajbansi, ibid., 191; Ramnawain v. Bhawani, F. B., ibid., 443; Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhubaneswari Debi, 15 I. A., 195; S. C., 16 Cal., 40; Kedar Prosunno v. Protab Chunder, 20 Cal., 11; Norendra Nath v. Bhupendra, 23 Cal., 374.

(o) Jeo Lal Singh v. Gunga Pershad, 10 Cal., 996, 1001; Kombi v. Lakshmi, 5 Mad., 201, 205.

Where other funds are available.

§ 351. It has been said that, where a debt is ancestral, and property is sold to meet it, the purchaser is not bound to enquire whether the debt could have been met from other sources (p). But, I imagine, this can only apply where there is at all events an apparent necessity for the sale. In the case where the rule was laid down, the Court went on to say, "Nor is it indicated from what sources it would have been met." In a Bengal case, the Sudder Court laid down nearly the opposite principle. They said: "It may be shown that the ostensible object of the loan was to pay off Government revenue, but, to render such a loan binding upon those who had reversionary interests upon the property, it must also be satisfactorily proved that such loan was absolutely necessary from failure of the resources of the estate itself, and was not raised through the caprice or extravagance of the proprietor" (q). Here the law seems to be laid down rather too strictly. The person who deals with the manager of a joint family property has to consider the propriety and necessity of the transaction in which he is engaged, not merely the propriety and necessity of paying the debt which is the pretext for the transaction. If the debt is improper or unnecessary, and known to be so by the lender, the transaction is, of course, invalid. If the payment of the debt is proper and necessary, the transaction will still be invalid, unless the lender has reasonable ground for supposing that it cannot be met without his assistance. The caprice or extravagance of the proprietor is only material as showing, either that the object of the transaction was an improper one, or that the necessity for it was non-existent.

Proof of payment.

Where it is once established that there was a debt which ought to be paid, and which could not be paid without a loan or sale, if the validity of the transaction is disputed on the ground that the debt had previously been discharged or diminished, the burthen of making out this case rests upon the person who sets it up. Payment is an affirmative fact which cannot be assumed, merely on account of the antiquity of the debt (r).

(p) Ajey v. Girāharae, 4 N. - W. P., 110.

(q) Damoodhur v. Birjo Mohapatr, S. D. of 1858, 802.

§ 352. The powers of the manager of a joint family property who is not the father are governed by exactly the same principles as those already laid down (s). Of course, his personal debts are not binding upon his coparceners, as those of a father are upon his sons, and therefore alienations made by him to pay such debts would not bind them. In his case, too, there could be no suggestion that he had any greater power over movables than over immovables, except so far as arose from their own nature, and the mode in which they would usually be dealt with. Nor could his coparceners claim any interest in his self-acquired land.

Power of manager.

§ 353. So far we have been considering dispositions of the family property by which one member professed to bind the others, by selling or encumbering their shares as well as his own. We have now to examine the right of one member of a family governed by Mitakshara law to dispose of his own share. To an English lawyer the existence of such a right would seem obvious. Under the early Hindu law it is equally certain that no such right existed. It has become thoroughly established in Bengal, as will be seen hereafter; but in the other provinces there is a complete variance as to its existence, and the extent to which it may be exercised. The theory of the Mitakshara law is clearly against such a right. I have already pointed out (§ 270) that under that law all the coparceners are joint owners of the property, but only as members of a corporation in which there are shareholders, but no Right of coparcener to dispose of his share.

(r) Cavalry Venkata v. Collector of Masulipatam, 11 M. I. A., 619, 633; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 61.

(s) And see ante § 333, 346. A son does not by the mere absence of his father acquire the powers of alienation or mortgage vested in the managing member. Patil Havi v. Hakamchand, 10 Bom., 363. See as to the powers of alienation possessed by the Karnavan of a Malabar Tarwaad. Kombi v. Lakshmi, 5 Mad., 201; Kalliyani v. Narayana, 9 Mad., 266.

shares. The family corporation remains unchanged, but its members are in a continual state of flux. No one has any share until partition, because until then it is impossible to say what the share of each may be. It will be larger one day, when a member dies; smaller the next, when a member is born (t). The right of the members to a partition has been slowly and reluctantly admitted. But this right carries with it the consequence of being cut off from the benefits of sharing in the family property, and participating in its future gains. If any member were allowed, from time to time, to sell his share in the joint family property, without severing himself from the family by partition, he would be securing the advantages of a division without submitting to its inconveniences. He would be benefiting himself by the exclusive appropriation of a part of the property which had never become his. He would be injuring the family by diminishing their estate, and, at the same time, he would be retaining the right to profit by the future gains of their industry. No doubt the amount so disposed of might be taken into account in the event of a subsequent partition. But the rules of Hindu law contemplate the continuance of the family union, not its disruption. Until a partition took place he would have been in a position of exceptional advantage. It would be like the case of a partner who claimed the right to withdraw his capital from the concern at pleasure, without withdrawing himself. Even before partition such alienations would be subversive of the family system. That system assumes that each member of the family is supplied out of its funds in proportion to his requirements, as often as they arise, the unspent balance of each year being carried over to the capital for the benefit of all. There is no such thing as a system of individual accounting, with a ledger opened in the name of each member, and a debiting to him of his expenses, and a

Rights of coparcener in joint property.

(t) See per curiam, Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbask Kooer, 3 B. L. R. (F. B.), 44; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 1.

crediting of his proportion of the income. But if any member were allowed to dispose of his share, such a system would be necessary; and upon taking the annual account, it might turn out that the amount of income to which he was entitled was not sufficient to defray his expenses. The anomaly would then arise, that a member of the undivided family would either not be entitled to be maintained at all, or would be maintained as a matter of charity, and not of right. Finally, the permission to alienate without a partition would necessarily have the effect of introducing strangers into the coparcenary, without the consent of its members, and defeating the right of survivorship, which they would otherwise possess.

§ 354. Of course, nothing is to be found in the earlier writers upon the subject. They did not notice the point, because such an occurrence did not present itself to their minds at all. An alienation of family property, even with the consent of all, was probably a very rare event. But as property began more frequently to pass from hand to hand, the circumstances which would justify an alienation began to be defined. Vyasa says: "A single parcener ought not, without the consent of his coparceners, to sell or give away immovable property of any sort, which the family hold in coparcenary. But at a time of distress, for the support of his household, and particularly for the performance of religious duties, even a single coparcener may give, mortgage or sell the immovable estate" (u). Not, be it observed, his own share for his own private benefit. So Narada mentions joint property among the eight kinds of things that may not be given, though he expressly authorizes divided brothers to dispose of their shares as they like (v). And the author of the Vivada Chintamani, while commenting on, and approving, these texts, gives as his reason, "for none has any right over

His power of alienation.

(u) 1 Dig., 455; 2 Dig., 189.

(v) Narada, Pt. II, iv., § 4, 5; xiii., § 42-43; acc. Vrihaspati, 2 Dig., 98; Dasha, ib., 110.

them according to common sense." He adds in another passage: "What belongs to many may be given with their assent. Joint ancestral property may be given with the assent of all the heirs" (w). Probably all these passages referred to the powers of the father or manager. The Mitakshara and Mayukha in laying down the right of alienation are evidently dealing with the case of the father as representing the entire family (x). The idea of any individual acting solely on his own account does not seem to have occurred to them. The same view is laid down unhesitatingly by Mr. W. MacNaghten. He says, "A coparcener is prohibited from disposing of his own share of joint ancestral property; and such an act where the doctrine of the Mitakshara prevails (which does not recognize any several right until after partition, or on the principle of factum valet), would unquestionably be both illegal and invalid" (y). On the other hand, Mr. Ellis, writing of the Madras Presidency, thought a sale would be valid to the extent of the alienor's own share (z). Mr. Colebrooke seems to have been in much uncertainty upon the point. The result of his various opinions appears to be, that a gift by one co-heir of his own share would be certainly invalid, and that a sale or mortgage would in strictness be also illegal; but that in the latter case "equity would require redress to be afforded to the purchaser, by enforcing partition of the whole or of a sufficient portion of it, so as to make amends to the purchaser out of the vendor's share" (a). This opinion was adopted by Sir Thomas Strange in his book, and acted on by him from the Bench (b).

§ 355. It is probable that the first inroad upon the strict law took place in enforcing debts by way of exe-

(w) Vivada Chintamani, pp. 72, 77.

(x) Mitakshara, i., 1, § 27, 32; V. May., iv., 1, § 3, 5.

(y) 1 W. MacN., 5.

(a) 2 Stra. H. L., 344, 349, 433, 439.

(b) 1 Stra. H. L., 200, 202; Sashachella v. Ramasamy, 2 N. C., 234 [74]; post § 357.

(z) 2 Stra. H. L., 350.

cution. In strict logic, of course, what a man cannot do directly by way of sale, he ought not to be allowed to do indirectly through the intervention of a decree-holder. But we have already seen that the Hindu law ascribed great sanctity to the obligation of a debt, and; in the case of a father, enabled him to defeat the rights of his sons, through the medium of his creditors, though it denied him the power to do so by an express alienation (§ 306). It would be a natural transition to extend this principle to all coparceners, so far as to allow a creditor to seize the interest of any one in the joint property as a satisfaction of his separate debt. There are decisions in which it has been held that even this cannot be allowed in cases under the Mitakshara law (c). But the contrary rule has been repeatedly laid down in all the Presidencies, and has been recently affirmed by the Privy Council. It may be taken as settled that under a decree against any individual coparcener, for his separate debt, a creditor may, during the life of the debtor, seize and sell his undivided interest in the family property (d). The decisions which show that this cannot be done after the death of the debtor, have been already stated (§ 330). There may be greater difficulty in determining how the right of the purchaser at the sale under the decree is actually to be enforced. In Bengal, where the coparceners hold in quasi-severalty, each member has a right before partition to mark out his own share, and to hold it to the exclusion of the others. Accordingly, it has been held that the purchaser at a Court sale of the rights of one member is entitled to be put into Share may be seized in execution.

Right of purchaser.

(c) Nana Tooljaram v. Wulubdas, Morris, 40; Bhyro Pershad v. Basisto, 16 Suth., 31.

(d) Valayooda v. Chedumbara, Mad. Dec. of 1855, 234; Subbarayudu v. Gopavajulu, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 247; Virasvami v. Ayyasvami, 1 Mad. H. C., 471; Vasudev v. Venkatesh, 10 Bom. H. C., 139; Pandurang v. Bhaskar, 11 Bom. H. C., 72; Udaram v. Ravi, ib., 76; Gour Pershad v. Sheodeen, 4 N.-W. P., 137; Deendyal v. Jugdeep, 4 I. A., 247; S. C., 3 Cal., 193; overruling Jugdeep v. Deendyal, 12 B. L. R., 160; S. C., 20 Suth., 174; Venkataramayyan v. Venkatasubramania, 1 Mad., 358; Suraj Bunsu Koer v. Sheo Prashad, 6 I. A., 88; S. C., 5 Cal., 148; Jallidar v. Ramlal, 4 Cal., 723; Rai Narain v. Nownit, 4 Cal., 809. The purchaser does not become a coparcener whose assent is required to any future dealings with the property by the remaining members. Ballabh v. Sunder, 1 All., 429; Ganraj v. Sheozore, 2 All., 898.

physical possession even of a part of the family house; the only remedy of the other members being to purchase the rights of the debtor at the auction sale (e). But it is otherwise in cases under Mitakshara law, where no member has a right, without express agreement, to say that any specific portion is exclusively his. Consequently, the purchaser at a Court auction cannot claim to be put into possession of any definite piece of property (f). As the Judicial Committee said in one case, "No doubt can be entertained that such a share is property, and that a decree-holder can reap it. It is specific, existing and definite; but it is not properly the subject of seizure under this particular process, but rather by process direct against the owner of it, by seizure, or sequestration, or appointment of a receiver" (g). In cases which have occurred in Bombay, the High Court has held that the only mode in which the execution purchaser can enforce his rights is by a suit for a partition of the debtor's share in the whole estate, to which, of course, he must make all the members of the family parties. In carrying out the decree for partition, the Court will, as far as they can with regard to the interests of others, try to award to the purchaser any specific portion which the debtor may have originally pledged, mortgaged, or sold (h). The purchaser cannot sue for a partition of part of the property only, because an account of the whole estate must be taken, in order to see what interest, if any, the debtor possesses (i). Where, however, there is no dispute as to the share to which the execution debtor is entitled, the process by which the creditor is put in possession of that share need not extend to a partition

(e) Ramtanoo v. Ishurchunder, S. D. of 1857, 1585; Koonwur v. Shama Soondaree, 2 Suth. (Mis.), 50; Eshan Chunder v. Nund Coomar, 8 Suth., 239.

(f) Katee v. Choitun, 22 Suth., 214; Kallapa v. Venkatesh, 2 Bom., 676.

(g) Syad Tuffuzzool v. Rughoonath, 14 M. I. A., 50.

(h) See a case where, previous to the creditor's suit, a partition had taken place, in which the property mortgaged had been assigned to another member of the family. Hem Chunder v. Thako Moni, 20 Cal., 533; Amolak v. Chandan, 24 All., 483.

(i) Pandurang v. Bhaskar, 11 Bom. H. C., 72; Udaram v. Ranu, ib., 76; Narayan v. Rajaram, 28 B. m., 201; acc. Lall Jha v. Juma, 22 Suth., 116; Jalidar v. Ramlal, 4 Cal., 723; Maruti v. Lulachand, 6 Bom., 564; Venkatarama v. Meera Labai, 13 Mad., 275; Palanikonun v. Marakonan, 20 Mad., 243.

between the other members of the family, unless they desire it (k). On the other hand, even prior to partition, the purchaser of the interests of one coparcener is a tenant in common with the others. Therefore, if he has got into possession of what was formerly enjoyed by the debtor, the other members cannot treat him as a mere trespasser. If they are willing to continue the tenancy in common, they may compel him so to enjoy his share as not to interfere with a similar enjoyment by themselves. If they object to the tenancy in common, they must sue for a partition (l).

§ 356. The step from holding that the share of one member can be sold under a decree, to holding that he can sell it himself, is such an easy one, that it is surprising that those who admit the former right should deny the other. Yet it will be found that it is denied by the High Courts of Bengal and the North-West Provinces, while it is admitted by the High Courts of Madras and Bombay. The reason appears to be that in Bengal the right of even an execution creditor was originally not admitted. It was denied in 1871 in a decision which was not appealed against (m), and was only finally established by the Privy Council in an appeal which reversed a later decision of 1873 (n). Consequently, an unbroken current of decisions maintained a practice in conformity with the theory. In Madras and Bombay the earlier decisions negatived the right of a coparcener to alien his share. But the right of the execution creditor was admitted, and therefore the analogous right of the coparcener was ultimately recognized. As the question may still be treated as uncertain, it will be advisable to show rather fully what the state of the authorities really is.

Conflict of authority as to voluntary alienation.

Bengal.

(k) Murarrao v. Sitaram, 23 Bom., 184.

(l) Mahabalaya v. Timaya, 12 Bom. H. C., 133; Babaji v. Vasudev, 1 Bom., 95; Kallapa v. Venkatesh, 2 Bom., 676; Patil Hari v. Hakamchand, 10 Bom. 363. See post § 493.

(m) Bhyro Pershad v. Basisto, 16 Suth., 31.

(n) Dsundayal v. Jugdeep, 1 I. A., 247; S. C., 3 Cal., 198.

Madras.

§ 357. The earliest case actually decided in Madras was one before Sir Thomas Strange in 1813. There, one of two undivided brothers had mortgaged family property for his private purposes. A suit was first brought by the other brother to declare that the mortgage was not binding upon his share of the property. In this suit an account and partition was decreed. A cross suit was brought by the mortgagee against both brothers for payment and sale of the property mortgaged. The decree was that the suit should be dismissed against the second brother, that the share of the mortgagor should be held bound for payment of whatever was due upon the mortgage, but that no part of the property comprised in the bond and mortgage should be sold, until the account and partition directed under the original decree was completed. These proceedings were submitted to Mr. Colebrooke, and were approved of by him, subject to a doubt whether the charge was valid even for the share of the alienor (o). In a case in 1853 the Madras Sudder Court appears to have held a sale by one of several members to be valid for his share, even without a partition (p). On the other hand, the opinion of a pundit of the Tellicherry Court is recorded, which supports the doubt expressed by Mr. Colebrooke. In reply to a question, "Can one of an undivided family, consisting of two only, dispose of half the property, leaving his coparcener's moiety undisturbed?" he answered: "It is stated in the text of Narada that it is necessary that a division should be previously made, with the concurrence of all the members; wherefore the disposing to the extent of one's share at discretion is not legal" (q). This principle was followed by the Sudder Court in three cases in 1859 and 1860, when they held that a sale by an undivided member was not valid, even within the limits of his individual share, unless made under emergent circumstances (r).

(o) Ramasamy v. Sashachella, 2 N. C., 234, 240 [74].

(p) Chinnapiel v. Chocken, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 220. (q) 2 Stra. H. L., 451.

(r) Ramkutti v. Kallaturaiyan, Mad. Dec. of 1859, 270; Kanakasabhaiya v. Seshachella, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 17; Sundara v. Tegaraja, ib., 67.

§ 358. In this state of things the question came before the High Court of Madras. One of two brothers, members of an undivided family, had mortgaged one of two houses which formed part of the family property, for his own personal debt. He was then sued in an action for damages for a tort, and judgment was recovered against him. The judgment-creditor took out execution, and, under a writ of fi. fa., the Sheriff seized and sold the debtor's interest in the mortgaged house and also in another. The purchaser sued both brothers to recover possession. Scotland, C. J., decided that both the mortgage and the execution stood on the same footing; that each was valid to the extent of the alienor's share, and that "What the purchaser or execution creditor of the coparcener is entitled to is the share to which, if a partition took place, the coparcener himself would be individually entitled, the amount of such share, of course, depending upon the state of the family" (s). This decision has since been treated as the ruling authority in Madras, and has been repeatedly followed (t). And the Court enjoined a father against alienating more than his share of the undivided property, but refused to interfere with alienations which appeared to be within his share (u). In all these cases the transaction was enforced during the Sanction by High Court of Madras.

Extent of power.

(s) Virasvami v. Ayyasvami, 1 Mad. H. C., 471; acc. Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 44. But, if the transferee of a share of a dwelling-house belonging to an undivided family is a stranger, he will not be entitled to any joint possession or enjoyment of such house.

(t) Peddimuthulaty v. Timma Reddy, 2 Mad. H. C., 270; Palanivelappa v. Mannaru, ib., 416; Kayachartu v. Venkataramaniah, 4 Mad. H. C., 60. For instance, one of several coparceners may renounce his share in favour of another. Peddaiyya v. Ramalingam, 11 Mad., 406. No such right of alienation exists under Malabar law, where no partition is allowed. Byari v. Puttanna, 14 Mad., 38.

(u) Kanukurty v. Venkataramdass, 4 Mad. Jur., 251.

(v) 2 Mad. H. C., 417.

property which was less than half of the whole to his wife, by a registered deed followed by possession. After his death, his only son sued to set it aside. The Court refused even to listen to discussion as to the father's power to make such a gift; "because the law is quite settled that a Hindu can make a gift to the extent of his power, and in this case the deceased has done no more than that" (w). This case has, however, been overruled on the principle that the equity to enforce a partition which exists in favour of a purchaser for value cannot arise in favour of a mere donee (x). On the other hand, the High Court held that no coparcener could give his alienee a title to any specific portion of the joint property, even though such portion was less than his share. Each coparcener had an undivided share in every part of the property, and all that any member could sell was his interest in that part (y).

Devise of undivided share invalid.

§ 359. The above decisions were all passed before that given by the Full Bench in Bengal, which will be mentioned hereafter (§ 363). The same point, however, arose again after that decision. The question was, whether a devise by a father of ancestral immovable property was valid as against his only son. It was contended: first, that the father could, during his life, have given away his share of the family property; secondly, that his devise was valid to the same extent as his gift would have been. The Court admitted the first proposition, but denied the second. After referring to the view taken by the High Court of Bengal that no one could assign his share until it was ascertained by a partition, the Court said: "If by the word 'share' is intended specific share, the argument is, of course, valid, that a coparcener cannot, before partition, convey his share to another, because before partition it cannot be ascertained what it is. It is equally the law in (w) Vencatapathy v. Lutchmee, 6 Mad. Jur., 215.

(x) Baba v. Timma, 7 Mad., 357; Ponnusami v. Thatu, 9 Mad., 273; Ramanna v. Venkata, 11 Mad., 246; Rottala Nanganatham v. Pulicat Ramasami, 27 Mad., 162.

(y) Venkatachella v. Chinnaia, 5 Mad. H. C., 196.

Madras that a coparcener cannot, before partition, convey away, as his interest, any specific portion of the joint property. Considered in this light, the difficulties which have influenced the Calcutta High Court disappear. The person in whose favour a conveyance is made of a coparcener's interest takes what may, on a partition, be found to be the interest of the coparcener. What he so takes is, at the moment of taking, and until ascertained and severed, subject to the same fluctuations as it would be subject to, if it continued to subsist as the interest of the coparcener. But it can, at the proper period, be ascertained without difficulty, and there appears to be no reason, either derived from the Hindu law current in this Presidency, or founded upon general principles, for saying that such an interest is inalienable. With regard to the third question, we are of opinion that the will in the case referred to cannot take effect. At the moment of death, the right of survivorship is in conflict with the right by devise. Then the title by survivorship, being the prior title, takes precedence to the exclusion of that by devise" (z).

§ 360. In Bombay the decisions have taken very much the same course as in Madras. The earlier cases appear to be opposed to the right of alienation by a coparcener, and it has been laid down that a sale or mortgage by one of two undivided brothers was invalid, even for his own share of the undivided property (a). "In subsequent cases it appears that the Bombay Sudder Adawlut, although holding that the purchaser of the share of a parcener in Hindu family property cannot before partition sue for possession of any particular part of that property, or predicate that it belongs to him exclusively, yet was of opinion that he may maintain a suit for partition, and thus obtain the share which he has purchased" (b). The Bombay decisions.

Co-heir may sell his share.

(z) Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma, 8 Mad. H. C., 6.

(a) Ballojee v. Venkapa, Bom. Sel. Rep., 216; Bajee v. Pandurang, Morris, Pt. II, 93. But see the fitwah in Bom. Sel. Rep., 42, which seems to admit the right.

(b) Per curiam, Vasudev v. Venkatesh, 10 Bom. H. C., p. 156, where the cases are cited.

Supreme Court, and subsequently the High Court, recognized the right of an undivided member to sell or mortgage his undivided share, and the usage that he should do so. The whole of the previous cases are collected in an elaborate judgment pronounced by Westropp, C. J., in 1873 (c). He admitted that the strict law of the Mitakshara, and the usage following it in Mithila and Benares, was in accordance with the law laid down by the Full Court of Bengal, but stated that the opposite practice had prevailed in Western India. He concluded his review of the authorities by saying: "On the principle stare decisis, which induced Sir Barnes Peacock and his colleagues strictly to adhere to the anti-alienation doctrine of the Mitakshara in the provinces subject to their jurisdiction where the authority of that treatise prevails, we, at this side of India, find ourselves compelled to depart from that doctrine, so far as it denies the right of a Hindu parcener, for valuable consideration, to sell, incumber, or otherwise alien his share in undivided family property. The foregoing authorities lead us to the conclusion that it must be regarded as the settled law of this Presidency, not only that one of several coparceners in a Hindu family may, before partition, and without the assent of his coparceners, sell, mortgage, or otherwise alien, for valuable consideration, his share in the undivided family estate, movable or immovable, but also that such a share may be taken in execution under a judgment against him at the suit of his personal creditor. Were we to hold otherwise, we should undermine many titles which rest upon the course of decision, that, for a long period of time, the Courts at this side of India have steadily taken. Stability of decision is, in our estimation, of far greater importance than a deviation from the special doctrine of the Mitakshara upon the right of alienation."

The mode in which the Bombay Court enforces this right is by a decree for an account and partition, as already stated (d).

(c) Vasudev v. Venkatesh, 10 Bom. H. C., 189, followed Fakirapa v. Chanapa, ib., 162 (F. B.); Rangayana v. Ganapabhatta, 15 Bom., 673.

§ 361. The Bombay High Court, however, while ^{Gift or devise invalid.} favouring the rights of a purchaser for value, show no indulgence to a volunteer; they hold that an undivided coparcener cannot make a gift of his share, or dispose of it by will (e). In both points they agree with the High Court of Madras, no doubt on the ground that in the case of a gift there is no equity upon which a decree for partition would depend. The High Court, however, put their decision upon the simple ground that they were not disposed to carry the assignability of the share of a coparcener in undivided family property any farther than they felt compelled to do by the precedents referred to, and by the traditions of the Supreme Court and Sudder Adawlut in the Bombay Presidency (f). No decision has as yet been given by the Privy Council as to the validity of a gift of his share by a coparcener, though the leaning of their Lordships' minds seems, rather to be against it (g).

§ 362. If, as the Courts of Madras and Bombay lay ^{Extent of share how ascertained.} down, the rights of a purchaser from a coparcener can only be worked out by means of a partition, a further question arises, what date must be taken as fixing the amount of interest he possesses in the family property? For instance, suppose one of two brothers grants a mortgage upon the family property for his own private benefit, and the transaction runs on until after three more brothers are born, and the father is dead, and then the creditor sues to enforce his claim—has he a lien upon one-third of the property, which was the interest of his debtor at the time of the mortgage, or only upon one-fifth, which is his interest at the time of suit? The latter view has been taken by the

(d) Ante § 355.

(e) Gangubai v. Ramanna, 3 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 66; Tukaram v. Ramchandrar, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 249; Udaram v. Ramu, 11 Bom. H. C., 76; Vra ndavandas v. Yamuna, 12 Bom. H. C., 229; Kalu v. Basu, 19 Bom., 808.

(f) 12 Bom. H. C., 231.

(g) See per curiam, Lukshman v. Ramchandra, 7 I. A., 195; S. C., 5 Bom., 48.

Madras High Court (h). In a later case where the same question arose, but did not require decision, Bhashyem Iyengar, J., dissented from this view, and stated that both on principle and in accordance with previous dicta of the Privy Council, a member of an undivided Hindu family under the Mitakshara law as administered in Madras, had a right to alienate the interest which he possessed at the time of alienation, and that it was this amount of interest which the alienee had a right to obtain by subsequent suit, and that such interest would neither be diminished by an increase nor increased by a diminution in the number of co-sharers (i). Both in Madras and in Bombay it is settled that an actual alienation for value is enforceable to the same extent by suit after the death of the alienor as it would have been by suit during his life (k). A contrary decision of the Privy Council in the case of Madho Pershad v. Mehrban Singh (l) in a case from Oudh rested on the express ground that it was governed by the rule of the Court of Bengal, which holds that under Mitakshara law all alienations of his share by a member of an undivided family are invalid.

§ 363. When we come to the Bengal Courts, and that of the North-West Provinces, there is a complete unanimity in affirming the early doctrine. In a Mithila case which was twice referred to the pundits, on account of a suspicion of the integrity of one of them, they pronounced, "that a gift of joint undivided property, whether real or personal, was not valid, even to the extent of the donor's share; for property cannot be sold or given away until it is defined and ascertained, which cannot be done without a division" (m). The same

(h) Rengasami v. Krishnayan, 14 Mad., 408.

(i) Aiyagari v. Aiyagari, 25 Mad., 690, p. 716.

(k) Alamela v. Rengasami, 7 Mad., 588, p. 590; Rengasami v. Krishnayan, 14 Mad., 408; Aiyagari v. Aiyagari, 25 Mad., 690; Gurulingappa v. Nandappa, 21 Bom., 797, p. 806.

(l) 17 I. A., 194; S. C., 18 Cal., 157.

(m) Nundram v. Kashee, 3 S. D., 232 (310); S. C., 1 Mor., 17; confirmed, 4 S. D., 70 (89).

point was expressly decided in other cases from the same district (n). And exactly the same rule was acted on in cases from other districts, which were governed by the Mitakshara (o). In 1869 the question was referred to a Full Bench of the High Court of Bengal in consequence of some conflicting decisions of the High Courts of Madras and Bombay. The whole of the previous decisions and the Native texts were elaborately examined, and the Court replied that in cases governed by Mitakshara law, one sharer had no authority, without the consent of his co-sharers, to dispose of his undivided share, in order to raise money on his own account, and not for the benefit of the family. The Court stated that an opposite conclusion could only be arrived at, "by over-ruling that current of authorities by which, for nearly half a century, the law appears to have been settled, and in accordance with the principles of which it appears to have been generally understood and acted upon" (p). This ruling has been affirmed by the Privy Council as regards Bengal, Oudh, and the North-West Provinces (q). One joint member may surrender his interest to the whole coparcenary, but he cannot transfer it to any single member for his own benefit (r).

(n) Sheo Churn v. Jummun, 6 S. D., 176 (214); Sheo Suhaye v. Sreekishen, 7 S. D., 105 (123); Mt. Roopna v. Ray Reotee, S. D. of 1853, 344; Jivan v. Ram Govind, 5 S. D., 163 (193).

(o) Sheo Surrun v. Sheo Sohail, 4 S. D., 158 (201), see note; Cosserat v. Sudaburt, 3 Suth., 210. See decisions of the Court of the N.-W. P. cited, Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbash Kooer, 3 B. L. R. (F. B.), p. 42; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 1; and Lalti Kuar v. Ganga, 7 N.-W. P., 277. These decisions have been recently approved and followed by the Allahabad High Court. Chamaili v. Ram Prasad, 2 All., 267; Ramanand v. Gobind Singh, 5 All., 384. That Court, however, seems to hold that a member of the family who has alienated his own interest cannot object to a similar alienation by another member. Ganraj v. Sheozore, 2 All., 898.

(p) Sadabart Prasad v. Foolbash Kooer, 3 B. L. R. (F. B.), 31; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 1.

(q) Nathu v. Chadi, 4 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 15; S. C., 12 Suth., 447; sub nomine, Nuthoo v. Chedee; Haumman v. Baboo Kishen, 8 B. L. R., 358; S. C., 15 Suth. (F. B.), 6; sub nomine, Honooman v. Bhagbut; Phoolbas Kooer v. Lall Juggessur, 14 Suth., 340; S. C. on review, 18 Suth., 48; reversed on another point, 3 I. A., 7; S. C., 1 Cal., 226; S. C., 25 Suth., 265; Bunsee Lall v. Shaikh Aoladh, 22 Suth., 552; Chunder Coomar v. Hurbans Sahai, 16 Cal., 137; Madho Pershad v. Mehrban Singh, 17 I. A., 194; S. C., 18 Cal., 157; Balghobind Das v. Narain Lal, 20 I. A., 116; S. C., 15 All., 339; Bhagirathi v. Sheobhik, 20 All., 325.

(r) Chandar Kishore v. Dampat, 16 All., 369.

Equities in favour of alienee,

§ 364. Even in Bengal, however, and since the Full Bench decision, the Court has dealt with the equities of the parties in a manner which, under certain circumstances, brings about exactly the same result as is worked out by the Madras and Bombay doctrine (s). In that case, the second defendant, who was father and manager of a family governed by the Mitakshara, mortgaged the family property to the first defendant for a purpose not legally justifiable. The elder son sued on his own behalf, and on that of a minor son, to set aside the deed. The Court found that the plaintiff had assented to the transaction, consequently only the interest of the minor was concerned. It did not appear that he had been in any way benefited. The Court, after observing that the result of setting aside the sale unconditionally would be "that the property, on going back, will come to be enjoyed by the joint family as it was before the mortgage and sale; and of necessity, by virtue of the provisions of the Mitakshara law, will return to the management of the very man (second defendant) who obtained Rs. 3,000 from the first defendant on the pretended security afforded by the mortgage, which did not seem to accord very well with equity and good conscience"; also that the Full Bench decision, which settled [3 B. L. R., (F. B.) 31; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 1] that such a deed might be set aside, refrained from saying on what terms such relief was to be granted, proceeded to point out that the father might, at any moment, claim a partition. "And plainly the first defendant is in equity entitled as against the father to insist upon his calling his share into being, and realising it for their benefit. He obtained their money by representing that he had a power enforced by partition.

(s) Mahabeer Persad v. Ramyad, 12 B. L. R., 90; S. C., 20 Suth., 192; folld. Jamuna Pershad v. Ganga Pershad, 19 Cal., 401. See Udaram v. Ramu, 11 Bom. H. C., 76. In no case can any right to set aside a sale upon any terms be enforced, where the member who claims the right is under any disability which would be a bar to a suit by himself for partition. Ram Sahye v. Lalla Laljee, 8 Cal., 149; Ram Soonder v. Ram Sahye, ibid., 919. Such a right is personal, and does not survive in favour of the heir of a person who has commenced a suit to set aside an alienation, and then died. Padarath Singh v. Rajaram, 4 All., 235.

to charge the joint family property, which he knew at the time he did not possess: he is, therefore, at least bound to make good to them that representation, so far as he can, by the exercise of such proprietary right over the same property as he individually possesses. Substantially the same reasoning applies to the eldest son (plaintiff), who aided his father in effecting the mortgage. On the whole, then, we are of opinion that a decree ought to be given to the plaintiffs to the effect that the property be recovered by the plaintiffs for the joint family, but that this decree must be accompanied by a declaration that on recovery, the property be held and enjoyed by the family in defined shares, viz., one-third belonging to the father (second defendant), one-third to the eldest son (the plaintiff), and one-third to the second son, a minor; and that it be also declared that the shares of the father and of the eldest son be jointly and severally subject to the lien thereon of the first defendant for the repayment of the sum of Rs. 3,000 advanced by the first defendant to the second defendant, and interest thereon at six per cent. from the date of the loan until repayment."

Upon this decision the Judicial Committee remarked (t),
"There appears to be little substantially different between the law thus enunciated and that which has been established at Madras and Bombay; except that the application of the former may depend upon the view the Judges may take of the equities of the particular case; whereas the latter establishes a broad and general rule defining the right of the creditor." In no case, however, can such an equity be enforced where the coparcener who made the alienation is dead. Immediately on this event his share passes by survivorship to persons who are not liable for the debts and obligations of the deceased (u).

Judicial Committee.

§ 365. The remedies possessed by one member of a family against alienations made by another member,

Remedies against alienation.

(t) Deendyal v. Jugdeep, 4 I. A., 255; S. C., 8 Cal., 198.

(u) Madho Pershad v. Mehrban Singh, 17 I. A., 194; S. C., 18 Cal., 157.

depend, of course, upon the view taken by the Courts of the validity of such alienations. According to the law administered in Madras and Bombay, such alienations, whatever they may profess to convey, are valid to the extent of the alienor's own interest in the property. Hence, no suit could be maintained for the absolute cancellation of such an alienation, still less for recovery of the whole property, on the ground that the illegal alienation by the father or other member had given the plaintiff the right to seek possession for himself. But when the alienee takes exclusive possession of any specific portion of the joint property, he will be liable to be turned out at the suit of the other coparceners; for till partition each has an undivided interest in the whole, and, of course, the vendee claiming under one co-sharer, cannot be in a better position than the person under whom he claims (v). And even where there has been no dispossession; if one member of an undivided family has, by gift, mortgage, alienation, or devise, disposed of the family property to a greater extent than the law entitles him to do, the other members have a right to have the transaction declared illegal, and set aside so far as it is illegal (w). And in such a suit the alienation would be set aside, wholly or in part, according as the doctrine of Bengal or Madras and Bombay was held to govern the case. A fortiori, a sale which was an absolute fraud upon the family, and known by the purchaser to be such, would be rescinded by all the Courts, as the equity by means of which it can be worked out, would absolutely fail (x).

Not forfeiture.

Even according to the rules laid down by the Bengal Courts, a son is not entitled upon proof of alienation by (v) Venkatachella v. Chinnaiya, 5 Mad. H. C., 166, ante § 299.

(w) Kanukerty v. Venkataramdass, 4 Mad. Jur., 251; Kanth Narain v. Prem Lall, 3 Suth., 102; Raja Ram Tewary v. Luchmun, 8 Suth., 16; Retoo v. Lalljee, 24 Suth., 399; Chinna Sunyasi v. Suriya, 5 Mad., 196. As to declaratory decrees, see Dorasinga v. Katama Nachiar, 2 I. A., 169; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 83; S. C., 23 Suth., 314. As to the period of limitation, see Act XV of 1877, Sched. II, § 126; Raja Ram Tewary v. Luchmun Pershad, ub sup.

(x) Ravji v. Gangadharbhat, 4 Bom., 29; Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 5 Bom., 450.

his father, to apply to have his own name substituted on the registry in place of his father's name, and to have his own exclusive possession and ownership decreed, in place of that previously existing in the head of the family (y). But he is entitled to sue for possession of the whole property on behalf of the undivided family, although that whole includes the share of the person who makes the alienation, leaving the purchaser to take proceedings to ascertain that share by partition (z).

§ 366. It does not, however, follow that any member of the family can set aside such alienations unconditionally. The rule is that the party setting aside the sale must make good to the purchaser the amount he has paid, so far as that amount has benefited himself, either by entering into the joint assets, or from having been applied in paying off charges upon the property which would have been a lien upon it in his hands (a). In the leading case in Bengal (b) the following question was referred to a Full Bench Court, "Whether under the Mitakshara law, a son who recovers his ancestral estate from a purchaser from the father, on proof that there was no such necessity as would legalise the sale, and that he never acquiesced in the alienation, is bound in equity to refund the purchase money before recovering possession of the alienated property?" Peacock, C. J., replied that "in the absence of proof of circumstances which would give the purchaser an equitable right to compel a refund from the son, the latter would be entitled to recover without refunding the Equities on setting aside alienation.

(y) Chutter v. Bikaoo, S. D. of 1850, 232; Kanth Narain v. Prem Lall, 3 Suth., 102. See cases in N.-W. P. cited, Lalti Kuar v. Ganga, 7 N.-W. P., 277.

(z) Hanuman v. Baboo Kishen, 8 B. L. R., 358; S. C., 15 Suth. (F. B.), 6; Deendyal v. Jugdeep Narain, 4 I. A., 247; S. C., 3 Cal., 198; Hurdey Narain v. Rooder Perkash, 11 I. A., 26; S. C., 10 Cal., 626. See as to the right of any one to sue in respect of his own share, Phoolbas Kooer v. Lalla Juggessur, 13 Suth., 45.

(a) See however Marappa v. Rangasami, 23 Mad., 89.

(b) Mothoo v. Kolbur, B. L. R. Sup. Vol., 1018; S. C., 9 Suth., 511, followed in Hanuman v. Baboo Kishen, 8 B. L. R., 358; S. C., 15 Suth. (F. B.), 6; Makundi v. Sarabsukh, 6 All., 417; Tejpal v. Ganga, 25 All., 59; Moulvie Mahomed Shumsool v. Srewutram, 2 I. A., 7, p. 17; Ajit Singh v. Bijai Bahadur, 11 I. A., 211; cf. Wenlock v. River Dee Co., 19 Q. B. D., 155.

purchase money or any part of it. We ought to add that if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the purchase money was carried to the assets of the joint estate, and that the son had the benefit of his share of it, he could not recover his share of the estate without refunding his share of the purchase money; so if it should be proved that the sale was effected for the purpose of paying off a valid incumbrance on the estate which was binding upon the son, and the purchase money was employed in freeing the estate from the incumbrance, the purchaser would be entitled to stand in the place of the incumbrancer, notwithstanding the incumbrance might be such that the incumbrancer could not have compelled the immediate discharge of it; and that the decree for the recovery by the son of the ancestral property, or of his share of it, as the case might be, would be good; but should be subject to such right of the purchaser to stand in the place of the incumbrancer. It appears to me, however, that the onus lies upon the defendant to show that the purchase money was so applied. I do not concur with the decision which has been referred to (e), in which it is said that "in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be assumed that the price received by the father became a part of the assets of the joint family." If the father was not entitled to raise the money by sale of the estate, and the son is entitled to set aside that sale, the onus lies on the person who contends that the son is bound to refund the purchase money before he can recover the estate, to show that the son had the benefit of his share of that purchase money. If it should appear that he consented to take the benefit of the purchase money with a knowledge of the facts, it would be evidence of his acquiescence in the sale" (d).

Where the suit is brought, not by a member of the family to set aside a sale or mortgage, but by the alienee

(c) Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh, 6 Suth., 71.
 (d) Acc. Gangabai v. Vamanaji, 2 Bom. H. C., 318.

who has taken a title which his alienor had no power to grant, he cannot enforce it against any member of the family who is entitled to dispute the act of that alienor. Nor can he obtain a decree with a condition annexed, that it is only to be executed in case the defendant fails to make him compensation. His claim for compensation, if he has any, must be founded on special equities arising from circumstances applicable to the persons from whom compensation is claimed (e).

§ 367. The doctrine laid down by the High Court of Bengal in the above case is still good law where the alienation is made by a coparcener other than a father, and is complained of by coparceners who are not his sons. But under the actual facts of that case, and since the decision in Girdhari Lall v. Kantoo Lall (§ 309), the ruling to be applied would now be different. If the alienation were made for an antecedent debt, it would be absolutely binding on the sons. If it were not made for an antecedent debt the sons could only set it aside on paying the full purchase money, this being a debt for which their father would be liable to the purchaser as for failure of consideration on the sale being cancelled, and for which in consequence they and their share of the property would be ultimately responsible. If the property sold was not more than would fall to the father on partition, it would be open to the Court to award it at once to the purchaser as his share, free of all claims and equities from the sons (f).

§ 368. When the sale was made to discharge the personal debt of the alienor, it was considered that there was no equity to refund the purchase money, on setting aside the sale. Nor did it make any difference that the defendant was an innocent purchaser for value at an auction. He had every opportunity of making enquiry, and must have known the extreme danger of purchasing an interest which had been originally bought from a single member of a joint Alienation by father, for personal debt of coheir;

(e) Nizam-ud-din v. Anandi Prasad, 18 All., 373.
 (f) Koer Hasmat v. Sunder Das, 11 Cal., 396.

Equities on setting aside alienation.

Suit by alienee.

undivided family living under the Mitakshara law (g). Similarly where a sale has been declared to be ineffectual as against the interests of members of the family other than the alienor, such members are not bound to refund any part of the purchase money (h). So the value of improvements made by one who has purchased with knowledge of fraud, or after such fraud has come to his knowledge, cannot be recovered. But I apprehend it would be different where the sale was merely set aside as being beyond the powers of the vendor (i).

§ 369. An intermediate case is where the sale of the whole property is not justifiable, but a sale of part would have been justifiable, or where part of the consideration was applied to purposes so beneficial to the family, that in respect of it an equity arises in favour of the purchaser as against a member of the family seeking to set aside the transaction. In one case (k) the suit was by a son to set aside a conditional deed of sale executed by his father and his father's brother, so far as it affected his father's moiety of the property. It appeared that the deed was executed upon a loan of money, part of which was properly borrowed on grounds of legal necessity, while the remainder was not. The principal Sudder Amin treated the deed as valid in respect of a portion of the land in proportion to that part of the consideration money which was borrowed for and spent in a matter of legal necessity, and void as to the residue of the land conveyed. Sir Barnes Peacock, C. J., considered the correctness of this principle to be very doubtful, and intimated that in such a case the more reasonable course would be, that upon the defendant's establishing the necessity for part of the loan, the Court should decree that the deed should be

(g) Nathu v. Chadi, 4 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 15; S. C., sub nomine, Nuthoo v. Chedee, 12 Suth., 447.

(h) Virabhadra v. Gurusankata, 22 Mad., 342; where a misprint in Sabapathi v. Somasundaram, 16 Mad., at p. 79, is corrected.

(i) Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 5 Bom., 450.

(k) Rajaram Tewar v. Luchmun, 4 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 118—125; S. C., 12 Suth., 478.

where sale partly justifiable.

Equities on setting aside.

set aside, and the plaintiff recover possession upon his paying the amount which was legally taken up for necessary purposes recognized by law, or that the deed should be set aside, in proportion. No decision was given, however, as no relief could be given for want of necessary parties. In some later cases the course adopted was to set aside the deed on payment of so much of the consideration money as was a proper charge upon the estate (l).

So also, even though the charge has not been created for family purposes, if there are circumstances of laches or acquiescence which would render it inequitable that the deed should be set aside unconditionally, the Court will compel a refund of the purchase money (m).

§ 370. In some cases where the Court considered that the plaintiff should have offered to refund the purchase money, and the plaint contained no such offer, the suit was dismissed, the plaintiff being at liberty to bring a fresh suit differently framed (n). This seems to be a mere question of pleading. If, as Sir Barnes Peacock said (o), the onus lies on the defendant to allege and establish circumstances which entitled him to such repayment, one would imagine that the proper course would be for the plaintiff to claim to have the deed set aside, as not being for a matter of legal necessity or with the consent of the family, and for the defendant to get rid of this case, wholly or in part, by showing the circumstances which made out his equity to repayment. Where the plaintiff deliberately elected to rest his case upon an allegation of wasteful and extravagant borrowing, and failed to make out that case, Laches.

Necessity for offer to refund.

(l) Shurrut v. Bholanath, 15 B. L. R., 350; S. C., sub nomine, Surat v. Ashootosh, 24 Suth., 46; Tejpal v. Ganga, 20 All., 59. See, too, the analogous cases of alienations by a widow, Phoolchund v. Rughoobuns, 9 Suth., 108; Mutteeram v. Gopaul, 11 B. L. R., 416; S. C., 20 Suth., 187; Konwar v. Ram Chunder, 4 I. A., 52, 66; S. C., 2 Cal., 341; Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 5 Bom., 450; Subramania v. Ponnusami, 8 Mad., 92.

(m) Surub v. Shew Gobind, 11 B. L. R., Appx. 29.

(n) 11 B. L. R., 416; ib., Appx. 29. See Durga Prasad v. Nawazish, 1 All., 591.

(o) Modhoo v. Kolbur, B. L. R. Sup. Vol., 1018; S. C., 9 Suth., 511.

the Court refused to allow him to repay the purchase money, and have the deed cancelled (p).

Principles of Bengal law.

§ 371. When we come to Bengal law, as laid down by Jimuta Vahana, the whole of the above distinctions at once vanish. I have already (§ 259) pointed out the process by which he got rid of the principle which pervades the Benares law, that property in a son is by birth, and established the opposite principle, that a son is simply heir presumptive to his father, and entitled to nothing more than his father chooses to leave him. This doctrine, in which an admission that alienations by a father of ancestral property were immoral was coupled with an assertion that they were valid, naturally exercised the minds of English lawyers a good deal. They would have accepted the assertion as a matter of course, but they were perplexed by the admission. Accordingly, we find that Mr. W. MacNaghten laid down the law in a way which was really nothing more than the Mitakshara over again, and Sir Hyde East in 1819 took very much the same view (§ 260). The futwahs of the pundits were persistently given in accordance with the doctrines of Jimuta Vahana. But these futwahs appeared to be contradictory, because they were applied to two different states of fact, viz., alienations and distributions. To an English lawyer it seemed obvious, that if a man could give his property to strangers, he could also give it to his sons; and that if he could give everything to one son, to the exclusion of the others, à fortiori he could give it to all of them in any proportions he wished. But a Hindu pundit treated one proceeding as an alienation and the other as a partition. He produced one set of texts from Jimuta Vahana to show that the former proceeding was valid, and another set of texts, also from Jimuta Vahana, to show that the latter was invalid. It is not surprising that there was a good deal of confusion before the law was finally settled. As regards the right of Apparent contradiction.

(p) Muddan Gopal v. Ram Buksh, 6 Suth., 74.

a father in Bengal to make an unequal partition among his sons, it can hardly be said that the law is satisfactorily settled even now.

§ 372. The earliest reported case is in 1792, when a bequest (q) by the Zemindar of Nuddea of his entire ancestral Zemindary to his eldest son was supported. The document recited that the Zemindary was impartible, in which case, of course, it was unnecessary. The opinions of numerous pundits in different parts of the country are said to have been taken, and the majority of them declared, that whether the Zemindary had been previously exempt from division or not, the gift settling the Zemindary on the eldest son with a provision for the younger ones, was valid. This view was affirmed by the Sudder Court. Mr. Colebrooke appends a note to the case in which he agrees with the pundits' opinion, as being in accordance with the doctrines of Jimuta Vahana. He ends by saying: "No opinion was taken from the law officers of the Sudder Court in this case. But it has been received as a precedent which settles the question of a father's power to make an actual disposition of his property, even contrary to the injunctions of the law, whether by gift or by will, or by distribution of shares" (r). This decision was followed in 1800 by the Supreme Court, which affirmed the validity of the wills of Rajah Nobkissen and Nemy Churn Mullick, by which ancestral immovable property had been disposed of, in the former case at all events, to the prejudice of the testator's sons (s). And in 1812 the Sudder Court, after consulting their pundits, held that a gift by a father of his whole estate, real and personal, ancestral and otherwise, to a younger son during the life of the elder was valid, though immoral, the gift of the whole ancestral landed property being forbidden (t). In Alienations by father.

(q) The document is sometimes spoken of as a will, sometimes as a deed of gift; it seems really to have been the former.

(r) Eshanchund v. Eshorchund, 1 S. D., 2. The judgment of the Sudder Court will be found in 2 Stra. H. L., 447.

(s) F. MacN., 356, 340.

(t) Ramkoomar v. Kishenkunker, 2 S. D., 42 (52); F. MacN., 277.

1816, however, the law was unsettled again by the case of Bhowanny Churn v. The Heirs of Ramkaunt (u). That case will be discussed more fully hereafter (§ 491), but it is sufficient here to point out, that it was a case where a father had made an unequal partition, among his sons. The pundits practically found that, as a partition, it was invalid from its inequality, and that it could not be supported as a gift, because there had been no delivery of possession. The result was that the partition was set aside. The case is followed by an elaborate note in which the opinions of the pundits in this and the two previous cases in the Sudder Court are examined, and the writer intimates that those cases had probably been incorrectly decided, so far as they respect the ancestral immovable estate (v). It is evident, however, that the pundits would not have agreed in this view, for we find that in 1821 they pronounced opinions affirming a gift by a father of an ancestral taluq to one of his eleven sons (w), and in 1829 they supported a sale by a Zemindar of an ancestral taluq during the life of his son. They laid down the broad principle, "The law as current in Bengal recognizes no proprietary right in the son, so long as that of the father is existent; and therefore in the case stated, as Ram Shanker's (the father's) right in the soil, was existent, Mohun Chund (the son) could have no claim upon it" (x). Finally in 1831, the same question arose again in the Supreme Court of Bengal, and was referred to the Judges of the Sudder Dewanny, who returned the following certificate: "On mature consideration of the points referred to us, we are unanimously of opinion that the only doctrine that can be held by the Sudder Dewanny Adault, consistently with the decisions of the

(u) 2 S. D., 202 (259); F. MacN., 283, 294.

(v) These conflicting opinions were probably before Sir Hyde East in 1820, when he pronounced his judgment in Cossinaut Bysack v. Hurroosondry (2 M. Dig., 198), where he balances against each other two conflicting sets of texts, with an evident consciousness that he had got into a labyrinth to which he did not possess the clue.

(w) Raujkrisno v. Taraneychurn, F. MacN., 265, Appx. viii.

(x) Kumla v. Gooroo, 4 S. D., 322 (410).

Court, and the customs and usages of the people, is that a Hindu, who has sons, can sell, give, or pledge, without their consent, immovable ancestral property, situated in the province of Bengal; and that without the consent of the sons, he can, by will, prevent, alter or affect their succession to such property" (y). This certificate has ever since been accepted as settling the law in Bengal, on the points to which it refers (z), and it makes no difference that the property is impartible, and descends by the rule of primogeniture (a). Of course there never was any doubt as to the right of a Bengal proprietor to dispose of his property to the prejudice of relations other than his own issue (b), as for instance to deprive his widow of her share on a partition (c).

§ 373. As regards those who are coparceners in Bengal, that is brothers, cousins, or the like, who have taken property jointly by descent, or who have acquired it jointly, there is also no difficulty. In Bengal the right of every coparcener is to a definite share, though to an unascertained portion of the whole property (§ 265). This right passes by inheritance to female or other relations, just as if it were already divided, and it may be disposed of by each male proprietor just as if it were separate or self-acquired property. And such alienations will be taken into account as part of his share in the event of a partition. But, of course, no one can dispose of more than his share, unless by consent of the others, or for necessary purposes (d).

Rights of coparceners.

(y) Juggomohun v. Neemoo, Morton, 90; Motee Lal v. Mitterjeet, 6 S. D., 73 (85). A note follows that this certificate overrules the case of Bhowanny Churn. It really did nothing of the sort.

(z) See per curiam, Ramkishore v. Bhoobunmoyee, S. D. of 1859, 250; S. C., affd. on review, S. D. of 1860, i., 489.

(a) Uddoy v. Jadbatal, 5 Cal., 113; Narain v. Lokenath, 6 Cal., 461.

(b) F. MacN., 360; Bhowanee v. Mt. Taramunee, 3 S. D., 138 (184); Sheodas v. Kunwul, 3 S. D., 234 (313); Tarnee Churn v. Mt. Dasee, 3 S. D., 397 (530). As to the rights of an adopted son, see ante § 165.

(c) Debendra Oommar v. Brojendracoommar, 17 Cal., 886.

(d) Rajbulubh v. Mt. Buneta, 1 S. D., 44 (59); Pramath v. Calishunkur, 1 S. D., 45 (60); Anundchund v. Kishen, 1 S. D., 115 (152), where, see Mr. Colebrooke's notes. Ramkanhaee v. Bung Chund, 3 S. D., 17 (22); Kounla v. Ram Huree, 4 S. D., 196 (247); Sakhwat Trilok, 5 S. D., 338 (397); 2 W. MacN., 291, 294, 296, 306, n., 313.

And so an undivided coparcener may in Bengal lease out his own share, and put his lessee in possession (e). But as a son has no interest in his father's property during the father's life, a sale of such property by him during the father's life would be wholly void, and it has been ruled that if the purchaser had got into possession, the son himself might recover the property from him when his own title as heir accrued. The purchaser, however, would have a right to recover the purchase money (f).

Agreement
against alienation.

§ 374. It has been held in the Allahabad High Court that an agreement by one coparcener not to alienate his share to anyone except his coparcener is valid, and may be enforced, and that an alienation to a stranger made in violation of such an agreement may be set aside at the suit of the other coparceners (g). The former part of the ruling is, of course, beyond doubt. But it may be questioned whether the latter part would be followed by those Courts which recognize the right of a coparcener to dispose of his share. Can an agreement by a member of a family not to exercise his ordinary rights of property be enforced against a stranger, who has dealt with him in ignorance of such an agreement? In other words, can the agreement operate as anything more than a trust in favour of the other members of the family, which is ineffectual against a purchaser for value without notice of the trust? (h). Such an agreement has been held to be ineffectual against a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree (i).

Cases of gift.

§ 375. Throughout the preceding paragraphs no distinction has been drawn between gifts and transfers for valuable consideration. The High Courts of Madras and Bombay, it will be remembered, allow a coparcener to

(e) Ram Debul v. Miterjeet, 17 Suth., 420; Macdonald v. Lalla Shib, 21 Suth., 17.

(f) Gunganarain v. Bulram, 2 M. Dig., 152.

(g) Lakshmi v. Tori, 1 All., 618. See Lachmin v. Koteswar, 2 All., 826. See post §§ 426, 436.

(h) See Kanna Pisharodi v. Kombi Achen, 6 Mad., 361; Ali Hasan v. Dhirja 4 All., 518; Trimbak Jivaji v. Sakharam, 16 Bom., 599.

(i) Golak Nath v. Mathura, 20 Cal., 273.

alien his undivided share for value, but not by way of gift (§§ 358, 361), and according to the view taken by the High Court of Bengal, equities would arise in favour of a purchaser for value which would not exist in favour of a donee. Where a transaction can only be supported on the plea of necessity, of course a gift could never be valid. An exception may exist, perhaps, in favour of gifts of a certain part of the property for pious purposes. These will be treated of at length in Chapter XII on Religious Endowments. Where property is absolutely at the disposal of its owner, as being the property of a father under Bengal law, or the separate or self-acquired property of any person, he may give it away as freely as he may sell or mortgage it (k), subject to a certain extent to the claims of those who are entitled to be maintained by him (l). And where a gift is valid it may be accompanied with conditions, such as that the donor should be maintained by donee during his lifetime, and that his exequial ceremonies should be performed after his death in consideration of the gift (m); that the donee should forego claims against the donor, and should defray expenses of the worship of the idol (n); that the property should pass to another in a particular event (o). So a donatio mortis causa, revocable if the donor should recover from an illness, is valid (p). But a gift will be invalid which creates any estate unknown to, or forbidden by, Hindu law (q). Provisions which are repugnant to the nature of the grant, such as a restraint upon alienation or partition are invalid (r). So are all conditions which are immoral

Gifts.

Conditional.

Invalid.

(k) Saminadien v. Durmarajien, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 291; and see authorities cited ante § 373, note (e); 2 Dig., 159.

(l) As to the extent to which this limitation applies, see post § 461.

(m) Ram Narayan v. Mt. Sut Bunssee, 3 S. D., 377 (503); see note.

(n) Madhubehunder v. Ramasoodree, S. D. of 1853, 103; Gokool Nath v. Issur Lochun, 14 Cal., 222.

(o) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 9 M. L. A., 123, 135; per curiam, Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 192.

(p) Visalatchmi v. Subbu, 6 Mad. H. C., 270.

(q) Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 103; S. C., 9 B. L. R. (P. C.), 377; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(r) See post § 426; F. MacN., 327; Venkatramanna v. Brammanna, 4 Mad. H. C., 345; Amiruddaula v. Nateri, 6 Mad. H. C., 356; Thakoor Kapilnauth v. Government, 13 B. L. R., 445, 457; S. C., 22 Suth., 17; Anantha v. Nagamuthu, or illegal. Where the gift is in itself good, conditions which are repugnant, or illegal, or immoral are ineffectual, but the gift itself remains good. Where the illegal condition is the consideration for the gift, and therefore forms an essential part of it, both will fail (s). Where a gift is already complete, so that the property has completely passed from the donor to the donee, any conditions that may be subsequently added are absolutely void; since the person who attempts to impose them has ceased to have any right to do so (t). Where a gift to A for life is followed by a gift of the remainder of the estate to B, if the gift to A is void, the estate of B is accelerated, and takes effect at once (u). A gift to A with a condition postponing his enjoyment to a period beyond majority is good, but the condition is bad, unless there is an intermediate disposition in favour of some other person (v). And of course the same principles apply to a transfer for value.

§ 376. Few propositions have been laid down with more confidence than the doctrine that under Hindu law a gift is invalid without possession. Yet Hindu law, properly so called, appears to lay little stress on any such rule as specially applicable to gifts. Gifts have been always favoured by the Brahman lawyers, for the obvious reason that they were generally made to Brahmans. The early sages discuss the law of gifts with special reference to their liability to resumption. This depends on the purpose

4 Mad., 200; Gokool Nath v. Issur Lochun, 14 Cal., 222; Ali Hasan v. Dhurja, 4 All., 518; Narayanan v. Kannan, 7 Mad., 315; Bhairav v. Parmeshri, 7 All., 516; Herianna v. Ojani, 2 Mysore, 133. Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), §§ 10, 12. See as to such conditions in a lease, Vyankatroya v. Shivrambat, 7 Bom., 256; Nil Madhab v. Narattam, 17 Cal., 826, in a mortgage Mukkanni v. Manan Bhatta, 5 Mad., 186. See per curiam, Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R. (P. C.), 395, 406; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; and Renaud v. Tourangeau, L. R., 2 P. C., 4. As to agreements between coparceners not to divide, see post § 486.

(s) Ram Sarup v. Mt. Bela, 11 I. A., 44; S. C., 6 All., 313. Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), §§ 25, 18; re Dugdale, 38 Ch. D., 176, re Moore, 39 Ch. D., 116.

(t) Ram Sarup v. Mt. Bela, ub sup.

(u) Ajudhia Buksh v. Mt. Rukmin Kuar, 11 I. A., 1. Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 27. See also for a case where the subsequent estate fails, § 16.

(v) Gosavi Shingar v. Rivett-Carnac, 13 Bom., 463; Gordhandas v. Bai Mancoover, 26 Bom., 449.

of the gift or the special circumstances of the giver. Vrihaspati says: " Things once delivered on the following eight accounts cannot be resumed; for the pleasure of hearing poets, musicians or the like, as the price of goods sold, as a nuptial gift to a bride or her family, as an acknowledgment to a benefactor, as a present to a worthy man, from natural affection, or from friendship. What is given by a person in wrath or excessive joy, or through inadvertence, or during disease, minority or madness, or under the influence of terror, or by one intoxicated, or extremely old, or by an outcast or an idiot, or by a man afflicted with grief or with pain, or what is given in sport; all this is declared ungiven or void. If anything be given for a consideration unperformed, or to a bad man mistaken for a good one, or for any illegal act, the owner may take it back " (w). Katyayana says that " He who delivers not a present, which he has promised to a priest, shall be compelled to pay it as a debt, and incurs the first amercement; " and Harita lays it down broadly that " a promise legally made in words, but not performed in deed, is a debt of conscience both in this world and the next " (x). In one case reported by Mr. MacNaghten (y), where the facts placed before the pundit stated, " It does not clearly appear that the donee ever took possession of the property given; " his futwah asserted that the gift could not be resumed, quoting as authority a text of Manu " once is the partition of an inheritance made; once is a damsel given in marriage, and once does a man say, " I give. " These three are by good men done once for all and irrevocably. " No doubt the pundit also answered that even without a gift the donee was entitled to the property as being adopted in the Kritrima form. The necessity for acceptance is put more prominently forward by (w) 2 Dig., 174, 197; Narada, Pt. II, ch. iv.; Katyayana, 2 Dig., 197; Manu, viii., §§ 212, 213; Gotama, 2 Dig., 172. See as to revocation of gifts the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 126.

(x) 2 Dig., 170, 171.

(y) 2 W. MacN., 249, case xlii. See also case xxxv., p. 243.

Yajnavalkya (z), who says, "The acceptance of a gift should be public, especially of immovable property. Whatever may be lawfully given and is contracted to be given, shall not after gift be resumed." So far as this text makes possession necessary to give validity to a gift, Yajnavalkya seems to treat it as standing on the same footing with other modes of transfer. In an earlier passage (a), he says, "Acquisition by title is stronger than possession, unless this has come down from ancestors. But acquisition by title is of no avail without possession for a short time." The whole subject is discussed at considerable length by the author of the Mitakshara under two headings, of possession without a title and of a title without possession (b). As regards gift he says, "gift consists in the relinquishment of one's own right, and the creation of the right of another; and the creation of another man's right is completed on that others acceptance of the gift but not otherwise. Acceptance is made by three means, mental, verbal or corporeal. Mental acceptance is the determination to appropriate; verbal acceptance is the utterance of the expression, this is mine or the like; corporeal acceptance is manifold, as by touching" (c). "In the case of land, as there can be no corporeal acceptance without enjoyment of the produce, it must be accompanied by some little possession; otherwise the gift, sale, or other transfer is not complete. A title, therefore, without corporeal acceptance, consisting of the enjoyment of the produce, is weaker than a title accompanied by it or with such corporeal acceptance. But such is the case, only, where of these two the priority is undistinguishable;

(z) II, 176.

(a) II, 27.

(b) Mit., iii., §§ 5 and 6, translated by Mr. William MacNaghten, 1 W. MacN., 212, 217.

(c) Under English law the acceptance of a gift by a donee is to be presumed until his dissent is signified, even though the donee is not aware of it, and the presumption has even been held to apply to a gift which the donor desired to revoke before the donee knew that it had been made. Per Lindley, L. J., 21 Q. B. D., p. 541. Where, however, delivery is necessary, as in the case of a parol gift of a chattel capable of gift, mere words of giving and acceptance, communicated by the donor to the donee, and by the donee to the donor, do not pass the property without delivery. Cochrane v. Moore, 25 Q. B. D., 57.

but when it is ascertained which is first in point of date, and which posterior, then the simple prior title affords the stronger evidence. Or the interpretation may be as follows: "Evidence is said to consist of documents, possession, and witnesses." This having been premised as the general rule, the text "a title is more powerful than possession unaccompanied by hereditary succession," and "where there is not the least possession, there a title is not sufficient," have been propounded to point out to which the superiority belongs, where the three descriptions of evidence meet." Apparently, in the view of Vijnaneswara, acceptance was necessary to complete a gift because according to a Hindu lawyer property can never be in abeyance. It cannot pass out of one till it is received by another (d). The very nature of a mortgage or sale, which is necessarily a bilateral proceeding, assumes acceptance. No such assumption exists in the case of a gift. But as regards actual corporeal acceptance, or as he calls it "some little possession," he appears to put a gift on the same footing with a sale or other transfer. As to all three evidence of possession is material in order to determine priorities between conflicting claims, where any such dispute exists. Where no such dispute exists, then the general rule applies "In the case of a pledge, a gift, or a sale, the prior contract has the greater force" (e).

§ 377. It is probable that the rule that actual possession is necessary to give validity to a gift arose, not from any special doctrine of Hindu law, but from the general principle common to all systems of law, that a voluntary promise cannot be enforced, though the voluntary act, when completed is irrevocable (f). To this extent the doctrine received very early recognition in our Courts, and has long since been enforced (g). Whether the English doctrine

(d) Gordhandas v. Bai Mancoover, 26 Bom., 449.

(e) Mit., iii., 2, § 5; 1 W. MacN., 200.

(f) See per curiam, 11 L. A., p. 233; Standing v. Bowring, 31 Ch. D., 282.(g) 2 Str. H. L., 426; 2 W. MacN., 243, case xxxvi.; Kishto Soondery v. Kishto Motee, Marshall, 367; Sham Singh v. Mt. Umraotee, 2 S. D., 75 (92); Harjivan v. Naran Haribai, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 31; Vasudev v. Narayan, 7 Bom., 131; Abaji Gangadhar v. Mukta, 18 Bom., 688; Ramamirtha v. Gopala, 19

Incomplete gift cannot be enforced.

of Equity that a declaration of trust, not amounting to a legal transfer, can be enforced in favour of the object of the trust would be extended to cases governed by Hindu law is undecided (h). It is quite certain that no promise to confer a future benefit upon a priest, however holy, would be enforced by the secular Courts (i). Where, however, the donor has done everything in his power to complete the gift, and the resistance to his attempts to give it full effect arises from a third person, the fact that possession has not been given is no answer to a suit by the donee against the obstructing party (k).

§ 378. To complete a gift there must be a transfer of the apparent evidences of ownership from the donor to the donee (l). It is, however, sufficient if the change of possession is such as the nature of the case admits of. Therefore, where the gift is of land, which is in the possession of tenants, receipt of rent by the donee is enough, even though it is received through a person who received it formerly as agent for the donor; or delivery to the donee of the deed of gift, and of the counterpart lease executed to the donor by the tenants (m). So a gift may be made to an absent person, if his acceptance of it is certain, but if it is unknown whether he will accept or not, the right

Mad., 433. The Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 122 only requires an acceptance of the gift by or on behalf of the donee, which acceptance must be made during the lifetime of the donor, and while he is still capable of giving. If the donee dies before acceptance, the gift is void. But by § 129 nothing in the above provisions would affect any rule of Hindu law.

(h) Venkatachella v. Thathamma, 4 Mad. H. C., 466; Hirbai v. Jan Mahomed, 7 Bom., 229; Bhaskar Purshotam v. Sarasvatibai, 17 Bom., 486; Gordhandas v. Bai Mancoover, 26 Bom., 449, p. 472.

(i) Manjanadhaya v. Tangamma, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 24; Nursing v. Mohunt, S. D. of 1857, 1000.

(k) Kabidas v. Kanhya Lall, 11 I. A., 218; S. C., 11 Cal., 121. See the facts of this case stated, post § 387; followed in cases under Muhammedan law. Mahomed Buksh v. Hosseini Bibi, 15 I. A., 81; S. C., 15 Cal., 684; Sheikh Muhamed v. Zuabida Jan, 16 I. A., 205; S. C., 11 All., 460; Balmakund v. Bhagwan Das, 16 All., 185.

(l) Mere Registration of the deed of gift is not sufficient, without some possession or acceptance by the donee. Lakshimoni v. Nithyananda, 24 Cal., 464. Any continuance of ownership in the donor is inconsistent with a perfect gift. Nawab Ibrahim Alkhan v. Ummat-ul-Zohra, 24 I. A., 1; S. C., 19 All., 267.

(m) Bank of Hindustan v. Premchand, 5 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 83; Wannathan v. Keyakadath, 6 Mad. H. C., 194; Harjivan v. Naran, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 31; Man Bhari v. Nainidh, 4 All., 40; Kallyani v. Narayana, 9 Mad., 267; Anwari Begam v. Nizam-ud-din, 21 All., 165.

of the donor continues (n). And it was stated by a pundit in Bengal that a gift would be valid, even though the donor retained possession, if it was expressly stated in the deed that he was holding the property as a loan from the donee (o). So it has been held that, where the donee is incapable of taking possession, as being a minor or a lunatic, the possession of the donor is enough, if it is expressly asserted to be in trust for the donee (p). And when the donee was in possession either alone, or jointly with the donor, before the gift, the continuance of his possession is sufficient, without any new delivery (q). So where one of several donees is already in possession, a declaration of gift to him on behalf of all, assented to by himself and the other donees is sufficient, without putting them in possession (r). The gift of an incorporeal right will be sufficient if it is made in such a manner as would suffice for the transfer of choses in action (s). It follows from the above principles that, whether the gift be in presenti or in futuro, the donee must be a person in existence, and capable of accepting the gift at the time it takes effect (t). The only exceptions are the cases of an infant in the womb, or a person adopted after the death of the husband under an authority from him. Such persons are by a fiction of law considered to have been in existence at the time of the death (u). A gift to an idol, which is not in existence at the death of the testator, is invalid, though the deity represented by the idol is already in existence (v).

Donee must be in existence.

(n) Srikrishna, cited with approval by Macpherson, J., Krishnaramani v. Ananda, 4 E. L. R. (O. C. J.), 291.

(o) Shodas v. Kukwul, 3 S. D., 234 (313).

(p) Punjab Cust., 75; 2 W. MacN., 243.

(q) Meyajee v. Metha, Bom. Sel. Rep., 80, 89; Sheik Ibrahim v. Sheik Sulman, 9 Bom., 146. This, and the previous case, were decided under Muhammedan law, which in this respect agrees with the Hindu law.

(r) Bai Kushal v. Lakhma Mana, 7 Bom., 452.

(s) Chellamma v. Subamma, 7 Mad., 23; Khursadji v. Pestonji, 12 Bom., 573.

(t) This is the actual time of giving, that is the date of the gift, if inter vivos, or the death of the testator, if by will; not the possible time of receiving. See Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., 399; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Soudaminy v. Jogesh, 2 Cal., 265; Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal., 455; Bai Mamubai v. Dossa Moraji, 15 Bom., 443; post § 384.

(u) Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 103; S. C., on appeal in the Privy Council, 9 B. L. R., 377, 397, 400, 404; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(v) Upendra Lal v. Hem Chundra, 25 Cal., 405; Rajomoyee v. Troylukho, 29 Cal., 260.

Gift to a class of whom some are incapable of taking.

§ 379. The principle last stated has given rise to a class of cases as to which there appears to be some conflict of authority. In England it is well settled that where a gift or bequest is made to a class of persons, some of whom are incapable of taking, the disposition fails as to all. This rests not upon any technicality of English law, but upon the ground that the intention of the donor was to benefit all equally, and that it is impossible to know what shape his wishes would have taken, if he had been informed that they could not be carried out as he intended (w). This rule has been applied in several cases in India, where it has been held that a disposition in favour of a class of persons, as to some of whom the gift is void for remoteness, or some of whom are or may be incapable of taking as being unborn at the time when the gift should take effect, is void as to all. And the rule applies even though all the members of the class are in fact born before the gift or bequest takes effect, if it was antecedently possible that they might not have been so born, since "it is an invariable rule that regard is had to possible not actual events, and the fact that the gift might have included objects too remote, is fatal to its validity irrespective of the event" (x). The existence of such a rule, as properly applicable to India, appears to have been recognised by the Judicial Committee in one case, though they were of opinion that upon the true construction of the instrument the disposition did not come within the rule (y). The rule itself is expressly made applicable by the Legislature to transfers which are invalid as offending against the doctrine of perpetuity, or (w) Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer., 363, 390; Pearks v. Moseley, 5 App. Ca., 714; per Supreme Court of Calcutta, 8 M. I. A., p. 79.

(x) Brahmanaji v. Jages Chandra, 8 B. L. R., 400; Soudamoney v. Jogesh, 2 Cal., 262; Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal., 455; Jairam v. Ruverbai, 9 Bom., 491, 508; Javerbai v. Kablibai, 15 Bom., 326; 1 Jarman on Wills, 5th ed., 232. Where the invalidity of any disposition of property turns on the possibility that a particular person might have children, evidence is not admissible to show that from advanced age the birth of future children is impossible; re Dawson, 39 Ch. D., 155. The same rule would, no doubt, apply to any other physical incapacity.

(y) Kumar Tarakeswar v. Kumar Shoshi, 10 I. A., at p. 60; S. C., 9 Cal., at p. 960.

where an attempt is made to create a series of limited interests in favour of persons not in existence at the date of the transfer, after the termination of a previous vested estate (z). Whether it was intended to exclude the application of the rule in all other cases is matter of argument or inference.

§ 380. A class within the meaning of this rule has been defined as follows by Mr. Jarman (a). "A number of persons are popularly said to form a class when they can be designated by some general term, as children, grandchildren, nephews, but in legal language the question whether a gift is one to a class depends not upon those considerations, but upon the mode of gift itself, viz., that it is a gift of an aggregate sum to a body of persons uncertain in number at the time of the gift, to be ascertained at a future time and who are to take in equal or in some other definite proportions, the share of each being dependent for its amount upon the ultimate number of persons." The rule does not apply where all the individuals are named, as then the intention of the donor as to each is defined. In such a case, if they are to take as tenants in common, and the gift fails as to some, the others take their appointed shares (b). If they are to take jointly, those who are capable of taking are entitled to the whole (c). Nor does it apply where the nature of the benefit conferred—such as residence in a family house—is not dependent on the number of persons who may ultimately prove that they have a right to share (d). Where there are independent and alternative gifts, of which one is good at the time the document takes effect, and the other is void, the former will take effect, and the latter will be disregarded (e).

(z) Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 15; Succession Act (X of 1865), § 102. Nothing in these sections alters any principle of Hindu law. Act IV of 1882, § 2; Act XXI of 1870, § 3; Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni, 8 Cal., 637.

(a) Jarman Wills, I, 232, 5th ed.

(b) James v. Lord Wynford, 1 Sm. & Giff., p. 59.

(c) Naudi Singh v. Sitaram, 1 I. A., 44; S. C., 16 Cal., 677.

(d) Krishanath v. Atmaram, 15 Bom., 543.

(e) Re Harvey, 39 Ch. D., 289; Raikishori v. Debendranath, 15 I. A., 37; S. C., 15 Cal., 409.

Meaning of the term 'class.'

Recent decisions,
Rai Bishen Chand v. Mt. Asmaida Koer.

§ 381. Later decisions throw some doubt upon the above doctrine as of universal application in India. The first case is a decision of the Judicial Committee, which of course is conclusive as to whatever it lays down (f). In that case there were alive as members of an undivided family governed by Mitakshara law, Mata Dyal, his son Udey Narrain, and Satrujit, the only son of Udey Narrain. To protect the estate against the profligacy of Udey Narrain, Mata Dyal, with the consent of Udey Narrain, to whom a sum of Rs. 5,000 was paid, transferred the estate to Satrujit Narrain and his own brothers who are born or may be born hereafter. The validity of this gift was objected to, amongst other reasons, on the ground that as the unborn sons of Udey could not take, the gift to Satrujit himself, as a member of the class of Udey's sons, was invalid. In support of this view reference was made to § 102 of the Succession Act (X of 1865). As to this the Committee replied that the gift in question did not come within the terms of the section (g). Upon the general question their Lordships held that the gift was not made to a class of whom Satrujit was one, but that it was made to Satrujit as a person in whose favour it was intended to operate at once, for a purpose which would be absolutely frustrated if it did not so operate. The further intention that his younger brothers, if he ever had any, should share in the benefit of the gift, could not be carried out, but that was no reason for holding the whole transaction to be void. They said (h): "Cases are not rare in which a Court of construction, finding that the whole plan of a donor of property cannot be carried into effect, will yet give effect to part of it, rather than hold that it shall fail entirely. In the present case, there is every reason for holding that, if Satrujit's possible brothers are not able to

(f) Rai Bishen Chand v. Mt. Asmaida Koer, 11 I. A., 164; S. C., 6 All., 560.

(g) It seems very doubtful whether under the saving clause of the Hindu Wills Act, § 102 of Act X of 1865 has any application to Hindu Wills. See per Wilson, J., 12 Cal., p. 669. It has no application whatever to gifts or transfers inter vivos.

(h) 11 I. A., 178; S. C., 6 All., p. 578.

take by virtue of the gift, he shall take the whole. He is there present and able to receive the gift. He is an individual designated in the deed. If the deed stood alone, it is a question in each case whether a designated person who is coupled with a class described in general terms is merged into that class or not. But the deed does not stand alone. It is followed by actions of a kind which, even without a deed, may work a transfer of property in India. Satrujit is entered in the Collector's books as the sole possessor of the property, and his guardian takes possession, first in his name and afterwards as his successor. Their Lordships hold that the circumstance that the parties wished to do something beyond their legal power, and that they have used unskilful language in the deed of gift, ought not to invalidate that important part of their plan which is consistent with one construction of the deed, and is clearly proved from the transfer of the property in fact."

§ 382. This decision was followed in a very similar case in Calcutta (i), where a man by deed of gift gave certain property to Ramlal and Shamlal, the two existing infant sons of his son Madhub, with a direction that they and their uterine brothers who should be born hereafter should divide the same amongst them in equal shares. He then proceeded to provide that the two grandsons so named should be placed in possession and have their names registered. But the rights of the uterine brothers to be born in future were not to be extinguished by this possession. The Court held on the authority of the Privy Council case that the gift was good to the persons so designated, though ineffectual as to those who might be born hereafter. Wilson, J., however, upon an elaborate examination of all the Indian and English authorities, arrived at the conclusion (p. 681) that the rule in Leake v. Robinson was only applied in England to gifts to a class tainted with the vice of remoteness, and that the Indian Succession Act, § 102, and the Transfer of Property Act, § 15, marked the intention that the rule should only be extended to India in similar cases. He then expressed his opinion that the decision in Rai Bishen Chand's case was inconsistent with the rulings in Soudamoney's and Kherodemoney's cases, and ended by saying (p. 685) "For these reasons I should be prepared, if necessary, to dissent wholly from the doctrine laid down in those cases, and to hold, as the general rule, that where there is a gift to a class, some of whom are or may be incapacitated from taking, because not born at the date of gift or the death of the testator as the case may be, and where there is no other objection to the gift, it should enure for the benefit of those members of the class who are capable of taking."

Calcutta decisions.

(i) Ramlal Sett v. Kanai Lal, 12 Cal., 663; Bhoba Tarini v. Peary Lal, 24 Cal., 646, p. 658.

Madras & Bombay decisions.

§ 383. The latter part of the judgment was, of course, merely obiter dictum. The views there laid down have, however, been followed to their full extent by the High Courts of Madras and Bombay. Property was granted to a man for his life, and at his death to persons (in the Madras case his brothers, in the Bombay case his children) forming a class, whose description would equally embrace persons born during and after the life of the testator or settler. In each case the person who claimed the property had been in fact born before the document took effect, and no one had been born after that date. The Court held that he was entitled to take in accordance with the Calcutta judgment (k). The Bombay High Court further supported its opinion by a reference to the language of Jessel, M. R., (l) where he said: "I think there is a convenient mode of interpreting this testator's intention and it is this: The testator may be considered to have a (k) Manjamma v. Padmanabhayya, 12 Mad., 393; Mangaldas v. Tribhoovandas, 15 Bom., 562; Tribhoovandas v. Gungadas, 18 Bom., 7; Krishnarau v. Benabai, 20 Bom., 571; Khinji Jairam v. Morarji, 22 Bom., 533; Gordhandas v. Bai Mancoover, 26 Bom., 449, p. 468. On the other hand Stanley, J., in 1901 laid down the law on this point in Rajomoyee v. Troylukho, 29 Cal., 260, p. 276 exactly as stated; ante § 379.

(l) In re Coleman, 4 Ch. D., p. 169.

primary and a secondary intention. His primary intention is that all members of the class shall take, and his secondary intention is that if all cannot take, those who can shall do so." In the case before Jessel, M. R., the testator had given certain property to "the children of my late brother Joseph Coleman who shall survive me or who shall have died in my lifetime leaving issue living at my death in equal shares." Four children of Joseph were living at the testator's death, and one had died leaving issue living at the death of the testator. The Master of the Rolls said that he intended somehow to provide for a child who died leaving issue, but did not know how to do it. That part of the gift therefore failed; but the supposed secondary intention was carried out by holding that the four children took the share among them. The doctrine of Leake v. Robinson had no application to the case, which was decided on completely different principles as regards the child who had predeceased the testator.

§ 384. The same question arose in a different form in Bombay, in cases where a power, indefinite in its object, was conferred by will, and where it was objected that the power might be, and in one case actually was exercised in favour of a person who was not alive at the death of the testator. In the first case (m) the testator appointed his brother Jamnadas his executor, and left his property on various trusts for any person or persons whom Jamnadas might by any deed or writing appoint. Jamnadas left the property by will to his daughters Kabli and Moti, of whom Moti was born after the death of the testator. Farran, J., held that, under the terms of the will, Jamnadas had an absolute estate, and that therefore Kabli and Moti received the estate from him and not from the testator, and therefore the devise was valid as to both daughters. On appeal the High Court held that Jamnadas had never any estate but that of a trustee with a power; and that this power could only be exercised "subject to the same restrictions Exercise of power.

(m) Javerbai v. Kablibai, 15 Bom., 326; 16 Bom., 492, p. 499.

as the Hindu testamentary law imposes on the testator himself, viz., that the appointment should be made during the life of the tenant for life, so that the appointee may be ascertained when the event arises on which he is to take; and also that he should be a person who was alive at the death of the testator." This decision was followed by the High Court in the next case (n). There the Court was asked to administer the estate and construe the will of the testator. He had constituted a trust for the management of his property, the last clause of which was as follows: "But should there be no children born to the womb of my daughter Mamu, then, after the death of Mamu and my wife Motivahu this trust is to become void, and the property delivered to such persons as my daughter Mamu may direct it to be delivered by making her will." Farran, J., held, as in the previous case, that the will had constituted Mamu absolute owner, and that no question could arise as to the power, as the appointee would take from Mamu. The Court on appeal followed their decision in the previous case, but restricted the exercise of the power vested in Mamu by adding to the decree the clause "And this Court doth further declare that the gift contained in para. 8 of the said will to such person in existence at death of testator as the plaintiff Mamubai may direct by her will is valid." On appeal to the Privy Council the decision was affirmed, but the restriction clause, which was varied by a declaration "that the gifts contained in these paragraphs respectively to such persons as Mamubai may direct by making her will are valid gifts, so far as the same may be directed to be delivered to persons who were in existence, either actually or in contemplation of law, at the death of the testator, and not further or otherwise, but that this Court cannot and doth not determine upon whom the property subject to such powers respectively will devolve, if and so far as such powers are not validly exercised" (o).

(n) Bai Mamubai v. Dossa Morarji 15 Bom., 443. On appeal Bai Motivahu v. Bai Mamubai. 19 Bom., 647; aff'd. 24 I. A., 93; S. C., 21 Bom., 709; Advocate-General v. Karnali, 29 Bom., 134, p. 149.

This decision appears to over-rule the opinion of Mr. Justice Starling (p), that when "the testator intended the trusts to be set out in a deed, it is to the date of the deed that we must look for the purpose of determining the validity of the limitations and not to the date of the testator's death." It is also an express ruling that, so far as powers are introduced into Hindu law, they are governed by the English rule that a power is not invalid, because it may be invalidly exercised, and that where its exercise is partly valid and partly invalid, the invalid part, if separable, may be rejected, and the valid portion left to stand (q). Of course, this ruling has a material bearing upon the question under discussion.

§ 385. A gift once completed by delivery or its equivalent is binding upon the donor himself, and upon his representatives, and is valid even against his creditors; provided it was made bonâ fide, that is, with the honest intention of passing the property, and not merely as a fraudulent contrivance to conceal the real ownership (r).

Valid against creditors.

§ 386. Another question which has given rise to numerous and conflicting decisions, is as to the necessity for delivery of possession where the transfer is not by way of gift, but by way of mortgage or sale of land. Such a transaction, even without possession, would, of course, be valid and enforceable as against the transferor. But the importance of the question would arise where the rights of third parties were concerned. For instance, where the Necessity for delivery where transfer is for consideration.

(o) See a somewhat similar declaration in an earlier case, 24 I. A., p. 91.

(p) Tribhuvandas v. Gangadas, 18 Bom., 7.

(q) Stark v. Dakyns, 10 Ch. D., 35; Sugden Powers, 182, 1 Jarman Wills, 260, 5th ed.

(r) Sabapaty v. Panyandy, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 61; Abhachari v. Ramachendrayya, 1 Mad. H. C., 393; Gnanabhai v. Srinavasa, 4 Mad. H. C., 84; Nasir v. Mata, 2 All., 891; Rai Bishen Chand v. Asmaida Koer, 11 I. A., 164; S. C., 6 All., 560; Ganga Baksh v. Jagat Bahadur, 22 I. A., 153; S. C., 23 Cal., 15; Rajaram v. Ganesh, 23 Bom., 131. Of course it may be set aside for any ground which shows that it was void ab initio against the donor, as from fraud practised on him or defective knowledge on his part as to its effect. Bai Manigavri v. Narondas, 15 Bom., 549. As to the onus of proof that a Hindu female who makes a gift was aware of her rights, see Deo Kuar v. Man Kuar, 21 I. A., 148; S. C., 17 All., 1.

same property was mortgaged or sold twice, and possession given to the last transferee. If the first transfer was valid without possession, the first transferee could bring ejectment for the land. If it required possession, his only remedy would be against his transferor by suit for specific performance or for damages. There is a good deal in the passages from the native writers quoted above (§ 376) which might have been interpreted as intimating that an actual delivery of possession was necessary in order to give effect to any species of transfer. But the more natural explanation appears to be that they refer to two different matters, viz., the effect of possession as evidencing a right, and the effect of possession as destroying a right. For instance, Narada says: "Written proof, witnesses, and possession, these are the three kinds of evidence on which the right to property rests (and by means of which), a creditor may recover a loan. A document remains always evidence, witnesses as long as they live, and possession after a lapse of time. What a man is not possessed of, that is not his own, even though there be written proof, and even though witnesses be living; this is especially the case with immovables." But in the next verse he shows that he is speaking of what we would call the law of limitations, as he fixes periods after which possession shall destroy the right to recover; and further on he says: "Where possession exists, but no title whatever exists, there a title but not possession (alone) can confer proprietary rights. A title having been substantiated, the possession becomes valid; it remains invalid without a proved title." He winds up by saying, "In all business transactions the latest act shall prevail; but in the case of a gift, a pledge, or a purchase, the prior act has the greater force." In a subsequent text he says: "What a man possesses without a title, he must not alienate" (s). Vijnaneswara in commenting on the same rule, viz., that "in the case of a pledge, a gift, or a sale, the prior contract has the greater force," expressly points out that this applies to the case where a person who has sold or mortgaged to one, afterwards, through delusion or avarice, makes a similar sale or mortgage to another (t). These texts and many others are reviewed by Professor Wilson, in an article on Sir F. MacNaghten's considerations on Hindu law, and this article with further texts was examined by the Madras High Court in reference to a question of inchoate partition. Dr. Wilson states his view as follows: "It is therefore in our estimation quite clear that the Hindu Law and common sense go hand in hand. A man may forego his rights if he pleases, and any capricious abandonment of them for an unreasonable time is to be punished by their forfeiture. But he is not to be deprived of what is legally his, because legal proceedings, interested opposition, accident, distance or disease debar him from taking possession of it when it first becomes his due." To which the Madras High Court adds: "This seems to us precisely the doctrine derivable from the text writers" (u).

(s) Narada, iv., §§ 2—13, 17. See also 18—23, 27.

§ 387. The Madras Courts have always held that a sale by the owner without delivery of possession is valid as against a subsequent sale by the original owner followed by possession, and that the first vendee may bring ejectment both against the vendor and the second vendee, "on the simple principle that, after the conveyance to the first vendee, the owner of the land had nothing whatever to convey" (v). Two cases in the Privy Council (w) were for Decisions in Madras.

Privy Council decisions.

(t) Mit., iii., 2, § 6; 1 W. MacN., 200. The Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 43 lays down the same rule.

(u) Wilson's Works, v., 88; Lakshmy v. Narasimha, 3 Mad. H. C., 40, 46 affirmed; 13 M. I. A., 113; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 40.

(v) Velayuda v. Sivarama, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 277; Virabhadra v. Hari Rama, 3 Mad. H. C., 38; Vasudeva Bhatlu v. Narasamma, 5 Mad., 6; Ramasami v. Murrinattu, 6 Mad., 404; Ponnayya Gounden v. Muttu Gounden, 17 Mad., 146.

In case of successive sales of the same property by decree of Court, the priority of the purchases depends on the date of sale, not upon the date of certificate. Dagdu v. Panchan Sing, 17 Bom., 375.

(w) Perhlad Sein v. Baboo Budhoo, 12 M. I. A., 300, 306—309; S. C., 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 111; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 6; Bhobosundree v. Issuruchunder, 11 B. L. R., 36; S. C., 18 Suth., 140; compare Kamala v. Pitchoocooty, 10 M. I. A., 386, 395.

some time supposed to have laid down the rule that a sale will be invalid, first, if the vendor cannot give possession, and, secondly, if he does not give possession. In earlier editions of this work I had suggested that neither of those cases decided that a document, intended to operate as a transfer in presenti of a specific piece of land, would be invalid because possession was not given under it. In both cases the Judicial Committee held that the document was not intended so to operate. In both cases, too, the sale was not of a specific piece of property, but of a share in something afterwards to be recovered. Something remained to be done between the parties before the purchaser could say that he had a claim to any definite field or house. This view was taken by the Privy Council in a later case when the same question arose (x). There Romasundari gave to Ruttonmoni an estate for an interest which was ultimately decided to be only good for Ruttonmoni's life, and placed her in possession. In 1864 Ruttonmoni's interest was sold in execution, and purchased by Kanhya Lall, who also got into possession. She died in 1867. In 1876 Romasundari by gift bestowed the same estate upon the wife of Kalidas. Neither Romasundari nor her second donee ever regained possession from Kanhya Lall. The suit to recover possession was brought by the executor of the second donee against the purchaser from the first donee, the donor being joined as defendant. It was contended that the second deed of gift was utterly invalid, inasmuch as the donor was out of possession, and no possession was ever given to the donee. The Judicial Committee decided against this contention. After citing the two decisions above referred to, they say (p. 232), "Neither of these decisions is applicable to the present case. The ground of them is that the plaintiff was not entitled under the terms of the contract of sale to possession. In this case the appellant is under the terms of the gift entitled to possession, and their Lordships see no reason why a gift or contract of sale of property, whether movable or immovable, if it is not of a nature which makes the giving effect to it contrary to public policy, should not operate to give to the donee or purchaser a right to obtain possession. This appears to be consistent with Hindu Law. On the principle contended for by the respondent, so long as he prevents the true owner from taking possession, however violently or wrongfully, that owner cannot make any title to a grantee."

(x) Kalidas v. Kanhya Lall, 11 I. A., 118; S. C., 11 Cal., 121; followed Mahomed Buksh v. Hosseini Bibi, 15 I. A., 11; S. C., 15 Cal., 684.

§ 388. During the period which elapsed between these decisions there was naturally a good deal of conflict in the rulings of the Courts of Calcutta and Bombay. The former Court always leant against the doctrine that possession was necessary to complete a transfer for consideration. In cases decided before the earlier Privy Council cases, it was held by the Sudder Court, and by the High Court of Bengal that a person out of possession, but who had a right to possession, might convey his title to a third party, and that the latter might bring ejectment upon that title against anyone who had an inferior title (y). The same point again came before the High Court after the Privy Council decisions, and they ruled that the dicta of the Judicial Committee must be taken subject to the facts of the particular cases. Where the vendor had been in peaceable possession, and then been dispossessed, they ruled that a sale of his title carried with it the right to eject (z). The same decision was given in still later cases, in which it was stated that the vendor was out of possession, but it does not appear whether he had previously been in possession (a). In 1882, in consequence of a recent decision to the contrary, the question was referred to a Full Bench (b), which stated unhesitat-

Decisions in Calcutta.

(y) Surbonarrain v. Maharaj, S. D. of 1858, 601; Prankrishna v. Biswambhar, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 207, over-ruling Dinomonee v. Gyrufoollah, 2 Suth., 138; Kumrooddeen v. Shaikh Bhadro, 11 Suth., 134.

(z) Bikan v. Mt. Parbutty, 22 Suth., 99; Gungahurry v. Raghubram, 14 B. L. R., 307; S. C., 23 Suth., 131; Nittyanund v. Shama Churn, 23 Suth., 163.

(a) Aulock v. Aulock, 25 Suth., 48; Bissessur v. Joykishore, ibid., 223.

(b) Narain Chunder v. Dataram, 8 Cal., 597, 610, over-ruling Dimonath v. Aulockmonee, 7 Cal., 753.

ingly its opinion "that delivery of possession is not under the Hindu law, essential to complete the title of a purchaser for value." A sale by a person who is out of possession by reason of the adverse holding of hostile claimants is not a sale of an actionable claim within the meaning of § 135 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) (c). Other cases in which the High Court of Bengal professed to follow the early decisions in the Privy Council in holding that transfers by a person out of possession were invalid, were no doubt rightly decided according to the true meaning of those decisions. They were not actual sales of specific pieces of land, but agreements for the division of property then under litigation, and were clearly opposed to public policy (d). In another case, in which a similar decision was given, nothing appears except that the assignor never at any time had had possession of the property which he assigned (e).

§ 389. In Bombay both usage and the course of decisions have been in favour of requiring possession, in order to give validity to all sorts of transfer as against subsequent purchasers for value without notice. Some of the later decisions rested on the supposed authority of the two Privy Council cases above referred to (f). But the same ruling prevailed anterior to and independent of those dicta. The whole law upon the subject was reviewed by the High Court, in a case where the owner of land had sold it by deed of sale to a party who paid a portion of the price, and on the same day sold it by a second deed to another party who paid the whole price and was put into possession. The suit was brought by the first vendee against the vendor and the second vendee. The Privy Council decisions were referred to but apparently little relied on. After an elaborate examination of the native

(c) Modun Mohun v. Futturumissa, 13 Cal., 297.

(d) Tarasondaree v. Collector of Mymensingh, 13 B. L. R., 495; S. C., 20 Suth., 446; Boodhun v. Mt. Lateefan, 22 Suth., 535; Bishonath v. Chunder, 23 Suth., 165.

(e) Ram Khelawun v. Mt. Oudh, 21 Suth., 101.

(f) Ante § 387; Girdhar v. Daji, 7 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 4; Kachu v. Kachoba, 10 Bom. H. C., 491.

authorities and the decisions in the Presidency Courts, judgment was given in favour of the defendant, on the broad ground that the sale without possession was invalid as against a subsequent purchaser without notice of it (g). In a later case Westropp, C. J., said: "Our Bombay reports from their commencement contain cases from which, taken in the aggregate, it may safely be laid down as a general, but not an invariable rule, that possession in the grantor or assignee is deemed essential amongst Hindus and Mahomedans to the complete transfer of immovable property either by gift, sale or mortgage." Among the exceptions to the above general rule, the Chief Justice enumerated cases arising between the transferor or volunteers claiming under him and the transferee; cases in which the second transferee became such with actual notice of the earlier transfer without possession; or in which he had implied notice by the fact that the earlier transfer was registered under any of the Acts XVI of 1861, XX of 1866, VIII of 1871, or III of 1877 prior to the execution of the second instrument (h). In adopting the principle that registration was an implied notice (i), the Chief Justice admitted that he was following the American in preference to the English or Irish decisions (k), "6thly. It has been held that possession by a judgment-debtor having a good title is not necessary to validate a judicial sale of his lands: 7thly. It appears to have been held that possession by the vendee, who became such at a judicial sale, is not necessary to validate the sale to him as against subsequent attaching creditors under money decrees, or as against purchasers at the sales under such decrees: 8thly. The purchaser at a judicial sale may re-sell without

(g) Lalubhai v. Bai Anrit, 2 Bom., 299; Hasha v. Ragho, 6 Bom., 165.

(h) Dina v. Nathu, 26 Bom., 538.

(i) Except in case of fraudulent concealment Dhondo Balkrishna v. Raoji, 20 Bom., 290. Notice of a registered deed is not notice of a former unregistered deed which is the root of the title, Chunilal v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., 213; Sharfudin v. Govind, 27 Bom., 452.

(k) Both in Madras and Calcutta it is held that registration is not of itself constructive notice within s. 3 of the Land Transfer Act, IV of 1882, Shan Maun Mull v. Madras Building Co., 15 Mad., 263; Inderdawan Pershad v. Gobind Lall, 23 Cal., 790.

previously taking possession" (l). A purchaser at a judicial sale is not a purchaser without notice, as he only buys such an interest as the execution debtor could equitably sell to him (m).

As regards persons other than purchasers for value without notice, the Bombay High Court laid down the rule that a Hindu whose estate was in the possession of a trespasser or mortgagee might sell his right of entry, as such, or his equity of redemption, as such, and that the purchaser might thereupon sue to eject the trespasser, or to redeem the mortgage. But if he professed to sell the estate itself, of which he was out of possession, the plaintiff who proceeded to sue as the owner of the estate would be defeated, on the ground that the conveyance to him was ineffectual (n). This was very much like a distinction without a difference. Accordingly, after the case of Kiladas v. Kanhya Lall (o), the Bombay High Court decided that no such distinction could be maintained, and that it was no objection to an ejectment on the plaintiff's title as absolute owner, that his vendor had been kept out of possession by adverse claim up to the time of his conveyance (p).

§ 390. The case of mortgages creates greater difficulty, as the mortgagor still retains an assignable interest in himself. Distinctions would also arise according as the mortgagor had transferred his property in the land, reserving only a right to redeem, or had retained the property, merely creating a lien upon it in favour of the creditor; in the language of English law, according as the mortgage was legal or equitable. Questions of notice, negligence, etc., would also largely affect the decision of each case.

(l) Lakshmandas v. Dasrat, 6 Bom., 163 (F. B.), pp. 175—177, 184—187; Shivram v. Genu, 6 Bom., 515; Dundaya v. Chenbasaya, 9 Bom., 427; Agarchand v. Rakhma Hanmant, 12 Bom., 678; Narayan Lakshman v. Bapu, 17 Bom., 741.

(m) Sobhagehund v. Bhaichand, 6 Bom., 93; Chintaman v. Shivram, 9 Bom. H. C., 304; Ramaraia v. Arunachella, 7 Mad., 248.

(n) Bai Suraj v. Dalpatram, 6 Bom., 385; Vasudev Hari v. Tatia Narayan ibid., 387.

(o) 11 I. A., 218; S. C., 11 Cal., 121, ante § 387.

(p) Ugarchand v. Madapa Somana, 9 Bom., 324.

I do not purpose to enter into these matters, which are beyond the scope of this work, and have been fully treated by Mr. Macpherson in his book on Mortgages. I shall briefly point out the state of the authorities on the one point of possession. It is evident that the effect of want of possession will depend largely upon whether such non-possession was in accordance with the terms of the contract, or opposed to it. Narada says broadly: "Pledges are declared to be of two sorts, movable and immovable. Both are valid when there is actual enjoyment, and not otherwise" (q). It is possible he may be referring to cases in which possession ought to follow the pledge, as it would do naturally in regard to movables. In Madras it is quite settled that a mere hypothecation of land, neither followed nor intended to be followed by possession, creates a lien upon it, which may be enforced against a subsequent purchaser (r). The same point has been decided in Bengal by the Supreme Court, after taking the opinion of the Judges of the Sudder Court (s). In Bombay the Courts, in dealing with the rights of a mortgagee against subsequent mortgagees or purchasers, proceed upon the doctrine of the position of a purchaser for value without notice. Except as regards san-mortgages in Guzerat (t), they hold that a mere mortgagee without possession cannot prevail against a subsequent mortgagee or purchaser who has obtained possession without notice (u). A purchaser with express notice of a previous mortgage takes subject to it, and either possession under a previous mortgage, or registration of it prior to the execution of the subsequent Mortgage without possession.

(q) Narada, iv., § 64.

(r) Varden v. Luckpatley, 9 M. I. A., 303; Kadarsa v. Raviah, 2 Mad. H. C., 103; Golla v. Kali, 4 Mad. H. C., 434; Sadagopal v. Ruthna, 6 Mad. Jur., 176.

(s) Cullydoss v. Sibchunder, Morton, 111; Sibchunder v. Russick, Fulton, 36. These cases over-rule contrary decisions in Montrieu, 278, and Morton, 105. See Nanack v. Teluckdye, 5 Cal., 265.

(t) As to these, see Sobhagechand v. Bhaichand, 6 Bom. (F. B.), 193; Jethabai Dyalji v. Girdhar, 20 Bom., 158.

(u) Paymaya v. Sonde, 4 Bom., 459, 461; Bapuji Balal v. Styabhamabai, 6 Bom., 490; per Westropp, C. J., 6 Bom., p. 176. See as to the early Sudder decisions, Tooljaram v. Meean, 2 Bor., 130 (147); Kundoojee v. Ballajee, Bel-lasis, 5; Dondee v. Suntram, Morris, 56.

transfer, is equivalent to notice (v). The general principle that possession is not necessary to give validity to a mortgage as against the mortgagor was affirmed by the Bombay High Court in a very elaborate judgment, where all the previous cases were reviewed (w); and it has also been held that such a mortgagee may maintain his claim against third persons who are wrongfully in possession (x); or against purchasers at a Court sale, who only take the right, title, and interest of the debtor (y).

Priority between registered and unregistered documents.

§ 391. Another point as to which there is a conflict of decisions is as to priority between two documents, the former of which is unregistered, and the latter is registered. Where the former document is one of which registration is compulsory, no question can arise. The unregistered document creates no rights, and is inadmissible in evidence (z). But it has been the policy of the Legislature to allow a certain class of documents, evidencing transactions of a small value, to be registered or not at the option of the holders. Under the Registration Acts XVI of 1864, XX of 1866, and VIII of 1871 there was no competition in respect of registration between a document compulsorily registrable, and a document which, being optionally registrable, was in fact not registered (a). But under the existing Registration Act, III of 1877, § 50, every document of which registration is compulsory and certain classes of documents of which registration is optional "shall, if duly registered, take effect as regards the property comprised therein, against every unregistered document relating to the same property, and not being a decree or order, whether such unregistered document be of the same nature as the registered document or not." An

(v) See cases in last note, also Gopal v. Kristnappa, 7 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 69; Hari v. Mahadaji, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 50; Balaji v. Ramchandra, 11 Bom. H. C., 37. See as to possession being notice, Act I of 1877, § 27.

(w) Jivandas v. Framji, 7 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 45

(x) Krishnaji v. Govind, 9 Bom. H. C., 275.

(y) Chintaman v. Shivram, 9 Bom. H. C., 304. See upon the whole of this subject the judgment in Lakshmandas v. Dasrat, 6 Bom., 168.

(z) Act III of 1877, § 49.

(a) See per Westropp, C. J., 6 Bom., 190, and cases cited.

Explanation to this section makes it apply retrospectively in favour of a document registered under Act III of 1877 against documents whose registration was optional under the previous Acts (b). Upon this section the Madras High Court formerly held that the subsequent registered document must, in all cases, take effect against a previous document dealing with the same property which, being optionally registrable, has in fact not been registered, and that neither express notice of the previous instrument, nor possession under it, operating as implied notice, can make any difference in the case (c), unless the second document is merely fraudulent and collusive (d), or unless the second transaction has been expressly made subject to the first, so that both documents may have full operation; as for instance, where property is sold by a registered instrument subject to the claims of a previous mortgagee under an unregistered instrument (e). In 1891, however, the whole series of these decisions was referred to and reviewed by a Full Bench Court which over-ruled the decision in Nallappa v. Ibrahim and Kondayya v. Guruvappa, and decided in conformity with the rulings of the Calcutta, Bombay, and Allahabad Courts, that express notice of a valid but unregistered document, deprives a purchaser under a registered instrument of the priority to which he would otherwise be entitled (f).

(b) Lakshman Das v. Dipchand, 2 All., 854; Gungaram v. Kallippodo, 11 Cal., 661; Muthana v. Alibeg, 6 Mad., 174; Prikam Madav v. Hirji Hirgiwan, 18 Bom., 332; Chinnilal v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., 213; but this explanation has not the effect of giving registration under any of the former Acts a priority over an unregistered document under any of the same Acts which it did not possess under those Acts. Rupchand v. Davlatrav, 6 Bom., 495; Shivram v. Saya, 13 Bom., 229; Sviram v. Bhagirath, 4 All., 227. As to the effect of limitation in case of an unregistered document, see Budankayala v. Vinayaka, 26 Mad., 72.

(c) Nalliappa Gounden v. Ibrahim, 5 Mad., 73; Kondayya v. Guruvappa, (d) Narasimulu v. Somanna, 8 Mad., 167.

(e) Ramchandra v. Krishna, 9 Mad., 495.

(f) Krishnamma v. Suranna, 16 Mad. (F. B.), 148; Ram Autar v. Dhanauri, 8 All., 540; Divan Singh v. Jadho, 19 All., 145; affd., 20 All., 252; Fazluddeen Khan v. Fakir Mahomed, 5 Cal., 336; Chundernath v. Bhoyrub Chunder, 10 Cal., 250; Abool Hossein v. Raghunath, 13 Cal., 70; Shivram v. Genu, 6 Bom., 515; Moreswar v. Dattu, 12 Bom., 569; Balmakundas v. Moti Narayan, 16 Bom., 444. But see Bamasunderi v. Krishna Chandru, 10 Cal., 424, in which the Court seemed to treat the point as yet open to question. As to the amount of notice necessary, see Bhalu Roy v. Jakhu Roy, 11 Cal., 607; Churaman v. Balli, 9 All., 591; Act IV of 1862, § 3. It must be pleaded and proved Chinnappa v. Manickavasagam, 25 Mad., 1.

The High Court of Bombay lays it down with equal distinctness that possession under an optionally unregistered document is notice to a subsequent purchaser by a registered document, which of itself deprives him of the benefits of registration (g). The contrary doctrine was expressly laid down by the High Court of Calcutta in one case, in which they over-ruled various decisions of their own Court in which an opposite view had been taken (h). In later cases the same Court appears to have treated possession under an unregistered deed as a fact from which notice of its existence might, but need not necessarily, be inferred (i).

§ 392. The same question of priority has arisen frequently under the words "not being a decree or order," which form an exception to s. 50 of Act III of 1875. These words provide that the Registration Act shall not apply to decrees or orders which affirm, create or extinguish any interest in land, and therefore that their operation cannot be affected by any subsequent registered transaction (k). In order to determine what the operation of the decree is, it is material to consider the period at which it has been passed in regard to other transactions. Where a valid unregistered document has been followed by a registered document, the latter immediately takes priority by virtue of s. 50. No decree passed upon the unregistered document can alter this priority when it has once attached (l). Where, however, the decree upon the unregistered document is passed, before the registered document is executed, "then the unregistered document would have been merged in and superseded by the decree, prior to the execution of (g) Dundaya v. Chenbasapa, 9 Bom., 427; Hathi Sing v. Kuverji, 10 Bom., 105; Kondiba v. Nana, 27 Bom., 408; Sharfudin v. Govind, 27 Bom., 452. The possession must be such as is inconsistent with the title on which the second purchaser relies. Moreshwar v. Dattu, 12 Bom., 569.

(h) Fazldeen Khan v. Fakir Mahomed, 5 Cal., 336.

(i) Narain Chunder v. Dataram, 8 Cal., 597; Nani Dibee v. Hafizullah, 10 Cal., 1073.

(k) Kollari Nagabushanam v. Ramanna, 3 Mad., 71.

(l) Himalaya Bank v. Simla Bank, 8 All., 23; reversing Baijnath v. Lachman Das, 7 All., 885; Jethabai Dyakji v. Girdhar, 20 Bom., 158; Ishan Chandra v. Gonesh, 28 Cal., 139.

the registered document. The competition would have been between the decree and the registered document, and the decree relating to land, though unregistered, is by s. 50 unaffected by a subsequent registered document (m). No decree can have this effect unless it establishes the right created by the unregistered document, which has been put in issue by the suit in which the decree is passed. Where land was conveyed to the defendant by a valid unregistered document in 1876, and he immediately leased it to tenants against whom he obtained a decree for rent in 1878, this decree was held to be no bar to the priority of a registered deed in 1881 (n).

§ 393. By s. 48 of the Registration Act III of 1877, "All non-testamentary documents duly registered under the Act, and relating to any property, whether movable or immovable, shall take effect against any oral agreement or declaration relating to such property, unless where the agreement or declaration has been followed by delivery of possession." A deposit of title deeds under a verbal arrangement to secure a debt has been held not to be an oral agreement or declaration relating to property within the meaning of this section (o). Whatever view the Courts take as to the effect of notice under s. 50 would apparently be taken as to this section also (p).

§ 394. Writing is not necessary, under Hindu law, to the validity of any transaction whatever (q). Nor is there any distinction between movable and immovable property as to the mode of granting it (r). Nor are any technical words necessary, provided the intention of the grantor can be made out. Hence, an estate of inheritance will be con-

(m) Madar Sahib v. Subbarayulu, 6 Mad., 88.

(n) Keshav Pandurang v. Vinayak Hari, 18 Bom., 355.

(o) Coggan v. Pogose, 11 Cal., 158.

(p) Chunder Nath v. Bhojrub Chunder, 10 Cal., 250.

(q) Srinivasammal v. Vijayammal, 2 Mad. H. C., 37; Krishna v. Rayappa, 4 Mad. H. C., 98; per curiam, Jivandas v. Franji, 7 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 51; Balaram v. Appa, 9 Bom. H. C., 121; Bhaskar Purshotam v. Sarasvalibai, 17 Bom., p. 492; Rookho v. Madko, 1 N. W. P., 59; Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dhyal, 3 I. A., 259; S. C., 26 Suth., 55. Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 9.

(r) Per Peel, C. J., Seebkisto v. East India Co., 6 M. I. A., 273.

ferred by words which imperfectly describe such an estate, if an intention to create such an estate appears; and if an estate is given to a man simply without express words of inheritance, it would, in the absence of a conflicting context, carry by Hindu law an estate of inheritance (s). A grant of the rents and profits of an estate is prima facie a grant of an estate of inheritance (t). So where a devisee states that the donee shall become malik (owner) of all my estates (u). So, the grant of an estate to a man and his children and grandchildren, or from generation to generation, or to a woman and the generations born of her womb, or to her sons and grandsons hereditarily, have been held to confer an absolute estate (v). The words "always" or "for ever" may according to the special circumstances indicate a perpetual grant, or one limited to the life of the grantee (w). So the words "Al Aulad" which strictly include male and female descendants, are sometimes by custom limited to lineal male descendants (x). A grant for years to a particular person enures to the benefit of that person's heirs after his death (y). A bequest to A for life, with unlimited powers of willing away or appointing to the property, has been treated as a gift of an absolute estate (z). So a grant from a husband to his widow was held absolute, where it stated that she was to take all his rights without exception, and that neither he nor his heirs were to have any claim to the

(s) Per Willes, J., Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., 395; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; S. C., I. A., Sup. Vol., 65; Lekhray v. Kunhya, 4 I. A., 223; S. C., 3 Cal., 210; Chwaman v. Balli, 9 All., 591; Lala Ramjewan v. Dalkoer, 24 Cal., 406. Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 8.

(t) Per curiam, 12 M. I. A., p. 109; Faiz Muhammad v. Muhammad Saed, 25 I. A., 77; S. C., 25 Cal., 816.

(u) Lalit Mohun v. Chukkun Lal, 24 I. A., 76; S. C., 24 Cal., 834.

(v) Bhoobun v. Harirish, 5 I. A., 138; S. C., 4 Cal., 23; Ram Lal v. Secretary of State, 8 I. A., 46; S. C., 7 Cal., 304; Harihar v. Uman Pershad, 14 I. A., 7; S. C., 14 Cal., 296; Fardunji Merwanji v. Milkibai, 22 Bom., p. 366; Lalit Mohun v. Chukkun Lal, 24 I. A., 76; S. C., 24 Cal., 834; Krishna Aiyar v. Vythianatha, 18 Mad., 252; Ramanarthen v. Ranganathan, 24 Mad., 299.

(w) Aziz-un-Nissa v. Tasaidduk, 28 I. A., 65.

(x) Perkash Lal v. Rameshwar, 31 Cal., 561.

(y) Tej Chund v. Srikanth Ghose, 3 M. I. A., 261; Gobind Lal v. Hemendra, 17 Cal. (P. C.), 686.

(z) Bai Mamubai v. Dosa Morarji, 17 Bom., 443; Javerbai v. Kablibai, 15 Bom., 326; Kamarazu v. Venkatarathnam, 20 Mad., 293.

estate (a). Where, however, similar words were followed by a provision that "in case of my wife's death my daughter is owner of the property," it was held that the widow only took for life, the daughter having a vested remainder which passed to her heirs (b). A permanent grant may be inferred where the object of the grant, e.g., for building, would be frustrated by a limited possession (c). Such an intention would be negatived when the grantor himself had only a limited estate, and it appeared that the grant was intended to endure so long as that interest lasted, but no longer (d).

In the case of leases the mere use of the words Mokurruri, or Istemrari, or Mokurruri Istemrari, though capable of denoting perpetuity, does not necessarily involve that idea. These words may mean either permanent during the life of the person to whom the grant is made, or permanent as regards hereditary descent (e). Nor can any necessary inference against the permanent character of a lease be drawn from the absence of the above words (f). "The question is, whether the intention of the parties is shown by the other terms of the instrument, the circumstances under which it was made, or the subsequent conduct of the parties with sufficient certainty to enable the Court in the absence of words importing perpetuity to pronounce that the grant was perpetual" (g). Where the lease is made for the purpose of reclaiming jungle land, "If on the one hand it is improbable that the

(a) Ram Narain v. Pearay Bhugul, 9 Cal., 830.

(b) Lallu v. Jagmohun, 22 Bom., 409.

(c) Gungadhur v. Ajimuddin, 8 Cal., 960.

(d) Lekhray v. Kunhya, 4 I. A., 223; S. C., 3 Cal., 210.

(e) Bengal Government v. Jafir Hossein, 5 M. I. A., p. 498; Leelanand Singh v. Munroorunjum Singh, 13 B. L. R. (P. C.), p. 133; S. C., Sup. Vol., I. A., p. 186.

(f) Promada v. Srigobind, 32 Cal., 648.

(g) Bilasmoti v. Sheo Pershad, 9 I. A., 33; S. C., 8 Cal., 664; affg. Sheo Pershad v. Kally Dass, 5 Cal., 643; Toolshi Pershad v. Ramanarain Singh, 12 I. A., 205; S. C., 12 Cal., 117; Parneswar Pertab v. Padmanand Singh, 15 Cal. (P. C.), 342; Rajaram v. Narasinga, 15 Mad., 199; Beni Pershad v. Dudh Nath, 26 I. A., 216, p. 224; Agin v. Mohan, 30 Cal., 20; Narsingh Dyal v. Ram Narain, 30 Cal., 883; Padmanand v. Hayes, 28 I. A., 152; S. C., 28 Cal., 720. As to the effect of long possession, and acts of ownership as indicating a permanent tenure, see Caspersz v. Kadernath, 28 Cal., 738; Upendra v. Ismail Khan, 31 I. A., 144; S. C., 32 Cal., 41; Niratan v. Ismail Khan, 31 I. A., 149; S. C., 32 Cal., 54.

grantee should undertake such an obligation without some fixity of tenure, and some assured and permanent interest in the lands; it is on the other hand equally improbable that the grantor should part for ever with all his interest in the improbable value of his lands" (h).

§ 395. The same question as to the absolute, alienable and heritable character of property which has been granted without express words to that effect, arises in certain special cases which may conveniently be collected here.

The obligation imposed upon the head of a family to maintain its members is generally discharged, either by defraying out of the common fund the expenses of those who live in the family house, or by allotting to them sums of money payable periodically; sometimes, however, portions of land or separate villages are assigned to particular members to be held by them for their own support (i). Prima facie land so granted is resumable at the death of the grantee (k). Sometimes by special usage such grants are resumable at the pleasure of the grantor (l). Sometimes they are resumable on the death of the grantor by his successor (m). Where the head of the family is the owner of an impartible estate, it is not uncommon to find an alienation of villages made for the maintenance of a junior member and his direct male line, and in such a case it does not revert to the principal estate until that line becomes extinct (n), and is alienable by the grantee subject to the coersionary rights of the grantor (o). A further possibility is that the grant may have been absolute and irrevocable in full satisfaction of (h) Dhanput Singh v. Gooman Singh, 11 M. I. A., p. 465.

(i) Bwajeet Singh v. Rover Gujraj, 1 I. A., 9.

(k) Woodoyadiite v. Mukoond, 22 Suth., 225; Bhavanamma v. Ramasami, 4 Mad., 193; Kachwain v. Sarup Chand, 10 All., 462; Nunnu Meah v. Krishnasami, 14 Mad., 274; Beni Pershad v. Dudhnath, 26 I. A., 216; S. C., 27 Cal., 156; Rameshar v. Arjun, 28 I. A., 1; S. C., 23 All., 194; Karim v. Heinriehs, 23 I. A., 198; S. C., 25 Bom., 563.

(l) Anund Lal v. Dheraj Gurrood, 5 M. I. A., 82; Najban Bibi v. Chand Bibi, 10 I. A., 133.

(m) Uddoy Adittya v. Jadub Lal, 5 Cal., 113; aff'd., 8 I. A., 246.

(n) Bhaya Ardawan Singh v. Udey Pertab, 23 I. A., 64; Viravara Thodranmal v. T. V. Surya Narayana, 24 I. A., 118; S. C., 20 Mad., 256.

(o) Rameswar v. Fibender, 32 Cal., 683.

all claims to future maintenance. Such a grant, if properly made out, vests in the grantee not only an heritable but an alienable estate, and undisturbed possession for successive generations may justify a presumption that the grant was of such a nature (p). Sometimes the transaction takes the form of a partition between the senior and junior members, which has the same effect (q).

§ 396. There is no rule of Hindu law that a conveyance to a female can only carry with it the limited nature of a female estate by inheritance (r). Where nothing is known of the terms of such a grant, there is no presumption of law that it was intended to create either an absolute estate or one for life; and where there is no other evidence beyond the mere fact that the grantee has had possession, the person who has to establish that it was of either character will fail for want of proof (s). Where, however, a family arrangement is being made for a female member, especially if it is stated to be for her support or maintenance, or in satisfaction of her share, and no distinct words of inheritance or alienability are used, it is very material in construing the grant to remember what is the ordinary mode in which such transactions are carried out. This was the principle adopted by the Judicial Committee in the following cases. In one (t) Dwarkanath Sein, one of two brothers who had just effected a partition of their property, died leaving a widow Zoahra and a mother Rabuttee. The widow claimed possession of her husband's share, and it was arranged that the share should be treated as being of the value of Rs. 59,000. The deed by which the arrangement

(p) Nursing Deb v. Roy Koylasnath, 9 M. I. A., 55; Salur Zemindar v. Pedda Pakir, 4 Mad., 271; Kooldeep Narain v. Government, 14 M. I. A., 247; Raja Jee v. Parthasaradhi, 30 I. A., 14; S. C., 26 Mad., 202.

(q) Periasami v. Periasami, 5 I. A., 61; S. C., 1 Mad., 321; Surya Rau v. Ohellayamma, 17 Mad., 150.

(r) Kollany v. Lutchmee, 24 Suth., 395; Pubitra v. Damoodur, ib., 397.

(s) Braja Kishoro v. Kundana Devi, 26 I. A., 66; S. C., 22 Mad., 431; Ramasami v. Papayya, 16 Mad., 466.

(t) Rabuttee Dossee v. Sibchunder Mullick, 6 M. I. A., 1, pp. 18-24; Ganput Rao v. Ramchunder, 11 All., 296; Parvati Ammal v. Sundara Moodelly, 20 Mad., 293.

Grants to Females.

was carried out recited that it had been agreed between her and the representative of the entire estate, that Zoahra should be considered as entitled to Rs. 59,000 in satisfaction of all claims which she had against such representative against the joint estate, or her part or share or interest therein in right of her deceased husband. It also recited the payment to her of that sum "which sum was thereby mutually declared to be the sole and exclusive property of Zoahra for her own absolute and separate use." She died leaving her father Sibchunder her heir, Rabuttee being the heir of her husband. Sibchunder possessed himself of the Rs. 59,000, claiming under a deed of gift from his daughter. The Supreme Court held that the effect of the deed of arrangement was to buy off Zoahra's claims by a lump sum, which was to be absolutely at her disposal. The Judicial Committee reversed this decision. They pointed out that the claim of Zoahra was made as widow, heiress and sole representative of Dwarkanath to her husband's share, and that the deed only professed to pay to her in that capacity the amount which was agreed on as representing that share. "It appears to us impossible to come to any other conclusion; that if these funds were assets, if they were paid as assets, and are assets in the hands of the defendant, it seems necessarily to follow that they must be handed over to the person who now represents the estate of Dwarkanath Sein."

In a later case (u), the testator made a will in which he recited that he left no relations, except Mt. Raneé Dhunkowar, widow of his own son, and her two daughters. "Except Mt. Raneé Dhunkowar aforesaid, none other is nor shall be my heir and malik." "Furthermore to the said Mt. Raneé too these very two daughters named above, together with their children, who after their marriage may be given to them, are and shall be heir and malik." The Raneé sold part of the lands devised for purposes admittedly not of necessity, and the suit was brought by the son of the last surviving daughter to declare that the sale was ineffectual against him. The Committee said: "In construing the will of a Hindu it is not improper to take into consideration what are known to be the ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus with respect to the devolution of property. It may be assumed that a Hindu generally desires that an estate, especially an ancestral estate, shall be retained in his family; and it may be assumed that a Hindu knows that, as a general rule at all events, women do not take absolute estates of inheritance which they are enabled to alienate. Having reference to these considerations, together with the whole of the will, all the expressions of which must be taken together without any one being insisted on to the exclusion of others, their Lordships are of opinion that the two Courts in India are right in construing the intention of the testator to have been that the widow of her son should not take an absolute estate which she should have power to dispose of absolutely, but that she took an estate subject to her daughters succeeding her in that estate; whether succeeding her as heirs of herself, or succeeding her as heirs of the testator is immaterial." The first clause stating of the Raneé "None other is nor shall be my heir and malik, may be fairly construed as meaning that she shall take a life interest immediately succeeding him, without that interest being shared by her daughters or by any other person."

(u) Moulvie Mahomed Shumsool v. Shewakram, 2 I. A., 7, p. 14; Lalla v. Jagmohan, 22 Bom., 409; Chunilal v. Bai Mala, 24 Bom., 420; Bhoba Tarini v. Peary Lall, 24 Cal., 646; Tika Ram v. Deputy Commissioner of Bara Banki, 26 I. A., 97; S. C., 26 Cal., 707.

§ 397. A provision in a will "that the daughters shall be maliks and come in possession of all properties," without any remainder over, creates an absolute estate, and a subsequent clause forbidding alienation was rejected as repugnant (v). The Courts in India, however, lean very strongly against treating grants to widows as conveying anything more than life estates. As for instance, where a son gave a house to his mother, as a provision for her support; "I have delivered my house to you and made you the owner thereof. I have no right to it. It entirely belongs to you. I have no objection to your managing the house according to your pleasure" (w). There the basis of the deed was that it was to relieve the son from all obligation to maintain his mother. The same decision was given in another case where a man having a wife and daughters left a will by which he provided for his daughters, and then directed his wife to take possession after his death, adding "Just as I am the owner of the property at present, in the same way after my death my wife, Ujam, is the owner" (x). So in cases where property had been left to the widow and adopted son, it was held that she took only an interest for life, which would not be enlarged by survivorship if the son predeceased her (y). Where however, a similar devise was followed by words of inheritance with power of alienation by sale or gift, it was held by the Privy Council that the widow and son took absolute estates in equal moieties as tenants in common (z). Gifts by a husband to his wife of immovable property, even though accompanied by express words of inheritance, are not alienable unless distinctly declared to be so. It is a quality of such gifts that though they descend to the wife's heirs she cannot alien them (a).

Construction of grants to widows.

(v) Lalla Ramjeewan v. Dalkoer, 24 Cal., 406.

Beneficial tenures.

§ 398. A very large class of tenures in India consists of land held either rent free or on a favourable rent. What is granted in the great majority of these cases is not the land itself, but the revenue issuing out of it, such grants

(w) Annaji Dattatraya v. Chandrabai, 17 Bom., 503.

(x) Harilal v. Bai Rewa, 21 Bom., 376; Mathura Das v. Brikhan Mal, 19 All., 16; Jamma Das v. Ramantar, 27 All., 364. See, however, Rajnarain v. Ashutosh, 27 Cal., 44; Rajnarain v. Katyayani, 27 Cal., 649.

(y) Hirabai v. Lakshmbai, 11 Bom., 573; Seshayya v. Narasamma, 22 Mad., 357; Goovoo Das v. Sarat Chunder, 29 Cal., 699.

(z) Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chund Dutt, 23 I. A., 37; S. C., 23 Cal., 670; Muthu Meenakshi v. Chendra Sekhara, 27 Mad., 498.

(a) Koonjbehari v. Premchand Dutt, 5 Cal., 684; Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma, 7 Mad., 387; Bhoba Tarima v. Peary Lall, 24 Cal., 646; Thakur Singh v. Nokhe, 23 All., 309.

having been made by the person entitled to that revenue, whether the sovereign power or the landholder who takes directly from the sovereign power (b). Many of these grants were made for religious purposes, such as to Brahmans for their own benefit, or as endowments for religious or charitable purposes. These are prima facie absolute grants (c), and are separately discussed in Chapter XII. Others are conferred either as a reward for past services (d), or as payment for future services, or for both purposes.

Jaghires or Saranjams, as they are called in Mahratta districts, have generally been conferred by the ruling power for political purposes, and are subject to much legislation intended to preserve the discretionary power of the State in respect to them (e). When a Jaghire is granted in indefinite terms, it is taken to be for the life only of the Jaghiredar; but when there is a grant to a man and his heirs, and nothing to contradict the ordinary meaning of the words, the grantee takes an absolute interest (f). When the Government settled a pension upon the descendants of a relation of the Nawabs of Surat, and allotted a Jaghire, expressly declared to be resumable, as the source from which part of the pension was to be paid, it was held by the Privy Council that the descendants held a succession of life estates in the Jaghire, exactly as they did in the pension (g).

Jaghires and Saranjams.

The word Enam, which is the term in use in Southern India to express beneficial tenures, originally meant a grant generally, and subsequently, when not qualified by any other word, came to mean a grant in perpetuity, not resumable. An Altumgha Enam meant a grant in per-

Enams.

(b) Ramchandra v. Venkatrao, 6 Bom., 598.

(c) Per curiam, 7 M. I. A., p. 132.

(d) A grant by Government of a Zemindary, not revenue free, as a reward for past services is alienable by the grantee. Lachmi v. Makund, 26 All., 67.

(e) Shekh Sultan Sani v. Shekh Ajmodin, 20 I. A., 50; S. C., 17 Bom., 481.

(f) Gulabdas Juggivandas v. Collector of Surat, 6 I. A., 54; S. C., 3 Bom., 186; Dosabai v. Ishwardas, 18 I. A., 22; S. C., 15 Bom., 222.

(g) Gulabdas v. Collector of Surat, ib. sup.

petuity, not resumable, while Amaram and Kattubadi Enams were resumable (h).

§ 399. The principles upon which service tenures of a non-political character may be resumed were laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Forbes v. Meer Mahomed Tuquee (i). There a rent-free Jaghire had been granted by the East India Company in 1775 to the ancestor of the defendant, in consideration of his past services in preventing the incursions of elephants upon the cultivated lands of the Pergunnah, and his future services in the same way, whereby the cultivation might be extended, and the ryots be protected. In 1850 the Zemindary in which the Jaghire was situated was sold for arrears of Government revenue, and the purchaser sued to resume the Jaghire. His claim was rejected. The Committee held that after such a long and undisturbed possession, it lay upon the purchaser to make out a clear title to resumption which he had failed to do. They stated "that in every case the right to resume must depend in a great measure upon the nature of the particular tenure, or the terms of the particular grant. They agree with the observations of Mr. Justice Jackson (k) that there is a clear distinction between the grant of an estate burdened with a certain service, and the grant of an office the performance of whose duties are remunerated by the use of certain lands. They have already stated that, in their opinion, the grant in question does not fall within the latter category. Assuming it to be a grant of the former kind, their Lordships do not

(h) Unide Rajah Bommarauze v. Pemmasamy Venkatadry, 7 M. I. A., 128, p. 132. These terms are defined as follows in Wilson's Glossary. Altungla, a royal grant under the seal of some of the former native princes of Hindustan, and recognised by the British Government, conferring a title to rent-free land in perpetuity, hereditary and transferable. Amaram, a grant of revenue by the prince or a poligar, on condition of service, generally military or police. Such grants were resumable when the Amarakar or grantee failed to perform the stipulated service. Kattubadi, a revenue term, usually applied to a fixed, invariable, and favourable or quit rent, which has been assessed on lands granted to public servants. Cuttoogootaga is a term indicating a perpetual tenure at a low rent for past military services, 8 M. I. A., 327.

(i) 13 M. I. A., 438, pp. 464-466; Bhimaji Balvant v. Giriappa, 24 Bom., 82; Lakhangavda v. Keshav Annaji, 28 Bom., 305; Narasayya v. Venkatagiri, 23 Mad., 262; Amaram, Sobhanadri v. Venkata Narasimha, 26 Mad., 403, Mokhasa.

(k) 6 Suth., p. 209.

dispute that it might have been so expressed as to make the continued performance of the services a condition to the continuance of the tenure. But, in such a case, either the continued performance of the service would be the whole motive to and consideration for the grant, or the instrument would by express words declare that, the service ceasing, the tenure should determine." Here "the grant may be said to have been made pro servitiis impensis et impendendis—partly as a reward for past, partly as an inducement for future services. Again, neither sunnad contains any words which expressly import that the tenure shall cease, if and when any of the services cease to be performed. Such a provision is something very different from one which merely casts upon the grantee the performance of certain duties so long as they are necessary. The former makes the grant determinable when there is no further occasion for the services. But, in the latter case, if the operation of any natural cause removes the necessity for the services, the grantee will hold the lands practically freed from the condition originally imposed upon him. Their Lordships are, therefore, of opinion that upon the true construction of the sunnads the grantees, though bound to protect the Pergunnah from the incursions of wild elephants so long as these incursions lasted; and though still bound to do so should, by any chance, those incursions be renewed; and though they may be liable to forfeit the tenure if they wilfully fail in the performance of this duty, are not liable to have their lands resumed, because there is no longer any occasion for the performance of the particular service."

§ 400. Where before the permanent settlement the Government had created a ghatwali tenure for the public interest, a purchaser of the Zemindary cannot afterwards resume it on the ground that the services have ceased to be necessary, if the Government maintains its claim upon the tenure holder in case a necessity should arise (l). If a Resumption depends on public or personal nature of services.

(l) Kooldeep Narain v. The Government, 14 M. I. A., 247. As to the ghatwali tenure involves personal services to the Zemindar and public services to the State, the Zemindar cannot dispense with the personal services and then take possession of the lands and hold them discharged of their obligations for the public benefit (m). It is otherwise where the land is granted by the Zemindar in consideration of merely personal services to be rendered to himself by the grantee (n).

Where an office has been created, and the performance of its duties is remunerated by a grant of land, when the office is terminated the grant may be resumed. If, however, the office is hereditary, resumption can only take place when the need of the services altogether ceases. Where the services of such an official are still required, those who have an hereditary right to the office cannot be deprived of the land which they hold as remuneration for such office, on the mere ground that the plaintiff prefers to appoint some one else to officiate in that capacity (o).

§ 401. The remaining questions in regard to holders of office and service tenures relate first to their right to alienate their office or tenure, and, secondly, to their right to alienate the emoluments attached to it.

As regards religious institutions and endowments, it was decided by the Privy Council that an alienation of the right to manage such institutions and the property attached to them was absolutely void; and if the alienation was for the pecuniary benefit of the trustee that it could not even be supported by proof of a custom authorising such a proceeding (p). The judgment appears to apply equally tenure, which is to a great extent the creature of Statute, see Leelanand Singh v. Bengal Government, 6 M. I. A., 101; Nilmoni Singh v. Bakranath, 9 I. A., 104; Tekait Kali Pershad v. Anund Roy, 15 I. A., 18.

(m) Joy Kishen v. Collector of East Burdwan, 10 M. I. A., 16, p. 45.

(n) Sanniyasi Razu v. Salur Zemindar, 7 Mad., 268; Mahadevi v. Vikrama, 14 Mad., 365, p. 375; Radha Pershad Singh v. Budhu Dashad, 22 Cal., 988.

(o) Radha Pershad Singh v. Buddah Dashad, 22 Cal., 988; Bhimappaiya v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., 422.

(p) Rajavarma Valia v. Raja Vurmah Matha, 4 I. A., 76; S. C., 1 Mad., 235. Nor can such an office be sold in execution of a decree, Juggernath Roy v. Kishen Pershad, 7 Suth., 266; Dubo Misser v. Srimbas Misser, 5 B. L. R., 617; Kalicharan v. Bangshi Mohan, 6 B. L. R., 727; per curiam, 6 Bom., p. 300.

to any transfer, whether by sale or gift, and their Lordships intimated that no distinction was apparent in this respect between a religious and a charitable endowment. As regards civil hereditary offices and the inams annexed to them, the law in Bombay is that they are alienable permanently, the duties and the emoluments passing together (q). In Bengal the general rule seems to be that ghatwali hereditary tenures are not alienable either by sale or decree, and cannot be leased in perpetuity, but in Karajpore they are alienable by permission of the Zemindar (r). In Madras, so long ago as in 1819, the Sudder Court pronounced, with regard to a sale of his office by a kurnam, that "all transfers of public duty are illegal by an ancient usage of the country and by common reason" (s).

As regards offices or tenures, the emoluments of which are appropriated to the exclusive benefits of each successive holder, he may alien them for his own life or any shorter period, but cannot separate them permanently from the duties to which they are annexed so as to bind his successor (t). Where, however, the manager of a religious or charitable endowment disposes of property in which he is only interested as trustee, it is certain that his alienation is only binding so far as his authority as such manager, to act for the benefit of the institution, extends (u). There are decisions in which it seems to have been held income.

Alienation of

(q) Bhimappaiya v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., p. 427, referring to Bombay Hereditary Officers Act, 1874, s. 56.

(r) Nilmoni Singh v. Bakranath, 9 I. A., 104; Tekait Kali Pershad v. Anund Roy, 15 I. A., 18; Narain Mullick v. Badi Roy, 29 Cal., 227. As to the effect upon the successor to an office or a service tenure of an alienation of such office or tenure by his predecessor, or an adverse judgment in respect of it, or the operation of the statute of limitations which has concluded the rights of such predecessor, see Radhabai v. Anantrao, 9 Bom., 198; Gnanasambanda v. Velu Pandaram, 27 I. A., 69; S. C., 23 Mad., 271; Pydigintam v. Ramadoss, 28 Mad., 197.

(s) Diggevelly v. Coontamoo Kala, 1 Mad. Dec., 214.

(t) Muppidi Papaya v. Ramana, 7 Mad., 85; Madho Kooery v. Tekait Ram, 9 Cal., 411; Kalu Narayan v. Hanmapa, 5 Bom., 435; approved Padapa v. Swamirao, 27 I. A., 86; S. C., 24 Bom., 556; Radhabai v. Anantrao Bhagvant, 9 Bom., 198, where the Bombay legislation in regard to vatans is discussed; Appaji Bapuji v. Keshav Shumrav, 15 Bom., 13.

(u) Narayan v. Ohentaman, 5 Bom., 393, post § 433.

Grant to office holder.

Alienation by grantees.

that even here the alienations are valid for his life (v). These decisions were mostly upon the statute of limitations; the point being that where the successor did not take through the alienor, but upon a new title which arose upon his death, the cause of action dated from that period. Suits properly framed in the interests of the endowment could be brought at once by persons qualified to protect the institution (w). There are, however, cases in which the validity of such alienations for the life of the manager is laid down broadly. Possibly, in some instances, the manager had a beneficial interest in the endowment (x).

§ 402. The Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) contains various provisions as to the form of alienation which will modify the Hindu law as to all transactions subsequent to the 1st July, 1882.

By s. 54 "A transfer by way of sale in the case of tangible immovable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, or in the case of a reversion or other intangible thing, can be made only by a registered instrument. In the case of tangible immovable property of a value less than one hundred rupees, such transfer may be made either by a registered instrument or by delivery of the property."

In Narain Chunder v. Dataram (y), Garth, C. J., intimated his opinion that, under this section, optional registration was virtually abolished, every written instrument requiring to be registered. This view was, however, disapproved of by the same Court in a later case. There the plaintiffs had purchased property below the value of Rs. 100 from owners who were out of possession, by an unregistered deed. In a suit to recover the property from persons in possession without title, it was held that the sale conferred (v) Mahomed v. Ganapati, 13 Mad., 277; Mohunt Birm Suroop v. Khasha Jha, 20 Suth., 471; Salkhianama v. Saravana Bayi, 18 Mad., 266.

(w) Act XX of 1863, s. 14, Civ. P. C., 1882, s. 539.

(x) Compare Ramchandra Shanker Bava v. Kashinath, 19 Bom., 271 with Prosonno Kumar v. Saroda Prosonno, 22 Cal., 989.

(y) 8 Cal., p. 612.

a valid title, though there was neither registration nor possession. The Court said: "we are of opinion that s. 54, cl. 3 of the Transfer of Property Act is not exhaustive or imperative in requiring that the transfer of immovable property sold, and of small value, should be made only under one of these conditions so as to confer a valid title. In clause 2 the law is clear that a transfer of immovable property of a particular description can be made only by a registered instrument, but clause 3 uses the expression may be made. It does not declare that it can be made only by a registered instrument, signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses. Where the principal money secured is less than one hundred rupees, a mortgage may be effected either by an instrument signed and attested as aforesaid, or (except in the case of a simple mortgage, i.e., hypothecation) by delivery of the property. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to render invalid mortgages, made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachi, and Rangoon, by delivery to a creditor or his agent of documents of title to immovable property, with intent to create a security thereon."

[The decision in 16 Cal. 622, has since been expressly over-ruled in 19 Cal. 623, Makhan Lal Pal v. Banku Behari Ghose, thus confirming the decision in 8 Cal. 612.]

By s. 107 "A lease of immovable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument. All other leases of immovable property may be made either by an instrument or by oral agreement."

§ 403. By s. 123 "For the purpose of making a gift of immovable property, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, and attested by at least two witnesses. For the purpose of making a gift of movable property, the transfer may be (z) Khatu Bibi v. Madhuram, 16 Cal., 622, p. 626.

Statutory provisions as to alienation.

Sales.

yes.

Leases

Gifts

effected either by a registered instrument signed as aforesaid or by delivery. Such delivery may be made in the same way as goods sold or delivered" (a).

In cases under the old law of gifts it was held that registration of the deed of gift did not amount to, or make up for the want of possession (b). Does the present section dispense with possession? It certainly does not dispense with acceptance of the gift, which is essential under s. 122. If then there can be no valid acceptance under Hindu law without possession, actual or symbolical, then s. 122 does not alter the Hindu law. But if there can be a sufficient acceptance without possession so as to satisfy s. 122, then a registered gift of movable property would be valid under s. 123 if accepted, even though Hindu law required delivery of possession by the donor, as well as acceptance of the gift by the donee. It will be seen by s. 129 that s. 122 is not to affect any rule of Hindu law, but that s. 123 will not be invalid even though it should do so. The Calcutta High Court has held that delivery of possession of property, whether movable or immovable, is unnecessary, where the deed of gift has been registered (c), and this ruling has been followed in Bombay (d), and in Madras in a case between Muhammedans (e).

(a) As to gifts by Taluqdars of Oudh, see Act I of 1869, § 13 and cases 11 I. A., 1, 121.

(b) Yasudev v. Narayan, 7 Bom., 131; Dagai Dabee v. Mothura Nath, 9 Cal., 854; Ismal v. Ramji, 23 Bom., 682.

(c) Dharmodas v. Nistarine, 14 Cal., 446.

(d) Bai Rambai v. Bai Mani, 23 Bom., 234.

(e) Alabi Koya v. Mussa Koya, 24 Mad., 513.

CHAPTER XI.

WILLS.

Origin of Testamentary Power.

§ 404. THE origin and growth of the testamentary power among Hindus has always been a perplexity to lawyers. It is admitted that the idea of a will is wholly unknown to Hindu law, and that the native languages do not even possess a word to express the idea (a). In early times, when the family property was vested in the family corporation, and when the members had nothing more than a right of usufruct, the idea that any individual could exercise a power of disposal to commence after his own death, would have been a contradiction in terms. Even in later times, when a greater freedom of disposition had arisen, the principle that a gift could only take effect by possession would seem to oppose an absolute bar to devises. Yet there can be no doubt that from the earliest period of our acquaintance with India we find traces of a struggling towards the testamentary power, often checked, but constantly renewed. It has been common to ascribe this to the influence of English lawyers in the Supreme Courts; but this explanation seems to me untenable. It is very probable that in the Presidency Towns, the example of Englishmen making wills may have stimulated the natives in the same direction, but the King's Judges appear to have been quite neutral in the matter. They were conscious of their ignorance of native law, and anxiously sought the advice of their own pundits (§ 40), and of the Judges of the Company's Courts, and others who were experts in the unknown science. So far were they from grasping at jurisdiction, that they absolutely disclaimed it. In 1776 the Supreme Court of Calcutta, after taking time

Wills unknown to Hindu law.

Early instances in Supreme Courts.

(a) 2 Dig., 516, n; 2 Stra. H. L., 418, 220, 431.

to consider, granted administration to the goods of a Hindu, but on the terms that the administrator should administer according to Hindu law. In 1791 they reconsidered the matter, and decided that probate of the will, or administration of the goods of a Hindu or Muhammedan, could not be granted. It was not till July 1832 that a contrary rule was laid down, and from that date the practice of granting probate and administration to the property of natives was fully established (b). A similar alteration of practice is recorded by Sir Thomas Strange as having taken place at Madras (c). The earliest known will of a native is that of the celebrated Omichund. It is dated 1758, a time when the English arms were more in the ascendant than the English Courts (d).

§ 405. It seems to me that the true origin of the testamentary power is to be sought for in that Brahmanical influence, the working of which I have already traced in the law of partition and alienation (e). It displayed itself especially in the sanctity attributed to religious gifts, that is, gifts to religious men, or Brahmans. These were considered valid where even transfers for value would have been set aside. In other countries gifts try to clothe themselves with the semblance of a sale. Under Hindu law, sales claimed protection by assuming the appearance of a gift (f). It is obvious that a man is never more disposed to pious generosity than in his last days, when the approach of death furnishes him with the strongest motives for investing in the next world that wealth which he can no longer enjoy in the present. The acuteness of the Brahman would have readily discovered and utilised

(b) Re Commala, Morton, 1; Goods of Hadjee Mustapha, ib., 74; Goods of Beebee Muttra, ib., 75.

(c) 1 Stra. H. L., 267.

(d) This will was discussed in a case which came before the Supreme Court of Calcutta in 1793. See Montrou, 321; per Phear, J., Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 138; Beng. Reg. II (Collectors and Board of Revenue) and XXXVI of 1793 (Registry for Wills and Deeds) cited by Macpherson, J., Krishnavaramani v. Ananda, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 288; per Norman, J., Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 217.

(e) Ante §§ 243, 261, 262. See particularly the passage from Sir H. S. Maine, cited § 261.

(f) See Mitakshara, i., 1, § 32; Raghunandana, v., 25.

this fact. Nothing is more remarkable in the earliest Bengal wills than the enormous amounts which they bestow for religious purposes. The same thing was remarked by Sir Thomas Strange in all the wills made by Hindus in Madras, and he observes somewhat cynically, that "the proportion is commonly in the ratio of the iniquity with which the property has been acquired, or of the sensuality and corruption to which it has been devoted" (g). It is probable that such bequests would often take the form of a donatio mortis causâ, revocable if the grantor survived, or that they were effected by death-bed dispositions, followed up by immediate delivery of possession. But there are texts of the Hindu sages which contain the actual germ of a will, and which were capable of being developed into a complete testamentary system. Katyayana says: "What a man has promised in health or in sickness, for a religious purpose, must be given; and if he die without giving it his son shall doubtless be compelled to deliver it." And again, "After delivering what is due as a friendly gift (promised by the father), let the remainder be divided among the heirs." And so Harita says: "A promise made in words, but not performed in deed, is a debt of conscience both in this world and the next" (h). Such promises, being treated as debts, would be enforced against the heir in exactly the same manner as an ordinary secular debt. At first they would be treated as a moral obligation, and then, by analogy, as a legal obligation. It is significant that the principle seems first to have been applied in favour of pious gifts. But it would rapidly extend to all dispositions of property, to the extent of a man's power of disposing of it. In case of separate and self-acquired property the right would naturally be admitted with little hesitation. It would afterwards be applied to the undivided share of a (g) 2 Stra. H. L., 453.

(h) 2 Dig., 96; 3 Dig., 388; 2 Dig., 171. The only writer, as far as I know, who has remarked the bearing of these texts upon the present question is M. Gibelin. See a very interesting discussion (Vol. ii., Titre. vii.), in which he points out that the Hindu will was a native and not an European invention.

co-heir, or to ancestral property in the hands of a father or sole owner. In each province the rapidity and extent of the growth of the testamentary power would depend upon the degree to which the control of the testator over his property was admitted. This is exactly what took place.

Cases in Bengal.

§ 406. The law of devise was, as might be expected, first settled in Bengal, where the power of alienation was most widely extended. The reported cases commence in 1786, and the first two related to divided and self-acquired property, as to which, after reference to the pundits, the wills were maintained (i). In 1792 the Nuddea case (h), which has already been stated (§ 372), was decided in the Sudder Court, and it was followed next year in the Supreme Court by the case of Dialchund v. Kissory (l), where the property appears to have been self-acquired. In both these cases the pundits affirmed the right of a father to devise property, whether ancestral or self-acquired, and the former of the two is stated by Mr. Colebrooke to have been accepted as establishing the point. Mr. Sutherland, however, to whom the latter case was referred for his opinion, stated that the will would be only valid as against sons, "provided no part of the property conferred by it were real ancestral property" (m). This view was evidently not taken by the profession, for in 1800 a most important case arising out of the Rajah Nobkissen's will was litigated in the Supreme Court, where the Rajah, who had a natural-born and an adopted son, bequeathed an ancestral taluq to his adopted son, and the four brothers of such son, thereby depriving his natural son of all interest in the taluq and his adopted son of four-fifths of his interest. The validity of the will was admitted without dispute, though the adoption was contested (n). In 1808 the will of Nemychurn Mullick

(i) Mumoo v. Gopee, Montr., 290; Russick v. Choitun, ib., 304; 2 M. Dig., 220.

(h) Eshanchund v. Eshorchund, 1 S. D., 2.

(l) Montr., 371; F. MacN., 357.

(m) 2 Stra. H. L., 429. See Mr. Colebrooke's own opinions, 2 Stra. H. L., 431, 435, 437.

(n) Gopee v. Rajkristna, Montr., 381; S. C., F. MacN., 356.

was contested in the Supreme Court, and the decree declared "that by the Hindu law Nemychurn Mullick might and could dispose by will of all his property, as well movable as immovable, and as well ancestral as otherwise." This case went on appeal upon another point to the Privy Council, but the finding as to the validity of the will was never disputed (o). Accordingly, the will of a brother of Nemychurn, who died possessed of great wealth, ancestral and self-acquired, was never contested, although by it he almost completely disinherited one of his sons (p). In 1812 the Sudder pundits, when consulted as to the validity of an alleged devise by a widow, laid down the general principle, that "the same rule applies to bequests as to gifts; every person who has authority, while in health, to transfer property to another, possesses the same authority of bequeathing it (q)."
Finally, after the period of doubt caused by the decision in Bhowanny Churn's case, the matter was set at rest for ever, as far as Bengal is concerned, by the certificate of the Sudder Court in 1831, which has already been set out (§ 372). It is now beyond dispute that in Bengal a father, as regards all his property, and a co-heir, as regards his share, may dispose of it by will as he likes, whatever may be its nature (r).

Their validity established in Bengal.

§ 407. A minor has been held in Bengal to be incapable of making a will (s). A married woman may make a will of her stridhana or any other property which is absolutely at her own disposal. But she cannot devise property inherited from males, whether movable or immovable, since her interest in it ceases at her death (t).

Minor.
Married woman.

(o) Ramtoono v. Ramgopaul, F. MacN., 336; S. C., 1 Kn., 245.

(p) F. MacN., 350.

(q) Sreenarain v. Bhya Jha, 2 S. D., 23 (29, 37).

(r) Per Ld. Kingsdown, Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo, 6 M. I. A., 344; per Peacock, C. J., Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 159; per Willes, J., Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., 396; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(s) Bamundas v. Mt. Tarinee, S. D. of 1850, p. 555; Cossinaut Bysack v. Hurvoosondry, F. MacN., 81; 2 M. Dig., 193, note.

(t) Teencowree v. Dimonath, 3 Suth., 49; Chooneelal v. Jussoo, 1 Bor., 55 [60]; Dholubh v. Jeevee, ib., 67 [75]; Umroot v. Kulyandas, ib., 284 [314]; Venkata Rama v. Venkata Suriya, 2 Mad. (P. C.), 333; Gadadur v. Chandra Bhagabai, 17 Bom., 690; Sha Chamantal v. Doshi Ganesh, 28 Bom., 453.

Both the above points are now affirmed by statute as regards Hindus (u). As regards adults the general questions which arise relate to their bodily or mental capacity at the time of making the will, or to the suggestion that, in consequence of fraud or undue influence, the will actually executed did not represent the real wishes of the testator. The onus rests on the person who propounds a will to satisfy the Court that it is the will of a free and capable testator, and where circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the Court, to remove such suspicion, and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the document (v).

§ 408. In Southern India wills had a much more chequered career, as might be anticipated from the stricter views entertained as to the family union. During the time Sir Thomas Strange was on the Bench, no question as to wills arose in such a form as to require a decision. He evidently considered them a mere innovation, though, after consultation with Mr. Colebrooke, he was disposed to think that they might be allowed to the same extent to which a gift inter vivos would have been valid (w). He cites several futwahs of Madras pundits in which they seem to take the same view. These are all commented upon by Mr. Ellis, whose authority on Madras law and usage ranked very high. He asserted with confidence that no Hindu could make a will which would turn his property after his death into a different course from that which it would have taken by Hindu law. He intimated a very strong doubt whether the pundits understood what was meant when they were questioned as to the operation of a will (x). It is quite certain that (u) Act X of 1865, § 46 [Succession] extended to Hindus by Act XXI of 1870, § 2, and see § 3 [Hindu Wills] and Act V of 1881, § 149 [Probate and Administration].

(v) Tyrell v. Panton [1894], p. 151, at p. 157; Rash Mohini v. Umesh Chunder, 25 I. A., 109; S. C., 25 Cal., 824; Shamachurn v. Khetromoni, 27 I. A., 10; S. C., 27 Cal., 521; Sukh Dei v. Kedarnath, 28 I. A., 186; S. C., 23 All., 405; (1901) A. C., 354; Lachho Bibi v. Gopi Narain, 23 All., 472. As to mental capacity, see Wajid Ali v. Ibad Ali, 22 I. A., 171; S. C., 23 Cal., 1. As to undue influence, Boyse v. Russborough, 6 H. L. Ca., 6.

(w) Verapermall v. Narrain, 1 N. C., 91; 1 Stra. H. L., 267.

(x) 2 Stra. H. L., 217—228.

in the case which ultimately settled the law, they thought they were being consulted as to the effect of a gift (y). The course of decisions in Madras for many years was certainly in accordance with his view. The only case litigated in the Supreme Court was one where a testator had bequeathed part of his self-acquired property for the performance of religious ceremonies (z). This would clearly have been valid under the text of Katyayana already cited (§ 405). In the Sudder Court, however, there were numerous decisions. The first was in 1817, but as the devise was in favour of an adopted son, the first question was as to the validity of the adoption, and as its validity was established, that of the will never arose (a). The next cases arose in 1824 and 1828, and gave rise to much litigation, extending ultimately to the Privy Council. In these a widow sued to set aside two alienations, made by her deceased husband to distant relations, of property which would have otherwise come to her as his heir. In the first case the document is spoken of as a will, but was in terms a deed of gift, and recited that possession had been given. This, however, appears not to have been done. The decision was in favour of the widow, but upon the ground that upon the proper construction of the will the devisee only took as manager for the heir, and was now dead. In their judgment the Court stated as their opinion "that under the Hindu law a man is authorised to dispose of his property by will, which under the same law he could have alienated during his survivorship by any other instrument" (b). This, of course, was purely obiter dictum. In the second case, possession under the gift was established. The property was self-acquired, and the question was correctly put to the pundits, whether a gift of self-acquired property made by a man

Dictum of Sudder Court.

(y) See post § 411. It must be remembered that the pundits did not speak English, and that their language contained no equivalent for will.

(z) Narrainsamy v. Arnachella, 1 Stra. H. L., 268, note; Vallinayagam v. Pachche, 1 Mad. H. C., 336.

(a) Arnachellum v. Iyasamy, 1 Mad. Dec., 154.

(b) Mubrauze Venkata v. Mubrauze Lutchmiah, 1 Mad. Dec., 438, 449.

Wills in Southern India.

Early instances doubtful.

without male issue was valid as against a widow, who was left an heir to other property to a large extent. The pundits answered that the gift was valid, and the Court so decided. This case was confirmed by the Privy Council. There, too, though the document is spoken of as a will, the transaction is treated as an alienation, and its validity is rested on the opinion of the Hindu law officers, who had dealt with it purely as such (c). In an intermediate case the question was whether a will would be valid if it left the whole of a partible zemindary to one of two sons. The Court decided that the document really left it to the two sons as joint heirs. But they said: "The Court have repeatedly decided that the will of a Hindu is of no validity or effect whatever, except so far as it may be consistent with Hindu law" (d). Later still the same Court treated a will, by which a grandfather was asserted to have left landed property to his wife to the prejudice of his sons, as being absolutely invalid as against their sons, i. e., his own grandsons (e).

Tendency of opinion.

Reg. V of 1829.

§ 409. So far there really had been no actual decisions, but the tendency of the Sudder Judges had certainly been to accept the opinions of Sir Thomas Strange, Mr. Colebrooke, and the pundits, that the legality of a will must be tried by the same tests as that of a gift; for instance, that it would be valid if made to the prejudice of a widow, invalid if made to the prejudice of male issue. At this time Madras Reg. V of 1820 (Hindu Wills) was passed. It recited that wills were instruments unknown, and had been made so as to be totally repugnant to the authorities prevailing in Madras; it then repealed a former regulation which had authorised the executors of the will of a Hindu to take charge of his property, and enacted that for the future Hindu wills should have no legal force whatever, except so far as they were in conformity with Hindu law, according to authorities prevalent in the Madras Presidency. This regulation appears to have induced the Judges to regard wills as being wholly inoperative. Wills were not only set aside where they prejudiced the issue, as by an unequal distribution of ancestral property between the sons (f); but the Court also laid down that where a man without issue bequeathed his property away from his widow and daughters, such a will would be absolutely illegal and void, unless they had assented to it (g). These decisions would appear to have put wills completely out of Court. But in the very next year a case was decided which ultimately proved to be the commencement of a complete revolution on the point. The circumstances attending it were so singular as to merit a little detail.

(c) Mulrauz v. Chellakany, 2 Mad. Dec., 12, affirmed, 2 M. I. A., 54.

(d) Sooranany v. Sooranany, 1 Mad. Dec., 495.

(e) Yejnamoorthy v. Chavaly, 2 Mad. Dec., 16.

Validity of wills denied.

§ 410. The suit was by a widow to recover her husband's estate, which consisted in part of ancestral immovable property. The defendants set up a will executed by the deceased, by which he constituted them executors and managers of his estate, and, after providing for his wife and daughters, left the rest of his property to religious and charitable uses, with a proviso that if his wife, then pregnant, bore a son, the estate should revert to him on his coming of age. The will was found to be genuine, but the widow set up an authority to adopt a son in the event of a daughter being born. The Civil Judge consulted the Sudder pundits, and asked whether the will was valid, and if so, whether it would be invalidated by the authority to adopt, if actually given. The pundits answered: "The will referred to in the question is valid under the Hindu law, the testator having thereby bequeathed a portion of his estate for the maintenance of his wife, and other members of his family, whom he was bound to protect, and directed the remainder to be appropriated to charitable purposes in the event of his wife, who was then pregnant, not being delivered of a son.

Current reversed.

(f) Moottoovengada v. Toombayasamy, Mad. Dec. of 1849, 27.

(g) Tullapragadah v. Crovedy, 2 Mad. Dec., 79; Sevacawmy v. Vaneyummal, Mad. Dec. of 1850, 50.

If the testator had really given his wife verbal instructions to adopt a son in the event of her not bearing male issue, her compliance with those instructions would, of course, invalidate the will according to the Hindu law, it being incompetent for the testator who authorised the adoption of a son to alienate the whole of his estate, and thereby injure the means of the maintenance of his would-be heir."

Nagalutchmy v. Nadaraja.

The Civil Judge found against the alleged authority to adopt, and decided in favour of the will. His decision was given in 1849, before the decision of the Sudder Court last quoted. In appeal to the Sudder Udalut, the widow urged that under Reg. V of 1829 (Hindu Wills) the will was void. The case was heard by a single Judge, who affirmed the decree of the Lower Court. In regard to the validity of the will, he said: "The third objection taken by the appellant is that the will is illegal, because the widow is the party to whom the law gives the estate. The Court have referred to all the authorities quoted by the appellant in support of this position, and find that although the opinions regarding wills of Hindus generally are conflicting, yet that the majority of them are against the argument of the appellant. It is unnecessary to cite all the opinions given on the subject, and the Court will content itself with referring to the case of Ramtoonoo Mullick v. Ramgopaul Mullick (Morl. Dig., p. 39, Nos. 3 & 4), in which it was held that a Hindu might, and could, dispose by will of all his property, movable and immovable, and as well ancestral as otherwise, and this decision was affirmed on appeal by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Questions, however, regarding the legality of the will now under discussion were referred to the law officers of the Court, to whom the legislature have assigned the duty of declaring the law on such matters, and they distinctly stated their opinion, that it is a valid and good instrument. The arguments, therefore, of the appellant that it is not recognizable under the provisions of Reg. V of 1829, cannot be sustained" (h).

(h) Nagalutchmy v. Nadaraja, Mad. Dec. of 1851, 226.

§ 411. Upon this decision, Mr. Strange, himself a Judge of the Madras Sudder and High Courts, remarks (i): "This decision was passed by a single Judge, confessedly ignorant of the law. He sought to guide himself by authorities, but found them conflicting. Supporting himself by the opinion of the pundits, and a judgment by the Calcutta Supreme Court, affirmed by the Privy Council, he upheld the will then in issue, which appointed trustees to the testator's property, to the prejudice of his widow. The pundits then applied to are the same who have since declared that no Hindu can make a will, and they explain that they gave the opinion rested on in the above case under the idea that they were called upon to test the will by the power the testator had to deal with the property during his lifetime, in the manner he had done by will." Certainly no particular authority can be allowed to the decision of the Sudder Court. It is impossible to imagine where the learned Judge could have found the conflicting decisions he referred to, unless among the Bengal Reports, and the case of Ramtoonoo v. Ramgopaul was, of course, upon this point of no authority whatever in Madras. The only Madras authority he could have found was the dictum in Mubrauze Vencata v. Mubrauze Latchmiah, (1 Mad. Dec., 449,) which laid down the broad principle that whatever a man may do by act inter vivos, he may do by will. Probably this principle accounts for the mode in which the question appears to have been put to the pundits, and for their misapprehension as to the point on which their opinion was required. That there must have been some misapprehension appears, not only from Mr. Strange's statement, made after personal consultation with them, but from a subsequent fatwah of theirs, in which the very distinction is taken between a gift and a will. In 1852 they pronounced that "A man may in his lifetime alienate his property to the prejudice of his widow, leaving her the means of maintenance; but Criticised by Mr. Strange.

Founded on mistake of pundits.

(i) Str. Man., § 176.

he cannot make arrangements that such arrangement shall take place after his death, since his widow would be entitled to what he died possessed of" (k).

Confirmed on appeal.

Privy Council decision.

§ 412. However, the case went, on appeal, to the Privy Council, and was there affirmed. Their Lordships said (l): "It may be allowed that in the ancient Hindu law, as it was understood through the whole of Hindustan, testamentary instruments, in the sense affixed by English lawyers to that expression, were unknown; and it is stated by a writer of authority (Sir Thomas Strange) that the Hindu language has no term to express what we mean by a will. But it does not necessarily follow that what in effect, though not in form, are testamentary instruments, which are only to come into operation, and affect property, after the death of the maker of the instrument, were equally unknown. However this may be, the strictness of the ancient law has long since been relaxed, and throughout Bengal a man who is the absolute owner of property may now dispose of it by will as he pleases, whether it be ancestral or not. This point was resolved several years ago by the concurrence of all the judicial authorities in Calcutta, as well of the Supreme as of the Sudder Court (m). No doubt the law of Madras differs in some respects, and amongst others with respect to wills, from that of Bengal. But even in Madras it is settled that a will of property, not ancestral, may be good. A decision to this effect has been recognized and acted upon by the Judicial Committee (n), and, indeed, the rule of law to that extent is not disputed in this case. If, then, the will does not affect ancestral property, it must (k) Sudder pundits, 19th July, 1852; Stra. Man., § 178.

(l) Nagalutchmee v. Gopoo, 6 M. I. A., 309, 344. See, too, per Lord Kingsdown, Bhoobum Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 10 M. I. A., 308; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15.

(m) This evidently refers to the certificate of the Sudder Judges to the Supreme Court in 1831. See ante § 372.

(n) See the case of Mulraz v. Chalekany, 2 M. I. A., 54, and the two cases in the Sudder Court, Mulrauze Venkata v. Mulrauze Lutchmiah, 1 Mad. Dec., 438, and Mulrauze v. Chellakany, 2 Mad. Dec., 12, ante § 408, where it is shown that both were cases of gift; the one which was affirmed in the Privy Council having undoubtedly been followed by possession given to the donee in the life of the donor.

be, not because an owner of property by the Madras law cannot make a will, but because, by some peculiarity of ancestral property, it is withdrawn from the testamentary power. It was very ingeniously argued by the respondent's counsel, that in all cases where a man is able to dispose of his property by act inter vivos, he may do so by will; that he cannot do so when he has a son, because the son, immediately on his birth, becomes coparcener with his father; that the objection to bequeathing ancestral property is founded on the Hindu notion of an undivided family; but that where there are no males in the family the liberty of bequeathing is unlimited. It is not necessary for their Lordships to lay down so broad a proposition, as they think it safer to confine themselves to the particular case before them. Under the circumstances of testator's family when he made his will and codicil, and having regard to the instruments themselves, the pundits to whom this question was properly referred by the Court—the pundits of the Sudder Dewanny Udalut—have declared their opinion that these instruments are sufficient to dispose of ancestral estate; that opinion has been affirmed by two Judges successively, of whom it is but justice to say that they appear to have examined the subject very carefully, and after much consideration to have pronounced very satisfactory judgments, though in one or two incidental observations which have fallen from them their Lordships may not entirely concur."

§ 413. This decision undoubtedly gave a new direction to the law of Madras as regards wills. Being a decision of the Court of final appeal, it ought to have been impossible ever again to lay down the principle, that a will could have no operation, and must be treated as wholly invalid, if its directions were opposed to the rules of succession which would have prevailed in its absence. The decision, no doubt, was expressly based upon the opinion of the pundits, and the judgments of two Judges. The former appears to have been founded on a misconception, and the latter upon the erroneous application of decisions given under one system of law, to a case which ought to have been governed by a wholly different system. But there can be little doubt that the decision was in unconscious conformity to the popular feeling, a feeling which aimed at increased liberty in regard to property, and which showed itself by attempts to alienate it in ways unknown to the law of the Mitakshara. In fact, the people of Southern India were trying, perhaps without knowing what they did, to take upon themselves the powers which Jimuta Vahana and his disciples had conferred upon the Hindus of Bengal. But beyond the fact that their Lordships, as it were, gave vitality to wills, the actual effect of the decision was very narrow. It carefully refrained from asserting that the power of bequest was co-extensive with that of alienation inter vivos. It laid down that a man, who had in other ways provided for his wife and daughters, might devise ancestral immovable property as he pleased to their prejudice. It seemed to assume that he could not do so as against male descendants. It neither affirmed, nor denied, the further doctrine of the pundits, that, if he had given authority to adopt, his devise would be invalid as against a son adopted in pursuance of such authority (o).

Change effected by it.

Later decisions.

§ 414. The decree of the Judicial Committee was pronounced in 1856, and in 1852 and subsequent years several decisions of the Madras Sudder Court are recorded, which seem to have been passed in perfect unconsciousness of their own decree in 1851. In the first case (p) a person who is described as the son of the cousin-german of the testator, sued to set aside a will by the deceased in favour of the foster son. The property in this case was certainly not ancestral. It had come to the testator from his brother, to whom it had been bequeathed by his maternal grandmother. He might therefore have disposed of it by

Sudder Court
refuse to act on Privy Council
decision.

(o) See F. MacN., 151, 228; Durma v. Coomara, Mad. Dec. of 1852, p. 111.
(p) Samy Josyen v. Ramien, Mad. Dec. of 1852, p. 60.

gift at his pleasure (§ 344). The Sudder pundits said: "As the Hindu law does not recognize a foster son, it was not legal that F (the testator) should constitute H (the special appellant) his foster son, and make a will accordingly, nor is it consistent with the Shaster that H should perform F's funeral rites. Such performance on his part is legally ineffectual, and cannot entitle him to the property of F, which must go to F's sapinda kinsmen, who are included in the order of succession to the property of a person who died leaving no male issue." The Sudder Court affirmed the correctness of this exposition, but dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff was not the testator's heir. In 1855 and 1859 the Sudder Court again broadly laid down the rule that a will was of no effect unless it took effect by possession during the donor's lifetime; that as a mere will it created no title, and could not affect the inheritance (q). In 1861 there were three cases, in all of which the wills were set aside as being opposed to Hindu law. In two of these cases the will was made to the prejudice of the testator's widow, as in the Privy Council case. The latest case is said to have been exactly similar to that of Nagalutchmy v. Nadaraja; but the Sudder Court refused to be bound by that decision, holding that it had been based upon an opinion of the pundits, which was given under a misapprehension, and which the law officers had afterwards retracted (r).

§ 415. In 1862 the High Court was constituted in Madras, and the question shortly came again before a tribunal which was more willing to be bound by the decisions of the Privy Council than its predecessor. Here the testator, who had no male issue, had bequeathed the bulk of his property, movable and immovable, to a distant relation, allotting what was admitted to be a sufficient maintenance to his legal representative, his widow. No

Harmony restored by

(q) Stru. Man., § 177; Chocalinga v. Iyah, Mad. Dec. of 1859, 35; Kasale v. Palaniayi, ib., 247. See, too, Bogoraz v. Tanjore Venkatarav, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 115.

(r) Muttu v. Annavaiyangar, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 67; Virakumara v. Gopalu, ib., 147; Vallinayagam v. Pucheche, 1 Mad. H. C., 333, note.

High Court decision.

possession had been given, and confessedly the disposition could only operate as a will. There was no finding whether the property was ancestral or self-acquired, but the Chief Justice said it must be assumed to be the former. The Court reviewed all the previous decisions, and affirmed the will. They said: "It is not necessary for us here to consider and lay down any general rule as to how far, or under what circumstances the law gives to a Hindu the power of disposal by will. But we may observe, that now that the legal right to make a will is settled, there seems nothing in principle or reason opposed to the exercise of the power being allowed co-extensively (as stated in some of the cases, and forcibly urged in Nagalutchmy v. Nadaraja) with the independent right of gift or other disposal by act inter vivos, which by law or established usage, or custom having the force of law, a native now possesses in Madras. To this extent the power of disposition can reasonably be considered to be in conformity with the respective proprietary rights of the possessor of property, and of heirs and coparceners, as provided and secured by the provisions of Hindu law" (s). This decision, of course, put an end to all discussion as to the capacity of a testator in Madras to make a binding will. The extent of that capacity will be considered further on (§ 417).

Wills originally not recognized in Bombay.

§ 416. The same silent revolution appears to have taken place in the Bombay Presidency. In a very early case in which the pundits were consulted they said: "There is no mention of wills in our Shasters, and therefore they ought not to be made"; and proceeded to point out that the owner of property could only dispose of it in a manner, and to the persons, directed by law (t). Accordingly, the Shastris declared wills to be invalid by which a man devised property away from his wife and daughters, though he provided for their maintenance, putting it on the general principle that the wife was heir, and therefore the will was ineffectual (u). And, similarly, where the will was in favour of one of two sisters' sons, to the exclusion of a third sister, and the second son of the second sister (v). In all these cases, it will be observed, a gift would have been perfectly valid. These decisions ranged from 1806 to 1820. When the current changed I am unable to state; but in 1866 Westropp, J., said: "In the Supreme Court the wills of Hindus have been always recognised, and also in the High Court, at the original side. Whatever questions there may formerly have been as to the right of a Hindu to make a will relating to his property in the Mofussil, or as to the recognition of wills by the Hindu law, there can be no doubt that testamentary writings are, as returns made within the last few years from the Zillahs show, made in all parts of the Mofussil of this Presidency; but, as might have been expected, much more frequently in some districts than in others, and this Court at its appellate side, has, on several occasions, recognized and acted on such documents" (w).

(s) Vallinayagam v. Pachche, 1 Mad. H. C., 326, 339; Ashutosh v. Doorga Churn, 6 I. A., 182; S. C., 5 Cal., 435; S. C., 5 C. L. R., 296.
(t) 2 Strm. H. L., 449.

Validity of wills
in Bombay.

§ 417. The extent of the testamentary power, after being subject to much discussion, has at length been finally settled by decisions, and by express legislation. Whatever property is so completely under the control of the testator that he may give it away in specie during his lifetime, he may also devise by will. Hence, a man may bequeath his separate, or his self-acquired, property; and one who, by the extinction of coparceners, holds all his property in severalty, may devise it, even in Malabar, so as to defeat the claims of remote heirs (x). So, a woman

Extent of the testamentary power.

(u) Deo Bacc v. Wan Bacc, 1 Bor., 27 [29]; Goolab v. Phool, ib., 154 [173]; Gungaram v. Tappee, ib., 372 [412].

(v) Ichharam v. Pramanund, 2 Bor., 471 [515]. For cases where the persons disinherited may possibly have been coparceners, see Tooljaram v. Nurbheram, 1 Bor., 380 [421]; Hureewulubh v. Keshowram, 2 Bor., 6 [7], and Man Bacc v. Krishnee, ib., 124 [141].

(w) Navottam v. Narsundás, 3 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 8.

(x) Beer Pertab v. Mahavajah Rajender, 12 M. I. A., 38; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 15; Navottam v. Narsundás, 3 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 6; Alami v. Komu, 12 Mad., 126; Achutan Nair v. Cheriotti, 22 Mad., 9. The same rule appears to may dispose by will of such parts of her stridhanum as are during her life absolutely under her own control (y). She cannot dispose of property which she has inherited from a male, and as to which her estate is limited by the usual restrictions (z). A member of an undivided family cannot bequeath even his own share of the joint property, because "at the moment of death, the right by survivorship is at conflict with the right by devise. Then the title by survivorship, being the prior title, takes precedence to the exclusion of that by devise" (a). And on the same principle, a devise by one of several widows of property to which she is entitled jointly with her co-widows, is invalid (b). The cases which decide the leading point are all from Madras and Bombay. But they would, of course, have been followed by the Bengal Courts in cases under the Mitakshara law, since they do not admit the right of a coparcener even by sale, much less by gift, to dispose of his own undivided share during his lifetime, without the consent of those jointly interested in it (§ 363). The same result is arrived at by legislation. Act XXI of 1870 (Hindu Wills) extends to Hindus, Jains, Sikhs and Buddhists various provisions of the Succession Act, X of 1865, which relate to wills; but § 3 provides "that nothing herein contained shall authorize a testator to bequeath property which he could not have alienated inter vivos, or to deprive any persons of any right of maintenance of which, but for § 2 (the extending section) he could not deprive them by will; and that nothing herein contained shall affect any law of adoption or intestate succession."

prevail in the Punjab. Punjab Customs 34, 68; Punjab Customary Law, III, 94. As to Mysore, see Tolasa Bayee v. Krishnachar, 18 Mysore, 22.

(y) Venkata Rama v. Venkata Suriya, 2 Mad. (P. C.), 333.

(z) Bai Devkore v. Anritram, 10 Bom., 372; Gadadur v. Chandrabhagabai, 17 Bom., 696.

(a) Per curiam, Villa Butten v. Yamenamma, 8 Mad. H. C., 6; Gooroova v. Narrainsawmy, ib., 13; Narottam v. Narsandas, 3 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 6; Gangubai v. Ramanna, 3 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 66; Udaram v. Rau, 11 Bom. H. C., 76; Lakshman v. Ramchandra, 7 I. A., 181; S. C., 5 Bom., 48; Mahadevappa v. Gonappa, 8 Mysore, 219. This rule applies in favour of a son in gremio matris as much as it does in the case of a son in esse. Hanmant Ramchandra v. Bhimacharya, 12 Bom., 105.

(b) Gurivi Reddi v. Chinamma, 7 Mad., 93.

The Probate and Administration Act V of 1881, which also applies to Hindus, provides by § 4, that "nothing herein contained shall vest in an executor or administrator any property of a deceased person which would otherwise have passed by survivorship to some other person."

§ 418. The restriction of the testamentary power in ^{Impartible} _{estates.} cases of joint family property, has now been decided not to apply to impartible estates. In the Pittapur case (e), the Rajah made a will to the exclusion of his adopted son who was admittedly joint in estate with the testator. The High Court of Madras held that the will was valid, on the ground that according to the decision in the case of Rani Sartaj Kuari v. Rani Deoraj Kuari (d), the Rajah could have alienated the whole or any part of his Zemindary at pleasure, and that whatever he could alienate he could devise. On appeal to the Privy Council it was urged that it had repeatedly been decided that where an impartible estate was part of the joint family property, it passed by survivorship and not by succession. That survivorship necessarily assumed a previous joint interest, and that although the case relied on had decided that this joint interest might be defeated by the holder of the impartible estate during his life, if he did not so defeat it the survivorship would operate at the moment of death for the benefit of the survivors, and defeat the will. This contention was over-ruled. The Court said: "It was argued that the decision in Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari did not extend to a will, and a case in 8 Mad. H. Ct., 6 was referred to. That was a case of an admitted coparcenary between the maker of the will and his adopted son, and the latter would take, as the surviving coparcener, a title which was held to be a prior title to that by devise. It is not applicable here, where coparcenary between the Rajah and the adopted son is not admitted, but the contrary is held. In the present case, according to the decision in (e) 26 I. A., 83, p. 95; S. C., 22 Mad., 883, ante § 341, where the legislation which followed upon this decision in Madras is stated.

(d) 15 I. A., 51; S. C., 10 All., 272, ante § 340.

Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari, the appellant did not become a coparcener with the Rajah. If the Rajah had power to alienate he might do it by will, and the title by the will would have priority to the title by succession. In the case in 17 I. A., 128, it was a question of succession by an illegitimate son to the legitimate son of his father. There was no question of the power of alienation. The language used was intended to apply only to the succession to the estate." The Committee did not explain how there could be a survivorship if there was no coparcenary. The real answer would appear to be, that in the present state of the decisions, the survivorship, which determines the succession to an impartible estate held by a joint family, must be treated as itself only a survival from a theoretical coparcenary, all the other incidents of which have successively perished.

§ 419. So far we have been treating of the testator's power to devise as it relates to the persons to whom he may devise, that is, his power to alter the order of succession as it would arise in the event of intestacy. But a completely different question arises as to his power to alter the nature of the estate which will vest in his devisee, that is to create an estate of a different species from that to which the law would give rise. As to this, the rule is that, so far as he has the power of bequest at all, he may not only direct who shall take the estate, but may also direct what quantity of estate they shall take, both as regards the object matter to be taken, and the duration of time for which it is to be held, and he may also arrange, so that on the termination of an estate in one person, the estate shall pass over, wholly or in part, to another person. But this liberty is shackled by the condition that no one limitation, either as regards the person who is to take, or the estate that is to be taken, shall violate any of the fundamental principles of the Hindu law (e). Therefore the person who is to take must be capable of taking, and

(e) See per Turner, L. J., Sonatun Bysack v. Juggutsoondree, 8 M. I. A., 85.

Estate must be one allowed by Hindu law.

the estate which he is given must be an estate recognized by the Hindu law, and not encompassed with limitations or restrictions opposed to the nature of the estate given. And though trustees may be employed to facilitate a legal form of bequest, they cannot be made use of so as to carry out indirectly what the law does not allow to be done directly (§ 425).

§ 420. The first point was laid down by implication in Shifting estate. the case of Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo Mullick (f), and expressly in the case of Tagore v. Tagore (g). In the former case the testator, a Hindu resident in Calcutta, by the 5th clause of his will left his property to his five sons in such a manner as would, if there had been nothing more, have made them absolute owners. By the 11th clause he declared that if any of his five sons should die without male issue, his share should pass over to the sons then living or their sons, and that neither his widow nor his daughter, nor his daughter's son, should get any share out of his share. The event which he contemplated took place. One of the sons died, leaving no male issue. Under the law of Bengal the widow would inherit his share, and she claimed it, notwithstanding the will, on the ground that the bequest to the son was absolute, and the gift over invalid. The claim was rejected in the Supreme Court, and on appeal the Lord Justice Knight Bruce said (h), "Whatever may have formerly been considered the state of that law as to the testamentary power of Hindus over their property, that power has now long been recognized, and must be considered as completely established. This being so, we are to say, whether there is anything against public convenience, anything generally mischievous, or anything against the general principles of Hindu law, in allowing a testator to give property, whether by way of remainder, or by way of

(f) 6 M. I. A., 526; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114; 9 M. I. A., 123.

(g) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 103, on appeal in the Privy Council, 9 B. L. R., 377; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; I. A., Sup. Vol. 47.

(h) 9 M. I. A., 135.

Devise with gift over.

executory bequest upon an event which is to happen, if at all, immediately on the close of a life in being. Their Lordships think that there is not; that there would be great general inconvenience and public mischief in denying such power, and that it is their duty to advise Her Majesty that such a power does exist. The bequest above cited was in fact exactly the arrangement which the Mitakshara law would have made for the devolution of the testator's property. If the effect of his will had been permanently to impress upon his property, in the hands of all its successive holders, the law of inheritance prescribed by the Mitakshara in place of that of the Daya Bhaga which governed the family, the will would undoubtedly have been invalid according to the doctrines laid down in the Tagore case. But the case which arose for decision was simply that of a gift to a person in existence, with a proviso that in a certain event the property should pass over to another person also in existence. This was the ordinary case of a gift made with a condition annexed fixing its duration (i). A bequest absolute in one event, for life in another. It is, however, undecided whether the Hindu law allows an estate to be given subject to conditions subsequent, upon the happening of any of which an estate, which has once vested, would be divested. And whether the gift over of an estate on events which may happen, not upon the close of a life in being, but at some uncertain time during its continuance, would not also be void (k).

Discussion as to the effect of the Hindu Wills Act upon this rule.

§ 421. Soorjeemoney Dossee's case has been followed by numerous cases in the Privy Council (l) in one of which their Lordships said:—"In stating the rule relating to the defeasance of a prior absolute interest by a subsequent event, it is important to add; first, that the event must happen, if at all, immediately on the close of a life in being at the time of the gift, as laid down in the Mullick's case; (9 M. I. A., 123), and, secondly, that a defeasance by way of gift over must be in favour of somebody in existence at the time of the gift, as laid down in the Tagore case" (m). In all these cases the dispositions were by wills prior to the coming into operation of the Hindu Wills Act of 1870. That Act extended to wills to which it applied various sections of the Indian Succession Act X of 1865, amongst others § 111, which provides that "where a legacy is given if a specified uncertain event shall happen, and no time is mentioned in the will for the occurrence of that event, the legacy cannot take effect unless such event happens before the period when the fund bequeathed is payable or distributable." To this section are appended various illustrations, of which (b) and (d) explain its application where a legacy is bequeathed, either on the death of the testator, or on the termination of a previous life estate, to A and on his death without children to B. That is exactly the limitation in Soorjeemoney Dossee's case. Hara Nath died in 1882 leaving three sons, the eldest of whom was Jogendra. His will declared that "my three sons shall be entitled to enjoy all the movable and immovable properties left by me equally. Any one of the sons dying sonless the surviving sons shall be entitled to all the properties equally." Jogendra died in 1886 sonless, leaving a widow Kamalbasini. She claimed her husband's third share, while the other sons asserted that under the will it had passed to them. The Original Court held in favour of the sons, considering that the case was governed by the series of decisions quoted above, and by the law of England as it prevailed in 1865, and that the framers of the Succession Act had not intended to repeal that law.

(i) See the case explained, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 192, and 9 B. L. R., 399; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; see, also, Bhoobun Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 10 M. I. A., 279, 308, 311; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15.

(k) Ram Lall v. Secretary of State, 8 I. A., 46, 63; S. C., 7 Cal., 304.
(l) Bissonauth Olunder v. Sreemutty Bamasoondery, 12 M. I. A., p. 48; Bhoobun Mohini v. Haurish Chunder, 5 I. A., 138; S. C., 4 Cal., 23; Kumar Tarakeswar v. Kumar Shoshi, 10 I. A., 51; S. C., 10 Cal., 952; Sreemutty Kristoromoney v. Norendro Krishna, 16 I. A., 29; S. C., 16 Cal., 353; Lalit Mohun v. Chukkun Lal, 24 I. A., 76; S. C., 24 Cal., 834.

Norendra v. Kamalbasini.

(m) 16 I. A., p. 39.

The High Court reversed the decree of the first Court. They held that the Act of 1865 had altered the law, and that according to § 111 as explained by illustration (b) the original gift to the three sons became indefeasible on the testator's death. This decision was affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council. The Judicial Committee, adopting the language of Lord Herschell in Vagliano v. Bank of England (n), held that in interpreting a codifying law, the proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the Statute, and to ask what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law. They held that in regard to contingent or executory bequests, the Indian Succession Act has laid down a hard and fast rule which must be applied wherever it is applicable without speculating on the intention of the testator. In this case the period of distribution is the death of the testator, and that period could not be postponed because the other beneficiaries were by their minority personally incapable of being put into physical possession of their shares (o). This decision must be taken as establishing that the ruling in the previous Privy Council cases must for the future be limited by § 111 of the Succession Act, where it applies. Where it does not apply, as for instance, in gifts or settlements inter vivos, their authority will remain untouched (p).

Executory bequest.

§ 422. The language of the Judicial Committee which might be taken as laying down the general rule that an executory bequest would always be valid by Hindu law where it would be valid by the law of England, was much relied on in a subsequent case of great importance, where an attempt was made to push the right of bequest to an extent greater than would be allowed even in England. This was the case of Jatindra Mohun Tagore v. Ganendra

Tagore case.

(n) [1891] A. C., 107.

(o) Norendra Nath v. Kamalbasini, 23 I. A., 18; S. C., 23 Cal., 563; Lala Ramjewan v. Dal Koer, 24 Cal., 406.

(p) Virasangappa v. Rudrappa, 19 Mad., 110.

Mohun Tagore (q). There the testator, who had property, ancestral and self-acquired, real and personal, producing an income of 2½ lacs, commenced his will by reciting that he had already provided for his only son, and that he was to take nothing whatever under his will. He then vested the whole of his estate in trustees with provisions for their number being constantly maintained. After providing for numerous legacies he proceeded to direct the course in which the corpus of the property should devolve. The key to this was to be found in his express wish that the bulk of the property should neither be diminished nor divided. To effect this he directed that the legacies and annuities should be paid gradually out of the income; and while this process was going on, the trustees were to hold the property, paying only the balance of the yearly income to "the person entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the real property." As soon as all charges upon the estate were paid off, the trustees were to convey the real estate to the use of the person who should, under the limitations of the will, be entitled to it, subject to the limitations therein expressed, so far as the then condition of circumstances would permit, and so far only as such limitations could be introduced into a deed of conveyance or settlement without infringing upon any law against perpetuities which might then be in force. The person beneficially interested in the real estate was to be ascertained by reference to the following limitations:—

1. To the defendant Jatindra for life.
2. To his eldest son, born during the testator's lifetime, for life.
3. In strict settlement upon the first and other sons of such eldest son in tail male.
4. Similar limitations for life and in tail male upon the other sons of Jatindra, born in the testator's lifetime, and their sons successively.

(q) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 103, on appeal in the Privy Council, 9 B. L. R., 377; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; S. C., I. A., Sup. Vol. 47.

Tagore case.

5. Limitations in tail male upon the sons of Jatindra born after the testator's death.
6. "After the failure or determination of the uses and estates hereinbefore limited to the defendant Surendra for life."
7. Like limitations for his sons and their sons.
8. Upon failure or determination of that estate, like limitations in favour of the sons of Lalit Mohun, who was dead at the making of the will, and their sons. The will expressly adopted primogeniture in the male line through males, and excluded women and their descendants, and all rights of provision or maintenance of either man or woman. It also forbade the application of any rule of English law whereby entails might be barred, showing an intent that each tenant, though of inheritance, should be prohibited from alienation. The personalty was practically to pass under similar limitations to the person who would from time to time be entitled to the realty.

The only provision made by the testator for the plaintiff, his son, consisted of property producing Rs. 7,000 per annum, settled upon him at his marriage. His being disinherited arose from his having subsequently become a Christian. Of course under Act XXI of 1850 (Freedom of Religion) this circumstance was no bar to his claim as heir.

At the time of the testator's death, Jatindra, the head of the first series of estates, had no son, nor had he any during the suit.

Surendra, the head of the second series of estates, had a son, Promoth Kumar, who was born in the lifetime of the testator.

Lalit Mohun, the head of the third series, was dead at the making of the will, but left a grandson, Suttendra, born during the lifetime of the testator, and capable of taking under the will. These were the only persons beneficially interested under the limitations of the real estate.

The son, as might have been expected, sued to set aside this will, except as to the legacies; contending, 1st, that it was wholly void as to the ancestral estate; 2nd, that in any case the father was bound to provide him with an adequate maintenance, the adequacy being estimated, not with reference to his own actual wants, but to the magnitude of the estate; 3rd, that the whole framework of the will, resting as it did on a devise to trustees, was void, since the Hindu law recognized no distinction between legal and equitable estates; 4th, that the life estate to Jatindra was void, since a Hindu testator could bequeath nothing less than what was termed "his whole bundle of rights"; 5th, that at all events the estates following upon this life estate were void, as infringing the law against perpetuities; and 6th, that as to everything after the life estate there was an intestacy, and the plaintiff was entitled as heir-at-law, notwithstanding the express words of the will that he was to take nothing under it.

§ 423. The first four points were disposed of with little difficulty. The Original and Appeal Courts were of opinion that the power of a father in Bengal to bequeath all his property, of every sort, was beyond discussion, and that it went so far as to exclude the son even from maintenance (r). The Privy Council did not enter upon this question, being of opinion that in any case the maintenance actually allotted to the son was adequate (s). The 3rd objection was also set aside (t). The Judicial Committee said (u), "The anomalous law which has grown up in England of a legal estate which is paramount in one set of Courts, and an equitable ownership which is paramount in Courts of Objections raised.

Father's power of devise may be exercised through trustees.

(r) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 132, 159.

(s) 9 B. L. R., 413; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(t) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 134, 161; Krishnamani v. Ananda, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 278, 284, explaining the remarks of the C. J., in Kumara Asima v. Kumara Krishna, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 36.

(u) 9 B. L. R., 401; S. C., 18 Suth., 359. See Seedee Nazeer v. Ojoodhya, 8 Suth., 399; Peddammuthulaty v. Timma Reddy, 2 Mad. H. C., 272.

Equity, does not exist in, and ought not to be introduced into, Hindu law. But it is obvious that property, whether movable or immovable, must for many purposes be vested more or less absolutely in some person or persons for the benefit of other persons, and trusts of various kinds have been recognized and acted on in India in many cases (v). The distinction between 'legal' and 'equitable' represents only the accident of falling under diverse jurisdictions, and not the essential characteristic of a possession in one for the convenience and benefit of another." As to the 4th objection, the Courts dismissed it also. Peacock, C. J., referring to a doubtful expression of the Judicial Committee in Bhoobum Moyee's case (w), and the express decision in Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby (x), said, "If a testator can disinherit his son by devising the whole of his estate to a stranger, there seems to be no reason why he should not be able to divide his estate by giving particular and limited interests in the whole of the property to different persons in existence, or who may come into existence during his lifetime, to be taken in succession, as well as by giving his whole interest or bundle of rights in particular portions of land included in his estate to different persons" (y).

§ 424. The 5th point was decided in favour of the plaintiff, not upon any application of the English doctrine of perpetuities, which was held to be founded upon special considerations which had no place in Hindu law (z), but upon the general principle that the kind of estate tail which the testator wished to create was one wholly unknown and repugnant to Hindu law (a). That he was

(v) See Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud, 6 M. I. A., 53.

(w) 10 M. I. A., 311; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15.

(x) 4 M. I. A., 137; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 35.

(y) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 166; on appeal in the (P. C.), 9 B. L. R., 405; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(z) Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 167; Goberdhun v. Shamchand, Bourke, 282; Kumara Asima v. Kumara Krishna, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 11, 32. As to religious perpetuities, see post § 436.

(a) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 171, 212. This ruling is also applicable to an hereditary office and endowment, Gnanasambanda v. Velu, 27 I. A., 69; S. C., 23 Mad., 271.

in fact trying to introduce a new law of inheritance, which should make all the subsequent holders of the estate take it in an order, and with restrictions and exemptions, wholly opposed to the principles of law which governed the testator and his family. Their Lordships of the Privy Council observed (b): "The power of parting with property once acquired, so as to confer the same property upon another, must take place either by inheritance or transfer, each according to law. Inheritance does not depend on the will of the individual owner, transfer does. Inheritance is a rule laid down (or, in the case of custom, recognized) by the State, not merely for the benefit of individuals, but for reasons of public policy. Domat., 2,413. It follows directly from this that a private individual who attempts by gift or will to make property inheritable otherwise than the law directs, is assuming to legislate, and that the gift must fail, and the inheritance take place as the law directs. This was well expressed by Lord Justice Turner in Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo Mullick (c): 'A man cannot create a new form of estate, or alter the line of succession allowed by law, for the purpose of carrying out his own wishes or policy.' . . . It follows that all estates of inheritance created by gift or will, so far as they are inconsistent with the general law of inheritance, are void as such, and that by Hindu law no person can succeed thereunder as heir to estates described in the terms which in English law would designate estates tail."

§ 425. The result, therefore, was that the life estate to Jatindra was valid, but the estates to successive holders would be void if they must be held as coming in as heirs in tail. It was, however, contended that successive persons might be regarded as successive donees for life, having

(b) 9 B. L. R., 394, 396; S. C., 18 Suth., 359. See Sonatin Bysack v. Juggut Soondree, 8 M. I. A., 78; Shoshi v. Tarokessur, 6 Cal., 421; affd. Kumar Tarakeswar v. Kumar Shoshi, 10 I. A., 51; S. C., 10 Cal., 352; Surya Row v. Gungadhara, 13 I. A., 97; Shookmoy v. Monohari, 7 Cal., 269; affd. 12 I. A., 103; S. C., 11 Cal., 684; Kristoromoney v. Narendro, 16 I. A., 29; S. C., 16 Cal., 383.

(c) 6 M. I. A., 555, sic.; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114. But these words are not to be found in the judgment referred to. Cf. 8 M. I. A., p. 420; 9 M. I. A., p. 242.

Estate may be divided by limitations.

Tagore case.

Devise must conform to ordinary law of property.

Tagore case.

Estate tail invalid.

the power and subject to the restrictions sought to be imposed by the will upon the successive heirs in tail (d). If so, they also would defeat the rights of the plaintiff as heir-at-law.

These donees fell into two classes: 1st, those not in existence at the death of the testator, but who might come into existence before the first life estate fell in; 2nd, those who were in existence at his death.

Jatindra had no sons alive at the death of the testator. But, of course, he might have sons, and in default of natural-born sons might adopt, as under the will each successive taker was authorized to do. The second and third series of estates were also represented by persons living at the testator's death.

It was held that none of these could take. Not the possible issue of Jatindra; because the donee must be a person capable of taking at the time when the gift takes effect, and must either in fact, or in contemplation of law (e), be in existence at the death of the testator (f). Not the existing representatives of the second and third series of estates, because they were only to take "after the failure or determination" of the previous series, and these words were held to mean the actual exhaustion of the line of Jatindra in conformity with the will, and not its incapacity to succeed by reason of the illegality of the will. Consequently, the event on which they were to take had never arisen and never could arise (g). Finally, it was held that all the bequests must be looked on as if they had Donee must be in existence at death.

Tagore case.

Trust for illegal purpose invalid.

(d) 9 B. L. R., 396; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(e) That is when in embryo at the death, or adopted subsequently to death, under authority given before it. 9 B. L. R. (P. C.), 397; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(f) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 188, 191, 221; S. C., on appeal in the Privy Council, 9 B. L. R., 396-400; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Krishnamamani v. Ananda, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 231, 279, over-ruling Arumugam v. Ammi Ammal, 1 M. H. C., 400; Bramamayi v. Jagesh, 8 B. L. R., 400; Ramgutte v. Kristo, 20 Suth., 472; Soudaminy v. Jagesh, 2 Cal., 262; Mangaldas v. Krishnabai, 6 Bom., 38; Javerbai v. Kablibai, 16 Bom., 492; Bai Motirahoo v. Bai Mamobai, 19 Bom., 647; Chundi Churn v. Rani Sidheswari, 15 I. A., 149; S. C., 16 Cal., 71. Succession Act X of 1865, § 92-98. This principle has been applied in Calcutta to a dedication of property to an idol which was not in existence at the death of the testator. Upendra Lal v. Hemchandra, 25 Cal., 404.

(g) 9 B. L. R., 409; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

been made directly to the persons who were the subjects of them, and that the intervention of trustees made no difference, since that which could not be done directly, could not be done indirectly by the medium of a trust (h). The result was that the plaintiff, the heir-at-law, was held entitled to the whole estate after the life of Jatindra, subject to the payment of legacies and annuities.

§ 426. This case has been cited at great length on account of the numerous points decided by it, and also as establishing in the most authoritative manner that the power of devise by a Hindu is limited, as to the objects and subjects of the bequest, by the general purposes of Hindu law. On this ground, wills directing an estate to go in an order of succession which should exclude female heirs, or heirs by adoption, have been held invalid (i). Restraints on alienation within the limits incidental to the estate created are also invalid. Where such provisions indicate an intention that the estate should never be the property of any one, but should pass on without any individual ownership for the support and enjoyment of a series of beneficiaries, the entire disposition is invalid, and the estate passes as an intestate estate (k). Where an estate is given, and the grant is followed by restrictions against alienation, the restrictions are void as being repugnant to the nature of the estate, and the grant remains unshackled (l). And they would be equally ineffectual if they were framed for the purpose of freeing Irregular successions.

(h) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 162, 195; on appeal, 9 B. L. R., 402; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Kumara Asima v. Kumara Krishna, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 11; Krishnamamani v. Ananda, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 274; Rajender v. Sham Chund, 6 Cal., 106.

(i) Kumar Tarakeswar v. Kumar Shoshi, 10 I. A., 51; S. C., 10 Cal., 952; Surya Rao v. Gungadhara, 13 I. A., 97; S. C., 9 Mad., 499; Kristoromoney v. Norendro, 16 I. A., 29; S. C., 16 Cal., 393; Surya Rau v. Chellajammi, 17 Mad., 150; Lakshmana v. Boggaramanna, 19 Mad., 501.

(k) Sookhmoy Chunder v. Srimati Manohurri, 12 I. A., 103; S. C., 11 Cal., 684.

(l) 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 25; Nilai Charan v. Ganga, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 265, note. Promotho v. Radhika, 14 B. L. R., 175; Gokool Nath v. Issur Lochun, 14 Cal., 222; Lalla Ramjeevan v. Dal Koer, 24 Cal., 406; Krishna Aiyar v. Vythianatha, 18 Mad., 252; Yethirajulu v. Mukuntu, 28 Mad., 363. Tagore case, Sup. Vol. I. A., p. 65; S. C., 9 B. L. R., p. 395; Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn, 6 I. A., 182; S. C., 5 Cal., 438; Chundi Churn v. Sideswari, 15 I. A., 149; S. C., 16 Cal., 71. Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882, §§ 10, 11.

the estate from its liability to debts, or other obligations attaching to it by law (m), or for the prohibition of partition by persons entitled to divide (n). The same principles govern clauses which postpone the enjoyment of an estate. It is open to a testator, as to any other donor, to postpone the enjoyment of a devise by interposing a previous estate. But if he confers an unintercepted estate upon a devisee, any clause which postpones his enjoyment beyond the period of majority when he is by law entitled to take possession, is ineffectual as repugnant to the estate previously conferred, and it makes no difference that the property is vested in trustees for the purpose of carrying out the arrangement (o). The same point was decided by Holloway, J., in Madras; there the property was ancestral, and the devisee was the son, and it was held that a clause postponing his enjoyment beyond the period of majority was invalid, as trenching on his vested right to possession under Mitakshara law (p).

Accumulations.

§ 427. Directions that the income of property shall be accumulated appear to be very common in wills in Bengal. Sometimes they appear as limitations upon the devise itself. Sometimes they are carried out by vesting the property in trustees. Practically the effect is the same in either case, as it was settled by the Tagore case that where a disposition of property is inherently illegal it cannot be effected by the intervention of trustees (q). Where such accumulations are to be made for the payment of debts or legacies, or for the benefit of minor devisees till they attain majority, they are unobjectionable. They would amount to a direction that the accumulations should be

(m) Sonatum Bysack v. Sreemutty Juggutsoondree, 8 M. I. A., p. 76.

(n) Nubkissen v. Hurrishunder, F. MacN., 323; Mokoondo v. Gonesh, 1 Cal., 194; Rajender v. Shamchand, 6 Cal., 106; Raikishori v. Debendranath, 15 I. A., 37; S. C., 15 Cal., 409.

(o) Srimati Brahmamayi v. Jageschandra, 8 B. L. R., 400; Collynauta v. Chundernath, 8 Cal., 378; Lloyd v. Webb, 24 Cal., 44; Gosavi Shingar v. Rivett Carnac, 13 Bom., 463; Husenbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy, 26 Bom., 319.

(p) Devaraja v. Venayaga and Oumiah Chetty v. Lutchmanarasoo, both decided in the Original Court, May 23, 1867, M.S. apud J. D. M.; acc. Harilal v. Bai Moni, 29 Bom., 351.

(q) Sup. Vol. I. A., p. 72; S. C., 9 B. L. R., p. 402.

added to the testator's property, for the purpose of enabling the lawful dispositions of his will to be carried out (r). Suppose however that property was given to a devisee, with a direction that he should accumulate the profits or income beyond what was necessary for his maintenance, and add it to the corpus of the estate, this would be an attempt to dispose of the property of the devisee which would be beyond the power of the testator (s). A different question would arise if the testator attempted to deal with the whole or part of his property as something which was not to vest in any one as its owner, but was to be treated as a nucleus, from which accumulations were to be made by which it was to be increased, until some future occasion arose on which it was to be finally disposed of. This appears to have been the real intention of the testator in the singular will which was discussed in Sonatum Bysack v. Sreemutty Juggutsoondery (t). There the whole property was granted to an idol, apparently with the view of securing perpetual succession, with directions against partition and alienation. So long as the family remained in harmony the eldest member of the family, as manager for the idol, was to defray the uses of the idol and the maintenance of the family, and add the surplus to the estate. If no agreement existed among the members, the profits were to be divided among the male branches, and if any such branch came to be represented by a daughter or daughter's son, such heir should be entitled only to maintenance. This gift to the idol was treated by the Supreme Court as merely illusory, and the subsequent provisions as intended to establish a novel and invalid line of succession. On appeal to the Privy Council, it was held that upon the true construction of the will the property granted to the idol was effectually granted for the benefit of the testator's sons and their offspring in the male line as a joint family, subject to certain purposes, and that the surplus income (r) Bissonath Chunder v. Sreemutty Bamasoondery, 12 M. I. A., p. 61.

(s) Ibid., pp. 63, 64.

(t) 8 M. I. A., 66, pp. 68, 76, 87.

was similarly granted, and that the widow of the joint members was entitled to his share as widow and heir. In Shookhmoy Chunder's case (u), very similar provisions were treated by the Judicial Committee as evidencing an intention by the testator that his estate was not to be disposed of, which vitiated the entire will. In Bengal clauses for accumulation have also been treated as ineffectual. In one case the accumulation was to continue for 99 years, the money to be employed in the purchase of Zemindaries, which were not beneficially disposed of (v). In another the estates actually given were not to be placed in possession of the beneficiaries until other independent trusts had been satisfied, and until that event accumulations were to go on (w). The same point arose very recently in Calcutta, but unfortunately took a course which prevented any final decision (x). There the testator appointed three executors of whom his wife was one, and vested in them as such executors and trustees the whole of his estate. He gave them power to adopt a son, and directed that they should defray out of the income certain religious and family expenses, and pay certain monthly sums to the widow and the adopted son. The bulk of the property was to remain in the hands of the trustees till after the death of the widow, when it was to be handed over to the adopted son, if he had attained or when he attained the age of eighteen. In default of such adopted son, or male issue by him existing at the death of the widow, the property was to be divided among the testator's daughters and their sons. No beneficial interest existed in any one during the life of the widow, and the trustees held the property merely to keep it out of the hands of any real owner. The suit was brought by a person claiming as adopted son against the widow, asserting his right to immediate possession of the estate, subject to the trusts

Accumulations.

(u) 12 I. A., 103, p. 110; S. C., 11 Cal., 684.

(v) Kumara Asima v. Kumara Krishna, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 11.

(w) Callynauth v. Chundernauth, 8 Cal., 378.

(x) Anvito Lall Dutt v. Surnomoyee Dassee, 24 Cal., 589; 25 Cal., 662; affd. 27 I. A., 123; S. C., 27 Cal., 996.

actually declared. Mr. Justice Jenkins held that the adoption was good, and that the trust for accumulation was also good, being one in favour of a person or persons to whom the entire estate was ultimately to pass, though such person could not be ascertained during the life of the widow. On appeal the High Court held that the adoption was bad, which rendered it unnecessary to consider the validity of the trust. Mr. Justice Trevelyan, however, expressed his opinion that the direction to accumulate was void, while Macleay, C. J., rather intimated that he entertained a contrary view. The Privy Council agreed with the Appellate Court that the adoption was bad, and declined to enter upon the other question. Supposing the adoption had been supported, the plaintiff would of course have been entitled as next heir of the testator, and of full age, to immediate possession of everything which had not been validly disposed of as against him. It would probably have been argued, with considerable chance of success, first, that the testator could not effectually postpone his right to possession. Secondly, that the ownership of a Hindu estate cannot be legally kept in suspense until the happening of an indefinitely future event, on which it is for the first time to be ascertained to which of the objects of the testator's bounty his property is to belong (y).

§ 428. The Privy Council has lately sanctioned a very great extension of testamentary powers, by recognising the right of a testator to grant a power of appointment to a person named in his will, by which the final devolution of his estate should be regulated at the termination of interests previously created (z). There the will directed that the whole of his immovable property should be constituted into a trust, the income of which should be applied by his trustees for the use of his wife Motivahoo, his daughter Mamoo, and the children of his daughter for their lives.

(y) Acc. Gorthandas v. Bai Ramcoover, 26 Bom., 449, pp. 467, 468.

(z) Bai Motivahoo v. Bai Mamoo Bai, 24 I. A., 93; S. C., 21 Bom., 709; affg. 19 Bom., 647; and Javerbai v. Kabilbai, 15 Bom., 320; Upendra Lal v. Hemchandra, 25 Cal., 405; Manorama v. Kalicharan, 31 Cal., 166.

Creation of power of appointment by will.

"Afterwards the heirs of the said children are duly to apportion and receive the property. But should there be no children born of the womb of my daughter Mamoo, then after the death of Mamoo and of my wife Motivahoo this trust is to become void, and this property is to be delivered to such persons as my daughter Mamoo may direct it to be delivered by making her will."

The Judicial Committee affirmed the validity of this disposition. They said (p. 105): "It appears to them to follow from the first taker being allowed to have only a life interest, that her possession is sufficient to complete the executory bequest which follows the gift for life. The result of the decisions is, that according to settled law, if the testator here had himself designated the person who was to take the property in the event of Mamoo dying childless, the bequest would be good. The remaining question is, whether his substituting Mamoo and giving her power to designate the person by her will is contrary to any principle of Hindu law. There is an analogy to it in the law of adoption. A man may by will authorise his widow to adopt a son to him, to do what he had power to do himself, and although there is here a strong religious obligation, their Lordships think that the law as to adoption shows that such a power as that now in question is not contrary to any principle of Hindu law. Further, they think that the reasons which have led to a testamentary power becoming part of the Hindu law are applicable to this power, and that it is their duty to hold it to be valid. But whilst saying this, they think they ought also to say that in their opinion the English law of powers is not to be applied generally to English wills." They inserted a declaration "that the gifts contained in these paragraphs respectively to such persons as Mamoo may direct by making her will are valid gifts, so far as the same may be directed to be delivered to persons who were in existence, either actually or in contemplation of law at the death of the testator and not otherwise, but that this Court cannot and doth not determine upon whom the property subject to such powers respectively will devolve, if and so far as such powers are not validly exercised."

§ 429. As regards form, the will of a Hindu may be oral, though, of course, in such a case the strictest proof will be required of its terms (a). So, a paper drawn up in accordance with the instructions of the testator, and assented to by him, will be a good will, though not signed (b). And if a paper contains the testamentary wishes of the deceased, its form is immaterial. For instance, petitions addressed to officials, or answers to official enquiries, have been held to amount to a will (c). Even a statement in a deed executed by a widow in pursuance of the instructions of her late husband, and containing an assertion of his last wishes as to the devolution of his property has been held to be good evidence of a nuncupative will by the husband (d). And a will may be revoked orally, or in any other manner by which it might have been made (e). Nor are technical words necessary. The single rule of construction in a Hindu, as in an English will, is to try and find out the meaning of the testator, taking the whole of the document together, and to give effect to this meaning. In applying this principle, special care must be taken not to judge the language used by a Hindu according to the artificial rules which have been applied to the language of Englishmen, who live under a different system of law and in a different state of society (f). A devise in general terms, without

Form of will immaterial.

Intention is the guide of interpretation

(a) Beer Pertab v. Maharajah Rajender, 12 M. I. A., 2; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 15, ante § 394; see will of Mahomed Abba, 24 Bom., 8. See now the Hindu Wills Act, XXI of 1870, which applies to Hindus in Bengal, and the towns of Madras and Bombay.

(b) Tara Chand v. Nobin Chunder, 3 Suth., 138; Radhabai v. Ganesh, 3 Bom., 7.

(c) Shumsool v. Shewukram, 2 I. A., 7; S. C., 14 B. I. R., 226; Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dhyal, 3 I. A., 259; S. C., 26 Suth., 55; Kalian v. Sanwal, 7 All., 163; Haidar Ali v. Tasadduk, 17 I. A., 82; S. C., 18 Cal., 1; Balbhaddar v. Sheo Narain, 26 I. A., 194.

(d) Chintaman v. Moro Lakshman, 11 Bom., 89. See as to will made but not forthcoming, Anwar v. Secretary of State, 31 Cal., 885.

(e) Pertab v. Subhao, 4 I. A., 228; S. C., 3 Cal., 426; Venkayamma v. Venkataramanayamma, 29 I. A., 156; S. C., 25 Mad., 678.

(f) See per Turner, L. J., Soorjeemoney v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 550; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114; per Ld. Kingsdown, Bhoobum Moyee v. Ram Kishore, 10 words of inheritance, or with words imperfectly describing an estate of inheritance, will pass the entire estate of the testator, unless a contrary intention appears from the context (g), even though the estate was limited and restricted by provisions which were void (h). On the other hand, stronger words, and a more evident intention, would be required to pass an absolute estate, where the bequest was to a woman, and especially where it would operate to the prejudice of the testator's issue (i). But although every effort will be made to carry out the wishes of the testator, where they are ascertainable and legal, the Court cannot make a new will for them. Therefore, a will must fail if its terms are so vaguely expressed that it is impossible to ascertain what are the testator's objects (k). The rule was laid down as follows by Lord Eldon (l). "As it is a maxim that the execution of a trust shall be under the control of the Court, it must be of such a nature that it can be under that control so that the administration of it can be reviewed by the Court, or if the trustee dies the Court itself can execute the trust—a trust therefore, which where vague, or illegal.

M. I. A., 308; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15; Lakshmi Bai v. Ganpat, 4 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 161; Lallubai v. Mankwarbai, 2 Bom., 408.

(g) Per Willes, J., Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., 395; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Sursutty v. Poorno, 4 Suth., 55; Broughton v. Pogose, 12 B. L. R., 74; S. C., 19 Suth., 181; Vullubhdas v. Thucker Gordhandas, 14 Bom., 360; Damodardas v. Tapidas, 25 I. A., 126; S. C., 22 Bom., 833. Succession Act X of 1865, § 32, ante § 394.

(h) Rameshwar v. Lachmi, 31 Cal., 111.

(i) Rabutti v. Sibchunder, 6 M. I. A., 1; Lukhee v. Gokool, 13 M. I. A., 209; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 57; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 47; Shamshul v. Shewukram, 2 I. A., 7, 14; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 226; Bhagbutti v. Chowdry, 2 I. A., 256; S. C., 24 Suth., 168; Lakshmi Bai v. Hirabai, 11 Bom., 69; affd. p. 573; Prosunno v. Tarrucknath, 10 B. L. R., 267; S. C., Sub nomine; Tarrucknath v. Prosono, 19 Suth., 48; Kollany v. Luchmee, 24 Suth., 395; Jeevun v. Mt. Sona, 1 N.-W. P., 66; Punchoomoney v. Troyluckoo, 10 Cal., 342, ante §§ 396, 397.

(k) Sandial v. Mailland, Fulton, 475. See Kumara Asima v. Kumara Krishna, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 38; Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. J. R. (O. C. J.), 198; Jayman's Estate, 8 Ch. D., 584; Gokul Nath v. Issur Lochun, 14 Cal., 222; Anand Rao Vinayak v. Administrator-General of Bombay, 20 Bom., 450. As to the application of the cyprus doctrine to charities in India, see Mayor of Lyons v. Advocate-General of Bengal, 3 I. A., 32; S. C., 1 Cal., 303.

(l) Morrice v. Bp. of Durham, 9 Ves., 399, 10 Ves., 521, followed by the Privy Council in Rinchor Das v. Parvatibai, 26 I. A., 71; S. C., 23 Bom., 725, where a devise to Dharam (religious or charitable purposes) was held void for vagueness; Blair v. Duncan (1902), A. C., 37. So a direction to a legatee to use the money for Sara-Kam (good works) was held void for uncertainty. Bai Baiji v. Jannadas, 22 Bom., 774; Bai Chadumbai v. Dadi, 26 Bom., 632; cf. Parbati v. Ram Barun, 31 Cal., 895. A bequest to "Poor relations, dependents and servants" is valid; Manorama v. Kalicharan, 31 Cal., 166.

in case of maladministration could be reformed and a due administration directed, and then unless the subject and objects can be ascertained, upon principles familiar in other cases, it must be decided that the Court can neither reform maladministration nor direct a due administration." And if the intention of the testator is obviously to do something that is illegal, the Court will not put a non-natural construction upon his language, so as to turn an illegal into a legal arrangement (m). The result, of course, will be an intestacy as to so much of the property as has been ineffectually disposed of, and the residue will go to the heir-at-law, however positive the expression of the testator's wish may have been that he should not take. The estate must go to somebody, and there is no one to whom it can go except the heir-at-law. As Peacock, C. J., said in the Tagore case, "A mere expression in a will that the heir-at-law shall not take any part of the testator's estate is not sufficient to disinherit him, without a valid gift of the estate to some one else. He will take by descent, and by his right of inheritance, whatever is not validly disposed of by the will, and given to some other person" (n). So where under the terms of the will the corpus of the estate is not to vest until the happening of a certain event, it will in the meantime vest in the heir and his heir (o). On the other hand, it is not necessary that a will should contain an express declaration of a testator's desire or intention to disinherit his heirs, if there is an actual and complete gift to some other person capable of taking under it (p).

Disinheritance.

(m) Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., 407; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; per Lord Selborne, 5 App. Ca., p. 719; per curiam, 10 I. A., p. 59; 16 I. A., p. 42. See as to the proper interpretation to be put upon wills, where questions of remoteness arise; Arumugam v. Ammi Ammall, 1 Mad. H. C., 400; Bramamayi v. Jages, 8 B. L. R., 400; Soudamoney v. Jogesh, 2 Cal., 262; Kherodomoney v. Daorgamoney, 4 Cal., 455; Ram Lal Sett v. Kanai Lal, 12 Cal., 663, ante § 382.

(n) 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 187; S. C., on appeal 9 B. L. R., 402; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Promotho v. Radhika, 14 B. L. R., 175; Lallubhai v. Mankwarbai, 2 Bom., 488.

(o) Amulya v. Kalidas, 32 Cal., 561.

(p) Prosunno v. Tarrucknath, 10 B. L. R., 267; S. C., 19 Suth., 48, disapproving of Roopoll v. Mohina, ib., 271, note.

Ineffectua
de vise.

A devise which cannot take effect at all is as if it had never been made. Consequently the property devised passes to the heir. The rule of the English Common law that an undisposed of residue vests in the executor beneficially, does not apply in case of a Hindu will (g). The case of a devise to a class of persons, which fails as to some, has already been discussed (§§ 379—383). Where a testator leaves a legacy absolutely as regards his estate, but restricts the mode of the legatee's enjoyment to secure certain objects for the benefit of the legatee, if the objects fail, the absolute gift prevails (r).

Possession.

§ 430. As possession under a devise is not necessary to its validity, so neither is it necessary that the legatee should be capable of assenting to it. Therefore, a bequest in favour of an idiot or an infant will be valid. And so it will be in any other case, although the legatee would have been incapable of inheriting from some personal disability (s).

The Hindu
Wills Act.

§ 431. Under the combined operation of the Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870), § 2, and the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), § 154, numerous sections of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) (t), are extended to all wills and codicils made by any Hindu, Jain, Sikh or Buddhist, on or after the 1st day of September 1870, within the territories subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts at Madras and Bombay, (g) Ante § 425, Lallubhai v. Mankuyarbai, 2 Bom., 388.

(r) Administrator-General of Bengal v. Apar, 3 Cal., 553; Rameshwar v. Luchmi, 31 Cal., 111. See Indian Succession Act, §§ 125, 126.

(s) Kooldebnarain v. Mt. Wooma, Marsh, 357.

(t) The sections so extended are the following: 46, 49, capacity to make, revoke or alter a will; 48, effect of fraud, etc.; 50, 51, mode of execution; 57—60, or revocation or revival; 55, witness not disqualified by interest; 61—67, 82, 83, 85, 88—98, construction of will; 99—103, void bequests; 106—108, vesting of legacies; 109, 110, onerous; 111, 112, contingent; and 113—124, conditional bequests; 125—127, bequests with directions as to application or enjoyment; 128, bequests to executor; 129—136, specific; and 137, 138, demonstrative legacies; 139—153, ademption; 154—157, liabilities attaching to legacies; 158, general bequests; 159, bequests of interest or produce; and 160—163, of annuities; 164—166, legacies to creditors or portioners; 167—177, election; 187, necessity of probate for executor or legatee. See also as to the Registration and Deposit of Wills, Act III of 1877, § 40—46.

and to all such wills and codicils made outside those territories and limits, so far as relates to immovable property situate within such territories or limits. The primary result is to abolish all forms of wills except those written and attested as prescribed by the Succession Act. To guard against the dangers which might arise from the application to persons under one law of a complicated series of provisions intended for persons governed by a wholly different law, § 3 of the Hindu Wills Act provides that nothing in the Act shall authorise a testator to bequeath property which he could not have alienated inter vivos, or to deprive any persons of any right of maintenance of which, but for § 2 of the Act, he could not deprive them by will, or shall affect any law of adoption or intestate succession, or shall authorise any Hindu, etc., to create in property any interest which he could not have created before the first of September 1870. Under this last clause it has been held that notwithstanding the express words of § 99 of the Succession Act, which is one of those extended by the Wills Act, a Hindu cannot make a bequest to a person unborn at the death, but born between that date and the termination of a previous estate after which his interest is to take effect (u).

Act I of 1869, § 13 also contains a provision requiring wills made by taluqdars in Oudh in certain cases to be executed and attested three months before the death of the testator, and registered within one month after execution (v).

§ 432. The Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) applies to all Hindus (w) and persons exempted under § 332 of the Succession Act, no matter when they died, but does not render invalid any transfer of property duly made before the 1st of April 1881; but, except in cases to which (u) Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni, 8 Cal., 637.

(v) See as to this section Ajudhia Buksh v. Mt. Rukmin Kuar, 11 I. A., 1; Haji Abdul v. Munshi Amir Haidar, 11 I. A., 121; Satrapa v. Hulas, 25 All., 121; Act X of 1885.

(w) This term includes Jains, Bachebi v. Makhan, 3 All., 55 and Sikhs Bhagwankuar v. Jogendra, 30 I. A., 249; S. C., 31 Cal., 11.

the Hindu Wills Act applies, no Court beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and the territories of British Burmah shall receive applications for probate or letters of administration unless authorised by the Local Government with the sanction of the Governor-General (x). By § 149 it is provided that nothing in the Act shall validate any testamentary disposition which would otherwise have been invalid; invalidate any such disposition which would otherwise have been valid; deprive any person of any right of maintenance to which he would otherwise have been entitled; or affect the Administrator-General of Bengal, Madras or Bombay.

§ 433. Previous to the Hindu Wills Act, it was held that the executors of a Hindu did not, in the character merely of executors, take any estate properly so called, in the property of the deceased;—or in other words, that the mere nomination of executors, though followed by probate, did not of itself confer any estate on the executor, further than the estate he might have by the express words of the will, or as heir of the testator. The grant of probate or letters of administration to a Hindu took effect only for the purpose of recovering debts and securing debtors paying the same, except so far as was otherwise provided by Act XXVII of 1860 (y). The Hindu Wills Act incorporated § 179 of Act X of 1865 which provided that “the executor or administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person, is his legal representative for all purposes, and all the property of the deceased vests in him.” Also § 187 which provides that no right as executor or legatee can be established in any Court of Justice unless probate or letters of administration shall have been granted (z). The Act V

(x) The High Court cannot grant probate or administration testate of a person who did not either die or leave assets within the limits of its jurisdiction. The will of Rosa Learmouth, 24 Mad., 121.

(y) Shaik Moosa v. Sheik Essa, 8 Bom., 241, p. 252; Ardesir v. Hirabai, ibid., 474, p. 479; Lallubhai v. Mankuverbai, 2 Bom., p. 406; Jugmohandas v. Pallonjee, 22 Bom., 1; Surat Chandra v. Bhupendra Nath, 25 Cal., 103; Amulya v. Kalidas, 32 Cal., 561.

(z) This section is not incorporated in Act V of 1881. Therefore as regards Hindu Wills prior to 1st September 1870 though probate may be granted, it is of 1881 repeals § 179 as part of Act XXI of 1870 but re-enacts it as part of itself. The result is that in all cases coming within the Hindu Wills Act or the Probate Act, the executor or administrator as such is the legal representative of the deceased, and statutory owner of his property, except such as would otherwise have passed by survivorship to some other person (a).

not necessary; Krishna Kinkur v. Panchuram, 17 Cal., 272; Kanhaiya Lal v. Muni, 18 All., 260. Probate cannot be refused on the ground that the will is illegal or void. Hormusji v. Dhanbaiji, 12 Bom., 164.

(a) Act V of 1881, § 4. As to whether a creditor can apply for revocation of probate, see Nilmoni v. Umanath, 10 I. A., 60. As to wills made before 1st September 1870, see Krishna Kinkur v. Rai Mohun, 14 Cal., 37. As to probate of will made out of India by a person who is not a British subject, see Act V of 1881, §§ 55, 56, 57. As to Native Christians Act VII of 1901. Bhavrao Dadajirao v. Lakshmi Bai, 20 Bom., 607. The probate of a Native Court requires to be supplemented by proper proceedings in India. Manasing v. Ahmed Kunhi, 17 Mad., 14. Probate cannot be granted by mere consent, Monmohini v. Banga, 31 Cal., 357; nor of a document which does not deal with property, but merely appoints a manager during minority. The will of Bukhtawar Mull, 23 Mad., 133. As to the liability of an executor de son tort, see Narayanasami v. Esa Abbayi, 28 Mad., 351.

CHAPTER XII.

RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE ENDOWMENTS.

Religious gifts favoured.

§ 434. GIFTS for religious and charitable purposes were naturally favoured by the Brahmans, as they are everywhere by the priestly class. Sancha lays down the general principle that "wealth was conferred for the sake of defraying sacrifices" (a). Gifts for religious purposes are made by Katyayana an exception to the rule that gifts are void when made by a man who is afflicted with disease and the like, and he says that, if the donor dies without giving effect to his intention, his son shall be compelled to deliver it (b). This is an exception to the rule that a gift is invalid without delivery of possession. The Bengal pundits state that this principle applies even against a son under the Mitakshara law, though his assent would be indispensable if the gift was for a secular object; they seem, however, to limit the application of the rule to a gift of a small portion of the land (c). Similarly, in the N.-W. Provinces, the Court affirmed the right of a father, even without his son's consent, to make a permanent alienation of part of the ancestral property as provision for a family idol, provided the grant was made bonâ fide, and not with an intention to injure the son (d). In Western India grants of this nature have been held valid; even when made by a widow, of land which descended to her from her husband, and to the prejudice of her husband's male heirs (e). And so a grant by a man to his family

(a) 3 Dig., 484.

(b) 2 Dig., 96. See Manu, ix., 323; Vyasa, 2 Dig., 189; Mitakshara, i., 1, § 27, 32.

(c) See futwah, Gopal Chand v. Babu Kunwar, 5 S. D., 24 (29); Mitakshara, i., 1, § 25.

(d) Raghunath v. Gobind, 8 All., 76.

(e) Jugjeevun v. Deosunkur, 1 Bor., 394 [436]; Kupoor v. Sevukram, ib., 405 [448]; but see Umbashunker v. Tooljaram, 1 Bor., 400 [442]; Muhalukmee v.

priests, to take effect after the life estate of his widow, was decided to be good (f).

§ 435. The principle that such gifts can be enforced ^{Effectuated by will.} against the donor's heirs would naturally slide into a practice of making them by will (§ 405). It is probable that as Brahmanical acuteness favoured family partition as a means of multiplying family ceremonies, so it fostered the testamentary power as a mode of directing property to religious uses, at a time when the owner was becoming indifferent to its secular application. Many of the wills held valid in the Supreme Court of Calcutta have been remarkable for the large amounts they disposed of for religious purposes (g). In one case arising out of Gokulchunder Corformah's will, where practically the whole property had been assigned for the use of an idol, the Court declared the will proved, but wholly inoperative, except as regards a legacy to the stepmother of the testator (h). Sir F. MacNaghten suggests that the will might properly have been cancelled as, upon its face, the production of a madman. No reason can be offered why such a will should be set aside in Bengal, merely because the whole property was devoted to religious objects. In the case of Radhabullubh Tagore v. Gopeemohun Tagore, which was decided in Calcutta the very next year (1811), the right of a Hindu so to apply the whole of his property, seems to have been admitted (i).

§ 436. The English law, which forbids bequests for ^{Superstitious uses not for-bidden} superstitious uses, does not apply to grants of this character in India, even in the Presidency towns (k), and such grants Kripashookul, 2 Bor., 510 [557]; Ramanund v. Ramkissen, 2 M. Dig., futwah, at p. 117. See, too, post § 633.

(f) Keshoor v. Mt. Ramkoonwar, 2 Bor., 314 [345].

(g) F. MacN., 323, 331, 336—347, 349, 350, 371; Ramtonoo v. Ramgopal, 1 Kn., 245. The same thing was remarked by Sir Thomas Strange as a feature in the wills made by Hindus in Madras. 2 Stra. H. L., 453.

(h) F. MacN., 320, App. 58.

(i) F. MacN., 335.

(k) Das Mercus v. Cones, 2 Hyde, 65; Andrews v. Joakim, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 148; Judah v. Judah, 5 B. L. R., 453; Khusalchand v. Mahadevgiri, 12 Bom. H. C., 214; Rupa Jagshet v. Krishnaji, 9 Bom., 169.

have been repeatedly enforced by the Privy Council (l). Nor are they invalid for transgressing against the rule which forbids the creation of perpetuities. "It being assumed to be a principle of Hindu law that a gift can be made to an idol, which is a caput mortuum, and incapable of alienating, you cannot break in upon that principle by engrafting upon it the English law of perpetuities" (m). In fact both the cases in which the Bengal High Court in 1869 set aside the will as creating secular estates of a perpetual nature, contained devises of an equally perpetual nature in favour of idols, which were supported (n). But where a will, under the form of a devise for religious purposes, really gives the beneficial interest to the devisees, subject merely to a trust for the performance of the religious purposes, it will be governed by the ordinary Hindu law. Any provisions for perpetual descent, and for restraining alienation, will, therefore, be void. The result will be to set aside the will, as regards the descent of the property, leaving the heirs-at-law liable to keep up the idols, and defray the proper expenses of the worship (o). A fortiori will this rule apply, where the estate created is in its nature secular, though the motive for creating it is religious (p).

§ 437. As an idol cannot itself hold lands, the practice is to vest the lands in a trustee for the religious purposes, or to impose upon the holder of the lands a trust to defray the expenses of the worship (q). Sometimes the donor is

(l) Rantonoo v. Ramgopal, 1 Kn., 245; Jewun v. Shah Kubeerood-deen, 2 M. I. A., 390; S. C., 6 Suth. (P. C.), 3; Sonatin Bysack v. Juggutsoondree, 8 M. I. A., 66; Juggutmohini v. Mt. Sokheemoney, 14 M. I. A., 289; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 19; S. C., 17 Suth., 41.

(m) Per Markby, J., Kumara Aseme v. Kumara Krishna, 2 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), p. 47. See as to the application of the rule to cases not under Hindu law, Fatma Bibi v. Advocate-General, Bombay, 6 Bom., 42; Limji v. Bapuji, 11 Bom., 441. The idol itself must have come into existence or the gift will be invalid. Nogendra v. Benoy, 30 Cal., 521; Rojomoyee v. Troylukho, 29 Cal., 270; (n) Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 103, in the P. C., 9 B. L. R., 377; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Krishnamani v. Ananda, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 231; Brojosoondery v. Luchmee Koonwaree, 15 B. L. R. (P. C.), 176, note.

(o) Promotho v. Radhika, 14 B. L. R., 175; Phate v. Damodar, 3 Bom., 84. (p) Anantha v. Nagamuthu, 4 Mad., 200.

(q) See Putwahi in Kowla Kant v. Ram Huree, 4 S. D., 196 (247). It is said, however, that a trust is not required for this purpose. Manohar Ganesh v. Lakhmiram, 12 Bom., p. 263; Bhuggobuthy v. Gooroo Prosonno, 25 Cal., 112.

himself the trustee. Such a trust is, of course, valid, if perfectly created, though, being voluntary, the donor cannot be compelled to carry it out if he has left it imperfect (r). But the effect of the transaction will differ materially, according as the property is absolutely given for the religious object, or merely burthened with a trust for its support. And there will be a further difference where the trust is only an apparent, and not a real one, and where it creates no rights in anyone except the holder of the fund (s).

§ 438. The last case arises where the founder applies his own property to the creation of a pagoda, or any other religious or charitable foundation, keeping the property itself, and the control over it, absolutely in his own hands. The community may be greatly benefited by this arrangement, so long as it lasts, but its continuance is entirely at his own pleasure. It is like a private chapel in a gentleman's park, and the fact that the public have been permitted to resort to it, will not prevent its being closed, or pulled down, provided there has been no dedication of it to the public. It will pass equally unencumbered to his heirs, or to his assignees in insolvency. He may diminish the funds so appropriated at pleasure, or absolutely cease to apply them to the purpose at all (t). In short, the character of the property will remain unchanged, and its application will be at his own discretion. Trust imperfect.

Another state of things arises where land or other property is held in beneficial ownership, subject merely to a trust as to part of the income, for the support of some religious endowment. Here again the land descends and Property held under trust.

The possession and management of the property of the idol, and the right to sue in respect of it, are vested in the Sebait, Jagindra v. Hemanta, 31 I. A., 203; S. C., 32 Cal., 129.

(r) See Lewin, Trusts, p. 61.

(s) Acc. per curiam. 11 All., pp. 22-27.

(t) Howard v. Pestonji, Perry, O. C., 535; Venkatachellamiah v. P. Narain-apah, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 104; S. C., Mad. Dec. of 1854, 100; Chemmanihatti v. Meyene, Mad. Dec. of 1862, 90; 2 W. MacN., 103; Brojosoondery v. Luchmee Koonwaree, in the P. C., 15 B. L. R., 176 (note); S. C., 20 Suth., 95; Delroos v. Nawab Syud, 15 B. L. R., 167, affirmed in P. C., 3 Cal., 324; Sub nomine, Ashgar v. Delroos.

nor perpetuities.

Colourable religious endowment.

Tenure in trustee.

is alienable, and partible (u), in the ordinary way, the only difference being that it passes with the charge upon it (v). The same rule would apply where the owner retained the property in himself, but granted the community or part of the community an easement over it for certain specified purposes (w).

The remaining case is the one first named, where the whole property is devoted, absolutely and in perpetuity, to the religious purposes. Here the trustee has no beneficial interest in the property, beyond what he is given by the express terms of the trust (x). He cannot encumber or dispose of it for his own personal benefit, nor can it be taken in execution for his personal debt. But he may do any act which is necessary or beneficial, in the same manner and to the same degree as would be allowable in the case of the manager of an infant heir. He may, within those limits, incur debts, mortgage and alien the property, and bind it by judgments properly obtained against him (y). And he may lease out the property in the usual manner, but he cannot create any other than proper derivative tenures and estates conformable to usage; nor can he make a lease, or any other arrangement which will bind

Absolute
dedication of property.

Powers of trustee.

(u) Ram Coomar v. Jogender, 4 Cal., 56; Suppanmal v. Collector of Tanjore, 12 Mad., 387, p. 391.

(v) Mahatab v. Mirdad, 5 S. D., 268 (313), approved by Privy Council, 15 B. L. R., p. 173; sup. note (t) Futtoo v. Bhurrit, 10 Suth., 299; Basoo v. Kishen, 13 Suth., 200; Sonotun Bysack v. Juggutsoondree, 8 M. L. A., 66; Sheikh Mahomed v. Amarchand, 17 I. A., 28; S. C., 17 Cal., 498; Jagindra v. Hemanta, 31 I. A., p. 209; S. C., 32 Cal., 129.

(w) Jaggamoni v. Nilmoni, 9 Cal., 75.

(x) As to the cases in which the manager or head of a religious endowment has, or has not a beneficial interest in its funds or offerings, see Suthianama v. Saravanabagi, 18 Mad., 266; Girijanand v. Sailajanand, 23 Cal., 645. The position and powers of the swami of a mutt were elaborately discussed in the case of Vidyapurna v. Vidyaniidhi, 27 Mad., 435.

(y) Prosumo v. Golab, 2 I. A., 145; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 450; Konwur v. Ramchunder, 4 I. A., 52, p. 62; S. C., 2 Cal., 341; Kales Churn v. Bungshee, 15 Suth., 339; Khusalchand v. Mahadevgiri, 12 Bom. H. C., 214; Fegredo v. Mahomed, 15 Suth., 75; Shankar Bharati v. Venkapa Naik, 9 Bom., 422; Bishen Chand v. Syed Nadir, 15 I. A., 1; S. C., 15 Cal., 329; Parotam v. Datgir, 25 All., 296. In Bombay it has been held that although the rents of a religious endowment may be alienated, the corpus of the property is absolutely inalienable; Narayan v. Chintaman, 5 Bom., 393; Collector of Thana v. Harb, 6 Bom., 546; Shri Ganesh v. Keshavray, 15 Bom., 625. Acc. Nallayappa v. Ambalavana, 27 Mad., 466. As to not done by de facto manager, see Saminatha v. Puroshottama, 16 Mad., 67; Kasim Saiba v. Sudhindhra, 18 Mad., 359; Ramalingam v. Vythilingam, 20 I. A., 150; S. C., 16 Mad., 490.

his successor, unless the necessity for the transaction is completely established (z).

§ 439. The devolution of the trust, upon the death or default of each trustee, depends upon the terms upon which it was created, or the usage of each particular institution, where no express trust-deed exists (a). Where nothing is said in the grant as to the succession, the right of management passes by inheritance to the natural heirs of the donee, according to the rule, that a grant without words of limitation conveys an estate of inheritance (b). The property passes with the office, and neither it nor the management is divisible among the members of the family (c). Where no other arrangement or usage exists, the management may be held in turns by the several heirs (d). Sometimes the constitution of the body vests the management in several, as representing different interests, or as a check upon each other, and any act

Devolution of
trust.

(z) Radhabillabh v. Juggutchunder, 4 S. D., 151 (192); Shibessouree v. Mothooranath, 13 M. L. A., 270; S. C., 13 Suth. (P. C.), 18; Juggessur v. Roodro, 12 Suth., 299; Takboonissa v. Koomar, 15 Suth., 228; Arruth v. Juggurnath, 18 Suth., 439; Mohunt Burm v. Khashee, 20 Suth., 471; Bunwaree v. Mudden, 21 Suth., 41; Ramchandra Shankarbava v. Kaslinath, 19 Bom., 271; Prosono Kumar v. Saroda Prosonno, 22 Cal., 989. Where an unlawful alienation has been made by a trustee of a religious endowment the statute of limitation begins to run from the appointment of his successor. Mahomed v. Ganapati, 13 Mad., 277; Vedapurath v. Vallabha, ib., 402; Sathianama v. Saravanabagi, 18 Mad., 266; the necessity for a permanent lease may be inferred from long and undisturbed possession under it. Chockalingam v. Mayandi, 19 Mad., 485; Navasimha v. Gopala, 28 Mad., 391.

(a) Greedharee v. Nundkishore, Marsh., 573; affd., 11 M. L. A., 428; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 25; Muttu Ramalinga v. Perianayagum, 1 I. A., 209; Janoki v. Gopal, 10 I. A., 32; S. C., 9 Cal., 766; Genda v. Chatar, 13 I. A., 100, 9 All., 1; Appasami v. Nagappa, 7 Mad., 499; Rangachariar v. Yegna Dikshatur, 3 Mad., 524.

(b) Chutter Sein's case, 1 S. D., 18 (239); Venkatachellamiah v. P. Narainapah, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 104. See Tagore case, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 182; 9 B. L. R. (P. C.), 395; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; per curiam, 9 Cal., p. 79; Nanabhai v. Shriram Goswami, 12 Bom., 331; Gnanasambanda v. Velu Pandarvam, 27 I. A., p. 69; S. C., 23 Mad. As to escheat to Crown, see Secretary of State v. Haibatrao, 28 Bom., 276.

(c) Jaafar v. Aji, 2 Mad. H. C., 19; Kumarasami v. Ramalinga, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 261.

(d) Nubkissen v. Hurrishunder, 2 M. Dig., 146. See Anundmoyee v. Boykantinath, 8 Suth., 193; Ramsoondur v. Taruck, 19 Suth., 28; Mitta Kunth v. Neerunjun, 14 B. L. R., 166; S. C., 22 Suth., 437; Mancharam v. Pranshankar, 6 Bom., 298. There is nothing to prevent a female being manager. See Moottoo Meenatchy v. Viloo, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 136; Joy Deb Surmah v. Hurroputty, 16 Suth., 232. See Hussain Beebee v. Hussain Sheriff, 4 Mad. H. C., 23; Punjab Customs, 85; unless the actual discharge of spiritual duties is required; Mujavar v. Hussain, 3 Mad., 93. Special custom is necessary, Janokee v. Gopaul, 2 Cal., 365; affd., 10 I. A., 32; S. C., 9 Cal., 766.

which alters such a constitution would be invalid (e). Where the head of a religious institution is bound to celibacy, it is frequently the usage that he nominates his successor by appointment during his own lifetime, or by will (f). Sometimes this nomination requires confirmation by the members of the religious body. Sometimes the right of election is vested in them (g). In no case can the trustee sell or lease the right of management, though coupled with the obligation to manage in conformity with the trusts annexed thereto (h), nor is the right saleable in execution under a decree (i). It has, however, been held in Bombay that there is no objection to an alienation of a religious office, made in favour of a person standing in the line of succession, and not disqualified by personal unfitness. Such an alienation is in fact little more than a renunciation of the right to hold the office (k). But, I imagine, that even in such a case, the Court might refuse to ratify the transaction, if it appeared to have been actuated by improper motives. The same rule applies to the sale of religious offices (l). It has been decided in Calcutta that a private endowment of a family idol may be transferred to another family, the idol being a part of the gift and the property continuing to be appropriated to its benefit as before (m).

(e) Rajah Vurmah v. Ravi Vurmah, 4 I. A., 76; S. C., 1 Mad., 235. See Teramath v. Lakshmi, 6 Mad., 270. A fluctuating community of persons may be the managers of all endowments, Secy. of State v. Haibatrao, 28 Bom., 276.

(f) Hoogly v. Kishanund, S. D. of 1848, 253; Soobramaneya v. Aroomooga, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 39; Greedharee v. Nundkishore, 11 M. I. A., 405; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 25; Trimbakpuri v. Gangabai, 11 Bom., 514; Ramalingam v. Vythilingam, 20 I. A., 150; S. C., 16 Mad., 490; Annasami v. Ramakrishna, 24 Mad., 219.

(g) Mohunt Gopal v. Kerparam, S. D. of 1850, 250; Narain v. Brindaban, 2 S. D. 151 (192); Gossain v. Bissessur, 19 Suth., 215; Maddo v. Kamta, 1 All., 539.

(h) Rajah Vurmah v. Ravi Vurmah, 4 I. A., 76; S. C., 1 Mad., 235, overruling Ragnada v. Chinnappa, 4 Mad., Rev. Reg., 109; Rama Varma v. Raman Nair, 5 Mad., 89; Kannan v. Nilakundan, 7 Mad., 337; Lakshmanaswami v. Rangamma, 26 Mad., 31; Sarkum Abu v. Rahaman Buksh, 24 Cal., 83; Guanasambanda v. Velu Pandaram, 27 I. A., p. 69; S. C., 23 Mad.

(i) Durga v. Chanchal, 4 All., 51; Rajaram v. Ganesh, 23 Bom., 131.

(k) Sitarambhal v. Sitaram, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 250; Mancharam v. Pranshankar, 6 Bom., 298; Annasami v. Ramakrishna, 24 Mad., 219.

(l) Krupa v. Dorasami, 6 Mad., 76; Narasimma v. Anantha, 4 Mad., 391; Juggernath Roy v. Pershad Surmah, 7 Suth., 266; Dubo Misser v. Srinivas, 5 B. L. R., 617; Narayana v. Ranga, 15 Mad., 183.

(m) Khetur Chunder v. Hari Das, 17 Cal., 557.

§ 440. Unless the founder has reserved to himself some special powers of supervision, removal, or nomination, neither he nor his heirs have any greater power in this respect than any other person who is interested in the trust (n). And such powers, when reserved, must be strictly followed (o). But where the succession to the office of trustee has wholly failed, it has been held that the right of management reverts to the heirs of the founder (p). Where no trust has been created, the law will vest the trust in the founder and his heirs, unless there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution (q).

A trust for religious purposes, if once lawfully and completely created, is of course irrevocable (r). The beneficial ownership cannot, under any circumstances, revert to the founder or his family. If any failure in the objects of the trusts takes place, the only suit which he can bring is to have the funds applied to their original purpose, or to one of a similar character (s). If necessary the Court will direct that a scheme should be prepared for the future management in the altered circumstances (t).

(n) Teertaruppa v. Soonderajien, Mad. Dec. of 1851, 57; Lutchmee v. Rookmanee, Mad. Dec. of 1857, 152; 2 W. MacN., 102.

(o) Advocate-General v. Fatima, 9 Bom. H. C., 19.

(p) Jai Bansi v. Chatter, 5 B. L. R., 181; S. C., 13 Suth., 396; Sub nomine, Pect Koonwar v. Chuttur: but see Act XX of 1863 (Native Religious Endowments), Phate v. Damodar, 3 Bom., 84; Hori Dasi v. Secretary of State, 5 Cal., 228.

(q) Gossamee v. Ruman Lolljee, 16 I. A., 137; S. C., 17 Cal., 3; Jagannath Prasad v. Runjit Singh, 25 Cal., 354; Sheoratan v. Ram Pargash, 18 All., 227.

(r) Juggutmohini v. Sokheemoney, 14 M. I. A., 289; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 19; S. C., 17 Suth., 41; Punjab Customs, 92.

(s) Mohesh Chunder v. Koylash, 11 Suth., 443; Reasut v. Abbott, 12 Suth., 132; Nam Narain v. Ramoon, 23 Suth., 76; Attorney-General v. Brodie, 4 M. I. A., 190; Mayor of Lyons v. Advocate-General of Bengal, 3 I. A., 32; S. C., 26 Suth., 1. See Act XX of 1863, Panchcowrie v. Chumsoolall, 3 Cal., 563; Brajomohun v. Hurrolall, 5 Cal., 700; Hemangini v. Nobin Chand, 8 Cal., 788; see as to suits by devotees or others interested in Religious trust; Radhabai v. Chinnaji, 3 Bom., 27; Dhadphale v. Gurav, 6 Bom., 122. As to suits by or with the permission of the Advocate-General, see Civil Procedure Code, 8 of 1877, § 539; XIV of 1852, § 439. As to suits for the removal of the trustee on the ground of improper conduct, see Mohun v. Lutchmun, 6 Cal., 11; Thandavaraya v. Subbayyar, 23 Mad., 483.

(t) Manohar Ganesh v. Lakhmiram, 12 Bom., 247; affd., Chotalal Lakshmirani v. Manohar Ganesh, 26 I. A., 199; S. C., 24 Bom., 50; Prajag Doss v. Tirumala, 28 Mad., 319.

Founder's rights.

Trust irrevocable.

CHAPTER XIII.

BENAMI TRANSACTIONS.

Origin of benami.

§ 441. THERE probably is no country in the world except India, where it would be necessary to write a chapter "On the practice of putting property into a false name." Yet this is the literal explanation of a benami transaction, and such transactions are so common as to have given rise to a very considerable body of decisions. Sir George Campbell says of the benami system: "The most respectable man feels that if he has not need to cheat anyone at present, he may some day have occasion to do so, and it is the custom of the country. So he puts his estate in the name of his wife's grandmother, under a secret trust. If he is pressed by creditors or by opposing suitors, it is not his. If his wife's grandmother plays him false, he brings a suit to declare the trust" (a). In many cases, however, the object of masking the real ownership was not to prepare the means of future fraud, but to avoid personal annoyance and oppression by providing an ostensible owner who might appear in Court, and before the Government officials, to represent the estate. In some instances the practice can only be accounted for by that mysterious desire which exists in the native mind, to make every transaction seem different from what it really is. Whatever be the origin of it, the custom of vesting property in a fictitious owner, known as the benamidar, has been long since recognized by the Courts of India, and by the Privy Council. Even the familiar principle that a tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title has been made to yield to its influence. A tenant, when sued for rent due to his lessor, has been allowed to prove that the person from whom, nominally, he accepted a lease, was only a benamidar for a third person, to whom the rent was really due (b). And, conversely, where a landlord had accepted rent continuously from persons in whose name a lease had been taken for the benefit of their husbands, when the benamidars were unable to pay, he was allowed to sue the persons really interested in the lease (c).

(a) Systems of Land Tenure, 181.

§ 442. Of course the law of benami is in no sense a branch of Hindu law. It is merely a deduction from the well-known principle of equity, that where there is a purchase by A in the name of B, there is a resulting trust of the whole to A; and that where there is a voluntary conveyance by A to B, and no trust is declared, or only a trust as to part, there is a similar resulting trust in favour of the grantor as to the whole, or as to the residue, as the case may be, unless it can be made out that an actual gift was intended (d). In the English Courts an exception is made to this rule, where the person in whose name the conveyance is taken or made is a child of the real owner, when the transaction is presumed to have been made by way of advancement to him. But this exception has not been admitted in India. There the rule is well established, that in all cases of asserted benami the best, though not the only, criterion is to ascertain from whose funds the purchase-money proceeded. Whether the nominal owner be a child or a stranger, a purchase made with the money of another is prima facie assumed to be made for the benefit of that other (e). It has been suggested that, where a conveyance was taken by a Hindu in the name of a daughter, the probability that it was intended as an advancement would be much stronger than if it were taken in the name of a son; "for in a Hindu joint-family the son's holdings would always remain part of the common stock, whereas the daughters would, on their marriage, necessarily be separated" (f). But the existence of any distinction of this sort was denied in a much later case by Mr. Justice Mitter. He said: "So far as the ordinary and usual course of things is concerned, the practice of making benami purchases in the names of female members of joint undivided Hindu families is just as much rife in this country, as that of making such purchases in the names of male members" (g). It has been also held that, in the absence of evidence as to the origin of the purchase-money, there is no presumption either way as to whether property purchased in the name of a Hindu wife was her husband's property or her own (h). But, I imagine, it could hardly be said there was an absence of evidence as to the origin of the purchase-money, unless there was evidence that both wife and husband possessed funds from which the purchase might have been made. The decision was reversed upon the evidence by the Privy Council, which found that the purchase was benami (i). The mere fact that the widow of a rich husband is found in possession of property of whose acquisition no account is given, raises no presumption that it belonged originally to her husband (k).

(b) Donzelle v. Kedarnath, 7 B. L. R., 720; S. C., 16 Suth., 186.(c) Debnath v. Gudadhur, 18 Suth., 132.(d) Lewin, Trusts, 127, 144. Standing v. Bowring, 31 Ch. D., 262. Act II of 1882, §§ 81, 82 [Trusts].(e) Pandit Ram Narain v. Maulvi Muhammad, 26 I. A., 38; S. C., 26 Cal., 227; Gopeekrist v. Gungapersaud, 6 M. L. A., 53; Moulvi Sayyud v. Mt. Bebee, 13 M. L. A., 232; S. C., 13 Suth. (P. C.), 1; Bissessur v. Luchmessur, 61 A., 233; S. C., 5 C. L. R., 477; Naginbhai v. Abdulla, 6 Bom., 717; Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb, 9 Bom., 115.

Strict proof.

The assertion that a transaction is not really what it professes to be, is one that will be regarded by the Courts with great suspicion, and must be strictly made out by evidence (l). But when the origin of the purchase-money, (f) Obhoy Churn v. Funchann, Marsh., 564.

 (g) Chunder Nath v. Kristo, 15 Suth., 357; Nobin Chunder v. Dokhobala, 10 Cal., 686.
 (h) Chowdrani v. Tariny, 8 Cal., 545; disapproving of Bindoo v. Pearee, 6 Suth., 312; Narayana v. Krishna, 8 Mad., 214; Bai Motivahoo v. Pirshotam, 29 Bom., 306.
 (i) Dharani Kant v. Kristo Kumari, 13 I. A., 70; S. C., 13 Cal., 181; cf. Mt. Thakro v. Ganga Pershad, 15 I. A., 29; S. C., 10 All., 197.
 (k) Diwan Ran Bijai v. Indrapal Singh, 26 I. A., 226; S. C., 26 Cal., 871.
 (l) Sreemanchunder v. Gopaulchunder, 11 M. I. A., 28; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 10; Azimut v. Hurdwaree, 13 M. I. A., 395; S. C., 14 Suth. (P. C.), 14; Faez Buksh v. Fukeeroodeen, 14 M. I. A., 234; S. C., 9 B. L. R., 466; Uman Pershad v. Gandharv Singh, 14 I. A., 127; S. C., 15 Cal., 20; Suleman Kadar v. Nawab Mehdi, 25 I. A., 15; S. C., 25 Cal., 478; Nirmul Chunder v. Mahomed Siddick, 25 I. A., 225; S. C., 26 Cal., 11; Ranga Aiyar v. Strinavasa Aiyangar, or the fictitious character of the ownership, is once made out, the subsequent acts done in the name of the nominal owner will be explained by reference to the real nature of the transaction. The same motive which dictated an ostensible ownership, would naturally dictate an apparent course of dealing in accordance with such ownership (m).

§ 443. Where a transaction is once made out to be benami, the Courts of India, which are bound to decide according to equity and good conscience, will deal with it in the same manner as it would be treated by an English Court of equity (n). The principle is that effect will be given to the real and not to the nominal title, unless the result of doing so would be to violate the provisions of a statute, or to work a fraud upon innocent persons. For instance, the real may sue the ostensible owner to establish his title, or to recover possession (o); and, conversely, if the benamidar attempts to enforce his apparent title against the beneficial owner, the latter may establish the real nature of the transaction by way of defence (p). Similarly, creditors who are enforcing their claims against the property of the real owner, will have exactly the same rights against his property held benami as if it were in his real name (q); and conversely, if they seize this estate in execution of a decree against the benamidar, the real owner will be entitled to set aside the execution (r). On the other hand, there are various statutes which provide that in sales under a decree of Court, or for arrears of revenue, the certified purchaser shall be conclusively deemed to be the real purchaser, and shall not be liable to Effect given to real title.

Violation of statute.

21 Mad., 56. Oral evidence is sufficient. Palaniyappa v. Arumugam, 2 Mad. H. C., 26; Taramonee v. Shibnath, 6 Suth., 191; Kumara v. Srinivasa, 11 Mad., 213.

(m) Beebee Nyamat v. Fuzl Hossein, S. D. of 1859, 139; Rohee v. Dindyal, 21 Suth., 257.

(n) Ex parte Kahundas, 5 Bom., 1-4.

(o) Thukrain v. Government, 14 M. I. A., 112.

(p) Ramanugra v. Mahasunder, in the Privy Council, 12 B. L. R., 433.

(q) Musadee v. Meerza, 6 M. I. A., 27; Hemanginee v. Jogendro, 12 Suth., 236; Gopi v. Markande, 3 Bom., 80; Abdool Hye v. Mir Mahomed, 11 I. A., 10; S. C., 10 Cal., 616.

(r) Tara Soonduree v. Oojul, 14 Suth., 111.

be ousted on the ground that his purchase was really made on behalf of another (s). Such Acts, of course, bar the equitable jurisdiction of the Courts, but they will be strictly construed. Therefore if the real owner is actually and honestly in possession, and the benamidar attempts to oust him by virtue of his nominal title, the statute will not prevent the Courts from recognizing the unreal character of his claim (t). And a purchase made by the manager of a Hindu family in his own name, as is usual, would not be considered as coming within the meaning of such statutes (u). It has also been held that these provisions are only intended to prevent the real owner disputing the title of the certified purchaser, and that they do not preclude a third party from enforcing a claim against the true owner in respect of the property purchased as benami (v).

Fraud on third parties.

§ 444. Even independently of statute, the Courts will not enforce the rights of a real owner where they would operate to defraud innocent persons. One familiar instance occurs, where the benamidar has sold or mortgaged the property of which he is the ostensible owner, for value, to persons who had no knowledge that he was not the real owner. In such a case the Judicial Committee said: "It is a principle of natural equity, which must be of universal application, that where one man allows another to hold himself out as the owner of an estate, and a third person purchases it for value from the apparent owner in the belief that he is the real owner, the man who so allows the other to hold himself out shall not be permitted to recover upon his secret title, unless he can overthrow that of the purchaser, by showing either that he had direct notice, or

(s) See Act VIII of 1859, § 260 (Old Civil Procedure Code); X of 1877, § 317 (Ditto); Act XIV of 1882, § 317 (New Civil Procedure Code); Act I of 1845, § 21 (Bengal—Revenue Sale); Act XI of 1859, § 36 (Bengal—Zemindary Revenue Sale).

(t) Buhuns v. Lalla Buhoree, 14 M. I. A., 496; S. C., 18 Suth., 157; Lokhee v. Kalypuddo, 2 I. A., 154; Govinda v. Lalla Kishun, 28 Cal., 370.

(u) See Tundun v. Pokh Narain, 5 B. L. R., 546; S. C., 13 Suth., 347; Bodh Singh v. Gunesb, in Privy Council, 12 B. L. R., 317; S. C., 19 Suth., 356.

(v) Chandra Kaminey v. Ramrutton, 12 Cal., 302; Tirumalayappa v. Swami Naik, 18 Mad., 469.

something which amounts to constructive notice of the real title, or that there were circumstances which ought to have put him upon an enquiry that, if prosecuted, would have led to a discovery of it" (w). But, of course, notice of the trust may be implied as well as express, and if a man deals with another who is not in possession, or who is unable to produce the proper documents of title, these facts may amount to notice which will make his transaction be subject to the real state of the title of the person with whom he deals (x). In such cases there is no deliberate intention on the part of the real owner to commit a fraud upon anyone. But if he deliberately places all the means of committing a fraud in the hands of his benamidar, Equity will not allow him to assert his title to the detriment of a person who has actually been defrauded. Where, however, the fact that an ostensible owner is only a benamidar is known to the person who deals with him, and the transaction into which he enters is known and acquiesced in by the real owner, it becomes valid against him, as if he had been a party to it (y).

§ 445. A still stronger case is that in which property has been placed in a false name, for the express purpose of shielding it from creditors. As against them, of course, the transaction is wholly invalid (§ 443). But a very common form of proceeding is for the real owner to sue the benamidar, or to resist an action by the benamidar, alleging, or the evidence making out, that the sale was a merely colourable one, made for the express purpose of defrauding creditors.

(w) Ramcoomar v. McQueen, 11 B. L. R. (P. C.), 46, at p. 52; Mir Mahomed v. Kishori Mohun, 22 I. A., 129; S. C., 22 Cal., 909; Luchmun Chunder v. Kalli Churn, 19 Suth. (P. C.), 292. See, too, per Phear, J., Bhugwan v. Upooch, 10 Suth., 155. See numerous cases, Rackhaldoss v. Bindoo, Marsh., 293; Obhoy v. Panchanun, ib., 564; Kally Doss v. Gobind, ib., 569; Rennie v. Gunganarain, 3 Suth., 10; Nundun v. Tayler, 5 Suth., 37; Brjonath v. Koylash, 9 Suth., 593; Nidhee v. Bisso, 24 Suth., 79; Chunder Coomar v. Hurbuns Sahai, 16 Cal., 127; Sundar Lal v. Fakirchand, 25 All., 62; cf. Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder, ibid., 148, where it was held, that the mere fact of a benami transfer did not amount to a representation which bound the real owner or his heirs as against a purchaser from the benamidar.

(x) Hakeem v. Beejoy, 22 Suth., 8; Mancharji v. Kongseoo, 6 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 59; Imambandi v. Kumleswari, 13 I. A., 160, p. 165; S. C., 14 Cal., 109.

(y) Sarju Parshad v. Bir Bhaddar, 20 I. A., 108.

Frauds upon creditors.

In other words, the party admits that he has apparently transferred his property to another to effect a fraud, but asks to have his act undone, now that the object of the fraud is carried out. The rule was for some time considered to be, that where this state of things was made out, the Court would invariably refuse relief, and would leave the parties to the consequences of their own misconduct; dismissing the plaint, when the suit was brought by the real owner to get back possession of his property (z), and refusing to listen to the defence, when he set it up in opposition to the person whom he had invested with the legal title (a). And persons who take under the real owner, whether as heirs or as purchasers, were treated in exactly the same manner as he was (b). On the other hand, a contrary doctrine was laid down in more recent cases. In the first of these the plaintiff claimed registration of title as vendee of certain parties, whom the defendant asserted to have been merely benamidars for her, she being actually in possession. The sale by the benamidars was found to be without consideration. It appeared, however, that in a former suit, to which the defendant and the benamidars were all parties, she had maintained that the latter were the real owners. It was also found that the property had been placed in the name of the benamidars by the defendant's late husband for the purpose of defrauding his creditors. On these two grounds the Judge held that the defendant could not now rely on the real state of the title. The High Court of Bengal reversed his judgment on both points. On the latter

(z) Ramindur v. Roopnarain, 2 S. D., 118 (149); Roushun v. Collector of Mymensingh, S. D. of 1846, 120; Brimho v. Ram Dolub, S. D. of 1849, 276; Rajnarain v. Jugunnath, S. D. of 1851, 774; Koonjee v. Jankee, S. D. of 1852, 838; Bhowanny v. Purem, S. D. of 1853, 639; Ramsouder v. Anundnath, S. D. of 1856, 542; Hurry Sunker v. Kahi, Suth. for 1864, 265; Aloksoundry v. Horo, 6 Suth., 287; Keshub v. Vyasmonee, 7 Suth., 118; per curiam Azimut v. Hurdwaree, 13 M. I. A., 402; S. C., 14 Suth. (P. C.), 14; Sukhimani v. Mahendramath, 4 B. L. R. (P. C.), 28, 29; S. C., 13 Suth. (P. C.), 14.

(a) Obhoychurn v. Treelochun, S. D. of 1859, 1639; Ram Lall v. Kishen, S. D. of 1860, i., 436; per curiam Ramanurgra v. Mahasundur, 12 B. L. R. (P. C.), 438.

(b) Luckhee v. Taramonee, 3 Suth., 92; Purikheet v. Radha Kishen, ib., 221; Kaleenath v. Doyal Kristo, 13 Suth., 187.

point, Couch, C. J., said: "In many of these cases, the object of a benami transaction is to obtain what may be called a shield against a creditor; but notwithstanding this the parties are not precluded from showing that it was not intended that the property should pass by the instrument creating the benami, and that in truth it still remained in the person who professed to part with it." He then referred to English decisions, and proceeded, "Although, no doubt, it is improper that transactions of this kind should be entered into for the purpose of defeating creditors, yet the real nature of the transaction is what is to be discovered, the real rights of the parties. If the Courts were to hold that persons were concluded under such circumstances, they would be assisting in a fraud, for they would be giving the estate to a person when it was never intended that he should have it" (c).

§ 446. Possibly the real rule is something intermediate between that which was laid down broadly in this last case, and in those which it appears to over-rule. Where a transaction is once made out to be a mere benami, it is evident that the benamidar absolutely disappears from the title. His name is simply an alias for that of the person beneficially interested. The fact that A has assumed the name of B in order to cheat X can be no reason whatever why a Court should assist or permit B to cheat A. But if A requires the help of the Court to get the estate back into his own possession, or to get the title into his own name, it may be very material to consider whether A has actually cheated X or not. If he has done so by means of his alias, then it has ceased to be a mere mask, and has become a reality. It may be very proper for a Court to say that it will not allow him to resume the individuality, which he has once cast off

Principle of
decision.

Has fraud gone beyond intention.

(c) Sreemutty Debia v. Bimola, 21 Suth., 422, followed Gopeenath v. Jadoo, 23 Suth., 42; Bykunt v. Goboollah, 24 Suth., 391; Ram Sarun Singh v. Mt. Pran Peary, 13 M. I. A., 551. See, too, Birj Mohun v. Ram Nursingh, 4 S. D., 341 (435); Param v. Lalji, 1 All., 403; Babaji v. Krishna, 18 Bom., 372.

in order to defraud others (d). If, however, he has not defrauded anyone, there can be no reason why the Court should punish his intention by giving his estate away to B, whose roguery is even more complicated than his own (e). This appears to be the principle of the English decisions. For instance, persons have been allowed to recover property which they had assigned away in order to confer a parliamentary qualification upon a friend, who never sat in parliament; or in order to avoid serving in the office of a sheriff, where they ultimately paid the fine, instead of pleading that they had no property in the country; or where they had intended to defraud creditors, who in fact were never injured (f); or in order to avoid the effects of a conviction for a felony, which the grantor supposed he had committed, but which in fact he had not, and could not have committed (g). But where the fraudulent or illegal purpose has actually been effected by means of the colourable grant, then the maxim applies, "In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis." The Court will help neither party. "Let the estate lie where it falls" (h). It was, however, suggested by Lord Eldon that perhaps this rule would not be enforced in case of one who claimed under the settler, but was himself not a party to the illegality or fraud (i). And in order to enable the grantee to retain the property, he must expressly set up the illegality of the object, and admit that he is holding (d) Rangammal v. Venkata Chari, 18 Mad., 378; affd., 20 Mad., 323; Yaramati Krishnayya v. Chandru Papayya, 20 Mad., 326; Banka Behari v. Rajkumar, 27 Cal., 231; Govindu v. Lalakeshun, 28 Cal., 370.

(e) Sham Lal Mitra v. Amerendro Nath, 23 Cal., 460, p. 474; Kalicharan Pal v. Rasik Lal, 23 Cal., 962; Honapa v. Narsapa, 23 Bom., 406. See a case which hovered on the line between both branches of the rule; Lobo v. Brito, 21 Mad., 231.

(f) Birch v. Blagrove, Amb., 264; Cottington v. Fletcher, 2 Atk., 156; Platamone v. Staple, G. Coop., 250; Young v. Peachey, 2 Atk., 254; Symes v. Hughes, L. R., 9 Eq., 475; per Lord Westbury, Tennent v. Tennent, L. R., 2 Sc. & D., 9; Cecil v. Butcher, 2 Jac. & W., 565.

(g) Davies v. Otty, 35 Beav., 208; Manning v. Gill, L. R., 13 Eq., 485. See Great Berlin Steamboat Co., 26 Ch. D., 616.

(h) Duke of Bedford v. Coke, 2 Ves. Sen., 116; Muckleston v. Brown, 6 Ves., 68; Chaplin v. Chaplin, 3 P. W., 233; Brackenbury v. Brackenbury, 2 Jac. & W., 391; Doe v. Roberts, 2 B. & Ald., 367; Lewin, 93; Story, Eq. Jur., § 298. This seems to be the effect of the Indian Trusts Act, II of 1882, § 84. Chenvirappa v. Puttappa, 11 Bom., 708.

(i) Lewin, 93; 6 Ves., 68.

for a different purpose from that for which he took the property (k). Even when the case is one in which the Court would not have relieved as matters stood originally, if fresh dealings have taken place between the real-owner and the benamidar inconsistent with the ostensible character of the transaction, the former may be precluded from relying on his apparent title (l).

Where the benami title has been created in order to conceal the fact that the real owner had effected a purchase which was absolutely illegal, either as being forbidden by statute or contrary to public policy, a suit by either the creator of the benami or his representatives to recover the property from the benamidar will fail, on the ground that he has no title, and s. 82 of the Indian Trust Act of 1882 will not prevent this defence being set up (m). Of course the benamidar himself will have no better title, except from the fact that he is in possession. As to the value of such a title see Pahlwan v. Ram Bharose (n).

§ 447. Even before the decisions referred to in § 445, it was held in Bengal that there was nothing to prevent a man enforcing his rights against a benamidar, where he had made a new purchase, taking the conveyance in the name of a stranger, even though he had done so for the purpose of preventing the property from being seized by creditors. The Court, after referring to the cases already cited, said, "In this case the plaintiff does not seek to render void an act done by him in fraud, or, in other words, to be relieved from the effect of his own fraudulent act. He simply sues to have a legal act enforced, an act legal in itself though in the present instance done with a motive of keeping the property out of the reach of his creditors" (o). It may also be well to remember that the rules which govern benami transactions have no application to the case of gifts made

(k) Haigh v. Kaye, L. R., 7 Ch., 469.

(l) Mahadaji v. Vitvil Vallal, 7 Bom., 78.

(m) Sheo Narain v. Mata Prasad, 27 All., 73.

(n) 27 All., 169.

(o) Suboodra v. Bikromadit, S. D. of 1858, 543, 548.

Original purchase made as benami.

Insolvency.

in contemplation of insolvency, and with the intention of defrauding creditors (p). Nor to cases in which property has been sold or handed over to one creditor, in order to defeat an expected execution by another creditor (q). If the transfer is really intended to operate, and is not colourable, it is not a benami transaction. Whether it is valid or not, depends upon other considerations.

Effect of decrees.

§ 448. Decrees are conclusive between the parties both as to the rights declared, and as to the character in which they sue. It is allowable for a third person, who was not on the record, to come in and show that a suit was really carried on for his benefit (r). So, it is allowable for a person who is on the record, to show that a suit was carried on really against a person who was not a party to it. But where judgment is given in an apparently hostile suit, it is not allowable for either party to come in and assert that the fight was all a sham, and for the defendant on the record to show, that so far from being really a defendant he was the plaintiff, and that so far from judgment having been recovered against him, he had really recovered judgment (s). Hence as a general rule it is desirable, if not necessary, that the benamidar should be a party to all suits which affect the property of which he is the nominal owner. But this is not necessary when there is no dispute as to his title being only apparent (t). In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it is to be presumed that a suit brought by a benamidar has been instituted with the full authority of the beneficial owner, and if this is so, any decision come to in his presence would be as much binding upon the real owner, as if the suit had been brought by the real owner himself (u).

Benamidar should be a party.

(p) See Gnanabhai v. Srinavasa, 4 Mad. H. C., 84.
 (q) Sankarappa v. Kamayya, 3 Mad. H. C., 231; Pullen v. Ramalinga, 5 Mad. H. C., 368; Tillakchand v. Jitamal, 10 Bom. H. C., 206.
 (r) Lachman v. Patniram, 1 All., 510.
 (s) Bhowabul v. Rajendro, 13 Suth., 157; Chenvirappa v. Puttappa, 11 Bom., 738.
 (t) Kurreeemonissa v. Mohabut, S. D. of 1851, 356.
 (u) Gopinath v. Bhugwat, 10 Cal., 697, p. 705; Shangara v. Krishnan 15 Mad., 267; Baroda Kanta v. Chunder, 29 Cal., 652.

§ 449. Upon the question whether it is any defence to a suit by a benamidar that he is such, and is therefore not the proper person to sue, there is a conflict of decisions. The authorities stand in this way.

In the earliest case on the subject, where the Court treated the question as res integra, it was laid down that a benamidar could not sue to recover land on his title (v). This case was considered and not followed, where a benamidar sued to recover lands entered in his benami lease, and it was held that the defendant was not entitled to discuss the reality of the title as between the plaintiff and a third party (w). In two intermediate cases the abstract right of a benamidar to bring a suit upon his ostensible title was not disputed, but it was held that his right to enforce it was subject to all the equities, limitations and disabilities, which would have attached to the real owner, if he had been the plaintiff (x). It seems to be admitted that where a direct contract has been entered into by a benamidar by virtue of his ostensible title, as for instance, where he has taken a mortgage on land, that he may sue to enforce it, and that the rights of other parties who claim the real title may be protected by including them as parties under § 32 of the Civil Procedure Code (y). It has also been held under the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881) that a benamidar or trustee who takes a note in his own name is the person entitled to possession of it, and is the proper person to sue upon it (z). The conflict arises in cases where the suit is for possession of land, or on a ground of action which assumes the right to possession. In four cases the Calcutta High Court has held that in a suit for possession of property, under a title which includes that property, the fact that the Right of benamidar to sue.

(v) Prosonno Coomar v. Gooroo Churn Sein, 3 Suth., 159.
 (w) Ram Bhurosee v. Bissessur Narain, 18 Suth., 454.
 (x) Fuzeelum Beebee v. Omdah Beebee, 10 Suth., 469; Meheeroonissa Bibi v. Hur Churn, 10 Suth., 220.
 (y) Bhola Pershad v. Ram Lall, 24 Cal., 34; Sachitananda v. Buloram, ibid., 644.
 (z) Ramanuja v. Sadagopa, 28 Mad., 205.

plaintiff is shown to be a benamidar is of itself a sufficient ground for dismissing the suit, as the finding establishes that he has no real title to, or possession of the property. In the earliest of the four cases, the fact that the real owner was a defendant to the suit, and disclaimed title, was held to make no difference (a). Exactly the opposite ruling was given by the Allahabad High Court in a suit by a benamidar for possession on his title (b); and by the Bombay High Court in two cases, in the first of which the plaintiff was suing for trespass to land, and for obstruction to cultivation, while in the latter he was pursuing the statutory right of a proprietor to redemption (c). In a still later case, where however the action was brought by a benamidar to enforce mortgage rights, the Allahabad High Court reviewed all the conflicting decisions, and adhered to its former ruling (d).

When the case occurs again, it may be material to consider that the benamidar is not merely an alias, or even an agent of the real owner. He is a person whom the owner for purposes of his own, which are not necessarily fraudulent, has chosen to represent the estate to the outer public, and whom he has furnished with the indicia of ownership to enable him to do so effectively. It is difficult to see why a wrong doer, or a person who claims adversely to the actual ownership, should be allowed to resist a suit by the ostensible owner on the ground that he has no title or right of possession against the real owner. He has the title and right of possession which that person has given him, which is apparently enough to support the suit. It would be a different thing if the real owner had repudiated the benamidar, or had dealt directly with his tenants or others in respect of the estate. They might then plead

(a) Hari Gobind v. Akhoy Kumar, 16 Cal., 364; Issur Chandra v. Gopal Chandra, 25 Cal., 98; Baroda Sunderi v. Dinobundhu, ibid., 874; Mohendra Nath v. Kali Proshad, 29 Cal., 265.

(b) Nand Kishore v. Ahmad Ata, 18 All., 69.

(c) Ravji Appaji v. Mahadev Bapuji, 22 Bom., 672; Dagdu v. Balvant Ramchandra, ib., 820.

(d) Yad Ram v. Umrao Singh, 21 All., 380.

that there was no privity between the benamidar and themselves, or that his position as such had come to an end. They would certainly have a right to demand that the real owner should be made a party to the suit so as to be bound by the decision (e).

(e) A defendant who has resisted a suit by a benamidar upon the merits, is not precluded in a subsequent suit of a similar character from setting up that the plaintiff is only a benamidar; Koilash Mundul v. Saroda Sundari, 24 Cal., 711.

CHAPTER XIV.

MAINTENANCE.

Persons who are entitled.

§ 450. THE importance and extent of the right of maintenance necessarily arises from the theory of an undivided family. Originally, no doubt, no individual member of the family had a right to anything but maintenance. This is still the law of Malabar (a), and the case is much the same in an ordinary Hindu family under Mitakshara law prior to partition (§ 292). The head of the undivided family is bound to maintain its members, their wives and their children; to perform their ceremonies, and to defray the expenses of their marriages (b). In other words, those who would be entitled to share in the bulk of the property, are entitled to have all their necessary expenses paid out of its income. But the right of maintenance goes farther than this, and includes those who by connection are entitled, but by some defect are disqualified from inheriting. As to such persons the law is stated as follows by Yajnavalkya. "An impotent person, an outcast and his issue, one lame, a madman, an idiot, a blind man, and a person afflicted with an incurable disease are not entitled to a share, and are to be maintained. But their blameless sons whether legitimate, or Kshetraja (the offspring by a kinsman) are entitled to inherit. Their daughters should be maintained until they are provided with husbands. Their childless wives conducting themselves aright, should also be supported; but if they are unchaste they should be

(a) Ante § 244. As to the rights of the male members of a Malabar Tarwad to maintenance, see Bappan v. Makki, 6 Mad., 259; Parvati v. Kamaran, ibid., 341; Kunhammata v. Kuvhikutti, 7 Mad., 233; Kesava v. Unikkanda, 11 Mad., 307; Chandu v. Raman, ib., 378; Chekkuti v. Pakki, 12 Mad., 505.

(b) Manu, ix., § 108; Narada, xiii., § 26—28, 33; Vaikantam v. Kallapiran, 23 Mad., 512; 26 Mad., 197. This right is not founded on contract; and, therefore, a suit for maintenance, where there is no special contract, is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. Sidlingaya v. Sidava, 2 Bom., 624; Apaji v. Gan-gabi, ib., 632.

PARA. 450.]

MAINTENANCE.

expelled and similarly those who are perverse" (c). Illegitimate sons, when not entitled as heirs, are to be maintained even though the connection from which they sprung may have been adulterous (d), and maintenance for their lives may be secured by a charge on the family estate (e). This right, however, is purely personal and does not descend to the legitimate son of the illegitimate son (f). Nor does it extend apparently, to illegitimate daughters (g). Where persons of a different class have been taken in adoption, the author of the Dattaka Chandrika declares that they are entitled to food and raiment (h). This case is no longer likely to arise. The only other texts which refer to an actual but invalid adoption, appear to limit the rights of such person to having his marriage performed at the expense of the adopter (i). Whether the privilege of maintenance extended to outcastes and their offspring, is a point upon which the authorities differ (k). Since Act XXI of 1850 (Freedom of Religion) it has ceased to be a point of any practical importance. Concubines also are entitled to be maintained, even though the connection with them is an adulterous one (l). But this liability only exists where (c) Yaju., ii., §§ 140—142; Vishnu, xv., 32—34; Mitakshara, ii., 10; Daya Bhaga, v., § 10, 11; D. K. S., iii., § 7—17; V. May., iv., 11, § 1—9; W. & B., 751.

(d) Mitakshara, i., 12, § 3; Muttusamy v. Venkatasubha (Yetteyapooram Zemindary), 2 Mad. H. C., 293; affirmed, 12 M. I. A., 203; H. C., 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 15; S. C., 11 Suth. (P. C.), 6; Chhoturya v. Sahub Purhulad, 7 M. I. A., 18; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 132; Rahi v. Govind, 1 Bom., 97; Vira-ranuthi v. Singaravelu, 1 Mad., 306; Kruppa v. Singaravelu, 8 Mad., 325; Hargobind v. Dharam, 6 All., 329. The Common law right only exists in case of sons who were born Hindus. The illegitimate son of a Hindu by a Christian mother cannot claim, Lingappa v. Esudasen, 27 Mad., 13. As to the statutory obligation to maintain a wife and children, legitimate or illegitimate, see Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 488; Kallu v. Kausalia, 26 All., 326. It ceases on death of the father, Lingappa v. Esudasen, 27 Mad., 13.

(e) Ananthaya v. Vishnu, 17 Mad., 160; Gopalamami v. Arunachelam, 27 Mad., 32.

(f) Balwant Singh v. Roshan, 18 All., 253; affd. Roshan v. Balwant, 27 I. A., 51; S. C., 22 All., 191.

(g) Parvati v. Ganpatrao, 15 Bom., 177, p. 183.

(h) Dattaka Chandrika, i., § 15.

(i) Dattaka Mimamsa, v., §§ 45, 46; Dattaka Chandrika, II, § 17; vi., § 3, ante §§ 176—175.

(k) Vishnu, xv., §§ 35, 36; Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 1; Daya Bhaga, v., § 11, 12; D. K. S., iii., §§ 14—16; V. May., iv., 11, § 10.

(l) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 28; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 48; V. May., iv., 8, § 5; 1 Stra. H. L., 174; 2 W. MacN., 119; W. & B., 164; Khemkor v. Uniasankar, 10 Bom. H. C., 381; Vrandavandas v. Yemuna, 12 Bom. H. C., 229.

the connection was of a permanent nature, analogous to that of the female slaves who in former times were recognized members of a man's family (m). No claim for maintenance can be made by a concubine who has been discarded by her paramour against him, nor of course against his property after his death (n). A fortiori the widows of the members of the family are so entitled, provided they are chaste, and so long as they lead a virtuous life (o); and the parents, including the step-mother, and mother-in-law (p). The sister, or step-sister, is entitled to maintenance until her marriage, and to have her marriage expenses defrayed. After marriage, her maintenance is a charge upon her husband during his life, and after his death upon her husband's family. If they are unable to support her, and the widowed daughter returns to live with her father or brother, there is a moral and social obligation, but not a legally enforceable right, to charge her maintenance upon her father's estate in the hands of his heirs (q).

Misbehaviour, or excommunication from caste on the ground of misbehaviour, does not of itself disentitle the offender to maintenance (r).

(m) Sikki v. Vencatasamy, 8 Mad. H. C., 144.

(n) Ramanarasu v. Buchamma, 23 Mad., 282; Ningaredi v. Lakshmana, 26 Bom., 163.

(o) "Let them allow a maintenance to his woman for life, provided these preserve unsullied the bed of their lords. But if they behave otherwise, the brethren may resume that allowance" (Narada, xiii., § 26). This text is said by Jimuta Valana to apply to women actually espoused who have not the rank of wives, but another passage of Narada (cited Smriti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 34) is open to no such objection. "Whichever wife (patni) becomes a widow and continues virtuous, she is entitled to be provided with food and raiment." See, too, Smriti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 47; 2 W. MacN., 112; Muttanmal v. Kamakshy, 2 Mad. H. C., 337; per curiam Sinthayee v. Thanakapudayan, 4 Mad. H. C., 185; Kery Kolitany v. Moneevam, 13 B. L. R., 72, 88; S. C., 19 Suth., 367; 7 J. A., p. 151. But see Honamma v. Timannabhat, 1 Bom., 559, where it was held that subsequent unchastity did not deprive a widow of a mere starving maintenance awarded by decree, post § 456. See, too, Roma Nath v. Rajonimoni, 17 Cal., 674.

(p) 2 W. MacN., 113, 118; W. & B., 234; per Norman, J., Khetramani v. Kashinath, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 15; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 93; Cooppunmal v. Hookmany, Mad. Dec. of 1855, 238; per curiam Savitribai v. Luximibai, 2 Bom., 597.

(q) Bai Mangal v. Bai Rukhmini, 23 Bom., 291; Mokhoda v. Nundo Lal, 27 Cal., 555; affd. 28 Cal., 278.

(r) Putanvitil Seyan v. Putanvitil Ragavan, 4 Mad., 171; R. v. Marimuttu, ibid., 243.

§ 451. There is some difference of opinion as to whether the right of maintenance is an absolute obligation, which attaches itself upon certain persons by virtue of their relationship to the destitute individual, or whether it is merely a claim upon the property of those who hold it, by virtue of their possession of the property. It is stated in a text ascribed to Manu, that "A mother and a father in their old age, a virtuous wife, and an infant son, must be maintained, even though doing an hundred times that which ought not to be done" (s). So the Mitakshara lays down that "Where there may be no property but what has been self-acquired, the only persons whose maintenance out of such property is imperative are aged parents, wife, and minor children" (t). The Smriti Chandrika also expressly states that the obligation to maintain widows is dependent on taking the property of the deceased (u). This rule is followed in Madras, where suits for maintenance have been dismissed when brought by a widow against her brothers-in-law, or her father-in-law, who held no ancestral property, or where the only property out of which maintenance could be given was a salary (v). So, it has been held in Bengal that the widow of a separated brother is not entitled to be maintained by the family of her father-in-law, and the same opinion was given by the Bombay

How enforced.
Nature and extent of obligation.

(s) 3 Dig., 406. The last clause is cited in another chapter as meaning that these relations must be maintained even by crime. See per curiam Savitribai v. Luximibai, 2 Bom., 597.

(t) Mitakshara on Subtraction of Gift, cited Stra. Man., § 209; Subbarayana v. Subbakka, 8 Mad., 236. A step-son is not bound to support his step-mother unless he has family property. Bai Daya v. Natha Govindal, 9 Bom., 279; Kedar Nath v. Hemangini, 13 Cal., 336. As to the maintenance of children in Malabar, see Kariyadan Pokkar v. Kayat Beeran, 19 Mad., 461.

(u) Smriti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 34. "In order to maintain the widow, the elder brother or any of the others abovementioned must have taken the property of the deceased; the duty of maintaining the widow being dependent on taking the property." It is immaterial whether the property is movable or real. Kamani Dassee v. Chandra Pote, 17 Cal., 373.

(v) Vudda v. Venkamma, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 225; Comaraswamy v. Sellummaul, Mad. Dec. of 1859, 5; Vrabadrachari v. Kuppanmal, ibid., 265; Brahmavarapu v. Venkamma, ibid., 272; Ammakanna v. Appu, 11 Mad., 191. See Visalatchy v. Annasami, 5 Mad. H. C., 150, where the point had been left undecided, and Ravagamal v. Echammal, 22 Mad., 305, where the authority of the previous cases was doubted, citing W. & B., 245-252, and Jolly, Lect. 134, 135, and where it was expressly held that property, which the father-in-law had inherited ex parte materna, though not partible, was subject to the maintenance of his son's widow.

High Court, in a case where a deserted wife claimed maintenance from her husband's brothers. Their liability was stated to depend upon their having in their hands any of her husband's property (w). In a case under the Mitakshara law in Bengal, Kemp, J., said: "The question to be decided is, whether the father and son were joint in estate, and whether any joint estate was left which was burthened with the payment of proper maintenance to the plaintiff, the defendant's daughter-in-law" (x). The question was recently examined with great fulness and care by the Courts of the North-West Provinces and of Bengal. In the former the widow of a deceased member of a joint family claimed maintenance from her father-in-law and brother-in-law. There was admittedly joint ancestral property, but it was contended that the widow could only be maintained out of her husband's property, and that he left none, his interest in it passing to his coparceners. The Court affirmed her claim. They rested it on the ground that the share which her husband had in the property had passed to the defendants, that she could not be in a worse position than the wife of a disqualified heir, who would be admittedly entitled to maintenance; that she might be looked upon as one who, though interested in the property, was disqualified from inheriting it by sex; and that where her husband had an interest in property, out of which she would be maintained during his life, the obligation to maintain her out of that property continued after his death, whether it passed by inheritance or by survivorship (y). It will be observed that it was assumed that there would have been no such obligation if there had been no joint property, or if it had not passed into the hands of the defendants, and the judgments relied much on the passage in the Smriti Chandrika (xi, 1, § 34), (w) Kumubmoney v. Bodhmarain, 2 W. MacN., 119; Ramabai v. Trimbak, 9 Bom. H. C., 283.

(x) Hema Kooeree v. Ajoodya, 24 Suth., 474. So the Chief Court of Mysore held that, where the estate of the defendant was enlarged by the death of his brother, the husband of the plaintiff, she was entitled to maintenance. Siddanna v. Mooneappa, 5 Mysore, 219.

(y) Lalti Kuar v. Ganga, 7 N.-W. P., 261.

Widow of deceased coparcener.

in which this rule is laid down. The principle that a widow of a son has no legal claim for maintenance against the separate or self-acquired property of her father-in-law was affirmed by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court. They held, however, that the father-in-law was under a moral obligation to provide for the widow out of this property, and that when, upon his death, the property devolved upon his other sons they came under a legal obligation to carry out this moral obligation, and could be compelled to do so (z).

§ 452. The Bengal decision was given on appeal from a judgment of a Full Bench under the following circumstances (a): The plaintiff was the widow of the defendant's son. There was no joint family property, and the son left no property of his own. The only property possessed by the father-in-law was a monthly pension. After her husband's death, the widow went to reside in her own father's house. The suit was brought by her to have a fixed money payment made to her. It was admitted that the defendant was willing to support her in his own house, and that she had not been driven from his house by any ill-treatment. It was held by eleven out of thirteen Judges (diss. Lock and Kemp, JJ.) that her claim could not be supported. For the purpose of this ruling, however, it was not necessary to decide whether the father-in-law was under an obligation to give his daughter-in-law lodging, food and raiment. It was only necessary to decide that where she practically refused to accept these, she was not entitled to a fixed monthly allowance. It was admitted by all the Judges that where a person took property, either by inheritance or survivorship, he would be legally bound to maintain those whose maintenance was a charge upon it in the hands of the last holder. But where there was

Not entitled to independent allowance,

where no
property.

Whether maintenance of widow depends on possession of property.

(z) Janki v. Nand Ram, 11 All., 194. This case was approved and followed by the High Court of Bengal, Kamini Dassee v. Chandra Pote, 17 Cal., 373; Devi Persad v. Gunwanti Koer, 22 Cal., 410; Rangammal v. Echammal, 22 Mad., 303.

(a) Khetramani v. Kashinath, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 15; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 89; Rameoomar v. Ichamoyi, 6 Cal., 36.

no such property, Peacock, C. J., Macpherson, Bayley, Glover, JJ., were of opinion that there was no legal obligation whatever to maintain the daughter at law, and that the precepts which seemed to enjoin upon relations the duty of maintaining the widows of deceased members were of merely moral obligation. On the other hand, several of the other Judges stated that they offered no opinion as to the right of a dependent widow to receive necessary subsistence in the house of the head of the family. If he allowed her to continue in his house as a member of the family, and if she were an infant, or otherwise unable to maintain herself, it was intimated by Norman, J., that such a state of things would carry with it a legal obligation on the part of the father-in-law, who had taken upon himself the care of her person, and the charge of entertaining her as a member of his family, and on whose protection she was dependent, to provide her with food and the actual necessaries of life. But the Civil Courts would have no jurisdiction to interfere with his discretion in determining the manner in which this obligation should be discharged (b).

Bombay.

§ 453. In Bombay, it was formerly laid down that where a widow of one of the near members of the family, such as a father, son, or brother, is actually destitute, she has a legal right to be maintained by the other members, even though they were separated from her late husband, and possess no assets upon which he or she ever had a claim (c). These cases were, however, examined and over-ruled in a later decision, in which a widow, who was living apart from her husband's family, sued his paternal uncle, the nearest surviving male relation of her husband, for a money allowance as maintenance. The Court, after an exhaustive review of the whole law upon the subject, held that the suit must fail for two reasons, either of which would be fatal to her claim; first, that the defendant was separated in estate from the plaintiff's husband at the time of his death; and, secondly, that at the institution of the suit there was not in the possession, or subject to the disposition, of the defendant, any ancestral estate, or estate of the plaintiff's husband, or of his father (d). Where, however, the father-in-law is in possession of self-acquired property, although the widow of a pre-deceased son had no legal right to maintenance out of such property against him, as soon as it descended from him either to his son or to his widow, her moral became a legal right on the principle stated at the end of § 451 (e). If the self-acquired estate passed by devise instead of by inheritance, the Bombay High Court considers that the liability to the widow's maintenance would not attach; the Madras High Court seems to be of an opposite opinion (f).

(b) 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), p. 48; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), p. 95.

(c) Bae v. Lukmeedass, 1 Bom. H. C., 13; Chandrabhagabai v. Kashinath, 2 Bom. H. C., 841; Timmappa v. Parmeshriamma, 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 130; Udaram v. Sonkabol, 10 Bom. H. C., 483; W. & B., 245—252.

§ 454. The obligation to maintain a son appears to be limited to the case of his being an infant (g), in which case the law of every nation imposes an obligation upon the parent to maintain him, or of his being a co-sharer in the property of which his father is the manager. The mere relationship of father and son imposes no such obligation, where the son has reached an age at which he can support himself. Whether the case might be different if a permanent incapacity to support himself were made out is not clear. A temporary incapacity would certainly entail no such duty (h). Where, however, the whole of the family property is impartible, and subject to the law of primogeniture, an adult son is entitled to maintenance, since this is the only mode in which he can obtain any benefit from the Rights of son.

(d) Savitribai v. Luximibai, 2 Bom., 573; Apaji v. Gangabai, ib., 632; Kalu v. Kashibai, 7 Bom., 127; Bai Kanku v. Bai Jadav, 8 Bom., 15.

(e) Adibai v. Cursondas, 11 Bom., 199; Yamunabai v. Manubai, 23 Bom., 608; approved per Prinsep, J., 29 Cal., 570.

(f) ib., ub. sup. Bai Parvati v. Tarwadi, 25 Bom., 263; Rangammal v. Echammal, 22 Mad., 305.

(g) Ante § 451. Amma Kannu v. Appu, 11 Mad., 91.

(h) Premchand v. Hulashchand, 4 B. L. R. App., 23; S. C., 12 Suth., 494. So as to grandson, Mon Mohinee v. Baluck, 8 B. L. R., 22; S. C., 15 Suth., 498; or adult illegitimate son, Nilmoney v. Baneshur, 4 Cal., 91. See Cr. P. C., 1893, s. 488.

ancestral estate (i). A father is under no legal, religious or moral obligation to procure the marriage of his son. Even in the case of a Brahman, marriage is not one of the ceremonies, failure to perform which entails forfeiture of caste or status (k).

§ 455. The maintenance of a wife by her husband is, of course, a matter of personal obligation, arising from the very existence of the relation, and independent of the possession of any property (l). And this obligation attaches from the moment of marriage. Where the wife is immature it is the custom that she should reside with her parents, and they maintain her as a matter of affection, but not of obligation. If from inability, unwillingness, or any other cause, they choose to demand her maintenance from her husband, he is bound to pay for it (m). And, conversely, her husband is alone liable. No other member of the family, whether joint or separate, can properly be made a party to the suit, unless, perhaps, in cases where he has abandoned her, and his property is in the possession of some other relation (n).

§ 456. As soon as the wife is mature, her home is necessarily in her husband's house (o). He is bound to maintain her in it while she is willing to reside with him, and to perform her duties. If she quits him of her own accord, either without cause, or on account of such ordinary quarrels as are incidental to married life in general, she can set up no claim to a separate maintenance (p). Nothing will justify her in leaving her home except such violence as renders it

(i) Himmat v. Ganpat, 12 Bom. H. C., 94; Ramchandra v. Sakharam, 2 Bom., 346; post § 458.

(k) Govindarazulu v. Devarobhotla, 27 Mad., 206.

(l) Ante § 451.

(m) Ramien v. Condummal, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 154.

(n) Iyagaree v. Sashamma, Mad. Dec. of 1856, 22; Rangaiyan v. Kaliyan, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 86; Gudimella v. Venkamma, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 12; Ramabai v. Trimbak, 9 Bom. H. C., 268.

(o) See the whole subject discussed in Dadaji v. Rukmabai, 9 Bom., 529, reversed 10 Bom., 301, where a wife of mature years, whose marriage had never been consummated, refused to take up her residence with her husband, and it was held that a suit would lie to compel her to do so.

(p) 2 W. MacN., 109; Kullyanessuree v. Dwarakanath, 6 Suth., 116; S. C., 2 Wym., 123; Sidlingapa v. Sidava, 2 Bom., 634.

unsafe for her to continue there, or such continued ill-usage as would be termed cruelty in an English matrimonial Court (q). For instance, where a Hindu husband kept a Mahomedan woman, the Court considered that this was such conduct as rendered it impossible for the wife to live with him any longer, consistently with her self-respect and religious feelings (r). But I doubt whether the same rule would be applied to the mere keeping of a concubine, which is a matter of familiar usage among Hindus, especially of the higher ranks (s). This seems to be very much the opinion of the Madras High Court in several cases which came before it under § 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1882, by which the Magistrate can award maintenance to be paid by a husband to his wife who refuses to live with him on account of his adultery (t). And the circumstance of a man's taking another wife, even without any of the reasons which are stated as justifying such a course (u), does not entitle a wife to leave her home, so long as her husband is willing to keep her there (v). For such a step on his part is one of the incidents of Hindu married life. Of course, a wife who leaves her home for purposes of adultery cannot claim to be maintained out of it, nor to be taken back (w). Whether an unchaste wife can be turned out of doors by her husband without any provision whatever seems hardly settled. It is stated generally that an unchaste woman may be turned out of doors without any maintenance (x). But the passages upon which this dictum rests refer to the maintenance either of the wives of dis-

When unchaste.

(q) Pudmanabiah v. Moonemmah, Mad. Dec. of 1857, 138; Vejayah v. Anjalummal, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 223; Matangini v. Jogendro, 19 Cal., 84.

(r) Lalla Gobind v. Dowlat, 6 B. L. R. App., 85; S. C., 14 Suth., 451. As to cases where either party becomes a convert and is therefore repudiated by the other, see Act XXI of 1866 (Native Converts Marriage Dissolution).

(s) Yajñavalkya says (V. May., xx., § 2): "Let the bidding of their husbands be performed by wives; this is the chief duty of a woman. Even if he be accused of deadly sin, yet let her wait until he be purified from it."

(t) Reg. v. Manmatha, 17 Mad., 260; Gentapalli Appalamma v. G. Yellayya, 20 Mad., 470; case 547 of 1884, 20 Mad., p 474, note.

(u) See as to these, Manu, ix., § 77-82.

(v) Manu, ix., § 83; Virasami v. Appasvami, 1 Mad. H. C., 375; Rajah Row Boocher v. Venkata Neeladry, 1 Mad. Dec., 366.

(w) 2 W. MacN., 109; Utata v. Narayanan, 1 Mad. H. C., 372.

(x) V. May., iv., 11, § 12; Smriti Chandrika, v., § 43.

Wife to be maintained by husband.

Bound to reside with him.

Wife leaving her home.

qualified heirs, or of the widows of deceased coparceners (y). Vasishtha treats even adultery on the part of a wife as an expiable offence, and states the particular penances by which she is rendered pure again. He adds: "But these four wives must be abandoned, one who yields herself to her husband's pupil or guru, and especially one who attempts the life of her lord, or who commits adultery with a man of a degraded caste." In another passage he says: "A wife though tainted by sin, whether she be quarrelsome, or have left the house, or have suffered criminal force, or have fallen into the hands of thieves, must not be abandoned; to forsake her is not prescribed by the sacred law." "Those versed in the sacred law state that there are three acts only which make women outcastes: the murder of the husband, slaying a learned Brahman, and the destruction of the fruit of their womb" (z). It appears pretty certain that no one except her husband, or perhaps her son, is bound to keep an unchaste woman alive. But there are contradictory opinions as to whether her husband is not liable to furnish her with a bare subsistence. The obligation, if it exists, is dependent on the woman abandoning her course of vice (a). Where a decree has been given awarding a bare maintenance to a widow, it has been held that she does not forfeit it by subsequent unchastity, though it might be different if the maintenance awarded were on the full scale (b). This ruling was dissented from in a later case where a widow was declared not entitled even to a starving maintenance on account of her incontinence. There, however, the property out of which she claimed to be maintained had been bequeathed

(y) See Narada, xiii., § 25, 26; Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 7; Viramit., p. 174; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 48, and per Privy Council, Moniram v. Kerry Kolutany, 7 I. A., 151; S. C., 5 Cal., 776.

(z) Vasishtha, xxi., 7-10; xxviii., 2-7.

(a) Bussunt v. Kummul, 7 S. D., 144 (168); 1 Str. H. L., 172; 2 Str. H. L., 39, 309; Str. Man., § 206; Muthammal v. Kannakshy Ammal, 2 Mad. H. C., 337. And consider remarks of High Court Lakshman v. Ramchandra, 1 Bom., 560. See texts, 2 Dig., 422-425; Narada, xii., § 91; Yajnavalkya, i., § 70; Viramit., p. 153; per curiam, 17 Cal., p. 679.

(b) Honamma v. Timannabhat, 1 Bom., 559. But see per curiam, Sinthayee v. Thanakapudayen, 4 Mad. H. C., 185.

by her father-in-law to her mother-in-law, by whom the action was brought to recover it, and the Court intimated that possibly her husband or her son would be bound to keep her from absolute destitution (c). This decision was again followed in a case very similar to that of Honamma v. Timannabhat, the widow having obtained a decree for maintenance before her misconduct. The Court held that her subsequent unchastity might be used either as a defence to an action by her to enforce the decree, or as a ground for setting it aside. They relied on the text of Narada referred to in the Daya Bhaga (XI, 1, § 48):—"Let them (the husband's relations) allow a maintenance to his women for life, provided they keep unsullied the bed of their lord; but if they behave otherwise, the brother may resume that allowance." This text is pointed out by the Privy Council in Moniram v. Kerry Kolutany (d), as clearly showing that the right was one liable to resumption or forfeiture as distinguished from the case of a widow's estate by succession (e). In Calcutta it has been suggested, that if a widow who had been unchaste after her husband's death had left her immoral life, and had been living in chastity at the time of suit, she might be entitled to receive a bare maintenance, or to retain one already granted. This was, however, a mere obiter dictum, as on the facts the Court founds that the widow by her continued unchastity up to suit forfeited every claim upon the holders of her husband's estate (f).

The obligation to continued chastity only applies where the maintenance has been given, or is claimed in satisfaction of the common law right. Where the maintenance rests upon an independent consideration for an express agreement it cannot be withheld unless there is a provision

(c) Valu v. Gunga, 7 Bom., 84.

(d) 7 I. A., p. 151.

(e) Vishnu Shambhog v. Manjamma, 9 Bom., 108; followed Nagamma v. Virabhadra, 17 Mad., 392; Kandasami v. Murugammal, 19 Mad., 6; Dattu Kuari v. Meghu, 15 All., 382. The rule applies à fortiori in the case of a concubine of a deceased coparcener. Yashwantrav v. Kashibai, 12 Bom., 26.

(f) Romanath v. Rajonimoni, 17 Cal., 674.

to that effect in the agreement. As for instance where lands were assigned to a widow by way of maintenance in compromise of a suit in which she had claimed the entire estate (g).

For a lawful purpose.

When a wife leaves her husband's home by his consent, he is, of course, bound to receive her again when she is desirous to return, and if he refuses to do so, she will be entitled to maintenance just as if he had turned her out (h).

A wife, who is unlawfully excluded from her own home, or refused proper maintenance in it, has the same right to pledge her husband's credit, as a wife in England. But the onus lies heavily on those who deal with her to establish that she is in such a position (i).

Widow not bound to reside with husband's family.

Widow residing apart.

§ 457. The same reasons which require a wife to remain under her husband's roof do not apply where she has become a widow. No doubt the family house of her husband's relations is a proper, but not necessarily the most proper, place for her continued residence (k). Where she is young, and is surrounded by young men, it may even be more prudent and decorous for her to return to her father's care, and it may, under many circumstances, be not only a safer but a happier home. At all events it is now settled by decisions of the highest tribunal that "all that is required of her is, that she is not to leave her husband's house for improper or unchaste purposes, and she is entitled to retain her maintenance, unless she is guilty of unchastity, or other disreputable practices, after she leaves that residence" (l). It does not, however, follow that the right to choose a separate residence and a money maintenance rests absolutely with the widow, merely for her own pleasure. The Bombay High Court, after a review of all the previous (g) Bhup Singh v. Lachman, 26 All., 321.

(h) Nitye v. Soondaree, 9 Suth., 475.

(i) Vivasvami v. Appasvami, 1 Mad. H. C., 375.

(k) 2 Dig., 450.

(l) Pirthee Singh v. Rani Rajkooer, 12 B. L. R. (P. C.), 238; S. C., 20 Suth., 21, where most of the previous cases are cited; Visalatchi v. Annasami, 5 Mad. H. C., 150; Kasturbai v. Shivajiram, 3 Bom., 372, dissenting from Rango Vinayak v. Yamunabai, 3 Bom., 44; per curiam, 6 Mad., p. 85; Gokibai v. Lakhmidas, 14 Bom., 490; Siddessury v. Janardan, 29 Cal., 557.

decisions, appears to be of opinion that the Courts have a discretion, "which should be exercised so as not to throw upon the deceased husband's family a needless or oppressive burden at the caprice of the widow or her family." They cited with approval, as containing the true principle of law, the statement by Colebrooke (2 Str. H. L., 401): "She does not lose her right of maintenance by visiting her own relations; but a widow is not entirely her own mistress, being subject to the control of her husband's family, who might require her to return to live in her husband's house" (m). Nor can a widow claim a separate maintenance where the family property is so small as not to admit reasonably of the allotment to her of such a maintenance (n). If the husband chose by his will to make it a condition that his widow should reside in his family house, such a direction would be binding, and the continuance of her maintenance would depend upon her obedience (o). A widow cannot insist on residing in any particular house. If she elects to live with her husband's family, she must accept such arrangements for her residence as they make for her (p). On the other hand if she insists on a separate maintenance she cannot also claim a right to live in the family house (q). In Madras it has been laid down that a widow who, without any special cause, elects to live away from her husband's relations, is not entitled to as liberal an allowance as she would be if, from any fault of theirs, she was unable to live with them (r). But I imagine that her election to live apart from them cannot be visited with anything in the way of a penalty, or forfeiture of her proper rights (s). Under Bengal Law, where a partition

(m) Rango Vinayak v. Yamunabai, 3 Bom., 44; Ramchandra v. Sagunabai, 4 Bom., 261.

(n) Godavaribai v. Sagunabai, 22 Bom., 52.

(o) Bamasunderi v. Puddomonee, S. D. of 1859, 457; Cunjhumee v. Goopee, F. MacN., 62; per curiam, Pirthee Singh v. Rani Rajkooer, 12 B. L. R., 247; S. C., 20 Suth., 21; Mulji Baishanker v. Bai Ujam, 13 Bom., 218; Girianna v. Honamma, 15 Bom., 236. See Tin Cowri v. Krishna Bhabini, 20 Cal., 15, where the widow had been removed from the dwelling house by force.

(p) Mohun Geer v. Mt. Tota, 4 N.-W. P., 153.

(q) Ramiah v. Nyammamah, 1 Mysore, Ch. Ct. 58.

(r) Anantarya v. Savitramma, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 59.

(s) See cases cited, note (l); Nittokissoree v. Jogendro, 5 I. A., 55.

takes place between the sons and step-sons of a widowed mother, her claim for maintenance attaches upon the share of her own sons, not upon the whole estate. So long as the estate is undivided the maintenance of all the mothers is a charge upon the whole estate (t).

All heirs bound.

§ 458. A female heir is under exactly the same obligations to maintain dependent members of the family as a male heir would have been under by virtue of succeeding to the same estate (u). The obligation extends even to the King when he takes the estate by escheat, or by forfeiture (v). And where the claim to maintenance is based upon the possession of family property, it equally exists though the property is impartible, as being in the nature of a Raj, or a Zemindary in Southern India (w), and is not affected by the fact that a small portion of the movable property had been awarded to the claimant on a partition (x). In Bombay it has been held that where a member of an ordinary undivided Hindu family is in a position to sue for a share of the property, he cannot sue for maintenance (y). But it is difficult to see why a coparcener, who is willing to continue as a member of an undivided family, should be driven out of it by what must be wrongful conduct on the part of the manager, in refusing him his proper support out of the family funds. Such suits are, of course, very rare, as maintenance would never be refused to a coparcener unless his right as such was denied, in which case he would naturally test his right by suing for a partition.

Right of coparcener to sue.

(t) Hemangini Dasi v. Kedarnath, 16 I. A., 115; S. C., 16 Cal., 758; Anrita Lal v. Manick Lal, 27 Cal., 551.

(u) Gunga v. Jeevee, 1 Bor., 384 [426]; 3 Dig., 460.

(v) Narada, xiii., § 52; Golab Koonwar v. Collector of Benares, 4 M. I. A., 246; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 47.

(w) Chuoitrya v. Sahub Purhulad, 7 M. I. A., 18; Naragunty v. Venkama, 9 M. I. A., 66; Muttusawmy v. Venkataswara, 12 M. I. A., 203; S. C., 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 15; S. C., 11 Suth. (P. C.), 6; Katchekaleyana v. Kachivijaya, ib., 495; S. C., 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 72; S. C., 11 Suth. (P. C.), 33; ante § 454. In the case of the Pachet Raj the Court held that there was no law, or custom, which entitled anyone but a son or daughter of the deceased Rajah to receive maintenance. Nilmomy Singh v. Hingoo, 5 Cal., 256.

(x) Yarlagudda Mallikarjuna v. Y. Durga, 27 I. A., 151; S. C., 24 Mad., 147.

(y) Himmat Singh v. Ganpat Singh, 12 Bom. H. C., 96, note.

§ 459. In cases where a man forsakes his wife without any fault on her part, it is said that he is bound to give her one-third of his property, provided that would be sufficient for her maintenance (z). In other cases no rule is, or can be, laid down as to the amount which ought to be awarded. In any particular instance the first question would be, what would be the fair wants of a person in the position and rank of life of the claimant? The wealth of the family would be a proper element in determining this question. A member of a family who had been brought up in affluence would naturally have more numerous and more expensive wants than one who had been brought up in poverty. The extent of the property would be material in deciding whether these wants could be provided for, consistently with justice to the other members (a). The extent of the property is not, however, a criterion of the sufficiency of the maintenance, in the sense that any ratio had existed between one and the other. Otherwise, as the Judicial Committee remarked (b), "a son not provided for might compel a frugal father, who had acquired large means by his own exertions, to allow a larger maintenance than he himself was satisfied to live upon, and than children living as part of his family must be content with." Every case must be determined upon its own peculiar facts. As regards widows, since they are only entitled to be maintained by persons who hold assets over which their deceased husbands had a claim (§ 451—453), the High Court of Bombay has ruled that it follows as a corollary, "that the widow is not, at the utmost, entitled to a larger portion of the annual produce of the family property than the annual proceeds of the share to which her husband would have been entitled on partition were he now living" (c).

Amount.

How determined.

(z) V. May., xx., § 1; Huree Bhaee v. Nathoo, 1 Bor., 63 [69]; Ramabai v. Trimbak, 9 Bom. H. C., 283.

(a) Baisni v. Rup Singh, 12 All., 558; Devi Persad v. Gunwanti, 22 Cal., 410; Mahesh Partab v. Dirgpal, 21 All., 232.

(b) Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., p. 413; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Bhugwan v. Bindoo, 6 Suth., 286; Nittokissoree v. Joqendro, 5 I. A., 55.

(c) Madhavray v. Gangabai, 2 B. M., 639; Adibai v. Cursandas, 11 Bom., 199.

An illegitimate member of a family, who is not an heir, is not entitled to maintenance on the same scale or on the same principles as disqualified heirs, or females who have entered the family by marriage (d).

Where widow has property.

In calculating the amount of maintenance to be awarded to a female, her own stridhana is not to be taken into account, if it is of an unproductive character, such as clothes and jewels. For she has a right to retain these, and also to be supported, if necessary, by her husband's family. But if her property produces an income, this is to be taken into consideration. For her right is to be maintained, and, so far as she is already maintained out of her own property, that right is satisfied (e). And it would seem that a member of the family, who has once received a sufficient allotment for maintenance, and who has dissipated it, cannot bring a suit either for a money allowance, or for subsistence out of the family property (f). On the other hand, an allowance fixed in reference to a particular state of the family property may be diminished by order of the Court if the assets are afterwards reduced (g), provided the reduction has not arisen from the voluntary act of the person liable for maintenance (h). And on the same principle, the allowance might be raised, if the property increased, or a change of circumstances justified the demand (i).

Where the amount of maintenance has been settled by the Indian Courts, the Judicial Committee will not interfere with that amount on appeal (k).

Arrears.

Arrears of maintenance used to be refused by the Madras Sudder Court. But this view has now been over-(d) Gopalasami v. Arunachelam, 27 Mad., 32.

(e) 1 Stra. H. L., 171; 2 Stra. H. L., 307; Shib Dayee v. Doorga Pershad, 4 N.-W. P., 63; Chandrabhagabai v. Kashimath, 2 Bom. H. C., 341; per curiam Savitribai v. Luwimibai, 2 Bom., at p. 584; Kaveramma v. Soobroyappa, 5 Mysore, 244. A mere right of action to recover property under a will is not a legitimate ground for reducing maintenance. Gokebai v. Lakshmidas, 14 Bom., 490.

(f) Savitribai v. Luwimibai, 2 Bom., 573.

(g) Rukabai v. Gandabai, 1 All., 594.

(h) Vijaya v. Sripathi, 8 Mad., 94; Gopikabai v. Dattatraya, 24 Bom., 386.

(i) Sveerani Bhuttacharjee v. Puddomodkee, 9 Suth., 152; per curiam, 2 Bom., p. 630; Burgaru Ammal v. Vijayamachi, 22 Mad., 175.

(k) Kachi Kalyani v. Kachi Yuva, 32 I. A., p. 265; S. C., 28 Mad., p. 512.

ruled, and it is settled that such arrears may be awarded, at all events from the date of demand (l). Such an award is, however, at the direction of the Court, and arrears may properly be refused where a widow has chosen to live apart from her husband's relations without any sufficient cause, and has then sued not only for a declaration of her right to future maintenance, but for a lump sum as arrears for the period during which she resided with her own family (m). The foundation of a suit for maintenance is the withholding of it by the person who was bound to pay it. This withholding need not be proved by such an express demand and refusal, as amounts to a denial of the right within the meaning of the Statute of Limitations (Act XV of 1877, Art. 129), but there must be enough to show that there was something more than absence of claim on one side resulting in absence of payment on the other. There must be an infraction of the claimant's right (n).

§ 460. Another question is, whether the claim for maintenance is merely a liability which ought, in the first place, to be satisfied out of the family property, or whether it is an actual charge upon that property, which binds it in the hands of the holders of the property?

How far a charge upon the property.

There are several texts which prohibit the gift of property to such an extent as to deprive a man's family of the means of subsistence. Vrihaspati says (o): "A man may give what remains after the food and clothing of his

How far a charge upon the property.

(l) Venkopadhaya v. Kavari, 2 Mad. H. C., 36; Sakwarbai v. Bhavanjee, 1 Bom. H. C., 194; Abalady v. Mt. Lukhymonee, 2 Wym., 49; Pirthee Singh v. Rane Raj Kooer, 2 N.-W. P., 170; affirmed, 12 B. L. R. (P. C.), 238; S. C., 20 Suth., 21; Jadumani v. Kheytra Mohan, V. Darp., 384; Narbadabai v. Mahadev, 5 Bom., 99.

(m) Rango Vinayak v. Yamunabai, 3 Bom., 41; Raghubans Kunwar v. Bhagwant, 21 All., 183.

(n) Narayanrao v. Ramabai, 6 I. A., 114, p. 119; Mallikarjuna v. Durga Prasad, 17 Mad., 362; on appeal, 27 I. A., 151; S. C., 24 Mad., 147; Seshamma v. Subbarayudu, 18 Mad., 403; Motilal Prannath v. Bai Kashi, 17 Bom., 45. In the last case the Court refused to give more than three years' arrears. See as to the effect of limitation upon a decree awarding maintenance, Lakshmidai v. Bapuji, 12 Bom., 65. A merely declaratory decree for maintenance cannot be enforced, Venkanna v. Aitamma, 12 Mad., 183. Otherwise where the decree specifically awards future maintenance. Ashutosh Bannerjee v. Lukhimoni 19 Cal., 139.

(o) 2 Dig., 131.

family; the giver of more (who leaves his family naked and unfed) may taste honey at first, but shall afterwards find it poison. If what is acquired by marriage, what has descended from an ancestor, or what has been gained by valour, be given with the assent of the wife, or the co-heirs, or of the King, the gift is valid." Katyayana declares what may and may not be given. "Except his whole estate and his dwelling-house, what remains after the food and clothing of his family a man may give away, whatever it be (whether fixed or movable); otherwise it may not be given" (p). Vyasa says (q): "They who are born and they who are yet unbegotten, and they who are actually in the womb, all require the means of support, and the dissipation of their hereditary maintenance is censured." So a passage ascribed to Mamu (r) declares: "The support of persons who should be maintained is the approved means of attaining heaven. But hell is the man's portion if they suffer. Therefore let a master of a family carefully maintain them." This Jimuta Vahana explains by saying, "The prohibition is not against a donation or other transfer of a small part not incompatible with the support of the family."

Upon these passages, however, it is to be observed: First that they all refer to cases of gift or dissipation, where no consideration exists for the transfer. The same prohibition would not apply to a sale, either for a family necessity, or for value, where the purchase-money would take the place of that which was disposed of. Secondly, the penalties suggested seem to be rather of a religious nature, punishing the act, than of a civil nature, invalidating it. Thirdly, the very authors who cite these texts treat them as merely moral prohibitions, and Jagannatha points out, acutely enough, as to one text, that the gift cannot be invalid, if the immediate result of it is to taste as honey in the mouth of the donor (s).

(p) 2 Dig., 133; 3 Dig., 581.

(q) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 23, 24, not to be found in the Institutes.

(r) 2 Dig., 132; Daya Bhaga, ii., § 23.

(s) Daya Bhaga, i., § 45.

§ 461. The question has arisen frequently for decision within the last few years, though it can hardly be said that every point that can be suggested has been set at rest. It seems to be now settled that the claim even of a widow for maintenance is not such a lien upon the estate as binds it in the hands of bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the claim (t). As Phear, J., said (u): "When the property passes into the hands of a bona fide purchaser without notice, it cannot be affected by anything short of an existing proprietary right; it cannot be subject to that which is not already a specific charge, or which does not contain all the elements necessary to its ripening into a specific charge. And, obviously, the consideration received by the heir for the sale of the deceased's property will, so far as the widow's right of recourse to it is concerned, take the place of the property sold." It was also pointed out by the Bombay High Court (v) that the texts which are relied on as making the maintenance a charge upon the inheritance are exactly similar to those which charge it with the payment of debts, the expenses of marriage and funeral ceremonies, and the charges of initiation of younger members. But these charges would admittedly not be payable by a purchaser for value, whether with or without notice of their existence. They also pointed out that such a doctrine would equally invalidate a sale made by the husband himself, as a wife's maintenance is even a stronger obligation than that of maintaining a widow. In fact the Madras Sudder Court did carry out the principle to that full extent, by holding that a sale of property made by a husband was invalid, where nothing was left for the maintenance of his wife (w).

§ 462. Supposing this to be established, it would follow that the purchaser must have notice, not merely of the

Where right has become fixed.

(t) Bhagabati v. Kanailal, 8 B. L. R., 225; S. C., 17 Suth., 433, note; Adhiranee v. Shona Matee, 1 Cal., 365; Lakshman v. Sarasvatibai, 12 Bom. H. C., 69; Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai, 2 Bom., 494.

(u) 8 B. L. R., 229.

(v) 12 Bom. H. C., p. 77

(w) Lachhanna v. Bapanamma, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 230.

existence of a right to maintenance—that is, of the existence of persons who did or might require to be maintained—but of the existence of a charge actually created and binding the estate. Otherwise, it is evident that an estate never could be purchased as long as there was any person living whose maintenance was, or might become, a charge upon the property. A decree actually settling the amount of maintenance, and making it a lien upon the property, would, of course, be a valid charge; but not, apparently, a merely personal decree against the holder of the property (x). So, if the property was bequeathed by will, and the widow's maintenance was fixed and charged upon the estate by the same will (y); or, if by an agreement between the widow and the holder of the estate, her maintenance was settled and made payable out of the estate (z), or if she was in possession of specific property for the purpose of her maintenance (a), a purchaser taking with notice of the charge would be bound to satisfy it. And the charge, where it exists, is a charge upon every part of the property, and may be made the ground of a suit against anyone who holds any part of it (b). In a case already quoted, Phear, J., seemed to think that notice of a widow having set up a claim for maintenance against the heir would be sufficient (c). But if nothing binds the estate except a charge, actually created, it is difficult to see

Effect of notice.

(x) Per West, J., Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai, 2 Bom., p. 524; Adhiranee v. Shona Malee, 1 Cal., 365; Saminatha v. Rangathammal, 12 Mad., 285; Kuloda v. Jageshar, 27 Cal., 194. Such a decree, however, when obtained by the widow against her father-in-law would constitute a debt binding on his sons and grandsons, which would entitle the widow to have a charge fixed on the property. Bhagvathi v. Anantha Charia, 17 Mad., 268. Nor would a decree against a member of a joint family in her individual capacity bind the joint family property as against its representative, or other members, not parties to the suit. Muttia v. Virammal, 10 Mad., 283; folld. Minakshi v. Chinnappa, 24 Mad., 659.

(y) Prosonno v. Barbosa, 6 Suth., 253.

(z) Heera Lal v. Mt. Kousillah, 2 Agra, 42. See this case explained, 12 Bom. H. C., 75; Abadi v. Asa, 2 All., 162.

(a) Rachava v. Shivayogapa, 18 Bom., 679.

(b) Ramchandra v. Savitribai, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 73. See it explained, Nistarini v. Makhantal, 9 B. L. R., 27; S. C., 17 Suth., 432; 12 Bom. H. C., 73. If the holder of part of the property pays the whole maintenance, his remedy is by a suit for contribution, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 73.

(c) 8 B. L. R., p. 229; S. C., 17 Suth., 433, note; West, J., says "We should rather substitute 'notice of the existence of a claim likely to be unjustly impaired by the proposed transaction'." 2 Bom., p. 517.

how a purchaser could be affected by notice that a widow had a claim which had not matured into a lien. And in a later case Couch, C. J., said, "Whatever may be the rights of the younger members of a family, where the estate is inherited by the eldest member, until the maintenance has become a specific charge upon the property, which it might be by a decree of a Court making provision for the payment of the maintenance, and declaring that a part of the property should be a security for it, or by a contract between the parties charging the property with a certain sum for maintenance, we do not see how it can be a charge upon the estate in the hands of a bonâ fide purchaser for consideration" (d). Even express notice at an execution sale under the decree that a widow had a claim for maintenance upon the estate, has been held not to affect the rights of the purchaser (e). Where a widow had sued for maintenance and had named specific pieces of property in order to show the amount she was entitled to, but had made no claim for a charge on the property, but such a charge was in fact created by the decree, the charge was held not to be binding as against a mortgage made pending suit, by virtue of the doctrine of lis pendens (f). It would have been different if the suit had been to obtain a charge. In a case in which the Crown had confiscated property out of which a widow was being maintained, it does not appear that any charge in the above sense had ever been created. But the decree affirming the maintenance against the Crown was submitted to without opposition (g).

Escheat.

§ 463. The whole of this subject was examined by West, J., in Bombay, in a judgment which collects all the authorities bearing upon the matter. He points out that mere notice of a claim for maintenance, which contains all

(d) Juggernath v. Odhiranee, 20 Suth., 126. See Goluck v. Ohilla, 25 Suth. 100; Sham Lal v. Banna, 4 All., 296.

(e) Soorja Koer v. Natha Baksh, 11 Cal., 102.

(f) Manika Gramani v. Ellapa Chetty, 19 Mad., 271.

(g) Golab Koomwar v. Collector of Benares, 4 M. I. A., 246; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 47. See Adhiranee v. Shona Malee, 1 Cal., 373.

the elements necessary for its ripening into a specific charge, cannot be sufficient to bind a purchaser, because in the case of a widow under Mitakshara law her claim would always contain such elements. Nor could the rights of the purchaser depend solely upon the question, whether after the sale there was enough property left in the hands of the heir to satisfy her claim? What was honestly purchased was free from her claim for ever, and no new right could spring up in the widow by virtue of any subsequent exhaustion of the family funds. His view, apparently, is, that the question will always be, first, was the vendor acting in fraud of the widow's claim to maintenance (h); secondly, was the purchaser acting with notice, not merely of her claim, but of the fraud which was being practised upon her claim? He says "If the heir sought to defraud her, he could not by any device in the way of parting with the estate, or changing its form, get rid of the liability which had come to him along with the advantage derived from his survivorship; and the purchaser—taking from him with reason to suppose that the transaction was one originating not in an honest desire to pay off debts, or satisfy claims for which the estate was justly liable, and which it could not otherwise well meet, but in a desire to shuffle off a moral and legal liability,—would, as sharing in the proposed fraud, be prevented from gaining by it; but if, though he knew of the widow's existence and her claim, he bought upon a rational and honest opinion that the sale was one that could be effected without any furtherance of wrong, he has, as against the plaintiff, acquired a title free from the claim which still subsists in full force as against the recipient of the purchase-money" (i).

This is substantially the effect of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), § 39. "Where a third person has (h) Behari Lalji v. Bai Rajbai, 23 Bom., 342; Tirumala v. Lakshamma, 6 Mysore, 184.

(i) Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai, 2 Bom., 494, 524; Kalpagathachi v. Ganapathi, 3 Mad., 184; Mahalakshamma v. Venkataratnamma, 6 Mad., 83; Ramkumwar v. Ram Dai, 22 All., 326; Bhartpur State v. Gopal Dei, 24 All., 160.

Transfer of Property Act.

a right to receive maintenance, or a provision for advancement or marriage, from the profits of immovable property, and such property is transferred with the intention of defeating such right, the right may be enforced against the transferee, if he has notice of such intention or if the transfer is gratuitous; but not against a transferee for consideration and without notice of the right, nor against such property in his hands." Where a transferee is liable, he ceases to be so when the property passes out of his hands (k).

Under the lis pendens Section (52) of the same Act it was held, that where a suit for a partition had been instituted by one of several brothers against the others, a transfer by one of the defendants of his share was ineffectual against the right of the mother to maintenance out of that share, though the transfer was made before service of summons upon the transferor. In that case, however, the transferor denied the right of the mother who was 6th defendant and the existence of her right was one of the questions in issue in the suit. It was also found as a fact that both transferor and transferee had notice of the suit before the transfer (l).

§ 464. Debts contracted by a Hindu take precedence over maintenance as a charge upon the estate. Therefore, a purchaser of property sold to discharge debts has a better title than a widow who seeks to charge the estate with her maintenance. And this would be especially so where the property has been acquired in trade, and is held for trading purposes, and seized for the trading debts (m). It has been held in Allahabad that a sale to satisfy debts would even take precedence over a charge for maintenance actually debts.

Priority of

(k) Dharam Chand v. Janaki, 5 All., 389.

(l) Jogendra v. Fulkumari, 27 Cal., 77. It is submitted that this case is no authority for the later decision professedly based upon it, (Amirta Lal v. Manick Lal, 27 Cal., 551) in which none of the governing facts in the previous case existed.

(m) Natcharammal v. Gopalakrishna, 2 Mad., 126; Adhiranee v. Shona Malce, 1 Cal., 365; Johurra v. Sreegopal, ib., 470; Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai, 2 Bom., 494.

and bonâ fide created before sale or seizure (n). Where a husband under Mitakshara law dies leaving separate property and also joint property, which passes to his coparceners, the widow's claim to maintenance must be met first out of the separate estate, and she cannot come upon the joint property till the separate property is proved insufficient (o). Where there is family property which has been partly alienated, it does not appear to be settled whether the widow is bound to sue those of the family who are still in possession of the remainder of the property before she comes upon the purchasers (p).

Widow's claim on family house.

§ 465. It has been laid down that there is a distinction between the right of a widow to continue to live in the ancestral family house, and her right over other parts of the property. Accordingly, where a man died leaving a widow and a son, and the son immediately on his coming of age sold the family house, and the purchaser proceeded to evict the widow, the High Court of Bengal dismissed his suit. Peacock, C. J., held that the text of Katyayana (q) was restrictive, and not merely directory, and that the son could not turn his father's widow out of the family dwelling house himself, or authorise a purchaser to do so, at all events until he had provided for her some other suitable residence (r). And the same has been held in the North-West Provinces, where the son of the survivor of two brothers sold the dwelling-house, in part of which the widow of his uncle was living. The Court held that she could not be ousted by the purchaser of her nephew's rights (s). Where, however, a Hindu mortgaged his ancestral dwelling-house, and then died, and his mother

Right of widow to family house.

(n) Sham Lal v. Banna, 4 All., 296; Gur Dial v. Kaunsila, 5 All., 367. In neither of these cases, however, does it appear from the report that there was any actual charge created as distinct from the general lien.

(o) Shib Dayee v. Doorga Pershad, 4 N.-W. P., 63.

(p) See Goluck v. Ohilla, 25 Suth., 100; Adhiranee v. Shona Malee, 1 Cal., 365; Ram Churun v. Mt. Jasooda, 2 Agra H. C., 134; doubted per curiam, Lakshman v. Sarasvatibai, 12 Bom. H. C., 76.

(q) 2 Dig., 133; ante § 460.

(r) Mangala v. Dinanath, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 72; S. C., 12 Suth. (O. C. J.), 35; folld. Bai Devkore v. Sanmukhram, 13 Bom., 101.

(s) Gauri v. Chandramani, 1 All., 262; Talemand v. Rukmina, 3 All., 353; Chicka Byamma v. Nanjannah, 15 Mysore, 135.

and widow were made parties to a suit to enforce the mortgage, the Court held, that the fact that they were dwelling in the house was no objection to a decree for its sale. They appear to have left it an open question whether the purchaser at the sale would be entitled to turn them out of possession (t). In a similar case in Madras and Bombay the Court held that the sale must be made subject to the widow's right of residence (u), unless the sale was made for a debt binding upon the family, and therefore upon the widow (v).

§ 466. So far we have been discussing the case of a purchaser for value. Phear, J., in the judgment often referred to, said, "As against one who has taken the property as heir, the widow has a right to have a proper sum for her maintenance ascertained and made a charge upon the property in his hands. She may also doubtless follow the property for this purpose into the hands of anyone who takes it as a volunteer, or with notice of her having set up a claim for maintenance against the heir" (w). In Madras, where a testator devised all his property by will, without making any provision for his widow, the will was held valid, except as to her claim for maintenance, and a reference was directed to ascertain what amount should be set aside for that purpose (x). And so in Bengal, Sir F. MacNaghten, while admitting that a husband can, by will, deprive his widow of her share in the estate, adds, "It cannot be doubted but that her right to maintenance remains in full force—and, if it had been asked for on reasonable grounds, I take for granted that the Court would in this case (as it had in a similar one) have ordered funds sufficient for (t) Bhikkam v. Pura, 2 All., 141.

(u) Venkatammal v. Andyappa, 6 Mad., 130; Dalsukhram v. Lallubai, 7 Bom., 282.

(v) Ramanaden v. Rangammal, 12 Mad., 260; Chowdri Salar v. Vobamma, 17 Mysore, 177; Manilal v. Baitara, 17 Bom., 398.

(w) Bhagabati v. Kanailal, 8 B. L. R., 228; S. C., 17 Suth., 433, note; Yellawa v. Bhimungavda, 18 Bom., 452.

(x) S. A., 684 of 1871, per Morgan, C. J., and Holloway, J., 8 Mar., 1872, not reported. Acc. Razabai v. Sadu, 8 Bom. (A. C. J.), 98; Becha v. Mothini 23 All., 86.

Against volunteer in possession of property.

the purpose of maintaining her, to be set apart out of the whole of her husband's estate" (y). This view was followed by the Supreme Court in a later case, where a Hindu in Bengal left all his property to his three sons, not mentioning his widow. A decree was made for partition in three equal shares between them. The Court held the decree erroneous, as it ought to have awarded a share to the mother for her maintenance. Grant, J., said, "Her legal right was not excluded by her husband's will, since her name was not mentioned in his will, and rights so much the favoured object of the Hindu law as that of a widow to maintenance could not be excluded by implication. And so, we are informed by Sir F. MacNaghten, the Court thought, and, if not excluded, they must have subsisted such as the law declared them" (z). And, I imagine, the ruling would be the same even though the testator expressly, and by name, declared that his widow or daughter should not receive maintenance. It has, no doubt, been decided that a father in Bengal may by will deprive his son of any right to maintenance (a). But that is because an adult son has no right whatever to maintenance (b). His only right is as an heir expectant, and that right may be wholly defeated by sale, gift, or devise. But the right of a widow to her maintenance arises by marriage, and that of a daughter by birth; it exists during the life of the father, and continues after his death. It is a legal obligation attaching upon himself personally, and upon his property. He cannot free himself from it during his lifetime, and it attaches upon the inheritance immediately after his death. It seems, therefore, contrary to principle to hold that, by devising the property to another, he could authorize that other to hold it free from claims

(y) F. MacN., 92.

(z) Comulmoney v. Rammanath, Fulton, 189; Joytara v. Ramhari, 10 Cal., 688.

(a) Tagore v. Tagore, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 132, 159.

(b) See ante § 451-454.

which neither he himself nor his heir could have resisted (c).

The same principle has been affirmed as against donees. In a case from Allahabad, a husband, during his life, made a gift of his entire estate, without reserving maintenance to his widow, and it was held that the donee took subject to the liability to maintain her (d). The same decision was given in Bombay, where a husband had, by gift to his undivided sons by his first and second wives, assigned the whole of his self-acquired immovable property, without making provision for his third wife who was left absolutely destitute. It was held that she was entitled to have her maintenance charged upon this property in the hands of her step-sons, and that this right was not affected by any agreement made by her with her husband during his life (e).

The duration and alienability of grant for maintenance has already been discussed (ante § 395), and the special considerations which arise where the grant is to a female in the succeeding paragraphs—(396-397). Maintenance for life.

(c) The High Court of Bengal has held that under Bengal law a husband may dispose of his property by will so as to deprive his widow of her share by partition; Debedra v. Brojendra Coomar, 17 Cal., 886, following Bhoobunmoyee v. Ramkissore, S. D. of 1860, i., p. 489, where the Court said: "In Bengal a widow has no indefeasible vested right in the property left by her husband, though she has by virtue of her marriage a right, if all the property be willed away, to maintenance." See also Sonatum Bysack v. Juggutsoonbree, 8 M. I. A., 66. The side note there is erroneous. What the widow claimed and obtained was her share, and not merely maintenance. See per Muttusami Aiyar, 12 Mad., p. 267.

(d) Jamma v. Machul, 2 All., 315.

(e) Narbadabai v. Mahadeo, 5 Bom., 99.

CHAPTER XV.

PARTITION.

Division of subject.

§ 467. I HAVE already (§ 242—250) discussed the early history of the law of partition. The modern law may be divided into four heads: First, the property to be divided; secondly, the persons who are to share (§ 471); thirdly, the mode of division (§ 488); fourthly, what constitutes a partition (§ 494). A few words will have to be added on the subject of re-union. In treating of THE JOINT FAMILY (Chapter VIII), I have anticipated much that is usually placed under the Law of Partition.

Coparcenary property alone divisible.

First.—The property to be divided is ex vi termini the property which has been previously held as joint property in coparcenary (a). Therefore a man's self-acquisition is indivisible (b), and so is any property which he has inherited collaterally, or from such a source that the persons claiming a share obtained no interest in it on its devolution to him (§ 275). Property allotted on a previous partition is of course indivisible as between the separated members or their representatives; but it would be divisible as between those members and their own descendants, unless at the time of partition the father had cut himself off from his own issue, as well as from his collateral relations (§ 276). And as soon as such property has descended a step, it loses its character of impartibility, and becomes ancestral and joint property in the hands of those who take it. It retains its original character as regards collaterals. For instance, if A and B are undivided brothers, and A makes a separate acquisition, it descends to his two sons exclusively. In their hands it is ancestral property, and divisible. But it does not become the property of the coparcenary of which they are members with E and F. Consequently, neither the two latter, nor their descendants, will ever be entitled to share in it, so long as the direct heirs of A are in existence (c). In one case the Bombay High Court decided that even ancestral movable property was so completely at the disposal of the father, that his own sons could not claim a partition of it. But this decision appears to have been over-ruled by implication in a later case (d). The whole doctrine on which it rests has been already discussed (§ 335).

(a) As to what is coparcenary property, see ante § 275, et seq. "In order that persons may be coparceners, and so have a right to partition, not only must they be in joint possession of the property, but that joint possession must be founded on the same title." A person holding a subordinate interest in land can have no right of partition against the superior holder. Mukunda Lal v. Lehvraav, 20 Cal., 379, p. 384.

(b) Mitakshara, i., 4; Daya Bhaga, vi., 1; V. May., iv., 7. In Bengal, where a division is made in the life of the father, the father has a moiety of the goods acquired by his son at the charge of the estate; the son who made the acquisition has two shares, and the rest take one apiece. But if the father's estate has not been used, he has two shares, the acquirer as many, and the rest are excluded from participation. Daya Bhaga, ii., § 7; per Peacock, C. J., Uma Sundari v. Dwarkanath, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 257; S. C., 11 Suth., 72.

Coparcenary property is divisible.

§ 468. Other matters were originally declared to be indivisible from their nature, such as apparel, carriages, riding-horses, ornaments, dressed food, water, pasture ground and roads, female slaves, houses or gardens, utensils, necessary implements of learning or of art, and documents evidencing a title to property (e). The ground of the exception seems to have been that they were things which could not be divided in specie, that they were originally of small value, and specially appropriated to the individual members of the family; consequently, that if each were left in possession of his own, the value held by one would be balanced by Property indivisible from its nature.

(c) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivaganga, 9 M. I. A., 539; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Periasami v. Periasami, 5 I. A., 61; S. C., 1 Mad., 312.

(d) Ramchandra Dada Naik v. Dada Mahadev, 1 Bom. H. C., App. 76 (2nd ed.) contra, Lakshman v. Ramchandra, 1 Bom., 561; affd. 7 I. A., 181; S. C., 5 Bom., 48; ante § 335.

(e) Mitakshara, i., 4, § 16—27; Daya Bhaga, vi., 2, § 23—30; V. May., v., 7, § 23.

a corresponding value in the hands of another. But as property of this sort increased in value, the strict letter of the texts was explained away, and it was established that, where things were indivisible by their nature, they must either be enjoyed by the heirs in turns or jointly, as a well or a bridge; or sold, and their value distributed, or retained by one co-sharer exclusively, while the value of what he retained was adjusted by the appropriation of corresponding values to the others (f). Where part of the property consists of idols and places of worship, which are valuable from their endowments, or from the respect attaching to their possessor, the members will be decreed to hold them by turns, the period of tenure being in proportion to their shares in the corpus of the property (§ 439). In the case of family idols, the Bombay High Court directed on a partition that the senior member should take possession of them and the property appertaining to them, with liberty to the other members to have access to them for the purpose of worship (g). A partition of a dwelling-house will be decreed if insisted on (h), but the Court will, if possible, try to effect such an arrangement as will leave it entire in the hands of one or more of the coparceners (i). In a later case the Court said: "the principle in these cases of partition is, that if a property can be partitioned without destroying the intrinsic value of the whole property, or of the shares, such partition ought to be made. If, on the contrary, no partition can be made without destroying the intrinsic value, then a money compensation should be given instead of the share which would fall to the plaintiff by partition" (k).

§ 469. Another class of estates which are indivisible, without being either separate or self-acquired, are those which by a special law or custom descend to one member (f) Viramit., p. 3; 3 Dig., 376—385.

(g) Damoderdas v. Uttamram, 17 Bom., 271.

(h) Hullookur v. Ramnauth, Marsh., 35.

(i) Rajcoomaree v. Gopal, 3 Cal., 514.

(k) Ashinullah v. Kali Kinkur, 10 Cal., 675.

of the family (generally the eldest), to the exclusion of the other members. The most common instance of this is in the case of ancient Zemindaries, which are in the nature of a Raj or Sovereignty, or which descend to a single member by special family custom (l), or royal grants of revenue for services, such as Jaghirs or Saranjams in Bombay (m). But an estate which is not in the nature of a Raj is not impartible, and does not descend to a single heir, merely because it is a Zemindary, in the absence of a special and binding family custom (n). Another case in which property is prima facie impartible, is where it is allotted by the State to a person in consideration of the discharge of particular duties, or as payment for an office, even though the duties or office may become hereditary in a particular family. An instance of the sort is to be found in the case of lands held under ghatwali tenure in Beerbhoom, which are hereditary but impartible (o). So in Madras, where the office of curnum, or village accountant, has become hereditary, the land attached to the office is not liable to division (p). In Bombay, however, there are numerous revenue and village offices, such as deshmuk, despandya desai, and patel, which are similarly remunerated by lands originally granted by the State. These lands have, by lapse of time, come to be considered as purely private property of the family which holds the office, though they are subject to the obligation of discharging its duties, and defraying all necessary expenses. Land of this character is so frequently, though

(l) See ante § 54.

(m) Ramchandrar v. Venkatrao, 6 Bom., 598; Narayan Jagannath v. Vasudev, 15 Bom., 247. A Saranjam may have been originally partible, or made so by family usage; Madhavrav v. Manohar v. Atmaram, 15 Bom., 519. Lands leased by Government to the family are partible. Dattatraya v. Mahadaji, 16 Bom., 528.

(n) Venkatapetty v. Ramachandra, 1 Mad. Dec., 495; Moottoovengada v. Toombayasamy, Mad. Dec. of 1849, 27; Jagunadha v. Konda. ib., 112; Moottoovengada v. Munarsawmy, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 217; Koernarain v. Dhorinidhur, S. D. of 1858, 1132. See us to estates confiscated, and re-granted, ante § 54.

(o) Hurlall v. Jorawan, 6 S. D., 169 (204), approved by Privy Council, Lelanund v. Government of Bengal, 6 M. I. A., 125; S. C., 1 Suth. (P. C.), 20; Nilmoni v. Bakranath, 9 I. A., 104.

(p) Alymalummaul v. Vencatoovien, 2 Mad. Dec., 85; Bada v. Hussa Bhai, 7 Mad., 236.

not invariably, partible that it has been decided that in a suit for partition of such property, its nature raises no presumption that it is indivisible. Consequently, the holder of the office and of the land attached to it must rebut the claim for partition by evidence of a local or family usage that the land should be held exclusively by the holder of the office (q). On partition a portion of the property will be set aside sufficient to provide for the discharge of the duties, and the rest will become private property free from all obligations to the State (r). The discontinuance of services attached to an impartible estate does not alter the nature of the estate, and render it partible (s). So, an estate which has been allotted by Government to a man of rank for the maintenance of his rank is indivisible, as otherwise the purpose of the grant would be frustrated. But where it is allotted for the maintenance of the family, then it is divisible among the direct descendants of the family, as the special object is to benefit all equally, not to maintain a special degree of state for one (t). And where an estate is impartible, its income is impartible, and the savings of such income, and the purchases made out of such savings are equally impartible, so long as they remain in the hands of the person out of whose income they proceeded. But as soon as they pass from him to a successor, they become divisible and ancestral property (u).

Although a Raj or Zemindary may be itself indivisible, there is no reason why it should not be taken into a division, as property allotted to a separating member. The result would be that its descent would be governed by the (q) Steele, 203, 210, 229. Shidhojirav v. Naikojirav, 10 Bom. H. C., 228; Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa, 7 I. A., 162; S. C., 4 Bom., 494; Vinayek Waman v. Gopal Hari, 30 I. A., 77; S. C., 27 Bom., 353; Ramrao v. Yeshvantrao, 10 Bom., 327; Gopalrav v. Trimbakrao, ib., 598; Gopal Hari v. Ramakant, 21 Bom., 458.

(r) Act XI of 1843, § 13 (Hereditary Officers); Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa, ib. sup.

(s) Ramrao v. Yeshvantrao, ib. sup.

(t) Viswanadha v. Bungaroo, Mad. Dec. of 1851, 87, 94, 35; Booloka v. Comaraswamy, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 74; Bodhrao v. Nursing Rao, 6 M. I. A., 426; Panchanadayen v. Nilakandayan, 7 Mad., 191. See Indian Pensions Act, XXIII of 1871.

(u) See ante § 286 and cases in last note.

Raj taken in partition.

rules which relate to separate property (v). Therefore, in a family governed by the Mitakshara law, it would pass to female heirs in preference to male collaterals (w).

§ 470. Having ascertained what property there is to divide, the next step is to ascertain its amount. For this purpose it is necessary first to deduct all claims against the united family for debts due by it (x), or for charges on account of maintenance, marriages or family ceremonies, which it would have had to provide for, if it remained united (y). When these are set aside, an account must be taken of the entire family property in the hands of all the different members. In general this account is simply an enquiry into the existing assets (z). No member can have any claim to mesne profits previous to partition, because it is assumed that all surplus profits have, from time to time, been applied for the family benefit, or added to the family property. No charge is to be made against any member of the family, because he has received a larger share of the family income than another, provided he has received it for legitimate family purposes. Nor can the manager be charged with gains which he might have made, or savings which he might have effected, nor even with extravagance or waste which he has committed, unless it amounts to actual misappropriation. But, of course, advances made to any member for a special private purpose, for which he would have no right to call upon the family purse, or to discharge his own personal debts, contracted without the authority of the other members, or alienations of the family property made by an individual for his own benefit, would be properly debited against

Mode of taking account.

(v) An instance of the sort occurred in the case of Runganayakamma v. Bulli Ramaya, P. C., 5th July, 1879 (not reported). Where the estate is excluded from such partition the family remains undivided in regard to it. Yarlagudda Mallikarjuna v. Y. Durga Prasad, 27 I. A., 151; S. C., 24 Mad., 147.

(w) Per curiam, Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M. I. A., 589; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Tekaet v. Tekaetnee, 20 Suth., 154.

(x) Under this head come all the complicated questions discussed, ante § 309, 335, et seq as to whether transactions entered into by one member of the family bind the whole.

(y) Ante § 326; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 124; Mitakshara, i., 7, § 3-5; Daya Bhaga, i., § 47, iii., 2, § 38-42; V. May., iv., 4, § 4, iv., 6, § 1, 2, v., 4, § 14; 3 Dig., 73, 96, 389; W. & B., 786-792. See as to the eight ceremonies, 3 Dig., 104.

(z) Jugmohundas v. Mangaldas, 10 Bom., 529.

him in estimating his share (a). And, conversely, money laid out by one member of the family upon the improvement or repair of the property, or for any other object of common benefit, in general constitutes no debt to him from the rest of the family. The money which he expends is probably in itself part of the joint property, so that he is merely returning to the family its own. But this presumption might be rebutted. If the funds which he had expended were advanced out of his own self-acquired property, or out of the income of property which by mutual agreement had been set aside for his exclusive enjoyment, an arrangement with his coparceners by which he was to lay out money from his separate funds, and they were to reimburse his outlay, would be valid (b).

Mesne profits.

Mesne profits may be allowed on partition, where one member of the family has been entirely excluded from the enjoyment of the property, or where it has been held by a member of the family who claimed a right to treat it as impartible, and therefore exclusively his own (c). Such a claim, however reasonable and bonâ fide, negatives the ordinary presumption that the annually accruing profits have been applied for the benefit of the family, and that the savings have been carried into the family treasury. The same rule applies, where, by family arrangement, the property is held in specific and definite shares, the enjoyment of which has been disturbed (d).

Coparceners.

§ 471. SECONDLY, AS TO THE PERSONS WHO SHARE.—Any coparcener may sue for a partition, and every copar-

(a) Ante § 293; Lakshman v. Ramchandra, 1 Bom., 561; Konerrav v. Gurrav, 5 Bom., 589; per curiam, 11 Mad., p. 248; Damoderdas v. Uttamram, 17 Bom., 271.

(b) Muttusvamy v. Subbiramaniya, 1 Mad. H. C., 309. A different mode of taking accounts is adopted, where, after a partition, the members agree to leave their shares in the hands of one of their number as a trustee for all; Satrucherla Ramabhadra v. S. Virabhadra, 26 I. A., 167; S. C., 22 Mad., 470.

(c) Per curiam, Konerrav v. Gurrav, 5 Bom., p. 595; Venkata v. Narayya, 7 I. A., 38, 51; S. C., 2 Mad., 128; Venkata v. Rajagopala, 9 I. A., 125; S. C., 5 Mad., 236; Krishna v. Subbanna, 7 Mad., 564; Bhivrav v. Sitaram, 19 Bom., 532.

(d) Shankar Baksh v. Hardeo Baksh, 16 I. A., 71; S. C., 16 Cal., 397.

ener is entitled to a share upon partition (e). But some persons are entitled to a share upon a partition who cannot sue for it themselves. Upon these points there are many distinctions between the early and the existing law, and also between the law of Bengal and of the other provinces.

In Bengal the son has no right to demand a partition of property held by his father during the life of the latter (f 248). The Mitakshara, on the other hand, expressly asserts the right (§ 246). Yet it is remarkable how slowly the right came to be recognized in practice. Sir Thomas Strange discusses the subject with an evident leaning against the right (f). Mr. Strange, in his Manual, treats the right as existing, but as one which, until very recent times, was opposed to public opinion, unless under exceptional circumstances (g). Several of the fatwâhs quoted by West and Bühler affirm that the right only arises where the father is old, diseased or wasteful (h). The High Court of Bombay, in a case already cited, held that as regards movable property at all events the son could not enforce a partition against his father's consent; and in the argument it was stated that no bill for such a purpose had ever been filed in the Supreme Court (i). Until 1893 the Pondicherry Courts had consistently decided that a son could not obtain a partition of any ancestral property during his father's life, unless he consented or was attacked by an incurable malady (k). The right both of a son and a grandson under Mitakshara law to a partition of movable and immovable property in the possession of a father, against his consent, has now, however, been settled by express decisions in Madras, Bengal, the North-West Provinces, and Bombay (l). In the Privy Council the right of the son to compel his father to (e) As to the persons who are coparceners, see ante § 292.

(f) 1 Stra. H. L., 179.

(g) W. & B., 364, 402 (2nd ed.).

(h) Ramchandra v. Mahadev, 1 Bom. H. C., App. 76 (2nd ed.).

(i) Sorg. H. L., 186.

(l) Nagalinga v. Subbiramaniya, 1 Mad. H. C., 77; Nagalinga v. Vellusamy, 1 Mad., 76; Subba Aiyar v. Ganesa, 18 Mad., 179; Laljeet v. Rajcooman, make a partition of ancestral immovable property has also been recognised as the settled law of the Presidencies (m).

Great-grandson. The right of the great-grandson to a division is not expressly stated in any of the early Hindu law books, but it rests on the same grounds as that of the son, viz., equality of right by birth (n).

After-born sons. § 472. The rights even of unborn sons were originally so much respected that, when a son was born after a partition had taken place between a father and his sons, the partition was opened up again, in order to give him the share which he would have had if he had then been alive (o). And Jimuta Vahana was of opinion that the rule was still applicable where the property to be distributed was inherited from the grandfather, because distribution of such property was illegal so long as the mother was capable of bearing children. Consequently, the rights of an after-born child could not be prejudiced by the illegal act (p). Other writers, however, stated that a son born after a partition could only take his father's share, representing him to the exclusion of the previously divided brethren (q). The Mitakshara reconciles the conflict by saying that the latter texts lay down the general rule, while the former are limited to the case of a son who was in his mother's womb at the time of partition. Jimuta Vahana takes the same view in cases where the partition is made by the father of his self-acquired property.

12 B. L. R., 373; S. C., 20 Suth., 336; Kaliparshad v. Ramcharan, 1 All., 159; Jogul Kishore v. Shib Sahai, 5 All., 430. See futwahs, Bom. Sel. Rep., 41, 42; W. & B., 365, 370, 373 (2nd ed.); per curiam, Moro Visvanath v. Ganesh, 10 Bom. H. C., 463; Jugmohandas v. Mangaldas, 10 Bom., 529, 578. This rule has been extended to Khoja Muhammedans, as being governed by Hindu Law; Cassumbhoy v. Ahmedbhoy, 12 Bom., 280, 294.

(m) Suraj Bansi v. Sheo Pershad, 6 I. A., p. 100.

(n) W. & B., 672; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 31—45; Raghuandana, ii., 24; Smriti Chandrika, viii., § 11; Vivada Chintamani, 239; Manu, ix., § 137; Viramit., p. 90, § 23a; Sarasvati Vilasa, § 221; Sarvadhikari, 561; Jolly, Lect. 170.

(o) Vishnu, xvii., § 3; Yajnavalkya, ii., 122; per curiam, 11 I. A., p. 179; S. C., 6 All., p. 574. See the subject discussed, Krishna v. Sami, 9 Mad., 64, p. 70, 77; and Narasimha v. Verabhadra, 17 Mad., 287; where the difference on this point between obstructed and unobstructed property is pointed out.

(p) Daya Bhaga, i., § 45, vii., § 10; Raghuandana, ii., 30, 31, 36. This restriction, however, is no longer in force, ante § 249.

(q) Manu, ix., § 216; Gautama, xxviii., § 26; Narada, xiii., § 44; Vrihaspati 3 Dig., 49, 435; Naval v. Bhagwan, 4 All., 427.

Therefore, in all cases where the birth of a son would add to the number of sharers, if the pregnancy is known at the time, the distribution should be deferred till its result is ascertained. If it is not known, and a son is afterwards born, a redistribution must take place of the estate as it then stands (r). If the father had divided the whole property among his sons, retaining no share for himself, it is said that the sons, with whom partition has been made, must allot from their shares a portion equal to their own to an after-born son (s). Where the father had three sons, of whom two were minors, and he made a partition of the property into three shares, of which one was handed over to the eldest son, and the father retained in his own hands the other shares on behalf of the minors, and subsequently he had another son who sued for one-fourth share of the whole property; it was held that the suit failed against the eldest son, but was maintainable against the father and the two younger sons, who were living jointly with him and with each other (t). In this case there had in fact been no partition, except between the eldest son and the rest of the family who remained joint.

§ 473. Under Mitakshara law, the right to a share passes by survivorship among the remaining coparceners, subject to the rule that where any deceased coparcener leaves male issue they represent the rights of their ancestor to a partition (u). For instance, suppose A dies, leaving a son B, two grandsons E and F, three great-grandsons H, I, J, and one great-great-grandson Z. The last named will take nothing, being beyond the fourth degree of descent (§ 271). The share of his ancestor W will pass by survivorship to the other brothers, B, C, D, and their descendants, and enlarge their interests accordingly. Hence B, C and D will each be entitled (r) Mitakshara, i., 6, § 1—12; Daya Bhaga, vii., § 4; V. May., iv., 4, § 35—37; Viramit., p. 92, § 24; Yekeyamian v. Agniswarian, 4 Mad. H. C., 307; per Peacock, C. J., Kalidas v. Krishan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), pp. 118—121.

(s) 1 W. MacN., 47; Chengama v. Munisami, 20 Mad., 75.

(t) Ganpat Venkatesh v. Gopalrao, 23 Bom., 636.

(u) It must always be remembered that what passes is not a share, as in Bengal, but the right to have a share on partition, ante § 270.

Right of representation.

to one-third, E and F will take the third belonging to C.

and H, I, J, will take D's third. Each class will take per stirpes as regards every other class, but the members of the class take per capita as regards each other. This rule applies equally whether the sons are all by the same wife, or by different wives (v). But if W had effected a partition with A, then, on his death, his fourth would have passed at once to Z, supposing X and Y to have predeceased. The right of any descendant, or set of descendants, to a partition assumes, however, that the ancestors above him or them are dead. C can compel a partition with A, but E and F cannot compel a partition during the life of C. Their right arises for the first time, when, by the death of C, his interest in the estates descends upon them. It is evident that they cannot have their own share apportioned without a previous apportionment of the share of C. But the sons or grandsons of C cannot compel him to proceed to a partition unless he wishes it (w).

Representation arises on death of ancestor.

Benga law.

§ 474. These principles require some modification where the case arises in Bengal. A son can never demand a parti-

(v) Mitakshara, i., 5, § 1; V. May., iv., 4, § 20—22; Smriti Chandrika, viii., § 1—16; Katyayana, 3 Dig., 7; Devala, ib., 9, 10, 446, 448; Narada, xiii., § 25; 2 Dig., 572, 575, 576; 1 Stra. H. L., 205; 2 Stra. H. L., 351—357; Moottoovengada v. Toombayasamy, Mad. Dec. of 1849, 27; Poovathay v. Paroomal, Mad. Dec. of 1856, 5; Manjanatha v. Narayana, 5 Mad., 362. In some families, however, a custom called Patni-bhaga prevails of dividing according to mothers; so that if A had two sons by his wife B, and three sons by C, the property would be divided into moieties, one going to the sons by B, and the other to the sons by C. Sunrun v. Khedun, 2 S. D., 116 (147). This practice prevails locally in Oudh, as evidenced by numerous Wajib-ul-arz which I have seen in cases under appeal to the Privy Council.—J. D. M.

(w) Mitakshara, i., 5, § 3; W. & B., 658; 1 W. MacN., 50; 2 W. MacN., 150; 3 Dig., 9, 38, 388; ante § 272; Daya Bhaga, iii., 1, § 19, xi., 6, § 29, Raghumandana, tion of property held by his father, but as soon as A, in the above diagram, died, his property would descend to his sons and their descendants, and would be divisible among them in the same manner as above stated. If any coparcener dies without male issue, but leaving a widow, a daughter, or daughter's sons, his share will descend to them, and will not lapse into the shares of the other members as it would do under the Mitakshara law (x). The principles of this line of succession will be discussed hereafter. It is sufficient here to say that representation does not extend beyond daughters. Daughters of the same class inherit to their father, per stirpes. But daughters' sons do not take as heirs to their mother, but as heirs to their grandfather. Consequently no daughter's son takes at all, until all the eligible daughters are dead; and such sons, where they do inherit, take per capita and not per stirpes. That is to say, if a man has two daughters, A and B, of whom A has one son, and B has five, on the death of the last daughter the six sons will take equally (y).

§ 475. Illegitimate sons of the three higher classes are entitled to nothing but maintenance (z). As regards the illegitimate son of a Sudra there is greater difficulty. It is said that if a partition is made by the father, he may be allotted a share at the father's choice, and that if the partition is made after the father's death, the brethren should make him a partaker of the moiety of a share. The Bengal writers say that where the partition is made by the father

Illegitimate
sons.

ii., 23, 24; per curiam, 11 I. A., p. 179; S. C., 6 All., p. 574; Apaji Narhav v. Ranchandra, 16 Bom. (F. B.), 29. The Viramitrodaya appears to be of a contrary opinion. Viramit., p. 90, § 23a. The High Court of Allahabad has held that the grandson, even during the life of his father and grandfather, has a vested interest in the ancestral property which can be realised by a partition, and is saleable under a decree. Jogul Kishore v. Shib Sahai, F. B., 5 All., 430, considered and disagreed with by the majority of the Bombay Full Bench, 16 Bom., 29.

(x) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 15, 47, 59, 65; 1 W. MacN., 19, 22; post § 479.

(y) See post § 563, 564.

(z) Mitakshara, i., 12, § 3; Daya Bhaga, ix., § 28; V. May., iv., § 29—31; Viramit., p. 121, § 17; Chuoturya v. Sahub Purhalad, 7 M. I. A., 18; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 132; Gajapathy v. Gajapathy, 2 Mad. H. C., 369, reversed on a different point, 13 M. I. A., 497; S. C., 6 B. L. R., 202; S. C., 14 Suth. (P. C.), 33; Roshan v. Bulwant Singh, 27 I. A., 51; S. C., 22 All., 191, ante § 450. The same rule prevails among the Punjab tribes. Punjab Customary Law, II, 161.

himself, or after his death in pursuance of his directions, the share of such an illegitimate son may be equal to that of a legitimate son. This would be natural enough, considering the power which a father in Bengal has in the disposition of his property. Vijnanesvara lays down no rule upon the point, but speaks vaguely of "a share." Where there are no legitimate sons, but there are daughters or daughters' sons, the Mitakshara says that he is entitled to half a share only; the Daya Bhaga and Daya-krahma-sangraha say that he shares equally with the daughter's son (a): while the author of the Datta Chandrika considers that where there is no legitimate male issue, the illegitimate son of a Sudra shares equally with the whole series of heirs down to the daughter's son (b). In a Bombay case, where however the point did not arise, it seems to have been the opinion of Nanabhai Haridas, J., that an illegitimate son could enforce a partition as against his brothers, but not as against his father, "seeing that his right to take a share during his father's lifetime is expressly made to depend on the father's choice" (c). In Madras it is held that the illegitimate son of a Sudra may enforce a partition against his legitimate brothers, but not against his father, or his father's coparceners, as for instance, his father's brothers, or their sons (d). In Khandesh a legitimate daughter and an illegitimate son divide the property (e).

Minority not a bar.

§ 476. The legality of a partition during the minority of some of the coparceners is recognized by Baudhayana, who says that "the shares of sons who are minors, together with the interest, should be placed under good protection until the majority of the owners" (f). One text of Katyayana appears to prohibit partition while there is a minor entitled to share (g). But it is evident

(a) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 183, 184; Mitakshara, i., 12, § 1, 2; Daya Bhaga, ix., § 29, 30; D. K. S., vi., § 32—34; 3 Dig., 143; V. May., iv., 4, § 32; Raghu-nandana, ii., 39, 40. As to the meaning of the half-share, see post § 550. As to the persons entitled under these texts, post § 548, 549.

(b) Datta Chandrika, v., § 30, 31. See post § 550.

(c) Sadu v. Baiza, 4 Bom., pp. 44, 45; acc. per curiam, 11 Cal., 714.

(d) Thangam Pillai v. Suppa Pillai, 12 Mad., 401.

(e) Steele, 180.

(f) Baudhayana, ii., § 2.

(g) 3 Dig., 544.

that if such a rule existed, a partition could hardly ever take place. It is now quite settled that a partition made during the minority of one of the members will be valid, and if just and legal will bind him. Of course, his interests ought to be represented by his guardian, or some one acting on his behalf, though I imagine that the fact of his not being so represented would be no ground for opening up the partition, if a proper one in other respects (h). When he arrives at full age he may apply to have the division set aside as regards himself, if it can be shown to have been illegal or fraudulent or grossly negligent and prejudicial to his interests (i), or even if it was made in such an informal manner that there are no means of testing its validity (k). Where a partition has been made in which the rights of a person entitled as co-sharer, whether a minor or any other person, have been totally ignored, the partition will be wholly invalid as against the person passed over. In such a case the Bombay High Court treated the whole partition as a nullity. In a similar case before the Judicial Committee it was treated only as invalid against the excluded party, and a declaration was made of the share to which he was entitled, and the case was remanded to have the right so declared enforced against the other dividing members (l). But a suit cannot be brought by, or on behalf of, a minor to enforce partition, unless on the ground of malversation, or some other circumstances, which make it for his interest that his share should be set aside and secured for him (m). Otherwise he might (h) 2 Stra. H. L., 362; 2 W. MacN., 14; Deowanti v. Dwarkanath, 8 B. L. R., 363, note; S. C., Sub-nomine, Deo Bansee v. Dwarkanath, 10 Suth., 273; Balkishen v. Ram Narain, 30 I. A., 139; S. C., 30 Cal., 738.

(i) Nallappa v. Balammal, 2 Mad. H. C., 182; per curiam, Lakshmbai v. Ganpat, 4 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 159; Deowanti v. Dwarkanath, 8 B. L. R., 363, note; Damoderdas v. Uttamram, 17 Bom., 271.

(k) Kalee Sunkur v. Denendra, 23 Suth., 68; Chanvirapa v. Danava, 19 Bom., 593. As to the effect upon such suits of the Statute of Limitations, Lal Bahadur v. Sispal Singh, 14 All., 498; Krishnabai v. Khangowda, 18 Bom., 197; contra, 19 Bom., 593.

(l) Krishnabai v. Khangowda, 18 Bom., 197; Chowdhry Ganesh v. Mt. Jewach, 31 I. A., 10; S. C., 31 Cal., 262.

(m) 1 Stra. H. L., 206; Svamiyar v. Chokkalingam, 1 Mad. H. C., 105; Alimelammal v. Arunachellam, 3 Mad. H. C., 69; Kamakshi v. Ohidambara, be thrust out of the family, at the very time when he was least able to protect himself.

Absent members.

An absent coparcener stands on the same footing as a minor. The mere fact of his absence does not prevent partition. But it throws upon those who effect it the obligation to show that it was fair, and legally conducted, and the duty of keeping the share until the return of the absent member (n). The right to receive a share of property divided in a man's absence is laid down as extending to his descendants to the seventh degree. But, of course, it would now be regulated by the law of limitation (o).

Wife.

§ 477. A wife can never demand a partition during the life of her husband, since, from the time of marriage, she and he are united in religious ceremonies (p). But in former times, where a partition took place at the will of others, the interests of the women of the family, whether wives, widows, mothers, or daughters, were much better provided for than they are at present. Where the partition was made in the father's lifetime, the furniture in the house and the wife's ornaments were set aside for the wife, and where the allotments of the males were equal, and the wives had no separate property, shares equal to those of the sons were set apart for the wives for their lives (q). According to Harinatha, however, this right to a share did not arise where the husband reserved two or more shares to himself, as he was entitled to do, as the extra shares were a sufficient provision for his wives (r). And so, where the partition took place after the father's death, ib., 94; Damoodur v. Senabatty, 8 Cal., 537; Thangam Pillai v. Suppa Pillai, 12 Mad., 401; Mahadev Balvant v. Lakshman, 19 Bom., 39.

Right of wife,

(n) 1 Stra. H. L., 206; 2 Stra. H. L., 341; 3 Dig., 544.

(o) Daya Bhaga, viii.; D. K. S., ix. See Act XV of 1877, Sched. ii., § 123, 127, 144.

(p) Apastamba, xiv., § 16; Punna Bibee v. Radhakissen, 31 Cal., 476.

(q) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 116; Mitakshara, i., 2, § 8-10; Daya Bhaga, iii., 2, § 31; D. K. S., vi., § 22-31; Raghunandana, ii., 13, 14, 18; V. May., iv., 6, § 15; Viramit., p. 57, § 10. According to Visvarupa, § 2, "If equal shares are allotted by the father, the widows of his sons and grandsons and his own wives to whom no stridhana had been given by their husband, or father-in-law, or himself, should be made partakers of their husband's shares.

(r) 1 W. MacN., 47. See, too, D. K. S., vi., § 27.

the mother and the grandmother were each entitled to a share equal to that of the sons, and the unmarried daughters each to the fourth of a share (s). If the sons chose to remain undivided they had a right to do so. The women of the family could never compel a division, and were entitled to no more than a maintenance. This is still the law universally where the father leaves male issue (t). But where he leaves no male issue there is, as already observed, a difference between the law of the Mitakshara and that of the Daya Bhaga. Under the former system females never succeed to the share of an undivided member so long as there are male coparceners in existence; under the latter system they do. But according to the doctrines of Jimuta Vahana the shares even of an undivided member are held in a sort of quasi-severalty (§ 373), so that the right of the female heirs to obtain possession of this share is rather a branch of the law of inheritance than of the law of partition (u).

§ 478. In Southern India the practice of allotting a share upon partition to wives, widows, or mothers has long since become obsolete. The Smriti Chandrika, which admits the right of an aged father, when making a partition with his sons, to reserve a double share for himself, says that if he does not avail himself of this right, he ought to take, on account of each of his wives, a share equal to that taken by himself (v). But the right of a father to reserve an extra share for himself in regard to ancestral property is now obsolete (§ 488), and the corresponding (s) Vyasa, Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 12; Vishnu, 3 Dig., 15; Manu, ix., § 118; Mitakshara, i., 7; Daya Bhaga, iii., 2, § 29, 34; V. May., iv., 4, § 18, 39, 40; Viramit., p. 79, § 19.

(t) 2 W. MacN., 65, n.; F. MacN., 45, 57.

(u) See the remarks of Jagamatha, 3 Dig., 9. "The right of partition consists in the relation of son to the original possessor and the like. Even the son of the daughter of a man who leaves no male issue, and the son of a mother's sister, are not intended by the term 'undivided,' since they belong to other families." A daughter's son in Bengal would certainly be entitled to have his grandfather's share ascertained and delivered to him (§ 474). But his suit would be more in the nature of an ejectment than of a partition, which implies previous membership in a joint family.

(v) Smriti Chandrika, iv., § 26-39. This appears also to be the opinion of the author of the Sarasvati Vilasa, who cites Apararka in support of it, §§ 77, 111-117.

mother, and daughter.

Obsolete in Southern India.

Rights of women in Southern India.

practice of reserving a share for wives has also disappeared. The pundits of the Madras Sudder Court, in a case where a man had made a deed of division allotting a share to his son, and another to his wife and daughter, declared that such a division was illegal by Hindu law, "inasmuch as a wife and daughter, who have no right to property while a son is alive, are not capable of participating in the property while he is alive" (w). The practice in Madras, as far as my experience goes, is that in making a division during a father's life, no notice is taken of his wife or wives, their rights being included in his, and provided for out of his share. As regards the mother, where partition is made after the death of her husband, the Smriti Chandrika, after discussing the texts already cited, points out that a widowed mother with male issue cannot be entitled to a partition of the heritage, as she is not an heir, but only to a portion sufficient for her maintenance and her religious duties. Consequently, that where she is stated to be entitled to a share equal to that of a son, this must mean such a portion as is necessary for her wants, and which can never exceed a son's share, but which is subject to be diminished, if the property is so large that the share of a son would be greater than she needs, or where she is already in possession of separate property (x). This is in accordance with existing practice. The plaint in a suit for partition in Madras always sets out the names of such widows as are chargeable upon the property, and asks that the amount necessary for their maintenance may be ascertained and set aside for them. This amount, though of course in some degree estimated with reference to the magnitude of the property (§ 459), is never considered to be equal to, or to bear any definite proportion to, the share of sons. Mr. W. MacNaghten states that this exclusion of mothers from a distinct share on partition is peculiar to the Smriti Chandrika, and that according to the Mitakshara

(w) Meenatchee v. Chetumbray, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 61.
 (x) Smriti Chandrika, iv., § 4-17; 2 Stra. H. L., 309; Venkatammal v. Andiyappa, 6 Mad., 180; per curiam 8 Mad., at p. 123.

and other works current in Benares and the Southern Provinces, not only mothers, but also childless wives are entitled to shares, the term mātā being interpreted to signify both mother and stepmother (y). The Viramitrodaya admits sonless wives to a share when partition is made by the father, but excludes them from a partition made after his death. The ground of the distinction is, that in the former case they take as wives, while in the latter case they can only take as mothers. He seems however to admit that the Mitakshara and the Madanaratna recognise the right of stepmothers to a partition with their sons (z). I have been informed on high authority that the usage as regards allotting maintenance instead of shares to mothers, when a partition takes place in Bombay, is the same as that which prevails in Madras. But the futwabs of the pundits lay it down that she is entitled to a share equal to that of a son, and the same view is stated by Mr. Justice West in a well considered judgment, and was affirmed and acted on by the same Court in a recent case (a). The High Court of Bengal has on several occasions decided that, under Mitakshara law, a mother is entitled when a partition takes place to have a share equal to that of a son set apart for her, either by way of maintenance or as a portion of the inheritance, even though the partition takes place in the lifetime of the father (b). The same view is taken by the High Court of the North-West Provinces which holds that a Hindu widow, entitled by the Mitakshara to a proportionate share with her sons upon partition, can claim such share, not

(y) 1 W. MacN., 50. Vyasa expressly lays down that "the wives of the father who have no sons are entitled to equal shares (with the sons of other wives); and so are all the wives of the paternal grandfather." 3 Dig., 12; V. May., iv.; 4, § 19, says this includes step-grandmothers also. So also the Mithila school, D. K. S., vii., § 7. See 3 Dig., 13; Damoodur v. Senabuttly, 8 Cal., 537.

(z) Viramit., p. 79, § 19.

(a) Madhourao v. Yuswuda, 2 Bor., 454 [468]; W. & B., 2nd ed., 91, 92, 97, 100, 306, 390; Lakshman v. Satyabhumabai, 2 Bom., 494, 504; Damodaradas v. Uttamram, 17 Bom., 271; p. 286.

(b) Judoonath v. Bishonath, 9 Suth., 61; Mahabeer v. Ramyad, 12 B. L. R., 90; S. C., 20 Suth., 192; Laljeet v. Rajcoomar, ib., 373; S. C., 20 Suth., 336; Pursid v. Honooman, 5 Cal., 845; Sumrun v. Chundar Mun, 8 Cal., 17; Krishori v. Moni Mohun, 12 Cal., 165; Chowdhry Ganesh v. Mt. Jewach, 31 I. A., 10; S. C., 31 Cal., 262.

only quoad the sons, but as against an auction purchaser at a sale in execution of the right title and interest of one of the sons before partition (c).

Rights of women in Bengal.

§ 479. Under the law of Bengal the rights of females stand much higher than they do in the other provinces. Partition during the life of a father is so uncommon in Bengal, that I can find no authority as to setting aside shares for the wives. The Daya-krama-sangraha seems to limit the right of wives to have such shares to cases where the father makes a partition of his self-acquired property. In such a case, if peculiar property has been already given to one wife, the other wives, whether childless or otherwise, are entitled to have their shares made up to an equal amount. If they have had no peculiar property, then they are to have shares equal to those of sons (d). After the death of the father, the right of the widow depends upon whether the father has left male issue or not, and whether she is a mother or a childless wife. That is to say, she may either be a coparcener before partition, or only entitled to a share in the event of a partition, or entitled in no case to more than maintenance.

Right of widow in Bengal.

Where no issue.

1. If the father dies leaving no male issue, his widow becomes his heir, whether he is divided or not. She is in the strictest sense a coparcener. She became a member of the same gotra with her husband on her marriage, and is the surviving half of his body, as well as his heir (e). She can herself sue for a partition, and need not wait for her share until a partition is brought about by the act of others (f). The Calcutta High Court, however, has laid (c) Bilaso v. Dina Nath, 3 All., 88.

(d) D. K. S., vi., § 22-26.

(e) W. & B., 129; Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 458; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 14, note, 48, 46, 54; D. K. S., ii., 2, § 41.

(f) F. MacN., 39, 59; 1 W. MacN., 49; Dhurm Das v. Mt. Shama Soondri, 3 M. L. A., 229, 241; S. C., 6 Suth. (P. C.), 43; Shib Pershad v. Gunga Monee, 16 Suth., 291; Soudaminy v. Jogesh, 2 Cal., 262. Even before partition the widow has an alienable interest which may be enforced by partition by her assignee; Janoki Nath v. Mothura Nath, 9 Cal., 580. As to the rights of several widows inter se, post § 554. As to the right of widows among the Jains to demand a partition of their husband's share, see Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 406, affd. 5 I. A., 37; S. C., 1 All., 688.

it down that owing to the special nature of a woman's estate, it would be the duty of a Court, before decreeing partition in favour of a widow, to see that the interests of the presumptive heir be not affected by the decree. The Court ought to be satisfied that it is a bonâ fide claim arising from such necessities as render partition desirable between two joint owners, and that she would properly represent the interest of the estate, including that of the person who would come after her (g).

2. If the father dies leaving issue, and a widow who is Step-mother. not the mother of such issue, she is never entitled to more than maintenance. The writers of the Bengal school differ in this respect from those of the other provinces, since they exclude a step-mother from the operation of the texts which speak of the share of a mother. And this exclusion equally applies, whether the widow was originally childless, or was the mother of daughters only, or was the mother of sons whose line has become extinct before partition (h).

3. If the father dies leaving male issue, and also a widow Mother. who is the mother of such issue, she is only entitled to maintenance until partition, and she can never herself require a partition. But if a partition takes place by the act of others, not being strangers (i), she will be entitled to receive a share, if the effect of that partition is to break up or diminish the estate out of which she would otherwise be maintained (k). Hence her claim to a share is limited to the two following cases: first, when the partition Right of mother in Bengal. takes place between her own descendants, upon whose property her maintenance is a charge. Secondly, when it takes place in respect of property in which her husband had an interest.

(g) Mohadeay v. Haruk Narain, 9 Cal., 244, 250.

(h) F. MacN., 41, 57; 1 W. MacN., 50; 3 Dig., 13; D. K. S., vii., § 3, 5, 6; Daya Bhaga, iii., 2, § 30; Raghunanda, ii., 17; ante § 478.

(i) Barahi Debi v. Debkamini, 20 Cal., 682.

(k) 2 W. MacN., 65, n.; F. MacN., 45, 57, 59; Bilaso v. Dinanath, 3 All., 88. Hence until partition she has no alienable interest. See Judoonath v. Bishonath, 9 Suth., 61.

§ 480. First. If a widowed mother has only one son, she can never claim a share from him, and if he comes to a partition with his brothers by another mother, her claim for maintenance is a charge upon his share and not upon the whole estate (l). But if he dies, and his sons come to a division, then she would be entitled to share with them as grandmother. Similarly, if a man dies leaving three widows, each of whom has one son, and these three sons come to a division, none of the mothers would have a right to a share; because each of them retains her claim intact upon her own son. But if the sons of one son divide among themselves, their grandmother will be entitled to a share. If the grandsons of all three widows divide, all the grandmothers will be entitled (m). In each case the share of the widow will be equal to the share of the persons who effect the partition. If it takes place between her sons, she will take the share of a son; if between her grandsons, she will take the share of a grandson (n). If a mother has three sons, one of whom dies leaving grandsons, and a partition takes place between the two surviving sons and the grandsons, the mother will be entitled to the same share as if the division had been effected between three sons; that is to say, the property will be divided into four shares, of which the mother will take one, each surviving son will take another, and the grandsons will take the fourth (o). Where the partition takes the place between grandsons by different fathers, the matter becomes more complicated. For instance, suppose

(l) Hemangini Dasi v. Kedarnath, 16 I. A., 115; S. C., 16 Cal., 758.

(m) F. MacN., 39, 41, 54; Sibbosondery v. Bussomutty, 7 Cal., 191; Purna Chandra v. Sarojini, 31 Cal., 1065.

(n) D. K. S., vii., § 2, 4; Raghunandana, ii., 19. If she has already been provided for to the extent to which she would be entitled on partition, she takes no more; if to a less extent, she takes as much more as will make up her share. Jodoonath v. Brojonath, 12 B. L. R., 355.

(o) Pravnikissen v. Muttoosondery, Fulton, 389; Gooroopersaud v. Seelchunder, F. MacN., 29, 52.

A to have died leaving a widow and three sons, and these sons to die, leaving respectively two, three, and four grandsons, and that these grandsons come to a division. If their grandmother was dead, the property would be divided into three portions, per stirpes, which would again be divided into two, three, and four parts, per capita (§ 473). But if the grandmother is alive, she will be entitled to the same share as a grandson. But it is evident that the grandsons by B take a larger share than those by C, and these again a larger share than those by D. The mode of division, therefore, is stated to be, that the whole property is divided into ten shares, of which the grandmother will take one, the two sons of B will take three, the three sons of C will take three, and the four sons of D will take three. If the widows of B, C and D were also living, they would be entitled to shares also. Each widow would take the same as her son. But in order to arrive at this share, a fresh division would have to be made. The three-tenths taken by the sons of B would be divided into three parts, of which his widow would take one. Similarly, the three-tenths taken by the sons of C would be divided into four parts, and the three-tenths taken by the son of D would be divided into five parts, of which one would go to the respective widows of C and D, the remainder being divisible among their sons (p). The same widow may take in different capacities, as heir of one branch of the family, and as mother or grandmother in another branch. A very complicated instance of this sort is recorded by Sir F. MacNaghten as having been decided in the Supreme Court at Calcutta (q).

In one case in Bengal, where a partition was made after the death of all the sons by their widows, it was held that the grandmother had no right to a share. No counsel appeared for the grandmother, and, as might be expected,

(p) F. MacN., 52—54.

(q) Sree Motee Jeemoney v. Attaram, F. MacN., 64; Callychurn v. Jonava, 1 Ind. Jur. N. S., 254; Jugomohan v. Sarodamoyee, 3 Cal., 149; Torit v. Tara-prosonno, 4 Cal., 756; Kristo Bhabiney v. Ashutosh, 13 Cal., 39.

Grandmother.

Grandmother in Bengal.

no precedents were cited. The decision can hardly be looked upon as of much weight, in the face of the direct authority on the other side (v).

Where a partition takes place among great-grandsons only, it is said that the great-grandmother has no right to a share (s). But if a son be one of the partitioning parties with great-grandsons by another son, she would take a son's share. And if a grandson and great-grandson divide, she would take a grandson's share (t).

§ 481. Secondly. "Partition, to entitle a mother to the share, must be made of ancestral property, or of property acquired by ancestral wealth. Therefore, if the property had been acquired by A, the father of B and C, and B and C come to a division of it, their mother (the widow of A) shall, but their grandmother shall not, take a share of it. And if the estate shall have been acquired by B and C themselves, neither their mother nor grandmother will be entitled to a share upon partition" (u).

§ 482. Where a partition takes place during the life of the father, the daughter has no right to any special apportionment. She continues under his protection till her marriage; he is bound to maintain her and to pay her marriage expenses, and the expenditure he is to incur is wholly at his discretion (v). But where the division takes place after the death of the father, the same texts which direct that the mother should receive a share equal to that of a son, direct that the daughter should receive a fourth share (w). It is evident, however, that there was much less need to set apart a permanent provision for a Great-grand mother.

Wife only shares in husband's property.

Rights of daughter.

Daughter.

(v) Rayee v. Puddam, 12 Suth., 409, affirmed on review, 13 Suth., 66; contra, Sibsoondery v. Bussomutty, 7 Cal., 193; Bhadri Roy v. Bhugwat, 8 Cal., 649; S. C., 11 C. L. R., 186. See Vyasa and Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 12, where the right of the grandmother to a share is expressly asserted; and so Jagannatha says, 3 Dig., 27.

(s) 3 Dig., 27; F. MacN., 28, 51, doubted by Dr. Wilson, Works, v., 25.

(t) F. MacN., 52; Purna Chandra v. Sarojini, 31 Cal., 1065.

(u) F. MacN., 51, 54; Isree Pershad v. Nasib Kooer, 10 Cal., 1017.

(v) Mitakshara, i., 7, § 14.

(w) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 124; see ante § 477. As to the mode of calculating the fourth, see Mitakshara, i., 7, § 5—10; 3 Dig., 93, 94; Smriti Chandrika, iv., § 34; Wilson, Works, v., 42.

daughter than for a widow. The expenses of her marriage, and her maintenance for the very few years that she could remain in her father's family, constituted the only charge that had to be met in respect of her. Hence it was very early considered that the mention of a definite fourth only meant that a sufficient amount must be allotted to each daughter to defray her nuptials. This view is combated by Vijnanesvara, who maintains that the letter of the law must be respected. The Smriti Chandrika, however, evidently inclined to the modern doctrine, as it states that the full fourth is only to be given where the estate is inconsiderable. And it is expressly asserted by the Madhaviya and the Bengal writers, and those of the Mithila school (x). The practice at present is in conformity with this opinion (y).

Where daughters take as joint-heirs, the effect of partition between them comes under the law of succession, and will be discussed hereafter (§ 559).

§ 483. A stranger cannot compel a partition, in the sense of compelling any or all of the members of a family to assume the status of divided members, with the legal consequences following upon that status. But he may acquire such rights over the property of any coparcener as to compel him to separate the whole or part of his interest in the joint property, and so sever the coparcenary in respect of it. This may be effected either by actual assignment, or by operation of law, as by insolvency, or upon a sale in execution of a decree (z). How far a member of an undivided family under Mitakshara law can,

Strangers.

(x) Mitakshara, i., 7, § 11; Smriti Chandrika, iv., § 18, 19; Madhaviya, § 25, where he misrepresents the opinion of Vijnanesvara; Daya Bhaga, iii., 2, § 39; D. K. S., vii., § 9, 10; Raghumandana, iii., 19, 20; 3 Dig., 90—94. The Viramitrodaya argues for the view adopted by the Mitakshara, but sets out the conflicting opinions, Viramit., p. 81, § 21. The Sarasvati Vilasa sets out both views, but states the modern doctrine, which is that of Apararka, last, though without offering any opinion of his own, § 119—133.

(y) F. MacN., 55, 98; 1 W. MacN., 50. Daughters have no right to claim a share of their mother's property during her life, in cases in which they would be her heirs; Mathura v. Esu, 4 Bom., 545.

(z) Per curiam, Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo, 6 M. L. A., 539; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114; Deendyal v. Jugdeep, 4 I. A., 247; S. C., 3 Cal., 198.

by his own voluntary act, transfer his rights in the joint property to a stranger, is a matter upon which there is much difference of opinion, and which has already been examined (a). But so far as the right of transfer is recognized it will be enforced, either by putting the purchaser in possession of an undivided interest, or by compelling the owner of the undivided interest to proceed to, or permit a partition, by means of which the hostile right can be satisfied (b).

Disqualified heirs.

Disqualification is personal.

§ 484. Persons who labour under any defect which disqualifies them from inheriting, are equally disentitled to a share on partition (c). But except in the case of degradation, which has now been practically abolished by Act XXI of 1850, (Freedom of religion) such incapacity is purely personal, and does not attach to their legitimate issue (d). Its effect is to let in the next heir, precisely as if the incapacitated person were then dead. But that heir must claim upon his own merits, and does not step into his father's place. For instance, suppose the dividing parties were C and F, and that E were incapacitated but alive, his son F would be entitled to claim half of the property. But if F was the incapacitated person, and D and E were

(a) Ante § 353, et seq.

(b) Anand v. Prankisto, 3 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 14; Rughoonath v. Luckhun, 18 Suth., 23; Muddun Gopal v. Mt. Gowrbutty, 21 Suth., 190; Lall Jha v. Shaikh Juma, 22 Suth., 116; Jhubboo v. Khoob Lall, ib., 294; Alamalu v. Rungasami, 7 Mad., 538; Janokinath v. Mothuranath, 9 Cal., 580; Rajani Kanth v. Ram Nath, 10 Cal., 244; Bepin Behari v. Lal Mohun, 12 Cal., 209; Ayyagari Venkataramayya v. Ramayya, 25 Mad., 690. See as to the process by which the partition may be carried out. Partition Act IV of 1893, s. 4. As to the position of the stranger after partition; Gurulingaya v. Nandapa, 21 Bom., 297. As to the persons in whose favour the section applies; Vaman Vishnu v. Vasudev, 23 Bom., 73.

(c) Mitakshara, ii., 10; V. May., iv., 11; Daya Bhaga, v.; D. K. S., iii. See post, chap. xix.; Ramsakye v. Lalla Laljee, 8 Cal., 149.

(d) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 9–11; Daya Bhaga, v., § 17–19. As to adopted sons, see ante § 110.

dead, G would have no claim, being beyond the limits of the coparcenary (e). On the other hand, such disqualification only operates if it arose before the division of the property. One already separated from his co-heirs is not deprived of his allotment (f). And if the defect be removed at a period subsequent to partition, the right to share arises in the same manner as, or upon the analogy of, a son born after partition (g). How this analogy is to be worked out is not so clear. If the removal of the defect is to be treated as a new birth at the time of such removal, then the principles previously laid down would apply (h). If the partition took place during the life of the father, and one of the sons were then incapable, he would take no share. But if his defect were afterwards removed, he would inherit his father's share. If, however, the partition took place after the father's death, and one of the brothers was excluded as being incapable, and was afterwards cured, his cure could only be treated as a new birth, so as to give him any practical rights, by the further fiction that he was in his mother's womb at the time of the partition. If this analogy could be applied, he would be entitled to have the division opened up again, and a new distribution made for his benefit. But that would be rather a violent fiction to introduce, in a case where the incapacity was removed, possibly many years after new rights had been created by the division, and acted upon. Suppose, however, that the incapable heir was never cured, but had a son who was capable of inheriting. If the son was actually born, or was in the womb, at the time of the partition, he would be entitled to a share, if sufficiently near of kin. But if he was neither born nor conceived at that time, he could not claim to have the partition re-opened. He could only claim to succeed as Result of its removal.

Removal of disability.

(e) 2 W. MacN., 42; Bodhnarain v. Omrao, 13 M. I. A., 519; S. C., 6 B. L. R., 509; per Peacock, C. J., Kalidas v. Krishan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 115; ante § 272.

(f) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 6; Sevachetumbara v. Parasucty, Mad. Dec. of 1857, 210.

(g) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 7; V. May., iv., 11, § 2.

(h) Ante § 472.

heir to the share taken by his grandfather; and if the partition took place between the brothers, he could claim nothing more than maintenance (i).

Effect of fraud.

§ 485. It has been suggested that a coparcener, otherwise entitled, may lose his right to a share if he has been guilty of defrauding his co-heirs. This view rests upon a text of Manu (k). "Any eldest brother who from avarice shall defraud his younger brother, shall forfeit his primogeniture, be deprived of his share, and pay a fine to the king." This text is explained by Kalluka Bhatta and Jagannatha as meaning, that the eldest brother by such fraudulent conduct forfeits his right to the special share to which in early times he was entitled by seniority (l). Yajnavalkya and Katyayana merely say, that property wrongly kept back by one of the co-sharers shall be divided equally among all the sharers when it is discovered (m). This excludes the idea that the fraudulent person is to forfeit his whole share, or even his share in the property so secreted. The Mitakshara discusses the act with reference only to the question of criminality. The author decides that the act is criminal, but does not assert that it is to be followed by forfeiture, and seems to assume that the only result will be that the partition will be opened up, and a fresh distribution made of the property wrongly withheld (n). The other commentators of the Benares school either follow the Mitakshara, or pass the point over without special notice (o). On the other hand, the Bengal writers are of opinion, that the act of one coparcener, in withholding part of the property which is common to all, is not technically theft, and is not to be punished by any forfeiture (p). The Madras Sudder

Fraud of coparcener.

(i) See this subject discussed by Peacock, C. J., Kalidas v. Krishan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 118—121, and in Krishna v. Sami, 9 Mad., 64. Of course all difficulty would be removed if the earlier doctrine were sustained which appears to allow a partition to be opened up at any distance of time in favour of an after-born son.

(k) ix., § 213.

(l) 2 Dig., 564.

(m) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 126; 3 Dig., 398.

(n) Mitakshara, i., 9. This chapter seems to have been differently understood by Sir Thomas and Mr. Strange, 1 Stra. H. L., 232; Stra. Man., § 273. Messrs. West and Bühler take the view stated in the text, W. & B., 679.

(o) Smriti Chandrika, xiv., § 4—6; Madhaviya, § 54; V. May., iv., 6, § 3; Viramitrodaya, p. 245, § 1, 2.

(p) Daya Bhaga, xiii., § 2, 8—15; D. K. S., viii.; 3 Dig., 397, 400.

Court in one case followed the literal meaning of the text of Manu, and held that it was a complete answer to a suit for partition by a brother, that he had committed a theft of part of the paternal property. In this decision they set aside the opinion of their senior pundit, who was of opinion that the embezzler of common property incurred no forfeiture thereby. The junior pundit had first stated generally, that the person who had embezzled part of the common property forfeited all claim to share in the estate. On giving in his written opinion, he modified this view by limiting the forfeiture to a prohibition of sharing in the portion actually embezzled. This opinion also the Court set aside, preferring that first given (q). The Court of the North-West Provinces has arrived at an exactly opposite conclusion, and has laid down that the wrongful appropriation by one brother of part of the joint estate, which the others might have recovered by an action at law, was no bar to a suit by him for partition (r). This certainly appears to me to be the sounder view.

§ 486. Any direction in a will prohibiting a partition, or postponing the period for partition, is invalid, as it forbids the exercise of a right which is essential to the full enjoyment of family property by Hindu law (s). On the other hand, an agreement between the members of a Hindu family not to come to a partition might be binding upon themselves. But unless the agreement also contained a condition against alienation, it would not prevent any of the parties to it from selling his share, and would be no bar to a suit by the vendee to compel a partition (t). Nor could such an agreement ever bind the descendants of the parties to it (u). In Bombay it has been held that it

(q) Canacamma v. Narasimma, Mad. Dec. of 1855, 118.

(r) Kalka v. Budree, 3 N.-W. P., 267. Jolly, Lect. 142.

(s) Nubkissen v. Hurris Chunder, F. MacN., 323; Mokoondo v. Gonesh, 1 Cal., 104; Jeebun v. Ramanath, 23 Suth., 297; Act IV of 1882, § 10, 11. (Transfer of Property.)

(t) Rhamdhone v. Anand, 2 Hyde, 97; Anand v. Frankisto, 3 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 14; Anath v. Mackintosh, 8 B. L. R., 60; Rajender v. Sham Chund, 6 Cal., 107.

(u) See Venkatramanna v. Bramanna, 4 Mad. H. C., 345.

would not even bind the parties themselves (v). The Calcutta Court seems in a recent case to have doubted the validity of an agreement to remain undivided in perpetuity, but to have thought that an agreement not to divide for a term of years would be binding if made for a sufficient consideration (w).

Lapse of time.

§ 487. As Hindu law contemplates union and not partition as the normal state of the family, it follows that lapse of time is never in itself a bar to a partition. But the Statute of Limitations will operate from the time that a plaintiff is excluded from his share, and that such exclusion becomes known to him (x).

Special shares formerly allowed.

§ 488. THIRD, THE MODE OF DIVISION.—The principle of Hindu law is equality of division, but this was formerly subject to many exceptions, which have almost, if not altogether, disappeared. One of these exceptions was in favour of the eldest son, who was originally entitled to a special share on partition, either a tenth or a twentieth in excess of the others, or some special chattel, or an extra portion of the flocks (y). Sir H. S. Maine suggests that this extra share was given as the reward, or the security, for impartial distribution; and refers to the fact that such extra privileges were sometimes awarded to younger sons (z), or to the father, as a proof that the right was unconnected with the rule of primogeniture (a). It seems to me probable that the double share which the father was allowed to retain for himself (b), was the inducement given to him to consent to a partition, at the time when his consent was indispensable (§ 244), and

Special shares

(v) Ramlinga v. Virupakshi, 7 Bom., 538.

(w) Srimohan v. MacGregor, 28 Cal., 769, p. 786.

(x) Thakur Durriao v. Thakur Davi, 1 I. A., 1; Kali v. Diununjoy, 3 Cal., 228; Act XV of 1877, Sched. ii., § 127.

(y) Apastamba, xiii., § 13; Baudhavana, ii., 2, § 2-5; Gautama, xxviii., § 11, 12; Vasishtha, xvii., § 23; Manu, ix., § 112, 114, 156; Narada, xiii., § 13; Devala, 2 Dig., 553; Vrihaspati, ib., 556; Harita, ib., 558; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 114; Viramit., p. 53, § 9.

(z) Gautama, xxviii., § 6, 7; Vasishtha, xvii., § 23; Manu, ix., § 112.

(a) Early Institutions, 197.

(b) Narada, xiii., § 12; Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 44; Katyayana, ib., 53; Sancha & Lichita, 2 Dig., 555.

perhaps also was intended to enable him to support the female members of the family, who would naturally remain under his care. Among the Hill tribes of Southern India, when a division takes place, the family house sometimes passes to the youngest, sometimes to the eldest, son; but invariably the son who takes the house takes with it the burthen of supporting the females of the family (c). The practice of allotting a larger share to the father would naturally survive, though to a lesser degree, in favour of the eldest son as head of the family. Under the law of the Mitakshara the practice of giving an extra share to the father is now said either to be a relic of a former age, or only to apply to a partition by the father of his own self-acquired property (d). As between brothers or other relations absolute equality is now the invariable rule in all the provinces (e), unless, perhaps, where some special family custom to the contrary is made out (f); and this rule equally applies whether the partition is made by the father, or after his death (g). now obsolete.

Other grounds of preference arose in regard to sons of different rank; that is to say, sons by mothers of different caste, or sons of the ten supplementary species. These shared in different proportions, or some absolutely to the exclusion of others (h). But these different sorts of sons are long since obsolete (§ 78, 89). The right of a person who has made acquisitions, in which he has been slightly

(c) Brecks, Primitive Tribes, 9, 39, 42, 68.

(d) Mitakshara, i., 6, § 7; Madhaviya, § 16; V. May., iv., 6, § 12, 13; Viramit., p. 65, § 13. In the time of Visvarupa the extra share was only granted by mutual assent, § 4. See Smriti Chandrika, ii., 1, § 23-32, 41, where it is said to be allowable on a partition made by an aged parent.

(e) Mitakshara, i., 2, § 6; i., 3, § 1-7; Smriti Chandrika, ii., 2, § 2; ii., 3, § 16-24; Madhaviya, § 9; V. May., iv., 6, § 8-11, 14, 17; Daya Bhaga, iii., 2, § 27; D. K. S., vii., § 12, 13; Viramit., p. 60, § 11, p. 70, § 14. The case of an adopted son, where natural-born sons afterwards come into existence, has been discussed, ante, § 168.

(f) Sheo Buksh v. Futteh, 2 S. D., 265 (340); 2 W. MacN., 16. As to agreements to divide in particular shares, see Ram Nirunjun v. Prayag, 5 Cal., 138.

(g) Bhyrochund v. Russomnee, 1 S. D., 28 (36); Noelkaunt v. Muneo, ib., 58 (77); Taliwar v. Puhlwand, 3 S. D., 301 (402); Lakshman v. Ramchandra, 1 Bom., 561. Under the Partition Act IV of 1893 it is open to the Court to direct a sale of the whole or a portion of the family property, instead of allotting it in shares.

(h) Mitakshara, i., 8, 11; Daya Bhaga, ix., § 12; D. K. S., vii., § 19; V. May., iv., 4, § 27.

assisted by the joint property, to reserve to himself a double share, has already been fully considered (§ 288).

Where property is self-acquired.

§ 489. Hitherto we have been considering the case of joint property, as to which partition was a matter of right and not of favour. There is greater uncertainty where the partition was of property which was divisible as a matter of favour and not of right. Under Mitakshara law this case could only arise where the father chose to divide his self-acquired property among his sons. It is quite clear that the father might give away this property to anyone he chose (§ 375), and it would seem to follow that he might distribute it among his family at his own pleasure. Vishnu says, "If a father make a partition with his sons, he does so in regard to his own self-acquired property by his own pleasure" (i). This, of course, may refer to his right of withholding such property absolutely from distribution. Other texts which seem to leave the father a discretion as to allowing larger or smaller shares to his sons, may refer to the practice of giving extra shares to an elder son, an acquirer or the like (k). The interpretation put upon these texts by the Hindu commentators was, that even in regard to self-acquired property, the right of the father to make an unequal distribution could only exist where there was either a legal reason, as in case of an elder son's share, or a moral reason, such as the necessitous state of one of the sons, and that it could never exist where the act emanated from mere partiality or vicious preference (l). The author of the Smriti Chandrika sums up his argument upon the point by saying, "It is hence settled that unequal distribution made by the father, even of his own self-acquired property, according to his whims, without regard to the restrictions contained in the shastras, is not maintainable, where sons are dissatisfied with such distribution" (m). In a Madras

(i) xvii., § 1.

(k) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 114, 116; Narada, xiii., § 15, 16.

(l) 3 Dig., 540, 541; Mitakshara, i., 2, § 6, 13, 14.

(m) Smriti Chandrika, ii., 1, § 17—24; Varadarajah, p. 8; 1 Str. H. L., 194; 2 W. MacN., 147, note.

case, where a man had made a division of his self-acquired property, giving about a tenth to his son, and the rest to his wife and daughter, the Sudder pundits said that such a disposition would be valid as regards the personalty, but not as regards the realty (n). In the Punjab it is held that a man may distribute his self-acquisitions at his own pleasure (o). If the rule is anything more than a moral precept, it must depend upon the distinction, which I will notice presently, between a partition, which may be effected by mere agreement, and a gift, which requires delivery of possession.

§ 490. In Bengal the peculiar doctrines of the Daya Bhaga leave a father practically at liberty to dispose of all his property, no matter of what sort, or how acquired, at his own free pleasure, in favour of anyone upon whom he chooses to bestow it. One would expect, therefore, to find that, when he chose to distribute it among his sons, he would be at liberty to do so to whatever extent, and in whatever proportions he liked. This, however, is by no means so. Jimuta Vahana draws the distinction between self-acquired and ancestral property, saying that in the former case the father may give his sons greater or lesser allotments at his pleasure, but in the latter case his discretion is limited. He cannot reserve more for himself than his double share (p). With regard to his sons, he is also under restrictions. If the partition is made at the request of his sons, he is bound to give each an equal share, the legal deduction in favour of the eldest being alone allowed (q). If, however, he makes the partition of his own accord, he may make a partial or a total division. The former seems not to come under the rules which govern a legal division. The father appears still to remain the head of the family, and to retain a certain control over the whole property, but allots small portions

By father in Bengal.

(n) Meenatchee v. Chetumbra, Mad. Dec. of 1853, 61.

(o) Punjab Cust., 35.

(p) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 15—20, 35, 47, 56, 73; D. K. S., vi., § 16; Raghunandana, ii., 2—6, 26—29.

(q) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 86.

of it to his sons, retaining the right to take these portions back, if he becomes indigent (r). Where, however, the partition is a total one, the same distinction exists between his right over the ancestral and self-acquired property. As regards the former, the distribution must be equal or uniform, in the sense of not being arbitrary; that is, any inequality in the shares of the sons must be an inequality prescribed, or at least permitted, by the law, as arising from the superior age or merit of the son whom he prefers (s). But as regards the self-acquired property, he may make a distribution according to his own free will, though even in this case the preference must arise from motives recognized by the law, on account of the good qualities or piety of the one who is preferred, or his incapacity, numerous family, or the like (t). Whether such reasons are sufficient to authorize an unequal distribution of ancestral property also does not seem clear. In commenting on the text of Narada (xiii., 4), the father, "being advanced in years, may himself separate his sons, either dismissing the eldest with the best share, or in any manner as his inclination may prompt." Jimuta Vahana says that this last clause means something different from the giving of an extra share to the first-born, but that the discretion so allowed is again restrained by the subsequent text (xiii., 16), which forbids a distribution made under improper influences, or contrary to the directions of law (u). If these passages apply also to ancestral property, the result would be that the power of distribution, both of ancestral and self-acquired property, would stand on the same footing. The father might divide either sort unequally, if he could find any justifying pretext in the superior qualities, or greater necessities, of the son whom he preferred. The Daya-krahma-sangraha, however, limits the right of making an unequal distribution among sons, in consequence of (r) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 57; 2 W. MacN., 148; D. K. S., vi., § 8.

(s) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 50, 76, 79. See as to extra shares, ib., § 37, 42, 74.

(t) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 74, 76, 82; Raghuandana, ii., 4.

(u) Daya Bhaga, ii., § 81—85.

their superior qualifications or greater necessities, to the case of self-acquired property, or ancestral movable property, such as gems, pearls, corals, gold, and other effects (v). As regards ancestral landed property, the only inequality it appears to sanction is the special share for the elder son (w). In the case of a man's own self-acquired property, he may allot it as he chooses, subject as before to the necessity of showing some proper ground of preference, and an absence of improper motive (x).

§ 491. It is, of course, obvious that where a father is allowed to prefer one son to another on the ground of superior piety or moral qualifications, and is himself constituted as the sole judge of such qualifications, it is merely another way of saying that he may distribute the property as he chooses. A little hypocrisy is all that is needed in order to convert illegality into legality (y). But even as regards ancestral immovable property, the Bengal pundits appear in two cases to have taken the view which is suggested by Jimuta Vahana, rather than that which is expressed by the Daya-krahma-sangraha, and to lay it down that grounds of personal preference, actually existing, will justify a father in preferring one son over another (z). The only question that arises is, whether the pundits in the two last cases were not speaking of a gift, and not of a partition. I think they were. I have already quoted the series of decisions in Bengal which practically affirm the right of a father to do what he wishes with his property. They seem in complete conflict with the opinions of the pundits in the case of Bhowanny Churn v.

(v) D. K. S., vi., § 13, 18—20; acc. Jagannatha, 3 Dig., 39, 42, and pundits in Bhowanny Churn v. Ramkaunt, 2 S. D., 202 (259); 2 W. MacN., 2, 16.

(w) D. K. S., vi., § 21.

(x) D. K. S., vi., § 8—15. See F. MacN., 242—268. In the Punjab a father appears to have the right to divide the family property among his sons in any proportions which seem fit to him, but if the division is thoroughly unequal, a fresh apportionment will be made after his death. Punjab Customary Law, II, 168, 171, 180, 222, 261.

(y) See the opinions of pundits quoted, F. MacN., 260; 3 Dig., 1.

(z) F. MacN., 260, 265.

Ramkaunt (a). Now it will be observed that throughout the opinions of the pundits in the latter case, they directed their attention exclusively to the law of partition, and only cited texts bearing upon that law. In the opinions cited in the other cases, and referred to in the remarks on Bhowanny Churn's case, they directed their attention as exclusively to the law of gifts, and only cited texts showing the power of an owner of property to dispose of it during his lifetime. The fact is, the two sets of texts are quite irreconcilable. They mark different periods of law. The former are a survival from the time when the power of a father over property was as restricted in Bengal as it is now in the provinces governed by the Mitakshara. These texts probably remained unexplained away, because unequal distributions of a man's whole property continued to be unusual. The texts which forbid alienations of particular portions of it were explained away, because such alienations became common. Jagannatha tries to reconcile the two principles which allow a gift to one in preference to another, but forbid a distribution which gives more to one than another (b). His reasoning, so far as I am able to follow it, appears to be that, where a father proceeds to a partition with his sons, he divests himself of his property, with a view to its vesting again in those who are entitled to share it by virtue of their affinity to him. That being so, it can only vest in such persons, and in such proportions, as the law of partition directs. But when he divests himself of his property in order to make a gift, he immediately vests it again in the person, be it a stranger or otherwise, to whom he delivers the possession. The transaction is valid if it conforms to the law of gifts. Now this is really all that was decided by the case of Bhowanny Churn v. Ramkaunt. The pundits were unanimous that as a partition the transaction was bad. In this

Bhowanny Churn's case.

(a) 2 S. D., 202 (259); ante § 372. See this case discussed by Sir F. MacN., p. 283; per curiam, Lakshmy v. Narasimha, 3 Mad. H. C., 42, 48; Wilson's Works, v., 76, 88.
(b) 3 Dig., 5, 47.

they were apparently right. They differed as to whether it would have been invalid for want of possession, if, as a partition, it had been legal. As to this it may now be taken that their doubts were unfounded, and that actual possession is not necessary in order to make a partition final and binding (§ 495). The Judges of the Sudder Court accepted their finding that the distribution was illegal. If so, it could only take effect as a series of gifts. But viewed in this light it was inoperative, because there had been no delivery of possession (§ 378). The result Result of cases. would be, that a father under Mitakshara law, in dealing with his self-acquired property, or any other property in which his sons take no interest by birth, and a father under Bengal law in dealing with any property, may distribute it as he likes. If he conforms to the rules of partition, the transaction will be valid by mutual agreement, without actual apportionment followed by possession; but if he does not conform to those rules, then he must deliver the share to each of the sharers, so as to make a valid gift to each.

§ 492. A partition may be partial either as regards the Where only some divide. persons making it, or the property divided. Any one coparcener may separate from the others, but no coparcener, except perhaps the father, can compel the others to become separate among themselves. A father may separate from all or from some of his sons, remaining joint with the other sons, or leaving them to continue a joint family with each other (c). It was stated in two Bengal cases, that where one brother separates from the others, and these continue to live as a joint family, it must be presumed that there has been a complete separation of all the brothers, but that those who continue joint have re-united (d). But that seems to be merely a question of fact. If nothing appeared but that one brother had taken his share, and left the family, while the other brothers continued exactly as before, it has been held that the proper presumption would be, that there never had been any severance in their interests (e). The Judicial Committee, however, held in a later case (1903) that the mere fact of the express separation of one coparcener from the family was followed by no presumption as to the condition of the other members. "An agreement among the remaining members of a joint family to remain united or to re-unite must be proved like any other fact." The subsequent conduct of the remaining members in regard to each other would of course be important evidence as bearing on such an agreement (f). It has been suggested by Messrs. West and Bühler that one Bombay decision (of which they disapprove) lays down that a grandfather can, by his will, enforce a state of division among his grandsons. The case referred to appears to me only to decide, that property may be devised in such a way that the persons to whom it is bequeathed, if they take it under the will, will take it in severalty and not as joint tenants (g). Such a state of things would be quite consistent with their remaining undivided in other respects. Whether a grandfather could so bequeath property would depend upon the nature of his interest in it. If it was his own exclusive property, of course, he could devise it on any terms he liked. But if it was ancestral property, which would by law descend to his grandsons as coparceners, I doubt whether he could by his will compel them to accept it with the incidents of separate property. The death which severed his interest, would also, as I imagine, terminate his power over the property (§ 417). A different case recently occurred in Madras. A father with three sons by one wife, and two sons by another, executed a document in his last illness, directing the property to be divided into three-fifths, (e) Upendra Narrain v. Gopeenath, 9 Cal., 817; per Bhashyam Ayyangar, J. Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu, 25 Mad., p. 156.

(c) Mitakshara. i., 2, § 2; W. & B., 665.

(d) Judub Chunder v. Benodbeharry, 1 Hyde, 214; Petambur v. Hurish Chunder, 15 Suth., 200; Kesabram v. Nand Kishore, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 7; S. C., 11 Suth., 308.

(f) Balabax v. Rukhmabai, 30 I. A., 130, p. 136; S. C., 30 Cal., 725, p. 736.

(g) W. & B., 195, 666; Lakshmi Bai v. Ganpat Moroba, 4 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 150; S. C., on appeal, 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 128.

Division directed.

and two-fifths shares, with a small reservation for himself. The Court found that the document was intended to operate from its date as an actual severance, first, of the interest of his sons by one wife from that of his sons by another; secondly, of the interest of all his sons from his own during his life. Neither his eldest son, who was of age, nor the guardian of his infant sons, were parties to the suit. It was held by the Court that the transaction was a partition which altered the status of the sons though without their consent, by virtue of the special authority of the father. Muthusawmy Aiyar, J., upon a review of the native authorities, said, "According to the Hindu law it is competent to a father to make a partition during his life, and the partition so made by him binds his sons, not because the sons are consenting parties to the arrangement, but because it is the result of a power conferred on him, though subject to certain restrictions imposed in the interest of the family. In cases like this the question is not whether such partition is a contract, like a partition made among brothers after their father's decease, but whether it is a legal transaction, concluded in conformity to the Hindu law" (h).

Even where the division is only between certain members of the family, it is necessary, unless in such a case as that just cited, that all the members should be parties to it, as the interests of all are necessarily affected by the separation of any. And if the partition is effected by decree of Court, all the members must be brought before the Court either as plaintiffs or defendants (i). Where portions of the property are in the hands of strangers, such as purchasers or mortgagees, whose claims are disputed or redeemable, they also are proper and necessary parties to the suit (k).

§ 493. Every suit for a partition should embrace all

(h) Kandasani v. Doraisami, 2 Mad., 317, 321.

(i) Narasimha v. Ramchendra, 1 Mad. Dec., 52; Pahaladh v. Mt. Luchmunbutty, 12 Suth., 256.

(k) Sadu v. Ram, 16 Bom., 608.

All must be parties to suit.

Partition should be complete.

the joint family property (l), unless different portions of it lie in different jurisdictions, in which case suits may be brought in the different Courts to which the property is subject (m); or unless some portion of it is at the time incapable of partition as for instance from being in the possession of a mortgagee (n); or is from its nature impartible, as a Zemindary governed by the law of primogeniture (o), or is held jointly with strangers to the family, who have no interest in the family partition and therefore cannot be made parties to the general suit for partition (p). And if a member sues for partition of property in the hands of the defendant, he must bring into hotchpot any undivided property held by himself, even though it is out of the jurisdiction of the Court, and thus make a complete and final partition (q). Where, however, part of the property is out of India it has been laid down that the Court need not require it to be brought into account (r). If it were land, it is obvious, that it would have to be dealt with under a system of law which would be more properly administered by the Courts within whose jurisdiction it is situated. Hence, where there has been a partition at all, the presumption is that it was a complete one, and that it embraced the whole of the family property. Therefore, if property is afterwards found in the exclusive possession of one member of the Partition presumed to be complete;

(l) Manu, ix., § 47; Dadjee v. Wittal, Bom., Sel. Rep., 151; Dasari v. Dasari, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 86; Ruttun Monee v. Brojo Mohan, 22 Suth., 333; Nanabhai v. Nathabhai, 7 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 46; per curiam, Narayan v. Nana Manohar, ib., 178, affirming 2 W. & B., Introd., 17, 2nd ed.; Trimbak v. Narayan, 11 Bom. H. C., 71; Shivmurtappa v. Virappa, 24 Bom., 128. See per Phear, J., Padmanani v. Jagadamba, 6 B. L. R., 140, sed qy.? Haridas v. Pran Nath, 12 Cal., 566; Jogendra Nath v. Jugobundhu, 14 Cal., 122.

(m) Lutchmana Row v. Terimul Row, 4 Mad. Jur., 241; Subba Rau v. Rama Rau, 3 Mad. H. C., 376; Jairam v. Atmaram, 4 Bom., 482; Punchawan Mullick v. Sib Chunder, 14 Cal., 835; Balaram v. Ramchandra, 22 Bom., 922; Abdul Karim v. Badruddeen, 28 Mad., 216.

(n) Pattaravy v. Audimula, 5 Mad. H. C., 419; Narayan v. Pandurang, 12 Bom. H. C., 148; Kristayya v. Narasimhan, 23 Mad., 605.

(o) Parvati Tirumalai, 10 Mad., 334; Mallikarjuna v. Durga Prasad, 1 Mad., 362; 27 I. A., 151; S. C., 24 Mad., 147.

(p) Purushottam v. Atmaram, 23 Bom., 597.

(q) Ram Lochun v. Rughoobur, 15 Suth., 111; Lalljeet v. Rajcoomar, 25 Suth., 353; Hari Narayan v. Ganpatrao, 7 Bom., 272; per curiam, 22 Bom., p. 928.

(r) Ramacharya v. Anantacharya 18 Bom., 389.

family, and it is alleged that such property is still undivided and divisible, the proof of such an allegation rests upon the party making it (s). But there may be a partial division, of such a nature that the coparcenary ceases as to some of the property, and continues as to the rest (t). Where such a state of things exists, the rights of inheritance, alienation, etc., differ, according as the property in question belongs to the members in their divided, or in their undivided, capacity (u); or, there may be such a partition as amounts to an absolute severance of the coparcenary between the members, although the whole or part of the property is for convenience, or other reasons, left still unapportioned, and in joint enjoyment. In that case, the interest of each member is divided, though the property is undivided. That interest, therefore, will descend, and may be dealt with, as separate property (v). Or, lastly, there may be a partition and distribution which is intended to be final, but some part of the family property may have been overlooked, or fraudulently kept out of sight. In such a case, when the property is discovered, it will be the subject of a fresh distribution, being divided among the persons who were parties to the original partition, or their representatives; that is, among the persons to whom each portion would have descended as separate property (w). But the former distribution will not be opened up again (x). Conversely, where through a mistake as to, or ignorance of the title, property has been

(s) Narayan v. Nana Manohar, 7 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 153.

(t) Acc. Kandasami v. Doraisami, 2 Mad., 324; per curiam, 4 M. I. A., 168. The High Court of Bengal seems to think that a partial division may be effected by arrangement, but not by suit. Radha Churn v. Kripa, 5 Cal., 474; Muthusami v. Nallakulantha, 18 Mad., 418; Gavri Shankar v. Atmaram, 18 Bom., 611.

(u) Patni Mal v. Ray Manohar, 5 S. D., 349 (410); Maccundas v. Ganpatrao, Perry's O. C., 143; W. & B., 344, 345, 702; F. MacN., 46; 2 Stru. H. L., 387 1 W. MacN., 53.

(v) Appovier v. Rama Subbaian, 11 M. I. A., 75; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 1; Rewun Persad v. Radha Beeby, 4 M. I. A., 137, 168; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 35; Narayan v. Lakshmi Ammal, 3 Mad. H. C., 289; Devaraja Urs v. Devaraja, 7 Mysore, 23.

(w) Manu, ix., § 218; Mitakshara, i., 9, § 1—3; Daya Bhaga, xiii., § 1—3; V. May., iv., 6, § 3; Lachman v. Sanwal, 1 All., 543; ante § 444. See as to enlargement of share, where a coparcener dies after decree and pending appeal. Sakharam v. Hari Krishna, 6 Bom., 113.

(x) Daya Bhaga, xiii., § 6; 3 Dig., 400.

handed over to one member for his share, which afterwards turns out to belong to a stranger, or to be charged for his benefit, the person who has received such property will be entitled to compensation out of the shares of the others (y). Where, however, the whole scheme of distribution is fraudulent, and especially where it is in fraud of a minor, it will be absolutely set aside, unless the person injured has acquiesced in it, after full knowledge that it was made in violation of his rights (z).

Case of fraud.

Suit for partition by or against a stranger.

§ 494. Where a stranger to the family acquires a title to a portion of the family property, by purchase or under an execution, he is entitled to be placed in possession jointly with the other members. If he is not satisfied with joint possession, and desires the exclusive possession of a particular portion of the property, his remedy is by suit to compel his vendor to come to a partition, and so give him an absolute title. But he cannot demand a partition merely as to the portion over which he has a claim. The vendor must have a complete and final partition, so that all the family accounts may be taken against him, and all the other members of the family must be made parties to the suit (§ 355). Where the land to be partitioned is in possession of a tenant the shares may be allotted subject to the tenancy under Civ. P. C., s. 264 (a). Where the suit for partition is brought by other members of the family, in order to get rid of the joint possession of the stranger, it has been held by the Madras High Court that the suit may be limited to their share in the particular parcel of family property which had been sold (b). On the other hand the Calcutta High Court has ruled that in this case, as in all others, the suit must be one for a complete

(y) Maruti v. Rama, 21 Bom., 333; Lakshman v. Gopal, 23 Bom., 385.
 (z) Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 399; Manu, ix., § 47; Daya Bhaga, xiii., § 5; Mad. Dec. of 1859, 84; Moro Vishwanath v. Ganesh, 10 Bom. H. C., 444.
 (a) Uppala Raghava v. U. Ramanuja, 26 Mad., 78.
 (b) Ohinna Sannyasi v. Surya, 5 Mad., 196; Subramanya v. Pudmanabha, 19 Mad., 267. In an earlier case the same Court had held that the proper remedy was for the objecting members to sue for ejectment, joining as defendants any other members under whom the stranger claimed title; Venkayya v. Lakshmayya, 16 Mad., 98.

partition, and that this is not a mere technical objection, because on partition of the whole of the joint family property, the whole land so alienated by a single member might fall entirely to the share of the alienor (c). Where the dispute is wholly between strangers to the family, each of whom claims against the other an interest in the family property, they can sue to obtain possession of their own interests without claiming a general partition (d). Where the suit is by one member of the family to assert his right to joint possession against the wrongful acts of other members, no suit for a partition is necessary. He has a right to remain, and to enjoy the rights appropriate to, a coparcener (e).

§ 495. FOURTH.—As to what constitutes a partition, it is undisputed that it may be effected without any instrument in writing (f). Numerous circumstances are set out by the native writers as being more or less conclusive of a partition having taken place, such as separate food, dwelling, or worship; separate enjoyment of the property; separate income and expenditure; business transactions with each other, and the like (g). But all these circumstances are merely evidence, and not conclusive evidence, of the fact of partition. Partition is a new status, which can only arise where persons, who have hitherto lived in coparcenary, intend that their condition as coparceners shall cease. It is not sufficient that they should alter the mode of holding their property. They must alter, and intend to alter, their title to it. They must cease to become joint owners, and become separate owners (h).

How effected.

Intention essential.

(c) Koer Hasmat v. Sunder Das, 11 Cal., 396.
 (d) Subbarazu v. Venkataratnam, 15 Mad., 234.
 (e) Ramchandra Kashi v. Damodhar, 20 Bom., 467.
 (f) Per curiam, Rewan Persad v. Radha Beeby, 4 M. I. A., 168; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 35. See as to unregistered deeds of partition in Madras, Act II of 1884.
 (g) Narada, xiii., § 36—43; Mitakshara, ii., 12; Daya Bhaga, xiv., 3 Dig., 407—429; 2 W. MacN., 170, n. See Hurish Chunder v. Makhoda, 17 Suth., 564; Murari Vithoji v. Mukuud Shivaji, 15 Bom., 201; Ram Lall v. Debi Dat, 10 All., 490.

As to the effect of separate performance of religious rites, see Goldstücker, Administration of Hindu law, 53.

(h) Mere petitions or declarations of intention are not sufficient. Mookta

And as, on the one hand, the mere cesser of commonsality and joint worship, the existence of separate transactions (i), the division of income (k), or the holding of land in separate portions (l), do not establish partition, unless such a condition was adopted with a view to partition (m); so, on the other hand, if the members of the family have once agreed to become separate in title, it is not necessary that they should proceed to a physical separation of the particular pieces of their property. "If there be a conversion of the joint tenancy of an undivided family into a tenancy in common of the members of that undivided family, the undivided family becomes a divided family with reference to the property that is the subject of that agreement, and that is a separation in interest and in right, although not immediately followed by a defacto actual division of the subject-matter. This may, at any time, be claimed by virtue of the separate right" (n). And in provinces governed by the Mitakshara, if a brother so divided should die before actual separation of the property, his widow would succeed to his share (o). On the same principle a decree for a partition dissolves the joint tenure from its date; and it does so equally, although the suit was not in terms a suit for partition, provided the relief given is inconsistent with the continuance of the Keshee v. Oomabutty, 14 Suth., 31; S. C., 8 B. L. R., 396, note. Some overt act is necessary, per Bhashyam Ayyangar, 25 Mad., p. 156.

(i) Rezun Persad v. Radda Beeby, 4 M. I. A., 165; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 35; Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder, 12 M. I. A., 540; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 13; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 21; Anundee v. Khedoo, 14 M. I. A., 412; S. C., 18 Suth., 69; Chowdhry Ganesh v. Mt. Jewach, 31 I. A., 10; S. C., 31 Cal., 262; Chhabila v. Jadavbai, 3 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 87; Narraina v. Veeravaghava, Mad. Dec. of 1855, 230; Garikapati v. Sudam, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 101; Kristnappa v. Ramasawmy, 8 Mad. H. C., 25.

(k) Sonatun Bysack v. Juggutsoondree, 8 M. I. A., 66.

(l) Runjeet v. Kooer, 1 I. A., 9; Ambika v. Sukhmani, 1 All., 437; Viravara Thodrammal v. F. T. Surya Narayana, 24 I. A., 118; S. C., 20 Mad., 256; Gajendar v. Sardar Singh, 18 All., 176.

(m) Ram Kissen v. Sheomundun (P. C.), 23 Suth., 412.

(n) Appovier v. Rama Subbaiyan, 11 M. I. A., 75; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 1; Suraveni v. Suraveni, 13 M. I. A., 113; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 40; Doorga Pershad v. Mt. Kundun, 1 I. A., 55; S. C., 13 B. L. R., 235; S. C., 21 Suth., 214; Balkishen v. Ram Narain, 30 I. A., 139; S. C., 30 Cal., 738; Babaji v. Kashiba, 4 Bom., 157; Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb, 9 Bom., 111; Tej Protap v. Champakalle, 12 Cal., 96; Adi Deo v. Dukharan, 5 All., 532; Anant Balacharya v. Damodhar Makund, 13 Bom., 25.

(o) Gajapathi v. Gajapathi, 13 M. I. A., 497; S. C., 6 B. L. R., 202; 14 Suth. (P. C.), 33.

Apportionment unnecessary.

joint interest (p). An award, which is equivalent to a final judgment, has the same effect (q). And any arrangement by which one member of the family abandons his rights to a share amounts to a partition in respect to the property so abandoned, even though he takes no specific portion in its place (r).

§ 496. REUNION among coparceners, though provided for by the text-books, is of very rare occurrence. Sir F. MacNaghten states that the Pundits of the Supreme Court of Bengal told him that no instance of the sort had ever fallen within their knowledge, nor had he himself ever met with a case (s). It is obvious that the same reasons which make partitions more frequent will tend to remove all motives for reunion.

The leading text on this subject is that of Vrihaspati. "He who being once separated dwells again through affection with his father, brother, or paternal uncle, is termed reunited." This text is interpreted literally by the Mitakshara, and the authorities of Southern India and Bengal, as excluding reunion with other relations, such as a nephew, cousin, or the like (t). The writers of the Mithila school, take these words, not as importing a limitation, but as offering an example. Vachespasi says, "The first principle of reunion is the common consent of both the parties; and it may either be with the coheirs or with a stranger after the partition of wealth" (u). The

(p) Joy Narain v. Grish Chunder, 5 I. A., 228; S. C., 4 Cal., 434; Mudrit Narayan v. Runglal, 29 Cal., 797; Chidambaram v. Gouri, 6 I. A., 177; S. C., 2 Mad., 83; Lakshman v. Narayan, 24 Bom., 152; Ram Pershad v. Lakkpati, 30 I. A., 1; S. C., 30 Cal., 231; Subbaraya v. Manika, 19 Mad., 345. The Bombay High Court holds that a decree for partition does not operate as a severance so long as it remains under appeal. Sakharam v. Hari Krishna, 6 Bom., 113. As to when a decree becomes complete, see Jotindra v. Bejoy, 32 Cal., 483.

(q) Krishna Panda v. Balaram, 19 Mad., 290; Subbaraya v. Sadasiva, 20 Mad., 490.

(r) Balkrishna v. Savitribai, 3 Bom., 54; Periasami v. Periasami, 5 I. A., 61; S. C., 1 Mad., 312; but see Appa Pillay v. Runga Pillay, 6 Mad., 71, where a renunciation by one member of all his interests in the family property was held not to be a partition, and to be invalid as a contract.

(s) F. MacN., 107.

(t) Mitakshara, ii., 9, § 3; Smriti Chandrika, xii., § 1; Daya Bhaga, xii., § 3, 4; D. K. S., v., § 4. See 30 I. A., p. 150; S. C., 30 Cal., p. 753.

(u) Vivada Chintamani, 301; D. K. S., v., § 5.

Mayukha agrees with him so far as to hold that other persons besides those named by Vrihaspati may reunite ; for instance, " a wife, a paternal grandfather, a brother's grandson, a paternal uncle's son, and the rest also." But it restricts the reunion to the persons who made the first partition (v). This view is followed in Bombay, where it has been held " that the meaning of the passage of Vrihaspati which is the foundation of the law, is, that the reunion must be made by the parties, or some of them, who made the separation. If any of their descendants think fit to unite, they may do so ; but such a union is not a reunion in the sense of the Hindu law, and does not affect the inheritance " (w). No such limitation is to be found in any of the other early writers, who only mention reunion with reference to the law of inheritance. Dr. Mayr looks upon it as an innovation which grew out of a feeling that it was unjust that a man, by reunion with distant relations, should disappoint the claims of those who would otherwise have succeeded to him in the event of his dying without issue (x).

Evidence.

§ 497. As the presumption is in favour of union until a partition is made out, so after a partition the presumption would be against a reunion. To establish it, it is necessary to show, not only that the parties already divided lived or traded together, but that they did so with the intention of thereby altering their status, and of forming a joint estate will all its usual incidents (y). The circumstance that one of the dividing parties, being a minor, continued to live on in apparent union with his father, would not be conclusive, or I should imagine, even prima facie evidence of a reunion (z). Where after a partition between four brothers,

(v) V. Mayr., iv., 9, § 1.

(w) Vishwanath v. Krishnaji, 3 Bom. H. C., (A. C. J.), 69; Lakshmi Bai v. Ganpat Moroba, 4 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 166.

(x) Mayr, 130.

(y) 3 Dig., 512; Smriti Chandrika, xii., § 2; Prankishen v. Mothooramohun, 10 M. I. A., 403; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 11; Gopal v. Kenaram, 7 Suth., 35; Ram Hurree v. Trihee Ram, 7 B. L. R., 336; S. C., 15 Suth., 442.

(z) Kuta Bully v. Kuta Chudappa, 2 Mad. H. C., 235.

three agreed that their shares should be kept joint, and that the eldest should manage the estate, but with incidents unsuited to an ordinary coparcenary, it was held that no reunion was effected and that the senior managed as a trustee, and not as the managing member of a joint family (a).

The effect of a reunion is simply to replace the re-uniting ^{Its effect.} coparceners in the same position as they would have been in if no partition had taken place. But with regard to rights of inheritance, there seems to be some distinction between coparceners in a state of original union, and of reunion. These will be discussed hereafter (§ 586).

(a) Satrucherla Ramabhadra v. S. Virabhadra, 26 I. A., 167; S. C., 22 Mad., 470.

CHAPTER XVI.

INHERITANCE.

Principles of Succession in Case of Males.

Inheritance
assumes separate
property.

§ 498. WE have now reached that point in the development of Hindu law in which Inheritance, properly so called, becomes possible. So long as the joint family continued in its original purity, its property passed into the hands of successive owners, but no recipient was in any sense the heir of the previous possessor (§ 270). The Bengal law made considerable inroads upon this system by allowing the share of each member to pass to his own direct heirs or assignees, and in this manner even to pass out of the family (a). But the rule of survivorship still governed the devolution of the share where a coparcener left no near heirs, and determined its amount. When, however, property came to belong exclusively to its possessor, either as being his own self-acquisition, or in consequence of his having separated himself from all his coparceners, or having become the last of the coparcenary, then it passed to his heir properly so-called. It must always be remembered, that the law of Inheritance applies exclusively to property which was held in absolute severalty by its last male owner. His heir is the person who is entitled to the property, whether he takes it at once, or after the interposition of another estate. If the next heir to the property of a male is himself a male, then he becomes the head of the family, and holds the property either in severalty or in coparcenary (§ 268) as the case may be. At his death the devolution of the property is traced from him. But if the property of a male descends to a female, she does not, except in Bombay, become a fresh stock of descent. At her death it passes not to her heirs, but to the heirs of the last male holder. And if that heir is also a female, at her death, it reverts again to the heir of the same male, until it ultimately falls upon a male who can himself become the starting point for a fresh line of inheritance (b).

(a) Ante § 474, 479.

§ 499. The right of succession under Hindu law is a right which vests immediately on the death of the owner of the property (c). It cannot under any circumstances remain in abeyance in expectation of the birth of a preferable heir, not conceived at the time of the owner's death. A child who is in the mother's womb at the time of the death is, in contemplation of law, actually existing, and will, on his birth, divest the estate of any person with a title inferior to his own, who has taken in the meantime (d). So, under certain circumstances, will a son who is adopted after the death (e). But in no other case will an estate be divested by the subsequent birth of a person who would have been a preferable heir if he had been alive at the time of the death (f). And the rightful heir is the person who is himself the next-of-kin at that time. No one can claim through or under any other person who has not himself taken. Nor is he disentitled because his ancestor could not have claimed. For instance, under certain circumstances a daughter's son would be heir, and would transmit the whole estate to his issue. But if he died before his grandfather, his son would never take. So, again, a sister's son

(b) See this subject discussed, post § 609, et seq.

(c) Retirement into a religious life, when absolute, amounts to civil death; 1 Str. H. L., 185; 2 Dig., 525; V. Darp., 10. As to the presumption that death has taken place, see Act I of 1872, § 107, 108 [Evidence].

(d) Per curiam, Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., 397; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; Lakhi v. Bhairab, 5 S. D., 315 (369); Berogah v. Nubokissen, Sev., 238.

(e) Ante § 184—191.

(f) Aulim v. Bejai, 6 S. D., 224 (278); Kesub v. Bishnopersaud, S. D. of 1860, ii., 340; Bamasoondury v. Anund, 1 Suth., 353; Kalidas v. Krishan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 103; Gordandas v. Bai Ramcoover, 26 Bom., p. 467. These cases must be taken, as overruling others which will be found at 2 W. MacN., 84, 98; Mt. Solukhna v. Ramdolal, 1 S. D., 324 (434); Pran Nath v. Rajah Govind, 5 S. D., 46 (50); Sumbochunder v. Gunga, 6 S. D., 234 (291), and note. See, however, Krishna v. Sami, 9 Mad., 64, post § 599.

will inherit in certain events, though his mother would not inherit. And the son of a leper or a lunatic, or of a son who has been disinherited for some lawful cause, will inherit, though his father could not (g).

Principle of religious efficacy.

§ 500. The principle upon which one person succeeds to another is generally stated to depend on his capacity for benefiting that person by the offering of funeral oblations. As the Judicial Committee remarked in one case: "There is in the Hindu law so close a connection between their religion and their succession to property that the preferable right to perform the shraddh is commonly viewed as governing also the preferable right to succession of property; and, as a general rule, they would be expected to be found in union" (h). I have already (§ 9) suggested that this principle, while universally true in Bengal, is by no means such an infallible guide elsewhere. The question is not only most interesting as a matter of history, but most important as determining practical rights. I shall, therefore, proceed to examine the principles which determine the order of succession both under the Daya Bhaga and the Mitakshara. In this enquiry I shall reverse the usual order, and examine first the modern, or Bengal, system (i). When we have seen what is the logical result of the doctrine of religious efficacy, it will be easier to ascertain how far that doctrine can be applicable under a system where no such results are admitted.

§ 501. A Hindu may present three distinct sorts of

(g) See per Holloway, J., Chelikani v. Suraneni, 6 Mad. H. C., 287, 288; Balkrishna v. Savitribai, 3 Bom., 54, and post § 533, 564, 575, 599.

(h) Soorendronath v. Mt. Heeramonee, 12 M. I. A., 96; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 26; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 35; see too per curiam, Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shiwagunga, 9 M. I. A., 610; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder, 12 M. I. A., 541; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 13; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 21; Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R., 394; S. C., 18 Suth., 359.

(i) The whole doctrine of religious efficacy has been most elaborately discussed, especially by the late Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter, in some decisions of the Bengal High Court, to which I shall frequently refer. Amrita v. Lakhinarayan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 28; S. C., Sub nomine, Omrit v. Luckhee Narain, 10 Suth. (F. B.), 76; Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 15; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49; Gobind v. Mohesh, 15 B. L. R., 35; S. C., 23 Suth., 117; see also V. N. Mandlik, Introduction, xxxvi., and p. 345. A very full account of the whole system of Shraddhs will be found in Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari's Lectures, pp. 73—123.

Funeral offerings.

offering to his deceased ancestors; either the entire funeral cake, which is called an undivided oblation, or the fragments of that cake which remain on his hands, and are wiped off it, which is called a divided oblation, or a mere libation of water. The entire cake is offered to the three immediate paternal ancestors, i.e., father, grandfather, and great-grandfather. The wipings, or lepa, are offered to the three paternal ancestors next above those who receive the cake, i.e., the persons who stand to him in the fourth, fifth, and sixth degree of remoteness. The libations of water are offered to paternal ancestors ranging seven degrees beyond those who receive the lepa, or fourteen degrees in all from the offerer; some say as far as the family name can be traced. The generic name of sapinda is sometimes applied to the offerer and his six immediate ancestors, as he and all of these are connected by the same cake, or pinda. But it is more usual to limit the term sapinda to the offerer and the three who received the entire cake (k). He is called the sakulya of those to whom he offers the fragments, and the samanodaka of those to whom he presents mere libations of water (l). Now, upon first reading this statement, one would suppose the theory of descent to be this: that a deceased owner was related in a primary and special degree to persons in the three grades of descent next below himself; in a secondary, and less special degree to persons in the three grades below the former three; and in a still more remote manner to a third class of persons extending to the fourteenth degree of

Sapinda,
Sakulya, Samanodaka.

(k) This narrower signification seems to be unknown to the Mitakshara, see post § 510, note. This distinction is expressly stated by Baudhayana (i., 5, 11, § 9, 10) as follows:—"The great-grandfather, the grandfather, the father, oneself, the uterine brothers, the son by a wife of equal rank, the grandson and the great-grandson—these they call Sapindas, but not the great-grandson's son—and amongst these a son and a son's son together with their father are sharers of an undivided oblation. The sharers of divided oblations they call Sakulyas." Raghunandana, after explaining this passage, says that "this relationship of Sapinda (extending no further than the fourth degree) as well as that of Sakulyas, is propounded relatively to inheritance. But relatively to mourning, marriage, and the like, those too that partake of the remnants of oblations are denominated Sapindas," xi., 8.

(l) Manu, iii., § 122—125, 215, 216; v., § 60; ix., § 186, 187; Baudhayana, i., 5, § 1; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 37—42; Viramit., p. 154, § 11; Colebrooke, Essays (ed. 1858), 90, 101—117; Bai Devkore v. Anritram, 10 Bom., 372.

Theory of relationship.

descent. But the actual theory is much more complicated. In the first place, sapindaship is mutual. He who receives offerings is the sapinda of those who present them to him, and he who presents offerings is the sapinda of the person who receives them. Therefore, every man stands as the centre of seven persons, six of whom are his sapindas, though not all the sapindas of each other. He is equally the sapinda of the three above, and of the three below him. Further, a deceased Hindu does not merely benefit by oblations which are offered to himself. He also shares in the benefit of oblations which are not offered to him at all, provided they are presented to persons to whom he was himself bound to offer them while he was alive. As Mr. Justice Mitter said: "If two Hindus are bound during the respective terms of their natural life to offer funeral oblations to a common ancestor, or ancestors, either of them would be entitled after his death to participate in the oblations offered by the survivor to that ancestor or ancestors; and hence it is that the person who offers those oblations, the person to whom they are offered, and the person who participates in them, are recognized as sapindas of each other" (m).

Agnates.

§ 502. The sapindas just described are all agnates, that is, persons connected with each other by an unbroken line of male descent. But there are other sapindas who are cognates, or connected by the female line. The only definition of the cognate, or bandhu (if it may be called one), in the Mitakshara, is contained in ii., 5, § 3, last clause: "For bhinna-gotra sapindas are indicated by the term bandhu," or, as Mr. Colebrooke translates it, "For kinsmen sprung from a different family, but connected by funeral oblations (n), are indicated by the term cognate."

Cognates.

Bandhus.

(m) Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 39; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49, citing Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 38. See too the Nirnaya Sindhu, cited Amrita v. Lakhinavayan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 34; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 76, and per Mitter, J., in S. C., 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 32; 3 Dig., 453.

(n) It will be seen hereafter that it is more than doubtful whether Vijnanesvara in using the term sapinda intended to refer to funeral oblations at all. See post § 510—513.

The definition given by Jimuta Vahana is fuller: "Therefore a kinsman, whether sprung from the family of the deceased, though of different male descent, as his own daughter's son, or his father's daughter's son, or sprung from a different family, as his maternal uncle or the like, being allied by a common funeral cake, on account of their presenting offerings to three ancestors in the paternal and the maternal family of the deceased owner, is a sapinda" (o). Now, the mode in which cognates come to be connected with the agnates by funeral oblations is by means of that ceremony which is called the Parvana Shradh, and which is one of the principal of the series of offerings to the dead. "This ceremony consists in the presentation of a certain number of oblations, namely, one to each of the first three ancestors in the paternal line and maternal lines respectively; or, in other words, to the father, the grandfather, and the great-grandfather in the one line, and the maternal grandfather, the maternal great-grandfather, and the maternal great-great-grandfather in the other" (p). This would give one explanation of the texts which state that sapindaship does not extend on the side of the father beyond the seventh degree, and on the mother's side beyond the fifth (q). The sapinda who offers a cake as bandhu is the fifth in descent from the most distant maternal ancestor to whom he offers it. Now, on the principle of participation already stated, any bandhu who offers a cake to his maternal ancestors will be the sapinda, not only of those ancestors, but of all other persons whose duty it was to offer cakes to the same ancestors. But the maternal ancestors of A may be the paternal or maternal ancestors of B, and in this manner

(o) D. Bh., xi., 6, § 19; translated by Mr. Justice Mitter, 6 Cal., 263.

(p) Per Mr. Justice Mitter, Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 40; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49; Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 13, 19; Manu, ix., § 132; 3 Dig., 165, note by Colebrooke. It will be observed that the paternal ancestors are counted inclusive of the father; the maternal exclusive of the mother. See to Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., § 72, note by Sutherland.

(q) Vrihat Manu, cited Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 9; Gautama, ib., § 11; Yajnavalkya, i., § 53. It is more probable, however, that the original texts simply stated an arbitrary rule as to the degree of affinity which excluded intermarriage. See post § 510.

Parvana Shradh.

A will be the bandhu, or bhinna-gotra sapinda of B, both being under an obligation to offer to the same persons (r).

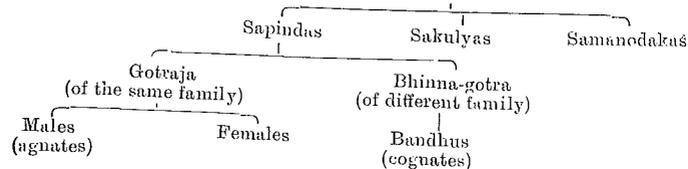

Relationship to females.

§ 503. Lastly.—Although here I am anticipating the next chapter, a man is the sapinda of his mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother for a double reason; first, because they become part of the body of their respective husbands, and next, because the cakes which are offered to a man's male ancestors are also shared in by their respective wives (s). And so the wife is the sapinda of her husband; both as being the surviving half of his body, and because, in the absence of male issue, she performs the funeral obsequies (t).

Females.

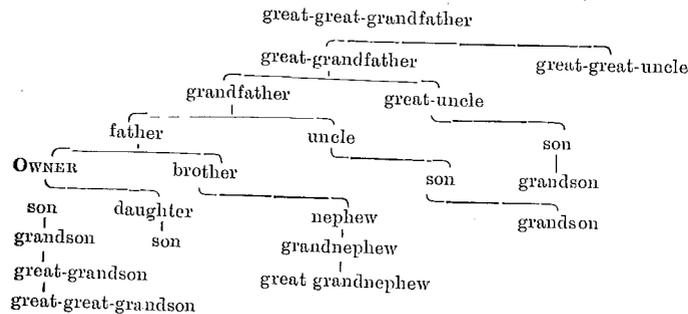

Tables of descent.

Hence the table of descents will stand as follows:—

Gotraja sapindas.

§ 504. This will all be made clearer by reference to the accompanying diagrams. The OWNER, who is called in the Daya Bhaga the middlemost of seven, is the sapinda of his own son, grandson, and great-grandson, because they offer

(r) For instance the daughter's son of A's grandson is a bhinna-gotra sapinda of the great-great-grandson of the same A. Manik Chand v. Jagat Sattani, 17 Cal., 518.

(s) Manu, ix., § 45; Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 3; 3 Dig., 519, 598, 625; Colebrooke, Essays, 116; Lallubhai v. Mankuwarbai, 2 Bom., 420, 440, 445.

(t) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 5, 6; Vivada Chintamani, 290.

No. I.
BANDHUS EX PARTE PATERNÀ.

(u) Kissen v. Javallah, 3 Mad. H. C., 346; post § 578.
 (v) 2 W. MacN., 93; W. & B., 204; Bamasoonaree v. Rajjirishito, Sev., 742.
 (w) Gosaien v. Mt. Kishernunnee, 6 S. D., 77 (80).
 (x) Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 157 S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49.
 (y) 3 Dig., 530; Gopal Chander v. Haridas, 11 Cal., 343; Pramath v. Surrut, 8 Cal., 460; S. C., 10 C. L. R., 484.
 (z) A daughter's daughter is said to succeed in Madras to her grandfather as a bandhu; Famappa v. Arumugath, 17 Mad., 182.

(a) Doorga Bibee v. Janak, 10 B. L. R., 341; S. C., 18 Suth., 331.
 (b) Gobind v. Mohesh, 15 B. L. R., 35; S. C., 23 Suth., 117; Digambar v. Moti Lal, 9 Cal., 563; Hari Das Bundopadhyaya v. Kanna Chauri, 15 Cal., 780.
 (a) 3 Dig., 530.
 (b) See post § 575, takes before mother's sister's son. Gunesb v. Nil Komul, 22 Suth., 264.

Sapindas and sakulyas.

the cake to him, and they are his sapindas, as he receives it from them. But his great-great grandson is only his sakulya. So also he is the sapinda of his own father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, because he offers the cake to them, and they are his sapindas, because they receive it from him. But he and his great-great-grandfather are only sakulyas to each other. Next as regards collaterals. The owner receives no cake from his own brother, but he participates in the benefit of the cakes which the brother offers to his own three direct ancestors, who are also the three ancestors to whom the owner is bound to make offerings. So the nephew offers cake to his own three ancestors, two of whom are the father and grandfather of the owner; and the grandnephew to his three ancestors, one of whom is the father of the owner. All of these, therefore, are the sapindas of the owner, though they vary in religious efficacy in the ratio of three, two, and one. But the highest ancestor to whom the great-grandnephew offers cakes is the brother of the owner. He is therefore not a sapinda; but he is a sakulya, because he presents divided offerings to the owner's three immediate ancestors. Similarly the owner's uncle and great-uncle present cakes to two and one respectively of the ancestors to whom the owner is bound to present them. They are therefore his sapindas. But the great-great-uncle is not a sapinda, since he is himself the son of a sakulya, and presents cakes to persons all of whom stand in the relation of sakulya to the owner.

Bandhus.

§ 505. We now come to the bandhus, whose relationship is more complicated. There are two classes of bandhus referred to by the Bengal writers, and who alone can be brought within the doctrine of religious efficacy (d); those ex parte paternâ and ex parte maternâ. The first class will be found in the accompanying pedigree. Their sapindaship arises from the fact that they offer cakes to their maternal ancestors, who are also the paternal ancestors of the owner. For instance, the sister's son, in addition to the oblations which he presents to his own father, etc., presents oblations to the three ancestors of his own mother, who are also the three ancestors of the owner. The aunt's son presents them to two, and the grandaunt's son to one of his three ancestors. These persons, therefore, all come within the definition of bandhus, as being persons of a different family, connected by funeral oblations, though with different degrees of religious merit. But the great-grandaunt's son is not a bandhu, because the ancestors to whom he presents cakes are the sakulyas only of the owner. Following out the same principle, it will be seen that the grandsons by the female line of the uncle and the granduncle, of the brother and the nephew, are all bandhus. But the son of the grandnephew's daughter is not a bandhu. Similarly, in the descending line, the sons of the owner's daughter, granddaughter, and great-granddaughter are bandhus, as they all present cakes to himself. But the offerings made by the son of his great-great-granddaughter do not reach as far as the owner, and therefore he is not a bandhu. It will be observed that the above pedigree always stops with the son of the female relation. The reason of this will be seen on referring to the smaller pedigree in the same sheet. The grandson of the owner's daughter will present cakes to his own paternal ancestors, that is, to the owner's grandson, and to X and Y, and also to his own maternal ancestors, that is, to B, C, and D. But none of these are persons to whom the owner is bound to make oblations, and five of them are complete strangers to him. And so, of course, it is in every other similar case.

(d) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 8—20; D. K. S., i., 10, § 1—20. As to other bandhus, see post § 513.

§ 506. The bandhus ex parte maternâ will be found in the next pedigree. They differ from those just described in being connected with the owner through his maternal ancestors instead of his paternal ancestors. Those on the left side of the pedigree are the agnates of these maternal ancestors, while those on the right side are cognates, and are, therefore, removed from the owner by a double descent in daughter and great-granddaughter (o), and the son of the uncle's daughter in Bengal (p). But it is now settled, after an unusually full discussion of the whole subject, that the examples given in the different commentaries are illustrative and not exhaustive (q), and that if anyone comes within the definition of a bandhu, he is entitled to succeed as such, although he is nowhere specifically named (r).

§ 508. I have now pointed out the manner in which the principle of religious efficacy applies to the different male heirs who are recognized by Bengal law. As to the grounds upon which one heir is preferred to another, the following rules may be laid down.

1. Each class of heirs takes before, and excludes the whole of, the succeeding class. "The sapindas are allowed to come in before the sakulyas, because undivided oblations are considered to be of higher spiritual value than divided ones; and the sakulyas, are in their turn preferred to the samanodakas, because divided oblations are considered to be more valuable than libations of water" (s).

2. The offering of a cake to any individual constitutes a superior claim to the acceptance of a cake from him, or the participation in cakes offered by him. On this ground the male issue, widow, and daughter's son rank above the ascendants, or the brothers who offer exactly the same number of cakes as the deceased (t).

3. Those who offer oblations to both paternal and maternal ancestors are superior to those who offer only

(o) 2 W. MacN., 81; contra, 3 Dig., 530.
 (p) Gobindo v. Woomesh, Suth. Sp No. 176, overruled by Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 15; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49.
 (q) Apararka says that bandhus are the sons of the father's sister, mother's sister, and maternal uncle's son, and similar kinsmen. Sarvadhikari, 428.
 (r) Griidhari v. Bengal Government, 12 M. I. A., 448; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (F. C.), 44; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. C.), 32; Amrita v. Lakhmarayan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 28; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 76; Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 15; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49; Ratna Subbu v. Ponnappa, 5 Mad., 69.
 (s) Per Mitter, J. Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 38; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49; approved, Gobind v. Mohesh, 15 B. L. R., 47; S. C., 23 Suth., 117; Degumber v. Moti Lal, 9 Cal., 563.
 (t) 3 Dig., 499, 503; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 32—40, 48 xi., 2, § 1, 2; xi., 5, § 3.

to the paternal. Hence the preference of the whole to the half-blood (u).

4. "Those who are competent to offer funeral cakes to the paternal ancestors of the deceased proprietor, are invariably preferred to those who are competent to offer such cakes to his maternal ancestors only; and the reason assigned for the distinction is, that the first kind of cakes are of superior religious efficacy in comparison to the second." And this rule extends so far as to give a preference to one who offers a smaller number of the superior oblations over one who offers a larger number of the inferior sort (v).

5. "Similarly, those who offer larger numbers of cakes of a particular description are invariably preferred to those who offer a less number of cakes of the same description; and where the number of such cakes is equal, those that are offered to nearer ancestors are always preferred to those offered to more distant ones."

"The same remarks are equally applicable to the sakulyas and samanodakas" (w).

The result of these rules in Bengal is, that not only do all the bandhus come in before any of the sakulyas or samanodakas, but that the bandhus themselves are sifted in and out among the agnates, heirs in the female line frequently taking before very near sapindas in the direct male line, on the principle of superior religious efficacy (x). In fact, if the test of religious efficacy is once admitted, no other arrangement would be logically possible.

§ 509. When we go a stage back to the Mitakshara, and still more to the actual usage of those districts where (u) 3 Dig., 480, 519; Daya Bhaga, xi., 5, § 12.

 (v) Per Mitter, J., 5 B. L. R., 39; Supra, note (s); Gobind v. Mohesh, 15 B. L. R., 35; S. C., 23 Suth., 117. See this case, post § 581; Braja Lal v. Jiban Krishna, 26 Cal., 285.
 (w) Per Mitter, J., 5 B. L. R., 39; approved, 15 B. L. R., 47; ante note (s); Khettur v. Poorno, 15 Suth., 482. A person who offers one oblation to the father of the deceased owner is preferred to another who offers two oblations to the grandfather and great-grandfather. Hence the grandnephew ranks before the paternal uncle, and the nephew's daughter's son before the uncle's daughter's son. Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 5, 6; Pramath v. Surrut, 8 Cal., 460.
 (x) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6; D. K. S., i., 10; 3 Dig., 528, 529. See post § 580.

Brahmanical influence was less felt, the whole doctrine of religious efficacy seems to disappear. In the chapters which treat of succession, the Daya Bhaga and the Daya-krahma-sangraha appeal to that doctrine at every step, testing the claims of rival heirs by the numbers and nature of their respective offerings. The Mitakshara never once alludes to such a test. No doubt it refers to the distinction between sapindas and samanodakas, and states that the former succeed before the latter, and that the former offer the funeral cake, while the latter offer libations of water only. But this distinction is stated, not as evidencing different degrees of religious merit, but as marking different degrees of propinquity. The claims of rival heirs are determined by the latter test, not by the former. Persons who confer high religious benefits are postponed to persons who confer hardly any. Persons who confer none whatever are admitted as heirs, for no other reason than that of affinity.

§ 510. Throughout the Mitakshara, Mr. Colebrooke invariably translates the word sapinda by the phrase "connected by funeral oblations," and this gives the appearance of a continued reference by the author to religious rites. But there is every reason to suppose that, in using the word sapinda, Vijnanesvara was thinking of propinquity, and not of religious offerings. In another part of his work, which has not been translated by Mr. Colebrooke (y), where he is commenting on the text of Yajnavalkya (i., § 5) which forbids a man to marry his sapinda, he defines sapindaship solely as a matter of affinity, without any reference to the capacity to offer religious oblations, and so as to include cases where no such capacity exists. He says: "sapinda relationship arises between two people through their being connected by particles of the one body." Hence he states that a man is the sapinda of his paternal and maternal ancestors, and his paternal and

Meaning of
'sapindas.'

Sapinda denotes affinity.

(y) It will be found in W. & B., 120, and in Raj. Sarvadhikari, 601. It is also referred to by Mr. Justice Mitter, Amrita v. Lakhinarayan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 33; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 76; and by Mr. Justice West, Vijayarangam v. Lakshuman, 8 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 262, and by Westropp, C. J., in Lallubhai v. Mankwarbai, 2 Bom., 428.

maternal uncles and aunts. "So also the wife and the husband, because they together beget one body. In like manner brothers' wives are sapinda relations to each other, because they produce one body (the son) with those who have sprung from one body." He then observes that this principle, if carried to its extreme limits, would make the whole world akin, and proceeds to comment on the text of Yajnavalkya (z) as follows:—

"On the mother's side, in the mother's line, after the fifth, on the father's side, in the father's line, after the seventh (ancestor) (a), the sapinda relationship ceases, and therefore the word sapinda, which on account of its etymological import (connected by having in common particles of one body) (b), would apply to all men, is restricted in its signification; and thus the six ascendants, beginning with the father, and the six descendants, beginning with the son, and one's-self (counted) as the seventh (in each case), are sapinda relations. In case of a division of the line also, one ought to count up to the seventh (ancestor), including him with whom the division begins (e.g., two collaterals, A and B, are sapindas, if the common ancestor is not further removed from either of them than six degrees), and thus must the counting of the sapinda relationship be made in every case" (c).

§ 511. It will be remarked that in this passage the author does not notice the distinction between those who offer undivided oblations, and those who offered divided oblations. Nor does he in the corresponding part of his sakulyas.

Includes

(z) Yajnavalkya, i., § 52, 53, "A man should marry a wife who is not his sapinda, one who is further removed from him than five degrees on the side of the mother, and seven degrees on the side of the father."

(a) The narrow signification of sapinda as limited to those who are connected by offerings of the entire cake, and therefore extending only to three degrees on either side of the owner, seems to be unknown to the Mitakshara.

(b) Sapinda is compounded from sa for samana, like, equal or the same, and pinda, ball or lump. As applied to funeral rites the pinda is the ball or lump into which the funeral cake was made up. I am informed by very high Sanskrit authorities that the application of the word sapinda in the text is peculiar to Vijnanesvara.

(c) It is no doubt in reference to this passage that the Samskara Mayukha, in a passage cited in Lallubhai v. Mankwarbai, 2 Bom., 425, says "Hence Vijnanesvara and others abandoned the theory of connexion through the rice ball offering, and accepted the theory of transmission of constituent atoms."

Theory of relationship according to the Mitakshara.

treatise on Inheritance (d), where he divides the Gotraja, or Gentiles, into two classes only—those connected by funeral oblations of food, extending to seven degrees, and those connected by libations of water, extending to the fourteenth degree, or even further.

From this passage Messrs. West and Bühler draw the conclusions that “1, Vijnanesvara supposes the sapinda relationship to be based, not on the presentation of funeral oblations, but on descent from a common ancestor; and, in the case of females, also on marriage with descendants from a common ancestor; 2, that all blood-relations within six degrees, together with the wives of the males amongst them, are sapinda relations to each other (e).” And with reference to his definition of bandhu (Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 3), they say: “It would seem that Vijnanesvara interpreted Yajnavalkya’s term bandhu as meaning relations, within the sixth degree who belong to a different family;” or at least that all such persons who come under the term sapinda, according to the definition given in the Acharakanda, are included in the term bandhu (f).

Agnates exclude cognates.

§ 512. This preference of consanguinity, or family relationship, to efficacy of religious offerings, is further shown by the rule laid down in the Mitakshara, and the words which follow its authority, according to which the bandhus, or relations through a female, never take until the direct male line, down to and including the last samanodaka, has been exhausted (g). A stronger instance than this could

(d) Mitakshara, ii., 5.

(e) W. & B., 122. See, too, Dattaka Mimamsa, vi., § 10, 32, where the relation of sapinda is said to rest on two grounds, consanguinity and the offering of funeral oblations.

(f) W. & B., 136, 489.

(g) Narada, xiii., § 51; Mitakshara, ii., 5 and 6; Vivada Chintamani, 297—299; V. May., iv., 8, § 22; Rutcheputty v. Rajunder, 2 M. I. A., 132; Srimuti Dibeak v. Rany Koond, 4 M. I. A., 292; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 44; Bhyah Ram v. Bhyah Uger, 13 M. I. A., 373; S. C., 14 Suth. (P. C.), 1; Thakoor Jeebnath v. Court of Wards, 2 I. A., 163; S. C., 23 Suth., 409; Naraini Kuar v. Chandni Din, 9 All., 467; affd. in Privy Council, 14 All., 366. See also cases in the N.-W. P., cited in the last case, in the Court below, 5 B. L. R., 449; S. C., 14 Suth., 117. Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari (p. 865) explains the preference given by the Mitakshara to agnates over cognates, as arising from the principle of religious efficacy, the oblations given by agnate kinsmen being of superior efficacy to those offered by cognate kinsmen. This of course is so, when the offerings of near agnates are not be imagined, since, as has been already shown, many of the bandhus are not only sapindas, but very close sapindas, while the fourteenth from a common ancestor is scarcely a relation at all, and certainly possesses religious efficacy of the most attenuated character. And so, whether the Mitakshara agrees with the Daya Bhaga, or disagrees with it, the reasons offered always show that the governing idea in the author’s mind was that propinquity, not religious merit, was the test of heirship. For instance, Jimuta Vahana prefers the father to the mother, because he presents two oblations in which the deceased son participates, while the mother presents none (h). Vijnanesvara takes exactly the opposite view, on the ground that “since her propinquity is greatest, it is fit that she should take the estate in the first instance, conformably with the text ‘to the nearest sapinda the inheritance next belongs’.” And he goes on to say: “Nor is the claim in virtue of propinquity restricted to sapindas, but, on the contrary, it appears from this very text that the rule of propinquity is effectual, without any exception, in the case of samanodakas, as well as other relatives, when they appear to have a claim to the succession” (i). So he agrees with Jimuta Vahana in preferring the whole blood, among brothers, to the half. But he rests his preference on the same text “to the nearest sapinda, etc.,” saying, very truly, that “those of the half-blood are remote through the difference of mothers;” while the Daya Bhaga grounds it on the religious principle, that the brother of the whole-blood offers twice as many oblations in which the deceased participates, as the brother of the half-blood (k). So the right of a daughter to succeed is rested by Jimuta Vahana upon the funeral oblations which may be hoped for from her son, and the exclusion of contrasted with those of near cognates. It certainly is not so where the offerings of near cognates are contrasted with those of distant agnates, unless some doctrine of religious efficacy is assumed completely different from that elaborated by the Bengal lawyers. Nor is this the principle which determines the preference of agnates to cognates in the Punjab, or among the Jains, where the theory of religious efficacy is unknown (§ 516).

(i) Mitakshara, ii., 3, § 3, 4.

(h) Daya Bhaga, xi., 3, § 3.

(k) Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 5; Daya Bhaga, xi., 5, § 12.

Propinquity, not offerings, the test of heirship.

widowed, or barren, or sonless daughters, is the natural result (l). The Mitakshara follows Vrihaspati in basing her claim upon simple consanguinity. As a son, so does the daughter, of a man proceed from his several limbs. How then should any other person take her father's wealth?" And he excludes neither the widowed nor the barren daughter, but prefers one to another, according as she is unmarried or married, poor or rich, that is, according as she has the best natural claim to be provided for (m).

Bandhus.

§ 513. When we come to the enumeration of bandhus, in Mitakshara, ii., 6, it appears pretty clear that they do not depend upon any such principle of community in religious offerings, as is supposed to be laid down in the definition at Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 3 (n). It is said "Cognates are of three kinds; related to the person himself, to his father, or to his mother, as is declared by the following text:—'The sons of his own father's sister, the sons of his own mother's sister, and the sons of his maternal uncle, must be considered as his own cognate kindred. The sons of his father's paternal aunt, the sons of his father's maternal aunt, and the sons of his father's maternal uncle, must be deemed his father's cognate kindred. The sons of his mother's paternal aunt, the sons of his mother's maternal aunt, and the sons of his mother's maternal uncles, must be reckoned his mother's cognate kindred (o). Here, by reason of near affinity, the cognate kindred of the deceased himself are his successors in the first instance; on failure of them, his father's cognate kindred, or, if there be none, his mother's cognate kindred. This must be understood to be the order of succession here intended.'" Now, if we look back to the Bandhus do not depend on religious merit.

(l) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 1—3, 17.

(m) Mitakshara, ii., 2, § 2—4; Viramit., p. 176, § 1.

(n) See ante § 502.

(o) This is the correct translation of the text as given in the original (1810) translation by Mr. Colbrooke. By some misprint it is incorrectly given in Stokes, H. L. B., p. 448. See 2 W. MacN., 96; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 5, § 14; Amrita v. Lakhinarayan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 37; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 76.

pedigrees already given (§ 505, 506), we shall find that the sons of the father's sister, and the sons of the father's paternal aunt, come in among the bandhus ex parte paterna of the Bengal scheme, and are indicated by the letter M. So, the sons of his mother's sister, and of his maternal uncle, and of his mother's paternal aunt, come in among the bandhus ex parte materna and are similarly indicated. The others named by the Mitakshara do not occur in those lists, and are nowhere referred to by any Bengal authority. The accompanying diagrams will show that they could not possibly be brought within any system which depends on religious merit (p). Here it will be seen that the sons of the father's maternal aunt, and of the father's maternal uncle, that is, the father's cognate kindred on his mother's side, are only connected with the owner through his paternal grandmother. Now, neither of these persons presents offerings to anyone to whom the owner presents them. Their offerings are presented to A and his ancestors. Those of the owner are presented to his father's line, and to his mother's line, that is, the line of X (q). Consequently, their offerings are neither shared

Cognates through father's mother.

(p) Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari says, in reference to this passage (p. 870): "We at once admit that the father's and the mother's bandhus could not possibly be brought within any system which depends upon religious merits accruing from parvana rites alone. But they could surely be brought within a system which lays down that any benefit whatsoever is a sufficient title to inherit." He then points to tables (p. 860) which show that these persons are competent to perform the ekodishta or individual rites of the deceased. But so are strangers, such as a pupil, a friend or the king, that is to say, anyone who takes the inheritance is bound, and, therefore, entitled to perform the personal rites connected with the funeral ceremonies of the deceased, and extending to those held on the anniversary of his death (Raj. Sarvadhikari, p. 84). The bandhus in question take the inheritance because they are near relations, and, having taken it, they perform these special rites. But when we come to the Bengal system of succession, which is really founded on the theory of religious benefits, these bandhus are excluded. So in Madras the grandson of a paternal great-aunt of the deceased inherits to him as a bandhu; Sethurama v. Ponnammal, 12 Mad., 155, though he would be excluded in Bengal, ante § 505.

(q) This is not only clear on principle (§ 502), but I have ascertained by inquiry from very learned natives both in Bengal and Madras, that a man is in by the owner, nor do they operate in discharge of any duty which he is bound to perform. Similarly, the sons of the mother's maternal uncle and aunt, that is the

Cognates
through mother's mother.

mother's cognate kindred, on her mother's side are only connected with the owner through his maternal grandmother. The same observation as before applies to them. Their offerings are presented to A and his line. Those of the owner are presented to the lines of Y and X, that is, to his own male ancestors, and those of his mother. Here again there is no conceivable community of religious benefit. On the other hand, when we apply "the reason of near affinity," on which Vijnanesvara himself bases the heirship, the whole thing is as simple as possible. The first of the three classes contains the owner's first cousins; the second contains his father's first cousins, and the third contains his mother's first cousins. All of these are postponed to the samanodakas, because they are connected through a female, and are therefore members of a different family from that of the owner. But when they are admitted, they are brought in upon natural principles (r). No other explanation can be required, except by those who persist in distorting the plain meaning of the Mitakshara, in order to find in it something which never was there. The Bombay authorities even go farther than the letter of the Mitakshara, as they include under the term bandhu females such as the daughters of a brother or of a sister, who can make no offerings at all (s).

under no obligation to present any offerings to his grandmother's ancestors. See too Jaganatha, 3 Dig., 602.

(r) The Viramitrodaya (p. 200, § 5) distinctly states that the cognates come in the above order "by reason of greater propinquity."

(s) W. & B., 125, 137. See post § 585. I have retained from the first edition (1878) the whole of the reasoning in the preceding paragraphs, which were written at a time when I was not aware that the doctrine which the advocate

§ 514. Let us now go a stage further back, and try to find out what was the original law as to religious obligations, and how far it was connected with the right of succession. I have already suggested that the practice of offerings to the dead was connected with that Ancestor worship, which was common to all the leading Aryan races (§ 63). Those offerings would necessarily be made by the direct male descendants of the deceased in the order of their nearness. The character of those offerings, and the strictness of the obligation to make them, would naturally vary according to the remoteness of the offerer from the ancestor. The rule, as we have seen (§ 501), was in accordance with what might have been expected. The devolution of the property would naturally be in exactly the same line, partly because the whole organization of the family would be broken up if its property were allowed to pass through females to persons of a different family or tribe (t); and partly because the direct males had a double claim, as being not only the descendants, but the worshippers of the deceased. Collateral relations through females who belonged to a different family, with a different line of ancestors, would be under no obligation to make offerings, and would have no right to inherit. Now this seems to be exactly what is laid down in the early treatises. The obligation to offer cakes, divided oblations and libations of water, is set out, and it is also said that the inheritance goes in order to the sapindas, sakulyas, and samanodakas. Immediately after these, it passes to strangers, such as the spiritual preceptor, the pupil, learned had been the subject of express decision. The principle that succession under the Mitakshara law depends upon propinquity and not upon religious efficacy has now, however, been settled by distinct rulings. The rule was first laid down in Bombay by the case of Lalubhai v. Mankuvarbai, 2 Bom., 388, affd. by the P. C., Lulloobhai v. Cassibai, 7 I. A., 212; S. C., 5 Bom., 110; Parot Babu Lal v. Mehta Harilal, 19 Bom., 631. The same rule has been applied by the High Court of Bengal to cases in that Presidency governed by the Mitakshara; Umaid v. Udoi, 6 Cal., 119; Ananda Bibee v. Nounit Lal, 9 Cal., 315, p. 318; Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram, 22 Cal., 339. And it is no objection that the relationship has to be traced through two females. The sons of the daughter's daughter of the paternal grandfather were held in Madras to be the bandhus of the person to whom they were so related. Fenkataghiri v. Ohandra, 23 Mad., 123.

(t) See Maine, Ancient Law, 149; Punjab Customs, 11, 16, 25, 37, 45, 51.

Early principles of succession.

Brahmans, or the king (u). The only person of a different family who is ever stated to be under an obligation to perform funeral rites, or to have a right to inherit, is the daughter's son (v). But he is always treated as being in an exceptional position, the reasons for which will be discussed hereafter (§ 562). He does not take as a bandhu, which in strictness he is, but very high up in the line of agnates. It would appear then that a man did not inherit because he performed funeral rites, or made religious offerings. He inherited because he was the nearest of kin to the deceased, and he made religious offerings for exactly the same reason. In the majority of cases the heir to the estate would also be a person who was bound to offer the funeral cake. But the mere fact of succession to the estate would carry with it the obligation to perform all rites which were needed for the repose of the deceased, just as it entailed the duty of discharging his debts (w). Accordingly, when a pupil is heir, he performs the funeral rites, and it is stated generally, "He who takes the estate shall perform the obsequies" (x). Accordingly, Mr. Colebrooke says: "It is not a maxim of the law that he who performs the obsequies is heir, but that he who succeeds to the property must perform them" (y). And in a remark appended by him to the case of Duttanaraen v. Ajeet (z), he says, in reference to the texts just quoted: "These passages do not imply that the mere act of celebrating the funeral rites gives a title to the succession, but that the successor is bound to the due performance of the last rites for the person whose wealth has devolved (u) Manu, ix., § 185—189; Apastamba, ii., 14, § 2—5; Baudhayana, i., 5, § 1—3; Gautama, xxviii., § 18; Vasishtha, xvii., § 29—31; Vishnu, xvii., § 4—16; Narada, xiii., § 51. The word bandhavas in the last two authorities is translated by Mr. Colebrooke "kintemen," and appears to refer to persons of the same family.

(v) Manu, ix., § 127—133, 139, 140.

(w) The due performance of sacrifices was one of the three debts. Manu, v., § 35, 36; Raj. Sarvadhikari, 571.

(x) Vrihaspati Smriti, 3 Dig., 545; Vishnu, ib., 546; Satatapa, ib., 625; Goldsticker, 13; per curiam, Bhyah Ram v. Bhyah Ugur, 13 M. I. A., 390; S. C., 14 Suth. (P. C.), 1; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 5, § 10, note (2); but see per Mitter, J. Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 38; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49.

(y) Str. H. L., 242.

(z) 1 S. D., 20 (26).

on him." This is also the view taken by Dr. Mayr (a). He says: "The descent of the inheritance was not regulated by the offerings to the dead, as Gans supposes. Those offerings, and the whole system of ancestor-worship, date from a period at which the idea of a partition had not arisen. In later times, however, when partition was resorted to, it became necessary to define who should offer the funeral cake, and to whom it should be offered. Naturally this duty fell upon those who took the inheritance (b). In earlier times it would have been impossible to mark out any particular individual, because each succeeding generation stood in the relation of descendant to the whole generation which preceded it, and not any particular person to any other particular person. But when we find in a text of Manu that the great-grandson must offer the cake, we may infer that this duty resulted from the fact that he inherited."

§ 515. The fact that the line of direct descent stopped short at the great-grandson, and then ascended, is generally looked upon as a crucial proof that the Hindu law of inheritance was founded on the principle of religious efficacy. The reason offered for this by the Bengal lawyers is, that those who are more remote in descent present offerings of less religious efficacy. But it seems to me that the matter is capable of a very different explanation. When property no longer passed exclusively by survivorship, the rule of inheritance would naturally be framed upon the analogy of the original system. The right of succession would be limited to the same persons who formerly took by survivorship, but they would take by distinct steps, instead of simultaneously as one body. Now, the persons upon whom the property fell by survivorship were the persons who lived together in the same house, or, at all events, who were so closely connected as to be under the control of one head. It was almost impossible that a single family could ever contain more than four generations in direct descent. If such were in existence, they would probably have quitted the family house. In any case the more remote would be looked upon as less nearly akin to the patriarch than his own brothers, nephews, or grand-nephews. These last would be more closely united to him in affection, and more likely to interest themselves in the performance of his obsequies, where such performance was considered a matter of moment. It was natural, therefore, that the inheritance should be kept within the family, first passing to its lower extremity, and then rising again. This is really all that Manu says, "For three is the funeral cake ordained. The fourth is the giver. But the fifth has no concern. To the nearest after him in the third degree the inheritance belongs" (c). In the Punjab, where, as I have often remarked, the doctrine of religious efficacy is unknown, the line of direct descent stops short in the same way, and those beyond the third generation from the common ancestor are considered to have no interest in the property which entitles them to object to its alienation (d). That is, they are practically considered to be outside the family. Mr. McLennan has drawn attention to the early Irish law, which appears in a somewhat similar manner to have limited the right of participation in the ancestral property to the fourth generation (e).

(a) Ind. Erbrecht, 85.

(b) See Goldsticker, 36, et seq., where he points out that all ceremonies involving expense must be performed by the head of the family, who is in possession of the property.

Punjab.

Succession of cognates.

§ 516. I have no information which would enable me to state whether the practice of making offerings to maternal ancestors always existed, or whether it was an innovation, springing from the Brahmanical desire to multiply religious ceremonies, and from the principle that "wealth was produced for the sake of solemn sacrifices" (f). If it existed as a ceremonial usage, the absence of all reference to it in the law writers shows that it had no legal significance.

(c) Manu, ix., § 187. Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari (pp. 254, 286) points to this text as marking two conflicting theories of succession, propinquity and religious benefits. To me it seems to contain no reference to any principle but propinquity. Those who offered the funeral cakes were the three nearest to the deceased. See per curiam, 24 All., p. 135.

(d) Punjab Cust., 32.

(f) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 14. See ante § 243.

(e) McLennan, 471, 496.

One thing is quite clear, that it carried with it no right to inheritance, since the persons who presented such offerings could never inherit under the old system of law, until the extinction of the last male in the direct line of descent (§ 512). The Bengal notion of weighing the merits of an offering made by a cognate against an offering made by an agnate, and giving the inheritance accordingly, is an absolute innovation. The theory arose from treating the offering of oblations, and the succession to the estate as cause and effect, instead of antecedent and consequent. The offering of sacrifices to the deceased was really a duty. It grew to be considered the evidence of a right. When this idea became fixed, it was readily applied to all persons who presented such offerings, whatever might be the reason for their presentation. Those principles, which were applied in testing the title of persons who really were heirs, were applied to create a title in persons who were out of the line of heirs. An agnate who presented three cakes to the owner was necessarily nearer than an agnate who only presented one, and was therefore a preferable heir. It came to be assumed that this principle was not limited to agnates, but afforded a means of comparison between agnates and cognates. The application of this principle is the simple distinction between the Mitakshara and the Daya Bhaga. The Mitakshara recognized the difference between the offerings which A and B were bound to make to X, but it used the difference in order to ascertain which of the two was nearer to X in a direct line. The Daya Bhaga considered the directness of the line as immaterial, if the difference between the offerings was established.

Origin of Bengal theory.

In the Punjab, and among the Sikhs and Jains, the rules of descent appear to be in the main those of the Mitakshara, but the doctrine of religious efficacy is wholly unknown (g).

(g) Punjab Cust., 11; ante § 46; Punjab Customary Law, II, 100, 137, 142, 175.

CHAPTER XVII.

INHERITANCE.

Principles of Succession in Case of Females.

§ 517. THE right of women to possess and inherit the family property would necessarily depend upon the organization of the family to which they belonged. Among polyandrous tribes of the promiscuous or Nair type, the head and visible centre of the family was not the father, who was unknown, nor the wife, who had not begun to exist, but the mother (§ 232). The home was the home of the woman and the children. There she was visited by the man who might or might not be the father of her children. His home was in the circle to which his mother belonged. He inherited in one family and his children in another. In Canara, where this system is maintained in its most archaic form, the actual management of the property formerly was, and even now generally is, vested in females. In Malabar the manager is always the eldest male of the family, though succession is traced through females (a). Exactly the reverse would take place in the ordinary undivided family of the Aryan type. The whole property would vest in the males, and be managed by the head of the family for the time being. The women would be mere dependents upon their husbands and fathers. So long as there were any males in the family, no woman could possibly set up a claim to inherit. It is to this period that the texts must be referred which represent women as absolutely without independent rights. "Three persons, a wife, a son, and a slave, are declared by law to have no wealth exclusively their own; the wealth which they may earn is regularly acquired for the man to whom they belong" (b). "The father protects a woman in her childhood, the husband during her youth, the son in old age; a woman has no right to independence" (c). Baudhayana and Vasishtha mention no females in their list of heirs, and the former expressly states, on the authority of a text of the Vedas, that women have no right to inherit (d). The text on which Baudhayana relies may, it would appear, be so interpreted as to give no support to his assertion (e); but, of course, this does not detract from the weight to be given to his statement as evidence of the then prevailing usage. His authority is still so far respected, that the schools of Bengal and Benares consider that women can only inherit under some express text (f). In this respect, as it will be seen hereafter, the western lawyers differ (§ 529, 532). It is a curious fact that in the beginning of the 18th century, among the Tamil population of Southern India, a similar usage to that of the early Sanskrit writers prevailed. Where a man died without male issue, his father was his next heir, and nothing could deprive him of his rights (g).

(a) Stra. Man., § 400—404; Munda Chetty v. Timmaju, 1 Mad. H. C., 380; Timmappa v. Mahalinga, 4 Mad. H. C., 28; Devu v. Daji, 8 Mad., 353; Mahalinga v. Mariammah, 12 Mad., 462. See Teulon, 25, where he gives an exactly similar description of the ancient Carians.

Women originally without rights.

§ 518. The same causes, which led to the break up of the family union, would introduce women to the possession of the family property. When partition took place, the fund out of which the women had been maintained would be split into fragments. The natural course would be, either to give an extra share to any member of the Growth of their right to property.

(b) Manu, viii., § 416.

(c) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 27; Manu, ix., § 3. See Sancha & Lichita, 3 Dig., 484; and text quoted Madhaviya, § 44; Varada, p. 39.

(d) Baudhayana, i., 5, 11, § 1—14; ii., 2, 3, § 44—46; Vasishtha, xvii.

(e) W. & B., 126; Madhaviya, § 44.

(f) W. & B., 126; Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 11; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 5, § 2, 3, 6; Viramitrodaya, pp. 174—197; per Mitter, J., Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 37; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49; per Westropp, C. J., Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai, 2 Bom., 418, 428, 438; S. C., on appeal, Lulloobhoy v. Cassibai; per curiam, 7 I. A., 231; S. C., 5 Bom., 110; Gauri v. Rukko, 3 All., 45; Jagat Narain v. Sheodas, 5 All., 311; per curiam, 9 Cal., 322; V. N. Mandlik, 357, 364. The Madras Court appears in recent decisions rather to doubt the universal application of this rule;—See 5 Mad., p. 249; 8 Mad., pp. 117, 127, 129.

(g) Pere Bouchet cited Man. Adm. Mad., I, 107, n.

family who would make himself responsible for their support, or to allot to them shares out of which they could maintain themselves. This appears to have been what actually took place (h). Similarly, upon the death without issue of a male owner who was the last survivor of the coparcenary, or who had been separated from the other members, or whose property had been self-acquired, it would be more natural that his property should remain in the possession of the women of his family for their support, than that they should be handed over with the property to distant members of the family, who might be utter strangers. In this way their right as heirs, properly so called, and not merely as sharers, would arise. But that right would not extend beyond the reason for it, viz., their claim to a personal maintenance. The old preference for the male line over the female (§§ 512, 514) would limit the right, so as to prevent the property passing absolutely out of the family into the hands of male strangers. The woman would not be allowed to become a new stock of descent, so as to transmit the inheritance to her heirs. This is no doubt the foundation of that rule which is assumed in all the works on inheritance, that where a woman inherits to a male, his heirs and not hers take at her death (§ 609).

§ 519. The women who were the actual members of a man's family, and as such entitled to support, would always stand to him in the position of daughter, mother, wife, or sister, taking in under these terms more distant relations of the same class, such as grandmother and the like. The daughter and the mother appear to have been the first to obtain a recognized right to inherit.

Manu allows a daughter to inherit after her father. But it seems very doubtful whether he did not limit this right to the case of the daughter, specially appointed to raise up a son for him. I have already suggested that a daughter so appointed remained in her father's family, so that her son was his son, and not the son of his actual father (i). Naturally such a daughter would be specially favoured, as the descent of property to her would not take it out of the family. Now, the text of Manu which states her right of inheritance follows after three texts which relate to the appointed daughter solely. It then proceeds, "The son of a man is even as himself, and as the son such is the daughter (thus appointed). How then (if he have no son) can any inherit his property but a daughter who is closely united with his own soul?" (k). The words in brackets are the gloss of Kalukha Bhatta, who evidently understood the text as I do. The same view was taken of it by Daraiswara, Davaswamy, and Davarata, as stated by the Smṛiti Chandrika (l), and by Visvarupa, § 24, who expressly says, "the text of Manu intends the appointed daughter alone." It is remarkable that in the texts where Manu states the order of succession to a man who has left no issue, he makes no reference to a daughter as an heir (m). The texts would harmonize, if we suppose that in the former passage he was speaking only of a daughter who, by virtue of her special appointment, became his son, as she is stated to be by Vasishtha (n). This also accords with the position given to her by Narada, who places her after the son, upon the ground that "she continues the lineage. A son and a daughter equally continue the race of their father" (o). This could be strictly true only of an appointed daughter; for the son of any other daughter would be of a different family and a different name, like any other bandhu. But when the practice of making an appointed daughter became obsolete (§ 78), the daughter not appointed would naturally fall into the same position, or rather would retain the position which usage had made familiar. Her right would then rest on the simple ground of consanguinity. This is the ground on which it is based

(h) See ante § 477, 488.

(i) See ante § 76; post § 562.

(k) Manu, ix., § 127—130.

(l) Smṛiti Chandrika, xi., 2, § 16.

(m) Manu, ix., § 185, 217.

(n) Ante § 76.

(o) Narada, xiii., § 50.

by Vrihaspati and the Mitakshara : “ As a son, so does the daughter of a man proceed from his several limbs. How then should any other person take her father’s wealth ? ” (p).

§ 520. No distinction is to be found in the earlier sages as to the capacity of one daughter to inherit in preference to another on any religious principle. Devala says, “ To unmarried daughters a nuptial portion must be given out of the estate of the father ; and his own daughter, lawfully begotten, shall take, like a son, the estate of him who leaves no male issue ” (q). This suggests the idea that the daughter’s right of inheritance arose from the obligation to endow her. Hence Katyayana says, “ Let the widow succeed to her husband’s wealth, and in default of her the daughter inherits, if unmarried or unprovided ” (r). Parasara enlarges the rule as follows (s). “ The unmarried daughter shall take the inheritance of the deceased, who left no male issue, and on failure of her the married daughter.” So far, at all events, there is no idea of religious merit. The object of the dowry is to facilitate marriage, and to benefit the daughter (t). Naturally, the daughter who is already set up in the world has a claim inferior to that of one who has her fortune to seek. And similarly, in a competition between married daughters, the preference was given to the poor daughter over the rich one (u). None of the writers of the Benares school, except the Smriti Chandrika, absolutely exclude any daughter, or suggest any reason for her inheriting except the simple one of consanguinity (v). The Bengal writers for the first time introduce the idea of religious efficacy.

Grounds of precedence between daughters.

Benares.

Bengal law.

(p) Mitakshara, ii., 2, § 2.

(q) 3 Dig., 491. See too Yajnavalkya, ii., § 135; Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 2.

(r) Cited Smriti Chandrika, xi., 2, § 20; Mitakshara, ii., 2, § 2.

(s) 3 Dig., 490.

(t) See Vasishtha, cited Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 6. Also Toulon, 12, note 2, where he points out that as the degradation of woman consisted in her being a mere object of purchase, so the first step towards her elevation was taken, when the dowry made it no longer necessary that she should be sold.

(u) Mitakshara, ii., 2, § 4; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 2, § 21; V. May., iv., 8, § 11, 12; Viramit., p. 181.

(v) Vivada Chintamani, 291, 292; V. May., iv., 8, § 10; Madhaviya, § 36, Varadrajah, 34; Viramit., pp. 176—182.

A daughter of course could offer no religious oblations herself, but her right was put upon the ground that she produced sons who could present oblations (w). A reference to Manu will show, as might have been expected, that the daughter’s son, whose power of offering funeral cakes was considered to be equal to that of a son’s son, was the son of the appointed daughter (x). Jimuta Vakana, however, laid down that no daughter could inherit unless she had, or was capable of having, male issue, and the natural result was the exclusion of daughters who were widows, or barren, or who appeared to have an incapacity for bringing any but daughters into the world (y). This principle is also adopted by the author of the Smriti Chandrika, who necessarily excludes barren daughters (z). It will be seen that his authority in this respect has not been accepted in Southern India (§ 558). The mode in which these various principles operate will be examined in the next chapter, upon THE ORDER OF SUCCESSION (§ 558).

§ 521. The mother is of course not mentioned as an heir by Baudhayana, who excludes all women (a), nor by Apastamba, Gautama, or Vasishtha; Narada states her right to a share on partition by the sons after the death of their father, but does not refer to her as an heir (b). Her claim, however, and that of the grandmother, are expressly stated by Manu (c): “ Of a son dying childless (and leaving no widow) the (father and) mother shall take the estate : and the mother also being dead, the paternal (grandfather and) grandmother shall take the heritage (on failure of brothers and nephews).” The gloss of Kalluka, as contained in parentheses, marks the changes in the law since the time of Manu. Vishnu also inserts the mother

Right of mother;

(w) See per Mitter, J., Gunga v. Shumbhoonath, 22 Suth., 393; per Jagannatha, 3 Dig., 194.

(x) Manu, ix., § 131—140. See post § 562.

(y) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 1—3; D. K. S., i., 3, § 5.

(z) Smriti Chandrika, xi., 2, § 10, 21. See post § 514.

(a) Ante § 517.

(b) Narada, xiii., § 12.

(c) Manu, ix., § 217; cf. § 185, where Manu makes the father and then the brothers take.

in the list of heirs next after the father (d), and Yajnavalkya places both parents after the daughters (e). Her claim is also mentioned by Vrihaspati and Katyayana, of whom the former places her after wife and male issue, while the latter brings her in after male issue, father or brother (f).

its origin.

As to the ground of her claim, the mother as well as the grandmother and great-grandmother, are certainly sapindas as sharing with their husbands the cakes which are offered to them by the male issue (g). But her claim, and indeed that of the father too, is always placed on the ground of consanguinity, and of the merit she possesses in reference to her son, from having conceived and nurtured him in her womb. And by many commentators she is preferred to the father, upon considerations derived from a comparison of the respective degrees in which mother and father share in the composition of the son (h), while the Mitakshara prefers her on the ground of greater propinquity (i). When we come to Jimuta Vahana, however, we find the religious doctrine introduced for the first time. He prefers the father to the mother, because the father offers oblations in which the son participates; and he prefers the mother, who offers none, to the brothers, who offer three, "because she confers benefits on him by the birth of other sons who may offer funeral oblations in which he will participate" (k). An argument which obviously would never apply as regards the mother of an only son, or of a son whose brothers had died before him without leaving issue.

§ 522. The growth of a widow's right of succession is much more complicated than that of mother or daughter.

(d) Vishnu, xvii., § 7. (e) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 136. (f) 3 Dig., 502, 506.
 (g) Ante § 512. Subodhini extends the right of female ascendants to the mother and grandmother of the paternal great-grandfather, and says that the same analogy holds good among the Samanodakas. Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 5, Colebrooke's note; Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai, 2 Bom., 433.
 (h) 3 Dig., 504; Mitakshara, ii., 3; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 3, § 3; Daya Bhaga, xi., 4, § 2; Vivada Chintamani, 293.
 (i) Mitakshara, ii., 3, § 3; ante § 512.
 (k) Daya Bhaga, xi., 4, § 2; D. K. S., i., 6, § 2.

Right of widow;

Originally of course she shared in the general incapacity for inheritance which affected all women. But her right was recognized later than that of other females who now take after her. Neither Manu, Apastamba, Vasishtha nor Narada recognize her right as heir; though they do acknowledge that of the daughter and mother (l). Vishnu, however, assigns to her a place after male issue (m). Vridhha Manu, Vrihaspati, Sancha and Lichita and Devala all make her heir (n). So, of course, does Yajnavalkya (o), who is followed by his commentator Vijnanesvara. But the earlier commentator, Visvarupa, § 24, limits the word wife, as used by Yajnavalkya, to one who is pregnant.

The following account of the manner in which the rights of a widow arose, is taken almost exclusively from Dr. Mayr's dissertation upon the subject (p).

§ 523. From the very earliest times the widow was entitled to be maintained by her husband's heirs. When a brother died without issue, or entered a religious order, the other brothers were to divide his wealth, except the wife's separate property, and to allow a maintenance to his women for life. But even this maintenance depended upon their living a life of chastity. If they behaved otherwise, it might be resumed (q). So Narada says (r), "when the husband is deceased, his kin are the guardians of his childless widow; in disposing of her, and in the care of her, as well as in her maintenance, they have full power." Even as against the king, when he took by escheat, the widow did not inherit, but he was bound to give a main-

(l) See Manu, ix., § 155, 212, 217, where Kalluka inserts a gloss in favour of the widow, whose rights are not recognized in the original. See the explanation of Mitakshara, xi., 1, § 35.

(m) Vishnu, xvii., § 4.

(n) 3 Dig., 458, 473, 474, 478; Katyayana, Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 6.

(o) Yajnavalkya, ii., 135.

(p) Mayr, 179, et seq. See too per curiam, Bhau Nanaji v. Sundrabai, 11 Bom. H. C., 273.

(q) Narada, xiii., § 25, 26. Vijnanesvara explains these texts as applying to the case of a reunited parcener, Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 20; but, as Mayr observes, his case had been provided for by the preceding text, § 24.

(r) Narada, xiii., § 28. See too Sancha, 3 Dig., 482.

its origin and growth.

Origin and growth of widow's rights.

tenance to the women of such persons (s). These passages of Narada are of special importance, because, as his work was professedly based upon Manu, they show that nothing in Manu was then understood as countenancing the right of a widow to inherit.

§ 524. The next step would naturally be that the amount necessary for maintenance should be set apart for it, and left at her own disposal (t). In the case of an escheat the text of Katyayana cited above seems to indicate that this was done. And the same course was adopted in case of a partition (u). Where the property was very small in amount, the whole would often be handed over to the widow. And so Srikara and others were of opinion that a widow's right of succession was limited to the case of a small property (v). No such explanation can be given to the texts of Yajnavalkya and others, which expressly state a woman's right of succession, since they all put her succession on exactly the same footing as that of sons (w). But the view of Srikara and those who thought with him, is valuable, from a historical point of view, as showing what the usage was, before the widow's right was firmly established. When it had once become customary to hand over the whole of a small property to a widow, the decision whether a property was sufficiently small would become difficult and invidious. The more wealthy the husband had been, the larger would be the scale of maintenance suitable to his widow, especially when it came to be expected that she should perform her husband's Shradhs and discharge the charities to which he had been accustomed (x). Where the relations were themselves

(s) Narada, xiii., § 52; Katyayana, cited Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 27; Vijnanesvara remarks upon these passages that the words used for women, "stri" and "yoshit," apply to concubines, which, as Mayr remarks (184), is opposed to innumerable passages.

(t) Such a practice still exists in the Central Provinces; even in a case where the deceased husband was a member of an undivided family. Rewa Prasad v. Deo Datt, 27 I. A., 39; S. C., 27 Cal., 515.

(u) Ante § 477.

(v) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 31. So among the Sutlej chiefs, Punjab Customs, 25.

(w) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 36; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 6.

(x) Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 458.

adequately provided for, there would often be a strong feeling in favour of leaving the whole property to the widow for her life, and this feeling would naturally exist among all relations of the husband other than the next in succession. They might benefit by the property in the hands of a widow, while they would not do so to the same extent if it fell into the hands of the next male heir.

§ 525. The practice of the niyoga would also help in the same direction. A passage of Gautama (y) is by some translated so as to indicate that a widow was only entitled to succeed if she raised up issue for her husband, in which case her right would be not personal but as guardian for her son. The author of the Mitakshara explains the passage, not as making the raising up of issue a condition precedent to inheritance, but as offering her an alternative. In either view it is clear that she had the alternative. The male relations would have a strong interest in inducing the widow to refrain from exercising her right, and she would have a specially strong interest in availing herself of it, if she at once became the manager of the property. An obvious compromise would be to allow her to succeed at once to a life estate in the property, provided she waived the privilege of producing a new and absolute owner. Hence the condition of chastity which the Brahman lawyers engrafted upon her right of succession, a condition which is wholly unsupported by the early texts of the Vedas (z).

§ 526. It is impossible now to ascertain when the widow's right of inheritance was first established. Yajnavalkya and others already referred to, lay it down absolutely; but the author of the Mitakshara (a) still thought it necessary to enter into an elaborate discussion of the whole subject, as if it were even in his time an open question. The conclusion he arrives at is, that the widow is entitled to inherit to her husband, if he died separated Influence of niyoga.

Widow only takes separate estate.

Widow is heir, but not coparcener,

(y) Gautama, xxviii., § 18, 19. See Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 8.

(z) Mayr, 181; ante § 93.

(a) Mitakshara, ii., 1.

and not reunited, and leaving no male issue. And this rule is now adopted universally, except where the authority of Jimuta Vahana prevails (b). The rule seems necessarily to follow from the view taken by the Mitakshara of the rights of undivided members. While the husband lived, his wife had only a right to be maintained by him in a suitable manner; after his death, his rights all lapse to his surviving coparceners, and she can have no higher right against them than she had against her husband. The question of heirship for the first time arises in case of a divided member, as it is only in regard to divided property that there can be an heir, properly so called. In other words, the widow can take by succession as heir, but cannot take by survivorship as coparcener (c).

except in Bengal

§ 527. Of course the very foundation of this reasoning fails as regards Jimuta Vahana, for he denies the premise, viz., that all the undivided members of the family hold each an unascertained interest in every part of the whole, and that at the death of each that interest passes to the survivors. On the contrary he considers that each has a separate right to an unascertained portion of the aggregate, that is, that each holds as a tenant in common, and not as a joint tenant. That being so, of course, there is no reason to restrain the express words of texts which state the right of a widow to succeed to her husband, by

(b) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 19, 30; ii., 9, § 4; Smṛiti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 24, 25, 53, 54; xii., § 9; Varadraja, 34; Madhaviya, § 34, 35, says nothing as to division; Viramit., p. 131, ch. iii.; Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Sivagunga, 9 M. I. A., 539; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31. As to Benares: 2 W. MacN., 21; Hiranath v. Baboo Ram Narayan, 9 B. L. R., 274; S. C., 17 Suth., 316; Chowdhry Chintaman v. Mt. Noubukho, 2 I. A., 263; S. C., 24 Suth., 255; Rup Singh v. Baisni, 11 I. A., 149; Mithila, Vivada Chintamani, 290; Pudmavati v. Baboo Doolar, 4 M. I. A., 259, 264; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 41; Anundee v. Khedoo, 14 M. I. A., 416; S. C., 18 Suth., 69. Bombay: V. May., iv., 8, § 6; Goolab v. Phool, 1 Bor., 154 [173]; Govinddas v. Muhaluksheemee, ib., 241 [267]; Mankoonwur v. Bhugoo, 2 Bor., 139 [157]; Gun Joshee v. Sugoona, 2 Bor., 401 [440]; W. & B., 68. In some cases in the Punjab and among the Jains a widow appears to succeed to her husband's estate, even though undivided. But the general practice seems to follow the Mitakshara; Punjab Customs, 56; Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 406. So by local custom the widow is sometimes excluded from succession by the brothers even where the property is self-acquired, Ravichan v. Perachi, 15 Mad., 281.

(c) This exclusion of the widow does not take place where the property is that of an ordinary mercantile partnership, and not that of an undivided Hindu family; Rampershad v. Sheochurn, 10 M. I. A., 430.

limiting them to the case of a divided member. It is therefore equally settled in Bengal, that a widow succeeds to her husband's share when he is undivided, just as she would to the entire property of one who held as separated (d). But this does not apply in case of the widow of a son who dies before his father, undivided, and leaving no separate property (e); because in Bengal the son is not a co-sharer with his father, and therefore has no interest which can pass to his widow.

§ 528. Even under the Mitakshara, if a man dies undivided, but leaving property, part of which is his self-acquisition, his widow will succeed to that part, though the rest of his property passes by survivorship to his coparceners. This had been already laid down by the pundits in Bombay, and in a case under the Mithila law, and was finally settled by the Judicial Committee in the Shivagunga case (f). And so where the status of division has been established by agreement, but no actual apportionment has taken place, or where part has been apportioned, and not the remainder, in either case the widow inherits as the heir of a divided member, instead of being only entitled to maintenance (g).

§ 529. When the right of a widow was once established, the Hindu lawyers were at no loss for reasons to show that it had always existed. According to Manu, upon conception by a wife the husband himself was born again in her, and became one person with her (h). And so Vrihaspati says, "Of him whose wife is not deceased, half

(d) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 25, 26, 27; D. K. S., ii., 2, § 41; F. MacN., 5. See cases 1 M. Dig., 316; 3 Dig., 476, 485; per West, J., Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai, 2 Bom., 508; Durga Nath v. Chintamani, 31 Cal., 214.

(e) F. MacN., 1.

(f) W. & B., 2nd ed., 81, 127; 2 W. MacN., 92; Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M. I. A., 539; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Periasamy v. Periasamy, 5 I. A., 61; S. C., 1 Mad., 312; followed Tekait v. Tekaitni, 5 I. A., 160; S. C., 4 Cal., 190.

(g) Suraneni v. Suraneni, 13 M. I. A., 113; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 40; Gajapathi v. Gajapathi, ib., 497; S. C., 6 B. L. R., 202; S. C., 14 Suth. (P. C.), 33; ante § 495; Narayan v. Lakshmi, 3 Mad. H. C., 289; Patni Mal v. Ray Manohur, 5 S. D., 349 (410); Rewun Persad v. Mt. Radha Beeby, 4 M. I. A., 137, 148, 152; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 35; Timmi Reddy v. Achamma, 2 Mad. H. C., 325.

(h) Manu, ix., § 8, 45.

She takes self-acquired property.

Partition not completed.

Reasons for widow's succession.

the body survives. How should another take the property while half the body of the owner lives?" (i). It is obvious that this metaphor has the fault of many other metaphors. It proves too much. If the husband still survives, the sons cannot take. If the widow is looked upon as the continuation of her husband's existence, she ought to take even before male issue (k). But the widow had also another ground of merit, as offering funeral oblations to her husband. In respect of these Jimuta Vahana points out that she was inferior to her sons, as she only performed acts spiritually beneficial to him from the date of her widowhood, while they did so from the date of their birth (l). In any point of view it will be seen that the merits of the widow were purely personal, as between herself and her husband. As a mother she has claims on her descendants; but as a widow her claim for anything beyond maintenance is only against her husband. Therefore if her marriage with him has been legally dissolved, or if in consequence of his having become an outcaste, she has exercised the right of abandoning him recognized by Hindu law, her claim to inherit from him is lost (m). So also, she can only succeed to his property or rights, that is, to the property which was actually vested in him, either in title or in possession, at the time of his death (n). She must take at once at his death, or not at all. No fresh right can accrue to her as widow in consequence of the subsequent death of some one to whom he would have been heir if he had lived (o). Hence, no claim as heir can be set up on behalf of the widow of a

Only takes husband's property.

Widow is only heir to husband.

(i) 3 Dig., 458. See Smriti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 6; Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M. I. A., 610; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Tamburatti Valia v. Vira Rayyan, 1 Mad., 228.

(k) See ante § 245, where it is suggested that at one time the mother's life estate may have been interposed before full enjoyment by the sons.

(l) 3 Dig., 456, 458; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 43.

(m) Sinammal v. Administrator-General, 8 Mad., 169.

(n) Viramit., p. 164, § 13, p. 197, § 2. If his title was vested, though his enjoyment postponed, she will equally take. Rewin Persad v. Radha Beeby, 4 M. I. A., 137, 176; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 35; Hurrosoondery v. Rajessuree, 2 Suth., 321.

(o) Balama v. Pullayya, 18 Mad., 168.

son (p), or of a grandson (q), or of a daughter's son (r), or of a father (s), or of a brother (t), or of an uncle (u), or of a cousin (v). In all of the above cases the contest was between the widow and some other heir, who was held to have a preferential title. In some of the recent cases, however, the widow was excluded under Benares law on the general principle that she did not come within the line of heirs at all (w). In the latest case it was held that the Crown would take by escheat in preference to her (x). This is undoubtedly the law of Bengal, Benares, Madras and Mysore (y). It is now, however, settled that the law in Bombay is different. The subject is discussed by Messrs. West and Bühler, and their views have been fully adopted by the High Court of Bombay in the case of Lallubhai v. Mankwarbai (z). The process of reasoning of the Western lawyers seems to be as follows. They accept the general principle that succession goes in the order of sapindaship, taking the text of Manu (ix., § 187) with the gloss of Kulluka except in Bombay.

Western India.

(p) 2 W. MacN., 43, 75, 104; 2 Stra. H. L., 233, 234; Ayabutte v. Rajkissen, 3 S. D., 28 (38); Rai Sham Bullub v. Prankishen, ib., 33 (44); Himulta v. Mt. Pudo Monee, 4 S. D., 19 (25); Monee Mohun v. Dhun Monee, S. D. of 1853, 910; Raj Kishore v. Hurrosoondery, S. D. of 1858, 825; Ananda Bibee v. Nownit, 9 Cal., 315; Bai Anrit v. Bai Manik, 12 Bom. H. C., 79; Punjab Customs, 64. The claim of a daughter-in-law is supported by Nanda Pandita and by Balam-bhatta, but by no other authorities. Jolly, Lect. 199; Thayammal v. Annamalai, 19 Mad., 35. According to Visvarupa, § 2, where an equal partition was made by a father, the widows of sons and grandsons were entitled to a share equal to that which their husbands would have taken.

(q) Ambawow v. Rutton, Bom. Sel. Rep., 132.

(r) 2 W. MacN., 47.

(s) Vencata v. Venkummal, 1 Mad. Dec., 210; Vadrevu v. Wuppuluri, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 125; Ram Koomwar v. Ummur, 1 Bor., 415 [458]; Bhyrobee v. Nubkissen, 6 S. D., 53 (61).

(t) 2 W. MacN., 78; 2 Stra. H. L., 231; Yetiraj v. Tayammal, Mad. Dec. of 1854, 184; Peddammittu v. Appu Rau, 2 Mad. H. C., 117; Jymunee v. Ramjoy, 3 S. D., 289 (385).

(u) Upendra v. Thanda, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 349; S. C., Sub nomine, Wopendro v. Thanda, 12 Suth., 263; Gauri v. Rukko, 3 All., 45.

(v) Soorendronath v. Mt. Heeramonee, 12 M. I. A., 51; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 26; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 35.

(w) Gauri v. Rukko, 3 All., 45; Ananda Bibee v. Nownit, 9 Cal., 315.

(x) Jogdamba Koer v. Secretary of State, 16 Cal., 367; folld. in Mysore, Chicka Byammah v. Najannah, 15 Mysore, 135.

(y) Per curiam, Lulloobhoy v. Cassibai, 7 I. A., 230; S. C., 5 Bom., 110; Vithaldas v. Jeshubai, 4 Bom., 221; per West, J., 11 Bom., p. 292; per Muthusami Iyer, J., 8 Mad., pp. 119, 129.

(z) W. & B., 129; 2 Bom., 388; affd., 7 I. A., 212; S. C., 5 Bom., 110; following and affirming Lahshmibai v. Jayram, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 52; Vithaldas v. Jeshubai, 4 Bom., 219.

so that it runs :—“ To the nearest sapinda, male or female, after him in the third degree, the inheritance next belongs.” Then they interpret sapindaship as meaning connection by blood, in the manner explained by Vijnanesvara (§ 510), which makes even the wives of brothers be sapinda to each other, because they produce one body with those who have sprung from one body. On the same principle they make the daughter-in-law a sapinda (a). Hence “ They prefer the sister-in-law to the sister’s son, and to a male cousin, and more distant male sagotra-sapindas, the paternal uncle’s widow to the sister, the maternal uncle, and the paternal grandfather’s brother, and they allow a daughter-in-law, and a distant gotraja-sapinda’s widow to inherit ” (b). The learned editors remark, “ It is however sometimes impossible to bring the authorities which they quote into harmony with their answers ” (c). It may be added, that it is equally difficult to bring their answers into harmony with each other. I have given up in despair the attempt to reconcile the futwabs and rulings from Bombay, already cited in this paragraph, with those which will be found below (d). The result of this doctrine is, that “ the members of the compact series of heirs specifically enumerated take in the order in which they are enumerated (V. M., iv., 8, § 18) preferably to those lower in the list and to the widows of any relatives, whether near or remote, though where the group of specified heirs has been exhausted, the right of the widow is recognized to take her husband’s place in competition with the representative of a remoter line ” (e). This rule of succession is stated by the Bombay High

(a) W. & B., 481—486. As to the paternal aunt, see Ganesh v. Waghu, 27 Bom., 610.

(b) The rule, however, is limited to women who, by marriage into a particular gotra, become gotraja-sapindas. Hence the widow of a daughter’s son would not inherit the estate of the maternal grandfather. Vallubdas v. Sakerbai, 25 Bom., 281, p. 285.

(c) W. & B., 2nd ed., 181, 195—199.

(d) Muhalukmee v. Kripashookul, 2 Bor., 510 [557]; Jethee v. Mt. Sheo, ib., 588 [640]; Baee Umrut v. Baee Koosul, Morris, 5.

(e) Nahalchand v. Hemchand, 9 Bom., 31, at p. 34; Lallubhai v. Mankuwarbai, 2 Bcm., at p. 445.

Court to be deduced, or rather to be deducible, from the Mitakshara, though they admit that the foundation afforded for it by that work is slender, inasmuch as “ no widow of a collateral is expressly provided for; the only wife of an ascendant expressly admitted, is one for whom there is an express text.” Under the Mayukha, according to Mr. Justice West, such a right “ may be called almost shadowy ” (f). Yet, curiously enough, in Southern India such a rule admittedly does not exist except in Pondicherry, while in Western India its acceptance in practice is beyond doubt. More recently the Bombay Court in reference to the above considerations said “ It seems to be the fairer interpretation of the law to hold that a female gotraja-sapinda in any one line cannot exclude any male properly belonging to that line ” (g). It certainly seems to me that this is one of those cases in which usages, which sprung up without any reference to the Sanskrit law books, are now supported by torturing those books so as to draw from them conclusions of which their authors had no idea (h). In the Punjab, on the other hand, Punjab. special family customs exist under which widows are not allowed even to succeed to their husbands’ estate or only to a small portion of it (i). Local customs to the same effect are found in Madras (k).

§ 530. The recent works of M. Leon Sorg have brought Pondicherry. to light a series of decisions of the Pondicherry Civil Court, which bear a curious resemblance to those in Bombay. They lay down, that where the last member of a joint family dies, leaving no direct heirs in his own line, his property will pass to the female relatives of his own pre-deceased coparceners, in preference to his divided male collaterals.

(f) Lallubhai v. Mankuwarbai, 2 Bom., at p. 447.

(g) Rachaya v. Kalingapa, 16 Bom., 716, p. 720. See however per curiam, 18 Mad., p. 198.

(h) The Privy Council in affirming the decision in Lulloobhoy v. Cassibai, expressly rest the right of the widow “ on the ground of positive acceptance and usage,” 7 I. A., p. 237; S. C., 5 Bom., 110.

(i) Punjab Customs, 25, 48; Punjab Customary Law, II, i42, 237.

(k) Rarichan v. Perachi, 15 Mad., 281.

The order of succession is stated to be (1) the widow of a pre-deceased brother, (2) his daughter, (3) the sister of the last male owner, (4) the daughters of his grandfather, that is paternal aunts, (5) the daughter of his paternal uncle (l). I presume the list is not intended to be exhaustive. The rule is stated to be founded on the text of Manu, IX, § 187, which confers the inheritance as the nearest relation (male or female) of the deceased.

Another custom, similarly affirmed in the Pondicherry Courts as existing among the Tamil population, is that on default of male issue the wife and mother share the succession (m).

§ 531. The relations whom we have been considering have all had express texts asserting their title as heirs. The widow and mother are also gotraja-sapindas, both in the meaning of the Mitakshara, as being connected with the deceased owner by affinity, and in the meaning of the Daya Bhaga, as being connected with him by funeral oblations (§ 503). The daughter is even after marriage a sapinda, according to the view of Vijnanesvara, though not a gotraja-sapinda, and although she neither presents nor participates in oblations, she is fitted into the scheme of Jimuta Vahana by her capacity for producing a presenter of offerings. The sister stands in a different position from all these. She has no religious efficacy whatever, as she is in no way connected with the funeral offerings to her brother. She is a sapinda, as regards affinity, but she is not a gotraja-sapinda, according to the Benares writers, as she passes into a strange gotra immediately upon her marriage. As regards the authority of texts, the matter stands in this way. The sister is stated to take a share, either upon an original partition, or after a reunion (n), but this is a different thing from taking as heiress. A passage from Sancha and Lichitu (o), (l) Sorg H. L., 320, Co. Con., 275, 279, 286, 291.

(m) Sorg Int., 13 H. L., 303, 318.

(n) Manu, ix., § 118, 212; Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 476; ante § 477; post § 586.

(o) 3 Dig., 187.

“The daughter shall take the female property, and she alone is heir to the wealth of her mother’s son who leaves no male issue,” would certainly seem to be a direct affirmation of the right of a sister to succeed to her brother. Jagannatha explains the latter part of the text as referring to an appointed daughter. The text itself is not cited in any commentary that I am aware of as an authority for her right as an heir, even by the Mayukha, which admits that right. Possibly it may refer to stridhanum which had passed from the mother to the son, which, as will be seen hereafter, is sometimes the case (§ 670). Nanda Pandita, and Balambhatta, interpret the text of the Mitakshara which gives the inheritance to brethren, as including sisters, so that the brothers take first, and then the sisters (p). But this order of succession is opposed to the whole spirit of the Benares law. It is not accepted even by the Mayukha, which makes the sister come in after the grandmother, under a different text (q), and the interpretation has been rejected by the Judicial Committee (r). It may be taken, therefore, and it appears always to be assumed, that there is no text which in express terms asserts the right of a sister to succeed to her brother. In Bombay, however, her right is now beyond dispute. In Bengal and Benares it seems clear that she has no right at all. In Madras her right has been for the first time affirmed, by a decision which is certainly opposed to the entire current of authority in Southern India. This will render it necessary to examine the law upon the subject at greater length than the importance of the point would seem to require.

§ 532. The mode in which the sister’s title is made out in Western India, appears to be as follows. She is considered a sapinda, as already stated, by virtue of her

Her right admitted in Bombay.

(p) Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 1, note. This interpretation is accepted by the Bombay High Court as one ground for admitting a sister to succeed, though they do not follow it to its logical conclusion as fixing her position in the line of heirs. Kesserbai v. Valab, 4 Bom., 188, 204; Budrapa v. Trava, 23 Bom., 32.

(q) V. May., iv., 8, § 19; post § 585.

(r) Thakoornai v. Mohun, 11 M. I. A., 386, 402; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 25; Chinnammal v. Venkatachella, 15 Mad., p. 422.

affinity to her brother (§ 529). She is also considered a gotraja-sapinda, on the ground that this term is satisfied by her having been born in her brother's family, and that she does not lose her position as a gotraja by being born again in her husband's gotra, upon her marriage. That being so, her place among the gotrajas is determined by nearness of kin, and is settled to be between the grandmother and the grandfather (s), before the half-brother, and after the full brother's son (t). It is probable that the whole of this reasoning is a mere contrivance to bring a succession, which was established by immemorial usage, into apparent conformity with Sanskrit law. The Bombay High Court has refused to extend the reasoning to a son's daughter, whom it ranks not as a gotraja-sapinda of his father, but apparently only as a bandhu (u). The usage itself is established beyond doubt, and has received the sanction of the Privy Council. And half-sisters succeed as well as sisters of the whole blood, though they come in after whole sisters (v). Sisters take equally inter se without any such preference for the unendowed over the endowed, as exists in the case of daughters (w).

Not an heir in Bengal.

§ 533. In Bengal it is equally clear, both on principle and authority, that the sister is not an heir. She possesses no spiritual efficacy, and comes under the general text of Baudhayana which excludes all females, without being rescued from it by any special text in her favour (x). Jagannatha says of her, "It is nowhere seen that sisters inherit the property of their brothers" (y). And her

(s) V. May., iv., § 18—20; W. & B., 131, 463, 467. See Dharmasindhu and Nirmayasindhu. Sarvadhikari, pp. 106, 123; per West, J., Lallubhai v. Mankuwarbai, 2 Bom., p. 445; Westropp, C. J., prefers resting her right upon her affinity as sapinda even though not a gotraja, and upon the express authority of Vrihaspati and Nilakantha, ib., 421. See as to her position in Sholapur, Lakshmi v. Dada Nanaji, 4 Bom., 210; Biru v. Khandu, 4 Bom., 214; in Dharwar, Rudrapa v. Irava, 28 Bom., 82.

(t) Sakharam v. Sitabai, 3 Bom., 373; Mulji v. Cursandas, 24 Bom 563.

(u) Venilal v. Parjaram, 20 Bom., 173.

(v) W. & B., 469—470; Vinayek v. Luxumeebaee, 1 Bom. H. C., 118; affirmed 9 M. I. A., 516; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 41; Sakharam v. Sitabai, 3 Bom., 353; Dhondu v. Gangabai, ib., 369; Kesserbai v. Valab, 4 Bom., 188, 198, ib., 210, 214.

(w) Bhagirthibai v. Baya, 5 Bom., 264; Saguna v. Sadarshiv, 26 Bom., 710.

(x) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 11.

(y) 3 Dig., 517.

exclusion is treated as quite undisputed by both the MacNaghtens and Sir Thomas Strange (z). There is also a uniform current of decisions to the same effect, extending from 1816 to 1870 (a). In one case a futwah was given by the pundits declaring that a sister, though not herself an heir, was entitled to enter upon and hold the estate in trust for a son whom she might afterwards produce, where such a son would be the next heir (b). But this decision has been expressly declared not to be law, on the well-established principle that a Hindu estate can never be in abeyance, but must always vest at once in the person who is, at the time of descent cast, the next heir (c).

§ 534. As regards the provinces which follow the Mitakshara, both principle and authority seem also to exclude the sister. She is not named in the line of heirs by the Mitakshara or the Viramitrodaya (d), nor by the Smriti Chandrika, the Madhaviya, the Varadrajah or the Sarasvati Vilasa, none of which even refers to her, except as being entitled to a share upon partition or after reunion. She cannot come in as a gotraja-sapinda within the meaning of Vijnanesvara, because the Hindu law never contemplates a female as remaining unmarried after the period of puberty, and, as soon as she does marry, she passes into a different gotra (e). Nor is there any text in her favour, which is as much required by the Benares school as by that of Bengal (§ 517). I have already noticed the construction of the text of the Mitakshara, which would bring in the sister as included in the term brethren. This has not been approved of by the writers of any school (§ 531). Nanda Pandita also proposes to bring in the Nor under Benares law.

Sister not recognized by Benares authorities.

(z) F. MacN., 4, 7; 1 W. MacN., 35, note; 1 Stra. H. L., 146.

(a) 2 W. MacN., 68, 80, 81, 85, 97, 98; Koonwaree v. Damoodhur, 7 S. D., 192 (226); Bamasoondree v. Rajkrishito, Sev., 742; Kalee Pershad v. Bhoirabee, 2 Suth., 180; Anund Chunder v. Teetoram, 5 Suth., 215; Rukkini v. Kadarnath, 5 B. L. R., App. 87.

(b) Karuna v. Jai Chandra, 5 S. D., 46 (50).

(c) Kesub Chunder v. Bishnopersaud, S. D. of 1860, ii., 340; ante § 499.

(d) Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 5, note.

(e) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 6; W. & B., 129. See, too, Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 10 where Jimuta Vahana says that Yajnavalkya uses the term Gotraja to exclude females related as sapindas, and Smriti Chandrika, xi., Lallubhai v. Mankuwarbai, 2 Bom., 438.

sister on another principle as being the daughter of the father (f). The reasoning would be, a man's own daughter succeeds, as bringing forth the daughter's son. It is now settled that the sister's son—that is, the son of the father's daughter—also succeeds (§ 575). Therefore the father's daughter herself should succeed as bringing him forth. The answer would be, that a man's own daughter succeeds, both because she is his own offspring, and because she produces a son who is of such importance to him, that he is the next male who takes after his own issue. Neither ground would apply to a sister. Not the first of course; nor the second, because, although the sister's son is an heir, he only comes in under the Mitakshara as a bandhu after the last of the samanodakas. Further, the fact that the sister's son is an heir does not involve any assumption that his mother must have been an heir also. He takes by his own independent merit, not through her (g). Accordingly we find that the son of an uncle's daughter is an heir to the nephew, though the uncle's daughter is not an heir (h); the son of a brother's daughter is, but the brother's daughter is not, an heir (i); the son of a nephew's daughter is, but the nephew's daughter is not, an heir (k).

§ 535. The weight of authority seems also to be against the sister's claim. The opinions of both the MacNaghtens, of Mr. Colebrooke, Mr. Sutherland, and Sir Thomas Strange, were opposed to her claim; and a futwah by a Madras pundit to the same effect is cited by the latter author (l). In 1858, a case came before the Madras Sudder Court, in which a sister claimed as heir to her brother, (f) Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 5, note.

(g) See per Holloway, J., Chelikani v. Suraneni, 6 Mad. H. C., 288; per curiam, 15 Mad., p. 422.

(h) Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 15; S. C., 15 Suth. (F. B.), 49; Gosaen v. Mt. Kishenmumee, 6 S. D., 77 (90).

(i) Gobind v. Mohesh, 15 B. L. R., 35; S. C. 23 Suth., 117; Jogmurut v. Seetulpersaud, Sev., 433.

(k) Kashee Mohun v. Rajgobind, 24 Suth., 229; Radha Pearee v. Doorga Monee, 5 Suth., 131.

(l) 1 Stra. H. L., 146; 2 Stra. H. L., 243—246; F. MacN., 4, 7; 1 W. MacN., 35, n. See per Holloway, J., Chelikani v. Suraneni, 6 Mad. H. C., 288.

Adverse decisions.

relying on the texts of Manu and the authority of Nanda Pandita and Balambhatta. The Court said: "The Judges of the Sudder Udalut, while admitting that the arguments of the special appellant have much force, and that the texts relative to division after reunion show that under such circumstances a sister has a right of inheritance, from which a presumption might perhaps be drawn that the spirit of the law may possibly not have originally contemplated the exclusion which now prevails, are of opinion that the law is not only too ill-defined to admit of such construction, in opposition to existing usage, but must even, if speaking more clearly, be regarded as obsolete and virtually changed, and modified by practice prevailing beyond memory, and acquiesced in by all parties concerned" (m). The same claim was set up, with the same arguments and the same result, before the High Court of Bengal in 1863, in a case governed by Mitakshara law. The Court, after referring to Manu, IX, § 187, 217, Mitakshara II, 4 and 5, 1 Stra. H. L., 146; 1 W. MacN., 35, and a Bengal case, proceed to say: "On the whole, then, we are clearly of opinion that the Vayavastha of the pundit cannot be set up successfully against the text of the Mitakshara, or the general principles of Hindu law, which excludes sisters, or against the marked omission from our precedents of any decision in favour of such a claim, for more than sixty years" (n). This opinion was reiterated by the Bengal High Court after a fresh discussion of the authorities in 1882 (o). The same decision was given in 1880 by the Allahabad High Court, also in a case under Mitakshara law, the Court referring to a previous ruling which laid down that, according to Mitakshara law, none but females expressly named can inherit (p).

In the Punjab, among the Sikh Jats, the sister is also Sister's right

(m) Chinnasamien v. Koottoor, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 175.

(n) Guman v. Srikant, Sev., 460.

(o) Julessur v. Uggur Roy, 3 Cal., 725.

(p) Jagat Narain v. Sheodas, 5 All., 311.

excluded by long-established and recorded usage, which was affirmed by express decision in 1870 (g).

The title of a sister was raised for the first time on appeal to the Privy Council in a case from the North-West Provinces in 1871, but the Judicial Committee refused to enter upon the question (r); it was also referred to, but without any expression of opinion, by the Committee in 1876 (s).

§ 536. On the other hand, a sister was for the first time decided to be an heir to her brother in a case in the Madras High Court (t). Property had devolved on a son, upon whose death it was taken by his mother. She alienated portions of it to strangers, and then died. The plaintiff, who was one of three sisters, sued to set aside the alienations. These were admittedly invalid beyond the life of the mother. The only question, therefore, was, whether the sister had any title which would support her suit. The Court held that she had. They first declared that she was not a sapinda, setting aside the construction put upon the word "brethren" by Balam-bhatta. They then proceeded to say: "Whether the sister is entitled to succeed as a relative of deceased more remote than a sapinda is another question. Since the decision of the Judicial Committee in Gridhari v. The Government of Bengal (u), the High Court of Madras, following that decision, and the decision of the High Court of Bengal in Amrita v. Lakhinarayan (v), of which the Judicial Committee approved, have held (w) that a sister's son is entitled to succeed as a bandhu, and that the text and Commentary in Chap. II, sect. 6, of the Mitakshara do not restrict the limit of bandhus to the cognate kindred there mentioned, but are to be read as merely offering illustrations of the degree of bandhus in their order

(g) Punjab Customs, 17.

(r) Koer Goolab v. Rao Kurun, 14 M. I. A., 176; H. C., 10 B. L. R., 19.

(s) Vellanki v. Venkata Rama, 4 I. A., 1. 8; S. C., 1 Mad., 174; S. C., 26 Suth., 21.

(t) Kutti Ammal v. Radakristna, 8 Mad. H. C., 88.

(u) 12 M. I. A., 448; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 44; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 32.

(v) 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 28; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 76.

(w) Chelikani v. Suraneni, 6 Mad. H. C., 278.

admitted in Madras.

Madras High Court decision.

of succession. In sect. 3 of Chap. II of the Mitakshara, sect. 4, it is said: 'Nor is the claim in virtue of propinquity restricted to kinsmen allied by funeral oblations, but, on the contrary, it appears from this very text (x) that the rule of propinquity is effectual without any exception in the case of (samanodakas) kindred connected by oblations of water, as well as other relations, where they appear to have a claim on the succession.' And it is afterwards said in sect. 7: 'If there be no relatives of the deceased, the preceptor, etc., according to the text of Apastamba, "If there be no male issue, the nearest kinsman inherits, or in default of kindred, the preceptor."' It follows from the above, not only that, in regard to cognates, is there no intention expressed in the law or to be inferred from it, of limiting the right of inheritance to certain specified relationships of that nature, but that, in regard to other relationships also, there is free admission in the order of succession, prescribed by law for the several classes; and that all relatives, however remote, must be exhausted, before the estate can fall to persons who have no connection with the family. In this view, plaintiff must be regarded as a relative entitled to succeed on an equal footing with her sisters, who are relatives of the same degree."

§ 537. This decision will, of course, settle the law in Madras unless reversed. But as it will not be a binding authority upon Mitakshara law in other parts of India, it may be as well to examine its reasoning more closely. The three cases quoted have, of course, no application. They merely decide that male relations, who come within the definition of a bandhu in the Mitakshara (y) are not excluded from the mere fact that they are not specifically enumerated in the next section. But if that definition means, as those cases held that it did mean, a person connected by funeral oblations with the deceased, then a

(x) Manu, ix., § 187.

(y) Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 3.

Madras decision discussed

sister does not come within the definition, not being "connected by funeral oblations" (z). It is also to be remarked that the enumeration in Mitakshara, II, 6, though not exhaustive as to the individuals, includes none but males, and is, therefore, strong evidence that none but males were supposed capable of satisfying the definition. And the cases cited show that none but males could satisfy the definition, as there understood. The judgment, however, goes on to cite two texts as showing (apparently) that other relatives who are neither gentiles nor bandhus may inherit by virtue of mere propinquity. In the first passage (a), Vijnanesvara is weighing the comparative merits of the father and the mother, both of whom are gotraja-sapindas. He decides in favour of the latter on the ground of propinquity, and proceeds, in the text cited by the High Court, to remark that this principle of propinquity applies not only to sapindas, but to samanodakas, "as well as other relatives, when they appear to have a claim to the succession." That is to say, given a rivalry between two persons, both entitled to inherit, the one who is nearest in blood shall take. The text does not attempt to lay down who have a claim to succession. On the contrary, it seems to assume that there may be relatives who would not "appear to have a claim to the succession." It does not define the class of heirs—that, as will be shown immediately, had been done already—

(z) According to the Dharma Sindhu Sara of Kasinatha, a work of the highest authority in the Benares School, among the persons who are competent to perform the funeral rites to a deceased kinsman it is stated that, "on failure of the daughter, and the nephew, the father, the mother, the daughter-in-law and the sister claim the right in succession. In case there are both uterine and step-sisters, the same rules apply to them as to uterine and step-brothers. On failure of sisters their sons are entitled to this right." Raj. Sarvadhikari, 111. This right to perform ceremonies certainly does not carry with it any right under Benares law to inherit. See as to a daughter-in-law, ante § 529 and as to a sister, ante § 535. Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari, after pointing out that the views of Balambhatta and Nanda Pandita in favour of a sister have met with no acceptance, says (p. 665): "According to the doctrines of the Benares School, then, the married and unmarried daughters of gotraja-sapindas are not entitled to inherit." The funeral rites, which these females are competent to perform, are only the ekodāshita or funeral ceremonies of the individual, ending with the first year's anniversary rites. They are not competent to perform the parvana rites, which are the most important of all, and upon the punctual observance of which the peace of the disembodied spirit depends (Raj. Sarvadhikari, 860, 84, 74).

(a) Mitakshara, ii., 3, § 3, 4.

but lays down a rule by which one member of the class is to be preferred to another. The word which is translated by Mr. Colebrooke "as well as other relatives" is simply adi appended to samanodakas, and means the like, or et cetera (b). It would be contrary to the ordinary principles of construction to interpret such a word as introducing a completely different genus. The next text proves exactly the opposite of what it is cited for by the High Court. To understand it we must go back a little. The first seven sections of the Mitakshara, Chap. II, are merely a commentary on the text of Yajnavalkya (c). "The wife, and the daughters also, both parents, brothers likewise and their sons, gentiles, cognates (d), a pupil and a fellow student; on failure of the first among these, the next in order is indeed heir to the estate of one who departed for heaven, leaving no male issue. This rule extends to all (persons and) classes." This text recognizes no relatives coming after nephews who are not either gentiles (gotraja) or bandhus. Sections 1—4 treat of relations up to and including nephews. Section 5, § 1 defines gotraja, and § 3 defines bandhus. The remainder of section 5 illustrates the succession of gentiles or gotrajas. Section 6 illustrates the succession of bandhus. It is now settled that these illustrations are not exhaustive, but that anyone who comes within the definition may inherit (§ 512). Then comes § 7, which treats of the succession of those who are not relatives at all. It commences: "If there be no relations of the deceased, the preceptor, or on failure of him the pupil, inherits, by the text of Apastamba: 'If there be no male issue, the nearest kinsman inherits, or in default of kindred, the preceptor, or, failing him, the disciple.'" The Court infers from this "that in regard to other relationships also" (meaning, apparently, relationships which do not come under the head of cognates) "there is free admittance to the inheritance in the order of succession prescribed by law for the several classes, and that all relatives, however remote, must be exhausted before the estate can fall to persons who have no connection with the family." That is to say, the Court seems to think that the words, "If there be no relations of the deceased," let in a new class of relations, who are neither gentiles nor cognates, but who are connected with the deceased by propinquity. It would be rather remarkable if a section, which is devoted to strangers, should have this effect, and should, by a side wind as it were, bring in an entirely new set of heirs, who are not defined, and of whose very existence there is no previous hint. But the fact is that the word which Mr. Colebrooke has translated "relations" is bandhu (e). This makes everything consistent. Section 5 treats of gotrajas. Section 6 treats of bandhus. Section 7 of those who come in when there is no bandhu. There is no third class of persons who, being neither gotraja nor bandhu, are still relations. In the passage of Apastamba, the word translated kinsman and kindred is sapinda (f). Apastamba does not appear to recognize bandhus at all.

(b) See as to the use of this adi, Burnell's Preface to Varadraja.

(c) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 135; cited Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 2.

(d) Bandhu, see Goldstücker, 26.

Heirship of sister considered.

§ 538. It certainly seems to me, with the greatest possible respect for the learned Judges of the Madras High Court, that their decision cannot be supported upon the grounds upon which they have put it. Whenever the question arises again, it will probably be found that the claim of the sister can only be made out, either upon the principle on which she is let in by Nilakantha and his followers, that is, as a sapinda, or by excluding from the definition of bandhu all reference to funeral oblations, and taking it simply as denoting persons connected by affinity (§ 512). The former position has been denied to her by the Judicial Committee, and by the Madras High Court (g). Whatever may have been the original meaning of the text

(e) Goldstücker, 26; per curiam, 16 Cal., p. 379.

(f) Apastamba, ii., 14, § 2.

(g) Thakoorain v. Mohan, 11 M. I. A., 402; S. C., 7 Suth. (P. C.), 25 Kuttiammal v. Radakrishna, 8 Mad. H. C., 92.

of Manu (IX, § 187), "To the nearest sapinda the inheritance belongs," the text must now be read with that of Yajnavalkya, and the commentary of the Mitakshara, which show that sapinda, as opposed to bandhu, means one of the same family, and not a person removed from it by marriage (§ 510). On the other hand, if the idea of funeral offerings is excluded from the definition of a bandhu, a sister would certainly come within it. But then we should have to consider the whole framework of the Mitakshara, as understood and acted upon in Southern India (h) which recognizes no females who are not denoted by special texts. To admit a sister as an heir at this time of day appears to be the very course to which their Lordships of the Judicial Committee say they have "an insuperable objection," viz., "by a decision founded on a new construction of the words of the Mitakshara, to run counter to that which appears to them to be the current of modern authority" (i).

§ 539. The case of Kutti Ammal v. Radakrishna, as well as the above observations upon it, were very fully considered by the Madras High Court in a later case (k), where a conflict arose between a sister and a sister's son, each claiming as heir to the deceased. It was not necessary to decide whether a sister could be heir to her brother, since, assuming that she could be, the Court was of opinion that the male claimant was a preferential heir. Had it been necessary to decide the point, the Court intimated that the criticism in the previous sections would have induced them to remit the point for decision to a Full Bench. They, however, suggested that the decision was right, on the ground that the term bhinnagotra

Later Madras decision.

(h) These qualifying words are added with reference to the view taken of the literal language on the Mitakshara by the High Court of Bombay in Lallubhai v. Mankuwarbai, 2 Bom., 388; ante § 529. The Judges seem to admit that their interpretation of the Mitakshara is either not accepted in Madras, or is over-ruled by the countervailing authority of the Smriti Chandrika; supra, 2 Bom., at pp. 318, 338; 2 I. A., 230.

(i) Supra, 11 M. I. A., 403; Koer Goolab v. Rao Kurun, 14 M. I. A., 196; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 1; Chotay v. Chumno, 6 I. A., 32; S. C., 4 Cal., 744.

(k) Lakshmanammal v. Tiruvengada Mudali, 5 Mad., 241.

sapinda, as used by Vijnanesvara, meant no more than a person connected by consanguinity, but belonging to a different family, either by birth or by marriage. They seemed disposed to doubt whether the Mitakshara had accepted the doctrine that females could only inherit under an express text, and they appeared to accept the authority of Sancha and Lichita as supplying such a text if one were necessary. Such a view is of course thoroughly intelligible and arguable, and is probably the line that would be followed with most chance of success if the case came before the final Court of Appeal. The principle so laid down has been followed by the Madras Court in later cases, where they have held that a father's sister, and a son's daughter, a daughter's daughter, a sister's daughter, and a brother's daughter, were within the line of possible heirs under the Mitakshara, although they would be postponed to male heirs more remotely connected with the deceased owner (l). It would be urged in reply with much force that every other Court which professes to administer the Mitakshara law has come to a different conclusion, that the Madras decisions are opposed to usage and authority in that Presidency, and that in Bombay, where a sister's right is undoubted, it is rested, not upon any conclusions derivable from the Mitakshara, but upon long custom and the express authority of the Mayukha.

Even in Madras a step-sister is not an heir (m).

(l) Narasimma v. Mangammal, 13 Mad., 10; Nallanna v. Pounal, 14 Mad., 149; Chinnammal v. Venkatachella, 15 Mad., 421; Ramappa v. Arumugath, 17 Mad., 182; Sundrammal v. Rangasami, 18 Mad., p. 198; Venkatasubramaniam v. Thayarammal, 21 Mad., 263.

(m) Kumara Velu v. Virana, 5 Mad., 29.

CHAPTER XVIII.

INHERITANCE.

Order of Succession.

§ 540. WE now proceed to examine the order of succession under Hindu law, always remembering that it only applies to estates held in severalty, unless in cases governed by Bengal law, where quasi-severalty is the normal condition of each sharer (§ 498). Each of the successive classes takes in default of the preceding. If the estate has once vested in any male he becomes a fresh stock, and on his death the descent is governed by the law of survivorship or of inheritance, according as he has left undivided coparceners or not. Where the estate has vested in a female, or in any number of females in succession to each other, on the death of the last descent is again traced from the last male holder, unless in certain cases under Bombay law, hereafter discussed (§ 609).

ISSUE.—If a man has become divided from his sons, Issue- and subsequently has one or more sons born, he or they take his property exclusively (§ 472). If he is undivided from them, his property passes to the whole of his male issue, which term includes his legitimate sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons (a). All of these take at once as a single heir, either directly or by way of representation. Suppose, for instance, a man has had three sons, and dies leaving his eldest son A, and B the son of A; two grandsons, C¹ and C², by his second son, and three great-grandsons, D¹, D², and D³, by his third son; A takes for himself and B, C¹, and C² take for themselves, and D¹, D², and D³ take simul- taneously.

(a) Budhayana, i., 5, 11, § 9; Manu, ix., § 137 185; Mitakshara, i., 1, § 3; ii., 8, § 1; Apararka cited Sarvadhikari, 640, 9 Cal., 320; Daya Bhaga, iii., 1, § 18; xi., 1, § 31—34; V. May., iv., 4, § 20—22; Viramit., p. 154, § 11; Vivada Chintamani, 295; per curiam, Rutheputty v. Rajunder, 2 M. I. A., 156; Bhyah Ram v. Bhyah Ugur, 13 M. I. A., 378; S. C., 14 Suth. (P. C.), 1.

take for themselves, and these three lines all take at once, and not in succession to each other. The mode in which they take inter se, and the nature of the interests which they take, have been discussed already (b). This seems to be an exception to the general rule, that among heirs of different degrees, the nearer always excludes the more remote (c). It really is no exception. It is merely an illustration of the rule that property, which is held as separate in one generation, always becomes joint in the next generation (§ 268). If it is held by a father who is himself the head of a coparcenary, it passes at his death to the whole coparcenary, and not to any single member of it, all of them having under the Mitakshara equal rights by birth. This rule was illustrated lately in the following case. A grandson sued his grandfather and uncles for a partition. He obtained a decree as to all the joint property, but failed as to part which was held to be the separate property of the grandfather. On the death of the grandfather he brought a fresh suit for a share of this, contending that by descent it had become joint property. This was perfectly true, but the answer to the plaintiff was that he was no longer a member of the coparcenary. On the grandfather's death, his interest in the joint property passed to the remaining coparceners by survivorship. His own separate property passed to his united sons as heirs, and in their hands became an addition to the joint property, in which the divided grandson had no interest (d). The Daya Bhaga puts forward the same view from its religious aspect. According to it, the son, grandson, and great-grandson, all present religious offerings to the deceased, and all with equal efficacy. There is, therefore, no reason why one should be preferred to the other. But as the grandson presents no offerings while his own father is alive, B does not take directly, but C and D do (e).

(b) See ante § 271.

(d) Fakirappa v. Yellappa, 22 Bom., 101.

(e) Daya Bhaga, iii, 1, § 18, 19.

(c) Khettur v. Poorno, 15 Suth., 482.

§ 541. Property which is in its nature impartible, as a Primogeniture. Raj or ancient Zemindary, can, of course, only descend to one of the issue; which that one is to be will depend upon the custom of the family (§ 54). In general, such estates descend by the law of primogeniture (f). In that case the eldest son is the son who was born first, not the first-born son of a senior, or even of the first married, wife (g), unless in families where by custom the sons take rank according to the seniority of their mothers (h). The opinion that in all cases the son born of the first married wife, or puttabi stri, takes precedence over an elder son by a junior wife, is certainly very prevalent in Hindu society. It has been discussed in three cases before the Privy Council. In neither of the first two cases was it necessary to decide it, and in the later of the two cases their Lordships seemed to throw much discredit upon the existence of such a rule as a matter of Hindu law, apart from special custom (i). Finally in 1901, and after an examination of all the authorities, it was decided by the Committee that the fact that an after-born son was the offspring of the puttabi stri was not an exception to the general rule that sons take by priority of birth (k). A further question, which was left undecided by the Privy Council, related to the precedence between sons arising from the fact that their mothers were of a different class or caste. The latter ground of precedence can, apparently, never arise, as marriages between persons of different caste are long since obsolete (§ 89) and a son

Sons by mother of different class.

(f) This presumption of course may be displaced by evidence showing that some other rule prevailed, such as selection of the successor. Ishri Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 11 I. A., 135; Achal Ram v. Udai Pertab, 11 I. A., 51; Mohesh Chunder v. Satrugan, 29 I. A., 62; S. C., 29 Cal., 343; Sardar Muhammad v. Nawab Ghulam, 30 I. A., 190; S. C., 30 Cal., 843.

(g) Manu, ix., § 125, 126; Rughonath v. Hurrehur, 7 S. D., 126 (146); Bhujangrav v. Malojirav, 5 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 161; Ramalakshmi v. Sivanantha, 14 M. I. A., 570; S. C., 12 B. L. R., 396; S. C., 17 Suth., 553; Pedda Ramappa v. Bangari, 8 I. A., 1; S. C., 2 Mad., 286. See as to the old law, ante § 92.

(h) Ramasami Kamayya v. Sundaralingasami, 17 Mad., 422; affd. 26 I. A., 55; S. C., 22 Mad., 515.

(i) Per curiam, 17 Mad., p. 438; 5 Bom. (A. C. J.), p. 165; 14 M. I. A., p. 593; 8 I. A., p. 7.

(k) Jagdish Bahadur v. Sheo Pertab, 28 I. A., 100; S. C., 23 All., 369.

born of such a marriage would be illegitimate. There may, however, be lawful marriages between persons of different classes within the same caste, and many of such classes are distinctly inferior to others. In Madras a contest arose between the sons of two mothers, neither of whom was the first married wife of the Zemindar. The younger of the two sons was born from a wife who was senior in date of marriage to the mother of the elder son. The High Court decided in favour of the younger son on the ground that his mother was of a superior class to the other wife. The former was the daughter of a Zemindar, while the latter was the daughter of a ryot. In addition to this social difference, the mother of the elder son, by reason of a strain of illegitimacy in her parents, was considered to belong to the Parivara class of Sudras, while the mother of the younger son was of the Kambla Tottiyar class, which is superior to the Parivara. There was a further ground of preference which was in itself conclusive, viz., that both Courts found that there was a binding custom among Zemindars of the class in question, that sons took precedence according to the date of their respective mother's marriages. On appeal to the Privy Council the decree of the High Court was confirmed, solely on the latter ground, no argument being allowed on the former (l). The judgment of the Madras High Court was founded upon the translation by Sir W. Jones of Manu, ix., §§ 122—125. The first of these slokas is translated "A younger son being born of a first married wife after an elder had been born of a wife last married but of a lower class, it may be a doubt in that case how the division shall be made." Here the words in italics are admittedly a gloss ascribed by Sir W. Jones to Culluca Bhatta, and of the verse so translated the High Court says correctly that it raises a doubt which Manu does not decide. According to Dr. Bühler's version the verse runs as follows:—"If there be a doubt how the division shall be made, in case the younger son is born of the elder, the elder son of the younger wife," then, etc., that is, he proposes a problem in § 122 which he solves as follows in §§ 123—125:—

(l) Sunḍaralingasami v. Ramasami Kamayya, 26 I. A., 55; S. C., 22 Mad., 515.

(1) If the younger son is born of the first wife, he receives one most excellent bull, the next best falling to the sons of junior wives.

(2) If the son of the eldest wife is himself also the eldest, then he receives an extra allowance of fifteen cows and a bull.

(3) "Between sons born of wives equal (in caste) (literally 'like wives') (and) without (any other) distinction, no seniority in right of the mothers exists: seniority is declared to be according to birth."

Even on this view it would be necessary to give some meaning to the words "without distinction." They may refer to a wife who had been appointed to bear issue to her father (§ 76), or to some of those moral distinctions of which the sages are so fond. It is more probable that they refer to some distinction such as the author of the gloss on § 122 had in view (m). The question would then arise, what does that gloss mean? Does it mean a difference of caste, or a difference of classes within a caste? Apparently similar words are used in § 148, where the following slokas 149—156 clearly show that the word indicates the four great castes, not minor sub-divisions.

Where the contest is between an adopted son and a natural-born son, their rights on partition have been already discussed (§ 168). Where the property is impartible, it has been stated by the High Court of Madras that the after-born would be preferred to the adopted son (n). I know of no case in which the point has required decision, but it seems to follow as a necessary inference

(m) This gloss was treated as authoritative by the Judicial Committee in 8 I. A., p. 5. In 25 I. A., p. 108, it was admitted that Sir William Jones was wrong in attributing to Culluca Bhatta the words interpolated in the text of Manu. It was however considered that the gloss in question had from long acceptance acquired an independent authority which could not now be denied.

(n) 17 Mad., p. 424.

Adopted and natural-born son.

from the fact that on a partition the natural son is so largely preferred.

Devolution of impartible
property.

§ 542. When the single heir who is entitled to succeed to impartible property has been ascertained, the next question is as to the line of devolution in succeeding generations.

So long as the line of the eldest son continued in possession, the estate would pass in that line (o). That is to say, on the death of an eldest son, leaving sons, it would pass to his eldest son and not his brother. But there is a singular want of authority as to the rule to be adopted where an eldest son, who has never taken the estate, has died, leaving younger brothers, and also sons. The point has been twice argued before the Privy Council, but in neither case was it necessary to decide the question. The only cases that I am aware of in which the point was actually decided, were in Madras. The earlier cases arose in the same family, as will appear from the following pedigree. It only shows so much of the relationship as will render the litigation intelligible.

Here it will be seen that at the death of the Zemindar he left a grandson, B, by an elder son, and a younger son X. The latter got possession of the Zemindary, but B brought a suit against him, and ultimately recovered possession. There were circumstances in the case which might have justified the decree on other grounds, but on the whole it must be taken that the Provincial Court, which tried the case, went on the broad principle that the son of a predeceased elder son was entitled to the Zemindary in preference to a surviving younger son. No appeal was preferred against the decree. The estate then passed to C, at whose death it was claimed by the plaintiff, as son of Y, the deceased elder brother of Z. The original Court held, amongst other grounds for dismissing the claim, that Z was a nearer heir than the plaintiff. This decision was reversed by the Madras High Court, which held that by the ordinary law of primogeniture, applicable to impartible estates, the plaintiff represented the eldest line. It will be seen that there was an important distinction between the two disputed successions. In the first case B was the grandson of the last male holder, and, therefore, in an ordinary case of succession, would have as good a claim as his uncle X; a son and a grandson being considered equally near, and equally efficacious (§ 540). But in the second case the plaintiff was the nephew of Z, and in an ordinary case of collateral succession the nearer takes before the more remote, as for instance, a brother before a nephew (§§ 569, 570). This was the view submitted to the Judicial Committee. On the other hand it was argued that the property, though impartible, was still joint family property, and therefore passed by survivorship, in which case Y was the heir expectant during his life, and at his death his rights passed on to the plaintiff who represented him. The Judicial Committee, however, found that there had been a partition of the whole property during the life of B, under which he took the Zemindary as separate estate. Consequently, the widow of C was the heir, and it was unnecessary to decide between the claims of the plaintiff and Z (p). Upon principle, it would seem that, at the death of each holder, the estate would go to the eldest member of the class of persons who, at that time, were his nearest heirs. If so, Z was certainly nearer to C than the plaintiff. This seems to have been the ground of the decision of the Judicial Committee, in a case relating to the Tipperah Raj, where the question was, whether an elder brother by the half blood, or a younger brother by the full blood, would be the next heir to a Raj. They were pressed with the argument that on the death of the previous holder, who was the father both of the deceased Rajah and of the claimants, the Raj had vested in all the brothers jointly, though of course it could only be held by one. If so, of course, all the brothers were equally near to the father, and on the death of one it would survive to the eldest. But the Committee held that in the case of an impartible estate survivorship cannot exist, as being an incident of joint ownership, which is inconsistent with the separate ownership of the Rajah (q). Therefore, title by survivorship, where it varies from the ordinary rule of heirship, cannot, in the absence of custom, furnish the rule to ascertain the heir to a property which is solely owned and enjoyed, and which passes by inheritance to a single heir. Then, upon the double ground of nearness of kin and religious efficacy, the whole blood was entitled in preference to the half blood (r); that is to say, they held that nothing vested in any member of the family until the death of the last holder, and that at his death the heir was the person who was nearest to him.

(o) See pedigree in Yenumula v. Ramandora, 6 Mad. H. C., 93; Naraganti v. Venkatachelapati, 4 Mad., 250.

(p) Runganayakanma v. Ramayya, P. C., 5th July, 1879, unreported. I was Counsel in the case, and the facts are taken from the record which was before the Privy Council.—J. D. M. In the case of Periasami v. Periasami, 5 I. A., 61; S. C., 1 Mad., 312, the same point was argued but not decided. There the converse question arose. The Zemindary had been awarded to a person standing in the same position as Z, and the widow, who was defendant, urged that the real heir was a person who stood in the same position as the plaintiff, and whose rights had not been noticed by the High Court.

Madras decisions conflict with Tipperah case.

§ 543. In a later case, where the succession to one of the Chittur Polliems was disputed, the Madras High Court followed its own decision in Runganayakamma v. Ramaya, and refused to be bound by the principle laid down in the Tipperah case. The state of the family is shown by the diagram. On the death of a distant collateral relation, Kuppi succeeded as 9th Palaiyagar by an arrangement with his elder brother A. The High Court found that the effect of this arrangement was, that the elder consented to resign his immediate right of succession and that of his descendants in favour of Kuppi and his descendants, but that any rights which A and his line might have on failure of Kuppi and his line were preserved intact. Kuppi was succeeded by his son, who died leaving no issue, a widow Achamma, his uncle Gopal, and his cousin Venkatachalapati. The Government gave the Polliem to the last named person, and he was sued by both the widow and Gopal. The claim of the widow was dismissed on the ground that the family was undivided, and that of Gopal on the ground that the defendant was the nearest heir. The Court held that the ruling in the Tipperah case that co-ownership, and therefore survivorship, did not exist in impartible property, was opposed to the doctrine of the Shivagunga case, and to the ordinary law of Southern India and Benares, respecting the impartible property of a joint family. They laid down the canon that "when impartible property passes by survivorship from one line to another, it devolves not necessarily on the coparcener nearest in blood, but on the nearest coparcener of the senior line" (s).

(q) This is inconsistent with what was laid down by the Committee in the Shivagunga case, 9 M. I. A., 539; S. C., 2 W. R. (P. C.), 31; Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj, 15 I. A., 51; S. C., 10 All., 272; Jogendro v. Nityanund, 17 I. A., 128; S. C., 18 Cal., 151. But all these cases were governed by Mitakshara law.

(r) Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder, 12 M. I. A., 523, 540; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 13; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 21. The whole claim by survivorship was, independently of custom on which the case was really decided, inapplicable. The Tipperah Raj was governed by the Daya Bhaga law, which does not recognise survivorship as determining the devolution of property. See per curiam, 17 Mad., p. 330.

§ 544. A somewhat different statement of the rule was given in a later case before the same Court (t). There

(s) Naraganti v. Venkatachalapati, 4 Mad., 250, 265; folld. by Muttusami Aiyar, J., in Muttuvadaganadha v. Periasami, 16 Mad., 11, p. 16; aff'd., 23 I. A., 28; S. C., 19 Mad., 451; Kachi Kaliyana v. Kachi Yuva, 32 I. A., 261.

(t) Subramanya Pandya v. Siva Subramanya, 17 Mad., 316, pp. 325-327; Kali Krishna v. Raghunath Deb, 31 Cal., 224.

Recent formula of succession.

the Zemindar, who had himself succeeded as being the eldest son by a junior wife, died leaving a uterine brother and two half-brothers, one of whom was the eldest of the three. The rival claimants were the uterine brother who asserted a superior title by nearness of blood, and the half-brother who relied on seniority. It was admitted that the Zemindari was an impartible estate belonging to a joint Hindu family constituted by its male coparceners. The original Court found in favour of the uterine brother. This decision was reversed by the High Court. They laid down as governing the case certain general principles. "The first of them is that a rule of decision in regard to succession to impartible property is to be found in the Mitakshara law applicable to partible property, subject to such modifications as naturally flow from the character of the property as an impartible estate. The second principle is that the only modification which impartibility suggests in regard to the right of succession, is the existence of a special rule for the selection of a single heir when there are several heirs of the same class, who would be entitled to succeed to the property if it were partible under the general Hindu law. The third principle is that, in the absence of a special custom, the rule of primogeniture furnishes a ground of preference. In determining who the single heir is according to these principles we have first to ascertain the class of heirs who would be entitled to succeed to the property if it were partible, regard being had to its nature as coparcenary or separate property, and we have next to select heir by applying the special rule indicated above." The Court proceeded to state that if the property in question had been separate property the uterine would undoubtedly have excluded the half-brother. But then came in the principle that, according to "the Mitakshara law of succession as applied to partible coparcenary property, the right of survivorship is mentioned as a dominant right which controls the rule of succession applied to separate property." "It follows that in case of coparcenary property, the doctrine of survivorship furnishes an additional rule whereby the class of heirs has to be found." "When therefore partible property belongs to a coparcenary family, and when a coparcener dies without male issue, leaving an uterine brother and one half-brother surviving him, the half-brother is entitled to share the property equally with the uterine brother at the time of partition, the deceased brother being considered as if he had never been born, and the property being treated as always vested in the family as a unit, and as never absolutely vested in any one coparcener in preference to another, how much soever the family may change as to the number of coparceners during coparcenary. To say therefore that nearness of blood is a ground of preference in such cases would be tantamount to ignoring the pre-existing coparcenary interest of half-brothers. Nearness of blood being thus no ground of preference, under the Mitakshara law in case of disputed succession to coparcenary property when it is partible, it is likewise no ground of preference when such property is impartible. It is conceded that the Zemindari belongs to the coparcenary family consisting of all the brothers of the propositus, and the nearest class of kindred in which the single heir ought to be found is that of brothers, whether of the whole or half-blood; and applying the rule of primogeniture as a subsidiary rule of selection. Since there is no specific custom, the brother that is entitled to the Zemindari is the eldest in years, viz., the plaintiff or appellant."

§ 545. In a decision later than that relating to the Tipperah Raj the Judicial Committee drew a distinction between lineal and ordinary primogeniture, which may perhaps reconcile the apparent conflict of cases (u). The estate was one of the Oudh taluqs. Under Act I of 1869 which governs such estates it is provided that each taluq is to be entered in one or other of certain lists, which regulate its mode of devolution. The estate in question was entered in the second list, which is a list of the taluqdars whose estates, according to the custom of the family before 1856, ordinarily devolved upon a single heir. It was not entered in the third list, which included estates regulated by the rule of primogeniture. The plaintiff was the eldest surviving male of the eldest branch of the family of Pirthi Pal from whom descent was to be traced, but there were in existence other males of junior branches of the same family who were nearer of kin to Pirthi Pal than he was. The defendant admittedly had no title. Both Courts found that the estate went by the rule of primogeniture; by which apparently they only meant, that, as between several persons of the same class, the eldest would be entitled to succeed. Both Courts found in favour of the plaintiff, but the Judicial Commissioner seems to have thought that his decision only went in favour of the family as against the defendant, and that the rights of the respective members of the family, inter se, would be still open to discussion. The Privy Council reversed the decree of the lower Courts. They pointed out that the plaintiff in ejection must make out an absolute title in himself. It was necessary therefore for the plaintiff to make out that the estate descended according to the rules of lineal primogeniture as distinguished from descent to a single heir amongst several in equal degree (v). That when a taluqdar's name was entered in the second list and not in the third, the estate although it is to descend to a single heir, is not to be considered as an estate passing according to the rules of lineal primogeniture. Consequently that the plaintiff had not established a title which would enable him to evict a defendant in actual possession. Where there are two persons equally near in different lines, the senior line will prevail (w).

(u) Achal Ram v. Udai Pertab, 11 I. A., 51.

§ 546. Possibly the following rules may be found to reconcile all the cases:

(v) See a case where such a title was made out. Mohesh v. Satrugan, 29 I. A., 62; S. C., 29 Cal., 343.

(w) Narindar v. Achal Ram, 20 I. A., 77; S. C., 20 Cal., 649.

1. When an estate descends to a single heir, in a coparcenary under Mitakshara law, the presumption is that it will be held by the eldest member of the class of persons, who would hold it jointly if the estate were partible.

2. In cases not governed by the Mitakshara law of survivorship, the heir will be the eldest member of those persons who are nearer of kin to the last owner than any other class, and who are equally near to him as between themselves.

3. Special evidence will be required to establish a descent by lineal primogeniture, that is by continual descent to the eldest member of the eldest branch, in exclusion of nearer members of younger branches.

4. The presumption as to primogeniture of either sort may be rebutted by showing a usage that the heir should be chosen on some other ground of preference.

§ 547. Illegitimate sons in the three higher classes never take as heirs, but are only entitled to maintenance from the estate of the father. The right is a personal right and not heritable (x). It is said that by a special usage they may inherit, but in the only cases in which such a special usage was set up it was negatived (y). The illegitimate son of a Sudra may, however, under certain circumstances, inherit either jointly or solely. His rights have already been referred to under the head of Partition (§ 475), but it will be necessary to go a little more fully into them here. His position rests upon two texts. Manu says (z), "A son begotten by a man of the servile class on his female slave, or on the female slave of his male slave, may take a share of the heritage, if permitted (by the other sons)."

(x) Roshan v. Bulwant Singh, 27 I. A., 51; S. C., 22 All., 191.

(y) Mohun v. Chumun, 1 S. D., 28 (37); Pershad v. Muhesree, 3 S. D., 132 (176); Bhaoni v. Maharaj, 3 All., 738.

(z) ix., § 179. The words 'by the other sons' in Sir W. Jones' translation are taken from the gloss of Kulluka Bhatta. Dr. Bühler translates the same text, "if permitted (by his father)." This agrees with the rule laid down by Yajnavalkya.

Illegitimate son of a Sudra.

Yajnavalkya enlarges the rule as follows: "Even a son begotten by a Sudra on a female slave may take a share by the father's choice. But, if the father be dead, the brethren should make him partaker of the moiety of a share; and one who has no brothers may inherit the whole property in default of daughters' sons" (a). The first question that arises upon these texts is as to the nature of the connection out of which the illegitimate son contemplated by them must issue. Are the texts to be taken literally, as denoting that the mother must be the slave of the father, or do they denote a son born from a concubine, of the offspring of a merely temporary intercourse? On this point there is a direct conflict of authority.

§ 548. Jimuta Vahana, as translated by Mr. Colebrooke, takes the less strict view. He says in reference to Manu, "The son of a Sudra by a female slave, or other unmarried woman, may share, etc.;" and he paraphrases the text of Yajnavalkya by the words "begotten on an unmarried woman, and having no brother, etc." (b). In a case which arose in Calcutta, Mr. Justice Mitter stated that the above passages of the Daya Bhaga were incorrectly translated, and that the first passage should run, "The son of a Sudra by an unmarried female slave, etc.;" and that the second passage should begin, "Having no other brother begotten on a married woman, he may take the whole property." The Court, therefore, held that the words "son of a female slave" must be literally interpreted, so far as the districts governed by Bengal law were concerned, and that an illegitimate son whose mother was not a slave could not inherit (c). Now, there seems to be no ground for supposing that there is any difference in this point between the law of Bengal and the other provinces, as all the authorities rely upon the same texts. As slavery was abolished

(a) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 133, 134; Mitakshara, i., 12, § 1.

(b) Daya Bhaga, ix., § 29, 31; 3 Dig., 143.

(c) Narain v. Rakhai, 1 Cal., 1; S. C., 23 Suth., 334, citing 1 W. MacN., 18; 2 W. MacN., 15, n.; Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 30, followed, after an examination of the Madras and Bombay cases, in Kripal Narain v. Sukurmoni, 19 Cal., 91, and Ram Saran v. Tek Chand, 28 Cal., 194.

by Act V of 1843, it follows, if the above construction is sound, that the inheritance of the illegitimate son of a Sudra, born after that date, has now become impossible. On the other hand, the Bombay High Court in an equally recent case, give a literal translation of the text of Jimuta Vahana, which exactly corresponds with Mr. Colebrooke's translation (d). So, Mahesvara renders the same text: "He being born of an unmarried woman, and having no brother born of a wedded wife," etc. (e). Prosonno Coomar Tagore renders the corresponding passage by Vachspati Misra: "A son of a Sudra by an unmarried woman" (f), and the same rendering is given by Mr. Borradaile of the passage in the Mayukha (g). If, however, the proper translation of the passage in the Daya Bhaga be that which is given by Mr. Justice Mitter, then the question would be narrowed to this: What is meant by the term Dasi, or female slave? The Dattaka Mimamsa, in describing the slave's son (Dasi putra), says, "A female purchased by price, who is enjoyed, is a slave. The son who is born on her is considered a slave son" (h). The point is discussed by the Bombay High Court, apparently without any knowledge of the Calcutta case, and they arrive at the conclusion that the word does not necessarily mean anything more than an unmarried Sudra woman kept as a concubine (i). In Madras it has frequently been held that the illegitimate son of a Sudra will inherit, and, although it has not been necessary to decide the point, it has been stated, or assumed, that the mother need not be a slave in the strict sense of that term. In Southern India, at all events, the word Dasi is invariably applied to a dancing girl in a pagoda (k).

(d) Rahi v. Govind, 1 Bom., 110.

(e) Daya Bhaga, ix., § 31, note.

(f) Vivada Chintamani, 274.

(g) V. May., iv., 4, § 32. The Mitakshara, i., 12, § 2, and the Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 30, only use the term "female slave."

(h) Dattaka Mimamsa, iv., § 75, 76.

(i) Rahi v. Govind, 1 Bom., 97, followed Sadu v. Baiza, 4 Bom., 37, 44.

(k) Chendrabhan v. Chingooram, Mad. Dec. of 1849, 50; Pandaiya v. Puli, 1 Mad. H. C., 478, affirmed; Sub nomine, Inderun v. Ramasawmy, 13 M. I. A., 141; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 41; S. C., 4 Mad. Jur.,

Whether his mother must have been a slave.

Meaning of
slave.

Finally upon a review of all the authorities, the Madras High Court has ruled that "although the primary meaning of the word Dasi was a slave, it included also a concubine, or a woman of the servile class in a secondary sense, and there is reason to hold upon the texts that an unmarried Sudra woman kept as a continuous concubine came within its scope" (l). And the Judicial Committee has also stated, though without reference to this point, that "they are satisfied that in the Sudra caste illegitimate children may inherit" (m). Throughout the futwahs recorded by Messrs. West and Bühler, the term slave girl, or Dasi, and concubine, appear to be treated as convertible terms (n). The Allahabad High Court follows the Madras and Bombay ruling in preference to that of the Calcutta Judges (o).

§ 549. Probably in former times the permanent concubine was always a slave, that is a person purchased, or born in the house, and incapable of leaving it at her own free will. But the principle of the rule seems to have been, that as the marriage tie was less strict among Sudras than among the higher classes, so the issue of women who were permanently kept by Sudras, though not actually married to them, was regarded as something between a legitimate son and the mere bastard offspring of a promiscuous, or illegal, intercourse. Accordingly, it has been held that the son born of an absolutely prohibited union, such as an incestuous, or adulterous, connection, could not inherit, even to a Sudra; and it is now decided, that "the intercourse between the parents must have been a continuous one; there must have been an estab-

323; Muttusamy v. Venkatasubha, 2 Mad. H. C., 293; S. C., on appeal, 12 M. I. A., 203; S. C., 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 15; S. C., 11 Suth. (P. C.), 6; Dattī Parisi v. Dattī Bangaru, 4 Mad. H. C., 204; S. C., 4 Mad. Jur., 136; Krishnamma v. Papa, ib., 234; S. C., 4 Mad. Jur., 130. See too per Mr. Colebrooke, 2 Stra. H. L., 66.

(l) Krishnayan v. Muttusami, 7 Mad., 407, p. 412; Brindavana v. Radhamani, 12 Mad., p. 86.

(m) Per Giffard, L. J., Inderun v. Ramasawmy, 13 M. I. A., 159; supra, note (k).

(n) W. & B., 375—385.

(o) Sarasuti v. Mannu, 2 All., 134; Hargobind v. Dharam Singh, 6 All., 329.

lished concubinage, or, in other words, the woman must have been one exclusively kept by the man" (p). In Bombay it is said by the High Court, that the condition that the Sudra woman should never have been married, has in practice been disregarded. But the cases referred to by the Court are all cases in which the subsequent connection with the previously married woman was not an adulterous one, but was sanctioned by usage having the force of law (q).

§ 550. Supposing an illegitimate Sudra to be entitled, the next question would be as to his rights. Upon this the Mitakshara says in explanation of the texts of Manu and Yajnavalkya (§ 547), "The son begotten by a Sudra on a female slave, obtains a share by the father's choice, or at his pleasure. But after the demise of the father, if there be sons of a wedded wife, let these brothers allow the son of the female slave to participate for half a share, that is, let them give him half as much as the amount of one brother's allotment; however, should there be no sons of a wedded wife, the son of the female slave takes the whole estate, provided there be no daughters of a wife, nor sons of daughters. But if there be such, the son of the female slave participates for half a share only" (r). The Bengal authorities are to the same effect, but say nothing of his right to share with the daughters (s). The only writer who refers to his right where there is a widow, is the author of the Dattaka Chandrika. He says, "If any, even in the series of heirs down to the daughter's son, exist, the son by a female slave does not take the whole estate, but on the contrary shares equally with such heir" (t). This is also the opinion of a pundit whose futwah is given in West and Bühler, 383. On the other hand, the editors, in

(p) Dattī Parisi v. Dattī Bangaru, 4 Mad. H. C., 204, 215; S. C., 4 Mad. Jur., 136; Venkatashella v. Parvatham, 8 Mad. H. C., 134; Rahi v. Govind, 1 Bom., 97; Kuppa v. Singaravelu, 8 Mad., 325; Dalip v. Ganpat, 8 All., 387; Karuppannam v. Bulokam, 23 Mad., 16. See ante § 75.

(q) Rahi v. Govind, 1 Bom., 113.

(r) Mitakshara, i., 12, § 2.

(s) Daya Bhaga, ix., § 29—31; D. K. S., vi., § 32—35; 3 Dig., 143; Viramit, p. 130, § 22.

(t) Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 30, 31.

Share of illegitimate son.

His share

a remark appended to that futwah, say, "The illegitimate son would inherit the whole estate of his father, even though a widow of the latter might be living." This remark is adopted by the High Court of Bombay, and they state that the illegitimate son will also share the property with the daughter and the daughter's son, while there is a widow in existence, subject, of course, to the charge of maintaining the widow (u). The rule was affirmed in a later case also in Bombay (v). There Manaji, a Sudra, died leaving a legitimate son Mahadev, an illegitimate son Sadu, two widows Baiza and Savitri, and a legitimate daughter Daryabai. Mahadev and Sadu entered into joint possession of the estate, and then Mahadev died without issue. It was held that if Mahadev had died before his father, Sadu would have been entitled to only half a share, i.e., one-third of the property, and the remaining two-thirds would have vested in Darya as the legitimate daughter of Manaji, and Baiza and Savitri would have been entitled to maintenance. But that under the actual facts of the case Mahadev and Sadu took the whole, subject to the maintenance and marriage expenses of the widows and daughter, and that, on the death of Mahadev, Sadu took the whole by survivorship. The result would be, that wherever there was an illegitimate son, the widow would be entitled to no more than maintenance. Also, that a daughter and a daughter's son would, in such a case, inherit to the exclusion of the widow, and maintain her, though it is a first principle that neither can ever take, except in default of her.

§ 551. It certainly would require very strong authority to establish such an abnormal state of things. Yet there is absolutely no original authority for it, except the remark of Messrs. West and Bühler, which itself rests upon nothing (w). The chapters of the Hindu law-books, which (u) Rahi v. Govind, 1 Bom., 97, 104.

(v) Sadu v. Baiza, 4 Bom., 37, 52.

(w) There is a futwah quoted at W. & B., 380, in which illegitimate sons are made to exclude a widow. But the widow in question was one who had been married twice. Such a widow appears not to be entitled to the full rights of a widow married as a virgin. See W. & B., 386.

treat of a widow's estate, nowhere suggest such a limitation of her rights. No text writer, no decision, alludes to such a possibility. The passages which discuss the position of an illegitimate son do not even mention the widow, and seem to me not to involve the doctrine of the Bombay High Court, by necessary, or even by probable, implication. Suppose we try a perfectly literal interpretation of the texts upon the subject. Yajnavalkya says that an illegitimate son without brothers may inherit the whole estate in default of daughters' sons. The obvious meaning is that until the line, which terminates with a daughter's son, is exhausted, he cannot take the whole estate, but is only entitled to a part of it. Vijnanesvara makes this even clearer, by saying that a daughter also excludes him from the whole estate, leaving him still entitled to part. He does not think it necessary to say the same as to the widow, who ranks before the daughter. Then, as to the intermediate period, he is to have a share, which is to be half the share for a son. The literal meaning of this is, that in each given instance you are to ascertain what share he would take if he were legitimate, and then give him half of it. Suppose there is a legitimate son, then, if he also were legitimate, the estate would be divided into moieties, of which each would take one. Being illegitimate, he only takes half of the moiety, leaving the remaining three-quarters to his brother (x). Suppose there is no legitimate son, but a widow, daughter, or daughter's son; now, if he were legitimate, he would take the whole. Being illegitimate, he takes only half, the other half going to the widow, daughter, or daughter's son, respectively. If there are none of these, or upon the extinction of all, he takes the whole. Now this is exactly (x) This is the view taken by one Shastri, W. & B., 382. But according to others the meaning is that the division is to be made so that the legitimate son shall have double the share of the illegitimate, that is, in the case put, the former would have two-thirds and the latter one-third; W. & B., 381, 384; per curiam, Sadu v. Baiza, 4 Bom., 52. A similar difference exists as to the mode in which the fourth share to be received by a daughter on partition was to be calculated, ante § 482, or by an adopted son in the case of the subsequent birth of a legitimate son; ante § 168.

where there is a widow.

Share of illegitimate Sudra.

what Devanda Bhatta says in the passage above referred to (y). And the same is substantially the view taken by the Bombay Shastries quoted in West and Bühler, though they differ as to the exact proportions taken, and by Mr. W. MacNaghten and Jagannatha (z). In the first Bombay case the whole discussion was obiter dictum, as the Court decided that the claimant did not come within the terms of the texts at all. In the second case the illegitimate had actually taken along with the legitimate son, so as to let in the principle of survivorship (a). The Madras High Court appears to take the view of the widow's right which has been suggested above in cases where the property is partible (b), and gives the widow the preference over the illegitimate son, where the property is impartible (c). In a recent case in Bombay, Sargent, C. J., seems to have adopted the view of the above texts which is stated in this paragraph (d).

Bastards inherit to each other.

§ 552. Illegitimate sons can only take to their father's estate. They have no claim to inherit to collaterals (e). It has also been held by the Madras High Court that they have no claim by survivorship against the undivided coparceners of the father, and therefore cannot sue his brothers and their sons for a partition after his death (f). The principle is, that as against the father the illegitimate son can only take by his choice, and therefore is not a joint heir with him, until he has actually been made such by some paternal act (g). In the absence of such an act he can only take as heir, and survivorship will intercept his (y) Dattaka Chandrika, v., § 30, 31.

(z) W. & B., 351—386; acc. 1 W. MacN., 18; 3 Dig., 143.

(a) Jogendra Bhupai v. Nityanand, 17 I. A., 128; S. C., 18 Cal., 151.

(b) 8 Mad., 561; 25 Mad., p. 522.

(c) Parvati v. Thirumalai, 10 Mad., 334; Chinnammal v. Varadarajulu, 15 Mad., 307.

(d) Shesgiri v. Girewa, 14 Bom., 282; Ambabai v. Govind, 23 Bom., p. 265. In Khandeish a legitimate daughter and an illegitimate son share together. Steele, 180.

(e) 2 W. MacN., 15, n.; Nissar v. Kowar, Marsh, 609; Shome Shankar v. Rajendra Swami, 21 All., 99.

(f) Krishnayan v. Multusami, 7 Mad., 407; Ranoji v. Kandoji, 8 Mad., 557; approved 12 Mad., p. 403; affd. Karuppa v. Kumarasami, 25 Mad., 429.

(g) Sadu v. Baiza, 4 Bom., 37; per curiam, 11 Cal., 714.

claim in that capacity, just as it does that of the widow, daughter, or daughter's son, with whom he would share (h). If, however, the father leaves legitimate and illegitimate sons, then the legitimate takes in preference to all other heirs and the illegitimate share with him. When they have once taken jointly, on the death of the legitimate son without issue, the illegitimate takes the whole by survivorship, and in this way supersedes the right of the widow (i). It has lately been held in Madras that the legitimate issue of an illegitimate son represents the rights of the latter, such as they are. Therefore if A dies leaving legitimate sons, and the legitimate issue of an illegitimate son, the latter will share with the former; and if A dies leaving no legitimate issue, the legitimate issue of the illegitimate son will take in preference to a divided brother of A. What rights, if any, are possessed by the illegitimate issue of an illegitimate son was left undecided (k). It is also to be remembered that, as the English rule which prevents bastards tracing to their father has no existence in Hindu law, so the fact of illegitimacy does not prevent bastard brothers claiming to each other. Accordingly, where two take jointly, the estate passes by survivorship in the ordinary way. Still less is there any absence of heritable blood as between bastards and their mother (l).

§ 553. WIDOW.—In default of male issue, joint with, or Several widows. separate from, their father, the next heir is the widow (m).

(h) If the father disposes of his own interest, nothing will remain on which the claim as illegitimate son can operate as against the legitimate sons. Ram Saran v. Tek Chand, 28 Cal., 194.

(i) Sadu v. Baiza, ub. sup.; Jogendra v. Nityanand, 11 Cal., 702, affd. 17 I. A., 128; S. C., 18 Cal., 151, where it was held that the same rule applied to an impartible Raj.

(k) Ramalinga v. Pavada, 25 Mad., 519.

(l) Venkataram v. Venkata Lutchmee, 2 N. C., 304; Pandayya v. Puli, 1 Mad. H. C., 478; Mayna Bai v. Uttaram, 2 Mad. H. C., 197; Myna Boyee v. Ootaram, 8 M. I. A., 400; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 4; W. & B., 455, 11 Mad., p. 397; Sivasangu v. Minal, 12 Mad., 277; Narasanna v. Gangu, 13 Mad., 133; Arunagiri v. Ranganayaki, 21 Mad., 40; per curiam, 11 Cal., p. 714; Tara Munnee v. Motee Buneanee, 7 S. D., 273 (325).

(m) Mitakshara, ii., 1; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 43; V. May., iv., 8, § 1—7, Viramit., p. 131, ch. iii., Ramappa v. Sithammal, 2 Mad., 182; Balkrishna v. Savitribai, 3 Bom., 54. See ante § 522, et seq. The same rule prevails among the Tiyans of the Malabar coast who follow the Makkatayem law, Imbiachi Kandan v. I. Pennu, 19 Mad., 1. So the widow succeeds at once on renunciation

Where there are several widows, all inherit jointly, according to a text of the Mitakshara, which should come in at the end of ii., 1, § 5, but which has been omitted in Mr. Colebrooke's translation: "The singular number, 'wife,' in the text of Yajnavalkya, signifies the kind. Hence, if there are several wives belonging to the same, or different classes, they divide, and take it" (n). All the wives take together as a single heir with survivorship, and no part of the husband's property passes to any more distant relation till all are dead (o). Where the property is impartible, as being a Raj or ancient Zemindary, of course it can only be held by one, and then the senior widow is entitled to hold it, subject to the right of the others to maintenance (p). In other cases the senior widow would, as in the case of an ordinary coparcenership, have a preferable right to the care and management of the joint property. But she would hold it as manager for all, with equality of rights, not merely on her own account, with an obligation to maintain the others (q).

Several widows.

§ 554. Where several widows hold an estate jointly, or where one holds as manager for the others, each has a right to her proportionate share of the produce of the property, and of the benefits derivable from its enjoyment. And the widows may be placed in possession of separate portions of the property, either by agreement among themselves, or by decree of Court, where from the nature of the property, or from the conduct of the co-widows, such a separate possesof his rights by the prior heir. Ruvee v. Roopshunker, 2 Bor., 656, 665 [713]; Ram Kannye v. Meernomoyee, 2 Suth., 49.

(n) See as to the omission, Goldstücker, 15; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 47, note 2; Tera Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C., 51; Viramit, p. 153.

(o) 1 W. MacN., 20; 2 W. MacN., 37; F. MacN., 6; Berjessory v. Ramconny, 2 M. Dig., 80; Rumea v. Bhagee, 1 Bom. H. C., 66; Tijoyiamba v. Kamakshi, 3 Mad. H. C., 424; Bhugwandeem v. Myna Bae, 11 M. I. A., 487; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 23; Nilamani v. Radhamani, 4 I. A., 212; S. C., 1 Mad., 290; 29 I. A., p. 165; Bulakidas v. Keshavtal, 6 Bom., 85. The contrary opinion of Jimuta Vahana is not now law; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 15, 47.

(p) Vutsavoy v. Vutsavoy, 1 Mad. Dec., 453; Seenevullala v. Tungama, 2 Mad. Dec., 40. There is no inconsistency between a custom of descent by lineal primogeniture and the right of females to inherit. A rule excluding females must be proved by those who allege it. Ram Nundun v. Janki Koer, 29 I. A., 78; S. C., 29 Cal., 828.

(q) Tijoyiamba v. Kamakshi, ub sup.

sion appears to be the only effectual mode of securing to each the full enjoyment of her rights. But no partition can be effected between them, whether by consent or by adverse decree, which would convert the joint estate into an estate in severalty, and put an end to the right of survivorship (r). In the case of Rindamma v. Venkataramappa cited above, it was suggested that the widows might possibly enter into such an agreement as would bind each to an absolute surrender of all interest in the share of the other, so as to let in the next heirs of the husband after the death of that other. Very recently, in a case where two widows had entered into a formal partition deed, which granted to each full powers of alienation, and one of the widows had alienated to a stranger and then died; it was held that the surviving widow could not recover the property so alienated as survivor. She had full power to alienate the whole or any part of her interest in the estate for her life and had in fact done so (s). On the principle of joint tenancy with survivorship, no alienation by one widow even though she is the manager at the time, can have any validity against the rights of the others without their consent, or an established necessity arising under circumstances which rendered it impossible to seek for consent (t). It has, however, been held that a widow can alienate her life interest as against her co-widows, just as she can against the reversioners, and that such alienation can be enforced by partition against them, without prejudice to their rights of survivorship (u).

§ 555. Whatever may have been the ancient law on the subject (§ 93), it is quite clear now that chastity is a condition precedent to the taking by the widow of her

Effect of want of chastity.

(r) Tijoyiamba v. Kamakshi, Nilamani v. Radhamani, ante note (o). See however Mt. Sundar v. Mt. Parbati, 16 I. A., 186; S. C., 12 All., 51; Rindamma v. Venkataramappa, 3 Mad. H. C., 268; Ariyaputri v. Alamelu, 11 Mad., 354; Sellam v. Chinnammal, 24 Mad., 441.

(s) Ramakal v. Ramasami, 22 Mad., 522.
(t) Bhugwandeem v. Myna Bae, ub sup.; Ram Piyari v. Mulchand, 7 All., 114; Gajapati Radhamani v. Pusapati Alakarajeswari, 19 I. A., 184; S. C., 16 Mad., 1. See post Chap. XX.

(u) Janokinath v. Mohuranath, (F. B.), 9 Cal., 580, disagreeing with Kathaperumal v. Venkabei, 2 Mad., 174; Vadati v. Kolipalli, 26 Mad., 334.

husband's estate (v). But a question upon which there has been much conflict of authority arises, whether the incontinence of a widow is like any other ground of disability, which only prevents the inheritance from vesting, or whether it will divest her estate when she has once become entitled to it in possession. The weight of authority in earlier times seems certainly to have been in favour of the latter view, upon the principle, no doubt, that the widow only received her husband's estate for the purpose of providing for his spiritual necessities, and that she would be unable to do so if she were living in a state of guilt. In later times, however, the more secular view prevailed, that a widow's estate was in this respect not different from that of any other limited owner, and could not be defeated by any ground of incapacity intervening after it had once vested in possession. The whole law upon the subject was elaborately discussed and examined in a case before the Bengal High Court, in which the latter doctrine was maintained, and this decision was affirmed by the Privy Council. The same ruling had previously been laid down by the Courts of Bombay, the North-West Provinces and the Punjab, and it may be assumed, therefore, to be the general law of India (w).

§ 556. The second marriage of a widow was formerly unlawful, except where it was sanctioned by local custom (§ 94), consequently it entailed the forfeiture of a widow's estate, either as being a signal instance of incontinence, or as necessarily involving degradation from caste (x).

(v) Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 37—39; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 12—21; Vivada Chintamani, 289—91; V. May., iv., 8, § 2, 6, 8, 9; Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 47, 48, 56. See all the cases discussed, Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 13 B. L. R., 1; S. C., 19 Suth., 367. The mere fact that the wife had been cast off by her husband, where no want of chastity was proved, does not disqualify her from inheriting at his death. Shamanna v. Appamma, 6 Mysore, 118.

(w) Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 13 B. L. R., 1; S. C., 19 Suth., 367; affid. 71 A., 115; S. C., 5 Cal., 776; Parvati v. Bhiku, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 25; Nehalo v. Kishen, 2 All., 150; Bhawani v. Mahtab, ib., 171; Sellam v. Chinammal, 24 Mad., 441; Punjab Customs, 61. See as to the effect of Act XXI of 1850 (Freedom of Religion) upon the unchastity of a widow. Rajkoonwaree v. Golabee, S. D. of 1858, 1891.

(x) 1 Stra. H. L., 242; W. & B., 110; Kery Kolitany v. Mooneeram, 13 B. L. R., 75; S. C., 19 Suth., 367.

Even where second marriages were allowed in Bombay, the wife was compelled to give up the property she had inherited from her first husband (y). This seems also to have been the custom among the Tamil tribes, upon the evidence of the Thesawaleme (z), and among the Coorgs (a), and the same principle has been recently applied by the High Court of Madras in the case of a second marriage of a Maraver woman, and of a Lingait Gounden in the Wynaad (b). In the case of the Maraver woman they proceeded upon the ground that the Maravers were governed by the general body of Hindu law, except in so far as it could be shown that exceptional usages prevailed. Therefore, that the special usage which allowed a Maraver widow to re-marry, did not prevail over the general principle that a widow could only retain the property of her husband so long as she continued to be the surviving portion of the deceased. In the case of the Lingait Gounden they found a special usage that the widow on her re-marriage ceased to inherit her husband's estate. In an Allahabad case a widow of the Sweeper caste had re-married, and it was found as a fact "that she did what in her caste never had been and was not prohibited by the law to which she was subject, and her marriage was a good and valid marriage." The Court held that she did not forfeit her interest in her husband's property, since the Act of 1856 was passed for the purpose of enabling persons to marry who could not re-marry before the Act and § 2 only applies to such persons (c). In this case no special usage entailing forfeiture was suggested, and no very strong presumption could arise as to the rigorous application of Hindu law to such outcastes as sweepers. The decision was lately followed by the same Court in the case of a widow of the Kurmi class, where such re-Act authorising widow marriage.

(y) Hurkoonwur v. Ruttun Bae, 1 Bor., 431 [475]; Treekumjee v. Mt. Laroo, 2 Bor., 361 [397]; Steele, 26, 159, 168.

(z) Thesawaleme, i., § 10.

(a) Soobappa v. Venkamma, 3 Mysore, 239.

(b) Murugayi v. Viramakali, 1 Mad., 226; Koduthi v. Madu, 7 Mad., 321.

(c) Har Saran Das v. Nandi, 11 All., 330.

marriages are permitted. The Court stated that besides the Sweeper case there had been others decided in the same way, forming a consistent Cursus curiæ, of whose soundness they were satisfied (d). The marriage of widows is now legalised in all cases. But the Act which permits it provides that "All rights and interests which any widow may have in her deceased husband's property, by way of maintenance, or by inheritance to her husband or to his lineal successors, or by virtue of any will or testamentary provision conferring upon her, without express permission to re-marry, only a limited interest in such property, with no power of alienating the same, shall, upon her re-marriage, cease and determine as if she had then died; and the next heirs of her deceased husband, or other persons entitled to the property on her death, shall thereupon succeed to the same" (e). It has been held that this section only operates as a forfeiture of existing rights, and creates no disability to take future interests in the family of the widow's late husband. Therefore, that she may succeed as heir to the estate of her son by a first marriage, who had died after her second marriage (f). There has been a conflict of decisions in Calcutta, as to whether the disabling section applies to a Hindu widow, who had ceased to be a Hindu at the time of her second marriage. It has been decided by a Full Bench that it does (g). There a Hindu widow, who had inherited the estate of her deceased husband, married a second husband who was not a Hindu, in the form provided by Act III of 1872, having previously made a declaration under § 10 of that Act that she was not a Hindu. The Chief Justice stated the opinion of the Full Bench as follows

(d) Ranjit v. Radha Rani, 20 All., 476.

(e) Act XV of 1856, § 2 (Hindu Widow Marriage). This Act does not render illegal proceedings of a caste nature, such as exclusion from a temple, founded upon the Act of re-marriage. Venkatachalapati v. Subbarayadu, 13 Mad., 293.

(f) Akora v. Boreani, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 199; S. C., 11 Suth., 82; Rupan v. Hukmi, Punjab Customs, 99; Chamar v. Kashi, 26 Bom., 388; Basappa v. Rayava, 29 Bom., 91; Lakshmana v. Siva, 28 Mad., 425.

(g) Matangini Gupta v. Ram Rutton Roy, 19 Cal., 289, over-ruling Gopal Singh v. Dhungasee, 3 Suth., 206.

(p. 299).—"Section 1 no doubt relates to marriages between Hindus, but § 2 includes all widows who are within the scope of the Act, that is to say, all persons who being Hindus become widows, and it must follow from this, that if any such widow marries, she is deprived by the section of the estate which she inherited from her deceased husband."

This decision leaves untouched the questions decided by the Madras Court in the Lingait Gounden case, and by the Allahabad Court in the Sweeper case. Wilson, J., who was one of the referring Judges in the Calcutta case, pointed out that the Act of 1856, as explained by its preamble, applied "to all Hindu widows other than those referred to under the words 'with certain exceptions' who could without the aid of the Act marry according to the custom of their caste. He would, therefore, have agreed with the Allahabad Court that neither the enabling nor the disabling clauses (§§ 1 and 2) of that Act applied to such exceptional persons. Prinsep, J. (p. 300), was apparently of the same opinion. On the other hand, both he and Banerji, J., agreed that it was of the essence of a Hindu widow's estate that it should only continue while held by her as a widow, and that no act of hers could enlarge this estate (h). In the case, therefore, of a widow who could re-marry without the assistance of the Act, the question would still remain, was her estate restricted, either by general law or local usage to the period of her widowhood. If it was, the legality of her second marriage would not prevent the determination of her estate. This was the view taken by the Bengal High Court in the latest case on this question. There the widow who re-married was of a caste which permitted re-marriage, but the Court held that re-marriage necessarily put an end to her estate as a Hindu widow, and declined to follow the Allahabad ruling (i). This decision was followed by the High Court

(h) 19 Cal., pp. 292, 293, 295.

(i) Rasul Jehan v. Ram Suran, 22 Cal., 589.

Rights of widows who are not within the scope of the Act.

of Bombay, where they applied it to the case of a widow in a caste where re-marriage was permitted, who inherited to her son, and then re-married. The decision went upon the special terms of the Act and not upon any considerations as to the nature of a Hindu widow's estate (k).

Right of guardianship.

It has been laid down in the North-West Provinces that a widow, having minor children, who has re-married is not their mother within the meaning of Act XV of 1856, § 3, so as to entitle her to be made guardian by virtue of her relationship, in the absence of an express appointment by the late husband (l).

Daughter,

§ 557. THE DAUGHTER comes next to the widow, taking after her or in default of her (m), except where by some special local or family custom she is excluded (n). Among the Kurumbas, a shepherd caste of North Arcot, when her title arises she shares equally with the agnates. It is not stated by the author who mentions the custom, whether she takes half, and the agnates the other half, as per stirpes, or whether all share rateably, as per capita (o). It has been held in Bengal upon the Bengal authorities that she is under the same obligation to chastity as a widow; therefore, as the law is now settled, incontinence will prevent her taking the estate, but will not deprive her of it if she has once taken it (p). In Bombay, however, it has been held after a full examination of all the authorities bearing on the point, that, under the law prevailing in Western India, a widow is the only female heir who is excluded from inheritance by incontinence, and the opinion of the Allahabad High Court seems to be in the how far she is bound to chastity.

(k) Vithu v. Govinda, 22 Bom. (F. B.), 321.

(l) Khushali v. Rani, 4 All., 95.

(m) Mitakshara, ii., 2; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 2; V. May., iv., 8, § 10; Vivada Chintamani, 292; Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 1. 30; Viramit., pp. 137, 140.

(n) See as to such customs, Perry, O. C., 117; Bhai Nanaji v. Sundrabai, 11 Bom. H. C., 249; Russic v. Purush, S. D. of 1847, 205; Hiranath v. Ram Narayan, 9 B. L. R., 274; S. C., 17 Suth., 316; Chowdhry Chintamun v. Mt. Nowlukho, 2 I. A., 263; S. C., 24 Suth., 255; Prasijivan v. Bai Reva, 5 Bom., 482; Punjab Customs, 16, 25, 37, 47; 30 I. A., p. 236.

(o) N. Arcot Man., I, 225.

(p) 2 W. MacN., 132; per Mitter, J., Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 13 B. L. R., 46; S. C., 19 Suth., 367, ante § 555; Ramnath v. Durga, 4 Cal., 550; Ramananda v. Raikishori, 22 Cal., 347.

same direction, though the point has not required an express decision (q). It will be observed that the Daya Bhaga and the Daya Krama Sangraha, which are the leading Bengal authorities, both quote in support of the daughter's right of succession a text ascribed to Vrihaspati which states that she must be virtuous (r). The same text is also relied on in the passages in the Viramitrodaya and the Smriti Chandrika which refer to a daughter's right, while no mention of the qualification is contained in the corresponding passages of the Mitakshara, and Mayukha (s). This is the more remarkable in the case of the Mitakshara, since the author borrows part of the text of Vrihaspati, omitting the clause which requires virtue in the daughter. It may, therefore, well be that in the Bengal school chastity may be essential to a daughter's right to inherit, while it may be unnecessary in Western India. Further, in Bengal there is the authority of Rughunandana that the word, 'wife,' in passages relating to the rules of succession, is only illustrative, and applies to females generally. This he expressly states to be the case as to the obligation to chastity (t). In considering the question in the Northern parts of India which are governed by the Mitakshara, it will be important to ascertain what weight is to be given to the opinion of the Viramitrodaya, while in Southern India similar reference will have to be made to the Smriti Chandrika. It will be seen in the next paragraph that the Smriti Chandrika appears to base its views as to the rights of daughters upon religious principles, which have failed to secure acceptance in Madras. There seems to be no doubt that a daughter will be excluded by incurable blindness or any other ground of disability, such as would disqualify a male (u). It must (q) Advaya v. Rudrava, 4 Bom., 104; Deokee v. Sookhdeo, 2 N.-W. P., p. 363; Ganga v. Ghasita, 1 All., 45; followed as regards a mother in Kojiyadu v. Laksmi, 5 Mad., 149.

(r) 3 Dig., 186; Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 8; Daya Krama Sangraha, i., 3, § 4.

(s) Viramit., p. 179, § 3; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 2, § 26; Mitakshara, ii., 1, § 2; V. May., iv., 8, § 10-12. See per Westropp, C. J., 4 Bom., p. 110, supra.

(t) See Ramnath v. Durga, 4 Cal., p. 554.

(u) Bakubai v. Manchhabai, 2 Bom. H. C., 5.

Only inherits to her own father, be remembered that a daughter can only inherit to her own father. The daughter of the brother, the uncle, or the nephew is not an heir (§ 533). If a son dies before his father, leaving a daughter, and then the father dies, also leaving a daughter, the inheritance will pass to the daughter of the father (v). And so, if one of two undivided brothers under Mitakshara law dies first, leaving a daughter, and afterwards the surviving brother dies childless, the estate will pass to his collateral relations, not to the daughter of the first brother (w). Of course, in Bengal the daughter would at once have taken the share of her deceased father. The case of the father's daughter, claiming as sister, has already been discussed (§ 531). In Bombay, a granddaughter, a brother's daughter, and a sister's daughter are held capable of inheriting, on the principle which prevails in Western India, that females born in the family are gotraja sapindas (x). They come in, however, not as daughters but as distant kindred.

Precedence. § 558. The mode in which daughters inherit inter se depends upon the school of law which governs the case. The different principles which prevail upon this point in Bengal. Bengal. and the other provinces have been stated already (§ 520). Mr. W. MacNaghten states the order of precedence in the different provinces as follows (y). "According to the doctrine of the Bengal school the unmarried daughter is first entitled to the succession; if there be no maiden daughter, then the daughter who has, and the daughter who is likely to have male issue are together entitled to the succession, and on failure of either of them, the other takes the heritage. Under no circumstances can the daughters who are either barren, or widows destitute of male issue, or the mothers of daughters only, inherit the property (z). But (v) Sooranamy v. Venkataroyan, Mad. Dec. of 1855, 157; 2 W. MacN., 176.

(w) Soobba Moodelly v. Auchalay, Mad. Dec. of 1854, 153.

(x) W. & B., 495—498. See ante § 529.

(y) 1 W. MacN., 22.

(z) See also 2 W. MacN., 39, 44, 46, 49, 58; V. Darp., 166, 172; Anon., 2 M. Dig., 17; Rajchunder v. Mt. Dhunmune, 3 S. D., 362 (482); Binode v. Purdhan, 2 Suth., 176. But since a widow may now re-marry (§ 556) and have male issue, it has been held that even in Bengal widowhood is not per se an absolute ground there is a difference in the law as it obtains in Benares on Benares. this point; that school holding that a maiden is in the first instance entitled to the property; failing her, that the succession devolves on the married daughters who are indigent, to the exclusion of the wealthy daughters; that in default of indigent daughters, the wealthy daughters are competent to inherit; but no preference is given to a daughter who has, or is likely to have male issue, over a daughter who is barren or a childless widow (a). According to the law of Mithila, an unmarried daughter is Mithila. preferred to one who is married; failing her, married daughters are entitled to the inheritance. But there is no distinction made among the married daughters; and one who is married, and has, or is likely to have male issue, is not preferred to one who is widowed or barren. Nor is there any distinction made between indigence and wealth." The law of the Mitakshara has been also stated in accordance with this view by Mr. Colebrooke and the High Courts of Bengal, Bombay and the North-West Provinces, and by the Privy Council (b). I have already observed (§ 520), that the Smriti Chandrika follows the doctrine of Smriti Chandrika. religious efficacy so far as to exclude barren daughters, and Madras pundits have stated in accordance with it, that a daughter with male issue excludes a sonless daughter (c). The High Court of Madras, however, upon a full examination of all the authorities, has declined to follow the Smriti Chandrika upon this point in preference to the Mitakshara (d).

of exclusion. Bimola v. Dangoo, 19 Suth., 189. A widowed daughter who, at the time the succession opens, has a son who is dumb, but not shown to be incurably so, may inherit. It was not decided whether she would have been excluded, if it could be shown that the defect was congenital and incurable. Chara Chunder v. Nobo Sundari, 18 Cal., 327.

(a) Indigence is an absolute term, and is not limited to cases where a daughter, otherwise well off, has received no provision from her father; Danno v. Darbo, 4 All., 243. As to Bombay law, see Bakubai v. Manchhabai, 2 Bom. H. C., 5; Poli v. Narotum, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 183; Jamnabai v. Khimji, 14 Bom., p. 12.

(b) 2 Stra. H. L., 242; 2 Suth., 176, supra; Uma Deyi v. Gokoolanund, 5 I. A., 46; S. C., 3 Cal., 537; Audh Kumari v. Chandra, 2 All., 561; Jamnabai v. Khimji, 14 Bom., p. 4; Totawa v. Basawa, 23 Bom., 229.

(c) Smriti Chandrika, xi, 2, § 21; Stra. Man., § 328; Doorasamy v. Ramamail, Mad. Dec. of 1852, 177. See also, Gokoolanund v. Woona Dace, 15 B. L. R., 405; S. C., 23 Suth., 340; affd. 5 I. A., 46; S. C., 3 Cal., 587.

(d) Simmani v. Muttammal, 3 Mad., 265.

Several daughters.

Succession of several daughters.

§ 559. Where daughters of the same class exist, they all, except in Bombay, take jointly in the same manner as widows (§ 553) with survivorship (e). If they choose to divide the property for the greater convenience of enjoyment they can do so, but they cannot thereby create estates of severalty, which would be alienable or descendible in any different manner (f). One daughter can, however, alienate her own life interest, and effect can be given to such alienation by a partition (g). If at the death of the last survivor another class of daughters exist, who have been previously excluded, they will come in as next heirs, if admissible (h). And although according to Bengal law a childless or barren widow cannot inherit originally, still if she has already taken as one of a class of sisters, that which would have been an original disqualification will not prevent her taking the whole by survivorship on the death of her coheiresses (i). Where property is impartible, the eldest daughter of all the sisters, or of the class which takes precedence, is the heir (k).

Bombay.

In Bombay the text of the Mayukha (iv., 8, § 10) "if there be more daughters than one they are to divide (the estate) and take (each a share)" has been held to support the view that daughters take not only absolute but several estates, which, in the absence of issue, they may dispose of during their lives or by will. Of course where this doctrine prevails there can be neither a joint holding nor survivorship (l).

Exception to rule.

§ 560. It was at one time supposed that an exception to the right of any daughter (otherwise admissible) to succeed before a daughter's son, existed in Bengal.

(e) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 15, 30; V. May., iv., 8, § 10; Kattama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tevar, 6 Mad. H. C., 310; 2 I. A., 113, p. 126; 29 I. A., p. 165.

(f) F. MacN., 55; per curiam, Sengamalathammal v. Valayuda, 3 Mad. H. C., 317; Kailash Chandra v. Kashi Chandra, 24 Cal., 339; Gobind Krishna v. Abdul Qayyam, 25 All., 546.

(g) Kanni v. Ammakannu, 23 Mad., 504.

(h) Dowlut Kooer v. Burma Deo, 14 B. L. R., 246 (note); S. C., 22 Suth., 55.

(i) Amirtotall v. Rajonee Kant, 2 I. A., 113; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 10; S. C., 23 Suth., 214.

(k) Kattama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tevar, 6 Mad. H. C., 310.

(l) Bulakhidas v. Keshavlal, 6 Bom., 85. See post § 615.

Mr. MacNaghten says: "If one of several daughters who had, as maidens, succeeded to their father's property, die leaving sons, and sisters, or sister's sons, then, according to the law of Bengal, the sons alone take the share to which their mother was entitled, to the exclusion of the sisters, or sisters' sons" (m). This exception rests on the authority of Srikrishna Tarkalan-kara alone. In the corresponding passage of the Daya Bhaga, the case of the maiden daughter is made no exception to the general rule, that on the death of any daughter the estate which was hers becomes the property of those persons, a married daughter or others, who would regularly succeed if she had never existed (n). There seems to be no reason for the alleged rule, and the High Court of Bengal has finally decided that the alleged exception does not exist (o).

§ 561. In Northern India the principle of agnation prevails in its strictest form. Not only are agnates preferred to cognates, but in many tribes of the Punjab cognates are absolutely excluded from succession, so that the landed property of the family may not pass out of the gotra. Even such near relations as daughters and their sons are debarred from inheritance (p). In numerous cases from Oudh which have come under my notice in appeal to the Privy Council, the village wajib-ul-arz states that whether the property be ancestral or self-acquired, daughters and daughter's children have no right of inheritance. A circular of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, 42 of 1864, lays down the same rule as regards the great Chattri families of that province.

Exclusion of daughters and their issue in Punjab.

§ 562. THE DAUGHTER'S SON, though a sapinda, is not a gotraja sapinda. He is nearer in degree, but exactly similar in class, to a sister's son or an aunt's son, who Position of daughter's son.

(m) I W. MacN., 24; D. K. S., i., 3, § 3; Bijia Debia v. Mt. Unnapoorna, 3 S. D., 26 (35); per curiam, Dowlut Kooer v. Burma Deo, 14 B. L. R., 246 (note); S. C., 22 Suth., 55; Kattama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tevar, 6 Mad. H. C., 332.

(n) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 30.

(o) Timmoni v. Niborun, 9 Cal., 154.

(p) Punjab Customs, 72; Punjab Customary Law, II, 80; III, 48.

Origin of his right.

only come in as bandhus (q). Yet, according to all systems, even those which prefer the gotraja sapinda as far as the seventh degree, and the Samanodakas as far as the fourteenth degree, to the bandhus, he comes in before brothers and other more remote sapindas. The cause of this peculiar favour is to be found in the old practice of appointing a daughter to raise up issue for a man who had none. The daughter so appointed was herself considered as equal to a son. Naturally her son was equivalent to a grandson, and, as the merits of son and grandson are equal, he ranked as a son (r). Consequently, we find him enumerated among the subsidiary sons, and taking a very high rank among them, generally second or third (s). Subsequently the appointment of a daughter to raise up issue for her father became obsolete (t). But the fact of the nearness of daughter and daughter's son remained, and their natural claim to succession on the ground of mere consanguinity recommended itself for general acceptance. The daughter's son ceased to rank as son, but he retained his place next in succession to the daughter, or where there was no daughter (u). In some parts of Northern India he is excluded by special custom (v).

The daughter's son is not enumerated in the list of heirs by Yajnavalkya (w), and from this it was at one time suggested by some commentators that his right did not accrue till all those who were enumerated had been exhausted (x). Mr. W. MacNaghten also states that he is not recognized as an heir by the Mithila school (y). But this seems to be incorrect, even as regards the Vivada

(q) Ante § 505. Apararka treats the daughter's son as a mere bandhu, and as such postpones him to the gotraja sapindas. Sarvadhikari, 791.

(r) Manu, ix., § 127—136; Vasishtha, xvii., § 12, ante § 519.

(s) See table, ante § 67.

(t) Smriti Chandrika, x., § 5, 6. See question whether this is so raised but not decided. Thakoor Joobnath v. Court of Wards, 2 I. A., 163; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 190; S. C., 23 Suth., 409.

(u) Mitakshara, ii., 2, § 6; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 2, § 28; V. May., iv., 8, § 13; Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 17—29; D. K. S., i., 4; Vivada Chintamani, 294.

(v) Punjab Customs, 16, 37, ante § 561.

(w) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 135, 136.

(x) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 27; D. K. S., i., 4, § 3.

(y) 1 W. MacN., 23; and so the pundits, Fokhnarain v. Mt. Seesphool, 3 S. D., 114 (152).

Chintamani, which appears to admit him after both parents (z). It is now settled, however, after an elaborate examination of all the Mithila authorities, that the daughter's son is admitted by them after the daughter just as elsewhere (a).

§ 563. A daughter's son can never succeed to the estate of his grandfather so long as there is in existence any daughter who is entitled to take, either as heir or by survivorship to her other sisters (b). The reason is that he not as heir to any daughter who may have died, but as heir to his own grandfather, and, of course, cannot take at all so long as there is a nearer heir in existence. For the same reason, sons by different daughters all take per capita not per stirpes; that is to say, if there are two daughters, one of whom has three sons, and the other has four sons, on the death of the first daughter, the whole property passes to the second, and on her death, it passes to the seven sons in equal shares (c). And on the same principle, where the estate is impartible, it passes at the death of the last daughter to the eldest of all the grandsons then living, and not to the eldest son of the last daughter who held the estate (d). It was laid down by the Bengal pundits in one case, that if property passes to daughter's sons, any such sons born afterwards will also take shares, in reduction of the shares already taken (e). But this

(z) Vivada Chintamani, 294.

(a) Surja Kumari v. Gandhrap, 6 S. D., 140 (168).

(b) Aumritolall v. Rajoneekant, 2 I. A., 113; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 10; S. C., 23 Suth., 214; Sastri v. Vengu Ammal, Mad. Dec. of 1861, 137; 1 W. MacN., 24; 2 W. MacN., 44, 57; Ramdan v. Beharee, 1 N.-W. P., 200; Bajinath v. Mahabir, 1 All., 608; Jamiyatram v. Bai Jamma, 2 Bom. H. C., 10, contra is now overruled. See Lakshmebai v. Ganpat Moroba, 5 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 139; Sibchunder v. Sreemutty Treepoorah, Fulton, 98; Sant Kumar v. Deo Saran, 8 All., 365.

(c) 1 W. MacN., 24; 1 Stra. H. L., 139; 3 Dig., 501; Ramdhun v. Kishenkanth, 3 S. D., 100 (133). Succession per stirpes is laid down in the case of a partition among a man's male descendants, and in regard to the distribution of Stridhan by special texts. The remoter gotraja sapindas succeed in their own right and directly to the prepositus, and take per capita; per Telang, J., Nagesh v. Gururao, 17 Bom., 303, p. 305.

(d) Kattama Nachar v. Dorasinga Tevar, 6 Mad. H. C., 310; Muttu Vaduganatha v. Dorasinga Tevar, 8 I. A., 99; S. C., 3 Mad., 290. The doctrine stated in the Sarasvati Vilasa (§ 632, 655) that property as soon as it passes to a daughter vests at once in that daughter's son and in his son, cannot be now maintained.

(e) Mt. Salukna v. Ramdolal, 1 S. D., 324 (434).

He succeeds after all daughters.

Takes per capita.

Mithila.

assumes that a daughter capable of producing sons is still alive. If so, the grandsons could not take at all.

§ 563A. The nature of the estate which is taken by daughter's sons under Mitakshara law, where several have inherited together, is a question which has received a good deal of discussion. It was held by the Calcutta Court in the case of Jasoda Koer v. Sheopershad (f) that they would take as tenants in common without survivorship. This ruling was followed by the Madras High Court in 1895 and 1897 (g). The later case came on appeal before the Privy Council where it was reversed. The state of the family in that case appears from the following pedigree:

Venkata Rau d. 1869
= widow d. 1874 daughter d. 1884

Niladri d. 1892
= plaintiff in
O. S. 8 of 1893

Appa Rau, defendant.

The suit, so far as the present question is concerned, was brought by the widow of Niladri to establish that he and his brother had taken moieties of the estate of the maternal grandfather as tenants in common, and therefore that the share of Niladri descended to his widow. The defendant alleged that he and his brother took as joint tenants with survivorship. The High Court decided in favour of the widow. Its judgment, following that of the Calcutta High Court, and that of the Madras Court in 1895, "proceeded on the principle that although persons who succeed to joint family property take jointly if their inheritance is unobstructed, yet that in cases of obstructed inheritance those who succeed take as tenants in common and not as joint tenants." On appeal to the Privy Council (h), the Committee after referring to the

(f) 17 Cal., 33.

(g) Saminadha v. Thangathanai, 19 Mad., 70, and Chelikani Venkataramanayamma v. Appa Rau, 20 Mad., 207.

(h) Chelikani Venkayamma v. Ch. Venkataramanayamma, 29 I. A., 156; S. C., 25 Mad., 678. See also cases cited in argument 29 I. A., p. 160; S. C., 25 Mad., p. 682, where self-acquisitions of the father which descended upon his sons, and land conveyed by a stranger to brothers, were decided to be held by them as joint tenants and not as tenants in common.

previous decisions upon which the one under appeal rested, said "the Calcutta decision appears to their Lordships to have been based upon a view of Mitakshara law which farther investigation shows to be erroneous; namely, upon the view that according to the Mitakshara law, the doctrine of survivorship is limited to unobstructed successions and to the succession to the joint property of re-united coparceners. No authority for such a limitation can be found anterior to the Calcutta case."

It will be observed that in this case the property descended to a single daughter, who was the mother of both sons, and that these sons were members of an undivided family, who took the whole property at the same time by the same title. Prima facie there was no reason why they should hold it in any manner different from that of their other family property, to which it would naturally form an accretion. The decision would not necessarily govern a case where the sons were by different daughters, and therefore of different families (i).

This judgment was discussed and distinguished by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in a decision (k) where they held that it did not apply to the descent of Stridhanam from a mother to her sons, or to the descent of the property of a maternal uncle to the sons of his sister, and that in each instance the sons took as tenants in common without survivorship, though they were at the time living as members of a joint family. In a later case the same Court held that the Privy Council ruling did apply where the property of the maternal grandfather descended to his daughter's son, who was at the time the father of several sons, and that father and sons took simultaneously as joint tenants, so as to entitle the sons to sue the father for a partition of the property which had so descended to him (l).

(i) See per curiam, 27 Mad., p. 385.

(k) Karuppai Nachiar v. Sankara Narayanan, 27 Mad., 300.

(l) Vydinatha v. Yeggia, 27 Mad., 382.

How far the former decision is reconcilable with that in the Privy Council, and how far the later decision is justified by it, are questions which may hereafter admit of considerable discussion.

Where property which is at the absolute disposal of a father is given or devised by him to his undivided sons, it will depend upon the terms of the document whether they take as joint tenants or as tenants in common (m).

§ 564. A daughter's son, on whom the inheritance has once actually fallen, takes it as full owner, and thereupon he becomes a new stock of descent, and on his death the succession passes to his heir, and not back again to the heir of his grandfather (n). But until the death of the last daughter capable of being an heiress, he takes no interest whatever, and therefore can transmit none. Therefore, if he should die before the last of such daughters leaving a son, that son would not succeed, because he belongs to a completely different family, and he would offer no oblation to the maternal grandfather of his own father (o). Nor can the daughter's daughter ever succeed, except in Bombay, and by recent decisions in Madras, whether her mother has taken or not, because she confers no benefits on her maternal grandfather, and is estranged from his lineage (p).

§ 565. PARENTS.—The line of descent from the owner being now exhausted, the next to inherit are his parents. And here, for the first time, there is a variance between the different schools of law as to the order in which they

(m) Yethirajulu v. Mukuntu, 25 Mad., 363.

(n) 3 Dig., 494, 502; Ramjoy v. Tarvachund, 2 M. Dig., 79; Sibta v. Badri, 3 All., 134; Muttuvaduganatha v. Periasami, 16 Mad., 11; affd. 23 I. A., 128; S. C., 19 Mad., 451.

(o) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 2; iv., 3, § 34; Ilias v. Agund Roi, 3 S. D. of 37 (50); Senkul v. Aurulananda, Mad. Dec. of 1862, 27; DharapNath v. Gobind Saran, 8 All., 614; Strinavasa v. Dandayudapani, 12 Mad., 411. See to the contrary, but I think erroneously, Sheo Sehai v. Omed, 6 S. D., 301 (378); Doe v. Ganpat, Perry, O. C., 133. The son of a daughter's son may take in the absence of other heirs as a bandhu. Krishnaya v. Pichamma, 11 Mad., 287; Sheobarat v. Bhagawati, 17 All., 523; a mere spes successiois does not vest in the Official Assignee, 21 Bom., 319; is not assignable Transfer of Property Act IV of 1852, s. 6 (a); and cannot be taken in attachment, Civ. P. C. of 1852, s. 266 (k); 17 I. A., 201.

(p) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 2; F. MacN., 6; W. & B., 477, 496, ante § 539.

take. The right of the mother as an heir was very early recognized (§ 521), but her precedence as regards the father, who was also stated to be an heir, was left uncertain. The Mitakshara gives the preference to the mother on the ground of propinquity, and is followed in Mithila by the Vivada Chintamani; and this is stated by Mr. W. MacNaghten to be the law of Benares and Mithila (q). The Smriti Chandrika prefers the father, upon the authority of a text of Bhrat Vishnu, and this view is adopted in Pondicherry in regard to all direct ascendants (r). The Madhaviya leaves the point undecided, and Varadrajah, apparently following Srikrishna, seems to make both inherit together (s). Sambhu says that the point is immaterial, as whichever of the two takes will take for the benefit of the other (t). The Viramitrodaya, while giving a general preference to the doctrine of the Mitakshara, reconciles it with the conflicting text of Bhrat Vishnu by making the precedence of father or mother depend on personal merit, which again he appears to test by pecuniary rather than by moral considerations (u). In Bengal it is quite settled that the father takes before the mother, both on the express authority of Vishnu, and upon principles of religious efficacy (v). The Mayukha takes the same view, and a futwah to the same effect is recorded from Poonah. But Messrs. West and Bühler adopt the opposite order on the authority of the Mitakshara and their opinion has been recently confirmed by the High Court (w). In Guzerat the father is preferred to the mother on the authority of the Mayukha (x).

(q) Mitakshara, ii., 3. See notes by Colebrooke. Vivada Chintamani, 293, 294; 2 W. MacN., 55, n., ante § 512. The Sarasvati Vilasa also follows the rule of the Mitakshara in preference to that of the Smriti Chandrika, § 566—572.

(r) Smriti Chandrika, xi., 3, § 9. So also Apararka, Sarvadhikari, 427; Sorg H. L., 315, 317; Co. Con., 387.

(s) Madhaviya, § 38; Varadrajah, 36. See 3 Dig., 480.

(t) Smriti Chandrika, xi., 3, § 8. (u) Viramit., pp. 185—191.

(v) Vishnu, xvii., § 6, 7; Daya Bhaga, xi., 3; D. K. S., i., 5; 3 Dig., 502—505; 2 W. MacN., 54; Hemluta v. Coluck Chunder, 7 S. D., 108 (127).

(w) V. May., iv., 8, § 14; W. & B., 110, 448; V. N. Mandlik, 560, 378; Balkrishna v. Lakshman, 14 Bom., 605. This preference does not extend beyond the parents themselves, "As between the deceased's own bandhus those connected through the father are to be preferred to those connected through the mother." Saguna v. Sadashiv, 26 Bom., p. 715.

(x) Khodabai v. Bahdar, 6 Bom., 541.

Step-mother.

§ 566. According to Bengal law a step-mother does not succeed to her step-son. This would necessarily be so upon the principles of Jimuta Vahana, as she does not participate in the oblations offered by such step-son (y). The Mitakshara does not notice the point, but the reasons given by Vijnanesvara for allowing the mother to inherit, viz., her close relationship to her son, seem to show that he could only have had the natural mother in view (z). The Bengal pundits have, on several occasions, asserted that the word mata in the Mitakshara includes a step-mother, and, in accordance with that view, it was decided that a woman in Orissa would inherit to her step-son (a). These opinions, however, were reviewed by the Full Bench of the Bengal High Court in a case from Mithila, and it was decided that a step-mother was equally excluded by the Mitakshara and the Daya Bhaga. The same rule applies à fortiori to higher ascendants, such as a grandmother (b). In Bombay it has been decided that a step-mother cannot be introduced as an heir under the word "mother," but that she is a more distant heir as the wife of a gotraja sapinda, and, therefore, herself a gotraja sapinda, according to the doctrines of that Presidency (c). "She ought to be placed, on account of her near relationship to the deceased, immediately after the paternal grandmother, up to whom only the succession is settled by special text." Hence she takes before the paternal uncle's son who represents a remoter line of succession (d). In Madras also it has been decided that a step-mother cannot succeed in competition with a sapinda of the deceased (e). The (y) Daya Bhaga, iii., 2, § 30; xi., 6, § 3; D. K. S., vi., § 23; vii., § 3; 2 W. MacN., 62; Lakhi v. Bhairab, 5 S. D., 315 (369); Bhyrobee v. Nubkissen, 6 S. D., 53 (61); Alhadmoni v. Gokulmoni, S. D. of 1852, 563.

(z) Mitakshara, ii., 3; acc. 1 Stra. H. L., 144; Kesserbai v. Valab, 4 Bom., 208.
(a) 2 W. MacN., 63; Bishenpiria v. Soogunda, 1 S. D., 37 (49); Narainee v. Hirkishor, ib., 39 (52).

(b) Lala Joti v. Mt. Durani, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 67; S. C., Suth., Sp., No. 173; Rama Nand v. Surgiani, 16 All., 221.

(c) Kesserbai v. Valab, 4 Bom., 188.

(d) Russoobai v. Zulekabei, 19 Bom., 707.

(e) Kumaravelu v. Virana, 5 Mad., 29; Muttammal v. Vengalakshmi, ib., 32; Mari v. Chinnammal, 8 Mad., 107.

Pondicherry Courts admit the step-mother, relying upon usage and upon the text of Manu, which declares that where a man has several wives, they are all considered the mothers of a son born to anyone (f). Where a husband having several wives expressly adopts a son in conjunction with one of them, she is considered to be his mother, the others being only his step-mothers. Consequently if he dies without nearer heirs, that wife succeeds to him in preference to the others, though herself junior as wife (g).

In Bengal it has been held that the rule, which incapacitates an unchaste wife from succession, applies also to a mother. This is based not upon any express text relating to mothers, but upon the authority of Raghunandan, who lays it down that the passages in the Daya Bhaga which refer to a wife has a general application to all female heirs. He expressly asserts that in the text of Katyayana, "the wife who is chaste takes the wealth of her husband," the word 'wife' is illustrative (h). On the other hand, in Bombay and Madras, it has been decided that the condition as to chastity only applies to a widow, and the inclination of the Court of the North-West Provinces seems to be in the same direction (i). It is admitted that an estate, once taken by a mother, will not be divested on the ground of unchastity (k). Since Act XV of 1856 (Hindu Widow Marriage) a mother will not lose her rights as heiress to her son, by reason of a second marriage previous to his death (l).

Disability arising from unchastity.

§ 567. BROTHERS.—Next to parents come brothers. There are texts which show that at one time their position in the line of heirs was unsettled, the brother being by Brothers.

(f) Sorg H. L., 315; Co. Con., 273, 395; Man., ix., § 183.

(g) Annapurni Nachiar v. Forbes, 18 Mad., 277; affd. 26 I. A., 246; S. C., 23 Mad., 1, ante § 167.

(h) Ramnath v. Durga, 4 Cal., 550.

(i) Advya v. Rudrava, 4 Bom., 104; Kojiyadu v. Lakshmi, 5 Mad., 149; Deokee v. Sookhdeo, 2 N.-W. P., p. 363; Ganga v. Ghasita, 1 All., 46, ante § 557.

(k) See cases in two preceding notes.

(l) Akora v. Boreani, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 199; S. C., 11 Suth., 82, ante § 556.

some preferred to the parents, while, according to others, even the grandmother was preferred (m). From a religious point of view, the claim of the brother would seem to preponderate over that of the father, as he offers exactly the same three oblations as were incumbent on the deceased, while the father receives one and offers two, viz., to his own father and grandfather. But the principle of propinquity in this, as in other cases, turned the scale (n).

Whole before half-blood.

Among brothers, those of the whole blood succeed before those of the half-blood. The Mitakshara prefers them on the natural ground of closer relationship, and the Bengal authorities on the ground that the former offer oblations to the ancestors of the deceased both on the male and female side, while the latter offer oblations in the male line only. If there are no brothers of the whole blood, then those of the half-blood are entitled, according to the law of Benares and Bengal and the Punjab, and that which prevails in those parts of the Bombay Presidency which follow the Mitakshara. The Mayukha, however, prefers nephews of the whole to brothers of the half-blood, and its authority is paramount in Guzerat, and the island of Bombay (o). The same rule is followed in Pondicherry, and, in an opinion of the Consultative Committee delivered in 1893, the half-brother was declared to rank not only after the nephews, but after the grandparents. This view does not appear to be approved by M. Sorg (p).

Supposed exception in Bengal,

§ 568. Until very lately it was supposed that the preference of the whole to the half-blood in succession between brothers was subject to an exception in Bengal

(m) Smriti Chandrika, xi., 6, § 4—16, 24.

(n) Mitakshara, ii., 4; Vivada Chintamani, 295; V. May., iv., 8, § 16; Daya Bhaga, xi., 5; D. K. S., i., 7.

(o) Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 5, 6; Vivada Chintamani, 296; Daya Bhaga, xi., 4, § 9—12; D. K. S., i., 7, § 1—3; Viramit., p. 193, § 2; 3 Dig., 509, 528; Neelkisto Deb v. Beerchunder, 12 M. I. A., 523; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 13; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 21; Krishnaji v. Pandurang, 12 Bom. H. C., 65; V. May., iv., 8, 16; W. & B., 455, 458; Punjab Customs, 26—28.

(p) Sorg H. L., 316; Co. Con., 387.

where the property was undivided. The point could never arise out of Bengal, for under Mitakshara law, where the property is undivided, it passes by survivorship, and not by inheritance (ante § 544). But in Bengal the share of an undivided coparcener does not lapse into the entire property, but passes to his own heirs, of whom, in the absence of nearer relations, his brother is one (§ 270). Jagannatha quotes a text of Yama:—"Immovable undivided property shall be the heritage of all the brothers (be their mothers the same or different), but immovable property, when divided, shall on no account be inherited by the sons of the same father only." This he explains by saying, "If any immovable property of divided heirs, common to brothers by different mothers, have remained undivided, being held in coparcenary, the half-brothers shall have equal shares with the rest. But the uterine brother has the sole right to divided property movable or immovable" (q). And in various cases it was decided that where the brothers were undivided, those of the half-blood were entitled to come in as heirs equally with those of the whole blood (r). If this distinction really existed, it would merely show that the Bengal lawyers did not push the doctrine, that undivided brothers hold their shares in quasi-severalty, to its logical consequences. If brothers of the whole and half-blood are to succeed equally in a system which is governed by the principle of religious efficacy, it can only be by treating the property of the deceased as undivided family property, which is to be dealt with according to the rules of partition, and not as several property, to be dealt with according to the rules of inheritance. Of course, on the former principle the brothers would all share equally, as being equally related to their common father (§ 473). The whole law on the point was, however, subsequently examined by a Full Bench of the High Court of Bengal, where brothers

undivided,

The held not to exist.

(q) 3 Dig., 517, 518.

(r) 2 W. MacN., 66; Tilock v. Ram Luckhee, 2 Suth., 41; Kylash v. Gooroo, 3 Suth., 43; Shibnarain v. Ram Nidhee, 9 Suth., 87.

and it was decided that no such distinction existed, and that brothers of the half could never take along with brothers of the whole blood, unless the former were undivided, and the latter divided (s).

Undivided
before divided.

Where no preference exists on the ground of blood an undivided brother always takes to the exclusion of a divided brother, whether the former has re-united with the deceased, or has never severed his union (t).

Illegitimate brothers may succeed to each other (§ 552).

Nephews.

§ 569. NEPHEWS.—In default of all brothers of the whole or half-blood, the sons of brothers, or nephews, succeed. To this, as I have already observed, the Mayukha appears to make an exception. It allows the sons of a brother of the full blood to succeed before a half-brother, and it appears also to allow the sons of a brother who is dead to share along with surviving brothers (u). But, according to the Benares and Bengal schools, no nephew can succeed as long as there is any brother capable of taking, the rule being universal that, except in the case of a man's own male issue, the nearer sapinda always excludes the more remote (v). If, however, a brother has once inherited to his brother, and then dies leaving sons, they will take along with the other brothers. Because an interest in the estate had actually vested in their own father, and that interest passes on to them as his heirs. But it must be remembered that the brother must live until the estate has actually vested in him. That is, he must not only survive his own brother, but survive any other persons, such as the widow, daughter, mother, etc., who would take before him (w).

(s) Rajkishore v. Gobind Chunder, 1 Cal., 27; S. C., 24 Suth., 234; affirmed Sheo Soondary v. Pirthee, 4 I. A., 147.

(t) Jadubchunder v. Benodbenbarry, 1 Hyde, 214; Kesabram v. Nandkishor, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 7; S. C., 11 Suth., 308.

(u) V. May., iv., 8, § 16, 17.
(v) Manu, ix., § 187; Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 7, 8; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 4, § 22, 23; Daya Bhaga, xi., 5, § 2, 3; xi., 6, § 1; D. K. S., i., 8, § 1; Vivada Chintamani, 295; 3 Dig., 518; 1 W. MacN., 26; Rooder v. Sumbho, 3 S. D., 106 (142); Jymunev v. Ramjoy, 3 S. D., 289 (385); Prithee v. Court of Wards, 23 Suth., 272.

(w) Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 9; Burham v. Puchoo, 2 Suth., 123; Chandrika Baksh v. Muna Kuar, 29 I. A., 70; S. C., 24 All., 273.

There is the same order of precedence between sons of brothers of whole and of half-blood, and between divided and re-united nephews, as prevails between brothers (x).

§ 570. Where nephews succeed as the issue of a brother on whom the property has actually devolved, they, of course, take his share, that is, they take per stirpes with their uncles if any. For instance, suppose at a man's death he leaves two brothers, A and B, of whom A has two sons, and immediately afterwards A dies; then, as the estate had already vested in A, his sons take half, and B takes the other half: but if he left at his death two nephews by a deceased brother A, and three nephews by another deceased brother B, the five would take in equal shares, or per capita, because they take directly to the deceased, just as daughter's sons do, and not through their fathers (y).

They take per capita.

On the same principle, viz., that nephews take no interest by birth, but merely from the fact of their being the nearest heirs at the time the inheritance falls in, it follows that a nephew can only take, if he is alive when the succession opens. A nephew subsequently born will neither take a share with nephews who have already succeeded, nor will the inheritance taken by others, to whom he would have been preferred if then alive, be taken from them for his benefit. But if on any subsequent descent he should happen to be the nearest heir, it will be no impediment to his succession that he was born after the death of the uncle to whose property he lays claim (z). Of course, the adopted son of a brother succeeds exactly as he would have done if he had been the natural-born son of that brother (a).

Nephew has not a vested interest.

§ 571. The brother's grandson, or grandnephew, is not mentioned by the Mitakshara, unless he may be included

Grandnephew.

(x) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 2; D. K. S., i., 8; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 4, § 26; Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 7, note; Viramit., p. 195, § 2; 3 Dig., 524; 2 W. MacN., 72; Kylash v. Gooroo, 3 Suth., 43; affirmed 6 Suth., 93.

(y) 1 W. MacN., 27; 1 Stra. H. L., 145; Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 7, note; Brojo v. Goozee, 15 Suth., 70; Gooroo v. Kylash, 6 Suth., 93; Brojo v. Sreenath Bose, 9 Suth., 463.

(z) Bidhoomookhi v. Echamoe, Sev., 182; Banymadhob v. Juggodumba, Sev., 248.

(a) 2 W. MacN., 74.

in the term brother's sons. He is, however, expressly mentioned by the Bengal text books as coming next to the nephew, and is evidently entitled as a sapinda, since he offers an oblation to the father of the deceased owner (b). On the same principle the brother's great-grandson is excluded as a sapinda, though he comes in later as a sakulya. The same distinction as to whole and half-blood prevails as in the case of brothers (c). Of course, he cannot succeed so long as any nephew is alive, except by special custom (d).

Said to be excluded by Benares law.

Mr. W. MacNaghten states that the brother's grandson is excluded by the authorities of the Benares and Mithila school (e). But he is included by Varadrajah, and perhaps by the Madhaviya, and it has been decided by the Bengal High Court that under the Mitakshara system he is an heir, though it was not decided, and was not necessary to decide, whether he came in next after nephews (f). If he succeeds as one of the brother's sons, in the wide meaning usually given to that term, his place would be next after the nephew. That this is his place has been held to be the law in a case from Mithila (g). And in Western India the grandnephew has been decided to be an heir, though his position is not exactly defined (h). In Madras it has been held upon a very full discussion of the authorities, that the word 'sons' in Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 7 and ii., 5, 1, does not include grandsons, and that the son of the paternal uncle succeeds before a brother's grandson (i). Exactly the opposite conclusion has been arrived at by the Allahabad Court (k).

Grandnephew.

(b) See Parasara v. Rangaraja, 2 Mad., 292.
 (c) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 6, 7; D. K. S., i., 9; 3 Dig., 525; Degumber Roy v. Moti Lal, 9 Cal., 563.
 (d) 2 W. MacN., 67. In the Punjab, nephews and grandnephews succeed together. Punjab Customs, 12.
 (e) 1 W. MacN., 28; acc., Smriti Chandrika, xi., 5.
 (f) Varadrajah, 36; Madhaviya, § 40; Kureem v. Oodung, 6 Suth., 153; Oorhya Kooer v. Rajoo Nye, 14 Suth., 208.
 (g) Sumbhoodutt v. Jhotee, S. D. of 1855, 382, and so Varadrajah, 36.
 (h) W. & B., 480.
 (i) Suraya Bhukta v. Lakshminarasamma, 5 Mad., 291.
 (k) Kalian Rai v. Ramchunder, 24 All., 128.

§ 572. On referring to the tables given at § 504 and § 505 it will be seen that, in the first place, the descendants of the owner himself, down to and including his great-grandson and his daughter's son, have been exhausted. The line then ascended a step higher, viz., to his parents, and then descended, exhausting all the male descendants of the father who are also sapindas of the owner. Now, the sister and sister's son of the owner, are merely the daughter and daughter's son of the owner's father. Similarly, his niece and his son are the daughter and daughter's son of his brother. His female first cousin and her son are the daughter and daughter's son of his uncle. His aunt and her son are the daughter and daughter's son of his grandfather. All these sons, as will be seen, are the sapindas of the owner; but they are not gotraja sapindas. Therefore, upon the principles of all the schools which are not based upon the Daya Bhaga, none of them can succeed until all the sapinda, sakulyas, and samanodakas in an unbroken male line have been exhausted. We shall, therefore, first examine the order of descent as laid down by the Benares and Mithila schools, which in this, as in most other respects, are identical, and point out the different order of devolution adopted in Bengal and Western India.

Father's line.

Bhinna-gotra sapindas.

§ 573. GRANDFATHERS' AND GREAT-GRANDFATHERS' LINE.—On the exhaustion of the male descendants in the line of the owner's father, a similar course is adopted with regard to the line of his grandfather and great-grandfather. In each case, according to the Mitakshara, the grandmother and great-grandmother take before the grandfather and great-grandfather. Then come their issue to the third degree inclusive. That is to say, so far as the issue of each ancestor are his sapindas, they are also the sapindas of the owner, with whom they are connected through that ancestor (l). In these more distant relation-

Precedence.

(l) Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 1-6; Madhaviya, § 41, only includes sons and grandsons, but there can be no reason for excluding the great-grandson. His title was affirmed, Gobind v. Mohesh, 15 B. L. R., 35; S. C., 23 Suth., 117; W. & B., ships the High Court of Bombay holds that there is no preference of whole blood over half-blood, in cases governed by the Mitakshara and Mayukha. Priority on this ground is limited to the cases of brothers and their issue (m). It would probably be different in Bengal. A Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has arrived at an opposite conclusion (n). The author of the Smriti Chandrika gives a completely different line of descent. He makes each line of descent end with the grandson; he makes the son and grandson in each line take before the father, and then brings in the father of one series as the son in the next ascending series (o). This arrangement, however, seems not to have been followed by any other author.

Smriti Chandrika.

Order of their succession.

§ 574. SAKULYAS AND SAMANODAKAS.—The above order, as will be seen, exhausts all the gotraja sapindas of the nearest class. Then follow the sakulyas, or persons connected by divided oblations, and the samanodakas, or kindred connected by libations of water. The former extend to three degrees, both in ascent and descent, beyond the sapindas, and the latter to seven degrees beyond the sakulyas or even further, so long as the pedigree can be traced (p). Little is to be found as to the order in which they succeed. The Bengal writers make those in the descending line take first, and then those in the successive ascending lines with their descendants (q). This arrangement follows the analogy of succession among sapindas, where those who offer oblations take first, and then those who participate in them (r). In the table of succession

Precedence of ascendants or descendants.

481; Mahoda v. Kuleani, 1 S. D., 67 (82); V. Darp., 284 and see Rutheputty v. Rajunder, 2 M. L. A., 157; W. & B., 118; V. N. Mandlik, 361, 376.

(m) Samat v. Anra, 6 B. m., 394; folld. Vithal Rao v. Ram Rao, 24 Bom., 317; Saguna v. Sadashiv, 26 Bom., 715

(n) Suba Singh v. Sarafraz Kunwar, 19 All., 215.

(o) Smriti Chandrika, xi., 5, § 8—12.

(p) Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 6; V. May., iv., 8; Bai Devkore Ambitram, 10 Bom., 272.

(q) 1 W. MacN., 30; Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 22, note; Recapitulation, at § 36, note; V. Darp., 305; Sarvadhikari, 826.

(r) This is also the order of succession in the list of heirs compiled by Rama Rao, which will be found in Cunningham's Digest.

given by Prosonno Coomar Tagore in his translation of the Vivada Chintamani, no mention is made of any descendants beyond the three generations below the owner. He makes the sakulya ascendants follow in regular order after the last of the collateral sapindas, and after them the samanodaka ascendants. Clearly, however, the sakulyas and samanodakas in the descending line are entitled equally with the ascendants, if not in priority to them. The Mitakshara gives no instances of succession for either sakulyas or samanodakas. After it has exhausted the near sapindas it merely says, "In this manner must be understood the succession of kindred belonging to the same general family and connected by funeral oblations," (samanagotra sapinda) i.e., sakulyas. "If there be none such, the succession devolves on kindred connected by libations of water," i.e., samanodakas (s). But Subodhini in his commentary carries on the enumeration two steps further, on the same principle as Prosonno Coomar Tagore, making the sakulyas in the ascending line and their issue follow next after the collateral sapindas. Messrs. West and Bühler suggest two arrangements: either that the fourth, fifth and sixth, in the owner's own line, should take first; next the remoter descendants in the lines of the father, grandfather, etc., successively, and so on; or that those in the different lines should take jointly in the order of nearness, instead of one line excluding the other (t). I am not aware of any case in which a conflict between heirs in the ascending and descending lines has arisen. It is obvious that a case could very seldom arise in which remote relations in the ascending and in the descending lines would be simultaneously in existence. The question of priority is therefore practically unimportant.

§ 575. BANDHUS.—After all the samanodakas are exhausted, the bandhus succeed according to Benares and

Who are entitled as bandhus.

(s) Mitakshara, ii., 5, § 5, 6, note.

(t) W. & B., 114, 124. See fatwah, Umroot v. Kulyandas, 1 Bor., 292 [322].

Mithila law (§ 512). I have already discussed the meaning of this term, and pointed out that none of the enumerations of bandhus in the law-books are to be considered exhaustive (u). In the tables annexed to § 505, 506 will be found references to the decisions which have affirmed the right as bandhus of the various persons there named.

Sister's son.

Among those bandhus who are omitted by the Mitakshara, the sister's son has had the severest struggle for existence, having even run the gauntlet of an adverse decision of the Privy Council. His right has always been recognized under Bengal law, as he is expressly named by the Daya Bhaga (v). But in the provinces governed by the Mitakshara (not including Western India) it was supposed that he had no claim, and this view was put forward almost unanimously by text writers, pundits, and Judges (w). The case came on for the decision of the Privy Council in an appeal from the North-West Provinces, which are governed by the Benares law. There, a sister's son sued to set aside an adoption made by the widow of his deceased uncle. The objection was taken that he was not in the line of heirs at all, and, as such, had no interest, vested or contingent, which would entitle him to maintain the suit. Of course, this was the strongest possible form in which the question of his right could arise. It was not a question of precedence, but of absolute exclusion. It went the full length of saying that, if there were no other heir in existence, the estate would escheat rather than pass to him. Yet the doctrine of the inability of the sister's son to inherit was accepted by the Judicial Committee to this full extent, and the suit was dismissed on the preliminary objection that he had no interest denied by Judicial Committee.

Right of sister's son under Mitakshara.

(u) See ante § 502—507.

(v) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 8. He has also been recognized as an heir in Lahore. Punjab Customs, 22.

(w) 1 Stra. H. L., 147; Stra. Man., § 341; 2 W. MacN., 85, 87, 88; contra, 2 W. MacN., 91; Rajchunder v. Goculchund, 1 S. D., 45 (56); Jowahar v. Mi. Kailassoo, 1 Suth., 74; Gaman v. Srikant Neogi, Sev., 460; Nagalinga v. Vaidilinga, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 246, where the pundits differed from the Judges; Kullammal v. Kuppu, 1 Mad. H. C., 85; Moonea v. Dhurma, N.-W. P., 1866, cited Thakoorain v. Mohun, 11 M. I. A., 393.

whatever in the subject-matter (x). In ordinary cases, such a decision would have set the matter at rest for ever. But the case itself was rather an extraordinary one. The plaintiff's counsel chose to make an express admission that his client could not inherit as a bandhu, not being mentioned as such in the Mitakshara. He asserted that he was really a gotraja sapinda. This claim he rested, partly on the authority of the Mayukha, and partly on the views of Balambhatta and Nanda Pandita, who consider that where the word 'brothers' occurs in the Mitakshara it should be interpreted as including sisters (y). Consequently, sisters' sons would inherit along with, or immediately after, brothers' sons. The Judicial Committee had no difficulty in setting aside the whole of this argument, and as the place which he really occupied as a bandhu had been disclaimed for him by his counsel, it followed that no locus standi was left to him at all.

This decision was pronounced in 1867, and in 1868 another case arose under Mitakshara law, in which also a person not specifically named claimed as a bandhu. The relation here was a maternal uncle. The High Court of Bengal held that the Crown would take by escheat in preference to him. The Judicial Committee held that the enumeration of cognates in the Mitakshara was not exhaustive, and admitted his claim (z). In this case, it will be observed, the uncle took as heir to his sister's son, which is exactly the converse of the former case, where the sister's son claimed as heir to his maternal uncle. But, if the uncle is the bandhu of his sister's son, this makes it at least probable that the sister's son is the bandhu of his uncle. The decision in Thakoorain v. Mohun was apparently not referred to by the Judicial Committee, and they cited with approbation a later decision of the Bengal High Court, in which the same view had been taken as (x) Thakoorain v. Mohun, 11 M. I. A., 386.

(y) Mitakshara, ii., 4, § 1, note, ante § 531.

(z) Gridhari v. Government of Bengal, 12 M. I. A., 448; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 44; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 32.

Sister's son recognized as heir that enunciated by themselves, and the right of a sister's son had been admitted in consequence (a), as showing that the point was still open in India.

§ 576. In this state of the authorities, the case of a sister's son came before the Full Bench of the High Court of Bengal, upon a reference to them made in regard to the case quoted by the Judicial Committee. His right was affirmed in a most elaborate judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Mitter, and assented to by the other Judges. The judgment was written before the decision of the Privy Council in Gridhari v. Government of Bengal had reached India, but proceeded on exactly the same grounds. He showed that the specific enumeration of bandhus in the Mitakshara was not exhaustive, but illustrative only, and that the sister's son not only came within the definition of a bandhu as laid down by Vijnanesvara, but was actually nearer than any of those who were expressly named. The adverse decision of the Privy Council on the appeal from the North-West Provinces was disposed of by the remark that it had really proceeded upon a mere admission of counsel which could not be binding in any other case (b). This decision was again followed by the High Court of Madras as settling the law in that Presidency (c), and more recently by the High Court of the North-West Provinces (d). A step-sister's son is also entitled to inherit in Madras (e).

§ 577. It is a very remarkable thing that in 1871 the very same question, as to the right of a sister's son, was

(a) Amrita v. Lakhinarayan. This is the case next cited, where the decision to which the Judicial Committee had referred, was confirmed on a reference made to the Full Bench.

(b) Amrita v. Lakhinarayan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 28; S. C., 10 Suth. (F. B.), 76.

(c) Chelikani v. Suraneni, 6 Mad. H. C., 278; Srinivasa v. Rengasami, 2 Mad., 304. His right has always been recognized in Western India, W. & B., 493, but the son of the step-sister is said not to take where there is a son of a full sister, ib., 495. This would naturally be so on principles of consanguinity. In Bengal, where religious efficacy is considered, sons of sisters of whole and half-blood take together, each being of equal merit. 2 W. MacN., 86; D. K. S., i., 10, § 1; Bholanath v. Rakhal Dass, 11 Cal., 69. The Madras High Court places the sister's son before the sister. Lakshmanammal v. Tiruvengada, 5 Mad., 241.

(d) Raghunath v. Munnar Missr, 20 All., 191.

(e) Subbaraya v. Kytasa, 15 Mad., 300.

again raised before the Judicial Committee in an appeal from the North-West Provinces, and the very same argument was addressed to them on his behalf as that which they had already set aside in 1867. It was not necessary to decide the point, as it had not been taken in the Indian Courts, and the facts as to the relationship were not admitted. But their Lordships treated the claim as wholly an open question, though they seem to think that the balance of authority was against its validity (f). No reference was made to their own decisions in 1867 and 1868, nor does their attention appear to have been called to the Full Bench ruling on the point in Bengal.

On the whole, however, it may be considered that the rights of the sister's son, and of all others similarly situated, are now settled beyond dispute.

§ 578. The right of the granduncle's daughter's son has also been discussed in Madras, and decided against (g). But this decision rested upon the supposition that, as he was not named by the Mitakshara, he was excluded. The Court admitted that on general principles he would inherit, but pointed out that he stood on exactly the same footing as the sister's son who, at the date of the decision, was supposed not to be in the line of heirs. As the right of the latter is now established, the reasoning put forward by the Judges for shutting out the son of the granduncle's daughter would apply directly in favour of letting him in.

§ 579. The order of succession among bandhus under Mitakshara law is very obscure. Nothing is to be found upon the subject either among text-writers or in precedents, and the principle upon which any case is to be decided is far from clear (h). If the text of the Mitakshara, in which the bandhus are enumerated, is to be taken as indicating the order of succession, it will be seen

(f) Koer Goolab v. Rao Kurun, 14 M. I. A., 176, 195; S. C., 10 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1.

(g) Kissen v. Javalla, 3 Mad. H. C., 346.

(h) A very elaborate and ingenious discussion on the subject will be found in Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari's Lectures, pp. 687—735.

Granduncle's daughter's son.

Precedence rests on affinity under the Mitakshara.

by Full Bench of Bengal,

and in Madras.

Treated as still open by Judicial Committee.

that proximity, and not religious efficacy, is the ground of preference; the first of the three classes contains the man's own first cousins, the second contains his father's first cousins, and the third contains his mother's first cousins (§ 513). This is corroborated by the next verse (i), where the author says: "By reason of near affinity, the cognate kindred of the deceased (atma bandhus) are his successors in the first instance; on failure of them, the father's cognate kindred (pitru bandhus), or, if there be none, the mother's cognate kindred (matru bandhus). This must be understood to be the order of succession here intended." This is the view taken by the author of the Viramitrodaya. It has also been adopted by the Courts of Bengal and Bombay as the principle upon which they have preferred the sister's son to the aunt's son, and the maternal uncle to the son of the maternal aunt (k). In the accompanying table the letter M affixed to any relation shows that he is expressly named in the Mitakshara as a bandhu, and the Roman numeral following shows the order in which he is named. From this it will be seen that the order followed is strictly that of propinquity, but that as regards two sets of persons, equally near, those on the father's side always take precedence of those on the mother's side, and those on the paternal grandfather's side precede those on the paternal grandmother's side. This preference of the father's kindred to that of the mother is in accordance with the general preference of the male line to the female (§ 512). It has already been stated that the enumeration of bandhus in the Mitakshara is illustrative, not exhaustive (§ 507). In fact, the object of the author seems to have been to name only the most unlikely heirs. For instance, he does not mention any in the descending line, nor the sister's son, who are nearer than any of the enumerated relations. He mentions the uncle's son, but not the uncle who is

(i) Mitakshara, ii., 6, § 2.

(k) Viramit., p. 200, § 5; Gunesh v. Nilkomul, 22 Suth., 264; Mohandas v. Krishnabai, 5 Bom., 597.

Ex parte paternú.

BANDHUS.

Ex parte maternú.

great-great-grandfather (27)

(a) Parot Bapatul v. Mehta, 19 Bcm., 631.

(b) Balusami Paudithar v. Narayana Rau, 20 Mad., 342.

nearer than him. He mentions two in the mother's maternal line (viii. and ix.), and only three (ii., iii., vii.) in the more numerous body of the mother's paternal line. It will be observed that, in each case, where an aunt's and an uncle's son stand on the same line, the aunt's son is named first. This seems to violate the ordinary rule by which male descent ranks before female. Probably, the order of enumeration is not intended to convey any right of precedence. The Madras High Court, in a very learned judgment by Muttusami Aiyar, J., stated the following conclusions: "(1) that those who are bhinna gotra sapindas, or related through females born or belonging to the family of the præpositus are bandhus; (2) that, as stated in the text of Vridha Satatapa or Baudhayana, they are of three classes, viz., atma bandhus pitru bandhus, and matru bandhus, and succeed in the order in which they are named; (3) that the examples given therein are intended to show the mode in which nearness of affinity is to be ascertained; and (4) that, as between bandhus of the same class, the spiritual benefit they confer on the præpositus is, as stated in Viramitrodaya, a ground of preference" (l). The annexed table contains in one view all the bandhus ex parte paternâ and maternâ already referred to. Those under the lines A and B contained in a circle are named in the Mitakshara but cannot be brought into the Bengal system (§ 513). The Arabic numerals attached to each relation mark the order in which I suggest they should rank inter se, on the analogy of those expressly named. All of the persons so marked come within Vijnanesvara's definition as being persons who being of a different family, are still sapindas; the relationship of sapindas among cognates only extending to the fifth in descent from the common ancestor, both inclusive (m).

(l) Muttusami v. Muttukumarasami, 16 Mad., 23, p. 30. See as to priorities between maternal grandfather and paternal aunt or maternal uncle, Chinnammal v. Venkatchella, 15 Mad., 421; between sister's son and mother's sister's son, Gunesh v. Nirkomal, 22 Suth., 264; between son of sister's son and son of paternal uncle, Balusami Pandithar v. Narayana Rau, 20 Mad., 342; between maternal uncle of half blood and son of father's paternal aunt, Muttusami v. Muttukumarasami; between father's half-sister and mother's brother, Saguna v. Sadashiv, 26 Bom., 710; between mother's sister's son and paternal grandfather's sister's grandson, Chamanlal v. Doshi Ganesh, 28 Bom., 453.

§ 580. BENGAL LAW.—The radical difference between the system of the Daya Bhaga and of the Mitakshara is, that the former allows the bandhus, that is the Bhinna-gotra sapindas, to come in along with, instead of after, the gotraja sapindas (§ 508), the principle of religious efficacy being the sole test applied in deciding between rival claimants. Upon examining the application of this principle, it will be seen in the first place, that all the bandhus ex parte paternâ come in before any of those ex parte maternâ. The reason is that the former present oblations to paternal ancestors, which are of higher efficacy than those presented by the latter to maternal ancestors (n). As regards the position inter se of the bandhus ex parte paternâ, it will be seen by a reference to the table (§ 505), that every one of them is a daughter's son in the branch where he occurs. Only three of these are mentioned in the Daya Bhaga—viz., the sons of the daughters of the father, the grandfather, and the great-grandfather, respectively; and these are ranked immediately after the male issue of those ancestors, that is, they come in before the males of the branch next above them. Just as the daughter's son of the owner comes in before his father, brothers, nephews, and grandnephews (o). The Daya-krama-sangraha introduces a new series of bandhus, viz., those who occupy the position of sons of the nieces of the father, grandfather, and great-grandfather. It follows the Daya Bhaga in making the daughter's son

(m) Yajn., i., 53.

(n) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 12, 20; D. K. S., i., 10, § 14; 3 Dig., 529, ante § 508, rule 4.

(o) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 8—12; 3 Dig., 528; V. Darp., 224. Accordingly the sister's son has been held to take before paternal uncles (2 W. MacN., 84); Sambochunder v. Gunga, 6 S. D., 234 (291), and their issue (1 W. MacN., 28); Rajchunder v. Goculchund, 1 S. D., 43 (56); 2 W. MacN., 85, 87; Karuna v. Jai Chandra, 5 S. D., 46 (50); Kishen v. Tarini, ib., 55 (66); Lakhi v. Bhairab, ib., 315 (369); W. & B., 474; Duneshwar v. Deoshunker, Morris, Pt. II, 63; Brojo v. Sreenath Bose, 9 Suth., 462. A fortiori before the issue of the great-grandfather (2 W. MacN., 89, 90). But he takes after the son of a half-brother (2 W. MacN., 68, 82); and he will take equally whether he is alive at the death of the last male holder, or of any female who takes by inheritance from such male (Seeta Ram v. Fukeer, 12 Suth., 433).

Precedence
under Bengal
system.

succeed the male issue of each branch, and places the niece's sons immediately after the daughter's son (p). It does not mention the sons of the grandniece in each branch, but their title is exactly of a similar nature, and has been affirmed to exist (q). Now, this order of succession would be the natural one if proximity alone was regarded, the agnates in each branch being preferred to the cognates, but the cognates in each branch being preferred to the agnates in the more distant branch. It would also be the proper course if the mere number of oblations were regarded. The daughter's son in each line presents exactly the same number of oblations as the son in the same line, and presents them to the same persons. So, the sons of the niece and of the grandniece present the same number of oblations, and to the same persons, as the nephew and grandnephew. Each of these presents a greater number of oblations than the son in the line above him. But then comes in the principle that oblations presented to paternal ancestors are more efficacious than those presented to maternal ancestors (r). If this principle goes to the extent that a man, who presents a greater number of oblations to persons who are his maternal ancestors, is inferior to one who presents a lesser number to persons who are his paternal ancestors, then the principle is undoubtedly disregarded, both by the Daya Bhaga and the Daya-krama-sangraha. If, however, it only goes to this extent that, where the number is equal, those who present offerings to paternal ancestors are preferred to those who present them to maternal ancestors, then the whole course of descent is logical and consistent.

Son of a niece.

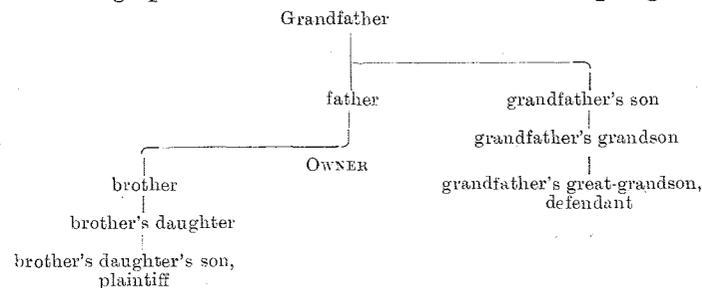

§ 581. This question arose in Bengal under the following circumstances:—In 1864, the High Court had held that the son of a brother's daughter was not an heir at all,

(p) D. K. S., i., 10, § 1, 2, 8, 9, 12, 13.

(q) Kashee Mohun v. Raj Gobind, 24 Suth., 229.

(r) 3 Dig., 530; per Mitter, J., Guru v. Anand Lal, 5 B. L. R., at p. 39; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49.

and that the passage in the Daya-krama-sangraha which stated that he was an heir was an interpolation (s). In 1870, this decision was reversed by the Full Bench, in an elaborate judgment by Mr. Justice Mitter. His judgment was based entirely upon general considerations as to the nature of the relationship of bandhus, and the grounds upon which they were entitled. The decision did not refer to, still less affirm the genuineness of the disputed text of the Daya-krama-sangraha (t). No question was then raised as to the position which such a bandhu would take in the line of heirs. Finally, this last question arose in 1874. The relationship of the conflicting parties is shown in the annexed pedigree. Postponed to distant agnate.

The plaintiff was son of the owner's niece. The defendant was, what we should call first cousin once removed in the male line. Both the Lower Courts decided in favour of the plaintiff. It is evident that he offered oblations to the owner's father and grandfather, while the defendant only offered to the grandfather. On appeal, however, this decision was reversed. The Court admitted the plaintiff's right as a bandhu, but held that he must come in after the defendant on the ground that they who offer to maternal ancestors are inferior in religious efficacy to those who offer a lesser number of cakes to paternal ancestors. The text of the Daya-krama-sangraha, which makes him succeed after the son of the father's daughter, and before the grandfather, was treated, on the authority of the case in 1864, as being of too doubtful authenticity to weigh against the infringement of first principles which it was supposed to contain (u).

(s) Gobindo v. Woomesh, Suth., Sp., 176, referring to D. K. S., i., 10, § 2.

(t) Guru v. Anand, 5 B. L. R., 15; S. C., 13 Suth. (F. B.), 49; folld. in Braja Lal Sen v. Jiban Krishna, 26 Cal., 235, where the father's brother's daughter's son was admitted to be an heir and preferred to the mother's brother's son. As to his position with regard to agnates Sapindas of great-grandfather, see Huri Das Bundopadhyya v. Bama Churn, 15 Cal., 780. It may be observed that the decision in the over-ruled case had been obtained by the argument of Mr. Justice Mitter himself when at the bar. This may account for the fact that no notice was taken of the D. K. S. in the over-ruling judgment.

Decision discussed.

§ 582. It may be remarked upon this decision that, if § 2 of the Daya-krama-sangraha, ch. I, 10, is to be rejected as spurious, § 9 and 13 must go with it, for all three lay down exactly the same rule, and rest upon the same principle. If this principle is erroneous, it is difficult to see how the Daya Bhaga (XI, 6, § 8—12) can be maintained, for it places the daughter's son of the branches above the owner, before the males of the next higher branch. The Court deals with this by saying that the special reason given by Jimuta Vahana for that arrangement does not apply to the others. The special reason is that "his father's or grandfather's daughter's son, like his own daughter's son, transports his manes over the abyss by offering oblations of which he may partake." But the brother's daughter's son offers oblations of exactly the same character. The only remaining supposition is that the daughter's sons of the direct lineal ancestors have an efficacy of a different character from that possessed by the daughter's sons of the collateral branches. If so, the Daya-krama-sangraha would be wrong, the Daya Bhaga and the High Court of Bengal right. The arrangement would then be that the daughter's sons of collaterals should come in one after the other at the end of the nearer sapindas, and before the sakulyas.

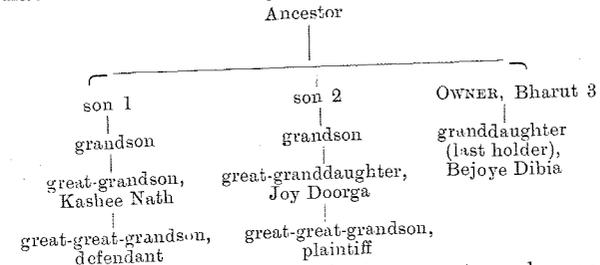

Sakulya preferred to a bandhu.

§ 583. The principle of the above decision was carried out in a later case, to the extent of preferring a male who was not a sapinda at all, to an undoubted bandhu (v). The (u) Gobind v. Mohesh, 15 B. L. R., 35; S. C., 23 Suth., 117; followed in Oodoychurn's case, 4 Cal., 411.

(v) Kashee Mohun v. Raj Gobind, 24 Suth., 229.

last male holder of the property in dispute, named Bharut, was the third son of the common ancestor. He was succeeded by his daughter, on whose death the conflict arose between plaintiff and defendant. Their relationship to him appears in the accompanying pedigree. It was admitted that defendant was only a sakulya. On the other hand, the plaintiff offered cakes to his three maternal ancestors, one of whom was the common ancestor. Of course, the question would have been exactly the same if the last holder had been the ancestor himself. It certainly does seem anomalous that, where two claimants are equally distant, a case can arise in which the one who claims through a female is actually preferred to one who claims through an unbroken line of males. Under Mitakshara law, of course, no such preference could ever be asserted. Yet, upon the ground of religious efficacy, it seems clear that on Bengal principles the plaintiff had a superiority over the defendant, unless it can be laid down that a divided oblation offered to "the father of the deceased owner by A must be more meritorious than an undivided oblation offered to him by B, wherever such father is the paternal ancestor of A and only the maternal ancestor of B." The ground upon which the Court proceeded was as follows: "It is quite clear that going back a generation to the time when Kashee Nath represented one generation and Joy Doorga the other, Kashee Nath was the preferential heir. He alone could have performed the parbana shradh, and not Joy Doorga. Consequently, it seems to us that the son of Kashee Nath would have a necessarily preferential right over, and would exclude the son of Joy Doorga."

Contrary rule
now laid down.

In former editions the soundness of this decision was questioned. It has now been expressly over-ruled by a Full Bench of the Bengal High Court (w). In the later case, the contest was between the brother's daughter's son of the deceased, and the great-great-grandson of the owner's great-grandfather. The exact form of the pedigree is not given, but the preceding diagram appears to represent it. The High Court decided in favour of the plaintiff upon the broad principle that he was a sapinda of the deceased, as he offered undivided oblations to his own three maternal ancestors, two of whom were the paternal ancestors of the OWNER, in which, therefore, the latter participated. On the other hand, the defendant offered only divided oblations to Bissessur and Rambullubh, who were also the ancestors of the OWNER. The competition, therefore, was between a cognate who was a sapinda, and an agnate who was a sakulya. According to the Daya Bhaga (XV, 6, § 20, 21) it did not admit of any doubt that a sapinda, though a cognate, was a preferable heir to a sakulya agnate.

Bandhus ex parte maternâ.

§ 584. Jimvata Vahana hardly notices the bandhus ex parte maternâ, merely alluding to them as "the maternal uncle and the rest," who come in "on failure of any lineal descendant of the paternal great-grandfather, down to the daughter's son." He seems to attempt to reconcile his order of succession with that of Yajnavalkya, by assuming that the term bandhu, as used by the latter, only referred to those on the mother's side (x). Srikrishna, however, sets out their order very fully, adopting the same principle as he had done in regard to the other sapindas. He gives the property first to the mother's father, and his issue, that is, the maternal uncle, his son, and grandson, then to the daughter's son of the mother's father, then to the line of the mother's grandfather, and great-grandfather, in similar manner, and, on failure of all these, to the sakulyas and samanodakas (y). These, as already stated, take first in the descending line, and then in the ascending (z).

(w) Digumber Roy v. Moti Lal, 9 Cal., 563, 566. See also Deyanath v. Mulhoo, 6 S. D., 27 (30), where the son of the maternal aunt was held entitled in preference to any lineal descendant from a common ancestor beyond the third degree.

§ 585. BOMBAY LAW.—The distinctive feature of the Admission of females. law which prevails in Western India is the laxity with which it admits females to the succession. The doctrine of Baudhayana, which asserts the general incapacity of women for inheritance, and its corollary, that women can only inherit under a special text, appears never to have been accepted by the Western lawyers. They take the word sapinda, in the widest sense, as importing mere affinity, and without the limitation of the Mitakshara, that female sapindas can only inherit when they are also gotrajas, that is, persons who continue in the family to which they claim as heirs (a). The most prominent instance of this doctrine is the introduction of the sister into the Sister. line of succession. She is brought in by the Mayukha after the paternal grandmother, and before the paternal grandfather, under that serviceable text of Manu, "To the nearest sapinda (male or female) after him in the third degree the inheritance next belongs" (b). Nilakantha applies this text by saying: "In case of the non-existence of that (the paternal grandmother) the sister (takes) according to the dictum of Manu, 'that whoever is the nearest sapinda his should be the property'; and according (x) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 12—14.

(y) D. K. S., i., 10, § 14—21.

(z) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 22; D. K. S., i., 10, 22—25.

(a) W. & B., 125—132.

(b) Manu, ix., § 187.

to the text of Vrihaspati, that where there are many jnati, sakulyas, and bandhavas, among them whoever is the nearest, he should take the property of the childless; she the sister also being born in the brother's gotra, and so there being no difference of gotrajatva (the state of being born in the gotra). But (says an objector) there is no sagotrata (state of being in the same gotra). True, but neither is that stated here as a reason for taking property" (c). And not only full sisters, but step-sisters inherit (d). Another instance is the rule which allows widows of persons who would have been heirs to inherit after their husbands. The other schools of law never allow a widow, as such, to inherit to any one but her own husband. In Bombay the widows of gotraja sapindas stand in the same place as their husbands, if living, would respectively have occupied, subject to the right of any person whose place is specially fixed as a sister, mother or the like (e). The step-mother heads the list of non-specified female heirs, and takes place after the paternal grandmother, and before the widow of the half-brother (f). So, daughters of descendants and collaterals within six degrees inherit; for instance, both a brother's daughter, and a sister's daughter (g). Also "descendants of a person's own daughters, and of those persons expressly mentioned within four degrees of such persons respectively, e.g., a granddaughter's grandson, but not the great-grandson, since sapinda relationship through females is restricted to four degrees" (h). On the other hand, the daughter of the predeceased son of the owner was held not to be a gotraja sapinda, and therefore not entitled to inherit in preference to the great-grandson in the male line of a separated

Widows.

Daughters.

(c) V. May., iv., 8, § 19; translated in Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai, 2 Bom., 421, ante § 532.

(d) W. & B., 469; Kesserbai v. Valab, 4 Bom., 188.

(e) W. & B., 131, 481; Lakshmi Bai v. Jayram, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 152; Lallubhai v. Mankuvarbai, 2 Bom., 388; aff'd. Lulloobhoy v. Cassibai, 7 I. A., 212; S. C., 5 Bom., 110; see per curiam, 4 Bom., p. 209; Vithaldas v. Jesubhai, 4 Bom., 219; Nahalchand v. Hemchand, 9 Bom., 31; Sitaram v. Chintaman, 24 All., 472; Chamanlal v. Doshi Ganesh, 28 Bom., 453.

(f) Rukhmabai v. Tukharam, 11 Bom., 47.

(g) W. & B., 137, 496-498.

(h) W. & B., 137.

brother (i). I can offer no opinion whatever as to the order in which such persons take. Messrs. West and Bühler suggest that they would come in after the nine bandhus who are expressly named in the Mitakshara, on the principle stated by the Mayukha, that incidental persons are placed last, and that, as between each other, nearness of kin to the deceased is the only guide (k).

Tables of descent, professing to give all possible heirs in the order of succession, for the different provinces, will be found in the works referred to below (l). I have not attempted to compile any such list. I doubt the possibility of preparing one that should be at once exhaustive and accurate. It would certainly be beyond my powers. Wherever a conflict arises between any two specific claimants, I believe that the principles already stated, will, in general, be sufficient to decide their priority.

§ 586. Before passing from this part of the subject, it may be well to refer to the rare case of succession after a reunion (§ 496). Manu, after speaking of a second partition after a reunion, says: "Should the eldest or youngest of several brothers be deprived of his share (by a civil death on his entrance into the fourth order), or should any one of them die, his (vested interest in a) share shall not wholly be lost. But (if he leave neither son, nor wife, nor daughter, nor father, nor mother), his uterine brothers and sisters, and such brothers as were reunited after a separation, shall assemble, and divide his share equally" (m). Now it will be remembered that Manu requires a share to be given to a sister on a partition (§ 477), but nowhere refers to her as an heir. It is probable, therefore, that this text refers to a case where a partition had already

(i) Venilal v. Parjaram, 20 Bom., 173.

(k) W. & B., 491; V. May., iv., 8, § 18. See per curiam, Mohandas v. Krishnabai, 5 Bom., 602; Rukhmabai v. Tukharam, 11 Bom., 47.

(l) V. Darp., 266-271; Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 36; Smriti Chandrika, p. 221; Stra. Man., § 315; Cunningham's Digest, § 249; Prosonno Coomar Tagore's Vivada Chintamani; Sarvadrikari, 510 a-j.

(m) Manu, ix., § 210-212. The words in parentheses are the gloss of Kulluka Ehatta. See also a similar text by Vrihaspati, 3 Dig., 476, where there is a various reading of daughters for sister. V. May., iv., 9, § 25; Smriti Chandrika, xii., § 25; Madhaviya, § 47; Varadrajah, 55.

Their precedence.Tables of descent.Succession after a reunion.

commenced, but had not been concluded, and merely directs that in such a case his share shall not pass by inheritance, but shall be thrown into the property, and divided again. The sisters would then be entitled to their shares (n). This seems the more probable, as no allusion is made to the sister in the passage of Yajnavalkya, which treats of the descent of the share of a reunited coparcener. That passage, as translated by Mr. Colebrooke (o), is as follows:—"A reunited (brother) shall keep the share of his reunited (co-heir) who is deceased, or shall deliver it to (a son subsequently) born. But an uterine (or whole) brother shall thus retain or deliver the allotment of his uterine relation. A half-brother, being again associated, may take the succession; not a half-brother, though not reunited; but one united (by blood, though not by coparcenary) may obtain the property, and not (exclusively) the son of a different mother." The meaning of this unusually obscure passage is that, if a reunited coparcener dies, leaving issue actually born, or then in the womb, such issue takes his share. If, however, he only leaves brothers, there may have been a reunion of all the brothers, or only of the uterine brothers, or only of the half-brothers. In such events the rule already stated

Whole and half-blood.

(§ 567), that the whole is preferred to the half-blood, remains in force. But reunion gives the reunited brother a claim which is not possessed by the divided brother. Therefore, where two brothers are in the same position as to whole or half-blood, the reunited brother has a preference over the divided brother. But where they are in a different position, the one who is inferior in blood, if reunited, is raised to a level with the one who is superior in blood, but divided. The result, therefore, is, if all the surviving brothers are divided, or if all are reunited, those of the whole blood take before the half-blood. If some are divided, and some are reunited, the reunited brothers take (n) Raghunandana says that the right of the sister extends only to so much as is required for her marriage, xi., 48.

(o) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 138, 139; Mitakshara, ii., 9.

to the exclusion of the divided brothers, provided they are both of equal merits as to blood. Where the reunited brothers are of the half-blood, and the divided brothers are of the whole blood, both take equally. Of course, if the cases were reversed, the reunited brothers of the whole blood would take before divided brothers of the half-blood (p).

It is held in Bengal that, where a reunion takes place between persons who are entitled to reunite, the rule of inheritance laid down for such persons forms a sort of family law, which binds their descendants as well as themselves (q). After reunion under Benares law.

§ 587. The above rule of succession is perfectly clear and logical on the principles of the Bengal school. But on the principles of the Benares school, one would suppose that the property of reunited members stood on exactly the same footing as that of members who had always been undivided. In that case, upon the death of any one member of the undivided family, his share would pass by survivorship to the remaining members, and could by no possibility get into the hands of any divided member, so long as there were undivided members in existence (r). The difficulty was seen by the author of the Smriti Chandrika. His explanation is, in substance, that there is a difference between the interest in property held by an originally undivided member, and by one who has reunited after partition. In the former case, there has been no ascertainment of his share. In the latter case, his share has been ascertained, and continues so ascertained after reunion. The reunion only destroys the exclusive right which he acquired by partition in the property which had fallen to his share (s). That is, as I understand him, that he was a joint tenant before partition, a sole tenant after partition, a tenant in common after reunion. After reunion, his share is held in quasi-severalty, and at his death passes by descent, and not by survivorship, in the same manner as that of an undivided brother in Bengal. The rule was accordingly applied in Madras in a case where three brothers by one wife and three brothers by another wife effected a partition. The third son of each wife reunited, and then both died, leaving a son by one. The son of the deceased was of course entitled to his father's share, and he sued to recover the shares of his reunited uncle which, in the case of an ordinary union, would have passed to him by survivorship. That uncle, however, had left two separated full brothers, and one separated half-brother. The last named had no claim, but it was held that the two separated full brothers of the deceased were entitled to share equally with the reunited brother's son, who accordingly took only one-third of his property. The High Court said: "The reason is explained in the Sarasvati Vilasa (Foulkes' edition, p. 148), sloka 769. The rule is founded on a mixed conception, the primary idea is that reunion is a ground of preference. It furnished the rule of decision when the surviving brothers are either of the whole or of the half-blood. When there is a competition between uterine and non-uterine brothers, another idea influences the decision, viz., the superior efficacy of the funeral oblations offered by the uterine brother. That furnishes a ground of preference in his favour. If the reunited brother is a brother of the whole blood, both cases (causes?) of succession occur. They conflict when there is a competition between a reunited brother of the half-blood and a separated brother of the whole blood; the rule of equal division is the outcome of the desire to give effect to both principles" (t).

(p) V. May., iv., 9, § 5-13; Vivada Chintamani, 308; V. Darp., 204; Mitakshara, ii., 9, § 4-13; Daya Bhaga, xi., 5, § 13-39; D. K. S., i., 7, § 3-6, v., § 8, 9; Viramit., p. 205, § 4-8; 3 Dig., 507-517, 554; Rajkishore v. Gobind, 1 Cal., 27; F. MacN., 110; Tarachan v. Pndum, 5 Suth., 249; Gopal v. Kenaram, 7 Suth., 35; Sham Narain v. Court of Wards, 20 Suth., 197.

(q) Abhai Churn v. Mangal Jana, 19 Cal., 634.

(r) It was so held in Mysore. Two brothers had reunited. On the death of one of them without male issue, it was ruled that his estate passed by survivorship to his reunited brother, instead of devolving upon his widow or daughter. Venkataramanappa v. Munisami, 1 Mysore Ch. Ct., 82.

(s) Smriti Chandrika, xii., § 9. The Sarasvati Vilasa (§ 769) gives the following rather mysterious explanation:—"His meaning is this." In the case of the non-uterine reunited brothers, the efficient cause in the taking of the share is their capacity to bear the burthen of the loss. But in the case of the uterine, the efficient cause in the taking of the share is the interior rule attached to their authority to present the funeral ball. When there is no reunited brother, both efficient causes are to be understood."

In default of reunited brothers of the half-blood, or of any brothers of the whole blood, the succession passes in order to the father, or paternal uncle, if reunited; to the half-brother not reunited, to the father not reunited; in default of any of them, then successively to the mother, the widow and the sister. If none of these exist then to the nearest sapindas or samanodakas as in the case of ordinary property (u). Of this line of succession, the author of the Viramitrodaya says very truly: "In this order there is no principle; hence this order rests entirely upon the authority of the texts of law."

§ 588. STRANGERS.—Where there are no relations of Ulterior heirs, the deceased (v), the preceptor, or, on failure of him, the pupil, the fellow-student, or a learned and venerable priest, should take the property of a Brahman, or, in default of such an one, any Brahman (w). The Daya Bhaga interposes persons bearing the same family name between the fellow-student and the priest (x). In case of traders who die in a foreign country, leaving no heirs of their own family, the fellow-trader is authorised to take (y). Finally, in default of all these, the king takes by escheat, except King, the property of a Brahman, which it is said can never fall to the Crown (z).

§ 589. I know of no instance in which a claim has ever Escheat been set up by a preceptor, or pupil, to the property of a person dying without heirs, and it is clear that the claims of all the other possible successors above named are too indefinite to be maintained. The direction that the king

(t) Ramasami v. Venkatesam, 16 Mad., 440.

(v) Smriti Chandrika, xii., § 23—39; Viramit., p. 214, § 9—11.

(w) The word here translated relations is bandhus, Goldstücker, 26.

(x) Mitakshara, ii., 7, § 1—4. See V. Darp, 307.

(y) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 26.

(z) See a passage in the Mitakshara, not translated by Mr. Colebrooke, cited in Gridhari v. Bengal Government, 12 M. I. A., 457, 465; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 44; S. C., 10 Suth (P. C.), 32.

(z) Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 27; Mitakshara, ii., 7, § 5, 6.

can never take the estate of a Brahman has also been overthrown in the only case in which the exemption was set up (a). There the Crown claimed by escheat as against the alienee of a Brahman widow, whose husband had left no heirs. It was held that the claim must prevail, notwithstanding the rule relied on; either on the ground, that the rule itself assumed that the king must take the estate for a time, in order to pass it on to a Brahman; or on the ground, that where the last owner died without heirs, there ceased to be any personal law governing the case of Brahmans, which could settle the further devolution of the property. In the former case, the title of the Crown to hold was complete, subject only to the question whether the Crown held absolutely, or in trust. In the latter case, in the absence of any personal law, the general prerogative of the Crown as to heirless property must prevail.

Its effect.

Where the Crown claims by escheat, it must make out affirmatively that there are no heirs (b). When it has taken, its title prevails against all unauthorised alienations by the last owner, as for instance by a widow, but is subject to any trust or charge properly created (c).

Escheat is only to Crown.

The principle of escheat does not apply in favour of Zemindars who have carved out a subordinate, but absolute and alienable interest, from their own estate. On failure of heirs of the subordinate holder, the estate will pass to the Crown, and will not revert to the Zemindar (d).

Property of ascetic.

§ 590. Special rules are also propounded for succession to the property of a hermit, an ascetic, or a professed student (e). Practically, however, such a case seldom

(a) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavalry Vencata, 8 M. I. A., 500; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 59.

(b) Gridhari v. Government of Bengal, 12 M. I. A., 448; S. C., 1 B. L. R. (P. C.), 44; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 32.

(c) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavalry Vencata, 8 M. I. A., 500, 529; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 59; Cavalry Vencata v. Collector of Masulipatam, 11 M. I. A., 619; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 61.

(d) Sonet v. Mirza, 3 I. A., 92; S. C., 25 Suth., 239.

(e) Yajnavalkya, ii., 137; Mitakshara, ii., 8; Daya Bhaga, xi., 6, § 35, 36; 2 Stra. H. L., 248; W. & B., 499, 555; 3 Dig., 546; Smriti Chandrika, xi., 7;

arises. When a hermit has any property, which is not of secular origin, he generally holds it as the head of some Mutt or religious endowment, and succession to such property is regulated by the special custom of the foundation (§ 439). No one can come under the above heads, for the purpose of introducing a new rule of inheritance, unless he has absolutely retired from all earthly interests, and, in fact, become dead to the world. In such a case all property then vested in him passes to his legal heirs, who succeed to it at once. If his retirement is of a less complete character, the mere fact that he has assumed a religious title, and has even entered into a monastery, will not divest him of his property, or prevent his secular heirs from succeeding to any secular property which may have remained in his possession (f). Further, in the case of Sudras, who cannot enter the order of Yathi or Sannyasi, the devolution of property is always governed by the ordinary laws of inheritance, in the absence of proof of any general or special usage to the contrary (g).

Viramit, p. 202; V. Darp, 312; see Khuggender v. Sharuggir, 4 Cal., 543; Gujana Sambandha v. Kandasami, 10 Mad., p. 384; Collector of Dacca v. Jagat Chunder, 28 Cal., 608.

(f) 2 W. MacN., 101; Mudoobun v. Huri, S. D. of 1852, 1089; Ameena v. Radhabinode, S. D. of 1856, 596; Khoodeeram v. Rookhince, 15 Suth., 197; Jagannath v. Bidyanand, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 114; S. C., 10 Suth., 172; Dukharam v. Luchmun, 4 Cal., 954.

(g) Dharmapuram Pandara Sannadi v. Virapandiyam, 22 Mad., 302.

CHAPTER XIX.

EXCLUSION FROM INHERITANCE.

Principle of exclusion.

§ 591. THE Brahmanical theory of wealth is that it is conferred for the sake of defraying the expense of sacrifices (a). The theory of inheritance is that it descends upon the heir to enable him to rescue the deceased from eternal misery. Consequently, one who is unable or unwilling to perform the necessary sacrifices is incapable of inheriting (b). The son who neglects the duty of redeeming his father is compared by Vrihaspati to a cow which neither affords milk nor becomes pregnant. He has no claim to the paternal estate. It must devolve on those learned priests who offer the funeral cake to the deceased (c). Such a theory was likely to meet with a good deal of extension from the priestly lawyers. Accordingly, we find that not only congenital defects, such as impotence, idiocy, being born blind, deaf or dumb, without a limb or a sense, were grounds of exclusion, but the same penalty befell those who were afflicted with madness, or an obstinate or agonising disease (d), or who were addicted to vice (e), or who were hypocrites or impostors (f), or even persons who might be held not to possess sacred knowledge, or courage, or industry, or devotion, or liberality, or who failed to observe immemorial good customs (g). Naturally, degradation from caste, the highest penalty for sin, was itself accompanied with forfeiture of inheritance (h).

(a) 3 Dig., 317.

(b) 3 Dig., 298; Vivada Chintamani, 243; Ind. Wisd., 159, 275, 281. These principles of the Hindu law do not apply to the Alyā Santana law. Chanāu v. Subba, 13 Mad., 209.

(c) 3 Dig., 301.

(d) 3 Dig., 303, 309.

(e) 3 Dig., 299.

(f) 3 Dig., 304. The same phrase, however, is elsewhere translated as having assumed the garb or profession of a beggar or ascetic.

(g) 3 Dig., 301.

(h) 3 Dig., 300. See generally, Mitakshara, ii., 10; V. May., iv., 11; Daya Bhaga, v.; D. K. S., iii.; V. Darp., 995. There is nothing in these rules to prevent a person who is disqualified as an heir from taking by gift. Ganga v.

§ 592. Of course, such a system could never have been practically enforced, even if the Brahmans had possessed all the power which they claimed. The substantial part of it probably consisted in the parallel theory of expiation, which at once rendered it profitable to the priestly class, and endurable by the rest of the community. Just as the Romish Church created an elaborate system of restraints on marriage, and then proceeded straightway to dispense with them for a consideration. Various maladies were noted as the specific penalties of sins committed in the present or in former states of existence, and thus brought within the sphere of religious discipline (i). Minute classifications of crime and disease were framed, and the penalties accruing in respect of some of these were expiable, wholly or in part, whereas, in respect of others, the sin could be removed, but not the forfeiture of right resulting from it (k). I imagine that secular Courts could only take notice of the last-named grounds of disability. If it appeared that a particular sort of disability was in fact removeable by penance, a Judge could hardly be called on to decide whether the penance had been properly performed, and, if not, why not (l). The result seems to be that the causes entailing civil disability are reduced to those originally stated by Manu with the addition of lunacy and idiocy (m). "Eunuchs and outcastes, persons born blind or deaf, the dumb, and such as expiation.

Mitigated by

Hira, 2 All., 809; Lala Muddun Gopal v. Mt. Khikhinda, 18 I. A., 9; S. C., 18 Cal., 341.

(i) 3 Dig., 314; Manu, xi., § 48-53.

(k) V. Darp., 999, et seq., 1005; 1 Stra. H. L., 155; Sheo Nath v. Mt. Dayamjee, 2 S. D., 105 (137); Manu, xi., § 47, 54, 183-188, 240, 248, etc., from which it appears that every sin, however great, was expiable. The notion that a person who had been transported over sea, or sent to jail, thereby lost his caste, though he could recover it by expiatory ceremonies performed by his Guru, was examined and rejected by the Chief Court of Mysore. It appears that the supposed loss of caste was due, not to the crime which brought on the penalty, but to the breach of caste rules which it was assumed must take place while the punishment was being endured. Honniah v. Bhada Setty, 4 Mysore, 183.

(l) Acc. V. Darp., 1007, where it is said that, in cases where the disability is removeable by penance, persons are seen to take the inheritance even without performing the penance. 1 Stra. H. L., 159. But see Bhola Nath v. Mt. Sabitra 6 S. D., 62 (71); Bhoobunessuree v. Gowree Dass, 11 Suth., 535, where a claim to inheritance was dismissed on the ground of disabilities which appear to have been expiable, but were not in fact expiated.

(m) Manu, ix., § 201.

have lost the use of a limb, are excluded from heritage." To this enumeration Yajnavalkya adds, "And a person afflicted with an incurable disease" (n), which again seems now to be limited to the worst form of leprosy.

Loss of caste now relieved.

§ 593. Outcastes are now relieved by Act XXI of 1850 (Freedom of Religion). "So much of any law or usage now in force within the territories subject to the government of the E. I. Co. as inflicts on any person forfeiture of rights or property, or may be held in any way to impair or affect any right of inheritance, by reason of his or her renouncing, or having been excluded from the communion of any religion, or being deprived of caste, shall cease to be enforced as law." The effect of this section is that degradation or exclusion of caste, from whatever cause it may arise, is absolutely immaterial in all cases where, except for the Act, it would have debarred a person from enforcing or exercising a right (o). But where there are circumstances which, independent of all considerations of caste, create a disability under Hindu law, the fact that degradation from caste follows upon the disability, leaves it just where it was before. The disability is not removed, because the degradation is inoperative. For instance, the incontinence of a Hindu widow is a bar to her claiming the estate of her husband (p). If her incontinence is of a very aggravated character—as, for instance, the union of a Brahmani with a Sudra man, it would involve loss of caste. But that circumstance would not be an element in deciding whether her rights of inheritance were lost. It would not enhance the effect of her unchastity. Nor would the fact that the loss of caste was cured by Act XXI of 1850 remove the effect of the antecedent incontinence (q).

(n) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 1.

(o) Bhujjun v. Gya, 2 N.-W. P., 446; Honamma v. Timmannabhat, 1 Bom., 559.

(p) Ante § 555.

(q) Matangini v. Jaykali, 5 B. L. R., 466; Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 13 B. L. R., 1, 25, 75; S. C., 19 Suth., 367; affd. on appeal, 7 L. A., pp. 115, 156; S. C., 5 Cal., 776; Sundari v. Pitambari, 32 Cal., 671.

This was the principle of decision in the following case (r). Ratan Singh and his son Daulat Singh were living together as members of a joint family till 1845 when Ratan Singh became a Muhammedan. The possession and management of the estates continued as before till the death of Daulat in 1851, which was followed some months later by the death of his father. Daulat left a widow and daughters. Ratan left a widow, and a daughter's son Khairati. After the death of both widows disputes arose between Khairati and the daughters of Daulat, each claiming the whole estate. This was compromised by an agreement under which the daughters received rather more than one moiety of the whole estate. One of the two alienated her share, and this led to a suit to decide whether she had an absolute or a limited estate. As the title started from the compromise it was unnecessary to decide whether the change of religion in 1845 caused such a civil death as at once vested the estate in Daulat, though the Court was evidently of opinion that it did. But they held that even after the Act of 1850 the conversion of Ratan necessarily put an end to the joint tenancy under Hindu Law, and operated as a severance by operation of law, which vested half the estate in Daulat as his separate estate. The compromise recognised his daughter's claim as daughters, and therefore for a limited estate.

I am only aware of two other cases in which a claim to an inheritance has been set up under this Act, after a change of religion. In one a Hindu who had become a Muhammedan in 1839 sued for his inheritance after 1850. The Madras Sudder Court rejected his claim, holding that Act XXI of 1850 was not retrospective (s). In Allahabad the son of a Hindu who had turned Muhammedan, and who was himself a Muhammedan was held entitled to succeed as heir to his Hindu uncle, after the death of that uncle's (r) Gobind Krishna v. Abdul Qayyum, 25 All., 546, p. 573, following Abraham v. Abraham, 9 M. I. A., 199, ante § 59.

(s) Naugammah v. Karebasappah, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 250.

widow (t). Even with the aid of the Statute it seems difficult to see how a purely personal law, such as the Hindu or Muhammedan law, can be applied in favour of a person who has renounced it.

What defects must be congenital.

§ 594. Where it is sought to exclude an heir on the ground that he is blind, deaf or dumb, it is necessary to show that these defects are incurable and congenital (u).

Mental infirmity

As to mental infirmity, it has been held, that the degree of incapacity which amounts to idiocy is not utter mental darkness. It is sufficient if the person is, and has been from his birth, of such an unsound and imbecile mind as to be incapable of instruction or of discriminating between right and wrong. He must in short be one whom it would be impossible to describe as a reasoning being. Mere want of sound, or even ordinary, intelligence is not sufficient (v).

Whether it must be congenital.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether insanity also need be congenital. The texts and cases are all collected and discussed in a judgment of the High Court of Bombay. The question for decision was only as to blindness, but the Court expressed a strong opinion that madness, as well as blindness, must be shown to have existed from birth (w). It may, however, be doubted whether the texts which go to this extent do not refer to the case of idiocy, which is always congenital, while madness, as distinguished from idiocy, is rather a disease than an incapacity of the mind (x). Cases of disability

(t) Bhagwant Singh v. Kallu, 11 All., 100.

(u) Mohesh Chunder v. Chunder Mohun, 14 B. L. R., 273; S. C., 23 Suth., 78; Murarji v. Parvatibai, 1 Bom., 177 (blindness); Paroshmani v. Dinanath, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 117; Balgovind v. Pertab, S. D. of 1860, i., 661; Hira Singh v. Ganga Sahai, 6 All., 322 (deaf and dumb); Vallabhram v. Bai Hariganga, 4 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 135 (dumb); Umabai v. Bhavu, 1 Bom., 557; Charn Chunder v. Nobo Sunderi, 18 Cal., 327; Ram Bijai v. Jagatpal Singh, 18 Cal. (P. C.), 111. In the last case an alleged insanity, founded chiefly on incapacity for speech due to paralysis, was held by the Privy Council not to be a ground for exclusion.

(v) Tirumamagal v. Ramasvami, 1 Mad. H. C., 214; Surti v. Narain Das, 12 All., 530.

(w) Murarji v. Parvatibai, 1 Bom., 177, 182. See, too, Ananta v. Ramabai, 1 Bom., 554.

(x) See Narada, 3 Dig., 303. Other translations of the same text omit any reference to birth. W. & B., 576; Madhaviya, § 49. Sir Thos. Strange (1 Stra. H. L., 153) says that all the disabilities must be coeval with birth, though from lunacy have come at least twice before the Privy Council. In one (y), it was admitted that the lunacy was not congenital, and it was assumed that the only question was whether the insanity had existed at the time the succession opened. In the second (z), no question was raised as to the date of the lunacy. From the fact that the lunatic was a married man and a father, it is most probable that he had not been born so. On the other hand, in Bengal and Allahabad, it has been expressly held that insanity at the time the inheritance falls in is sufficient to exclude; and, in the second of the cases cited below it was further held that the insanity itself need not be incurable. If it was sufficient to prevent the claimant from offering the proper funeral oblations he was an unfit person to succeed (a). The same principle was applied where a person, who had become insane since his birth, brought a suit which assumed a right to claim a partition. It was held that his insanity would have been a bar to a claim as heir, and therefore would equally preclude a suit as coparcener for a share (b).

§ 595. Leprosy, of course, need not be congenital. Leprosy. Its occurrence is looked upon as the punishment of sin, either in a present or a past existence (c), and produces an incapacity for inheritance from the moment it is exhibited until it is removed by expiation (d). Some cases of leprosy are of a mild and curable form, while others are of a virulent and aggravated type, and incurable. It is only the latter form of the malady which causes Jaganatha seems to make the case of the madman an exception. The latter certainly says so in one passage (3 Dig., 314), though he interprets the texts of Narada and Devala as limited to congenital madness (ib., 304). See, too, futwah, W. & B., 579; Sarasvati Vilasa, § 148. Contra Smriti Chandrika, v., § 9.

(y) Bodhnarain v. Omrao, 13 M. I. A., 519; S. C., 6 B. L. R., 509.

(z) Koer Goolab v. Rao Kurun, 14 M. I. A., 176; S. C., 10 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1.

(a) Braja Bhukan v. Bichan, 9 B. L. R., 204, n.; S. C., 14 Suth., 329; Dwarkanath v. Mahendranath, 9 B. L. R., 198; S. C., sub nomine, Dwarkanath v. Denobundoo, 18 Suth., 305; Woma Pershad v. Grish Chunder, 10 Cal., 63; Deo Kishen v. Buih Prakash, 5 All. (F. B.), 509.

(b) Ram Sahye v. Lalla Laljee, 3 Cal., 149.

(c) 3 Dig., 313, 314.

(d) Sevachetumbara v. Parasucti, Mad. Dec. of 1857, 210; Lakhi v. Bhairab, 5 S. D., 315 (369). See futwah in Lakshmi v. Tulsi, 5 S. D., 285 (334).

inability to inherit (e). Other agonizing and incurable diseases are also spoken of as causing the same effect, as an example of which atrophy is given (f). It is probable, however, that the Courts would be slow to disinherit a man, merely because he was suffering from cancer or consumption, and in any case the strictest proof would be required that the disease was in fact incurable (g).

Lameness.

§ 596. Lameness is specifically alleged by Yajnavalkya as a ground of disability, and the word is explained by the Mitakshara as meaning "deprived of the use of his feet" (h).

Loss of a limb.

The corresponding word in Manu, nirindriya (i), is translated by Sir W. Jones and by Prosunno Comar Tagore, "such as have lost the use of a limb." And the commentary of Vachespatis Misra upon the text is, "Those who have lost the use of a limb signifies those who have been deprived of a hand, a leg, or any other member of the body. Such persons are not competent to perform ceremonies relating to the Vedas and Smriti. They are consequently not entitled to inherit paternal property" (k). Colebrooke translates the same word when cited in the Mitakshara, "those who have lost a sense (or a limb)," and the explanation of Vijnanesvara is, "any person who is deprived of an organ by disease, or any other cause, is said to have lost that sense or limb" (l). It would appear from this that lameness arising from illness or accident would operate as a bar to inheritance. I know of no instance in which any such objection has succeeded. In a case reported by West and Bühler the disqualified person Lameness or loss of a limb.

(e) 3 Dig., 309, 311; 1 Stra. H. L., 156; Muttuvelayudu Pillay v. Parasakti, Mad. Dec. of 1860, 239; followed Janardhan v. Gopal Pandurang, 5 Bom. A. C., 145; Anania v. Ramabai, 1 Bom., 554; Rangayya v. Thanikachalla, 19 Mad., 74; Mohunt Bhagoban v. Roghunundun, 22 I. A., 94; S. C., 22 Cal., 84.

(f) 3 Dig., 303, 313.

(g) See Issur Chunder v. Rane Dossee, 2 Suth., 125. The D. K. S. explains the text of Narada, which refers to a long and painful disease, as meaning a disease from the period of birth. D. K. S., iii., § 11.

(h) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 1, 2.

(i) ix., 201.

(k) Vivida Chintamani, 242, 243.

(l) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 3, 4; see per curiam, Murari v. Parvatibai, 1 omB., 185.

is said to have been born lame, and Jagannatha seems to think that lameness arising subsequently would be no disability (m). In Madras the Court refused to admit lameness as a bar where it was admittedly not congenital, and suggested that as no case could be found in which such a ground of exclusion was made out the rule itself might be obsolete (n). In an early case in Bombay a person was asserted to be disqualified as a Pungoo or helpless cripple. It appeared that he could walk a little, and was a married man and a father. The Shastri to whom the point was referred said, "that according to the Shasters a Pungoo or helpless cripple was excluded from inheritance; that the term Pungoo was not very clearly defined, but in his opinion a person deprived of the use of his hands or feet was a Pungoo; and that 'Nirindriya,' or such as were deprived of a sense, were excluded from inheritance. That persons only deformed in a hand did not come under the term 'Nirindriya,' though persons afflicted with an obstinate or incurable disease did." He was of opinion that the claimant was not disqualified from inheritance. Upon this futwah the Appellate Court decided in favour of the claimant. The Sudder Court reversed the decision, but not upon a point affecting the question now in discussion (o). It would seem, therefore, that the loss of a sense or organ must be not only congenital, but absolute or complete. Not, perhaps, necessarily the absolute want of the limb, but, at all events, a complete incapacity to make any use of it.

§ 597. As to vice, several futwahs from Bombay are Vice. to be found, which would practically place the son at the mercy of his father, if he chose to disinherit him for vicious habits, hostility or disobedience (p). In a Surat case, a will by which a father disinherited his son for vicious and dissolute habits was affirmed (q). But it

(m) W. & B., 578; 3 Dig., 304.

(n) Venkat Subba Rao v. Purushottam, 26 Mad., 133.

(o) Dadjee v. Wittul, Bom. Sel. Rep., 151.

(p) W. & B., 583-587.

(q) Mihirwanjee v. Poonjea, 1 Bor., 141 [159]. This was a case between Parsis. See per curiam, Advaya v. Rudrava, 4 Bom., 117.

would rather seem as if the testator's property had been self-acquired. Further, the son had executed an agreement, acknowledging that his debts had been paid off, and admitting his father's right to disinherit him, in case of renewed misconduct. In a case from the North-West Provinces the Court refused to act upon the texts which debarred a son from his share on account of his being addicted to vice, and a professed enemy of his father. They said that "the evidence given of the plaintiff's gambling and licentious propensities was of a vague and general character, and not such as would allow them to conclude that he had disqualified himself by addiction to vice for the performance of obsequies and such like acts of religion." Also, that although the evidence showed that he had quarrelled with and even struck his father, it did not disclose anything like habitual maltreatment, or active and malignant hostility which would authorise them to pronounce him a professed enemy of his father. They further observed that the texts in question were not only inapplicable to the facts, but are understood to have become obsolete in practice (r). In the same case they refused to act upon the supposed rule which disqualifies a coparcener from obtaining his own share, where he has attempted to defraud his coparceners of any portion of their rights. In a similar (though certainly a stronger) case the rule had been strictly applied by the Sudder Court of Madras (s). I imagine that all such disabilities as the above would come under the head of minor grounds of forfeiture, removeable by penance (t). In one Bengal case an adopted son, who sued for his inheritance, was met by a plea that he had publicly and falsely accused his adoptive mother of profligacy. The pundit, when consulted, replied that such an offence could only be expiated by a process of atonement, which would last twelve years, or in lieu thereof, by the gift of 180

(r) Kalka v. Budree, 3 N.-W. P., 267. See Jye Koonwur v. Bihkari, S. D. of 1848, 320, where, being a professed enemy to a father, was treated (under Mithila law) as a possible ground of exclusion, but not made out in fact.

(s) Choondoor v. Narasinmah, Mad. Dec. of 1858, 118, ante § 485.

(t) See Manu, xi., § 183—187.

milch cows and their calves, or their value, not to the calumniated parent, but to the Brahmans. The Court accordingly dismissed the suit, holding that the claimant could not inherit until he had performed the prescribed penance (u). I greatly doubt, however, whether this precedent would be followed in the present day.

In Madras a case occurred in which the plaintiff claimed to be entitled to an estate as next reversioner on the ground that the woman who would be entitled to the intermediate estate had been a party to the murder of the deceased owner. She and her paramour had been tried for the murder, and she had been acquitted, but the man had been convicted. The Judge held that the plea was irrelevant. The High Court held that the case put forward would be sufficient, if made out. Not upon any ground of Hindu law that crime was a degradation, but upon the general principle that no one can benefit by a death which he has intentionally brought about (v).

All grounds of disqualification which would exclude males apply equally as against female heirs (w). Disabilities exclude females.

§ 598. Except in the case of degradation, the disability is purely personal, and does not extend to the legitimate issue of the disqualified person (x). But their adopted sons will be in no better position as regards ancestral property than themselves, and only entitled to maintenance out of it (y). There seems, however, to be no reason why the adopted son of a disqualified person should not succeed to all property which had already vested in his father, or which was acquired by him (z). Similarly, the widow of a disqualified heir cannot claim, as widow, to succeed to any property which her husband could not have inherited (a). But she would be his heir. And if his son succeeded and then died, she would inherit as mother to such son (b). Disability only personal (u) Bholu Nath v. Mt. Sabitra, 6 S. D., 62 (71).

(v) Vedanayaga v. Vedammal, 27 Mad., 591.

(w) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 8.

(x) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 9, 10; Daya Bhaga, v., § 17—19.

(y) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 11; Dattaka Chandrika, vi.; § 1, ante § 110.

(z) Suth. Syn., 671.

(a) D. K. S., iii., § 17.

(b) 2 W. MacN., 130.

not a forfeiture.

Property which has once vested in a person, either by inheritance or partition, is not divested by a subsequently arising disability (c).

Lets in next heir.

§ 599. The effect of a disability on the part of a person who would otherwise have been heir, is at once to let in the next heir. For instance, if a man left an insane son and a daughter, the latter would take at once (d). So if he left an insane daughter, and sons by her, the latter would take at once (e), that is to say, the effect of the lunacy is, for purposes of succession, exactly the same as if the lunatic was then dead. If the incapacitated person has issue then living, or in ventre sa mère, who would, if the father were actually dead, be the next heir, such issue will be entitled to succeed. But he must succeed by his own merits. He will not be allowed to step into his father's place. For instance, if a man dies, leaving a brother, and an insane brother and his son, the brother will take the whole estate; because the nephew cannot inherit while a brother is in existence. So if a man dies leaving a sister's son, who is insane, and the sister's son himself has a son, the latter cannot inherit, because the sister's grandson is not an heir (f). And if the estate has in consequence of the incapacity vested in a male, the latter becomes full and absolute owner. If the incapacitated heir has a son, subsequently conceived, that son will not inherit, even though he would have been next heir or a sharer if born, or conceived, when the succession fell in (§ 600).

After-born son.

Removal of disability.

§ 600. Where the defect which produces exclusion is subsequently removed, the right to inheritance revives, in the same manner as, or upon the analogy of a son born after

(c) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 6; Balgovind v. Lal Bahadur, S. D. of 1854, 244; Deo Kishen v. Budh Prakash, 5 All., 509; Kery Kolitany v. Mooneeram, 71 A., 115; 5 Cal., 776, per curiam, 14 Mad., p. 294; Abilakh Bhagat v. Bhekhi, 22 Cal., 864.

(d) 2 W. MacN., 42.

(e) Bodhnarain v. Omrao, 13 M. I. A., 510; S. C., 6 B. L. R., 509.

(f) Per Peacock, C. J., Kalidas v. Krishan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 115. See too Dwarkanath v. Mahendranath, 9 B. L. R., 198, 203; S. C., sub nomine, Dwarkanath v. Denobundoo, 18 Suth., 305.

partition (g). The effect of this rule in cases of partition has been already discussed (§ 484). But the revival of this right will not necessarily place the previously disqualified heir in the same position as if the incapacity had never existed. The Hindu law never allows the inheritance to be in abeyance, and if the claimant is not capable of succeeding at the time the descent takes place, the subsequent removal of his incapacity will not enable him to dispossess a person whose title was better than his while the defect existed, though inferior to his own after the defect was removed. For instance, suppose a man has a son who is born blind. If we can imagine the blindness removed before his father's death, he would of course inherit. If it was not removed, and his father died leaving a widow, she would inherit. If the blindness was cured during her life, she would continue to hold the property, but, at her death, the son would likewise inherit, because he would be the nearest to her deceased husband. But if, on the father's death, his brother had inherited, and during his life the blind son was cured, and then the brother died leaving a widow, she would inherit, and not the formerly blind son. Because succession would be traced to the last full owner, who was the brother, and his heir would be the widow, and not a person who stood to him only in the relation of nephew (h). If, however, the brother died, leaving no nearer heir than a nephew, then the person who was previously incapacitated as son would now succeed as nephew. These principles were laid down by a Full Bench of the High Court of Bengal under the following circumstances:—At the death of A, his son, being blind, was incapable of succeeding,

Removal of disability.

and the estate passed to the widows of A, of whom the (g) Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 7; V. May., iv., 11, § 2.

(h) Bhoobum Moyee v. Ramkishore, 10 M. I. A., 279; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 15, ante § 185.

last died in 1849. At her death the estate passed to C, the nephew of A. In 1858 a son was born to the blind man, and he claimed the estate from C. If he had been alive either at the death of A, or of the last widow, he would have been the heir, but it was held that once the estate reached C, he took it with all the rights of a full owner, and could not be deprived of it by any subsequent birth (i). It was not necessary to decide what would have been the result if the blind man himself had recovered his sight after the property had vested in C. It might be suggested that he would have divested the estate of the nephew, on the analogy of a son born or adopted after the death of the last owner (k). But it is difficult to see why these analogies should be applied in his favour, and not in favour of his own son, who was born without any imperfection. The former case is really not analogous at all, as the unborn infant is, in contemplation of law, actually existent from conception, and is only incapable of taking at once, because it may die before leaving the womb. As to the adopted son, it seems almost sufficient to say that there can be no reason for applying analogies, drawn from the case of a very highly-favoured heir, to a disqualified heir, who is let in afterwards by special indulgence.

Conflict of decisions.

Bombay.

§ 601. The same point arose in Bombay and in Madras, when different decisions were arrived at. In Bombay (l), the position of the family was as follows:—

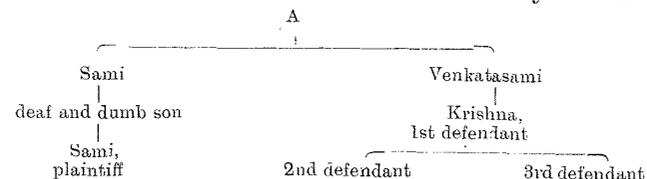

Bapuji, the plaintiff's grandfather, died leaving the

(i) Kalidas v. Krishan, 2 B. L. R. (F. B.), 103; Pareshmani v. Dinanath, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 117; Deo Kishen v. Mudh Prakash, 5 All., 509.

(k) See per Willes, J., in Tagore case, 9 B. L. R., 397; S. C., 18 Suth., 359; S. C., I. A., Sup. Vol., 47.

(l) Bapuji v. Pandurang, 6 Bom., 616.

defendants, his undivided nephew and grandnephew, and a deaf and dumb son. After his death, the son married, and the plaintiff was born. The latter sued to recover his share of the family property. The Bombay High Court held that the rule laid down in Bengal applied equally in Bombay, and that, as the whole property had vested in Pandurang at the death of Bapuji, it could not be divested by the subsequent birth of the plaintiff. In Madras decision the case from Madras (m), the facts were exactly similar.

The plaintiff was born after the death of his grandfather, and it was contended that the whole property vested in the undivided line of Venkatasami. The Madras High Court held that the Bengal decision went on the peculiar doctrines of the Daya Bhaga, whereby the separate interest of A passed to his widow, and then to his nephew C, who held it as separate property. Under Mitakshara law, the lines of Sami and Venkatasami were an undivided coparcenary, liable to be enlarged or diminished by births or deaths. The share of Sami passed to his nephews by survivorship, but subject to the possibility that their interest in it might be curtailed by the subsequent birth of a coparcener in Sami's line. Undoubtedly, if the plaintiff had been born in his grandfather's life, he would have been at once by birth a joint owner in the family property. The Court considered that it made no difference that he was not born till afterwards. They likened it to the case of a brother who takes an impartible estate by survivorship, but whose estate is divested by a subsequent adoption made by the widow of the deceased (n).

§ 602. It is obvious that, although the Bengal and Madras cases may be reconciled in the way suggested Discussion of these cases.

(m) Krishna v. Sami, 9 Mad., 64.

(n) Raghunada v. Broso Kishore, 3 I. A., 154; S. C., 1 Mad., 69.

above, there is no way of reconciling the Bombay and Madras cases. Both were governed by Mitakshara law. The analogy derived from the rights of an adopted son seems also imperfect. His case has always been treated as an anomalous one, and as subject under certain circumstances to the same rules which preserve the rights of an infant in its mother's womb (o). Further, this indulgence is only shown to an adopted son when the adoption is made to the last male holder of the estate (§ 187—191). Again, the plaintiff in the Madras case could only become a coparcener by virtue of the rule that a son or a grandson takes by birth an interest in the estate of his father or grandfather. But that estate had passed away to the defendants before his birth, as much as if it had been sold to them. It is difficult to see how he could by his birth enter into a coparcenary which had ceased to exist. On the death of the grandfather, the whole estate vested absolutely in the nephew, subject only to the rights of his son. The plaintiff by his birth took no interest whatever in the property of his cousins. Therefore, it would appear, with the greatest respect to the learned Judges, as if his birth could have no effect in divesting or diminishing their interests.

Entrance into religious order.

§ 603. One who has entered into an order of devotion is also excluded from inheritance, since he has of his own accord abandoned all earthly interests (p). The persons who are excluded on this ground come under three heads, viz., the Vanaprasatha, or hermit; the Sanyasi or Yati, or ascetic; and the Brahmachari, or perpetual religious student. In order to bring a person under these heads, it is necessary to show an absolute abandonment by them of all secular property, and a complete and final withdrawal from earthly affairs. The mere fact that a person calls himself a Byragi, or religious mendicant, or indeed that Must be absolute and final.

(o) Tagore v. Tagore, 9 B. L. R. (P. C.), 377, 397, 400, 404.

(p) Yajñavalkya, ii., § 137; Vasishtha, xvii., § 27; Mitakshara, ii., 10, § 3; Daya Bhaga, v., § 11; V. May., iv., 11, § 5.

he is such, does not of itself disentitle him to succeed to property (q). Nor does any Sudra come under this disqualification, unless by usage (r).

I have not been able to find any evidence of the grounds which are held to exclude from inheritance by usage in the Punjab, or among the non-Aryan races of India. It will be seen that the Madras Sudder Court has in several cases applied the Sanskrit rules to Tamil litigants. I should imagine that rules founded so completely upon Brahmanical principles would require to be applied with great caution to tribes who had not thoroughly accepted those principles. The more so, as those principles have no foundation in natural equity or justice.

(q) See ante § 590; Teeluck Chunder v. Shama Churn, 1 Suth., 209.

(r) Dharmapuram Pandara Sannadi v. Virapandiyam, 22 Mad., 302.

CHAPTER XX.

WOMAN'S ESTATE.

*In Property inherited from Males.*Meaning of Stridhanum.

§ 604. THE term Stridhanum (literally woman's estate) is used in two different acceptations by Hindu lawyers. In one sense it denotes that special sort of woman's estate over which she has absolute control, even during the life of her husband (a). In another sense it includes all sorts of property of which a woman has become the owner, whatever may be the extent of her rights over it (b).

Now, it will be found that property held by a woman is at once divisible into two classes, which have completely different incidents, viz., property which has devolved upon her by inheritance from a male owner, and property which she has obtained in any other way. In speaking of stridhanum hereafter I shall wholly exclude from it the former class of property. It is evident that it would only create confusion to apply the same word to estates which are obtained in different ways, and which are held by different tenure.

Limitations on inherited property.

§ 605. The typical form of estate inherited by a woman from a male is the widow's estate. But it may now be considered that the same limitations apply to all estates derived by a female by descent from a male, in whatever capacity she may have inherited them. The only exception is as to the estate of a sister, and possibly of a daughter, in Bombay. The rule upon this point is still open to discussion.

Not a life estate.

It was at one time common to speak of a widow's estate as being one for life. But this is wholly incorrect.

(a) Daya lBaga, iv., 1, § 18,
(b) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 3.

It would be just as untrue to speak of the estate of a father under the Mitakshara law as being one for life. Hindu law knows nothing of estates for life, or in tail, or in fee. It measures estates not by duration but by use. The restrictions upon the use of an estate inherited by a woman are similar in kind to those which limit the powers of a male holder, but different in degree. The distinctive feature of the estate is that, at her death, it reverts to the heirs of the last male owner. She never becomes a fresh stock of descent (c).

Reverts to heir of last male holder.

§ 606. It is evident that these two qualities of her estate are connected together. It would be of little use to mark out a line of descent which should keep the estate in the family from which it came, unless the woman was restrained from absolutely disposing of it. On the other hand, the line of descent which is marked out shows that the estate was given to the woman for a special purpose, which would be satisfied without giving any interest in it to her own immediate heirs. But it is by no means clear whether the estate reverted to the man's heirs because the woman was only allowed a special use of it, or whether she was only allowed the special use in order to preserve it for those heirs; or whether both incidents arose from the purpose for which such estates were originally allowed to exist.

It is singular how little is to be found on the subject in the Hindu writings. We are told in very early texts that a widow is restrained in dealing with the estate she may inherit from her husband, but we are nowhere told that the same restrictions apply to other female heirs. Again, the course of inheritance laid down in the earlier texts seems to assume that the estate reverts after a widow or a daughter to the heirs of the last male; but until we come to Jimuta Vahana we are nowhere told that it is

Scanty authority.

(c) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavalry Vencata, 8 M. L. A., 529, 550; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 59; Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 13 B. L. R., 5, 53, 76; S. C., 19 Suth., 367.

the rule (d). The literal wording of the Mitakshara seems to state that it is not the rule (e).

Limited power of disposal.

§ 607. As regards the first point, viz., the limited powers of disposal possessed by a female, we must recollect that, according to Hindu law, restriction was the rule, absolute power the exception. Even the male head of a family was hemmed in by limitations. These were gradually reduced in their application, when separate and self-acquired property was introduced, and at last disappeared entirely in the Bengal system. It would have seemed absurd to a Hindu lawyer that anyone should imagine that a female, herself a most subordinate member of the family, could possess higher rights over its property than its head. The earlier writers contented themselves with general statements that a woman was never fit for independence, but must, at every stage of her life, be under the tutelage of some male protector, the widow being under the control of her husband's family (f). As regards the widow, too, the state of asceticism in which she was expected to live was of itself a restriction upon her right to spend the property (g). Most of the texts which definitely speak of the restrictions upon a woman's power of dealing with property relate to a widow. Katyayana says: "Let the childless widow, preserving unsullied the bed of her lord, and abiding with her venerable protector, enjoy with moderation the property until her death. After her, let the heirs take it. But she has not property therein to the extent of gift, mortgage, or sale" (h). The Mahabharata says: "For women the heritage of their husbands is pronounced applicable to use. Let not women on any account make waste of their husband's wealth" (i). Narada, however,

(d) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 57-59; xi., 2, § 30, 31; Viramit., p. 140.

(e) See post § 610.

(f) Manu, viii., § 416; ix., § 2, 3, 104; Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 27; Narada, xii., § 28-30; Smṛiti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 35-39.

(g) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 61; 2 Dig., 459; per curiam, Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavalry Vencata, 8 M. I. A., 551; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 59.

(h) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 56; V. May., iv., 8, § 4; Vivada Chintamani, 292; Vrihaspati, cited Smṛiti Chandrika, xi., 1, § 28; Viramit., p. 136, § 3.

(i) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 60.

lays down the same proposition with greater generality: "Women's business transactions are null and void, except in case of distress, especially the gift, pawning, or sale of a house or field. Women are not entitled to make a gift or sale; a woman can only take a life-interest whilst she is, living together with the rest of the family. Such transactions of women are valid where the husband has given his consent, or, in default of the husband, the son, or, in default of husband and son, the king" (k). If, as I have already suggested (l), the widow's inheritance originally commenced as a compendious mode of enabling her to maintain herself, it would naturally follow, both that her right of using the property would be limited, and that after her death, it would revert to the heirs of her husband's family. Probably the same origin may be ascribed to the limitations on the estate of a mother and other female ancestor.

Cause of the restriction.

§ 608. The same reasoning, however, would not apply to the case of a daughter. She takes the inheritance not by way of maintenance—the obligation to maintain her ending at marriage—but as beneficial owner. In her case, possibly, the limitation arose originally from the natural dislike to any succession which would carry the property of the family permanently into a different line (m). This principle would be strengthened when inheritance came to be looked on as a reward for religious benefits. Under that system, each heir takes the estate prima facie as a means of performing the religious obsequies of the last male. When the heir is himself a male, his own obsequies require to be attended to, therefore at his death the property passes to those who are bound to make offerings to him, that is, to his own heirs. But where the property is taken by a female, her obsequies are provided for quite independently, viz., in her husband's family, if she is estate.

Daughter's

(k) Narada, iii., § 27-30.

(l) Ante § 524.

(m) The rule is thoroughly established by usage in the Punjab as regards both widows, daughters, and mothers. Punjab Customs, 16, 45, 52, 54, 58.

married. The duty which has to be performed to the deceased male still remains, and it can only be discharged by returning the estate to a member of his family, who, as being his heir, is bound to discharge his funeral rites. Now if the female holder is bound to return the property into his family, an obligation would naturally arise to return it intact. She would be considered as holding the property for a special purpose, and bound to pass it on to the next heir, with its capacity for performing that purpose undiminished.

Restriction applies to all female heirs.

§ 609. Whatever may be the origin of the rule, there can be no doubt now that the rule exists universally (except in Bombay) that where any female takes as heir to a male, she takes a restricted estate, and on her death the property passes not to her heirs, but to the person who would be the next heir of the last full owner. In Bengal the point was always beyond dispute, as it was expressly so laid down by Jimuta Vahana (n). It was at one time supposed that a different rule prevailed in Southern India (o). This idea was based on a text of the Mitakshara which appears to class such property as stridhanum, which passes to the heirs of the woman. In Madras it will be seen that no weight is any longer attributed to that text. But as it appears to be at the root of a conflicting series of decisions in Bombay, and as the matter is also one of much historical interest, it will be necessary to examine the passage somewhat minutely.

Supposed exception under Mitakshara.

§ 610. The whole discussion turn upon two questions; first, whether the devolution of a woman's property, stated by the Mitakshara at ii., 11, § 8, 9, applies to all the sorts of property which he had already described at § 2, 3, of the

(n) Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 57—59; xi., 2, § 30, 31; 3 Dig., 494, 497; Hurrydoss v. Pungunmoney, Sev., 657.

(o) 1 Str. H. L., 139, 248; Str. Man., § 354; Gopaula v. Narraina, Mad. Dec. of 1850, p. 76; Iyavoo v. Sengen, ib., 1856, p. 47; Jagadunda v. Camacheamma, ib., 1858, p. 244. A female heir derives no stronger title from the fact that the Inam Commissioner has enfranchised in her name property inherited from a male, and has given a new title deed in her name. Vangala v. Vangala, 28 Mad., 13.

same section, or only to some of those sorts of property, and secondly, what weight is to be given to its authority, if it was meant to have the widest application. Section 11 is a commentary on the three texts of Yajnavalkya (II, § 143—145) which relate to stridhanum, illustrated in the author's usual manner by citations from other writers. He commences (§ 1) by quoting the first of the three texts in a manner which is translated by Mr. Colebrooke as follows:—"What was given to a woman by the father, the mother, the husband or a brother, or received by her at the nuptial fire, or presented to her on her husband's marriage to another wife, as also any other (separate acquisition), is denominated woman's property." Now the word in the original text, which is here rendered any other, is adi annexed to the preceding term, which really means "and the like," and is so translated elsewhere (p). Primâ facie, therefore, they only refer to property of the same nature as the foregoing, that is, to special gifts made to a woman by her own family, and to particular gifts made to her as a bride, or a superseded wife. In the next section Vijnanesvara repeats and expands this text, adding, "and also property which she may have acquired by inheritance, purchase, partition, seizure or finding, are denominated by Manu and the rest 'woman's property.'" Now Manu certainly says nothing of the sort. His enumeration (IX, § 194) is contained in the fourth clause of the same section of the Mitakshara. It is so strictly limited to personal gifts, that Vijnanesvara and others think it necessary to add, that the six classes of gifts there stated are not exclusive of any other sorts of property. But the general statement which closes § 2 will be found in Gautama, cited in the Mitakshara, I, 1, § 8. "An owner is by inheritance, purchase, partition, seizure or finding" (q). But this is a definition of ownership in Stridhanum defined by Mitakshara,

(p) See translation of the text, ii., 143, by Montriou and Roer, and Stenzler; also by Dr. Burnell, Varadrajah, p. 45. See also his remarks, Introd., p. 13; Mavr., 171.

(q) And see Manu, x., § 115, where he points out seven virtuous modes of acquiring property, the last three of which at all events are peculiar to men.

general, not of woman's property, specially so called. The passage of the Mitakshara, therefore, merely comes to this, that a woman may acquire property, not only by the special modes, which gave it peculiar incidents of alienability and succession, as stridhanum, strictly so called, but by any other mode by which a male can acquire it. Then at § 3 he makes this quite clear by saying, "The term woman's property conforms in its import with its etymology, and is not technical, for, if the literal sense be admissible, a technical acceptance is improper." That is to say, he gives the reader express notice that, when he uses the word stridhanum, he means, not "woman's property" specially and technically so called, but the property of a woman, vested in her by any legal means (r). Then at § 8 he says, "A woman's property has been thus described. The author (that is, Yajnavalkya) next propounds the distribution of it. 'Her kinsmen take it, if she die without issue.'" The question is, to what sort of property does this rule apply? Does it apply to stridhanum in its technical, or in its general, meaning? In other words, does it apply to it as defined by Yajnavalkya, or as defined by Vijnanesvara? In the first and subsequent editions of this work I suggested that the rule of succession laid down in the Mitakshara for woman's property, as defined by the author, was not intended to apply to property inherited by her from males. This suggestion, however, met with no acceptance in India. Those who agreed and those who disagreed with the rule had no doubt that Vijnanesvara meant exactly what he said, and that he intended his rule to apply (r) This is directly opposed to the use of the word by Jimuta Vahana, "That alone is her peculiar property which she has power to give, sell, or use, independently of her husband's control." Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 18. So Katayana excludes from the term Stridhanum the earnings of a woman or what she has received from any but the kindred of her husband or parents, 3 Dig., 557. Property inherited by a woman is not included in the definition of Stridhanum by the Smriti Chandrika, ix., 1; the Mayukha, iv., 10; the Vivada Chintamani, 256; the Madhaviya, § 50 or Varadrajah, 45. On the other hand it is included by the Viramitrodaya, 221, § 2 and the Sarasvati Vilasa, § 264, both of which follow the definition given in the Mitakshara. Also by Apararka, Kamalakara in the Vivadatandava, Nandapandita in the Vaijayanti, and Viveçara in the Madavaparajota. See Dr. Jolly, Lectures, pp. 248—251.

has no technical meaning.

Text of the Mitakshara discussed.

equally to all property inherited by a woman, whether from a male or a female (s). This view has been followed by the Judicial Committee in two cases from Allahabad (t). That being so, the merely personal authority of Vijnanesvara must stand on exactly the same level as to all female heirs. Now this text of the Mitakshara has been, on two occasions at least, pressed upon the Judicial Committee as an argument for holding that a widow has greater power over property inherited from her husband in provinces governed by that law, than elsewhere. But the argument has always failed, and it is thoroughly settled that a widow takes only a restricted estate, and that at her death it passes to her husband's heirs (u). And this is admitted in its fullest sense by the High Court of Bombay as regards landed property (v). It is also admitted by the Courts of all the Presidencies, except perhaps in Bombay, that the mother and grandmother, when inheriting from a son or grandson, take an estate similar in all respects to that of a widow (w). In all these cases the female had inherited to a male. The case of a female inheriting the stridhan of another female

Held inapplicable to mother.

(s) Banerjee, Law of Marriage and Stridhanum, pp. 301, 304; W. & B., 146, 323; Dr. Jolly, Lectures, 246; 8 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), p. 272; 17 Bom., 761; 24 Bom., p. 217; 19 Mad., p. 118.

(t) Sheo Shankar Lal v. Debi Sahai, 30 I. A., 202; S. C., 25 All., 468; Sheo Pertab v. Allahabad Bank, 30 I. A., 209, S. C., 25 All., 476.

(u) Thakoor v. Rai Baluk Ram, 11 M. I. A., 139, 173; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 3; Bhugwandeer v. Myna Bae, ib., 487, 509; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 23; Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavalry Vencata, 8 M. I. A., 529; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 59. Vivada Chintamani, 261; Keerut v. Koolahul, 2 M. I. A., 331; S. C., 5 Suth. (P. C.), 131.

(v) Per curiam, Pranjeevandas v. Dewcooverbae, 1 Bom. H. C., 130; Jamiatram v. Bai Jamna, 2 Bom. H. C., 10; Lakshmi Bai v. Ganpat Moroba, 4 Bom. (O. C. J.), 163; Bhaskar v. Mahadev, 6 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 1. The same rule has been held to apply to movable property undisposed of at the death of the widow. Harilal Harjivandas v. Pranvalabdas, 16 Bom., 229. As to her power of disposition, see post § 645.

(w) 1 W. MacN., 25; 2 W. MacN., 125, 209; 3 Dig., 505. See as to Bengal, Bijya v. Unpoorna, 1 S. D., 162 (215); Nufur v. Ram Koomar, 4 S. D., 310 (393); Bhyrobee v. Nubkissen, 6 S. D., 53 (61); Hemlitta v. Goluckchunder, 7 S. D., 108 (127); Rughober v. Mt. Tulashee, S. D. of 1847, 87. As to Mithila, Vivada Chintamani, 263; Panchanund v. Lalshan, 3 Suth., 140. As to Madras, Bachiraju v. Venkatappadu, 2 Mad. H. C., 402; Kutti v. Radhakristna, 8 Mad. H. C., 83; Vellanki v. Venkata, 41 I. A., 1, 8; S. C., 1 Mad., 174; S. C., 26 Suth., 21. As to Bombay, Vinayek v. Luazumeebae, 1 Bom. H. C., 117, p. 122. As to the N.-W. P., Phukar v. Ranjit, 1 All., 661. In Mysore, Naranappa v. Lukshmi, 15 Mysore, 71.

came very recently (1903) before the Judicial Committee in two cases, in which it was contended on the authority of the same text of the Mitakshara that the heiress took the estate or her stridhan, with absolute powers of disposition, and succession to her own heirs. The Committee, however, refused to accept the authority of the Mitakshara as binding in the case of inheritance from females any more than where the succession was to a male, and ruled that in the cases before them the property was not the stridhan of the last taken, and that she held it in the same manner as a widow's estate, and that on her death it reverted to the heirs of the person who held it as stridhan (x).

§ 611. In Bombay the High Court has always favoured a literal acceptance of the text of the Mitakshara under discussion. It has, however, in a series of cases held that a woman taking as heir to her son or grandson possessed no more than what is known as a widow's estate, which reverted to the heirs of the last male holder (y). In a later case, however, than those cited below (z), Candy, J., in two elaborate judgments expressed his disapproval of these rulings, some of which he correctly stated were only obiter dicta, on the ground that neither a mother nor a grandmother takes as widow. His remarks on this question were themselves only obiter dicta. The question referred to the Full Bench was, whether on the death of an infant daughter, who had succeeded for a few days to the estate of its father, and had been succeeded in the inheritance by its paternal grandmother, the latter took an absolute estate with power of unrestricted alienation. The High Court decided that she did. It was held that in accordance with the settled law of Bombay the daughter

(x) Sheo Shankar Lal v. Debi Sahai, 30 I. A., 202; S. C., 25 All., 468; Sheo Pertab v. Allahabad Bank, 30 I. A., 209, S. C., 25 All., 476.

(y) Vinayek v. Luavumeebaee, 1 Bom. H. C., 117, p. 122; Narsappa v. Sakharam, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 215; Sakhrav v. Sitabai, 3 Bom., 353; Dhondu v. Gangabai, ibid., 369; Bharmangavda v. Rudrapgavda, 4 Bom., p. 187; Fuljaram v. Mathuradas, 5 Bom., p. 670; Madhavram v. Dave Trambaktal, 21 Bom., p. 744.

(z) Gandi Maganlal v. Bai Jadub, F. B., 24 Bom., 192.

took absolutely. Her estate therefore came within the definition of the Mitakshara as Stridhanum, improperly so called, and on her death passed to her grandmother, who similarly, and under the same authority took it as her Stridhanum. The latter position has now been finally over-ruled by the Privy Council in the two cases cited in the previous section. The remarks of Mr. Justice Candy, which themselves were founded upon the assumption that the Mitakshara was an infallible guide upon the question in dispute, will probably not prevail against the opinion so long held, and so often expressed by the High Court of Bombay.

§ 612. The Court of Pondicherry appears to have ^{Pondicherry.} wavered in a remarkable manner in its views upon this question. In 1766 and again in 1769 they decided, in conformity with an opinion of the Vellala caste, that no woman could dispose of any immovable property, or of any property which she had inherited. This opinion was founded on what was called the law of the Malabar people, which no doubt meant the local usage. In 1851 the Court, following the views which then prevailed in the Madras Courts, held that property which descended to a widow was her Stridhanum, and was absolutely at her disposal. In 1869 they accepted the doctrine finally established in Madras that such property was held on the tenure which is generally known as 'a widow's estate.' In 1870 they reverted to their opinion of 1851, and in 1893 the Consultative Committee reported upon a reference to it that the local usage was as follows:—"The property which a woman inherits from her husband, as well as that which has been given to her by her parents and near relations, constitutes her stridhan. She can dispose of it freely (1) if she has no daughters; (2) even if she has daughters, if she has received express authority to alien, either from her husband in respect to the property inherited from him, or from her parents or relations in respect of property bestowed on her by them. (3) In the absence of such authority, if she has daughters she can only dispose of one-eighth of her stridhan. (4) The existence of other heirs than daughters is no restriction to her powers of disposition" (a).

Case of daughter.

§ 613. The only other female who can inherit to a male, except in Bombay, is a daughter. That property which she takes as daughter does not pass from her as stridhanum is evident from the circumstance that where there are several daughters, each of whom has sons, no son takes till all the daughters are dead, and then all take per capita (§ 563), that is, they take as direct heirs to the male ancestor, and not as representing their mothers. It has been repeatedly decided by the Bengal Courts, not only in cases under the Daya Bhaga, but also under Mithila and Mitakshara law, that the estate of a daughter exactly corresponds to that of a widow, both in respect to the restricted power of alienation, and to its succession after her death to her father's heirs, and not her own (b). The same point has been decided in a similar manner by the High Court of Madras, after a full examination of the passage in the Mitakshara, and of the Bombay authorities which have taken a different view (c). The rulings of these Courts have been affirmed by the Privy Council. The law as to daughters may therefore be taken to be the same as that which governs widows and mothers in every part of India except in Bombay.

Bengal.

Madras.

Rule in Bombay as to nature of estate taken by a female heir.

§ 614. In Bombay the Courts divide female heirs into two classes. Those who by marriage have entered into

(a) Sorg H. L., 247, 256; Co. Con., 3^d, 394.
(b) Daya Bhaga, xi., 2, § 30; 1 W. MacN., 21; 2 W. MacN., 224; F. MacN., 7; Gunga Mya v. Kishen Kishore, 3 S. D., 128 (170); Gosaien v. Mt. Kishen, 6 S. D., 77 (90), from Bengal, Gyan v. Dookhurn, 4 S. D., 330 (420); Deo Pershad v. Lujooora, 20 Suth., 102; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 245 (note), from Mithila, Chotay v. Chunnoo, 14 B. L. R., 235; S. C., 22 Suth., 496, Benares law; where the Bombay decisions were considered and disapproved. Affirmed in P. C., 6 I. A., 15; S. C., 4 Cal., 744.

(c) Sengamalathammal v. Valayuda, 3 Mad. H. C., 312; Kattama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tevar, 6 Mad. H. C., 310; Muttu Vaduganadha v. Dorasinga Tevar, 290, 8 I. A., 99; S. C., 3 Mad., 290; Vira Sangappa v. Rudrappa, 19 Mad., 110; Chelikani v. Chelikani, 29 I. A., 156; S. C., 25 Mad., 678. The Court seems, however, to hold that property inherited by a maiden daughter is her absolute estate, and passes to her own heirs. Venkatarama v. Bhujanga Rau, 19 Mad., p. 109; explaining Narasayya v. Venkayya, 2 Mad. L. J., 149.

the gotra of the male whom they succeed, take an estate similar to that of a widow. Those who are of a different gotra, or who upon their marriage will become of a different gotra from the last male owner, take absolutely. Under the former head fall a widow, mother, grandmother, etc., and the widow of a sapinda succeeding under circumstances similar to those under which Mankubarbai succeeded in the case of Lallubhai v. Mankubarbai (d). Under the latter head are ranked a daughter, sister, niece, grandniece, and the like (e). In examining the cases in which this rule has been applied, one is struck by the uniformity of the decisions in themselves, as contrasted with the weakness of the reasoning on which they rest. The absolute right of the daughter, sister, etc., is rested upon texts of the Mayukha, which seem unable to support the conclusion which is drawn from them, and upon a continued reference to the definition of the word stridhanum in the Mitakshara, from which, since the recent decisions of the Privy Council (f), no inference can be drawn. It is probable, however, that in this case, as in that of the female sapinda discussed in § 529, the pundits and judges, in their zeal for written authority, have striven to maintain by express texts a practice which could have been sufficiently supported by long established and inveterate usage. In the judgment in which the above rule was laid down, Westropp, C. J., expressly relies upon a long course of practice, followed by the High Court in numerous unreported cases, and by the legal profession in advising upon titles, any departure from which would cause much confusion and injustice throughout the Presidency (g).

§ 615. The leading case as to the rights of daughters, is one known as Dewcooverbae's case (h), decided on the

(d) 2 Bom., 388; affd., sub nomine, Lallubhoy v. Cassibai, 7 I. A., 212; S. C., 5 Bom., 110; Madhavram v. Dave Trambaktal, 21 Bom., 739.

(e) Tuljaram v. Mathuradas, 5 Bom., 662, 670.

(f) Ante § 610, 613.

(g) 5 Bom., p. 672. See also 11 Bom., p. 312.

(h) 1 Bom. H. C., 130; Vinayek v. Luvumeebae, 9 M. I. A., 528, note; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 41.

Dewcooverbae's case

Equity side of the Supreme Court in 1859. There an estate passed first to the widows, and then to the daughters. Sausse, C. J., said as to the latter: "What then is the nature of the estate they take? Here again, there are differences of opinion, but, dealing with the question according to the three works I have mentioned (Manu, Mitakshara, Mayukha), we find quoted in the Mayukha (IV, 8, § 10) a passage from Manu: 'The son of a man is even as himself, and the daughter is equal to a son; how then can any other inherit his property, but a daughter who is as it were himself' (i). With reference to this point also I consulted the Shastries, both here and at Poona, and enquired whether daughters could alienate any, and what portion, of the property inherited from a father who died separate? The answer was, that daughters so obtaining property could alienate it at their will and pleasure; and in this the Shastries of both places agreed, both also referring to the above text in the Mayukha as the authority for that position. On reviewing all accessible authorities, I have come to the conclusion that daughters take the immovable property absolutely from their father after their mother's death."

This ruling as to a daughter's estate has been followed in other cases in the Bombay Courts which are cited below (k), and, as will be seen hereafter (§ 617), has received the implied assent of the Judicial Committee. On the other hand, there are early cases, founded upon the opinions of the Surat Shastries, in which it has been held that a daughter, inheriting from her father, could not alienate the property without the consent of her son (l). In the 3rd edition of West and Bühler's Digest (p. 432), the learned editors, after referring to the above decisions say: "But in Muttuvaduganadha v. Dorasinga Tevar (m).

(i) Manu, ix., § 180. See this text discussed, ante § 519.

(k) Navabram v. Nandkishor, 1 Bom. H. C., 209; Vijarangam v. Lakshuman, 8 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 244; Haribhat v. Damodarbhat, 3 Bom., 171; per curiam, Bharmangavda v. Rudrapgavda, 4 Bom., 187; Tuljaram v. Mathuradas, 5 Bom., 670; Bulakhidas v. Keshavlal, 6 Bom., 85.

(l) Poonjia v. Prankoonwar, 1 Bor., 173 [194]; Krishnaram v. Mt. Bheekie, 2 Bor., 329 [362].

(m) 8 I. A., 99, 109.

the Judicial Committee say definitively that the Mitakshara is not to be construed as conferring on any 'woman taking by inheritance from a male a stridhana estate transmissible to her own heirs.' It would seem, therefore, that the heritage taken by daughters must in future be regarded as but a life-interest, whether with or without the extensions recognised in the case of a widow, except in cases governed by the Vyavahara Mayukha, IV, 10, § 25, 26. See 2 W. MacN., 57." The Bombay High Court in one case signified its approval of this view (n); but, on a later and fuller examination of the subject, it reverted to its former conclusion that in the Bombay Presidency, whether under the Mitakshara or Mayukha, a daughter inheriting from her father takes an absolute and not a life estate (o).

§ 616. As regards the right of sisters, the only decisions available are from Bombay, since, till very lately in Madras, their claim is not recognized in other parts of India. The rulings of the Bombay High Court are to the effect that they take an absolute interest. Right of sisters.

In the first case (p), Bhugwantrao died leaving a will by which he bequeathed all his property to his wife Luxumee- Vinayek v. Luxumeebae.

bae and his infant son Gujanun, and made his wife sole executrix. Gujanun survived him, and then died an infant. The plaintiffs, nephews of Bhugwantrao, filed their bill against the widow and daughters. They prayed for a (n) Dalpat Narotan v. Bhagvan Khushal, 9 Bom., 301, 303.

(o) Bhaghirtibai v. Kahnuijirav, 11 Bom. (F. B.), 285; Jankibai v. Sunara, 14 Bom., 612.

(p) Vinayek v. Luxumeebae, 1 Bom. H. C., 117; affd., 9 M. I. A., 516; S. C., 3 Suth. (P. C.), 41; followed Bhaskar Trimbak v. Mahadev, 6 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 1.

declaration that the widow was only entitled for life, and that they were entitled as next heirs in remainder. It is stated that the bill set out various acts and omissions amounting to waste and charged Luxumeebaee with attempting to adopt. It prayed that she should be restrained from selling or disposing of any part of the estate, from committing waste, and from adopting. The bill was demurred to, so that all the allegations contained in it were taken as true.

Sisters said to take absolutely.

The whole argument turned upon the asserted right of the plaintiffs as next heirs after the widow. The Court held that the persons to succeed after Luxumeebaee were the heirs of Gujanun, and that according to the Mayukha those heirs were his sisters, the defendants, and not his cousins, the plaintiffs. But at the end of their judgment (q), the Supreme Court said that, as to the mode in which sisters take, it would appear by analogy that they take as daughters. As it had been decided by Dewcooverbaee's case that the daughters of a man take absolutely, so therefore do the sisters. In confirming this decision, the Judicial Committee said (r): "They consider that in Bombay at least the sisters in such a case as this are the heirs of the brother. The consequence is that, in whatever possible manner the will of the testator is read, the entire interest in the property must, we think, be viewed as vested in the widow and her daughters, or some or one of them, and that, therefore, the appellants here, the sons of the brother of the testator, are suing in a matter in which they have not shown the slightest interest, nor with which they have any concern. The result is that, in their Lordships' opinion, the demurrer was rightly allowed, and that the appeal should be dismissed with costs."

§. 617. The force of these decisions consists in the fact that they were given upon demurrer. If, therefore, the bill alleged acts of waste which would have entitled

(q) 1 Bom. H. C., 124.
(r) 9 M. I. A., 538.

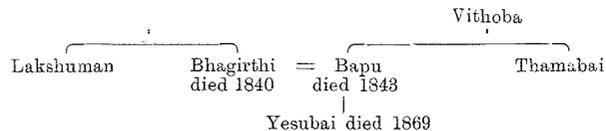

reversioners coming in after the sisters to an injunction, then, inasmuch as the demurrer admitted the allegations in the bill, the decision is conclusive that the estate was vested absolutely in the daughters, after the widow's life estate. In consequence of a suggestion which was made in previous editions of this work that the general allegation of waste might not have been put in any form which would have supported a decree, Westropp, C. J., in a judgment already referred to (s), stated that he had sent for the original record of the suit. It appeared from it that, amongst other specific charges of waste committed by Luxumeebaee, paragraph 13 of the bill contained the following statement:—"The defendant Luxumeebaee has sold the said piece of land situate at Warli, forming part of the immovable estate of her deceased husband, and is still attempting to sell part of the immovable property of her said husband, with a view of appropriating the money to her own use, although she did not and does not pretend that there was or there is any necessity for the said sale, and several brokers have, during the last year and a half, at her request, gone into the bazaar at Bombay, and on several occasions offered the said last mentioned property for sale." Upon this, the learned Chief Justice correctly remarks: "This paragraph (the truth of which for the purpose of the demurrer was admitted) was alone quite sufficient to support a decree and injunction, if the plaintiffs had any interest in the property, the subject of the suit. The Supreme Court and Privy Council, however, held that the plaintiffs had not any interest, reversionary or otherwise, in the property." It will be observed that the plaintiffs rested their whole case on the assertion that they were next in succession to the widow, and that the sisters were not heirs at all. The question of heirship appears to have been the only one argued, and no point seems to have been made, that the sisters, even if they were heirs, only took a limited estate. The Supreme Court, however, decided that the quality of a sister's estate must be taken to be the same as that of a daughter's estate. They assumed that Dewcooverbaee's case had settled that this latter estate was an absolute one. Sir Michael Westropp says (t), "the appellants in Vinayek v. Luxumeebaee resorted to Her Majesty's Privy Council against the advice given to them by counsel." As he states that the decisions in that case and in Dewcooverbaee's case "were in accordance with the pre-existing traditions in that Court and in the legal profession in Bombay," it is probable that counsel in England were instructed that the question of heirship was the only point open to argument. The result is, that there is a tacit recognition by the Privy Council that both daughters and sisters take an absolute estate in property which they inherit from father or brother. Where there are several daughters or sisters they take in severalty and not as joint tenants (u).

(s) Tuljaram v. Mathuradas, 5 Bom., p. 671.

§ 618. A much more difficult question is as to the line of descent appropriate to property which has been taken as her absolute estate by a female inheriting to a male. In some of the earlier Bombay decisions this question was answered summarily by saying that, as she took the property as her stridhanum, it must necessarily pass from her to those persons who, under the texts of the Mitakshara, II, 11, § 8, 9, are the heirs to such property (v). A different decision was given by Mr. Justice West in the case of Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman (w).

There certain property descended from Vithoba to Bapu, and from him to his daughter Yesubai. At her death Lakshuman, her mother's brother, and Thamabai, (t) 5 Bom., 672.

(u) Rindabai v. Anacharya, 15 Bom., 206.

(v) Navalram v. Nandkishor, 1 Bom. H. C., 209; Bhaskar Trimbak v. Mahadev Ramji, 6 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 1.

(w) 8 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 244.

her father's sister, each claimed to carry on a suit in which she was engaged in reference to the property. It was decided that Thamabai was entitled. A most elaborate judgment was pronounced by Mr. Justice West, in which he naturally took the same view upon the subject of stridhanum that had been propounded by the learned editors of West and Bühler's Digest (x). He held that the property which had descended to Yesubai from her father was her stridhanum. But according to the Mayukha (IV, 10, § 26), inherited property, though it is stridhanum, not being one of those kinds of stridhanum for which express texts prescribed exceptional modes of descent, goes on the woman's death to her sons and the rest, as if she were a male, and this notwithstanding her having daughters. This being so, the property inherited by Yesubai would, in the absence of descendants, go to her parents, just as if she had been their only son, and failing them to the paternal grandmother and the sapindas of the father, the gotrajas taking precedence over the bhinna-gotras. But according to the doctrine of Western India, a female who is born in the family is a gotraja sapinda. Therefore Thamabai (though married) was the next heir.

§ 619. This view practically gets rid of the idea that property, inherited by a daughter, would pass to her heirs in the line of descent of stridhanum properly so-called. It would make it go in a new line of descent, as if she were a male. The same view of the meaning of the Mayukha was adopted in a later case, where a married woman had received a house from a stranger to the family, and had also saved money from her own earnings. It was held that the succession to her must be treated as if she was a male, and therefore that her daughter-in-law would inherit in preference to the daughter of a deceased daughter (y).

(x) W. & B., 2nd ed., 481; 3rd ed., 146, 323.

(y) Bai Narmada v. Bhagwantrao, 12 Bom., 505. See Dalpat Narotam v. Bhugvan Kushal, 9 Bom., 301.

Descent of property taken absolutely by a female heir.

Special descent of inherited stridhanum.

Descent according to Mayukha.

Different view of Mayukha.

§ 620. A similar question to that which gave rise to Mr. Justice West's judgment arose more recently in Bombay (z). There a wife obtained a decree against her husband for arrears of maintenance and for future maintenance. She died pending appeal by her husband. He applied to have the daughters substituted as her heirs to the maintenance in arrears. The Original Court refused the application, holding, on the authority of the case just discussed, that the arrears were stridhanum of the kind which would go not to her daughters but to her husband. On appeal the High Court reversed the decision and declared the daughters entitled as her heirs. In the judgment which was that of Telang, J., he examined the theories put forward by West, J., and by myself in a former edition of this work, and rejected both. The words "as if she were a male" interpolated into V. May., IV, 10, § 26, were not the words of Nilakantha. The difference between the Mayukha and the Daya Bhaga was, that the former (IV, 10, § 28) recognised the female owner as a fresh stock of descent from whom property passed to her own heirs, while the latter, except as to special forms of stridhanum, traced heirship to her husband. He considered that the words 'sons and the rest' in § 26 and other placita meant merely 'sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons,' while the similar phrase 'daughters and the rest' meant daughters and their issue. In chap. IV, 10, the succession to different sorts of woman's property is discussed from § 13 onward, and rules for the devolution of particular species of stridhanum are stated up to § 25 inclusive. In § 26 woman's property not of the technical class is dealt with. "It would thus appear that in the passage under consideration, what Nilakantha intends to lay down is, that as regards property which does not class as woman's property in the technical sense, 'the sons and the rest' take precedence over 'the daughters and the rest.' The question, however, remains as to who are the other heirs to such property failing both sons and daughters. On Mr. Justice West's construction, no doubt, as well as on Mr. Mayne's, no such question would arise, as the whole of the series of heirs defined elsewhere are thereby held to be the series of heirs to a deceased woman. But on the construction now put forward it seems to us the answer to the question above formulated must be, that the heirs to stridhan proper and stridhan improper are identical, save that as between male and female offspring the latter have a preferential right as regards stridhan proper, while the former have a similar right as to stridhan improper."

(z) Manilal Rewadat v. Bai Rewa, 17 Bom., 758.

§ 621. Partition is another mode by which the property of a male may come into the hands of a female. This, however, can hardly ever take place except in Bengal. In Southern India women never appear to take upon partition anything more than a life provision for maintenance. And though the contrary rule is asserted as to the other provinces governed by Mitakshara law, the cases seem very rare (a). In two early cases, which came before the Supreme Court of Calcutta, where a share was decreed to a widow on partition, the Court seems at first to have treated her share as governed by the laws which regulate the right of a woman over property given to her by her husband, and not by those which relate to property inherited from him (b). Consequently, in each case their first decree was that she should take the movable property absolutely, and the immovable only for life. But in each case they reviewed their decree, and ordered that she should take the whole to be enjoyed in the manner prescribed by Hindu law; that is, for a widow's estate. The Court pundits "expressly declared that the mother who took upon partition, and the widow who succeeded to her husband's property, stood upon the same footing with obtained on

Property
partition.

(a) Ante § 478—482; Goorobuksh v. Lutchmana, Mad. Dec. of 1850, 61.

(b) See as to the distinction, per curiam, Bhugwandeem v. Myna Bacc, 11 M. I. A., 510; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 23.

regard to their interests in the estates" (c). The Judicial Committee treat it as an open question under Benares law, whether a widow taking a share on partition does not take an absolute interest in that share, though they observe that in a case coming from Lower Bengal, the contrary had been decided by themselves (d). Of course it would be different if, by the terms of the partition, the widow or mother took an absolute estate (e). Jagannatha seems to be of the contrary opinion, so far as it is possible to make out what his opinion is (f). But upon analogy there can be no reason why a woman who takes part of a property on partition between her sons, should have a larger interest than if she had taken the whole in the absence of sons. Apararka includes the share received by a wife or mother on partition under the head of stridhanum (g). The Allahabad High Court has also held that the share received by a mother on partition is her stridhanum which descends to her own heirs and is alienable at her pleasure (h). These decisions were given after a very thorough examination of all the authorities, but ultimately rested upon the text of the Mitakshara which has been so much discussed. Since the decisions of the Privy Council in 1903 (§ 616) it is difficult to ascribe any weight to this commentary by Vijnanesvara, so far as it goes beyond the text of Yajnavalkya which it professes to explain. It is probable that these particular rulings of the Allahabad—will not stand the test of an appeal to the Judicial Committee.

§ 622. The whole of this question was very elaborately discussed in a later case under Bengal law, where it was

(c) Cossinait v. Hurrooondry, affirmed on appeal to Privy Council, 2 M. Dig., 198; F. MacN., 79, 85, 88; V. Darp., 97; Gooroopershad v. Seebchunder, F. MacN., 69, 73; Kamikhaprasad v. Jagadamba, 5 B. L. R., 508.

(d) Per curiam, 11 M. I. A., 514, supra, referring apparently to Cossinait v. Hurrooondry, supra, note (c).

(e) Bolye Chund v. Khetterpaul, 11 B. L. R., 459; Rampershad v. Chaineram, 1 N.-W. P., 10.

(f) 5 Dig., 22.
(g) Jolly, Lect., 250. See the subject discussed by West, J., 11 Bom., p. 302; W. & B., 780.

(h) Chhidu v. Naubat, 24 All., 67 (1891); Sri Pal Rai v. Surajbali (1891), 24 All., 82; the question was referred to but not decided by the Bengal Court (1904), in Dulab v. Dwarkanath, 32 Cal., p. 242.

Mother's estate on partition when a widow.

necessary to decide how property should devolve which had been allotted to a mother on partition with her sons (i). The Court pointed out that "the wife's interest in her husband's estate resolved itself into a right to maintenance, except in the absence of lineal male heirs, in which case she takes the inheritance, and in two cases—one occurring in her husband's lifetime, the other after his death—in which she takes a share." While her husband lives, he is absolute owner of the estate, and her claim is merely to maintenance. But if he chooses to come to a partition with his sons, and the wife is without male issue, she is allowed a share equal to a son's. So after the husband's death, the whole inheritance vests absolutely in his male issue, and the widow is only entitled to maintenance. But if she has sons, and her sons or grandsons partition among themselves, she is entitled to a share out of the property which comes to them, but not out of that which falls to her stepsons (k). In either case the share allotted to her goes back on her death to her husband's family, while during her life her power of alienating is certainly not greater, and apparently not less than that which she possesses over property inherited from her husband. As to the case under discussion, viz., that of a partition after her husband's death, the Court said: "The conclusion which I draw from the Bengal authorities is that a wife's interest in her husband's estate given to her by marriage ceases upon the death of her husband leaving lineal heirs in the male line; that such heirs take the whole estate; and that the share which a mother takes on a partition among her sons she does not take from her husband, either by inheritance, or by way of survivorship in continuation of any pre-existing interest, but that she takes it from her sons in lieu of, or by way of provision for, that maintenance for which they and their estates are already bound. I think it follows as a necessary inference that, on her death, that share does not descend as if she had inherited it from her husband,

(i) Sorolah Dossee v. Bhoobun Mohun Neoghy, 15 Cal., 292, pp. 306, 314.

(k) Strimati Hemangini v. Kedar Nath, 16 I. A., 115; S. C., 16 Cal., 758.

but goes back to her sons from whom she had received it." In many cases these sons would be the same persons who would take if the share went back to the heirs of the late husband. But it would not be so if there were sons by different mothers. In such a case, "the rule contended for by the appellant would, on the death of either mother, who had obtained a share on partition among her sons, take her portion, which had been carved out of her own sons' share alone, and divide it rateably among sons and step-sons."

Estate of wife on partition by husband.

§ 623. Upon these principles it would seem to follow that, where the father made a partition with his sons during his life, the share allotted to the sonless wife would, on her death, revert to the heirs of the husband. The portion is taken out of the estate of the husband in which the sons, under Bengal law, have no interest until his death, unless by partition. The share allotted to her is in lieu of the maintenance which is, during the husband's life, charged upon the entire share. It intercepts from the whole body of the heirs a certain portion of the estate which would otherwise have devolved upon them, and to a corresponding extent relieves them of the obligation to maintain her. On her death, therefore, her share would devolve, as an undistributed portion of the husband's estate, upon his heirs. This would necessarily be the case where, by an arrangement between members of an undivided family, part of the ancestral property was assigned to a widow for her maintenance (l).

Her power of disposal

§ 624. EXTENT OF A WOMAN'S ESTATE.—The nature of a woman's estate must, as already stated, be described by the restrictions which are placed upon it, and not by terms of duration. It is not a life estate, because under certain circumstances she can give an absolute and complete title. Nor is it in any sense an estate held in trust for reversioners. Within the limits imposed upon her, the female holder has the most absolute power of enjoyment.

(l) Bagade Krishniah v. Chowdia, 4 Mysore, 28.

She is accountable to no one, and fully represents the estate, and, so long as she is alive, no one has any vested interest in the succession. On the other hand, the limitations upon her estate are the very substance of its nature, and not merely imposed upon her for the benefit of reversioners. They exist as fully if there are absolutely no heirs to take after her, as if there were. Acts which would be unlawful as against heirs expectant are equally invalid as against the Sovereign claiming by escheat (m). The principles which restrict a widow were laid down by the Judicial Committee in the case cited above, as follows: "It is admitted, on all hands, that, if there be collateral heirs of the husband, the widow cannot of her own will alien the property except for special purposes. For religious or charitable purposes, or those which are supposed to conduce to the spiritual welfare of her husband, she has a larger power of disposition than that which she possesses for purely worldly purposes. To support an alienation for the last, she must show necessity. On the other hand, it may be taken as established that an alienation by her, which would not otherwise be legitimate, may become so if made with the consent of her husband's kindred. But it surely is not the necessary or logical consequence of this latter proposition, that, in the absence of collateral heirs to the husband, or on their failure, the fetter on the widow's power of alienation altogether drops. The exception in favour of alienation with consent may be due to a presumption of law that, where that consent is given, the purpose for which the alienation is made must be proper" (n).

defined by Judicial Committee.

(m) Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavalry Venkata, 8 M. I. A., 529, 550; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 59; Hurrydoss v. Rungunmoney, Sev., 657, where the nature of the estate is very fully described by Peel. C. J. Gurumath v. Krishnaji, 4 Bom., 462; Karuppa Tevan v. Alagu, 4 Mad., 152; Mohadeay Kooer v. Haruk Narain, 9 Cal., 244; Dhondo v. Balkrishna, 8 Bom., 190; Anandabai v. Rajaram, 22 Bom., 984. See as to the position of a widow in possession, where a preferable title has been created by adoption or will, Mt Sundar v. Parbati, 16 I. A., 186; S. C., 12 All., 51. The widow of a Nambudri Brahman is governed by the same rules, 11 Mad., pp. 157, 165. As to the effect of the acts of a Hindu widow as administratrix of an estate under § 90 of the Probate and Administration Act V of 1881, see Kamakhyia v. Hari Churn, 26 Cal., 607.

(n) The position of a widow in the Punjab appears to be exactly the same,

Full power of enjoyment.

§ 625. It is probable that, in early times, a widow was morally, if not legally, bound to restrain her personal expenditure within the modest limits which were considered suitable to her bereaved condition^(o). But whatever may in former times have been the force of the injunctions contained in such passages of the Hindu Shastras, or whatever may now be their effect as religious or moral precepts, they cannot be regarded at the present day as of any legal force, in restricting a widow in the use and enjoyment of her husband's property while she lives. Her absolute right to the fullest benefit of her life-interest appears long to have been recognized ^(p). And, of course, there could be still less reason for imposing any such restrictions upon other female heirs. A woman is in no sense a trustee for those who may come after her. She is not bound to save the income. She is not bound to invest the principal. If she chooses to invest it, she is not bound to prefer one form of investment to another form, as being more likely to protect the interests of the reversioners. She is forbidden to commit waste, or to endanger the property in her possession, but, short of that, she may spend the income and manage the principal as she thinks proper ^(q). If she makes savings, she can give them away as she likes during her life. She is not bound to leave anything behind her beyond that which she received.

Not a trustee.

Her savings.

Her interest in accumulations

§ 626. The law as to the right of a woman to accumulations from the estate of the last male holder is rather complicated, and appears to be, in some respects, unsettled. These accumulations may be: 1st. Accumulations made except that her powers of disposition are only to be exercised for secular objects, Punjab Customary Law, 11, 177, 179, 203, 209.

(o) It seems to have been the opinion of Mitter, J., that she was still subject to such a restraint. See his remarks, Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram, 13 B. L. R., 5; S. C., 19 Suth., 367; but see contra, per Glover and Kemp, JJ., ib., 53, 76.

(p) Per curiam, Khamavadhani v. Joysa, 3 Mad. H. C., 116; Cossinaut Bysack v. Hurrosundry, 2 M. Dig., 198, 214, affirmed in Privy Council, Morton, 85; V. Darp., 97; Gooroobuksh v. Lutchmana, Mad. Dec. of 1850, 61.

(q) Hurrydoss v. Uppoornah, 6 M. I. A., 433; Biswanath v. Khantomani, 6 B. L. R., 747; Hurrydoss v. Rungunmoney, Sev., 657. As to the right of a widow to work or to lease quarries, and to apply the proceeds as her own income. See Subba Reddi v. Chengalamma, 22 Mad., 126.

by her husband, or other male to whom she succeeds. 2nd. Accumulations made after his death, and before the estate was handed over to her. 3rd. Accumulations made by herself personally, and either invested, or converted into some different form, or else remaining uninvested in her possession.

(1) Accumulations made by the last male holder would in general be accretions to his estate, and follow it. In such a case, of course, no question could arise. The female would take the whole as an entire estate, subject to the usual restrictions. There might, however, be a special settlement which would cause the corpus of the last male holder's estate to pass to a male, and the accumulations to go by heirship to a female. In such a case she would hold these accumulations as a new estate, subject to the restrictions which apply to the property inherited by a female ^(s).

made by last holder

(2) The same principle is said to apply to accumulations which have been made from the income of the estate after the death, but before it reached the hands of the widow. They are treated as accretions to the body of the fund, and can only be dealt with in the same manner as the bulk of the property ^(t). Perhaps, however, the application of this rule would depend upon the amount of such savings, and the form they had assumed. If a widow was kept out of her estate for some time, and then received it with the ordinary cash balance, and current rents or interest which had accrued since the death, still uninvested, it would be difficult to say that she might not deal with these exactly as she would have been entitled to do if she had been let into possession at once ^(u). In any case between death and delivery:

(r) Chundrabulee v. Brody, 9 Suth., 554; S. C., 5 Wym., 335; Harendranarayan's goods, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 41.

(s) Soorjeemoney v. Denobundo, 6 M. I. A., 526; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 114; 9 M. I. A., 122.

(t) Per Macpherson, J., Grose v. Amirtamayi, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), at p. 41; S. C., 12 Suth. (A. O. J.), 13; Rabutty v. Sibchunder, 6 M. I. A., at p. 25; Ieri Dut v. Hunsbutti, 10 I. A., at p. 159; S. C., 10 Cal., p. 335.

(u) Sowdaminee Dossee v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 20 I. A., 12; S. C., 20 Cal., 433.

debts or expenses, properly incurred by her while she was kept out of her income, would be a good charge upon such accumulations, just as they would have been upon the corpus (v).

Her right in accumulations made by herself.

§ 627. The third case is the one which has caused the greatest difficulty. It is admitted that a female heir need not make any savings at all. She may spend her whole income every year, either upon herself, or by giving it away at her pleasure (w). But suppose she does not choose to spend her whole income, but accumulates the savings, may she dispose of these at her pleasure? If she has invested them, or purchased property with them, does it still remain at her disposal during her life? If she has not disposed of it, does it pass at her death with the rest of the property, or does it pass as her separate property to her own heirs?

There is one case in the Privy Council where it would seem to have been distinctly laid down, that all the accumulations of a fund which had descended to a widow, from the time the estate vested in her, were absolutely her own, in her own right, as distinct from the fund itself, which she was only entitled to hold and enjoy as a widow (x). But in that case no question arose between the heirs of the widow and the reversioner. The point was not discussed, and the Judicial Committee has since refused to consider the ruling "as a conclusive or even a direct authority upon the question" (y). On the other hand, it has been decided by the High Court of Bengal, that any property which a Hindu widow has purchased out of the income of her husband's estate would be an increment to that estate, would be inalienable by her during life, and would descend at her death to her husband's heirs. To that extent the judgment was affirmed by the Privy (v) See cases in last note, and per Jackson, J., Puddo Monee v. Dwarkanath, 25 Suth., at p. 341.

(w) Ante § 625.

(x) Soorjeemoney Dossee v. Denobundo, 9 M. I. A., 123.

(y) Gonda Kooer v. Kooer Oodey, 14 B. L. R., at p. 165.

Council to be good law (z). It has, however, been suggested by the Judicial Committee, that perhaps purchases made by a widow from the income of her husband's estate are not necessarily accretions to it, unless she intended them to be such; and that such intention will be presumed in the absence of proof to the contrary, but might possibly be rebutted by evidence of a direct intention on her part to appropriate to herself, and to sever from the bulk of the estate, such purchases as she had made. It was not necessary, however, to decide the point (a). In a later case, upon a review of all the previous authorities, the High Court of Bengal held that, if a widow purchased property out of the current savings, that is out of the year's income, this would not be an irrevocable addition to the corpus of the estate, but might be disposed of by her at her pleasure, or sold again, and the proceeds spent as she chose. That the same rule would apply if the widow, "having no present occasion for spending monies, but foreseeing one after the lapse of a year or two, had thought it advisable to invest the money temporarily in land." They offered no opinion as to what might be her power over accumulations properly so called, or over property purchased with such accumulations. But they said, "What are accumulations in the view of these cases? Not, surely, the accidental balances of one or two years of the widow's income, but a fund distinct and tangible. There is nothing whatever in this case to indicate that any such fund ever had been formed or had Accumulations specially reserved for her own use.

Cash balances.

(z) Chowdhry Bholanath v. Mt. Bhagabatti, 7 B. L. R., 93, reversed on another point: Bhagabutti v. Chowdhry Bholanath, 2 I. A., 256; S. C., 24 Suth., 168; acc., as to the descent of such property; Chundrabulee v. Brody, 9 Suth., 584; S. C., 5 Wym., 335; Hurrydoss v. Rungunmoney, Sev., 657; Anund Chundra v. Nilmoni, 9 Cal., 758; Isri Dut v. Hunsbutti, 10 I. A., 150, p. 155; S. C., 10 Cal., 324, p. 334; acc., as to the first point; Kooer Oodey v. Phoolchand, 5 N.-W. P., 197, 201. See, too, Bissessur v. Ram Joy, 2 Suth., 327; Gobind v. Dulmeer, 23 Suth., 125, in which it was assumed that property purchased by a Hindu widow out of the proceeds of her husband's estate, or from a fund obtained by speculating with such proceeds, would pass to his heirs. Of course purchases made by her out of her own separate property are her own. But the onus of proving they are so rests on those who assert it. Lamb v. Mt. Govindmoney, S. D. of 1852, 125; 23 Suth., 125, ub sup.

(a) Gonda Kooer v. Kooer Oodey, 14 B. L. R., 159. See Sowdaminee Dossee v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 20 I. A., 12; S. C., 20 Cal., 433.

existed; and we have no reason to suppose that accumulations had ever arisen, except that the widow may have spent in some years more, in others less, and in that sense the savings of the less costly year might be an accumulation to meet the charges of the next" (b).

§ 628. The whole law upon this subject was again examined by the Bengal High Court and in the Privy Council under the following circumstances (c). A husband left two widows, and a daughter by one of them, named Dyji. The widows inherited landed property from their husband, and purchased further property out of the income of what they had inherited. The husband died in 1857, the new property was purchased shortly after, and in 1873 the widows made an absolute gift to the daughter of lands consisting partly of what they had inherited and partly of what they had purchased. The collateral males, who were heirs presumptive after the death of the daughter, sued for a declaration that this gift would not affect their reversionary interest. The Bengal High Court examined the law very fully, but did not decide whether the gift by the widows of the after-acquired property would be effectual beyond their lives, considering that the case was one in which it was premature to make any declaration of right. The Judicial Committee thought that the heirs were entitled to have a declaration as to the effect of the gift, and decided that the widows had no greater power over the purchased property than over what had been inherited. They treated it as settled that "a widow's savings from her husband's estate are not her stridhan. If she has made no attempt to dispose of them in her lifetime,

(b) Puado Monee v. Dwarkanath, 25 Suth., 335. As to purchases made by a widow with money borrowed on her own credit, or on the credit of her husband's estate, see Koer Oodley v. Phoolchand, 5 N. W. P., 97.

(c) Hunsbutti v. Isri Dut, 5 Cal., 512; Isri Dut v. Hunsbutti, 10 I. A., 150; S. C., 10 Cal., 324; Sheo Lochun Singh v. Babu Saheb Singh, 14 I. A., 63; S. C., 14 Cal., 387; Grish Chunder v. Broughton, 14 Cal., 861, affd., sub nomine, Soudamini Dasse v. Broughton, 16 Cal., 574; on appeal, 20 I. A., 12; S. C., 20 Cal., 453. Where the accumulation has been kept separate from the original estate by the widow, there is no presumption, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that she has intended to part with her power of disposition for the benefit of the reversionary heirs. Akkanna v. Venkayya, 25 Mad., 351; Subramaniam v. Arunachalam, 28 Mad., 1.

there is no dispute but that they follow the estate from which they arose. The dispute arises when the widow, who might have spent the income as it accrued, has in fact saved it, and afterwards attempts to alienate it." They also said that they did not "think it possible to lay down any sharp definition of the line which separates accretions to the husband's estate from income held in suspense in the hands of the widow, as to which she has not determined whether she will spend it or not." They then proceeded to say, "In this case the properties in question consist of shares of lands, in which the husband was a shareholder to a larger extent. They were purchased within a short time after his death in 1857. No attempt to alienate them was made till 1873. The object of the alienation was not the need or the personal benefit of the widows, but a desire to change the succession, and to give the inheritance to the heirs of one of themselves, in preference to their husband's heirs. Neither with respect to this object, nor apparently in any other way, have the widows made any distinction between the original estate and the after purchases. Parts of both are conveyed to Dyji immediately, and parts of both are retained by the widows for life. These are circumstances which, in their Lordships' opinion, clearly establish accretion to the original estate, and make the after purchases inalienable by the widows for any purposes which would not justify alienation of the original estate."

§ 629. On the other hand, a sum of a money representing rents accruing during the last year of the widow's life was held to pass to the widow's representatives, not to the reversioner (d). Sargent, C. J., said, "In the present case the cash balance in question does not amount to much more than half the yearly payment by K. B. and had not been separated from the general account so as to form a distinct fund which could be regarded as 'savings.' There is an entire absence of any outward sign of an Balance held in suspense.

(d) Rivett Carnac v. Jivibai, 10 Bom., 478, p. 483.

intention to accumulate; whilst on the contrary the existence of debts rebuts any such intention, and points to the conclusion that the balance was held in suspense by the widow at the time of her death, to use the language of the Privy Council in Isri Dut v. Hunsbutti."

Express power
of disposal.

§ 630. None of these restrictions apply to property which has passed to a female, not as heir, but by deed or other arrangement which gives her express power to appropriate the profits. The savings of such property, and everything which is purchased out of such savings, belong absolutely to herself. They may be disposed of by herself at her pleasure, and, at her death, they pass to her representatives, and not to the heirs of the last male (e).

Devise or grant.

But the mere fact that a Hindu female takes under a will or a deed of gift or arrangement, that to which she is really entitled as heiress, does not necessarily enlarge her powers. The question will still be, what estate did she take? not how did she take it (f). An estate given to a widow of an undivided family by way of maintenance lapses into the family property at her death (g).

Case of manager differs.

§ 631. It will be observed that the right of a Hindu female to acquire a separate estate for herself out of the savings of her limited estate stands on a completely different footing from that of a Hindu father, under the Mitakshara law, or the managing member of a joint Hindu family. It has been decided in such a case that all purchases made from the profits of the estate form part of it, and follow its character (h). But then the entire annual

(e) Bhagbutti v. Chowdhry Bholanath, 2 I. A., 256; S. C., 24 Suth., 168; Guru v. Nafar, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 121; S. C., 11 Suth., 497; Nellaikumar v. Marakathanmal, 1 Mad., 166.

(f) Moulvie Mahomed v. Shewukram, 2 I. A., 7; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 226; S. C., 22 Suth., 409; see per curiam, 2 I. A., 261, explaining decision in Rabutti v. Sibchunder, 6 M. I. A., 1; Lakshmi Bai v. Hirabai, 11 Bom., 69, affd., p. 573; Ganpat Rao v. Ramchander, 11 All., 296; Nunnu Meah v. Krishnasami, 14 Mad., 274; Kunhacha v. Kutti Mammi, 16 Mad., 201. There is no rule of Hindu law that a gift to a female should only carry with it the limited nature of a female estate by inheritance. Kollany v. Lutchmee, 24 Suth., 395; Pubitra v. Damodar, ib., 397. See the discussion on this subject, ante § 396, et seq.

(g) Bagade Kristinia v. Chowdia, 4 Mysore, 28.

(h) Shudanund v. Bonomalee, 6 Suth., 256; S. C., on review, sub nomine, Sudanund v. Soorjo Monee, 8 Suth., 455; S. C., 11 Suth., 436.

profits of the estate are not the property of the father or manager. The sons, in the first instance, and the other members of the family, in the second instance, are jointly interested in the income as well as in the principal. But in the case of the female heir the whole annual profits are hers, and until her death no vested interest comes into existence.

§ 632. The purposes which authorize a Hindu widow to mortgage or sell her property are summed up by the Judicial Committee in the words already quoted (§ 624 [n]) (i). The same rules apply to any other female, except perhaps in Bombay. But of course it is only when the property comes to her from her husband that religious benefit to him constitutes a reason for alienation. Religious purposes.

The primary religious purpose which a widow is bound to carry out at any expense to the estate is the performance of the funeral obsequies of her husband, and of all ceremonies incidental to those obsequies. These are absolute necessities. There are other religious benefits procurable for him, which are more of the nature of spiritual luxuries. Pilgrimages by the widow to holy places come under this head. For these it would appear that she may dispose of a part of the estate, but that the expense which is allowable must be limited by a due regard to the entire bulk of the property, and may even be totally inadmissible, where it is not warranted by the circumstances of the family (k). She may also alienate the property in order to defray the expenses of ceremonies for other members of the family, such as her husband's mother, provided they were ceremonies which he was bound to perform in his lifetime, and in the benefits of which he would participate. And it makes no difference

(i) See, too, Lukhee v. Gokool, 13 M. I. A., 209; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 57; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 47. See 5 Wilson, 16.

(k) Huromohun v. Auluckmonee, 1 Suth., 252; Ushruf v. Brojessuree, 11 B. L. R., 118; S. C., 19 Suth., 426; Mutteeram v. Gopaul, 11 B. L. R., 416; S. C., 20 Suth., 187; Lakmeeram v. Khooshalee, 1 Bor., 412 [455]; Rama v. Runga, 8 Mad., 552; Lakshminarayana v. Dasu, 11 Mad., 288; Tarini Prasad v. Bholanath, 21 Cal., 190, note; Punjab Customs, 60.

that the ceremonies for which the outlay was incurred would be actually performed by some other member of the family (l). But a daughter is not authorized to charge the family property in order to defray the expense of her mother's Shradh (m). Nor is a widow authorized to sell her husband's property for pious and religious purposes, intended to secure her own spiritual welfare (n).

Charities.

Religious purposes are said to include a portion to a daughter, building temples for religious worship, digging tanks and the like (o). It has, however, been held that the digging of a tank would not justify a Hindu widow in alienating a portion of the property (p). So various cases are found in which gifts to Brahmans or to idols have been supported against reversioners (q). But such alienations must be to a small extent, and would hardly be supported if they trenched materially on the property (r).

Husband's debts.

§ 633. The obligation of a widow taking her husband's property to pay his debts comes under the head of religious benefit, unless they are contracted for immoral purposes. She is under the same obligation to discharge them as a son would be. Whether they were or were not contracted for the benefit of the estate is immaterial (s). It has, however, been held that where debts are already barred by lapse of time, she cannot burthen or dispose of the estate for their discharge (t), and this appears to be certainly the law as regards an ordinary manager of the family pro-

Debts barred.

(l) Chowdry v. Russomoyee, 11 B. L. R., 418; S. C., 10 Suth., 309; Ramcoomar v. Ichamoyi, 8 Cal., 36.

(m) Raj Chunder v. Sheeshoo, 7 Suth., 146.

(n) Puran Dai v. Jai Narain, 4 All., 482; Ram Kawal v. Ram Kishore, 22 Cal., 566.

(o) Futwah in Cossinaut v. Hurrosundry, in the Privy Council, cited V. Darp., 101; 2 M. Dig., 119.

(p) Runjeet v. Mahomed Waris, 21 Suth., 49.

(q) Jugjeevun v. Deoshunkur, 1 Bor., 394 [436]; Kupoor v. Sevukram, ib., 405 [448]; Ram Kawal v. Ram Kishore, ub sup.

(r) Gopaula v. Narraina, Mad. Dec. of 1850, p. 74; Choonee Lall v. Jussoo, 1 Bor., 55 [60].

(s) Chetty Colum v. Rungasawmy, 8 M. I. A., 319; S. C., 4 Suth. (P. C.), 71; Goluck v. Mahomed Rohim, 9 Suth., 316; Cossinaut v. Hurrosundry, 2 M. Dig., at p. 204; Subbaiyan v. Akhilandammal, Mad. Dec. of 1860, p. 15; per curiam, Lakshman v. Satyabhamabai, 2 Bom., 499.

(t) Melgirappa v. Shivappa, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 720. See Ramchurn v. Nunho, 14 Suth., 147.

perty (u). This seems sensible enough as a matter of mundane equity, though it may be doubted whether a plea of the statute would be accepted in the Court of the Hindu Rhadamanthus. In more recent cases it has been repeatedly held that a widow's obligation to pay her husband's debts, and her right to alienate property descended from him for that purpose, is not affected by the statute of limitations, or any similar contrivance for getting rid of his obligations (v).

Such a payment, however, must be made bona fide in discharge of the duty of the widow to pay all her husband's debts equally as far as she can. She ought not to prefer one valid claim to another; still less ought she to alienate the estate for the express purpose of giving creditors whose debts were barred by time a preference over those whose debts were valid and subsisting. Such a preference, exercised in the case of an insolvent estate, would be fraudulent and void if the act were that of the insolvent himself, and would be equally invalid both in equity and under the Transfer of Property Act where it is the act of the widow. If she was led to make this preference in ignorance of the fact that the debts were barred, those who profited by an ignorance which, in dealing with an inexperienced woman, they were bound to remove, would be unable to profit by their own fraud (w).

Payment must be bona fide.

As a female heir is bound to maintain, and perform the marriages and other ceremonies of those who are a burthen on the estate, so she may mortgage or sell the property to procure the necessary funds (x). A fortiori, of course, may she do so to procure maintenance for herself, or to defray the expense of her own religious ceremonies (y),

Maintenance.

(u) Chinnaya v. Gurunathan (F. B.), 5 Mad., 169.

(v) Chinnaji v. Dinakar, 11 Bom., 320; Bhan Babaji v. Gopala, 11 Bom., 325, where the same principle was applied to a widowed daughter-in-law in possession of the estate of her father-in-law; Kondappa v. Subba, 13 Mad., 189; Udai Chunder v. Ashutosh, 21 Cal., 190.

(w) Rangibai v. Vinayak, 11 Bom., 666. Citing Act IV of 1882, § 53, which was extended to Bombay, Jan. 1893, 22 Bom., 111.

(x) Debi Dayal v. Bhan Pertab, 31 Cal., 433.

(y) Rajchunder v. Bulloram, Fulton, 133; Lala Gunput v. Mt. Toorun, 16 Suth., 52; Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 5 Bom., 450.

but she must wait till the necessity occurs. She must not anticipate her wants by raising money, or contracting for the discharge of such liabilities before they arise (z).

Necessity.

§ 634. These are some of the cases specially pointed out as authorising a woman to dispose of her inheritance. Others come under the general head of necessity. It is, of course, impossible to define what is necessity. Every case must be judged upon its own facts (a). A Hindu female certainly cannot have less power than the manager of a family property, and does not in this respect appear to have more. The principles laid down by the Privy Council in the well-known case of Hunoomanpersaud v. Mt. Baboee will equally apply to her acts, and to the obligation of those who deal with her to enquire into the circumstances which justify her dealings (b). But it must be remembered, that in regard to her alienations it is not a question of absolute but of relative invalidity. She cannot, in the absence of legal necessity, bind the inheritance for her own personal debts or private purposes as against reversioners (c), but she can do so for her own life (d). Any alienations in excess of her powers are not void, but voidable, and will be made good against the reversioner on his attaining possession, either by express

Acts good for her own life.

(z) Mullakkal v. Mada Chetty, 6 Mad. Jur., 261.

(a) Rustam Singh v. Moti Singh, 18 All., 474; Ramasami v. Vengidusami, 22 Mad., 113.

(b) Hunoomanpersaud v. Mt. Baboee, 6 M. I. A., 393; S. C., 18 Suth., 81 (note), ante § 346; Acheswar v. Run Bahadur, 8 I. A., 8; S. C., 6 Cal., 843; Lala Amarnath v. Achan Kuar, 19 I. A., 196; S. C., 14 All., 420, post § 641.

(c) Muteeoollah v. Radhabinodde, S. D. of 1856, p. 596; Lalla Byjnath v. Bissen, 19 Suth., 80.

(d) This was formerly doubted, on the ground that she had only a right of enjoyment, and that a sale which purported to be absolute, was actually void, as being sale of that which she never possessed. 1 W. MacN., 19; 3 Dig., 466; Ramanund v. Ram Kissen, 2 M. Dig., 115, 118; Gunganarain v. Buvram, 2 M. Dig., 152, 155. But the reverse is now quite settled, on the ground that the woman is absolute owner, though with limited powers. Her acts are therefore valid to the extent of her powers, though they may be exercised in excess of those powers. Gobindmani v. Shamlal, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 48; S. C., Suth. Sp., 165; Petiya Gaundan v. Tirumala, 1 Mad. H. C., 206; Bhagavatamma v. Pampanna, 2 Mad. H. C., 393; Kamavadhani v. Joysa, 3 Mad. H. C., 116; Melgivarappa v. Shivappa, 6 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 270; Ramchandra v. Bhimrav, 1 Bom., 577; Prag Das v. Hari Kishn, 1 All., 503. And the same rule has been applied, even where the widow held under a condition against alienation. Bibi Sahodra v. Rai Jung, 8 Cal., 224; S. C., 8 I. A., 210.

ratification, or by acts done by him which treat them as valid and binding (e).

§ 635. One very common case of necessity is that of a Government loan of money, or a mortgage or sale of part of the property, to pay off arrears of Government revenue. In such a case it has been several times held by the Bengal Sudder Court, that it is not sufficient to show that the money was borrowed, or even required for such a purpose, without going on to show that the necessity for it arose from circumstances beyond the widow's control (f). The result would be, that where the estate fell into arrears through the extravagance or mismanagement of the widow, no one would venture to lend money to pay the Government claim, and the estate would be brought to the hammer. As a sale for Government arrears gives a completely new title, the result would be that not only the widow's estate, but that of the reversioners, would be forfeited (g). But the decision in Hunoomanpersaud's case shows, that if there is an actually existing necessity for an advance of money, the circumstance that this necessity is brought about by previous mismanagement does not vitiate the loan, unless the lender has himself been a party to the misconduct which has produced the danger (h). And this rule has been followed in more recent decisions. Of course it will be necessary to show that there was an actual pressure, such as an outstanding decree or impending sale, and one which the heiress had no funds capable of meeting (i). A widow is justified in charging or alienating

(e) Modhu Sudhan v. Rooke, 24 I. A., 164; S. C., 25 Cal., 1; Dattaji v. Kalba, 21 Bom., 749; Bijoy Gopal v. Nibratan, 30 Cal., 990; Hayes v. Havendra Narain, 31 Cal., 698.

(f) Muteeoollah v. Radhabinodi, S. D. of 1856, p. 596; Radhamohun v. Girihareelal, S. D. of 1857, 460.

(g) Ramchandra v. Bhimrav, 1 Bom., 577; Douglas v. Collector of Benares, 5 M. I. A., 271; Nugender v. Kaminee, 11 M. I. A., 241; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 17. See too sales of under-tenures under Act X of 1859; Teluck v. Muddun, 12 Suth., 504; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 143 (note); Anund Moyee v. Mohendro, 15 Suth., 264, approved; Baijun v. Brij Bhookun, 2 I. A., 281; S. C., 1 Cal., 133, or under Bengal Act VIII of 1869; Mohima v. Ram Kishore, 15 B. L. R., 142; S. C., 23 Suth., 174.

(h) 6 M. I. A., p. 423; S. C., 18 Suth., 81 (note).

(i) Sreenath Roy v. Rutiummalla, S. D. of 1859, 421; Lalla Byjnath v. Bissen, 19 Suth., 80; Mata v. Bhagheeruthee, 2 N.-W. P., 78; Lalla Amarnath her husband's property in order to pay the costs properly incurred in defending it, or her own interest in it against attack; but not in a merely speculative suit brought to recover property, not belonging to his estate, but to which she alleged a title (k). So a debt incurred for the necessary repairs of the property will be a charge upon it in the hands of the reversioners (l).

She may sell.

Where a case of necessity exists, the heiress is not bound to borrow money, with the hope of paying it off before her death. Nor is she bound to mortgage the estate, and thereby reduce her income for life. She is at liberty, if she thinks fit, absolutely to sell off a part of the estate. And even if a mortgage would have been more beneficial, still if the heiress and the purchaser are both acting honestly, the transaction cannot be set aside at the instance of the next heir (m). So where the income of property which has been mortgaged is not sufficient to pay the interest on the debt, the widow is justified in selling it before the debt is due, if in the circumstances this is a proper, though not a necessary course to take. "A widow, like a manager of a family, must be allowed a reasonable latitude in the exercise of her powers, provided she acts fairly to her expectant heirs" (n).

§ 636. Where a person dealing with a widow wishes to bind the husband's estate in the hands of reversioners, it is necessary to show, not only that the dealing was one in respect of which the widow was authorised to bind the estate, but that she intended to do so, and was supposed to do so. A mortgage by a widow for proper and necessary purpose will bind the estate, though she contracted, not as widow in her own right, but as guardian for a supposed

v. Achan Kuar, 19 I. A., 196; S. C., 14 All., 420; Lakshman Bhan v. Radhabai, 11 Bom., 609; Dharam Chand v. Bhawani Misra, 24 I. A., 183; S. C., 25 Cal., 189; Ghansham v. Badiya Lal, 24 All., 547.

(k) Amjad Ali v. Moniram, 12 Cal., 52; Debi Dayal v. Bhan Pertab, 31 Cal., 433; Indar Kuar v. Lalita Prasad, 4 All., 532.

(l) Hurry Mohun v. Gonesh Chunder, 10 Cal., 823.

(m) Phoochund v. Rughoobuns, 9 Suth., 108; Nabakumar v. Bhabasundari, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 375.

(n) Venkaji v. Vishnu, 18 Bom., 534.

Husband's estate not bound by personal obligation of widow.

adopted son, whose adoption turned out to be invalid (o). On the other hand the Courts of Bombay, Madras and Allahabad have refused to hold reversioners liable to satisfy bonds executed by a widow as security for loans contracted by her, which neither specifically pledged the estate, nor purported to be executed by her as representing the estate, though in each case the object of the loan was one for which the widow might legitimately have bound her successors (p). A contrary decision appears to have been arrived at in Calcutta. There a widow had borrowed money for the marriage expenses of a granddaughter. A suit was brought after her death to recover the money from her husband's heirs. The Court held that there was nothing in the circumstances which constituted the debt a charge upon the estate, but that the estate was, and therefore that the heirs in possession of the estate were, liable to satisfy the debt as being incurred by the deceased Hindu's widow for a proper purpose (q). Either of the two views put forward by the Calcutta High Court is intelligible, but it is difficult to see how both can be reconciled.

§ 637. In cases which would not otherwise justify a sale by a female, the transaction will be rendered valid by the consent of the heirs. Either on the ground suggested by the Judicial Committee, that such a consent is itself an evidence of the propriety of the transaction (r), or because this consent operates as a release of the claims of those who might otherwise dispute the transaction. But it seems to be by no means clear who are the parties whose consent is required. The pundits in an early Supreme Court case in Bengal (s) stated, that a gift or a sale of the (o) Lala Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, 14 Cal., 401.

(p) Gadgeppa v. Appaji, 3 Bom., 237; Ramasami v. Sellattammal, 4 Mad., 375; Dhiraj Singh v. Manga Ram, 19 All., 300, where the Court refused to follow the Calcutta decision next cited.

(q) Ramcoomar v. Ichamoyi Dasi, 6 Cal., 36.

(r) Ante § 624. See Madhub v. Gobind, 9 Suth., 350, where Markby, J., appeared to think that the signature of the next heir was only material as evidence of the necessity for the transaction; acc., Raj Bullubh v. Oomesh, 5 Cal., 49.

(s) Ramanund v. Ram Kissen, 2 M. Dig., 115, 119.

whole estate by the widow would be valid, if made "with the consent of those who are legally entitled to succeed to the estate after her death." In a later case, the Supreme Court held, that where the immediate reversioners abandoned their rights, those who claimed through them were equally bound (t). And in a case before the Sudder Court in 1849 the Judges seem to have been of opinion, that where the next heir, a daughter's son, consented to an alienation by a widow, this would bar the right of a more remote heir, such as an uncle's son, not claiming through him (u). And so it was ruled by the High Court of Bengal in later cases, in one of which Markby, J., said "To hold otherwise would only necessitate the adding of two or three words to the conveyance, because the widow may at any time surrender the property to the apparent next taker, who will then become absolute owner (v). The contrary decision, however, was arrived at in 1812. There the husband left a widow and two sets of heirs; the sons of his maternal uncle, who were the next in succession, and paternal kindred in a more distant degree. It was held, on the opinion of the pundits, that not only was the consent of all the maternal uncle's sons necessary, but that even if this consent had been given, it would have been further necessary to procure the consent of the paternal kindred. Not as heirs in reversion, but as being the legal guardians and advisers of the widow. Those, however, who did consent would be unable to claim in

Who must consent.

(t) Kaleechund v. Moore, cited Muteeoollah v. Radhabinode, S. D. of 1856, 604; S. C., sub nomine, Collychund v. Moore, Fulton, 73.

(u) Deep Chund v. Hurdeal, S. D. of 1849, 204. A reversioner cannot delegate to his executor the power to consent to an alienation by a widow. Hayes v. Harendra Narain, 31 Cal., 698.

(v) Mohunt Kishen v. Busgeet, 14 Suth., 379; Raj Bullubh v. Oomesh, 5 Cal., 44. But quere whether such a conveyancing contrivance would be allowed, if the general principle as to consent would be defeated by it. To make a surrender effectual, all interest in and possession of the life estate must be abandoned by the widow. Behari Lal v. Madho Lal, 19 I. A., 30; S. C., 19 Cal., 236. A transaction by which the widow surrenders her life-interest to the presumptive reversioner, and he re-conveys to her an absolute interest in a moiety, is ineffective as regards that moiety. Hemchunder v. Sarnamoyi, 22 Cal., 354. Quere ought not the whole transaction to be treated as void, being merely a colourable mode of dealing with her estate in a way not contemplated by the law. Sham Lal v. Amarendro, 23 Cal., 460.

opposition to the deed (w). This ruling was followed by the Bengal Sudder-Court in 1856, when they said, "We are of opinion from the authorities cited in the margin (x), that in order to render a sale by a Hindu widow valid it must be signed or attested by all the heirs of her husband then living; the execution or attestation by the nearest heirs alone is insufficient" (y). To the same effect is the language of the High Court of Bombay, in a case where a widow and daughter (the latter of whom in Bombay would take an absolute estate) conveyed to the defendant. It was held that the grant was invalid as against the plaintiff who, on the death of the daughter before her mother, became next heir. The Court said (z): "It may be taken as well established that the consent of heirs will render valid an alienation by a widow under circumstances which would not otherwise justify it. But the question, who are the heirs whose consent will thus render the alienation infeasible, has led to much conflict of decision. The principle, however, upon which that question is to be answered has, we apprehend, been laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Raj Lukhee Dabea v. Gokool Chunder Chowdhry (a). Their Lordships say: "They do not mean to impugn the authorities, etc., which lay down that a transaction of this kind may become valid by the consent of the husband's kindred, but the kindred in such (w) Mohun v. Siroomunnee, 2 S. D., 32 (40). See Narada, cited Daya Bhaga, xi., 1, § 64; Sid Dasi v. Gur Sahai, 3 All., 362; Ramadhin v. Mathura Singh, 10 All., 407.

(x) Nandkomar v. Rughoonundun, 1 S. D., 261 (349); Bhuwani v. Solukhna, ib., 322 (431); Hemchund v. Taramunnee, ib., 359 (481); Mohun v. Siroomunnee, 2 S. D., 32 (40). Only the last touched the point.

(y) Muteeoollah v. Radhabinode, S. D. of 1856, 596.

(z) Varjivan v. Ghelji, 5 Bom., 563, p. 571; folld. Vinayek v. Govind, 25 Bom., 129, p. 134.

(a) 13 M. I. A., p. 226; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 57; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 47. In an earlier case before the Privy Council where the validity of a gift by a widow was disputed, it was established that the estate was governed by Daya Bhaga law, and that the gift was assented to by all the heirs under that law, the claimants who disputed the gift setting up a reversionary title under Mitakshara law which was held not to apply. Srimati Debia v. Rani Koond, 4 M. I. A., 292. In a later case the Judicial Committee appeared to draw a distinction between an absolute consent by all the reversioners, binding themselves personally, and such a consent by some as would raise a presumption that the transaction was a fair one, or one justified by Hindu law. Sham Sunder v. Achan Kunwar, 25 I. A., p. 189; S. C., 21 All., p. 50.

cases must generally be understood to be all those who are likely to be interested in disputing the transaction. At all events, there should be such a concurrence of the members of the family as suffices to raise a presumption that the transaction was a fair one, and one justified by Hindu law." In the present case, the plaintiffs, although distant heirs, were the heirs presumptive of the deceased husband at the time of the sale, entitled to succeed in the event of Vakhat dying before her mother without issue, and, as such, clearly interested in disputing the sale. Nor can the mere concurrence of Bai Vakhat, albeit the nearest in succession (having regard to the state of dependence in which all women are supposed by Hindu law to have their being), be regarded as affording the slightest presumption that the alienation was a justifiable one." Where, however, a sufficient consent has been given, the transaction cannot be questioned by one who subsequently comes into existence either by birth or adoption (b).

§ 638. It must be remembered that where an estate is held by a female, no one has a vested interest in the succession. Of several persons then living, one may be the next heir in the sense that, if he lives, he will take at her death in preference to anyone else then in existence. But his claim may pass away by his own death, or be defeated by the birth or adoption of one who would be nearer than himself. It certainly does seem to be common sense that the person who turns out to be the actual reversioner should not find his rights signed away by the consent of one who, when he consented, had a preferable title in expectation, but who, in the actual event, proved to have no title at all (c). Till recently the decisions of the High Court of Bengal were in favour of this view (d). The Allahabad High Court went even further. It not only held that the consent of the heir presumptive to an

Who must consent.

(b) Rajkristo v. Kishoree, 3 Suth., 14; Vinayek v. Govind, 25 Bom., 129. As to what is sufficient evidence of consent, see Bhimappa v. Basawa, 29 Bom., 400.

(c) This view is supported by the language of Lord Davey in Bahadur v. Mohar, 29 I. A., p. 8; S. C., 24 All., p. 107.

(d) Ramchunder v. Haridas, 9 Cal., 463; Gopeenath v. Kallydoss, 10 Cal., 225.

alienation by a widow was not sufficient to defeat the rights of a more remote reversioner, but that even an assignment by the widow to the heir presumptive had no greater effect in his favour than it would have had if he had been a stranger. That is to say, that it did not accelerate his reversionary interest, so as to vest the whole estate absolutely in him at once, but only conferred upon him the widow's life-interest, leaving the contingency still open that he might not be the next heir at her death (e). For instance, if the widow assigned or surrendered to the daughter's son, he would upon this view be entitled for her life, and if he survived her would become absolute owner. If, however, he died before her, leaving a son, that son would hold for her life, but not longer, because at her death he would not be the heir of the widow's husband. A contrary conclusion, however, was arrived at by the High Court of Bengal upon a reference to the Full Bench, in which the question referred was, "whether, according to the law current in Bengal, a transfer or conveyance by a widow upon the ostensible ground of legal necessity, such transfer being assented to by the person who at the time is the next reversioner, will conclude another person, not a party thereto, who is the actual reversioner upon the death of the widow, from asserting his title to the property." This question the Court answered in the affirmative (f). They considered it as settled beyond all question by a long current of decisions that a widow might surrender her estate to the next reversioner, so as to bring his estate at once into possession, and thereby defeat all subsequent interests. They considered that it followed as a logical consequence, that the widow and the next reversioner might by their joint act convey an indefeasible estate to a stranger, of their own mere will and without any necessity. Garth, C J., yielded to this conclusion

(e) Ramphul Rai v. Tula Kuari, 6 All. (F. B.), 116; Madan Mohan v. Puran Mull, ibid., 288; Duli Singh v. Sundar Singh, 14 All., 377.

(f) Nobokishore v. Harinath, 10 Cal., 1102.

with reluctance, but considered that the Court was bound by a series of authorities, on the faith of which many thousands of estates had been bought and sold in Bengal during the last twenty years. If no similar current of authorities exists in the other Presidencies this decision would, of course, have little weight with them (g). Where the next reversioner is herself a female, who only takes a life estate, her consent will not bind the next reversioner who takes an absolute estate (h). The High Court of Bengal has also held, that the Full Bench decision above cited only applies where the whole body of persons constituting the next reversion assent to the alienation. For instance, suppose there are four persons equal in degree who would all take simultaneously on the death of the widow. If she alienated to the four, their estate would at once come into possession and her's would cease. But if she alienated to two only, one half of her estate would remain, which the Court held could not be done, except of course for her own life. And the consent of two to an alienation to a stranger would, apparently, be equally ineffectual (i). In Madras the High Court considers that it is settled by the decision in Behari Lal v. Madho Lal (h) that a widow may effect a valid and complete surrender of her entire estate to the then presumptive reversioner, but they do not admit that a consent by such will give validity to a transfer of part of the estate to a third person, or against those who are the actual reversioners at the death of the widow (l). In a very recent case (1904) the same Court has held that as reversioners claiming after a life estate held by a female heir make title direct to the last full owner and not through each other, no such reversioner can be barred by the act or omission

(g) See per Jenkins, C. J., 25 Bom., p. 133.

(h) Kooer Goolab Singh v. Rao Kurun Singh, 14 M. I. A., 176; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 1; Bhupal Ram v. Lachma Kuar, 11 All., 253; Varjwan v. Ghelgi, 5 Bom., 563; Vinayek v. Govind, 25 Bom., p. 135; Akkimeri v. Mallapudi, 25 Mad., 731.

(i) Radha Shyan v. Joy Ram, 17 Cal., 896.

(k) 19 I. A., 30; S. C., 19 Cal., 236.

(l) Marudamuthu v. Srinivasa, 21 Mad., 128.

of any previous reversioner unless he is the heir of such reversioner in whom the estate has vested (m).

§ 639. Consent by signature or attestation is spoken of. Evidence of consent.
But, of course, this is only one of many modes by which it is evidenced. Presence at, or knowledge of, the transaction, followed by acquiescence, express or implied, would be just as effective, though less easily proved than consent given in writing (n). The consent must also be, and have been obtained bona fide, that is to say, it must be a consent to an actual transfer, and not to a colourable one made for the purpose of defeating the rights of some other than the consenting party (o). It must be given with a full knowledge by the consenting parties of the effect of what they are doing, and an intelligent intention to consent to such an effect. They must know that they are not merely witnessing a transfer by the widow of her own life estate, but that they are giving validity to the destruction of their own future expectations, and this must be made out all the more clearly where a pardanashin female is a party to the transaction (p). In Malabar it has been laid down that consent of all the members of the tarwad is necessary to a sale, but no written consent is required. The signature of the chief anandraven, or member of the family who is next in seniority to the karnaven or manager, is not necessary, but if given it is prima facie evidence of the assent of all who are interested in the property. If they did not in fact consent they are bound to prove their dissent (q). More recently, however, it has been decided that there is no invariable rule requiring the consent of all the junior members, and "that a factious or capricious dissent of a single anan-

(m) Govinda v. Thayammal, 28 Mad., 57; folld. Abinash v. Harinath, 32 Cal., 62.

(n) Muteeoollah v. Radhabinode, S. D. of 1856, 596; Mohesh v. Ugra, 24 Suth., 127.

(o) Kolandaya Sholagan v. Vedamuthu, 19 Mad., 337.

(p) Jiwan Singh v. Misri Lal, 23 I. A., 1; S. C., 18 All., 146; Sham Sundar v. Achan Kunwar, 25 I. A., 183, p. 189; S. C., 21 All., 71, p. 80; Tika Ram v. Deputy Commissioner of Bara-Banki, 26 I. A., 97; S. C., 26 Cal., 707.

(q) Koudi Menon v. Sranginreagatta, 1 Mad. H. C., 248; Kaipreta v. Makkaiyil, ib., 359; Koyiloth v. Puthenpurayil, 3 Mad. H. C., 294.

draven ought not to be allowed to invalidate a sale made in pursuance of the decision of a family conclave, and which was either absolutely necessary, or the most reasonable and prudent arrangement for the protection of the other family property " (r).

Onus of proof.

§ 640. In this, as in all other cases, when a person deals with a qualified owner, he must prove the facts, either of purpose or consent, upon which he relies as giving validity to the transaction. But the amount of proof may vary considerably, according as he is the immediate party to the transaction, or only the representative of such party, and according to the lapse of time that has taken place, and other similar circumstances. And if he once proves the existence of a debt, which would justify the transaction, its continuance will be assumed, unless the person who contests the transaction shows sufficient cause for assuming that it was satisfied (s). Nor is he bound to prove that the facts were actually as they were represented to him, provided he made bona fide and proper enquiry, and such facts were represented to him as would, if true, have justified the transaction (t). Nor is he in any case bound to see to the application of the money (u). But the mere statement in a document that it was executed for a particular purpose is not sufficient evidence either of the existence of the purpose or of the adequacy of the enquiry (v). It is hardly necessary to add that, as between the widow herself and the person dealing with her, the transaction must be absolutely free from fraud, and must be shown to have been entered into

(r) Kalliyani v. Narayana, 9 Mad., 266.

(s) Hunoomanpersad's case, 6 M. I. A., 393; Cavalry Vencata v. Collector of Masulipatam, 11 M. I. A., 619; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 61; Lukhee v. Gokool, 13 M. I. A., 209; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 57; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 47; Rao Kurun v. Nawab Mahomed, 14 M. I. A., 187; S. C., 10 B. L. R. (P. C.), 1; Lala Amarnath v. Achan Kunwar, 19 I. A., 196; S. C., 14 All., 420; Sham Sundar v. Achan Kunwar, 25 I. A., 183; S. C., 21 All., 71.

(t) Hunoomanpersad's case, ub sup.; Kameswar v. Run Bahadoor, 8 I. A., 8; S. C., 6 Cal., 843; Act IV of 1882, § 38 (Transfer of Property).

(u) Hunoomanpersad's case, ub sup.; Ram Pershad v. Mt. Nagbungshee, 9 Suth., 501.

(v) Sunker Lall v. Juddoobuns, 9 Suth., 285. See ante § 34 9, et seq.

with the fullest knowledge by her of its nature and consequences (w).

§ 641. A sale in execution of a decree against a female heir is merely an involuntary alienation, and will be judged of by the previous principles. Where the suit is founded upon a purely personal debt or contract of her own, the decree can only be against her own person and property, and a sale in execution will only convey her own interest in the property (x). But even though the foundation of the decree be a liability which might bind the reversioners, that alone is not sufficient. The suit must be so framed as to show that it is not merely a personal demand upon the female in possession, but that it is intended to bind the entire estate, and the interests of all those who come after her. The reason of this is that, although in a suit brought to recover, or charge an estate of which a Hindu female is the proprietress, she will, as defendant, represent and protect the estate, as well in respect of her own as of the reversionary interest; still, and on this very account, the plaintiff is bound to give notice that he is seeking so large a remedy, in order to put those who may be ultimately affected upon their guard, and to enable them to protect themselves (y). If, therefore, the suit is framed so as only to claim a personal decree against the heiress, the plaintiff will be relieved from the necessity of proving anything beyond her personal liability. But then the decree can only be executed against the female holder personally, and against her limited interest in the land (z).

(w) Kameswar v. Run Bahadoor, 8 I. A., 8; S. C., 6 Cal., 843; Sudisht v. Mt. Sheobarai, 3 I. A., 39; Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 5 Bom., 450.

(x) Jugal Kishore v. Jotendro Mohun, 11 I. A., 66; S. C., 10 Cal., 985; Narana Maiya v. Vasteva, 17 Mad., 208; Braja Lal v. Jiban Krishna, 26 Cal., 285.

(y) See Nugender v. Kaminee, 11 M. I. A., 267; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 17; post § 653. The language of the Court here, and in Mohima v. Ram Kishore, 15 B. L. R., 160; S. C., 23 Suth., 174, would suggest that the reversioners must be parties to a suit framed for this purpose, sed quare. They would certainly be entitled to come in and ask to be made parties, and, of course, it would be safer to include them from the first, if ascertainable.

(z) Nugender v. Kaminee, 11 M. I. A., 241; S. C., 8 Suth. (P. C.), 17; Baijun v. Brij Bhokun, 2 I. A., 275; S. C., 1 Cal., 133; Mohima v. Ram Kishore, 15

As representing estate.

Execution for debt of last male holder.

§ 642. A different case is where the proceeding is nominally against the heiress, but is really against her merely as representing the estate, that is where the debt on which the decree is founded was not her own at all, but was the debt of the last male holder. Here, again, there is a distinction, according as the decree was passed in the life of the male holder, and against him, or not. In the former case, if execution has not been taken out during his life it may be taken out after his death against any property which he may have left behind. No matter into whose hands such property has passed (a), the property seized and sold will be described as the property of the deceased, and the entire interest in it will pass by the sale. But if no decree has been passed against him before his death, it is necessary to bring or revive the suit against his representative, whether male or female. "In such cases the representative, and not the deceased, is the defendant; and in the notification of sale, and in the certificate of sale, it ought to be set forth that what is sold is the right title and interest of the representative on the record, and not that of the deceased person. As the whole estate of the deceased vests in his legal representative, the purchaser would be safe if the representative on the record were really the legal representative. But on this point he would be bound to satisfy himself, and must take the consequences if it turned out to be otherwise" (b). Therefore, where the deceased was divided, and therefore represented by his widow, but the suit was brought against his divided brother; and, conversely, where the deceased was undivided, and the suit was brought against his widow, and not against his brothers, in each case it was held that nothing passed to the purchaser at an auction-sale under the decree (c). So where the deceased left a widow

B. L. R., 142; S. C., 23 Suth., 174; Kisto Moyee v. Prosunno, 6 Suth., 304. See Venkataramayyan v. Venkatasubramania, 1 Mad., 358; Siva Bhagiam v. Palani Padachi, 4 Mad., 401; Kristo Gobind v. Hem Chunder, 16 Cal., 511.

(a) See ante § 329, as to the effect of a gift or devise upon the right of a creditor.

(b) Per curiam, Natha v. Jamni, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 41.

(c) Natha v. Jamni, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 37; Sadabart Prasad v. Fool- and a minor son, and the suit was brought against the widow, decree obtained and execution taken out against her, as representing the estate, the existence of the minor being ignored throughout, it was held that his interests were not affected (d). But where the estate is actually represented by a female, and the suit is properly brought against her upon a debt of the last male holder, no liability can possibly attach upon her personally (e). The basis of the suit against her is, that the estate which she holds is bound, and that she is compellable to pay not out of her assets, but out of the assets. Consequently, any decree against her, and all proceedings in execution of it, will be interpreted so as to give proper effect to the transaction. For instance, a man had given a bond, and died leaving an infant son, and a widow who was guardian of the son. She was sued on the bond, judgment was given against her, and execution was issued. The advertisement stated that the property was hers, and that the rights and interest of the debtor were to be sold. It was held that the estate of the deceased was what was sold, and that the purchaser had a good title against the son (f). This decision was approved and followed by the Privy Council, in a case where a widow was sued for arrears of rent, which accrued due in the time of the husband. The plaintiff had, according to the practice which then existed, obtained a decree in the Civil Court against the husband for the arrears. He then proceeded against the widow in the Collector's Court to enforce payment from the estate. The decree was given against the widow as sole heiress and representative. It Binds estate of deceased.

bash Koer, 3 B. L. R. (F. B.), 31; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 1; Phoolbush Koonwar v. Lalla Jogeshwar, 3 I. A., 7; S. C., 1 Cal., 226; S. C., 25 Suth., 285; see Hendry v. Mutty Lall, 2 Cal., 395.

(d) Jatha Naik v. Venkapa, 5 Bom., 14; Akoba Dada v. Sakharan, 9 Bom., 429; Subbanna v. Venkata Krishnan, 11 Mad., 408.

(e) Personal liability can only attach to a married woman in respect of her stridhanum, even though the decree is general in its form; in re Radhi, 12 Bom., 228.

(f) Ishan v. Buksh Ali, Marsh, 614; S. C., Suth. (F. B.), 119. See Alukmonee v. Bane Madhub, 4 Cal., 677; Achut Ramchandra v. Manjunath, 21 Bom., 539. So a decree against a widow binds her subsequently adopted son, and the result of an appeal brought by her, after the adoption, equally binds him, though he is not made a party to it. Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhubaneswari, 15 I. A., 195; S. C., 16 Cal., 40.

was held that the execution of this decree bound all the interests in the property, and not merely that of the widow (g). And where the advertisement of sale points to a decree against the husband as that which is being enforced, it is immaterial that it states that what is being sold is the right title and interest of the widow (h).

§ 643. Before passing away from the subject of alienation by a female heir, it is advisable to consider the effect upon the reversioner, first of hostile judgments obtained against her, and secondly of dispossession of her estate as raising the bar of the Statute of Limitation. The leading case upon the first point is the ruling in the Shivaganga case (i) where in reference to the contention that the appellant was concluded by a decree passed in 1847 against her mother Angamootoo her predecessor in title who had held the estate as widow. Their Lordships stated their opinion "that unless it could be shown that there had not been a fair trial of the right in that suit, or in other words, unless that decree could have been successfully impeached on some special ground, it would have been an effectual bar to any new suit by any person claiming in succession to Angamootoo. For assuming her to be entitled to the Zemindary at all, the whole estate would for the time be vested in her, absolutely for some purposes, though in some respects for a qualified interest; and until her death it could not be ascertained who would be entitled to succeed. The same principle which has prevailed in the Courts of this country as to tenants in tail representing the inheritance would seem to apply to a Hindu widow;

(g) Durbhunga v. Coomar, 14 M. I. A., 605; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 294; S. C., 17 Suth., 459. The effect of this and the preceding decisions has been stated by the Judicial Committee to be "that in execution proceedings, the Court will look at the substance of the transaction, and will not be disposed to set aside the execution upon mere technical grounds when they find that it is substantially right." Bissessur v. Luchmessur, 6 I. A., 233, 238; S. C., 5 C. L. R., 477; Ramkishore v. Kally Kanto, 6 Cal., 479; Jotendro v. Jogul, 7 Cal., 357; affd. Jugul Kishore v. Jotendro, 11 I. A., 66; S. C., 10 Cal., 985; Hari Vydiyanathayyan v. Minakshi, 5 Mad., 15; Baroda Kanta v. Jatindra, 22 Cal., 974.

(h) Mt. Nuzerum v. Moulvie Ameerooddeen, 24 Suth., 3.

(i) Katama Nachar v. Shivaganga Rajah, 9 M. I. A., p. 604; folld. Partab Narain Singh v. Trilokinath, 11 I. A., 197; S. C., 11 Cal., 186.

Judgments.

and it is obvious that there would be the greatest possible inconvenience in holding that the succeeding heirs were not bound by a decree fairly and properly obtained against the widow." In the latest case to which this ruling was applied the reversioner sued for possession of the estate. The defendant pleaded that the daughter of the last male holder had sued him ineffectually on the same title. The plaintiff alleged that under the Limitation Law (Act of 1871, Art. 142, Act of 1877, Art. 141) his right to sue accrued on the death of the female heir. Their Lordships set aside this contention. "The words 'entitled to the possession of immovable property' refer to the then existing law. Under that law the plaintiff being bound by the decree against Sampurna would not be entitled to bring a suit for possession. The intention of the Law of Limitation is, not to give a right where there is not one, but to interpose a bar after a certain period to a suit to enforce an existing right" (k).

Where the widow, or other holder of a widow's estate, ^{Limitation.} is dispossessed by virtue of any alienation or other act of ownership of her own, her act being effectual for her own life is not adverse to the reversioner till her death, and does not call upon him to bring any suit till then (l). Where she is dispossessed, or prevented from taking possession, by the hostile act of a third party, it was held under the Act XIV of 1859 that if her suit was barred by time that of the reversioner would also be barred (m). When, however, the Acts of 1871 and 1877 came into force, the Indian Courts held that the law had been changed, and that the statute in every case began to run against the reversioner from the death of the last female heir. The point at last came for decision before the Privy Council, and the Indian decisions were affirmed (n). It (k) Harimath v. Mohunt Mothoor Mohun, 20 I. A., 183; S. C., 21 Cal., 8. As to decrees in declaratory suits, see post § 650.

(l) Pursut Koer v. Pasut Roy, 8 Cal., 442.

(m) Nobinchunder v. Guru Persad, 9 Suth. (F. B.), 505; S. C., B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1008.

(n) Runchordas v. Parvatibai, 26 I. A., 71; S. C., 23 Bom., 725; Jhamman v. Tiloki, 25 All., 435. In a recent case (1903) where a widow had granted a lease would appear then that the statute can never begin to run against a reversioner in consequence of any possession or dispossession of a female, so long as she holds as heir of the last male. If she holds under some claim of title independent of him, her possession is hostile to the rightful heir or reversioner from the time it begins (o).

§ 644. The self-acquired property of a man will descend to his widow where his joint or ancestral property would not do so. But she has no other or greater power over the one than over the other (p). A different rule prevails among the Jains. A widow among them is said to have an absolute interest over her husband's self-acquired property. It has been suggested in some early cases, but does not appear to be established, that she has some larger interest over his ancestral property than an ordinary widow possesses (q).

§ 645. Another point on which there appears to be much difference of opinion, is whether a widow or other female heir has any larger power of disposition over movable property than over immovable property. It is now finally settled, as regards cases governed by the law of Bengal and Benares, that there is no difference, and that the same restrictions apply in each case (r). But in for 60 years, and the reversioner upon her death sued the lessee for recovery of the property by cancellation of the lease, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that as the lease was not void but only voidable, it was necessary to set aside the lease in order to clear his title, and therefore that the limitation applicable was Art. 91 and not Art. 141 of Act XV of 1877. Bijoy Gopal v. Nil Ratan, 30 Cal., 990. The case of Runchordas v. Parvati was not cited. It may be submitted that as against the reversioner all alienations by the widow primâ facie terminate with her life. It is for the defendant to show that their operation continues, which he may show in various ways, one being that the reversioner has ratified the transaction. The bar of limitation cannot depend upon the plea set up by the defence.

(o) Mt. Lachan Kumwar v. Anant Singh, 22 I. A., 25; S. C., 22 Cal., 445; Mahabir Pershad v. Adhikani Koer, 23 Cal. (P. C.), 942.

(p) Mt. Thakoor v. Rai Baluk Ram, 11 M. I. A., 139; S. C., 10 Suth. (P. C.), 3.

(q) Sheo Singh v. Mt. Dakho, 6 N.-W. P., 382; S. C., affd. on appeal, 5 I. A., 87; S. C., 1 All., 688; Shimbhu Nath v. Gayan Chand, 16 All., 379; Harnobh v. Mandil, 27 Cal., 379.

(r) D. Bhaga, xi., 1, § 56, 60, 63, 64; D. K. Sangraha, i., 2; Cossinaut Bysack v. Hurrosodry, 2 M. Dig., 198; affirmed in P. C. Clarke, Rules, 91; V. Darp., 97; Blugwandeen v. Myna Bae, 11 M. I. A., 487; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 23. This position was doubted as regards Bengal, 7 Bom., 163, but has been (1903) affirmed by the High Court of Calcutta. Durga Nath v. Chintamani, 31 Cal., 214.

both these decisions, and in that cited above, Mt. Thakoor v. Rai Baluk Ram, it was admitted by the Judicial Committee that there might be a difference in this respect between the law of those provinces, and that administered in the Mithila and in Western and Southern India. Certainly as regards these latter districts there is a strong current of authority the other way (s). It is difficult to ascertain upon what ground these decisions rested. Most of them were given in accordance with fatwahs which set out no reasons or authority. Many of those in Bombay appear to relate to cases where the widow had received the property by gift or devise and not as heir. The Madras High Court has lately decided, though apparently without noticing the decisions of the Sudder Court to the contrary, that the restrictions upon a widow's estate apply to movable as well as to immovable property (t). The question was lately referred to a Full Bench in Bombay, in a case where the will of a widow had been held invalid as regards the immovable property of her husband but valid as to the movable. In the referring order, Jardine, J., reviewed all the cases upon the subject in an elaborate opinion in which, while apparently yielding to the decisions arising from Bombay and those districts where the Mayukha is supreme, he declined to follow those rulings as regards districts where the Mitakshara is the primary authority. The judgment of the Full Bench delivered by Sargent, C. J., pronounced the will invalid as to the movables. He summed up the discussion as follows:—"In this state of the authorities, we think that

(s) See as to the Mithila, Vivada Chintamani, 261—263; Sreenarain v. Bhya Jha, 2 S. D., 23 (29, 36); Doorga v. Poorun, 5 Suth., 141; Birajun Kooer v. Luchmi Narain, 10 Cal., 392. Madras: Madhaviya, § 44; Ramasashien v. Akylandummal, Mad. Dec. of 1849, 115; Gooroobuksh v. Latchmana, ib., 1850, 61; Gopaula v. Narraina Putter, ib., 74; Cooppa v. Sashappien, ib., 1858, 220. Bombay: V. May., iv., 8, § 3; Bechur v. Bae Lukmee, 1 Bom. H. C., 56; Pranjeevandas v. Dewcooverbae, 1 Bom. H. C., 130; Jamiyatram v. Bai Jamna, 2 Bom. H. C., 10; Lakshmbai v. Ganpat Moroba, 4 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 150, 162; Bhaskar Trimbak v. Mahadev Ramji, 6 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 1, 13; per curiam, Tuljaram v. Mathuradas, 5 Bom., 670; Damodar v. Purmanandas, 7 Bom., p. 163; Harilal v. Pranvaladas, 16 Bom., 229; Bai Jamna v. Bai Shanker, ibid., 233.

(t) Narasimma v. Venkatadri, 8 Mad., 290; Buchi Ramayya v. Jagapathi, ib., 305.

Power of heiress over movables.

Her power over self-acquisitions.

Jains.

Her power over movables.

the ruling of the Privy Council that the property inherited by a widow from her husband devolves on his heirs at her death, must have effect given to it throughout the Presidency with regard to the devolution of the movables so inherited, and to that extent, if the decision in Damodar v. Purmandas (7 Bom., 155) is to be regarded as necessarily giving the movables that remain to the widow's heirs, it must be treated as of no authority. Assuming then, as we think we must, that the movables existing at the time of the widow's death devolve, by inheritance, on her husband's heirs, we think the widow's power of alienation over the movables cannot be regarded as including the power of willing them away at her death so as to displace the right of inheritance by her husband's heirs" (u).

This ruling leaves untouched the widow's power of alienation during her life, as to which Jardine, J., said (p. 703) with reference to a suggestion of mine (ante § 253), "We should prefer to say that the nature of movable property being such that in many cases conversion is essential to its enjoyment, the widow is not precluded from converting it but must preserve the capital, unless the expenditure of it is necessitated by the insufficiency of the income to provide for her maintenance, subject nevertheless, to a power to dispose of a moderate portion for works of piety." Whenever the question arises for final decision, it will be well to bear in mind the observations of the Judicial Committee in Bhugwandeem v. Myna Bae (v). These show that the texts which authorize a woman to dispose absolutely of movable property given to her by her husband, are different from those which control her disposition of property inherited, and that she may probably have larger powers over the former than over the latter. Also, that reliance can no longer be placed upon the much canvassed text of the Mitakshara (II, 11, § 2), as raising any analogy between property inherited by (u) Gadadhar Bhat v. Chandra Bhagabai, 17 Bom., 690; folld. Sha Chamanlal v. Doshi Ganesh, 28 Bom., 453.

(v) 11 M. I. A., 510—514; S. C., 9 Suth. (P. C.), 23.

a woman and her stridhanum, as regards the right to dispose of it.

§ 646. REMEDIES AGAINST THE ACTS OF A FEMALE HEIR. Remedies.

—This part of the subject divides itself into three branches—Who may sue; for what they may sue, and the equities that arise in giving relief.

WHO MAY SUE.—No one can sue in respect of the acts of the female proprietor, except those who have an interest in the succession, and who would be injured by the acts complained of. It is quite clear that a mere stranger cannot sue. And he is not put into a better position by joining the reversionary heirs as defendants, or even by obtaining their consent (w). But the further question arises, who is a mere stranger? The next reversioner, that is the presumptive heir in succession, has only a contingent estate. But it is settled that this estate gives him such an interest as will justify a suit, where that interest is in danger (x). On the other hand, it seems equally settled that only the immediate reversioners can bring such a suit (y), unless the reversioners are themselves fraudulently colluding with the female heir, so that their protection of the estate is in fact withdrawn (z), or unless the immediate reversioner is herself only the holder of a life estate (a).

Persons interested.

Suit by reversioners.

(w) Brojokishoree v. Sreenath Bose, 9 Suth., 463. Nor can the assignee of a reversioner's right sue, even though he would be the next reversioner after the assignor; Raicharan v. Pyari Mani, 3 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 70. Sed qq. as to last position? If the assignment was valid he became next reversioner. See Ammur v. Mardun, 2 N.-W. P., 31.

(x) Lukhee v. Gokool, 13 M. I. A., 209, 224; S. C., 3 B. L. R. (P. C.), 57; S. C., 12 Suth. (P. C.), 47; Koer Goolab v. Rao Kurun, 14 M. I. A., 176; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 1; Jumoonav. Bamasonderai, 3 I. A., 72; S. C., 1 Cal., 259; Adi Deo v. Dukharan, 5 All., 532; Hemchunder v. Sarnamoyi, 22 Cal., 354; Rojomoyee v. Troylukho, 29 Cal., 269. See § 649.

(y) Gogunchunder v. Joy Durga, S. D. of 1859, 620; Brojokishoree v. Sreenath Bose, 9 Suth., 463; Bamasonduree v. Bamasonduree, 10 Suth., 301; (but see Oojulmoney v. Sagormoney, Tayl. & B., 370); Raghunath v. Thakuri, 4 All., 16; Madari v. Malki, 6 All., 428.

(z) Naikram v. Soorujbuns, S. D. of 1859, 891; Shama Soonduree v. Jumoonav., 24 Suth., 86; Retoo v. Lalljee, ib., 399; Koer Goolab v. Rao Kurun, 14 M. I. A., 176; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 1, 193; Anand v. Court of Wards, 8 I. A., 14; Balgovind v. Ramkumar, 6 All., 431; Gauri v. Gursahai, 2 All., 41; Jhula v. Kanta Prasad, 9 All., 441; Mahomed v. Krishnan, 11 Mad., 106; Mammatha v. Rohilli, 27 All., 406. See as to misjoinder of causes of action by plaintiff seeking a declaration that alienations to several persons were invalid; Kachur v. Rathore, 7 Bom., 289.

(a) Kandasami v. Akkammal, 13 Mad., 195; Raghupati v. Tirumalai, 15

§ 647. FOR WHAT THEY MAY SUE.—An action against the heir in possession is only maintainable in respect of some act of hers which is injurious to the reversioner. Such acts are of two classes: First, those which diminish the value of the estate; second, those which endanger the title of those next in succession.

First.—Under this head come all acts which answer to the description of waste, that is, an improper destruction or deterioration of the substance of the property. The right of those next in reversion to bring a suit to restrain such waste, was established, apparently for the first time, by an elaborate judgment of Sir Lawrence Peel, C. J., in 1851 (b). What will amount to waste has never been discussed. Probably no assistance upon this point could be obtained from an examination of the English cases in regard to tenants for life. The female heir is, for all purposes of beneficial enjoyment, full and complete owner. She would, as I conceive, have a full right to cut timber, open mines and the like, provided she did so for the purpose of enjoying the estate, and not of injuring the reversion. As Sir Lawrence Peel said (c): “The Hindu female is rather in the possession of an heir taking by descent until a contingency happens, than an heir or devisee upon a trust by implication. Therefore, a bill filed by the presumptive heir in succession against the immediate heir who has succeeded by inheritance, must show a case approaching to spoliation.” She must appear not merely to be using, but to be abusing, her estate. Therefore, specific acts of waste, or of mismanagement, or other misconduct, must be alleged and proved. Unless this is done, the female heir can neither be prevented from getting the property into her possession, nor from retaining it in her hands, nor compelled to give security for it, nor can any orders be given her by anticipation as to the Mad., 422; Balgobind v. Ramkumar, 6 All., 431; Abinash v. Harinath, 32 Cal., 62; contra Madari v. Malki, 6 All., 428; folld. Ishwar Narain v. Janki, 15 All., 132.

(b) Hurrydoss v. Rungunmoney, Sev., 657.
(c) Hurrydoss v. Rungunmoney, Sev., 661.

mode in which she is to use or invest it (d). But where such a case is made out, the heiress will be restrained from the act complained of. In a very gross case, she may even be deprived of the management of the estate, and a receiver appointed. Not upon the ground that her act operates as a complete forfeiture, which lets in the next estate, and entitles the reversioner to sue for immediate possession, as if she were actually dead (e), but upon the ground that she cannot be trusted to deal with the estate in a manner consistent with her limited rights in it (f). In such a case the next heirs may be, but need not necessarily be, appointed the receivers, unless they appear to be the fittest persons to manage for the benefit of the estate (g); and the Court will, unless perhaps in a case where the female has been guilty of criminal fraud, direct the whole proceeds to be paid over to her, and not merely an allowance for her maintenance (h). In one case the widow had given up the estate to a third party, under threat of legal proceedings, and refused to have anything to do with the assets. It was held that the reversioners might sue the widow and the third party to have the possession restored to the proper custody, and that a manager should be appointed to collect, account for, and pay into Court, the assets, to be held for the ultimate benefit of the heirs who should be entitled to succeed at the death of the widow (i).

Of course the reversioners will be equally entitled to restrain the unlawful acts of persons holding under the Abandonment of right.

Acts of strangers.

(d) Hurrydoss v. Uppoornah, 6 M. I. A., 433; Bindoo v. Bolie, 1 Suth., 125; Grose v. Amirtamayi, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 1; S. C., 12 Suth (A. O. J.), 13. As to mining, see Subba Reddi v. Chengalamma, 22 Mad., 126.

(e) Per curiam, Rao Kurun v. Nawab Mahomed, 14 M. I. A., 198; S. C., 10 B. L. R., 1; Kishnee v. Khealee, 2 N.-W. P., 424.

(f) Nundlal v. Bolakee, S. D. of 1854, 351; Gouree Kanth v. Bhugobutty, S. D. of 1858, 1103.

(g) Golukmonee v. Kishenpersad, S. D. of 1859, 210.

(h) Nundlal v. Bolakee, S. D. of 1854, p. 351; S. D. of 1859, 210, supra; Lodhoomona v. Gunneschunder, S. D. of 1859, 436; Koroona moyee v. Gobindnath, S. D. of 1859, 944; Maharani v. Nunda Lal, 1 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 27; S. C., 10 Suth., 73; Shama Sooduree v. Jumona, 24 Suth., 86.

(i) Radha Mohun v. Ram Das, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 362; S. C., 24 Suth., 86, note. See Joymooruth v. Buldeo, 21 Suth., 444.

female heiress (k). But the mere fact that strangers are affecting to deal with the property as their own, without actual dispossession of the intermediate estate, or waste, or injury to it, gives no right of action against them to the reversioner, either for a declaration of title, or otherwise (l).

§ 648. Second.—During the lifetime of the heiress no one can bring a suit to have it declared that he will be the next heir at her death. Because, as his title must depend upon the state of things existing at her death, a suit before that time would be an unnecessary and useless litigation of a question which may never arise, or may only arise in a different form (m). But he may sue to remove that which would be a bar to his title when it vested in possession.

There are two classes of transactions which would have this effect: first, adoptions; second, alienations.

§ 649. The Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), § 42 provides that "any person entitled to any legal character, or to any right as to any property, may institute a suit against any person denying, or interested to deny, his title to such character or right, and the Court may in its discretion make therein a declaration that he is so entitled, and the plaintiff need not in such suit ask for any further relief. Provided that no Court shall make any such declaration where the plaintiff, being able to seek further relief than a mere declaration of title, omits to do so (n). The illustrations to this section, amongst which (i, k) are expressly mentioned suits for a declaration that alienations by a widow are void beyond her life, and that her adoption

(k) Gobindmani v. Shamlal, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 48; S. C., Suth. Sp., 165; per curiam, Kamavadhani v. Joysa, 3 Mad. H. C., 119.

(l) Suraj Bansi Kunwar v. Mahipat, 7 B. L. R., 669; S. C., 16 Suth., 18.

(m) Pranputty v. Lallah Futteh, 2 Hay, 608; S. C., Sev., 638; Kathama Natchiar v. Dorasinga Tever, 2 I. A., 169; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 83; S. C., 23 Suth., 314; Greeman v. Wahari, 8 Cal., 12.

(n) Bholai v. Kali, 8 All., 70; Abhoy Churn v. Kally Prasad, 5 Cal., 949. The Calcutta Court has held that a reversioner has not such an estate as would entitle him to sue under this Act. Greeman Singh v. Wahari Lall, 8 Cal., 12. The Madras Court takes an opposite view. Gungayya v. Mahalakshmi, 10 Mad., 90.

of a son is invalid, seem to show that the Act is intended to reproduce the previous law, as embodied in the following decisions.

§ 650. It was ruled under the Limitation Act XIV of 1859, that the mere fact of an adoption was no necessary injury to a reversioner, until his right to possession arises, and that the Statute of Limitations ran from the latter date, and not from the date of the adoption. A contrary rule was laid down by the Privy Council as regards the Limitation Act of 1871. It is yet undecided which rule will apply as regards the later Limitation Act XV of 1877, Sched. ii, § 118, 140, 141 (o). In any case it was settled that the next reversioner might bring a suit for a declaration that the adoption was invalid, on the ground that he might otherwise lose the evidence which would establish its invalidity, when the occasion arose (p). But the granting of merely declaratory decrees is discretionary (q), and in one case where the evidence was unsatisfactory, the Court refused to make any declaration (r). And no declaration will be made as to merely collateral matters, such as the existence of agreements to give or receive in adoption, where the declaration, when made, would not affect the validity of the adoption (s).

§ 651. It was at one time thought that alienations by a widow beyond her powers were absolutely void, and even (o) See ante § 162.

(p) Chunder v. Dwarakanath, S. D. of 1859, 623; Nobinkishory v. Gobind, Sev., 625, note; per curiam, Gangopadhya v. Mahesandra, 4 B. L. R. (F. B.), 9; S. C., 12 Suth. (F. B.), 14; Brojo v. Sreenath Bhoose, 9 Suth., 463; Mrimoyee v. Bhoobunmoyee, 15 B. L. R., 1; S. C., 23 Suth., 42; Siddhessur v. Sham Chund, 15 B. L. R., 9, note; S. C., 23 Suth., 295. (See as to Statute of Limitations in these two last cases.) Kotomarti v. Vardhanamma, 7 Mad. H. C., 351; Kalova v. Padapa, 1 Bom., 248; Jumoon v. Bamasonderai, 3 I. A., 72; S. C., 1 Cal., 289; Anund v. Court of Wards, 8 I. A., 14; S. C., 6 Cal., 764; Thayammal v. Venkatarama, 7 Mad., 401; Anyaba v. Daji, 20 Bom., 202; under special circumstances even a more remote reversioner may sue. Ramabai v. Rangrav, 19 Bom., 614, ante § 646.

(q) Sreenarain v. Sreemutty, 11 B. L. R., 171, 190; S. C., 19 Suth., 193; S. C., I. A., Sup. Vol., 149; Mote Lal v. Bhoop Singh, 8 Suth., 64; Brojo v. Sreenath Bhoose, 9 Suth., 463. The Privy Council is reluctant to over-rule the discretion exercised in this matter by the Indian Court. 31 I. A., 67; S. C., 28 All., 238.

(r) Brohmo Moyee v. Anund Lall, 19 Suth., 419. See as to cases where it was held that the Court had wrongly refused to make a declaration. Upendra v. Gopeenath, 9 Cal., 817; Isri Dut v. Hunsbutti, 10 I. A., 150; S. C., 10 Cal., 324.

(s) Sreenarain v. Sreemutty, 11 B. L. R., 171, supra.

Suit to set aside adoptions.

Declaratory suits

to set aside alienations.

Declaratory suits.

Specific Relief Act.

operated as a forfeiture of her estate. Consequently, that the reversioners might sue to have the estate restored to the widow, or even placed at once in their own possession. It is now, however, settled that this is not the case. Such an alienation will be valid during the widow's lifetime. If not made for a lawful purpose, such as will bind the heirs, it has no effect against them till their title accrues; they may then sue for possession, and the Statute will run from that date (t). But here, as in the case of adoptions, the validity of the transaction may depend upon facts the evidence of which would be lost by delay. Therefore, a suit will lie by the reversioner at once, not to set aside the transaction absolutely, but to set aside so much of it as would operate against himself (u). But a suit of this character must be founded on specific instances of alienation extending beyond the restricted powers of the heiress. A suit to restrain all alienations would not be maintainable, because the validity of each alienation would depend upon the circumstances under which it was made, and could not be decided upon beforehand (v). Such declarations will not be granted, unless the act complained of is one which, if allowed to stand unchallenged, would be an injury to the estate of the next heir (w). And they may be refused, at the discretion of the Court, if it appears that the lapse of (t) Where the suit is during the life of a widow to declare her alienation void beyond her life, the statute runs from the alienation. If after her death for possession, the statute runs from the death. In each case the period is twelve years. Act XV of 1877, Sched. ii., § 125, 141; Pursut Koer v. Palut Roy, 8 Cal., 442; Srinath v. Prosonno, 9 Cal., 934; Runchordas v. Parvati Bai, 26 I. A., 71; S. C., 23 Bom., 725. Cf. Bifoy Gopal v. Nil Ratan, 30 Cal., 990, ante § 643.

(u) Gobindmani v. Shamlal, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 48; S. C., Suth. Sp., 165; Oodoy v. Dhunmonee, 3 Suth., 183; Grose v. Amirtanayi, 4 B. L. R. (O. C. J.), 1; S. C., 12 Suth. (A. O. J.), 13; Shewak v. Syad Mohammed, 3 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 196; S. C., 12 Suth., 26; Lalla Chuttur v. Mt. Wooma, 8 Suth., 273; Bykunt v. Grish Chunder, 15 Suth., 96; Bistobehariv. Lala Baijnath, 7 B. L. R., 213; S. C., 16 Suth., 49; Damoodur v. Mohee Kant, 21 Suth., 54. See per Macpherson, J., Prosonno v. Tripoora, 24 Suth., 88; explaining Brinda v. Pearee, 9 Suth., 460; Shumsool v. Shewukram, 2 I. A., 7; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 226; S. C., 22 Suth., 409; Kalian Singh v. Samwal Singh, 7 All., 163; Sant Kumar v. Sukh Nidhan, 8 All., 365; Gopichand v. Sujankuar, 8 All., 646.

(v) Pranputtee v. Mt. Poorn, S. D. of 1856, 494; S. C. on review, Lalla Futtch v. Mt. Pranputtee, S. D. of 1857, 381.

(w) Sreenarain v. Sreemutty, 11 B. L. R., 171; S. C., 19 Suth., 133; S. C., I. A., Sup. Vol., 149; Behary v. Madho, 13 B. L. R., 222; S. C., 21 Suth., 430; Nilmony v. Kally Churn, 2 I. A., 83; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 382; S. C., 23 Suth., 150; Rampershad v. Jokhoo Roy, 10 Cal., 1003.

time will not render it more difficult for the next heir to establish his right when the succession falls in, for, if this be so, the litigation is premature and unnecessary (x).

§ 652. It was formerly unsettled how far a decree in a declaratory suit would bind any but the parties to it. Where a suit is brought by or against a female heiress in possession, in respect of any matter which strikes at the root of her title to the property, it is held that a decree, fairly and properly obtained against her, binds all the reversioners, because she completely represents the estate (y). But it is by no means clear that the same result would follow in a suit where she was not defending her own title at all. In one case of an application to set aside an adoption, the Judicial Committee said that they would give no opinion what the effect of a decree in such a suit might be; whether one in favour of the adoption would bind any reversioner except the plaintiff, or whether one adverse to the adoption would bind the adopted son, as between himself and anybody except the plaintiff (z). In a later case they refused to give any declaration as to the effect of a will upon the rights, if any, of an unborn son, on the ground that no judgment which they could give would affect his rights (a). Now, by Act I of 1877, § 43 (Specific Relief), it is provided that a declaration made under Chap. VI is binding only upon the parties to the suit, persons claiming under them respectively, and, where any of the parties are trustees, on the persons for whom, if in existence at the date of the declaration, such persons would be trustees (b).

(a) Behary v. Madho, sup. sup.

(y) Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M. I. A., 539, 604; S. C., 2 Suth. (P. C.), 31; Nobinchunder v. Guru Percad, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1008; S. C., 9 Suth., 505; approved, Aumirtolall v. Rajoneekant, 2 I. A., 121; S. C., 15 B. L. R., 10; S. C., 23 Suth., 214; Pertab Narain v. Trilokinath, 11 I. A., 197; S. C., 11 Cal., 186. A mortgagor, after he has parted with a portion of his interest in the estate, no longer represents it so as to make judgments against him bind mortgagées who are not parties to the proceeding. Soshi Busan v. Gogan Chunder, 22 Cal., 364.

(z) Jumona v. Bamasoonderai, 3 I. A., 72, 84; S. C., 1 Cal., 259. See per Peacock, C. J., Brojo v. Sreenath Bose, 9 Suth., 465; per Markby, J., Brohmo v. Anund, 13 B. L. R., 225 (note); S. C., 19 Suth., 420.

(a) Ram Lal Mookerjee v. Secy. of State, 8 I. A., 46; S. C., 7 Cal., 304.

(b) Jaipal Kunwar v. Bhaiya Indar, 31 I. A., 67; S. C., 26 All., 238. Such a

Effect of declaratory decree.

Equities on setting aside her acts.

§ 653. EQUITIES.—In general, where a conflict arises between the reversioner and the alienee of the heiress, the question is simply whether her alienation was for a lawful and necessary purpose, or not. If it was, it binds him; if it was not, it does not bind him. In either view no equity can arise between them. And when the sale is valid, the reversioner is not at liberty to treat it as a mere mortgage, and to set it aside on payment of the amount which it was proved that the female in possession had been under a necessity to raise (c). In some cases the reversioner is at liberty to set aside the transaction, but only on special terms. For instance, if the heiress sold a larger portion of the estate than was necessary to raise the amount which the law authorized her to raise, the sale would not be absolutely void as against the reversioners, but they could only set it aside (if at all) upon paying the amount which the widow was authorized to raise, with interest from her death, the defendant accounting for rents and profits from the same period (d). And it is probable that even this amount of relief would not be granted, unless the circumstances were such as to affect the purchaser with notice that the sale was in excess of the legal requirements of the case (e); or unless it was shown that he had failed to make proper enquiries upon the point (f). Where the sale by the widow is justified as to part of the consideration, and not justified as to another part, the reversioner may obtain a decree that he is entitled after the death of the widow to recover the whole property sold on payment of such portion of the consideration as represents the money borrowed for a legal necessity (g).

In discharge of mortgage.

§ 654. On the other hand, where the female heiress has sold property in order to pay off a mortgage on the estate, decree is not res judicata against other reversioners, and the right of appeal does not survive on the death of the plaintiff. Chiddu v. Durga Singh, 22 All., 382; Sakyahani v. Bhavani, 27 Mad., 588.

(c) Sugeeram v. Juddoobuns, 9 Suth., 284.

(d) Phool Chund v. Raghooobuns, 9 Suth., 103; Mutteeram v. Gopaul, 11 B. L. R., 416; S. C., 20 Suth., 187.

(e) Kamikhaprasad v. Jagadamba, 5 B. L. R., 508.

(f) Lulleet v. Sreedhur, 13 Suth., 457.

(g) Gobind v. Baldeo Singh, 25 All., 330.

PARAS. 653 & 654.] IN PROPERTY INHERITED FROM MALES.

if it appears that her funds were sufficient to have enabled her to satisfy it without alienating the property, the sale will be set aside at the suit of the reversioners. But only on the terms of treating the mortgage as a subsisting debt, and giving the purchaser credit for the amount, which otherwise the heir would have had to meet (h). Here, it will be observed, the heiress might, without any breach of duty, have allowed the mortgage to continue, leaving the reversioner to pay it off or not, as he thought best. But I do not imagine the same rule would be applied, if the widow sold the estate, without any necessity, to pay off claims which she herself was bound to meet, such as her husband's debts, or the maintenance or marriages of dependent members of the family; for the result of such a course would be, to shift the burthen of these claims off her own shoulders upon those of the reversioner.

(h) Shumsool v. Shewukram, 2 I. A., 7; S. C., 14 B. L. R., 226; S. C., 22 Suth., 409; Sadashiv v. Dhakubai, 5 Bom., 450.

CHAPTER XXI.

WOMAN'S ESTATE.

*In Property not inherited from Males.*Woman's peculium.

§ 655. THIS Chapter will be devoted to a discussion of that which is generally spoken of as stridhanum, or woman's peculium, or property specially so called. But I have preferred the more general heading, so as to avoid disputes as to whether any particular species of property comes within the definitions of stridhanum or not. Such an enquiry is frequently no more than a dispute about words (a). To the historical or practical lawyer the only question of interest is, what are the incidents of any sort of property. Its name is a matter of indifference, unless so far as that name guides us in ascertaining the incidents. If the name itself has been applied to different things at different times, it is more likely to mislead than to guide (b).

Its origin and growth.

§ 656. It is evident that the recognition of any right of property in women must have been of gradual growth. In every race there has been a time when woman herself is no more than a chattel, and incapable of any property except what her owner allows her to possess, and so long as he allows it. Indications of such a state of society have already been pointed out in the Sanskrit texts (§ 73). Dr. Mayr adduces passages from the Veda to show that in early times married women pursued independent occupations, and acquired gain by them (c), but both Manu and Katyayana assert that their earnings

(a) See per Holloway, J., Kattama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tevar, 6 Mad. H. C., 340.

(b) The whole subject of Stridhanum is very elaborately discussed by Dr. Mayr (pp. 164—179). I have borrowed much from him throughout this chapter, and not merely in passages where there is a special reference to his work.

(c) Mayr, 162.

were absolutely at the disposal of the man to whom they belonged (d). The simplicity of a Hindu household would limit a woman's possessions to her own clothes and ornaments, and perhaps some domestic utensils. Her husband, if he chose, might recognize her right to these, but it would seem that in early times this right ended with his life. That is to say, as soon as he died, the dominion over her passed to others, and with it the power of appropriating her property. Vishnu says: "Those ornaments which the wives usually wear should not be divided by the heirs, whilst the husbands of such wives are alive." Messrs. West and Bühler add in a note: "But the ornaments of widows may be divided. The latter point is especially mentioned by Nanda Pandita" (e). The same text apparently is found in Manu, where it is slightly altered, so as to prohibit the husband's heirs from taking the property of a woman even after the husband's death. This is the meaning put upon it in the Mitakshara, and no doubt was a later phase of law (f). In accordance with it is the remark of Apastamba: "According to some the share of the wife consists of her ornaments, and the wealth which she may have received from her relations" (g). That is to say, an after usage sprang up of recognizing the right of the woman, by formally allotting her special property to her upon a family division. It would be a still further advance to separate her property completely from that of her husband, by making it pass after her death in a different line of descent.

Her paraphernalia.

§ 657. Infant marriage is so universal in India that a girl, even in a wealthy family, would seldom possess ornaments of any value before betrothal. For her, property would commence at her bridal, in the shape of gifts from

The bride-price.

(d) Manu, viii., § 416; Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 19. In the Punjab villages it is said that such a thing as woman's separate property seldom exists. Punjab customs, 115; Punjab Customary law, II, 80; III, 101, 159.

(e) Vishnu, xvii., § 22, as explained by his commentator Vaijayananti.

(f) Manu, ix., § 200; Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 33; Mayr, 164.

(g) Apastamba, ii., 14, § 9.

her bridegroom and her own family. Gifts of the former kind were probably the earlier in point of time. The bride-price in all its varied forms, as a bribe before marriage, or a reward immediately after it; as a payment to the parents, or a dowry for the wife, is one of the earliest elements in every marriage which has passed beyond the stage of pure capture (h). Gifts by the girl's own family pre-suppose that consent, which was only asked for when the parental dominion was recognized (§ 80). But they do not necessarily involve the idea that her right to separate property had yet arisen. Dr. Mayr suggests that, when the husband's relations began to make gifts to her, such a separate capacity for property must have been recognized, and therefore that gifts of this class are later in point of origin than the others (i). For obvious reasons gifts from strangers, or persons beyond the limit of very close relationship, would not be encouraged, and, if permitted, would pass to the husband. Similarly, any earnings made by the wife could only be made by the permission of the husband, and as a reward for services which she could otherwise be rendering in his family. They also would be his, not hers.

Early texts as to stridhanum.

§ 658. The texts in regard to stridhanum accord with the above views. The principal definition is that contained in Manu: "What was given before the nuptial fire (adhy-agni), what was given on the bridal procession, what was given in token of love (dattam priti-harmani), and what was received from a brother, a mother, or a father, are considered as the six-fold (separate) property of a (married) woman" (k). The words "a brother, a mother, or a father" appear to be given only by way of illustration, for he says in the next verse: "What she received after marriage (anvadheyam) from the family of her husband, and what her affectionate lord may have given her, shall be inherited, even if she die in his life-time, by his children" (l). Vishnu and Yajnavalkya give a similar enumeration, but both add, that which a woman receives when her husband takes another wife. Vishnu substitutes the term sulka or fee for the "gift in token of love"; and Yajnavalkya terminates his list with the mysterious adyam, or etc., which Vijnanesvara expands into, "And also property which she may have acquired by inheritance, purchase, partition, seizure, and finding" (m).

(h) Maine, Early Instit., 324; Mayr, 168, ante § 81.

(i) Mayr, 169.

(k) Manu, ix., § 194. Narada gives the same definition (xiii., § 8), substituting for "a token of love," "her husband's donation." The Daya Bhaga (iv., 1, § 7), observes that this does not include the heritage of her husband. See as to stridhanum generally Mitakshara, ii., 11; V. May., iv., 10; Smriti Chandrika, ix.; Daya Bhaga, iv., 1; D. K. S., ii., 2; Viramitrodaya, p. 220, § 1; Madhaviya, § 50; Varadrajah, 45; Vivada Chintamani, 256. The term "given before the nuptial fire," includes all gifts during the continuance of the marriage ceremonies. Bistoo v. Radha Soonder, 16 Suth., 115.

§ 659. It will be observed that these various classes of property have all these qualities in common, that they belong to a married woman, that they are given to her in her capacity of bride or wife, and that, except perhaps in the case of purely bridal gifts, they are given by her husband, or by her relations, or by his relations. Jimuta Vahana expressly limits gifts presented in the bridal procession, to such as are received from the family of either her father or mother. In this Jagannatha differs from him, being of opinion that gifts received from anyone would come within the definition, and a futwah to the same effect is recorded by Mr. W. MacNaghten (n). It is probable that in early times strangers to the family did not take part in family ceremonies. The sulka or fee is variously described, as being a special present to the bride to induce her to go cheerfully to the mansion of her lord (o), or as the gratuity for the receipt of which a girl is given in marriage (p). Varadrajah puts the latter view even more coarsely, when he describes it as, "what is stridhanum.

Essentials of

(l) Manu, ix., § 195.

(m) Vishnu, xvii., § 18; Yajnavalkya, ii., § 143, 144; Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 2. See also Katyayana, Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 5; Devala, Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 15. See ante § 610.

(n) Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 6; 3 Dig., 559; 2 W. MacN., 122.

(o) Vyasa, 3 Dig., 570; Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 21.

(p) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 6.

given to the possessors of a maiden by way of price of the sale of a maiden" (q). In the Viramitrodaya it is stated to be, "the value of household utensils and the like which is taken (by the parents) from the bridegroom, and the rest, in the shape of ornaments for the girl" (r). These various meanings probably mark the different steps by which that which was originally received by the parents for the sale of their daughter was converted into a dowry for herself (s). A still later signification was given to the word, when it was taken to denote special presents given by the husband to the wife for the discharge of extra household duties (t), or even presents given to her by strangers for the exercise of her influence with her husband or her family (u).

Maiden's
property.

Of course an unmarried woman might have property either in the shape of ornaments or other presents given to her by her affianced bridegroom, or by her own family, or property which she had inherited from others than males. The former class of property is expressly recognized as stridhanum, and goes in a peculiar course of descent (v). And in Bengal property devised by a father to his daughter before her marriage has been held to be her stridhanum, and descendible as such (w). Her property inherited will be treated of hereafter (§ 675).

Yautaka
Ayautaka.

§ 660. Before quitting this branch of the subject, it is necessary to explain two terms which are frequently used in regard to stridhanum; that is, Saudayika and Yautaka, with its negative Ayautaka. Yautaka refers exclusively to gifts received at the time of the marriage (x). Ayautaka of course is that which does not come within the term

(q) Varadrajah, 48.
(r) W. & B., 2nd ed., 500; Viramit., p. 223.
(s) Mayr, 170, ante § 81.
(t) Katyayana, 3 Dig., 563.
(u) Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 20.
(v) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 30; V. May., iv., 10, § 33.
(w) Judoonath v. Bussunt Coomar, 11 B. L. R., 286; S. C., 19 Suth., 264.
(x) Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 13-15; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 13. It is derived from the word 'yu' signifying to unite, in reference to the union by marriage. Raghunandana, x., 14; Viramit., p. 230, § 2.

yautaka. Saudayika is translated as "the gift of affectionate kindred." The author of the Smriti Chandrika limits it to wealth "received by a woman from her own parents or persons connected with them in the house of either her father or her husband, from the time of her betrothment to the completion of the ceremony to be performed on the occasion of her entering her lord's house" (y). But the same texts of Katyayana and Vyasa, upon which he places this interpretation, are explained by others as including gifts received by her from her husband, and from others after her marriage (z). The modern futwahs and decisions take the same view. Provided the gift is made by the husband, or by a relation either of the woman or of her husband, it seems to be immaterial whether it is made before marriage, at marriage, or after marriage; it is equally her saudayika (a). All savings made by a woman from her stridhanum, and all purchases made with it, of course, follow the character of the fund from which they proceeded (b). And her arrears of maintenance have also been held to be her stridhanum, under a text of Devala which speaks of her subsistence, i.e., what remains of that which is given for her food and raiment—as being her separate property (c). Whether such arrears are also saudayika is a different question. The importance of the distinction arises when her power of disposition over any particular property, and her independence of marital control, come under consideration.

§ 661. The Mitakshara, in treating of woman's property, expressly includes under that term all property lawfully

Her power of disposition.

(y) Smriti Chandrika, ix., 2, § 7.
(z) Viramitrodaya, p. 222, § 3; Madhaviya, § 50, p. 42; Varadrajah, 50; Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 21.
(a) Gosaien v. Mt. Kishenmunnee, 6 S. D., 77 (90); Doorga v. Mt. Tejoo, 5 Suth., Mis., 53; Gangadaraiya v. Parameswaramma, 5 Mad. H. C., 111; Jeewun v. Mt. Sona, 1 N.-W. P., 66; Kashee v. Gour Kishore, 10 Suth., 139; Radha v. Bishesur, 6 N.-W. P., 279; Hurrymohun v. Shonatur, 1 Cal., 275; Ramasami v. Virasami, 3 Mad. H. C., 272.
(b) Luchmun v. Kalli Churn, 19 Suth., 292 (P. C.); Venkata v. Suriya, 1 Mad., 281. See Hurst v. Mussoorie Bank, 1 All., 762.
(c) Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 15; Court of Wards v. Mohessur, 16 Suth., 76.

obtained by a woman, in its most general sense, and lays down no rules whatever as to her power of disposal of it (d). No inference of course can be drawn that she has the same power over all the species there enumerated. This is a point which Vijnanesvara has nowhere discussed. The question is minutely examined in the Smriti Chandrika, and in the Viramitrodaya, where distinctions are drawn as to a woman's power of alienating different sorts of property. Jimuta Vahana, however, follows Katyayana in limiting the term stridhanum, as used by him, to that property "which she has power to give, sell, or use independently of her husband's control" (e). But it is evident that a woman may have absolute power over her property, as regards all other persons but her husband, and yet be fettered in her disposal of it by him. Her property, therefore (taking it in its widest sense), falls under three heads: 1st, Property over which she has absolute control; 2nd, Property as to which her control is limited by her husband, but by him only; 3rd, Property which she can only deal with at all for limited purposes.

§ 662. FIRST. Saudayika of all sorts, whether movable or immovable, which has been given by relations other than the woman's own husband, and saudayika of a movable character which has been given by him, are absolutely at a woman's own disposal. She may spend, sell, devise, or give it away at her own pleasure (f). The same rule applies to land which a woman has purchased by means of such saudayika as was absolutely at her own disposal (g).

(d) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 2, 3.

(e) Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 18, 19; D. K. S., ii., 2, § 24; Raghunandana, ix., 1.

(f) Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, 21-23; D. K. S., ii., 2, § 26, 31, 32; Raghunandana, ix., 3-5; V. May., iv., 10, § 8, 9; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 2, § 1-12; Luchmun v. Kalli Churn, 19 Suth., 292; Kullammal v. Kuppu, 1 Mad. H. C., 85; 2 W. MacN., 215; Wulubhram v. Bijlee, 2 Bor., 440 [481]; Damodar v. Parmanandas, 7 Bom., 155; Mumia v. Furan, 5 All., 310; Venkata v. Suriya, 2 Mad., 333 (P. C.).

(g) Venkata v. Suriya, 2 Mad., 333. Where a married woman with stridhanum contracts, she will be assumed to have intended to satisfy her liability out of her separate property. Govindji v. Lakmidas, 4 Bom., 318; Narotam v. Nanka, 6 Bom., 473, and it makes no difference that her husband has contracted jointly with her; Nanjoondappah v. Jobbatya, 9 Mysors, 352. If she is unmarried at the time of her contract, she will be liable personally, and not merely to the extent of her stridhanum, for payment of her debt, even though she marries before it is enforced. Nahalchand v. Bai Shiva, 6 Bom., 470.

Her husband can neither control her in her dealings with it, nor use it himself. But he may take it in case of extreme distress, as in a famine, or for some indispensable duty, or during illness, or while a creditor keeps him in prison. Even then he would appear to be under at least a moral obligation to restore the value of the property when able to do so. What he has taken without necessity he is bound to repay with interest (h). This right to take the wife's property is purely a personal one in the husband. If he does not choose to avail himself of it, his creditors cannot (i).

Jagannatha states that property which a woman has inherited from a woman is also absolutely at her disposal (k). It is clear that where property given by any person to a woman would be her stridhanum, it will equally be such if devised (l). It has, however, been decided in Bengal that a woman who inherits from a woman only takes a qualified estate, which descends on the death of the taker to the heirs of the woman from whom she took, not to her own heirs. Also that, under the law of the Daya Bhaga, property so inherited is subject to the same restrictions as to power of alienation as would apply to it if it had descended from a male (m). These decisions were followed on both points by the High Court of Madras (n) and were finally reviewed and confirmed by two decisions of the Privy Council in 1903 (o).

As might have been expected the Bombay High Court

(h) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 31, 32; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 2, § 13-22; Madhaviya, § 51; V. May., iv., 10, § 10; Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 24; D. K. S., ii., 2, § 33.

(i) Viramitrodaya, p. 225, § 6; 1 Stra. H. L., 27; 2 Stra. H. L., 23; Tukoram v. Ganaji, 8 Bom. H. C. (A. C. J.), 129; Radha v. Biseshur, 6 N.-W. P., 279.

(k) 3 Dig., 629.

(l) Ramdolal v. Joymoney, 2 M. Dig., 65; per curiam, Judoonath v. Bussunt Coomar, 11 B. L. R., 295; S. C., 19 Suth., 264.

(m) D. K. S., ii., 3, § 6; 2 W. MacN., 38; Prankissen v. Mt. Bhugwatee, 1 S. D., 3 (4); Gangopadaya v. Sarbomangala, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 144; Chotay Lall v. Chumoo Lall, 14 B. L. R., p. 237; Prankissen v. Noyanmoney, 5 Cal., 222; Huri Doyal Singh v. Grishchunder, 17 Cal., 911.

(n) Sengamalathammal v. Velayuda, 3 Mad. H. C., p. 314; Venkatarama Krishna v. Bhujanga Rau, 19 Mad., 107, p. 109; Virasangappa v. Rudrappa, ibid., 110, p. 118.

(o) Sheo Shankar v. Debi Sahai, 30 I. A., 202; S. C., 25 All., 468; Sheo Pertab v. Allahabad Bank, 30 I. A., 209; S. C., 25 All., 468.

takes a different view. In a Full Bench decision in 1899 (p), the facts were as follows: The landed property of a divided brother, whose mother Amarat was still living, descended at his death to his widow who died in childbirth, leaving an infant daughter who died three days after, and who is referred to throughout the case as the nameless baby. On her death, leaving none of the relations who are named as the heirs of a maiden, the property passed to her own grandmother Amarat. The question was, whether Amarat took an absolute estate with powers of disposition. It was admitted that under the law of Bombay the baby had taken such an estate. The original Court decided that Amarat took only a widow's estate. On appeal to the High Court Candy, J., in referring the case to a Full Bench delivered a judgment which has already been discussed. (Ante § 611.) Jenkins, C. J., in delivering the judgment of all the judges except Candy, J., pointed out that it was now settled law in Western India that daughters, sisters and nieces took an absolute estate when inheriting from a male. "These analogies must regulate the general rule when it has to be applied to a female succeeding as heir to another female. The analogies of dependent widows, mothers, collateral sapindas, and daughters-in-law inheriting from male heirs should, in our opinion, be regarded in this Presidency as exceptions to the general rule of female inheritance. The principle of dependence, which perhaps governs the extent of power, may regulate the exception where widowed females inherit to males, but in all other cases the rule of absolute dominion must be allowed to prevail."

§ 663. SECONDLY. Devala mentions a woman's gains as part of the separate property, over which she has exclusive control, and which her husband cannot use except in time of distress. But it is probable that he employs the word in the sense of gifts (q). Katyayana lays down

(p) Gandi Maganlal v. Bai Jadub, 24 Bom., 192, pp. 209, 213.

(q) Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 15. See a different rendering of the same text at 3 Dig., 577, where the word "gains" is translated "wealth received by a woman that "the wealth which is earned by mechanical arts, or which is received through affection from any other (but the kindred), is always subject to the husband's control." And Jimuta Vahana adds that he has a right to take it, even though no distress exist (r). So, the Smriti Chandrika states that "women possess independent power only over saudayika, and their husband's donation, except immovables, and that their power is not independent over other sorts of property, although they may be stri-dhanum" (s). But her authority over such property is only subject to her husband's control. He may take it, but nobody else can, and apparently he can only take it by virtue of his marital authority. If he dies before her, she becomes unrestrained owner of the property, and at her death it passes to her heirs, not to those of her husband (t). And of course the rule would be the same, if the acquisitions were made by a widow (u). It has been suggested by the Madras High Court, upon the authority of a remark by Mr. Colebrooke, that even as regards landed property not derived from her husband, a married woman would be incapable of making an alienation without her husband's consent (v). There is also a text of Katyayana, which implies that the husband has a control over his own donations which are not of an immovable character, and that the woman for the first time acquires complete power of disposal after his death (w). There can be no doubt that a husband would always be able to exercise a very strong pressure upon his wife, so as to restrain her from giving away her own

In other respects absolutely hers.

(from a kinsman)." The Viramitrodaya (p. 226, § 7), explains gains as "what is received from any person who makes the present for the purpose of pleasing a goddess."

(r) Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 19, 20; D. K. S., ii., 2, § 25, 28, 29; Raghunandana, ix., 1; V. May., iv., 10, § 7; Ramdolal v. Joymoney, 2 M. Dig., 65.

(s) Smriti Chandrika, ix., 2, § 12.

(t) Per Jagannatha, 3 Dig., 628; Madavarayya v. Tirtha Sami, 1 Mad., 307; Salemma v. Lutchmana Reddi, 21 Mad., 100.

(u) 2 W. MacN., 239. See case of a grant made by Government to a widow, Brij Indar v. Janki, 5 I. A., 1; S. C., 1 C. L. R., 318.

(v) Dantuluri v. Mallapudi, 2 Mad. H. C., 360.

(w) Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 8, 9; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 1, § 14, 15; ix., 2, § 3, 4. See too Narada, cited Daya Bhaga, iv., 1, § 23; Viramitrodaya, p. 224, § 5.

private property, just as an English husband would do, if his wife proposed to sell her diamonds. But the texts referred to seem not to convey any more than a moral precept, while those already cited, which assert her absolute power, are express and unqualified.

Restricted property.

§ 664. THIRDLY. Immovable property, when given or devised by a husband to his wife, is never at her disposal, even after his death. It is her stridhanum so far that it passes to her heirs, not to his heirs. But as regards her power of alienation, she appears to be under the same restrictions as those which apply to property which she has inherited from a male even though the gift is made in terms which create a heritable estate (x). It is different if the gift or devise is coupled with an express power of alienation (y).

Succession to maiden's property.

§ 665. The succession to woman's property is a matter of much intricacy, as the lines of succession vary, according as the woman was married or unmarried, according as her marriage was in an approved or an unapproved form, and according to the mode in which the property was obtained. There are also differences between the doctrines of the Benares and the Bengal lawyers on this head. Little is to be found in the Hindu writers in regard to the property of a maiden. So long as she remained in her father's house, the only property she would be likely to possess would be her clothes and her ornaments. If already betrothed, she might also have received gifts in contemplation of marriage from her own family, or from the bridegroom. In some rare cases she might also have inherited property from a female relation. The only text upon the subject is

(x) See authorities cited, ante § 662, note (h); Viramitrodaya, p. 224, § 5; 2 W. MacN., 35; Gangadaraia v. Parameswaramma, 5 Mad. H. C., 111; Kotabasapa v. Chanverova, 10 Bom. H. C., 403; Rudr v. Itup Kuar, 1 All., 734; Surajmani v. Rabi Nath, 25 All., 351; Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma, 7 Mad., 357.

(y) Jeewun v. Mt. Sona, 1 N.-W. P., 66; Koonjbehari v. Premchand, 5 Cal., 684; S. C., 5 C. L. R., 684; Prosonno Coomar v. Tarrucknath, 10 B. L. R., 267; Janki v. Bhairon, 19 All., 133; Kanha v. Mahinlal, 10 All., 495. See ante § 631. The case of Seth Mulchand v. BaiMancha, 7 Bom., 491, so far as it goes beyond the statement in the text has been doubted by the Madras High Court, 7 Mad., p. 389.

one which is variously ascribed to Baudhayana and to Narada, but which cannot be found in the existing works of either writer. "Of an unmarried woman deceased the brothers of the whole blood shall take the inheritance; on failure of them it shall go to the mother, or if she be not living, to the father" (z). The Mitakshara explains this by saying, "The uterine brothers shall have the ornaments for the head and other gifts which may have been presented to the maiden by her maternal grandfather, or other relations, as well as the property which may have been regularly inherited by her" (a). The latter remark clearly applies to property not inherited from a male, as her father is spoken of as still alive. The result, of course, is that her property is kept in her own family. In default of parents the property goes to their nearest relations (b). All presents which may have been received from the bridegroom are to be returned to him, after deducting the expenses already incurred on both sides (c).

§ 666. Property possessed by a married woman would go in different lines of succession according to its nature and origin. Her bridal gifts, being articles of specially feminine ornament or use, would naturally pass to her own daughters. And as any of her daughters who had married would probably have received a suitable provision when they left their father's home, where there were daughters both married and unmarried, the latter would be the preferable heirs. So among the married, those who were most in need would have the preference (d). Her dowry (Sulka) had in early times belonged to her parents, and not to herself. It would return to her father's family, instead of passing into the family of Property of a married woman.

(z) Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 7; D. K. S., ii., 1, § 1.

(a) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 30; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 35; Madhaviya, § 50; V. May., iv., 10, § 34.

(b) Viramitrodaya, p. 241; Nanji v. Kaliani, 12 Mysore, 64; Gandhi Maganlal v. Bai Jadub, 24 Bom., 192, ante § 662.

(c) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 146; Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 29, 30; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 34; V. May., iv., 10, § 33; D. K. S., ii., 1, § 2; Mayr, 178.

(d) Mayr, 178.

her husband (§ 81). When that separation of interest between herself and her husband arose, which admitted of her acquiring independent property after her marriage, the property so acquired might be of a more general and important character than that obtained at her bridal. No reason would exist for making it pass exclusively to daughters, and sons would be allowed to share as well as daughters (e). Hence a separate line of succession would arise for what are called "gifts subsequent," and the husband's donation.

§ 667. FIRST. The earliest rule as to the devolution of sulka is to be found in a text of Gautama, which has been variously translated. Dr. Bühler renders it: "The sister's fee belongs to her uterine brothers, if her mother be dead. Some say (that it belongs to them even) whilst the mother lives" (f). This text in the Daya Bhaga is translated: "The sister's fee belongs to the uterine brothers; after them it goes to the mother and next to the father. Some say before her." This Jimuta Vahana explains by saying that according to some the father takes before the mother, and both after the uterine brothers (g). The explanation of Balambhatta, which Dr. Mayr prefers, is that the word mother in this verse refers to the same person who is spoken of in the preceding verse of Gautama, where her other property is said to go to her daughters; that is to say, that it refers to the woman who has received the sulka, not to the mother of that woman. Accordingly Dr. Mayr translates it: "After the death of the mother, her fee passes to her uterine brothers; some think that the sister's fee belongs to them even during her life." If this translation is correct, it would mark two stages of law in regard to the sulka. First when it was considered to be the property of the bride's father, as the price paid to him for her, and accordingly passed to his sons, even during her life. Secondly, when it became the property of the girl at once, as her dowry, but on her death passed in the same manner as it had formerly done to her father's heirs (h). However this may have been in early times, it is quite clear that the writers of the Benares ^{Benares.} school treat the sulka as an exception to the rule that a woman's property goes to her daughters, and make it pass at once to the brothers, and in default of them to the mother (i). Yajnavalkya, however, classes the sulka with gifts from her kindred, and gifts subsequent, which only go to the brothers if the sister has died without issue. Accordingly the Bengal authorities treat the text of Bengal. Gautama, not as an exception to the general rule, but only as explaining how this species of property devolves in the absence of nearer heirs (k). Its succession, as understood by them, will be treated under the third head (§ 672).

(e) Mayr, 174.

(g) Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 27, 28.

(f) Gautama, xxviii., § 25, 26.

§ 668. SECONDLY. Yautaka, or property given at the ^{Devolution of} yautaka. nuptials, always passes first to the woman's daughters or other issue, if she has any. Little is to be found on the subject in the early writers. Baudhayana says: "The daughters shall inherit (of) the mother's ornaments as many as (are worn) according to the custom of the caste" (l). Vasishtha says: "Let the daughters share the nuptial gifts of their mother" (m). The word here used for nuptial gifts, 'parimayyam,' is the same which is used by Manu (IX, § 11), where he says that a wife should be engaged in the superintendence of household utensils (n). It apparently refers to articles of domestic use given to a girl on her marriage, like the clocks, teapots, and table ornaments which an English bride receives to adorn her new home. So, among the Kandhs, the personal ornaments and household furniture go to the daughters and not to the (h) Mayr, 170.

(i) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 14; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 33; Viramitrodaya, p. 242, § 12; Vivada Chintamani, 270; V. Mayr, iv., 10, § 32; Madhaviya, § 80, p. 45; Varadrajah, 48.

(k) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 145; Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 10—30; D. K. S., ii., 3, § 15—18; Judoonath v. Bussunt Coomar, 11 B. L. R., 286, 297; S. C., 19 Suth., 264.

(l) Baudhayana, ii., 2, § 27.

(m) Vasishtha, xvii., § 24.

(n) Mayr, 166; Vivada Chintamani, 268.

Yautaka.

sons (o). Gautama adds a further distinction: "A woman's separate property (stridhanum) belongs (in the first instance) to her unmarried daughters (and on failure of them) to those daughters who are poor" (p). None of these authors suggest different lines of descent for the property referred to. This, for the first time, appears in Manu. He says, "Property given to the mother on her marriage (yautaka) is inherited by her (unmarried) daughter" (q). In a later passage he says generally, "On the death of the mother let all the uterine brothers and the uterine sisters (if unmarried) equally divide the maternal estate." This necessarily refers to property different from the yautaka which had been stated to go exclusively to the daughters. Then, after describing the six-fold property of a woman (§ 658), he goes on, "What she received after marriage (anvadeya) from the family of her husband, and what her affectionate lord may have given her, shall be inherited, even if she die in his lifetime, by her children" (r). This seems to be the origin of the different lines of succession, which are here treated of under the second and third heads.

Rule of descent.

§ 669. The authors of the Smriti Chandrika and the Viramitrodaya appear to take the first text of Manu literally, as allowing none of a woman's issue except her unmarried daughters to take her yautaka. In default of such daughters, they make it pass at once to the husband, or to the parents, according as the marriage was of an approved or an unapproved form (s). But this narrow interpretation is not followed by either the Benares or the Bengal school. The rule of descent laid down by Yajnavalkya is as follows: "The stridhanum of a wife dying without issue, who has been married in one of the four

(o) 2 Hunter's Orissa, 79.

(p) Gautama, xxviii., § 21.

(q) Manu, ix., § 131; Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 13.

(r) Manu, ix., § 192, 195; Mayr, 174; Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb, 9 Bom., 115. Additions made subsequent to her marriage to ornaments given by a father to his daughter at the time of her marriage must be treated for the purpose of succession as gifts subsequent and not as nuptial gifts. Gopal Chandra v. Ram Chandra, 28 Cal., 311.

(s) Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 12, 15; Viramitrodaya, p. 230, § 2; 235, § 6; 236, § 7.

forms of marriage designated Brahma, etc., (§ 79), belongs to the husband; if she have issue, then the stridhanum goes to her daughters; should she have been married in another form, then her stridhanum goes to her parents" (t). This rather vague rule is expanded by the Mitakshara. "Hence, if the mother be dead, daughters take her property in the first instance; and here, in the case of competition between married and maiden daughters, the unmarried take the succession; but on failure of them, the married daughters; and here again, in the case of competition between such as are provided and those who are unendowed, the unendowed take the succession first; but, on failure of them, those who are endowed" (u). Next to daughters come granddaughters, and then sons of daughters, sons, and grandsons, those in the second generation always taking per stirpes (v). Step-children are not recognized by the Mitakshara as entitled, except in the single case, which has now become impossible, where the woman who has left the property was a wife of an inferior class, while the children who claim it are by a wife of a higher class (w). The Smriti Chandrika, however, allows the step-children to come in if there are no other heirs, such as progeny, husband or the like (x). In default of all these, if the marriage was in an approved form, the property passes to the husband, and after him, according to Vijnanesvara, to his nearest sapindas (y). According to the Mayukha, to those relations who are nearest to him through her in his own family. If the

(t) Yajnavalkya, ii., § 145.

(u) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 13; V. Mayr, iv., 10, § 17, 18; Jagannath Prasad v. Runjit Singh, 25 Cal., 354.

(v) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 9, 12, 15—19, 24; V. Mayr, iv., 10, § 20—23. Sons wholly exclude grandsons whose father is dead. Raghunandana v. Gopeenath, 2 W. MacN., 121, post § 674. Where the stridhanum of the mother devolves upon her sons, who with their father from an undivided family at her death, they take it as tenants in common without survivorship, and not as joint tenants. Karuppai v. Sankaranarayanan, 27 Mad., 300, distinguishing Venkayamma v. Venkataramanayamma, 29 I. A., 156; S. C., 25 Mad., 678.

(w) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 22; V. Mayr, iv., 10, § 19. The text of Manu, on which this rule is based, is explained differently in Bengal. Post § 673.

(x) Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 38. Brahmapa v. Papanna, 13 Mad., 348.

(y) This has been held to be the Mithila law also. Bachha Jha v. Jugmon Jha, 12 Cal., 348. See as to the persons who rank as the sapindas of the husband under Mitakshara law. Gajabai v. Shrimant Shahajirao, 17 Bom., 114.

Descent of yautaka by Benares law.

marriage was in an unapproved form it passes to her parents, the mother taking before the father (z). Vijnanesvara traces the line of descent no further. But other writers of the same school cite a text of Vrihaspati, in accordance with which "On failure of the husband of a deceased woman, if married according to the Brahma or other (four) forms; or of her parents, if married according to the Asura or other two forms, the heirs to a woman's property are "the mother's sister, the maternal uncle's wife; the paternal uncle's wife, the father's sister; the mother-in-law, and the wife of an elder brother are pronounced similar to mothers. If they have no son born in lawful wedlock, nor daughter's son, nor his son, then the sister's son and the rest shall take their property." Here must be understood 'on failure both of the daughter and also of her daughter,' because only on failure of them does the right of inheritance pertain to the son born in wedlock, or to the daughter's son" (a).

Precisely the above order is laid down by the Smriti Chandrika and the Viramitrodaya in respect of all the mother's property, which is not yautaka, or received after marriage or from the husband; that is, which does not come under the two texts of Manu already cited (b).

§ 670. The order of succession to Yautaka, according to the Bengal authorities is similar, but not exactly the same. "It goes first to the unaffianced daughters; if there be none such, it devolves on those who are betrothed. In their default it passes to the married daughters" (c).

(z) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 11; V. May., iv., § 28. According to the Smriti Chandrika, property given to a woman at the time of a disapproved marriage reverts to the donors; ix., 3, § 31, 32.

(a) V. May., iv., 10, § 30; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 36, 37; Viramitrodaya, p. 243. See as to the meaning of this text, Venkata Subramaniam v. Thayar Annal, 21 Mad., p. 267; in Mithila, but not elsewhere, the son of a woman's half-sister is her heir. Sreenarain v. Bhya Jah, 2 S. D., 23 (29, 35). The husband's kinsmen take before the father's kinsmen, e.g., the husband's brother's son before the sister's son, Bachha Jha v. Jugmon, 12 Cal., 348. The husband's sister's sons are preferential heirs to the husband's paternal great-grandfather's great-grandsons. Mohun Pershad v. Kishen Kishore, 21 Cal., 344.

(b) Manu, ix., § 131, 195; Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3; § 16—30, 36—41; Viramitrodaya, p. 231, et seq.

(c) Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 13, 22, 23, 26; Raghunaudana, x., 12—15, 17—20.

Jimuta Vahana does not notice barren or widowed daughters, but the Daya-krahma-sangraha states that they succeed in default of married daughters who have, or who are likely to have, male issue. Srikrishna also says that these daughters take one after the other, as distinct classes, and not merely in default of each other. For instance, that on the death of a daughter who had taken as affianced or married, but who has died without a son, the estate will pass to the next daughter who is capable of taking, and not to the husband of the one who had already succeeded. "For the right of the husband is relative to the 'woman's separate property,' and wealth which has in this way passed from one to another can no longer be considered as the 'woman's separate property'" (d). The Bengal writers also differ from those of the Benares school in excluding granddaughters altogether, and bringing in the son before the daughter's son, and the grandson and great-grandson in the male line next after the daughter's son (e). They also differ in introducing step-sons, as far as the great-grandchildren, next after the great-grandsons of the woman herself. This appears to be upon the authority of a text of Manu, which declares that if one of several wives of a man brings forth a male child, they are all by means of that son mothers of male issue (f). In default of all these the husband or the parents succeed, according to the form of marriage. But the husband's sapindas do not appear to take as in the Mitakshara. In default of him, the succession passes at once to the brother, mother, or father of the deceased woman (g). On the other hand, where the marriage is of a disapproved form, the inheritance passes to the mother, father, and brother, each in default of the other, and if none of them exist, then to the husband (h).

(d) D. K. S., ii., 3, § 5, 6. See post § 675.

(e) Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 17—21; D. K. S., ii., 3, § 8—10. The son of the daughter's son never succeeds. Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 24; D. K. S., ii., 6, § 2.

(f) Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 32; D. K. S., ii., 3, § 11—13.

(g) D. K. S., ii., 3, § 14—17; Bistoo v. Radha Soondr, 16 Suth., 115.

(h) D. K. S., ii., 3, § 19—21.

Last of all come in the ulterior heirs under the text of Vrihaspati. But they do not take in the order there stated. They are arranged upon the Bengal principle of religious benefits, as follows: husband's younger brother, husband's brother's son, sister's son (i), son of husband's sister, brother's son, daughter's husband, father-in-law and husband's elder brother, and the other sapindas, according to their nearness of kin. In default of all these, sakulyas, learned Brahmans, and the King (k).

Devolution of
ayautaka.

§ 671. THIRDLY. The succession to that property belonging to a married woman which is neither her sulka nor her yautaka is a matter upon which there is much variance. The texts of Manu, which state that her property shall be shared equally by her sons and daughters, and that gifts received by her after marriage from her husband and his family shall go to her children generally, have been already cited (§ 668). Other writers say with equal distinctness, that her property shall be shared equally by sons and unmarried daughters (l). Vijnanesvara only recognizes one line of descent for the whole of a married woman's property, except her sulka, viz., that already given for her yautaka (§ 669). He explains the text of Manu, not as meaning that brothers and sisters take together, but that the sisters take first and the brothers afterwards, each class sharing equally inter se; that is, he brings it in as an illustration of the rule previously stated as to the succession of daughters before sons, and not as an exception to it. And the same view is apparently taken by the Madhaviya (m). But the Smriti Chandrika, Viramitrodaya, Vivada Chintamani, Mayukha, and Varadrajah all take these texts literally, as prescribing

Mitakshara.

Benares law.

(i) These words are held to include a step-sister's son. Dasharathi v. Bepin Behari, 32 Cal., 261.

(k) Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 31, 35—37; D. K. S., ii., 6; Raghunandana, x., 23—26, 30—39. It is impossible to see upon what principle the husband's father and elder brother come in last of those specially named.

(l) Devala, Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 6; Sancha and Lichita, 3 Dig., 588; Vrihaspati, ib.

(m) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 19—21. See Viramitrodaya, p. 232, § 5; Madhaviya, § 50, p. 43.

a different course of descent for the two sorts of stridhanum there specified, viz., gifts subsequent to marriage, received either from the woman's own family or the family of her husband, and gifts received from her husband. These are shared simultaneously and equally by the woman's sons and daughters being unmarried. Those who are married, and granddaughters, only receive a trifle as a mark of respect, and widows are wholly excluded. But if there are no unmarried daughters, married daughters, whose husbands are living, are also allowed by Katyayana to share with their own brothers (n). According to the Mayukha ^{Mayukha.} it has been held that property received by a married woman from a stranger and her own earnings pass to the person who would be her heir if she were a male (o). This decision however has been controverted in an elaborate judgment by Telang, J., cited in a previous chapter (p). The writers of the Benares school do not trace the line of descent any further, nor suggest how the property is to go in default of the heirs above named.

§ 672. The Bengal writers also interpret the above texts ^{Bengal law.} literally, and take them as applying to all property except the yautaka, and that given by the father of the woman (q). The order of succession as laid down by them is as follows: first, son and maiden daughter take together (r), and in default of either the other takes the whole; on failure of both, the estate passes to the married daughter who has, or who may have male issue, then to the son's son, the daughter's son, and the son's grandson successively; and in default of all these, to the male issue of the rival wife, and lastly to barren and widowed daughters (s). The further

(n) Smriti Chandrika, ix., 3, § 1—11; Viramitrodaya, p. 228, § 1; V. May., iv., 10, § 15, 16; Varadrajah, 47; Vivada Chintamani, 266; Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb, 9 Bom., 115.

(o) Bai Narmada v. Bhagwantrao, 12 Bom., 505.

(p) Manilal Rewadut v. Bai Rewa, 17 Bom., 758, ante § 621.

(q) Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 1—9; Raghunandana, x., 1—10.

(r) The word maiden means unbetrothed; Gangopadhyaya v. Surbamangala, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. J.), 144; S. C., 10 Suth., 488.

(s) Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 9—12; D. K. S., ii., 4, § 1—10.

descent depends on the source from which the property was derived. If it comes within the text of Yajnavalkya—"that which has been given to her by her kindred, as well as her fee or gratuity, and anything bestowed after marriage, her kinsmen take if she die without issue,"—then the order of succession is first to the whole brothers; if there be none, to the mother; if she be dead, to the father; and, on failure of all these, to the husband, and the ulterior heirs as already described (t). But in this text the words, "given to her by her kindred," signify that which was given to her by her parents in her maiden state, and the word "fee," does not include "a gratuity presented to damsels at marriages, called asura, and the rest" (u). If, on the other hand, the property being ayautaka does not come within the terms of the above text, then it devolves in exactly the same manner as the yautaka of a married woman who has left no issue (v).

Devolution of
ayautaka.

Property given by the father.

§ 673. The text of Manu (IX, § 198), "The wealth of a woman, which has been in any manner given to her by her father, let the Brahmani damsel take; or let it belong to her offspring," is explained by the Mitakshara as authorising step-children of a wife of superior class to inherit (w). The Bengal writers treat the word Brahmani as merely illustrative, and explain the texts as establishing an exception to the rule laid down in the last paragraph. According to them, property given by a father to his daughter at any time is never shared by her sons, but goes to her daughters exclusively; the maiden taking first, then the married daughter who has, or is likely to have male issue, and lastly the barren or widowed daughters. After all these come their sons (x). The succession then proceeds, as in the case of yautaka, down to the great-grandson of the co-wife, after which it goes to the brother, (t) Daya Bhaga, ii., 3, § 10, 29–31, ante § 670; Judoonath v. Bussunt Coomar, 11 B. L. R., 226; S. C., 19 Suth., 264; Hurrymohun v. Shonatan, 1 Cal., 275.

(u) Daya Bhaga, iv., 3, § 15, 23.

(v) D. K. S., ii., 4, § 11, ante § 670.

(w) Mitakshara, ii., 11, § 22.

(x) Daya Bhaga, iv., 2, § 16; D. K. S., ii., 5; Raghunaudana, x., 11, 16.

mother, father, and husband, under the text of Yajnavalkya already cited (y). Daughters are not bound to pay the debts of their mother if she leaves no property (z). Their obligation to pay her debts if she died possessed of property would apparently turn on the question whether she had an absolute or only a life interest. See § 634.

§ 674. Until very lately the line of descent from a woman who has inherited the stridhanum of another woman has been a matter of argument. It has now, however, (1903) been settled by the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Sheoshankar Lal v. Debi Sahai (a). The mode in which the case arose will be made clearer by the annexed pedigree.

Bhawani dies 1851
M. Dilla dies 1895
Jadonath dies 1879
Jagernath dies 1896

Two sons,
the plaintiffs

Two daughters

In 1866 certain property was assigned by way of gift to Bhawani's daughter Jadonath. By family arrangement eleven villages, parts of those assigned, were left in possession of Dilla as maintenance for her life. Admittedly all the rights of Jadonath passed at her death to her daughter Jagernath. On the death of Dilla, her brother Debi Sahai took possession of the eleven villages. On the death of Jagernath her sons sued Debi Sahai to recover the villages. Numerous defences, which were all found in favour of the plaintiffs, were set up, but the case ultimately turned upon the plea that the plaintiffs had no right to sue as the estate of Jagernath would pass to her daughters and not to her sons. This again turned (y) Judoonath v. Bussunt Coomar, 11 B. L. R., 236, 300; S. C., 19 Suth., 264; fold. Gopal Chandra v. Ram Chandra, 23 Cal., 311.

(z) Visvarupa, § 4.

(a) 30 I. A., 202; S. C., 25 All., 468, reversing Debi Sahai v. Sheo Shankar, 22 All., 353.

Property inherited from a female.

upon the question, whether Jagernath held the estate of her mother as her own stridhanum. The Original Court found that it was not her stridhanum and therefore that it devolved upon her sons. The High Court of Allahabad found that it was her stridhanum and therefore it devolved upon her daughters. This decision was reversed on appeal to the Privy Council. Their Lordships, after an exhaustive examination of all the authorities, held that it was the settled law of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras, that what a woman has inherited from a woman is not stridhan for the purposes of inheritance. They considered that the same rule must be applied in districts governed, as Allahabad is, by Benares law. "Their Lordships are therefore unable to agree with the High Court in thinking that the property now in question was the stridhan of Jagernath devolving as such upon the plaintiffs' married sister in preference to them. And this is sufficient to dispose of the present case." In the case of Sheo Pertab v. The Allahabad Bank (b) decided on the same day, their Lordships affirmed the further doctrine, that stridhan which descended to a woman was held by her for a limited estate only, and on her death reverted to the heirs of the woman who had held it as stridhan (c).

§ 675. It will be observed that it was assumed by both the Indian Courts in Sheo Shankar's case, that if Jagernath held the estate as her stridhan it would descend in the female line, and the Judicial Committee considered that their finding that she did not hold it as stridhan was sufficient to dispose of the case. But the very cases which established that she did not hold as stridhan also established to the satisfaction of the Committee that the estate reverted to the heirs of Jadonath. Now although in Jadonath's hands the estate was not stridhan of the special kind described by the earliest writers, it was certainly stridhan of the secondary kind, in the sense that it was absolutely at her disposal, and that it passed to her heirs. Now if those heirs were those who would take the technical sort of stridhan, it would pass to Jagernath, and, in default of her, to the daughters of Jagernath in preference to her sons. This was equally fatal to the appellant's case. The difficulty was pointed out by the Counsel who argued the appeal, which was heard ex parte. It was met by him by a contention that the line of female descent stated in the early books only applied to the special sort of stridhan described by them. That, with the exception of the Mitakshara and the commentaries which avowedly followed it, the writers who gave only the special female line of descent mentioned no other sort of stridhan except the earliest sort (d). That the works, such as the Daya Bhaga, the Daya-kramasangraha, the Smriti Chandrika, and the Mayukha, which enumerated various sorts of woman's property, assigned the special line to the special species, and gave different lines to the other sorts (e). Admittedly no definite rule could be derived from these works, but they showed a general tendency in such cases to admit male heirs, either along with, or in preference to, females. The only cases which had been decided upon this subject came from Bombay, and in these West, J., and Telang, J., while differing upon the rule to be laid down, had agreed in each laying down a rule which preferred males to females (f).

(b) 30 I. A., 209; S. C., 25 All., 476.

(c) See as to all the earlier authorities upon these points, ante § 662.

It may be presumed that this argument was accepted by their Lordships, but it is to be regretted that neither the difficulty nor its solution was noticed in the judgment (g).

In Madras an exception is made in regard to property inherited by a maiden. She is held to take an absolute (d) Vivad. Chint., 256—269; Varad., 43; Madhav., 40.

(e) D. Bh., ch. iv., sect. 2; D. K. S., ii., 3, 4; Sm. Ch., ix., 3; V. May., iv., 10.

(f) Vijiarangam v. Lakshuman, 8 Bom. H. C. (O. C. J.), 244; Bai Narmada v. Bhagwantrao, 12 Bom., 505; Manilal Rewadat v. Bai Rewa, 17 Bom., 758, all of which were cited in the judgment of the Privy Council with apparent approval.

(g) In the recent case of Subramaniam v. Arunachalam, 25 M. d., 1, p. 9, the Court did not understand the line which had been taken in the argument before the Privy Council, nor indeed could they have understood it, as it was not noticed in the judgment, and could not be discovered from the report.

estate, which passes at her death to her own heirs in the manner laid down in Mit., II, 11, § 30 (h).

§ 676. Chastity has been held not to be an essential, where a female claims as heir to the property of a woman (i). I know of no native authority on the point. On the other hand want of chastity, causing a woman to become degraded and outcaste, has been held to sever the tie of kindred between herself and her own natural family, and a fortiori between herself and her husband's family, so that if she dies leaving property acquired by her while degraded and outcaste, none but those who had fallen into a similar position could claim to be her heirs (k). If this principle is sound, the converse of the proposition ought equally to apply, if a degraded female was claiming as heir to one who was undegraded.

(h) Venkatarama Krishna Rau v. Bhujanga, 19 Mad., 107; explaining Narasayya v. Venkayya, 2 Mad. L. J., 149; Gandi Maganlal v. Bai Jadub, 24 Bom., 192.

(i) Gangav. Ghasita, 1 All., 46; Nogendra v. Benoy, 30 Cal., 521; Angammal v. Venkata Reddy, 26 Mad., 509; Adyapa v. Rudrava, 4 Bom., 104, p. 122.

(k) Goods of Kaminey Money Bewah, 21 Cal., 697.

Want of chastity.

INDEX.

* * * The references throughout are to pages.

The sections of the Acts referred to are printed in italic figures, the pages in roman figures.

ABEYANCE, succession never remains in, 496, 571, 677, 721, 813.

ABSOLUTE ESTATE,

what words create an, 521
in leases, 523
wills 574

grants for maintenance, 524 to females, 522, 525
for religious purposes, 529, 582, 585 services, 529

ACCOUNT,

right of member of joint family to demand, 369, 373—379 mode of taking on partition, 635

ACCUMULATION, trusts for, when unlawful, 568

See SAVINGS; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 5

ACQUIESCENCE,

merely passive does not bar rights, 207
when it operates as an estoppel, 208

ACTS

V of 1843, (Abolition of Slavery), 745
XI of 1843, (Hereditary Officers), 634 note
I of 1845, (Bengal Revenue Sale), 21; 592
XXI of 1850, (Freedom of Religion), 137, 562, 603, 654, 804
XXVI of 1854, (Bengal—Court of Wards—Education), 274
XXI of 1855, (Madras—Minors), 274
XV of 1856, (Hindu Widow Marriage), 112, 755—758, 771
XXV of 1857, (Native Army forfeiture for Mutiny), 443
XIV of 1858, (Madras—Minors), 274
XXXV of 1858, (Lunacy), 74; 140, 285
XL of 1858, (Bengal—Minors), 7, 12; 272, 291; 18; 456
VIII of 1859, (Old Civil Procedure), 260; 592

ACTS—continued.

- X of 1859, (Bengal—Rent Law), 853
 XI of 1859, (Bengal—Zemindary Revenue Sale), 36; 592
 XIV of 1859, (Old Limitation), 210, 875
 XLV of 1860, (Penal Code), 361, 363; 277; 372, 373; 63
 II of 1863, (Bombay Enamlands), 6; 140
 XX of 1863, (Native Religious Endowment), 14; 524
 XI of 1864, (Hindu and Mahomedan Law Officers), 44
 XVI of 1864, (Registration), 518
 XX of 1864, (Bombay—Minors), 274
 X of 1865, (Succession), 576; 46; 542; 99; 577; 102; 103, 104
 506; 111; 559, 560; 179, 187; 578
 VII of 1866, (Bombay—Hindu's liability for ancestor's debts), 391
 XX of 1866, (Registration), 515, 518
 XXI of 1866, (Native Converts Marriage Dissolution), 27, 28; 281
 I of 1869, (Oudh Estates), 358, 556, 577
 VIII of 1869, (Bengal Landlord and Tenant), 853
 IV of 1870, (Bengal Act, Court of Wards), 74; 140, 106
 XXI of 1870, (Hindu Wills), 2; 542, 554, 576; 3; 103, 542, 577
 VIII of 1871, (Registration), 515, 518
 IX of 1871, (Limitation), Sched. II, Art. 129; 210
 XXIII of 1871, (Pensions), 634 note
 XXXIII of 1871, (Punjab Land Revenue), 49
 I of 1872, (Evidence), 101, 104; 239; 115; 108, 289
 IX of 1872, (Contract), 2, 10, 11; 283; 25; 434
 III of 1873, (Madras Civil Courts), 48
 XIII of 1872, (European British Minors), 274
 IX of 1875, (Majority), 111, 272, 277
 XVII of 1875, (Burma Courts), 48
 XX of 1875, (Central Provinces Laws), 48
 XVII of 1876, (Oudh Land Revenue), 49
 XVIII of 1876, (Oudh Laws), 48
 I of 1877, (Specific Relief), 27; 518; 42; 874
 III of 1877, (Registration Act now in force), 48; 521; 49;
 518; 50; 518, 520
 X of 1877, (Old Civil Procedure), 317; 592; 539; 587
 XV of 1877, (Limitation), 19; 285; Sched. II, Art. 12; 291;
 118, 211, 212; 126, 484; 140, 141, 212
 XII of 1878, (Further Amendment of Punjab Laws Act, 1872),
 1; 48; 2; 307
 IX of 1879, (B.C.), 61; 138
 V of 1881, (Probate and Administration), 4; 142; 90; 456, 841;
 149; 542, 578; 154; 576
 II of 1882, (Trusts), 81, 82; 589
 IV of 1882, (Transfer of Property), 2; 503; 3; 519; 8; 522; 9;
 521; 10, 12; 496; 15; 503; 18, 25, 27; 456; 39;
 624, 44; 475; 45; 348; 48; 511; 54; 534; 59;
 535; 107; 535; 122; 500, 536; 123; 535; 128;
 426; 129; 500, 536
 XIV of 1882, (New Civil Procedure Code), 278, 283; 422; 317;
 592; 462; 289; 539; 534, 587
 VIII of 1890, (Guardian), 7, 8; 273; 29; 284
 IV of 1896, (Madras, Malabar Marriages), 127
 V of 1898, (Criminal Procedure), 488; 603 II of 1902, II of 1903, II of 1904, (Madras Impartible Zemindaries), 435

ADOPTION,

1. not of exclusively Aryan or Brahmanical origin, 8, 132 secular and religious motives distinct, ib.
 of females, 132, 134 different sorts of adopted sons, 81 cause of their diminution, 131
 early texts, 135
 "the reflection of son": its meaning and origin, 131
2. who may adopt; only one who has no issue, 136 concurrent or successive adoptions, ib., 137 simultaneous adoptions, ib.
 widower or bachelor, ib.
 disqualified heir, 138 widow under pollution, 139 convert from Hinduism, 140
 minor, Court of Wards Acts, ib.
 assent of wife unnecessary, 142 wife requires assent of husband, ib.
 can only adopt to him, ib.
3. by widow after death of husband, not allowed in Mithila, 142 assent of husband required in Bengal and Benares, 143 may be supplied by assent of sapinda in Southern India, ib.
 larger power of widow in Western India, ib.
 form of authority, 144
 must be strictly pursued, ib.
 when incapable of execution, 146—150 ineffectual till acted upon, 153 when a minor, or unchaste, 150, 151 case of several widows, 151, 247 no other relation can adopt to deceased, 152 her discretion absolute, ib.
 may be exercised at any time, 154 whether she can bind herself not to adopt, 153
4. want of authority supplied in Southern India by assent of sapindas, 154 similar rule in Punjab, 157, 168
 whose consent necessary and sufficient, 155—161 must be an exercise of discretion, 161 must not be corruptly given, 163, 165 may authorize, where son has died, 163 whether any religious motive in widow or sapindas is required? 162—165
 widow's power in Western India, 166, 247, 251, 253
 among Jains, 143, 168
5. who may give in adoption; only parents, 169, 170 authority cannot be delegated, 170 necessity for assent of wife, 169 orphan cannot be adopted, 171 condition precedent to adoption, ib.
 consent of Court of Wards or Government, ib.
6. who may be taken; no restriction as to relationship, 172 must be a person whose mother might have been married by adopter, ib.
 sister's or daughter's son excluded, 173 rule does not apply to Sudras, or in Punjab, Western India, or among Jains, or in Pondicherry, 175, 176

ADOPTION—continued.

- supposed extension of rule to adoption by a widow, 176 must be of same caste, 177
7. not a disqualified person, 178 limitation from age and previous performance of ceremonies, 179—183 rule does not apply in Punjab, Western India, or among Jains, 183 conflict as to admissibility of only son, 184—193 may be taken as dvyamushyayana, 185 eldest, or one of two admissible, ib.
decision of Judicial Committee, 188
 8. two persons cannot adopt same boy, 193
 9. necessary ceremonies; notice immaterial, 193, 194 giving and receiving essential, 194 no religious ceremony necessary for Sudras, 195 none required in Punjab or among Jains, 200 conflict as to necessity for datta homam among higher classes, 194—199 intentional omission of ceremonies, 199 will or exchange of deeds insufficient, 200 application of doctrine factum valet, 200—203
 10. evidence of adoption; writing not required, 203 presumption for or against, ib.
effect of res judicata, 204
lapse of time, 206
acquiescence, 207
estoppel, ib.
effect of express assent amounting to authority, 251—256 statute of limitations, 209—214
 11. results, change of family, 214 succession lineally, ib.
collaterally, 215
ex parte maternā, 217
to stridhanam of adoptive mother, 218 succession of wives of adopter to adopted, 219 between natural mother and a dvyamushyayana, 221
 12. where legitimate son born afterwards, 222 in competition with collaterals, 224—228 difference as to shares of adopted son in Bengal, Benares, Western and Southern India, and among Sudras, 223 survivorship between them, 228 where adopted is son of two fathers, 229
 13. adopted has neither rights nor duties in natural family, 228 cannot marry into or adopt out of it, 229 dvyamushyayana may inherit in both families, ib.
his share with afterborn son, 230 rule not observed in Punjab or Pondicherry, or among Gyawals, 228
 14. effect of invalid adoption, 231—235 his rights to maintenance, 603 cases in which boy cannot return into original family, 233 when he may take as persona designata, 235—239 declaratory suit to set aside, 211—213, 874 foster child has no rights, 236 effect of assent by parties interested, 251

ADOPTION—continued.

15. divests estate of adopting widow, not being her stridhan, 240 or of adopting mother, 149, 243 of person who has taken estate of one to whom adoption is made, 241 unless his own title preferable, 242 survivorship may be defeated by act of widow, 241 not in Bombay, 251, 253 not of person who has taken estate of one to whom adoption was not made, 245—249 result of decisions, 250
16. estate of adopted postponed by direction of adopter in Bengal, 256 not under Mitakshara, ib.
unless as to impartible estate, ib.
by express agreement, 256—258 effect of his renunciation, 259
17. son's rights date from adoption, 259 how far bound by previous acts of widow, 260—262 or of full male holder, 262 or of father after authority given, 450 or by agreement previous to adoption, 256
18. adoption by woman to herself ineffectual, 263 unless under Kritrima form, ib.
by dancing girls, ib.
See ILLATOM, 268; KRITRIMA, 263—268; MALABAR ADOPTIONS, 269—271

AFFINITY,

- is the basis of the Mitakshara law of succession, 689—696 and of the earlier law, 697—701
so in Punjab and among Sikhs and Jains, 701

AGE. See ADOPTION, 7; MINOR, 1

AGNATES. See SUCCESSION, 3—5

AGNATION,

- is ruling principle of Mitakshara law, 692 strictest form of, prevails in Northern India, 763

AGREEMENT,

- cannot create binding custom, 59
to marry, does not invalidate marriage of another, 118 in derogation of rights of adopted son, 256 against partition, its effect, 657
alienation, 494

ALIENATION,

1. originally limited by communal rights, 306 variance between texts arising from stage of family history to which they relate, 318, 319 power of father as head of patriarchal and of joint family different, 300, 301
2. Mitakshara Law, rights of father limited by those of sons, 319, 435 sons take no interest by birth in property inherited by father from others than near ancestors, 344, 453 or in property disposed of before their birth, 449 or in divided or self-acquired property, 451, 452

ALIENATION—continued.

3. right of father to dispose of ancestral movables, 320
 - conflict of opinions, 435—439
 - to dispose of self-acquired immovables, 322
 - modern decisions, 451
 - to sell property to discharge his own debts, 396—400
 - in other respects merely a manager of coparcenary, 439
4. powers of owner of impartible property, 441—445
 - decisions of the Judicial Committee, 445—448
 - annulled in Madras by legislation, 448 note.
 - absolute right over income and savings, 359
 - lands held on service tenure, not liable to, 440
5. power of manager of joint family, 439, 467
 - by consent of coparceners, 453
 - what amounts to consent, ib.
 - in cases of necessity, 454
 - what constitutes a case of necessity, 455
 - power to sell, 457
 - burthen and proof of necessity, 460
 - where decrees have been passed, 462
 - extravagance or mismanagement, 455, 466
 - power of manager of religious endowment, 584
6. purchaser not bound by debts, 426
 - need not see to application of purchase money, 456
 - what enquiries he must make, 456, 460—467
7. right of coparcener to sell his share, 330, 467
 - conflicting opinions, 469
 - Madras Court recognizes the right, 474
 - not to assign specific portion, 476
 - nor to give or devise, 476, 477
 - Bombay Court allows transfer for value, 477
 - not gift or devise, 479
 - from what date interest of coparcener is to be calculated, 479
 - alienation for value may be enforced after death of coparcener, 480
 - Bengal Court denies the right, 480
 - will enforce special equity, 482
 - not after death of alienor, 483
8. remedies against improper alienation, 483
 - sale rescinded in case of fraud, 484
 - cannot be enforced by member of family who could not sue
 - for partition, 482 note
 - right is personal and does not survive, ib.
 - equities on setting aside, 482, 485
 - where alienation is by father, 487
 - when equities do not apply, ib.
 - claim for improvements, 488
 - where sale partially justifiable, ib.
 - laches or acquiescence, 489
 - necessity for offer to refund, ib.
 - where suit is by alienee to enforce his claim, 486
 - in case of estate taken by escheat, 800
9. by coparcener enforced by partition, 472, 653, 670
 - mode of carrying out partition, ib.
10. by execution under decree, 470
 - how enforced against joint-owner, 471
 - must be before death of debtor when joint property is seized, 427—431

ALIENATION—continued.

11. Bengal Law, absolute power of father, 324, 490
 - except in distribution of ancestral property among sons, 329, 491
 - nature of coparcener's interest in their property, 493
 - power of dealing with share, 494
12. whether delivery of possession is essential where transfer is for value, 509
 - cases of sale, 511—516
 - mortgage, 516
 - oral declarations not followed by possession, 521
13. writing not necessary, nor technical words, 521
 - unless in cases under Transfer of Property Act, 534—536
 - estate of inheritance, how conveyed, 521
 - permanence of leases, 523
 - See GIFT; WOMAN'S ESTATE.
 - effect of agreement against alienation, 494
14. grants for maintenance when resumable, 524
 - lasting till extinction of line of grantee, ib.
 - absolute and alienable, ib.
 - by way of partition, 525
15. grants to females, not necessarily for life, 525
 - onus of proof, ib.
 - rule for construing, 525—527
 - in lieu of maintenance held to be for life, 526
 - words held to create absolute interest, 527, 528
16. beneficial tenures
 - for religious or charitable purposes, prima facie absolute, 529
 - jaghires or sarangams, generally for life, ib.
 - unless express words, ib.
 - Enams prima facie absolute, ib.
 - Service tenures, right to resume, 530
 - effect of discontinuance of services, 531
 - where office is hereditary, 532
 - religious or charitable offices inalienable, ib.
 - hereditary civil offices when alienable, 533
 - when emoluments of either class are alienable, ib.

ALTUMGHA AND AMARAM ENAMS,

meaning of, 529, 530

ALYA SANTANA,

law of, its mythical origin, 121
 by whom followed, ib.
 female descent, 120 marriage relations, 126

ANCESTOR WORSHIP,

prevalent among Aryan Hindus, 77 its influence on law of succession, 697

ANCESTRAL PROPERTY,

meaning of term, 343
 property inherited from collateral or female is not, 344 savings of or purchases made from, 345 unless property is impartible, 359

ANCESTRAL PROPERTY—continued.

effect upon it of partition, 346 property given or devised by ancestor, 346—348 origin of property is immaterial after one descent, 345

ANITYA,

form of adoption, 229

ANVADHEYA,

or gift subsequent, what it is, 883 its line of devolution, 894, 899
 See WOMAN'S ESTATE, 13, 15

APARARKA,

his age and authority, 28

APASTAMBA,

relative age of, 16
 does not recognise subsidiary sons, 82 opposed to adoption, 130

APAVIDDHA,

one of the subsidiary sons, 81
 now obsolete, 92

APPOINTED DAUGHTER, remained under dominion of father, 90 her rights of succession, 704 became obsolete, 93 position of her son, 90 still exists among Nambudris, 91, 93 obsolete elsewhere, 93

ARSHA

form of marriage, 94, 96

ARYANS. See ADOPTION, 1; POLYANDRY.

ASCETIC. See HERMIT.

ASSAM,

supposed to be governed by Bengal law, 10

ASSETS. See DEBTS, 1, 2; MAINTENANCE, 1

ASURA

form of marriage, 94, 96, 99

AURASA

or legitimate son, 81

AUTHORITY. See ADOPTION, 3, 4

AYAUTAKA. See WOMAN'S ESTATE, 13, 15

BACHELOR. See ADOPTION, 2

BANDHUS,

enumeration of, in law books not exhaustive, 687, 781, 784 females admitted as in Western India, 696, 795
 See SUCCESSION, 2—5, 22

BAUDHAYANA,

relative age of, 16, 21
 excludes women from inheritance, 703

BENAMI TRANSACTIONS:

1. origin of practice, 588 principle on which they depend, 589 no presumption against in case of child, ib.
 or of female, 590
 must be strictly made out, ib.
2. effect given to real title, 591
 unless contrary to statute, ib.
 or in fraud of innocent persons, 592 effect of notice, ib.
 when intention to defraud creditors, 593 conflict of decisions as to suit by real owner against benamidar, 594
 fraud must have been effected, 595 and be pleaded, 596
 case of benami purchase to mask title, 597
 where transaction intended to operate, 598
3. decrees conclusive between parties, ib.
 not as against third persons, ib.
 benamidar should be a party, ib.
4. Conflict of decisions as to right of benamidar to sue upon his title, 599

BENEFICIAL TENURES. See ALIENATION, 16

BENGAL LAW,

its distinctive principles, 40 their origin and development, 326 influence of Jimuta Vahana, 328 its effect upon father's right of alienation, 324, 490 son's right of partition, 317, 324 estate of joint members, 330, 335, 493
 rights of women, 331, 648 rules of inheritance, 678—689, 787

BETROTHAL. See MARRIAGE, 6

BLIND. See EXCLUSION, 2

BOMBAY,

Mayukha paramount in island of, 29
 See WESTERN INDIA.

BRAHMA

form of marriage, 94, 98, 99

BRAHMANISM,

- importance of distinguishing whether it is an essential part of any given law, 4
- of later origin than the body of Hindu law, 4
- its influence in modifying the law, 4, 326—328
 - retarding its development, 329
- no part of the early communal system, 6
 - or of the original law of inheritance, 7, 690—696
 - or of adoption, 8, 132, 175, 183, 190, 268
- probable influence of, in regard to second marriages, 113
 - partition, 312
 - wills, 538

BROTHERS,

- succeed to the property of a maiden, 891
 - the sulka of their sister, 892
- are heirs to the Yautaka of a married woman, 897
 - See ALIENATION; PARTITION; SUCCESSION, 18

CANARA,

- Alya Santana law of, still administered, 3
- females manage the property in, 702
 - See MALABAR MARRIAGES, 2

ÇANKHA

- of the Sutra age, 17

CAPTURE,

- marriage by, 95

CASTE,

- marriage between persons of different, formerly allowed, 106
 - now obsolete, 107
- similar change in law of adoption, 178

CEREMONIES,

- eight for a male, proper periods for, 179 note
- marriage the only one for Sudras, ib.

See ADOPTION, 7, 9; KRITRIMA; MARRIAGE, 6

CHARITY. See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENT; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 6

CHASTITY,

- necessary, where a woman claims maintenance, 602, 611
- or succession to a male, as a widow, 753
- same rule as to succession of daughter or mother in Bengal, 758, 771
 - but not under Mitakshara law, ib.
- subsequent want of, does not divest her estate, 754, 777
- not essential where female claims as heir to a female, 904
 - unless it produces degradation, ib.

CHRISTIANITY. See CONVERT.

CLASS,

- gift or devise to, where some only can take, 502—509
- meaning of term, 503

COGNATES,

- absolute exclusion of, in Northern India, 763
 - See SUCCESSION, 2—5

COMMENTATORS,

- authority of those which are Smritis, 26
- Benares school—the Mitakshara, 27
 - Southern India, 28
 - Western India, 29
 - Mithila, ib.
- Bengal school—Daya Bhaga, 32
- treatises on adoption, 30
- Halhed's Code—Jagannatha's Digest, 33

CONCUBINES,

- their claim to maintenance, 603

CONDITION,

- precedent to adoption, 171
- gift may be made subject to, 495
- invalid when creating estate unknown to Hindu law, ib.
 - or repugnant to nature of estate, ib.
 - or illegal, 496
- when ineffectual or destructive of estate, 496
- fixing termination of estate, 556—560
- against alienation or partition, 494, 657
- in will enforcing partition, 666
- in adoption deed, limiting rights of adopted son, 256

CONFISCATION,

- its effect on rights of succession, 358, 443

CONSENT,

- of coparceners to sale by manager, 453
- anandravens in Malabar, 861
- reversioners to dealings of female heir, 855—861

CONTRACT. See AGREEMENT; MARRIAGE, 6; MINOR.

CONVERT,

- to Christianity, law binding upon, 69
 - Muhammedanism, how far he may retain Hindu law, 65—69
 - right of female on re-marriage, 756
- remains in custody of guardian, 276
- may lose right of guardianship, 275, 279—283

COPARCENERS. See ALIENATION; DEBTS; JOINT FAMILY; PARTITION; SURVIVORSHIP.

COURT OF WARDS,

- adoption by landholder under, 140, 171
- period of minority under, 272

CREDITOR,

- gift valid against, 426, 509
- has no lien on property before seizure, 426, 430
- his claim inferior to that of surviving coparcener, 427—431
- benami transaction to defraud, 591, 593
- cannot seize wife's property for husband's debt, 887

CROWN. See ESCHEAT.

CUSTODY. See MARRIAGE, 6; MINOR, 1

CUSTOMARY LAW,

antecedent to Brahmanism, 2, 4 resembles that described by the Sanskrit writers, 2 not founded on Sanskrit writings, 5 validity of, recognized by early writers, 5, 47
 by decisions and legislation, 48 records of, in Deccan, Punjab, Oudh, Southern India, 48—51 governs Sikhs, Jats, Jains, Dravidian tribes, 52—55 each province governed by its own system, 55
 this is a personal law, which follows the family, ib.
 may be abandoned, 56
 not affected by transfer of district, 56
 essentials and evidence of valid custom, 56 cannot be created by agreement, 59, 71 or by course of erroneous decisions, varying in their grounds, 448 does not run with land, 59 family usage valid though different from that of district, 60
 onus of proof, 58
 cases of primogeniture, 61 exclusion of daughters, 758, 763 or daughter's sons, 763 invalid when immoral or opposed to public policy, 62—65 change of family usage, 65 conversion to Muhammedanism, 65—69 conversion to Christianity, 70 illegitimate offspring of European, 71

CUTCHI MEMONS

are governed by Hindu law of inheritance, 68

CUTTOOGOOTAKA, meaning of, 530 note

DAIVA

form of marriage, 94—98

DANCING GIRLS,

recognised by Hindu law, 62 procuring minors to be, is illegal, 63 contracts by, 62
 custom of adoption and succession among, 63 spoken of as Dasis, or slaves, 745

DATTA HOMAM. See ADOPTION, 9

DATTAKA. See ADOPTION.

DATTAKA CHANDRIKA,

its age, authorship and authority, 30—32

DATTAKA CIROMANI, 32

DATTAKA MIMAMSA,

by Nanda Pandita, 32
 its age and authority, 30—32

DAUGHTER,

excluded by local custom, 758, 763
 succeeds in undivided family in Bengal, 336, 758
 See PARTITION, 7; SUCCESSION, 8, 15; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 3, 15

DAUGHTER'S SON,

excluded by local custom, 763
 succeeds in undivided family in Bengal, 336
 to woman's property, 895, 897, 899
 See ADOPTION, 6; KRITRIMA; SUCCESSION, 2, 16

DAYA BHAGA,

its age and authorship, 32

DAYA KRAHMA SANGRAHA,

its age and authorship, 33

DAYA TATWA

by Raghunanda, 33

DAYA VIBHAGA,

its authority in Southern India, 28
 age and authorship, ib.

DEAF. See EXCLUSION, 2

DEATH,

what amounts to civil, 677 note, 801, 812, 816 lets in next heir at once, ib.

DEBTS,

three grounds of liability, 387

1. non-payment of, is a sin, ib.

duty of son and grandson to pay those of ancestor, 388 even independently of assets, ib.
 obligation now limited to assets, 390
 evidence of assets, 391

not liable for immoral debts, 389 or ready money payments, ib.
 is liable for debts of father as surety, ib.

onus as to proof of immorality, ib., note.

the whole joint property and not merely father's share is assets, 392, 395

only arises after father's death, 393 this rule now immaterial, 395

father may sell property to discharge, 396—400, 458 in Bengal adults not directly bound by dealings not consented to, 400

indirectly bound through liability to pay debt, ib.
 proper mode of suing adult, ib.

minors are directly bound by sale, ib.

debt to be discharged must be an antecedent debt, ib.

where none such, consideration for sale or mortgage binds son as debt, ib.

son need not be a party to suit to enforce sale or mortgage, 401 but rights not inconsistent with validity of transaction not affected by decree, ib.

where suit after partition, 402

DEBTS—continued.

- effect of mere money debt on son's interest, 404
- decree on such debt may bind son though not a party, 403
- apparent conflict of decisions on this point in Privy Council, 405—407
 - cases reconciled, 408
 - purchaser must have intended to take, and believe he is taking entire interest in estate, 402—414
 - liberal construction of proceedings in execution, 415
 - rules suggested, ib.
- whether sons can set up immorality of debt against purchaser under decree to which they were not parties? 417—419, 462
- purchaser bound by notice of immorality, 419
- execution creditor who purchases has implied notice, 421
- statements in plaint are notice, 422
- how sons are protected against decree, ib.
- conflict between this principle and that of son's right to restrain alienations by father, 453
 - mode in which payment is adjusted between sons, 422
 - son born after partition, ib.
- 2. duty of heir to pay debts of his predecessor, 423
 - widow to pay debts of husband, 605
 - extent to which assets may be followed, 424
 - rights of purchaser, devisee or donee, 426
 - debts are not a charge before execution, ib.
 - do not bind share of deceased coparcener, 427—431
 - unless there has been a decree followed by attachment before death, 429, 431
 - take precedence of general claim for maintenance, 625
- 3. liability arising from agency, 431
 - no obligation from mere relationship, ib.
 - what constitutes agency, 432
 - no liability, for debts of divided member, ib.
 - or for separate debts of undivided member, 434
- 4. when their existence justifies sale of family property, 455—457
 - See ALIENATION, 5, 6
- 5. what transactions between members of joint family may give rise to, 372, 635

DECLARATION OF TITLE,

- suit for by contingent reversioner, 874
- how barred by time, 875, 876
- See WOMAN'S ESTATE, 11

DECREE,

- of Indian Courts not a judgment in rem, 204
- how far it binds minor, 289
- justifies sale of family property, 462
- when conclusive against alleged benami, 598
- its effect in cases of adoption, 204
 - as a declaration of right, 877
- for maintenance, when it binds estate, 622
- its operation as against estate held by a female, 863—866
- or order does not require registration, 520

DEGRADATION,

- from caste, formerly a bar to succession, 802
- now relieved by statute, 804

DELIVERY. See ALIENATION, 12 ; WILLS, 11

DEVANDA BHATTA,

- author of Smriti Chandrika, 28
- Dattaka Chandrika attributed to him, 31

DEVESTING OF ESTATE,

- when it takes place by adoption, 146, 149, 240—250
 - by subsequent birth, 677
- not by incontinence, 754, 771
 - or subsequent disability, 812
 - or removal of disability, 813

DEVISE

- by father to son or to widow and son of ancestral or self-acquired property, its effect, 343, 346—348
- See WILLS.

DISEASE. See EXCLUSION, 2

DISQUALIFIED HEIR,

- may take under will, 576
- See ADOPTION, 2 ; EXCLUSION ; PARTITION, 11

DIVISION. See PARTITION.

DIVORCE,

- permitted in early law, 112
- still recognized by local usage, 114

DOMICIL,

- personal law does not necessarily follow law of, 55, 56

DOWRY,

- origin of, in marriage by purchase, 97
- See WOMAN'S ESTATE, 13, 15

DRAUPADI,

- legend of, 78

DRAVIDIAN RACES,

- many not even Hindus by religion, 2
- not necessarily governed by Sanskrit law, 10, 53—55
- evidence of their customs in Thesawaleme, 49
- Pondicherry decisions, 50
- See SOUTHERN INDIA.

DUMB. See EXCLUSION, 2

DWAYAMUSHYAYANA,

- meanings of the term, 229
- See ADOPTION, 7, 12, 13

EAST INDIANS,

- law by which they are governed, 69

ELDEST SON,

- ranks by actual seniority, not that of mother, 733 unless mother is of inferior class, ib.
 or by special custom, 734 claim to a special share on partition, 658
 See ADOPTION, 7

ENDOGAMY,

- evidence of, in Southern India, 105

EQUITIES,

- on setting aside transactions by a male, 482—489
 by a female heir, 878
 by a minor, 288

ESCHEAT,

- maintenance a charge upon estate taken by, 616, 710 right of, even to estate of Brahman, 800 crown must establish absence of heirs, ib.
 may set aside alienations, ib.
 takes, subject to proper charges, ib.
 no right of between grantor and grantee of estate, ib.

ESTOPPEL,

- when acquiescence amounts to, 207
 law of in India, 208

EUNUCH,

- marriage of, improper but valid, 103
 wife formerly allowed to abandon, 113
 See EXECUTION, 2

EUROPEAN,

- illegitimate offspring of, by what law bound, 71

EVIDENCE. See ADOPTION, 10; ALIENATION, 5, 6; PARTITION, 17; PRESUMPTION, SELF-ACQUISITION, 4; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 6—8

EXCLUSION FROM INHERITANCE,

- principle on which it is founded, 802 whether applicable to non-Aryan races, 817 mitigated by expiation, 803 applies equally to female heirs, 811 does not apply to other modes of obtaining property, 802 note
- who are excluded, 803 statutory relief of outcasts, 804 defects of the blind, deaf, and dumb must be congenital, 806 whether same rule in case of insanity, ib.
 or lameness, 808
 not in case of leprosy, 807
 what species of, is a bar, ib.
 deprivation of a limb or a sense, 809 fraud, vice, hostility to parent, ib.
 entrance into religious order, 816
 complicity in death is a bar to benefits resulting, 811
- disability does not exclude heir of disqualified person, 811 except where heir is an adopted son, ib.
 or a widow, ib.

EXCLUSION FROM INHERITANCE—continued.

- such heir may succeed to disqualified person, ib.
 lets in next heir at once, 812
- is removed by removal of disability, ib.
 inheritance already vested not opened up 813—816 heir may succeed on next descent if nearest, 813

EXECUTION,

- proceedings in, liberally construed, 415 against representative of joint family enforced against its property, 463—465 against member in his individual capacity only enforced against his own interest, 464 of decree against father may be enforced against entire family property in hands of sons or grandsons, 403—416 how far proceedings in, can be disputed by family, 417—422, 462 effect of attachment during debtor's life in barring survivorship, 427—431 its effect in case of widow or female heir, 863—866
 See ALIENATION, 10; DEBTS, 1; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 9

EXECUTOR,

- of Hindu will, powers of, formerly and now, 578
de son tort, 579

EXOGENY,

- foundation of Sanskrit law of marriage, 103 practised by non-Aryan races, 105

EXPIATION,

- its effect in removing disabilities to succession, 803

FACTUM VALET,

- doctrine of limited even in Bengal, 41
 only applied to breach of moral obligation, 200

FAMILY. See JOINT FAMILY; PATRIARCHAL FAMILY.

FAMILY USAGE. See CUSTOMARY LAW.

FATHER. See ADOPTION; ALIENATION, 1—4, 11; DEBTS, 1; PARTITION, 2, 4, 7, 14; PATRIARCHAL FAMILY; SUCCESSION, 17

FEMALES,

- system of kinship through, 120, 302 higher position under polyandrous system, 703 dependent condition in patriarchal family, ib.
 favoured by Bengal school, 331, 648 and in Western India, as to succession, 715, 793 nature of estate, 826, 829, 831 pass on marriage into husband's family, 721 their incapacity to inherit unless named by express texts, 703 capacity to perform shraddhas, 726 note effect of gift or devise to, as regards extent of estate conveyed, 525—528 all grounds of disability for heirship apply to, 811
 See STRIDHANUM; WOMAN'S ESTATE.

FOSTER CHILD,

has no legal rights as such, 236 gift to valid, though donor mistaken as to his capacity to perform obsequies, 237.

FRAUD, of coparcener, how it affects his right to share, 656, 810 result of, upon partition, 656, 669

 See BENAMI, 2

GANDHARVA,

form of marriage, 95, 99, 100

GAUTAMA,

relative age of, 16

GHATWALI TENURE, right to resume, 531

 inalienability of, 533

GIFT,

1. valid against donor when complete, 499 of separate or self-acquired property, 495 by coparcener of his own share, invalid in Bombay, and Madras, 476, 479 and under Benares law, 480 valid by Bengal law, 493
 good against creditors, if bona fide, 509 not valid against claim for maintenance, 437, 619, 625
2. may be conditional unless provisions repugnant or illegal, 495 effect of such conditions upon gift, 496 donatio mortis causa, 495 must not create invalid estate, 495 subsequent estate accelerated by invalidity of previous gift, 496
3. native authorities as to necessity for possession, 497 voluntary promise cannot be enforced, 499 irrevocable if completed, 499, 509 effect of declaration of trust, 500 want of possession can only be set up by donor, ib.
 what possession sufficient, ib.
 provisions of Transfer of Property Act, 535
4. donee must be in existence, unless in womb, or person to be adopted under an authority, 501
5. to a class, of whom some cannot take, 502—509 to a person wrongly supposed to be adopted, or to bear particular character, 235—239 to a persona designata, 236
6. estate created by gift to a female, 525—528
 by father to son, of ancestral property, 346 of self-acquired property, 347, 348
7. of a man's whole property, when forbidden, 619
 See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENT; WOMAN'S ESTATE.

GOTRAJA SAPINDAS,

who are, 679, 682, 718
 females after marriage continue to be in Western India, 720, 794 sons' daughters are not, 720, 794

GOVERNMENT, consent of, or notice to, not necessary in case of adoption, 171, 194 unless landholder is under Court of Wards, 140, 171

 See ESCHEAT.

GRANDFATHER AND GREAT-GRANDFATHER, may be sued for partition, under Mitakshara law, 637, 638 not under Bengal law, 640

 See SUCCESSION, 1, 20

GRANDMOTHER AND GREAT-GRANDMOTHER. See PARTITION, 9.
 SUCCESSION, 9, 20; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 3

GRANDNEPHEW. See SUCCESSION, 1, 19

GRANDSONS AND GREAT-GRANDSONS, included under term "issue," 731 their right to a partition, 637, 638, 640 position as sapindas, 681 anterior to religious principle, 699

 See SUCCESSION, 12, 20

GUARDIAN,

sovereign is, as parens patrie, 273 order of relations entitled to be, ib.
 appointment of by will, ib. note statutes regulating subject, 272, 274 note power of Court to appoint or remove, ib.
 principles on which it acts, 275 father loses his right over son given in adoption, 274, 290 mother is of illegitimate child, 283 entitled to custody of minor, 273 note unless she has married again, 758 result of change of religion, 275—283 when his acts bind his ward, 284 power to revive or pay time-barred debts, 285 extent of his own liability, 292
 See MINOR.

GUDHAJA,

one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 89

HALF-BLOOD,

males of, postponed to those of whole blood, 772, 774 in case of succession after re-union, 796 to woman's estate, 895, 897 where sisters succeed to brothers, 720 in succession to impartible estate, 738—741

HALHED'S

Gentoo Code, 33

HARITA,

his age and characteristics, 17

HEIR. See DEBTS; INHERITANCE; MAINTENANCE; SUCCESSION.

HERMIT,

fact of becoming, amounts to civil death, 677 note, 801, 816 his secular property vests at once in his heirs, 801 special rules of succession to, 800 his religious property passes by custom, 585

HINDU LAW,

its nature and origin, 1—12
 Sanskrit writings not of universal authority, 2, 10 agrees substantially with actual usage, 2 founded on customs earlier than Brahmanism, 4 later religious development, 11
 Brahmanism not the basis of communal system, 6 or law of inheritance, 7 or practice of adoption, 8 has modified early usages, 11 should be cautiously applied to non-Brahmanical tribes, 10, 12

See SOURCES OF HINDU LAW; CUSTOM.

HIRANYAKESIN,

of the Sutra period, 17

HUSBAND. See ADOPTION, 2, 3; MAINTENANCE, 4, 7; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 5, 14

IDIOT,

marriage of, improper but valid, 108

See EXCLUSION, 2

ILLATOM,

affiliation by, in Madras and Pondicherry, 268, 269 rights created by it, 228 note, 268

ILLEGITIMATE,

offspring of European, by what law bound, 71 mother is guardian of, 283 entitled to maintenance, 603, 641 sons only not daughters entitled, ib.
 right does not descend, ib.
 statutory right, 603 note rights of, on partition, 641

See SUCCESSION, 13, 18

IMMORALITY. See CHASTITY; CUSTOMARY LAW.

IMMOVABLE PROPERTY. See ALIENATION, 3; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 14

IMPARTIBLE PROPERTY,

what property is recognized as such, 61, 630—634 may be joint in other respects, 350 liable for maintenance of other members, 616 how dealt with on partition, 634 mode of descent, 736—743 taken by senior widow or daughter, 752, 762 eldest living daughter's son, 765

See ALIENATION, 4

INCONTINENCE. See CHASTITY.

INFANT,

in womb, may be the object of a gift, 501 his right after a partition, 638 will divest estate of inferior heir, 677

See MINOR.

INHERITANCE. See SUCCESSION.

estate of, by what terms conferred, 521 only applies to property held in severalty, 676 each male heir becomes head of new stock, ib.
 descent always traced back to last male holder, ib.
 See WOMAN'S ESTATE.
 never in abeyance, 496, 571, 677, 721, 813 taken by person who is next-of-kin at death, ib.
 on his own merits, and not through another, ib.
 never divested by after-born heir, 677, 813 unless conceived before or adopted after death, 677 arises on civil death, 677 note, 801, 812, 816

INSANE. See EXCLUSION, 2

INTERPRETATION,

rules of, 35—38

ISSUE,

sense in which it is used in this work, 136 includes great-grandsons, 136, 731
 See ALIENATION; JOINT FAMILY; SUCCESSION, 12, 20

JACTITATION

of marriage suit for lies in Civil Court, 119

JAGANNATHA'S DIGEST, conflicting opinions on, 34 represents Bengal opinion, 35

JAGHIRE

is presumed to be an estate for life, 529

JAIMINI,

author of the Purva-Mimamsa, 35 his rule of interpretation, 36

JAINS,

generally adhere to Hindu law, 52, 577 note do not respect Vedas, or perform shradhs, 52, 193 secular character of adoption among, 134

See ADOPTION, 4, 6, 7

law of inheritance not founded on religious offerings, 701

See SUCCESSION, 10; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 6

JATS, 52

JIMUTA VAHANA. See DAYA BHAGA.

JOINT FAMILY:

1. not limited to Aryan races, 6
evolved from patriarchal family, 300 or from polyandrous group, 303 position of father as head of, differs from that of patriarch, 301
2. presumption in favour of union, 332, 363 passes by survivorship, not succession, 333, 343 effect of representation, 334 difference under Bengal system, 336 note
3. coparcenary a less extensive body than members of, 336 how constituted and limited, ib.
distance from common ancestor not the test, 337, 340
obstructed and unobstructed property, 341
4. their property, 343—351
See PROPERTY, 3; SELF-ACQUISITION.
presumption that property is joint, 363—369
5. mode of enjoyment—Malabar, Benares, Bengal, 369—371 powers of manager, 285, 371 right of ordinary member, 372 to require account, 373—379 to claim a share of income, 377, 382 special arrangement for share and account, 378
6. all members must be parties to transaction affecting, 379 suits by one co-sharer against the others, ib.
one may sue for special injury to himself, 381 cannot alter property without consent of others, 383 may be a tenant of joint property, ib.
rent only payable by express agreement, 383
See PARTITION; RE-UNION.
7. rights of members in hereditary trading partnership, 383

JOINT PROPERTY. See PROPERTY.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS,

at first followed the pundits, 44
subsequent influence of the English Judges, ib.
result of enquiring into actual usage, 45

See DECREES.

KAQYAPA,

of the Sutra period, 17

KANINA,

one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 89

KARNAVEN,

in Malabar, his powers, 313

KATTUBADI ENAMS, meaning of, 530 note

KATYAYANA,

his age, 25

KHETRAJA,

one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 84
now obsolete, 92

KHOJAHS,

customs of, 67

KING. See ESCHEAT; GOVERNMENT; GUARDIAN.

KRITA,

one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 92
now obsolete, 92, 131 note

KRITRIMA,

form of adoption, prevails in Mithila, and among Nambudri Brahmans, 263
obsolete elsewhere, ib.
resembles system in Jaffna, 268 alleged reason for its continuance, 264 description of, 264
no fiction of new birth, 265 adopted son must consent in life of adopter, 264 be an adult, ib.
no restrictions as to choice except caste, 265
sister's or daughter's son may be taken, ib.
his rights of inheritance, 266 woman may adopt to herself, 266 not to her deceased husband, 142, 266 husband and wife may adopt jointly or separately, ib.
no ceremonies essential, 267 daughters may be adopted in Burma, ib.

LAME. See EXCLUSION, 2

LEASES,

when treated as heritable, 523 statutory provisions as to making, 535

LEPA,

or divided offering, 679

LEPER,

his capacity to adopt, 138
See EXCLUSION, 2

LEVIRATE. See POLYANDRY.

LIFE ESTATE,

when property is held for, 441, 523—529

LIMITATION, statute of, in case of adoption, 209

partition, 658
alienations by trustees of religious endowment, 585 note
alienation by widow, 867 widow may sell estate to pay debts barred by, 850 power of manager as to such debts, 285, 456 note

LUNATIC,

marriage of, improper but valid, 108
See EXCLUSION, 2

MADHAVA,

author of Daya Vibhaga, 28

MAIDEN,

- her property, 881, 883
its devolution, 828 note, 890

MAINTENANCE,

- persons who are entitled to, 602
- whether liability is independent of assets, 605 chastity required in case of widow, 604, 612 extent of widow's right, 605—609 to alimony out of family house, 614 to residence in family house, 626 not bound to reside with husband's family, 613 right of widows other than those of last male holder, 605—609
 - infant son entitled to, 605 case of adult, who is unable to support himself, 609
 - aged parents entitled to, 605
 - wife can only claim from husband, 604, 610
bound to reside with him, 610
unless for justifying cause, ib.
her right to pledge his credit, 614 result of her unchastity, 611
 - mode of estimating amount, 617
when stridhanum deducted, 618
arrears awarded from demand, ib.
whether coparcener can sue for, 616 duration and alienability of grants for, 524 right to resume, ib., 529
 - is a charge on heir in possession, 616 where property is impartible, ib.
king or rajah liable for, ib.
how far a charge on property, 619 does not bind purchaser, 621 unless notice of lien created, ib.
what amounts to lien, 622—624
under Transfer Act, 624 debts take precedence of, 625
 - husband cannot deprive wife or widow of, in favour of volunteers, 627 otherwise as to her share on partition, 629 note liability of donee or devisee for, 627, 629

MAKKATHAYAM LAW

- by whom followed, 122

MALABAR ADOPTIONS

- among Nayars, 269
among followers of Marumakkathayam, ib.
Makkathayam, 270
Nambudris, 271

MALABAR MARRIAGES,

- among Nayars polyandry is dying out, 122, 125 marriage is not indispensable, 123
Talikettu kalyanam is required for girls, ib.
its nature and object, ib.
Sambhandam followed by cohabitation, 124 who can contract, and ceremonies, ib.
not a binding marriage, 125

MALABAR MARRIAGES—continued.

- Alya Santana law less lax in theory, 126 fictitious marriage unknown, ib.
facilities for severing actual marriage, ib.
held not to be a marriage in law, 127 who may contract it, ib.
extent of widow marriage, ib.
- among Nambudris eldest son only marries, 127 ceremonies those of Hindu law, 128 widow marriage and divorce forbidden, ib.
juniors form relations with Nayar women, 127 women do not marry as infants, 128 post mortem marriages, ib.

MALABAR TARWAD,

- polyandrous character of, 120, 302 rule as to self-acquisitions, 311 no right to a partition, 312 members have no right to an account, 313, 369 only entitled to maintenance, ib.
their consent necessary to a sale, 861 succession through females, 120 management in eldest male, 702 his powers, 313
in Canara management vested in females, 702

MANAGER. See ALIENATION ; JOINT FAMILY.

MANU,

- authority and authorship, 19
supposed age, 20
present version not the original, ib.
inconsistencies and contradictions, 21, 107, 111, 112

MARAVERS. See SOUTHERN INDIA.

MARUMAKKATHAYAM LAW,

- mythical origin of, 120
by whom followed, 121 descent through females, 120
See MALABAR MARRIAGES.

MARRIAGE,

- usages set aside as immoral, 64 anomalous state of early law, 73, 80
See POLYANDRY ; NIYOGA.
early looseness of tie, 79
- eight forms, 94
antiquity of disapproved forms, 95
Rakshasa, Pisacha, Gandharva, ib.
Asura and Arsha, forms of purchase, 96
dowry originates in Sulka, 97 origin of approved forms, 98 all but Brahma and Asura obsolete, 99 whether Gandharva survives ? 100
presumption as to form, 99
- who may dispose of bride, 101
how far marriage is affected by improper disposal, 102

MARRIAGE—continued.

4. who may intermarry; forbidden affinities, 103, 691 note (z) exogamy and endogamy, 103—106 persons of different castes might marry formerly, 106 now forbidden, 107
capacity for marriage; eunuchs, idiots, 108
infant marriage, 109
5. change of law as to polygamy, 110 second marriages and divorce of women, 112, 754 early Sanskrit law, ib.
non-Aryan usage, 113—116
recent legislation, 755—758
6. distinct from betrothal, 116
betrothal not final; remedy for breach, 117 ceremonies which constitute a final, ib.
is binding though irregular, 118
how enforced; custody of wife, 119
7. in general a bar to adoption, 180, 181 not in Western India, 183
8. its form determines devolution of a woman's property, 894, 895, 896, 897

MAYUKHA,

its age and authorship, 29
paramount in Guzerat and Island of Bombay, ib.

MENON CUTCHEES,

customs of, 68

MENDICANT, religious. See HERMIT.

MESNE PROFITS,

when allowed on partition, 636

MINOR,

1. different periods of minority, 141, 272
now fixed by statute, 272 capacity of, to adopt, 141, 150 custody of, vests in guardian, 273 priority of right to be guardian, ib.
power of appointment or removal, 274 guardianship of illegitimate children, 283
adopted son, 290
effect of change of religion of guardian, 275, 279 minor, 276
parental rights of custody and education, 275 principles on which Courts deal with them, 277
2. his own contracts are absolutely void, 283 when they bind those who deal with him, 287 equities on setting aside, ib.
none where act being his own is void, ib.
cannot appoint agent, 283 power of guardian to bind him, 284—287 not bound by acts of adverse holder, 287 his repudiation or ratification of contracts, 284 note fraudulent statements by minor as to age, 288
3. decrees against, when binding, 289 must be properly represented, ib.

MINOR—continued.

consent decrees, 289 obtained by misconduct of guardian, 290 how set aside, ib. note within what period, 291

See GUARDIAN; COURT OF WARDS.

4. unable to make a will, 541
may take under will, 576 bound by partition if fairly made, 642 when he may claim a partition, 643 entitled to maintenance, 605, 609

MIRASIDARS,

represent Village Community in Madras, 296 their privileges, ib.

MITAKSHARA,

its age and authorship, 27
extent of its authority, 27, 29 principles of law of succession under, 690 its doctrine as to stridhanum examined, 822—828

MITHILA,

extent of district; authorities which govern it, 29

MITRA MISRA,

author of Viramitrodaya, 29

MOLESALLUR GIRASIAS,

their customs, 68

MORTGAGE,

necessity for possession, 516
priority between registered and unregistered, 518 notice of unregistered, 519 registration or possession is notice, 515, 517, 519
how effected, 535
See ALIENATION; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 3, 4, 6

MOTHER,

her rights as guardian of legitimate child, 273 lost by second marriage, 274 or by conversion, 275
as guardian of illegitimate child, 283 adopted son succeeds to her property, 217 inherits to her family, ib.
right of wife of adopter as heir to adopted son, 218 case of plurality of wives, 219

See PARTITION, 2, 9; SUCCESSION, 9, 17; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 2, 3

MOVABLE PROPERTY. See ALIENATION, 3; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 6, 1

MUHAMMEDANISM. See CONVERT.

NAIRS,

polyandry among, 120, 302
village communities unknown among, 298 their system excludes patriarchal family, 302 See MALABAR.

NAMBUDRI BRAHMANS,

- their origin and sacred book, 91, 120
- follow Makkathayam system, 122—127
 - some few the Marumakkathayam, 121
 - and follow Hindu marriage laws, 128
- only eldest son marries, 127
- other sons cohabit with Nair women, 120, 127
- women marry at any age, 128
- divorce and second marriage forbidden, ib.
- allow adoption by widows without consent of husband, 143
- dwyamushyayana* adoption usual, 230
- practise kritrima adoption, 264
- sarvasahdanam* marriage of daughters, 91
- not bound by obligation to pay father's debts, 388 note

NANDA PANDITA,

- author of Dattaka Mimamsa, 32

NARADA,

- his supposed age, and modern tone, 23, 24
- work founded on early edition of Manu, ib.

NATRA,

- or second marriage of widows, 114

NECESSITY. See ALIENATION, 5; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 6

NEPHEWS. See SUCCESSION, 1, 19

NILAKANTHA,

- author of Mayukha, 29

NISHADA,

- one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 94

NIYOGA,

- nature and origin of, 84
- the levirate only a single instance, 85
- rules and restrictions, ib.
- not a survival of polyandry, 86
- differs from marriage with brother's widow, 87
- analogy between, and adoption, 155, 160
- its influence in forwarding widow's succession, 711

NOTICE,

- registration held to be, 515, 517, 519
- possession under mortgage is, ib.
- of valid unregistered document gives it effect against later registered document, 519
- effect of in dealing with a benamidar, 592

OBSTRUCTED PROPERTY,

- meaning of the term, 342
- heir to, has only a contingent interest, ib.

ONLY SON. See ADOPTION, 7

ORISSA,

- stated to be governed by Bengal law, 11

OUDH,

- effect of State confiscation in, 358 note
- will of taluqdar in, 577

OUTCAST,

- right to maintenance, 603
- See EXCLUSION, 2

PANDAVA PRINCES,

- legend of the, 78

PANDITS,

- their influence in adding to customary rules, 11
- responsible for the early decisions on law, 44
- helped to develop the written law, ib.

PARASARA,

- one of the later Smritis, 26

PARASAVA,

- one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 90

PARENTS,

- entitled to be maintained when aged, 605
- See SUCCESSION, 17, 20

PARTITION,

1. unknown in Malabar and Canara, 312
 - or, inates from self-acquisition, ib.
 - fostered by Brahmans, ib.
 - gradual progress of right, 313
2. originally none during life of father, 313
 - or mother, 315
 - finally allowed by Benares law, 316, 637
 - not in Bengal during father's life, 317, 637
 - allowed during life of mother, 318
3. all coparcenary property is subject to, 630
 - ancestral movable property liable, 631
 - things in their nature indivisible, ib.
 - mode of dealing with them, 632
 - impartible estates, ib.
 - its income and savings when partible, 634
 - may be taken into a partition, ib.
 - service tenures, 633
 - mode of calculating amount of property, 635
 - mesne profits, when allowed, 636
4. all coparceners may sue for, ib.
 - male issue under Mitakshara, 637
 - unless immediate ancestor still alive, 640
 - not in Bengal, 637
 - right of sons born after partition, 638
 - passes by representation, 639
 - difference of Bengal law, 640
 - illegitimate sons of higher classes not entitled, 641
 - otherwise among Sudras, ib.
5. minority or absence not a bar, 642, 644
 - may be opened up if unfair, 643

PARTITION—continued.

- is wholly invalid as against a coparcener who has been passed over, 643 minor can only sue for, on special grounds, ib.
6. rights of women to, under early law, 644
 obsolete in Southern India, 645 recognised by Benares law, 647 stand higher in Bengal, 645, 648
7. wife cannot demand from husband, 646 her share on partition by him, 644, 648 not recognised in Madras, 646 unmarried daughter's share, 645 now reduced to marriage and maintenance, 652 daughters cannot claim partition of mother's property, 653 note.
 effect of, between several daughters, coheiresses, 762
8. widow not entitled to share in Southern India, 645 even without sons entitled in Benares, 647 in Bengal only entitled as heir of husband, 648 effect of, between several widows, coheiresses, 752
9. mother not entitled to share in Southern India, 646 her rights in Benares and Bombay, 647 stepmother only excluded in Bengal, 649 in Bengal cannot enforce partition, ib.
 when entitled on partition, by others, 650
 what amount of share, ib.
 only out of husband's property, 652 rights of grandmother, 650
 great-grandmother, 652
10. strangers cannot sue for, 653 may compel their transferor to divide, ib., 670 11. disqualified heirs not entitled to share, 654 their issue may sue, ib.
 effect of removal of disability, 655
12. result of fraud in barring right, 656
13. direction forbidding or postponing, invalid, 657 compelling, how far legal, 666 agreement against, how far effectual, 657 lapse of time when a bar, 658
14. shares must be equal, 658 principle of representation, 639 special grounds of preference obsolete, 658, 659 unequal distribution of self-acquired property, 660 by father in Bengal, 661—665
15. may be by some members only, 665 no presumption as to status of non-dividing members, 666 all should be made parties, 667
16. should embrace all the property, 667 unless indivisible or out of jurisdiction, 668 where stranger is in joint possession, ib.
 presumed to be complete, ib.
 portions left undivided or overlooked, 669
 when distribution will be opened up, ib.
 or absolutely set aside, 670 mode of partition where stranger has acquired an interest, 670

PARTITION—continued.

17. circumstances which evidence a, 671 writing unnecessary, ib.
 intention essential, ib.
 partial severance of coparcenary interest, 669 complete severance of interest, but not of property, ib.
 changes joint tenancy into tenancy in common, 672
18. property taken by a woman under, is liable to usual restriction on woman's estate, 837—840 unless special provision to contrary, ib.
 See REUNION, 1
- PARVANA SRADDHA,
 what it is, 681
 is the link between agnates and cognates in Bengal, ib.
- PAT,
 or second marriage of widows, 112—116
- PATNI—dhaga, 640 note.
- PATRIARCHAL FAMILY, its origin and definition, 299
 one of the earliest forms, ib.
 excluded by Nair system, 302
 may be evolved from polyandrous Family, ib.
 authority of father in, 301 transition from, to Joint Family, 301 cases in which it is checked, 299
- PAUNARBHAVA,
 one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 89
- PAYMENT of debt must be proved, 466, 862
- PERPETUITIES,
 English law of, not applicable to India, 564 creating estate unknown to Hindu law, void, ib.
 for religious purposes lawful, 582
- PERSONA DESIGNATA,
 when gift to, is valid, 235—239
- PINDA,
 or funeral cake, 679
- PISACHA,
 a form of marriage, 94, 95, 99
- POLYANDRY,
 definition of, 73 note
 supposed to account for facts in marriage law, 73 its existence among non-Aryan races, 74 doubts as to its prevalence among Aryans, 76 evidence of it among early writers, 78 not to be confounded with sexual license, 79
 the levirate not due to survival of, 81, 86

POLYANDRY—continued.

not the reason for marriage with brother's widow, 87 its connection with origin of property, 303 its influence on position of women in family, 703 is now dying out among Nairs, 122, 126

POLYGAMY,

not the universal or original law, 110
 now absolutely at discretion of husband, 111, 611

PONDICHERRY,

information as to native usage derivable from its Courts, 50

POSSESSION. See ALIENATION, 12 ; GIFT ; REGISTRATION.

POSTHUMOUS SON,

boy adopted after death, is not, 259
 See INFANT.

POWER OF APPOINTMENT

by will, 571

PRAJAPATI,

a form of marriage, 94, 98

PRECEPTOR,

his right of succession, 799

PRE-EMPTION,

right of, 307

PRESUMPTION,

in favour of adoption, 203 family union, 332
 joint property, 363—369
 against reunion, 674 payment of a debt, 466, 862

PRIMOGENITURE, depends on usage or nature of estate, 61 line of descent by, 733 generally arises from actual seniority, ib.

 distinction between lineal and ordinary, 741 suggested rules in case of, 743

PRIORITY

as between sales with and without possession, 514
 as between mortgages with or without possession, 517 arising from non-registration of previous document, 518 exception as to decree or order, 520 against oral declarations or agreements, 521

PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION Act, 456, 542, 576, 578, 841

PROPERTY,

1. early law of, 293—331
 - corporate character of, 293
 - three forms which it assumes, ib.
 - the village system in the Punjab, 294
 - its destruction in Bengal, Central and Western India, 296
 - Mirasidars of Madras, ib.
 - supposed common descent, 297

PROPERTY—continued.

the Patriarchal Family, 299 origin of Joint Family, 300
 Mr. McLennan's view of its history, 302 transition from communal to individual property, 303—306
 Sanskrit writers take it up as held by family, 306

2. different theories as to ownership by birth ; Benares law, 313, 319
 Bengal law, 317, 324

obstructed and unobstructed property, 341

3. joint property is of three kinds, 343 ancestral property, what is, ib.
 obtained by partition, gift or devise, 346—348 formerly lost and recovered, 360 jointly acquired, 348 thrown into common stock, 349

impartible estates, 350

hereditary trading partnerships, 383

See ALIENATION ; JOINT FAMILY ; PARTITION ; SELF-ACQUISITION.

PROSTITUTION,

how far recognized, 62—64

PUBLIC POLICY. See CUSTOMARY LAW.

PUNJAB,

failure of Brahmanism in, 6, 49 note secular character of adoption, 8, 132

law of succession, 7, 690

Village Communities in ; their three forms, 294 right of pre-emption among, villagers, 307 to forbid alienations, ib.

infant marriage little known, 109

second marriage of women allowed, 114 restricted rights of female heirs, 763

See ADOPTION, 4, 6, 7, 9, 13 ; SUCCESSION, 6, 10, 11

PUPIL,

his right of succession, 799

PURCHASER. See ALIENATION ; MAINTENANCE, 6 ; PARTITION, 10

PUTRIKA PUTRA,

one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 90, 764

RAGHUNANDANA,

his age, 32

RAKSHASA,

a form of marriage, 94, 95, 99

REGISTRATION,

competition between registered and unregistered documents, 518 conflict of decisions as to effect of notice, 517, 519 possession equivalent to notice, 517

registered documents and oral declarations, 521

REGULATION

- X of 1793, (Bengal), 32; 292; 33; 140
- LII of 1793, (Bengal), 37; 140
- V of 1804, (Madras), 25; 140
- IV of 1827, (Bombay), 26; 48
- V of 1829, (Madras), 544

RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENT,

1. favoured by Hindu law, 580
 - instances of, in wills, 581
 - made by holders of a woman's estate, 850
 - not forbidden by law against superstitious uses or perpetuities, 582
 - provisions for carrying out trust must not violate Hindu law, ib.
2. property of, must be vested in trustee, 582
 - trust irrevocable if perfectly created, 583, 587
 - not where donor retains control over fund, 583
 - may be a beneficial ownership subject to trust, ib.
 - or absolute transfer of entire interest, 584
3. devolution of trust governed by terms of grant or usage, 585
 - donee or heirs may be trustee, ib.
 - female may be, 585 note
 - management by turns, ib.
 - where failure of succession, 587
 - trustee, powers of, 584
 - cannot sell his office, 586
4. trust void, where only colourable, 583
 - supervision of founder, 587
 - enforced by suit, ib.
 - failure of its objects, ib.

RELIGIOUS PRINCIPLE,

- not the original basis of Hindu law, 4
- mode in which it grew up, ib.
- not the basis of the law of adoption, 8, 132
 - whether required as a motive for adoption, 156, 157, 162—166
- regulates Bengal law of succession, 678, 693
 - not the law of the Mitakshara, 690
 - nor the early law, 697
 - nor that of the Punjab, or Jains, 701
- its effect in restricting inherited estate of female, 820

REPRESENTATION,

- how far it extends, 336, 639

RESTITUTION

- of conjugal rights, 119

RETNAKARA,

- its authority in Mithila, 30

REUNION,

1. who may re-unite, 673
 - what amounts to, 674
 - its effect, ib.
 - presumption is against, ib.

REUNION—continued.

2. succession after a, 795
 - right of son or brothers, 796
 - sister, 718, 795
 - how reconciled with Benares law, 797

REVERSIONER,

- after woman's estate has only a contingent interest, 768, 842, 858
- effect of his consent to her acts, 855
- his remedies against her acts, 871
- declaratory suits by, 874
- only persons interested in succession can sue, 871
- may sue, though not next in succession, ib.
- let in by surrender of previous estate, 859

RIWAZI-I-AM,

- its value as a record of usage, 48 note

SAHODHA,

- one of the subsidiary sons, 81, 89

SAKULYA, 679. See SUCCESSION, 1, 4, 21, 22

SALE,

- necessity for possession, 509
- how effected, 534
 - See ALIENATION; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 3, 4, 6

SAMANODAKA, 679. See SUCCESSION, 1, 4, 21

SAPINDA,

- derivation of word, 691 note
- See SUCCESSION, 1, 4, 22

SARASVATI VILASA,

- its authority in Southern India, 28
- age and authorship, ib.

SARVASVADANAM,

- son-in-law among the Nambudris, 91, 93

SAUDAYIKA. See WOMAN'S ESTATE, 13, 14

SAVINGS,

- right of holder of impartible property to, 359
- their descent, ib.
 - are not partible during his life, 634
- made by holder of a woman's estate, 844—848
- follow the nature of the estate, whether ancestral, 345
- or stridhanam, 885

SCHOOLS OF LAW,

- only two really exist, 39
- causes of difference in law, 40
- minor sub-divisions, 39
 - See DAYA BHAGA; MALABAR; MITAKSHARA; MITHILA; PUNJAB; WESTERN INDIA; SOUTHERN INDIA.

SECOND MARRIAGES. See MARRIAGE, 5; MALABAR MARRIAGE, 2, 3

SELF-ACQUISITION,

1. unknown to patriarchal family, 300, 308
its origin and growth, 309
originally not favoured, ib.
only conferred right to double share, ib.
not unlimited power of alienation, 310
See ALIENATION, 2, 3; PARTITION, 14
2. must be without detriment to family property, 310, 352 gift or devise by father to son, 346—348 gains of science, 309, 353, 361 effect of education or maintenance from joint funds, 353—357 estates conferred by government, 358 savings from impartible estate, 359 recovery of ancestral property, 360 its result to recoverer, ib.
3. acquisitions partly aided by joint funds, 361 double share in Bengal, 362
4. onus of proof, where property is claimed as, 363 conflicting decisions, 365
how reconcilable, 367
5. passes to widow of undivided member under Mitakshara, 713
6. female taking by inheritance from male is restricted in her powers over, 868 except among Jains, ib.

SIKHS

are governed by Hindu law, 52, 577 note practise adoption, 8 doctrine of religious efficacy unknown, 701 rules of descent similar to Mitakshara, ib.

SISTER. See REUNION, 2; SUCCESSION, 11, 23; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 3

SISTER'S SON,

his rights as a bandhu, 780 position as an heir in Bengal, 787 note
See ADOPTION, 6; KRITRIMA.

SLAVE,

special rights of father over son by a, 90 meaning of, in reference to illegitimate son of a Sudra, 744 now abolished by Act V of 1843, 745

SMRITIS,

date unascertainable, 13
distinction between Sruti and Smriti, 14 include prose and verse works; former generally earlier, 15 nature and origin of Sutras: their period, 15 relative antiquity, 16 works included in Dharma-Sutras, 16, 17 the metrical Dharma. Sastras, 18—24 secondary reductions of verse treatises, 25 all assumed to be of equal authority, 25 not necessarily applicable to all Hindus, 10

SMRITI CHANDRIKA,

its age, authorship and authority, 28

SONS,

anomalous state of early family law, 73 principle of paternity, 81, 83 various sorts of sons; table of their order, 81, 82 necessity for a son, 81
the kshetraja or son begotten on the wife, 84 or on widow, 85
causes of its discontinuance, 87
the gudhaja, kanina, sahodha and patnarbhava, 89
the son of a concubine, 90, 743
the son of an appointed daughter, 90, 764 all but legitimate and adopted now obsolete, 92
See ADOPTION; ALIENATION, 2; DEBTS, 1; PARTITION, 2, 4, 14;
POLYANDRY; SUCCESSION, 1, 12

SOURCES OF HINDU LAW,

authorities referred to, 13
See SMRITIS, 13—25; COMMENTATORS, 25—37; JUDICIAL DECISIONS, 42—45; SCHOOLS OF LAW, 38—42; CUSTOM, 46—70

SOUTHERN INDIA,

law of Smritis not binding on all tribes, 2, 10, 53 Aryans and Brahmans of secondary influence, 5 village communities in, 6, 296 governed by Mitakshara, 27 other authorities of local origin, 28
evidences of polyandry, 74
sale of wives and daughters, 80
Asura marriage still prevails, 99 exogamy and endogamy exist, 105
infant marriage, 109
second marriage and divorce, 114
secular character of adoption, 134
See ADOPTION, 3, 4

SOVEREIGN. See ESCHEAT; GUARDIAN.

SPES SUCCESSIONIS, 768 note (o)

SRI KRISHNA TERKALANKARA, author of Daya-kralma-saṅgraha, 33

SRUTI AND SMRITI, distinction between, 14

STEP-CHILDREN. See HALF-BLOOD.

STEP-MOTHER,

her right to be a guardian, 273 note (h)
does not succeed to step-son, 769 when she succeeds to adopted son, 219 her rights on a partition, 647, 649

STRANGER,

his right to compel a partition, 653
of succession, 799

SUCCESSION—continued.

- chastity essential to vesting of estate, 753, 804 want of, does not divest it, 754 second marriage now lawful, ib.
 what rights forfeited by it, 755
 under Act XV of 1856, 756 to what cases Act XV of 1856 applies, 756—758 15. daughter sometimes excluded by custom, 758, 763 by incontinence in Bengal, 758 otherwise in Western India, ib.
 unsettled in Northern and Southern India, 759
 by physical defect, 759
 only inherits to her own father, 760 except in Western India, ib.
 order of precedence where several, ib.
 take jointly, except in Bombay, 762 no right to partition, ib.
 eldest takes impartible property, ib.
16. daughter's son, reason for his position as heir, 763 excluded by special custom in Northern India, 763, 764 never takes till after all admissible daughters, 765 supposed exception in Bengal, 762 several take per capita, 765 when as coparceners with survivorship, ib., 766 eldest of all takes impartible property, 765 has no vested interest before death, 768 is a new stock of descent, ib.
 daughter's grandson, or daughter's daughter not an heir, ib.
17. parents difference as to their priority, 768 mother not excluded by incontinence, 771 except in Bengal, ib.
 not by second marriage, ib.
 step-mother not entitled, 769
 when heir to adopted son, 219
18. brothers, whole before half-blood, 772, 773 undivided before divided, 774
 illegitimate succeed to each other, ib.
19. nephews never take where there are brothers, 774 except under Mayukha, where those of the whole take before brothers of half-blood, ib.
 sons of brother who has taken, represent him, ib.
 and take per stirpes, 775
 take on their own account per capita, ib.
 have no vested interest, ib.
 after-born will not divest estate, ib.
 same rules of precedence as brothers, ib.
 grandnephews succeed in default of nephews, ib.
 their place in order of succession, 776 great-grandnephews are only sakulyas, ib.
20. descendants through females in father's line, 777
21. grandfather's and great-grandfather's line, ib.
 precedence as between parents, ib.
 followed by their issue, ib.
 preference of whole over half-blood, 778
22. sakulyas and samanodakas, 778 priority between ascendants and descendants, ib.
23. bandhus under Mitakshara follow all the above, 779 otherwise under Bengal law, 787

SUCCESSION—continued.

- right of sister's son as such, 780—783 granduncle's daughter's son, 783 precedence of, under Mitakshara, ib.
 Daya Bhaga, 787
 their priority in Bengal as regards sapindas, 787
 sakulyas, 790
 sons of nieces in each line, 787
ex parte maternâ: their position in Bengal, 792 24. Bombay law peculiar in admitting female heirs, 793 case of sister and step-sister, 793, 794 widow of male who has not taken, 794 daughter and niece, ib.
25. succession after reunion, 795
 Yajnavalkya's rule, 796
 Bengal, 797
 Southern India, ib.
26. of pupil or preceptor, 799 fellow-trader or king, ib.
27. succession to hermit or ascetic, 800
 See ESCHEAT; EXCLUSION; WOMAN'S ESTATE.
- SUDRAS, supposed to be the aborigines, 106 note
 marriages of, with higher castes, ib.
 Asura marriage practised by, 99
 See ADOPTION, 6, 9, 12; PARTITION, 4; SUCCESSION, 13
- SULKA. See MARRIAGE, 2; WOMAN'S ESTATE, 13, 15
- SUNI BORAHS,
 their customs, 68
- SUPERSTITIOUS USES, trusts for lawful, 581
 See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENT.
- SURETY,
 son's liability for debts of father as, 389
- SURRENDER,
 by Hindu widow to next heir, 859
- SURVIVORSHIP,
 not succession, prevails in joint family, 333, 639 otherwise in Bengal, 370, 640 to what species of property it applies, 343 when impartible property passes by, 350, 555 between adopted and after-born son, 228 widows take by inter se, 752
 daughters, 762
 except in Bombay, ib.
 daughter's sons by same mother, 766 other cases of descent ex parte maternâ, 767 devise by father to undivided sons, 768 to widow's son, 343 takes precedence over claims of creditor, 427 of donee or devisee, 476, 479

SUTRAS,

their nature and origin ; probable period, 15 in general earlier than works in verse, ib.
their relative antiquity, 16

SWAYAMDATTA,

one of the subsidiary adopted sons, 81, 92, 131 note
now obsolete, 92

TENANCY IN COMMON,

members of undivided family in Bengal hold by, 370 created by partition before distribution, 672 gift to widow and son, 528 descent ex parte maternâ, 767

TESTAMENTARY POWER. See WILLS.

THESA WALEME,

its value as evidence of Tamil usage, 49

TIRHUT. See MITHILA.

TODAS,

polyandry among, 75, 302

TRADER,

his right as heir to fellow-trader, 799

TRADING PARTNERSHIPS, beneficial interest of members of joint family in, 383 their right to be actual partners in, 384

TRUST,

woman's estate is not held as a, 840, 842

See BENAMI ; RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENT ; WILLS, 6, 7

UÇANAS

of the Sutra period, 17

UNDIVIDED FAMILY. See JOINT FAMILY ; PATRIARCHAL FAMILY.

UNOBSTRUCTED PROPERTY,

explanation of term, 342
heir to, has a vested interest, ib.

UPANAYANA,

what it is, and time for performing, 179 note
a bar to adoption, 180—183 unless (perhaps) in case of relations, 182 and in Western India, 183 not in Kritrima form, 265

VACHESPATI MISRA,

author of Vivada and Vyavahara Chintamani, 30

VARADRAJA,

author of Vyavahara Nirnaya, 29

VASISHTHA,

relative age of, 17, 18, 20

VICE. See EXCLUSION, 2

VIJNANESWARA, 27

VILLAGE COMMUNITIES,

not limited to Aryan races, 6
three forms of, in the Punjab, 294 still traceable in Southern India, 296 fiction of common descent, 297 extinct in Bengal, Western and Central India, 296 never existed among Nairs or Kandhs, 298 their origin attributed to polyandry, 303 their rise and dissolution, 308 right of members to forbid alienation, 306 enforce pre-emption, 307

VIRAMITRODAYA,

age, authorship, and authority, 29

VIVADA BHANGARVANA. See JAGANNATHA.

VIVADA CHANDRA,

its authority in Mithila, 30

VIVADA CHINTAMANI,

age, authorship, and authority, ib.

VIVADARNAVA SETU,

Halhed's Gentoo Code, 33

VRIHASPATI,

his age, 24

VYAVAHARA CHINTAMANI,

age and authorship, 30

VYAVAHARA NIRNAYA,

its authority in Southern India, 29

WAJIB-UL-ARZ,

its nature and effect, 48 note.

WARD. See COURT OF WARDS ; GUARDIAN ; MINOR .

WASTE,

by heiress in possession, what amounts to, 872 may be restrained at suit of reversioner, ib.
not a forfeiture of her estate, 873 may result in her dispossession, ib.

WESTERN INDIA,

evidence of customary law, 3, 45 works of authority, 29 distinctive doctrines ; rights of females, 715, 793, 826, 829, 831 adoption by widows, 42, 116
Asura marriages recognised, 100
Divorce and widow marriage allowed, 114
secular character of adoption, 134

See ADOPTION, 6, 7, 12 ; SUCCESSION, 7, 10, 11, 19

WHOLE BLOOD. See HALF-BLOOD,

WIDOW,

- formerly allowed to remarry, 112
 also by local usage, 113
 now by statute, 755—757
 See ADOPTION, 3, 4, 6, 15; MAINTENANCE, 1, 7; PARTITION, 8;
 SUCCESSION, 10, 13, 14; WOMAN'S ESTATE.

WIDOWER. See ADOPTION, 2

WIFE. See ADOPTION, 2, 5; KRITERIMA; MAINTENANCE, 4, 7; MARRIAGE; PARTITION, 7; WILL, 3; WOMAN'S ESTATE.

WILLS,

1. originally unknown, 537
 not specially favoured by English Judges, ib.
 originated from Brahmanical influence, 327, 536, 581
2. their progress in Bengal, 540
 Southern India, 542—547
 finally established by Privy Council, 548 effect of their decision, 550 disregarded by Sudder Court, ib.
 followed by High Court, 551
 Bombay, 552
3. testamentary power of minor or married woman, 541 onus to establish capacity and intention of testator tests on party propounding will, 542
4. whether power of devise the same as that of gift, 553 does not prevail against survivorship, 554 absolute as regards impartible estates, 555 and in Bengal, 491, 563
 except as to rights of maintenance, 627
5. devise with gift over, on failure of male issue, 536 when subsequent event must happen, 559
 donee must be in existence at death, 559
 modification introduced by Hindu Wills Act, ib.
6. provisions of Tagore case, 561 trust for successive persons valid, 563 provided purposes are legal and donees capable of taking, 564, 566, 567, 575
7. estate unknown to Hindu law invalid, 556, 564, 567 estate tail illegal, 565 restraints on alienation, 567 trust for accumulation, 568
 unlawful conditions of tenure, 564, 657 postponement of estate, 568 estate left in abeyance, 571 power of appointment in will valid, 571
8. heir takes what is not validly devised, 575 how disinherited, ib.
9. will may be oral, 573
 no special form necessary, ib.
 how revoked, 573
 operation of Hindu Wills Act, 576
 Probate and Administration Act, 577
 wills of Oudh Talukdars, ib.
10. construction according to intention, 573
 what creates estate of inheritance, ib.
 when vague or illegal disposition, 574, 575

WILLS—continued.

- devise to son, its effect, 347 348
 Or widow, 347, 526, 848
11. possession not necessary, 576 idiot, infant, or disqualified heir may take, ib.
 estate and capacity of executors, 578 of what documents probate can be granted, 579 note probate of wills made out of India, ib.
 granted by Native Court, ib.

WOMAN'S ESTATE,

in property inherited from Males.

1. different meanings of stridhanam in Mitakshara and Daya
 Bhaga, 818, 823, 903
2. two qualities of estate inherited from a male, 819 scanty authority in early writers, ib.
 origin of restrictions on alienation, 820, 821 dependent condition of women, ib.
 influence of religious principle, ib.
3. restrictions apply to all female heirs, 822
 except in Bombay, 826
 text of Mitakshara examined, 822 held not to apply to estate of widow, 825 except in Pondicherry, 827 or of mother or grandmother, 825, 829 or of daughters, 828
 except in Bombay, 829
 sisters take absolutely in Bombay, 831 share on partition subject to same limitations, 837 under Bengal law, 839
 where express powers of alienation are given, 838, 848
4. nature of woman's estate; she is not a trustee, 840 her general powers, 841 acts in excess invalid, ib.
 bind her own life estate, 852 has full power of enjoyment, 842 may not waste or endanger estate, 842 represents estate, 852 note, 866 reversioners bound by decree which binds her interest, 866 unless decree fraudulent, ib.
 effect of statute of limitations on their claims, 867 effect of declaratory decree against, 877
5. accumulations made by husband follow his estate, 843
 after his death before delivery to her, ib.
 by widow herself are accretions to estate, 847 unless kept apart by her, 845, 846 note or mere cash balances, 847 purchases by widow out of her savings, 845 where she has received power to appropriate profits, 848 their descent to heir of husband or of herself, 845 note, 848
6. her power of disposition, 841
 for religious or charitable purposes, 849 family ceremonies, ib., 851 husband's debts; maintenance, 850 payment of debts barred by time, ib.
 necessary purposes, 852

WOMAN'S ESTATE—continued.

- arrears of government revenue, 853
 - effect of her extravagance or mismanagement, ib.
 - may sell part of estate, though possible to borrow, 854
 - must wait for necessity or pressure, 853
 - must profess to bind estate and not merely herself, 854
 - no larger power of over self-acquisitions inherited, 868
 - except among Jains, ib.
 - nor over moveable property, 868
 - unless perhaps in Western and Southern India, and in Mithila, 869
 - 7. consent of reversioners renders transaction valid, 855
 - whose consent necessary and sufficient, 855—861
 - her power to surrender her estate, 859
 - in Malabar, 861
 - how evidenced, ib.
 - 8. onus of proof where her acts are disputed, 862
 - evidence to establish their validity, ib.
 - 9. effect of execution for personal debt of heiress, 863
 - for debt binding estate, ib.
 - suit must be framed with that view, ib.
 - for debt of last male holder, 864
 - where decree obtained against him, ib.
 - heiress sued as representing him, ib.
 - effect of suing person who is not legal representative, ib.
 - 10. remedies against wrongful acts, 871
 - only reversioners can sue, ib.
 - to restrain waste, 872
 - what amounts to waste, ib.
 - result of suit, 873
 - when for acts of stranger, 874
 - 11. declaratory suits to ascertain title to succeed not allowed, 874
 - to set aside adoption, ib.
 - or alienation, ib.
 - are at discretion of Court, 875
 - not allowed unless refusal would injure plaintiff, ib.
 - nor for collateral purposes, ib.
 - their effect in binding third parties, 877
 - statute of limitation in case of, 875, 876
 - 12. equities on setting aside acts of heiress, 878
 - none where her act wholly invalid, ib.
 - where sale in excess of necessity, ib.
 - made unnecessarily to pay off mortgage, ib.
 - 13. principles of descent of property inherited by a woman, where she takes limited interest, 819, 825—829
 - dispute founded on text of Mitakshara, 822
 - where she takes absolute interest, 834—837
- in property not inherited from males.*
- 14. origin and growth of her peculiar property, 880
 - early texts defining it, 882, 886
 - origin and meanings of sulka, 97, 883
 - property inherited or devised, 885
 - does not involve idea of being at her exclusive disposal, 886
 - meanings of Yautaka, Ayautaka, and Saudayika, 884
 - purchases with, and savings of, follow character of fund, 885

WOMAN'S ESTATE—continued.

- 15. power of disposition over it, 886—890
 - in case of property of a maiden, 903
 - absolute over saudayika, 886, 889
 - except land given by husband, ib., 890
 - or stridhanum inherited from a female, 887, 902
 - except in Bombay, 888
 - and over property acquired by her as widow, 889
 - subject to husband's control in other cases, ib.
 - but not that of any other person, ib.
 - lapses to him by her death, ib.
 - restricted in case of land given by husband, 890
 - unless express powers of alienation, ib.
 - power of husband to appropriate, 888, 889
 - his creditors cannot seize it, 889
 - extent of woman's liability for her debts, 886 note
- 16. principles upon which it passes, 890—904
 - case of a maiden's property, 890, 903
 - property of a married woman, 891
 - descent of Sulka by Benares law, 97, 892
 - different rule in Bengal, 893, 899
 - of Yautaka by Benares law, 893
 - in Bengal, 896
 - of gift subsequent and the husband's gifts, 898
 - according to the Mitakshara, ib.
 - the other Benares writers, ib.
 - the Bengal writers, 899
 - of property received from a father, 900
 - according to the Mitakshara, 898
 - of property inherited from a female, 901
 - only makes one descent as stridhanum, 902
 - reverts to heirs of woman from whom it was inherited, ib.
 - preference given to male heirs where stridhan of secondary species, 903
 - chastity how far essential, 904

WRITING,

- not necessary in case of adoption, 203
 - alienation, 521
 - wills, 573
 - unless in cases under Hindu Wills Act, 576
 - benami transactions, 589
 - partition, 671

YAJNAVALKYA,

- age and authorship, 22

YAMA

- of the Sutra period, 17

YAUTAKA. See WOMAN'S ESTATE, 13, 15

ZEMINDARY. See ALIENATION, 4; IMPARTIBLE PROPERTY; PRIMOGENITURE.

THE END.

Cash Prices RS. A.

Hindu Law Books. The Vyavahara Mayukah, translated by Borradaile and two Original Treatises on the Hindu Law of Adoption, translated by J. C. C. Sutherland ..	9 0
Hindu Law Books. Three Treatises on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, Dāya-Bhaga and Mitāksharā, translated by H. T. Colebrooke and the Dāya-krama-sangraha, translated by P. M. Wynch, 3rd edition, with Index, uniform with the above, 3rd edition, rep. 1895 ..	9 0
Holloway's System of the Modern Roman Law, translated from the German of Friedrich Carl von Savigny ..	3 0
Houston's Manual of Hindu and Muhammedan Law, as Administered in British India, and adapted to the use of Candidates ..	2 0
Ibert's Government of India ..	1907 6 0
Krishnan Nair's Provincial Insolvency Act ..	1907 2 8
Krishnan Nair's Code of Civil Procedure, being Act V of 1908 with a commentary by T. Krishnan Nair and P. G. Rama Iyer. 1908 ..	6 0
Lindley's Study of Jurisprudence, reprinted by authority ..	4 0
Local Fund Manual for Madras and Mysore, 1905, with corrections ..	2 8
Lyon's Medical Jurisprudence ..	1909 18 0
Macnaghten's Principles and Precedents of Hindu Law, 2 vols. in one, 4th edition, 1894, with Memoir and copious Indexes ..	9 0
Macnaghten's Principles and Precedents of Mahomedan Law, new edition, 8th reprint, with Digest of Cases up to 1893 ..	10 0
Madras High Court Reports—Digest of Cases decided in the High Court of Madras, Vols. I to VIII, by H. Wigram, c.s., 3rd edition ..	3 0
Madras District Municipalities Act, Act IV of 1884, amended 1900 ..	0 8
Majumdar's Hindu Wills Act, with which is incorporated the Probate and Administration Act, with elaborate notes and commentaries, with supplement ..	1904 10 0
Maxwell's Interpretation of Statute ..	1905 18 12
Mayne's Criminal Law of India, 3rd edition ..	1905 21 0
Mayne's Hindu Law and Usage, 7th edition ..	1906 20 0
Mayne's Hints on Confessions and Approvers for the use of the Police ..	0 12
Menu's Institutes—Manava Dharma Sastra, or Institutes of Menu, by Rev. P. Percival, 4th edition ..	6 0
Michell's Law of Easements, natural rights arising from Situation and License in India ..	8 0
—Supplement to do. ..	1906 4 0
The two taken together, Rs. 10-8.
Moore's Malabar Law and Custom, 3rd edition ..	1905 5 0
Morison's Advocacy and Examination of Witness, 2nd edition, ..	1905 5 0
Mulla's Civil Procedure Code ..	1910 10 0
Mahomedan Law ..	1909 3 8
Nair's Civil Procedure Code, see under Krishnan.
Nambyar's Index of Cases judicially noticed (1809-1908) by P. K. Nambyar, B.A. ..	14 0
Nelson's (J. H.) View of Hindu Law, with Index ..	6 0
Normandy's Digest of the Cases reported in the following Law Reports: Bengal, Vols. 1-15; Madras, Vols. 1-8; Bombay, Vols. 1-12; N.-W. Provinces, Vols. 1-7; up to 1875, re-arranged 1,420 pages ..	reduced to.. 5 0

Customers who have not had previous dealings with us, should remit value or part value of goods with order.

Higginbotham & Co., Law Publishers, Madras and Bangalore.

Cash Prices RS. A.

Norton's (J. B.) Topics of Jurisprudence or Aids to the Office of the Indian Judge, 2nd edition, 1870, by J. W. Handley, Bar-at-Law ..	5 0
O'Kinealy's Indian Penal Code, with Notes and Appendix, 1900 ..	12 0
O'Kinealy's New Civil Procedure Code, 7th edition. Revised by H. Stokes and Mr. Justice Rampini, 2 vols. ..	1905 18 0
Do. do. Half law Calf ..	20 0
Osborne's Security to keep the Peace and for Good Behaviour, 1906 ..	1 8
Peacock's Law of Easements in British India, Tagore Law Lectures, 1899, Second Edition ..	1909 18 0
Pleader's (The) Test-Book, Part I ..	3 0
Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract Act ..	1909 18 0
Pollock's Law of Torts ..	1904 18 12
Prinsep's Code of Criminal Procedure ..	1907 15 0
Ratanlal's Law of Crimes ..	1909 10 0
—————Law of Torts ..	1908 5 0
Revenue Acts and Regulations ..	1908 1 0
Sarkar's Civil Procedure Code, 4th Edition ..	1909 12 0
Shephard and Brown's Transfer of Property Act, 1882. New Edition in preparation.
Smruti Chandrika or the Hindu Law of Inheritance, translated by T. Krishnasawmy Iyer, 2nd edition ..	3 0
Sohni's Code of Criminal Procedure, edited with copious Notes and full Index. New Edition, March 1910. ..	16 0
Streenayasa Row's (P.) Legal Maxims, illustrated with special reference to the laws in force in British India, 2nd edition, improved ..	3 8
Suntoke's Criminal Procedure Code ..	1909 4 8
Sutherland's Hindu Law of Adoption ..	1 0
Sutherland's (D.) Digest of the Judgments of the Privy Council, on Appeals from India, 3 vols. ..	25 0
Starling's The Indian Criminal Law ..	1905 16 0
Statutes Relating to India, A Collection of, in Two Volumes. Vol. I, up to the end of 1870 ..	6 0
Statutes Relating to India, A Collection of, in Two Volumes .. Vol. II, from 1871 to 1899 ..	8 0
Tarrant's Digest of the Decisions of the Privy Council to be found in Moore's Indian Appeal Cases, Vols. I—XIV, 3rd edition ..	3 0
Thomson's Manual of Hindu Law, 3rd ed., revised and considerably improved, with an Index ..	3 0
Vencataramana Aiyar's Code of Civil Procedure, being Act V of 1908, with notes and appendices. Second edition, revised and enlarged ..	1908 15 0
Viswanatha Sastri's Civil Procedure Code ..	1908 3 0
————— Madras Lands Estates Act ..	1908 3 0
ada Chintamani, a succinct Commentary on the Hindu Law Viv prevalent in Mithila, from the original Sanskrit of Vachaspati Misra, by F ..	4 8
Wigram recor Privy ..	mcil and's .. 2 8
Custo ..	remit
We usua ..	old editions)

UK PRF MU Brno

3 1 2 9 5 0 0 8 0 0

Higginbotham & Co., Law Publishers, Madras and Bangalore.